

LORD STRATHCONA PASSED AWAY IN LONDON

LORD STRATHCONA IS DEAD IN LONDON AFTER A BRIEF ILLNESS, AGED 94

Canadian High Commissioner Was Taken Ill a Few Days Ago, and No Hope Was Held Out for His Recovery, on Account of His Advanced Age.

He Failed Rapidly After the Death of Lady Strathcona.

A cable from London announces the death of Lord Strathcona, Canadian high commissioner, at his residence, 23 Grosvenor Square. Since Saturday last, when the attending physician, Sir Thomas Barlow, announced that his lordship was in a critical condition as a result of catarrhal illness, practically no hope had been felt of his recovery, owing to his advanced age, 94, and his enfeebled condition since the recent death of Lady Strathcona. Bulletins since then had given no reason for hopefulness.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS GIVEN AWAY TO CHARITY BY LORD STRATHCONA

He Was One of the Most Remarkable Men in the World, and Rose From an Obscure Scotch Lad to Be a Power in Finance, and Was Reputed to Be Worth From Fifty to a Hundred Million Dollars.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal was the world's oldest multi-millionaire, the British Empire's most prominent railroad builder, the British House of Lords' oldest peer, the City of Montreal's leading citizen, Canada's greatest financier, optimist and philanthropist, and the senior member of the overseas high commissioners and agents-general at the seat of empire, he having represented the Dominion of Canada in London since 1896.

Lord Strathcona's career reads like a romance. Born of Highland parentage, the son of a saddler, he made the prediction as plain as Donald Alexander Smith to his cousin, now Lord Mount Stephen, then a herd lad in Canada, to lord it over man, he would leave for British North America to tempt fortune and win a competency. Accordingly, as a raw youth of 18, he set sail for the west years before Horace Greely was known, and rose to be the wealthiest citizen of Canada and one of the leading imperialists of the British Empire. While other public men in Great Britain were trying to mold the empire together in the bonds of community interests, the building of the humble son of the Scotch saddler was bringing the empire closer together by bands of steel and telegraphic connection than the building of the mighty leythian and its branches, the Canadian Pacific Railway.

To Lord Strathcona more than to any other man is due the credit of completing the Canadian Pacific Railway. He better than any other man knew the illimitable territory and boundless resources of the country through which the line would traverse. With his late devoted wife, who shared his hardships in the weary in the face of prairie that lie between Lake Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains.

No Idle Dream.

Lord Strathcona knew that in order for untold masses of farm and mine to be got to market the Canadian Pacific Railway project was no idle dream. The railway would be built and built in the face of discouragements that would defeat any other man. Men of capital would not invest in it, the country cried out against it as a fool's venture, and the Dominion Government, fearing bankruptcy, refused to back it. Strathcona, the awkward highland Scotch boy whom Canada had "taught" for 20 years to suffer, stood undaunted and practically alone, and in face of bitterest criticism, he built the greatest railroad in history, the railroad that opened the vast wastes of Canada to settlement and development.

The success of the Canadian Pacific was the success of Donald A. Smith,

LORD STRATHCONA

Canadian High Commissioner in London, who died after a brief illness.

Donald A. Smith, silent, reserved, but powerful, was one of the greatest legislators that ever held a seat in the Canadian house of commons. His career as a law-maker was one of honesty and genius. He fought bitterly every measure that he believed to be an impediment to the progress of Canada, and he was always found supporting the golden spike that completed the Canadian Pacific. He became a power in the land, and the cry of the people and the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway forced him to take his seat with the Canadian law-makers. His political creed was a disregard for party interests.

STRATHCONA'S LIFE

In common with many others whose names are closely identified with the pioneer days in Canada, Donald Alexander Smith came from Scotland to heve, almost in a literal sense, his way to fortune. Born in Archeside in 1819, his parents being Alexander Smith and Barbara, daughter of Donald Stuart, Leachhill, he at an early age left the care of the land overseas and at the age of eighteen came to Canada. This was in 1838, a year after Queen Victoria had ascended the throne and at a time when Lord Durham was governor-general of British North America. He did not make a blind venture, he having, previous to leaving Scotland, secured a post with the Hudson Bay Company. He was stationed on arrival at Mingenah on the inhospitable Labrador coast and for thirteen years in that lonely land, locked in winter and storm ridden for the greater part of the year, he pursued his work with unflinching perseverance and that spirit of unswerving determination destined to reap rich rewards.

At this period a post in the service of the Hudson Bay Company was on a par with appointments to the East India Company's service. Positions of the kind were regarded as highly desirable and attracted the adventurous sons of many of the best of the middle-class of Britain.

A Typical Incident.

An incident which throws a light on the sturdy acquiescence, whose instructions of his superiors were concerned, occurred some years after he took up his abode in the north and west, and such that he longed for a wider field and in the hope of being transferred to Montreal, he underwent in the fall a trip up the St. Lawrence to Montreal. On arrival he informed Sir George Simpson, the company's factor there, that he believed he could be of greater service to the larger station, adding that his health was not robust. Sir George was unympathetic and so runs the story, contending that the physician's report on the young man's physical condition should not bear out the plea. On being applied that he had better return, Donald Smith cheerfully submitted. Navigation having closed, he was forced to make his way back to the dreary coast, but his good temper was unflinching.

First Real Chance.

His chance came in 1851, thirteen years after the prison-like confinement of Labrador. He was detailed to go to the great northwest, at that time a land marked by only a few scattered settlements and trading posts. His sterling abilities had forced somewhat tardy recognition, but fortune having once taken hold of the young Scotchman clung to him persistently. In the early fifties the "Arctic" incident caused friction with the United States, which threatened war with the United States, and the result was the opening of the bonds between the provinces. Upper and Lower Canada had become united and Donald Smith was appointed as a member of the Hudson Bay Company's council.

Red River Controversy.

Two a class with the southern republic was averted by diplomatic means, domestic troubles arose. Those were stormy days in the northwest and presently the smouldering hostility of the Indians separated the entire department of the Red River rebellion. It was deemed advisable to appoint a man whose reputation for integrity and courage was beyond question to probe into the underlying cause and report thereon. He was named as the man. Tact, strength, with a lenient Scotch prudence, and the faculty of decision—these were united in Donald Smith. He was a man of a man's size job that he had to handle. The Red River trouble was settled expeditiously and Donald Smith, then about fifty years of age, looked large in the view of all Canadians.

His Clear Vision.

Politics called him. He stood for the Winnipeg constituency in the second of 1868. He was elected. He was no ordinary politician seeking to curry the favor of his electors by attention to merely local affairs. It is doubtful if he had such a clear vision. He saw the country of the future, not as a few wide-spread centres dependent upon the comparatively brief season of navigation from the west, but a country securely linked by bands of steel, transcontinental railway—that was the thing. In his mind was the thing in Ottawa some notice was taken. Sir John Macdonald became a convert, and the Red River was the result.

Building of C.P.R.

Almost inevitably a conservative leaning man, the name of the old chief is mentioned there is coupled with an allusion to the building of the C.P.R. Undoubtedly to Sir John belonged the credit of carrying out a railway plan considered in the sixties a bold one by men of advanced ideas and almost insane by the ultra-conservative. But so says Sir Charles Tupper, that the railway, the biggest in the world, would not have been built but for Donald Smith.

Sometimes Lord Strathcona has been referred to as "The Lion of the North." Newspaper and magazine articles innumerable have been written about him and in all of them the designation "empire builder" is inevitably given. It is true that he profited personally by his foresight that he built up an immense fortune of many millions by his ability to see clearly what other men saw dimly or not at all. But Canada was chiefly the gainer.

His political career really reached its zenith with the building of the C.P.R. in 1885. He was federal member for Selkirk, Man., from 1872 to 1876 and for the West from 1877 to 1884, when he was appointed high commissioner. He succeeded Sir Charles Tupper, who, on his return to active politics as premier of Canada, went down to defeat in that year. It was thought by many at that time that the Laurier ministry might not desire the continuance in the lofty position of a previous vigorous political opponent, but when the government proffered his resignation Sir Wilfrid made the special request that he remain.

Mentally Vigorous.

From 1886 to the present, a period of eighteen years, he did honor to Canada in the post and despite his advanced years showed no sign of losing the keen edge of those faculties which made him

LORD STRATHCONA

A Study in Personality by T. P. O'Connor, M.P.

T. P. O'Connor, M.P., writing of Lord Strathcona on his ninety-fourth birthday, said: He is a man on whom nature has written in legible letters, for all to see, the remarkable and versatile gifts which have made one of the most varied, most brilliant and most beneficent careers of our time. The massive head, the eyes at once keen and humorous, the patriarchal white beard, not soft and silken but strong and rugged, the eyebrows snow-white, and bristling and protuberant, the firm mouth, and the robust frame, all proclaim one of the born leaders of men.

The quickness and alertness of the mind of this nonagenarian, the rapidity with which he goes right straight to the heart of any subject, his judgment so well balanced, all afford some explanation of his marvelous life.

Softness and Sweetness.

Another first impression of him is the softness and even sweetness of the voice and the manner, and that also is illuminating as to the career, for the greatest of Lord Strathcona's achievements have been won by a singular combination of strength of will, tenacity of purpose and an indulgent and sympathetic attitude to all men, to all creeds, and to all situations. Like Carlyle's wife, he has been invincible because he has so often been gentle; it was his gentleness, his strength, as many people ultimately found out.

It is a wonderful career, and everybody knows that everybody knows Lord Strathcona. His impressive figure has been seen thousands of times on all the great occasions of London life; at royal jubilees at court receptions in the house of lords, at great funerals, at the annual banquets of the Canadians in London. I last met him at the memorial service of poor Captain Scott. The veriest street urchin would know his figure as he drove by in the streets. And yet I doubt whether one in ten thousand of the citizens of London have fully realized what a strange, momentous, historic figure Lord Strathcona is; what a wilderness—if I may use the word in its proper sense—of unprecedented experience that he behind him; how much he embodies in his single person—the drama, the tragedy, the triumph, the heroism, the grandeur, the empire coming into being, and in that painful phase fighting Nature in her fiercest and man in his most irrational enmities.

The career has ended in a blaze of triumph, of world-wide respect, of prosperity beyond the dreams of avarice. But there is not a step of it which has not been marked by some tremendous struggle with nature and with man; so that if you want to see the wondrous new Canada which has come out of something like chaos, and like night, within our own time—embodied, epitomized and symbolized in the life of one man, look at the life of Lord Strathcona. He is a man who represents his country in London; and in his own peaceful, strenuous old age, and in the capital of the mother country, also marks the stage of advance to European recognition to which Canada has attained.

Canada's Story in a Life.

Even in the fact that the life and career start in a Highland village, there is again much of the story of Canada. Forester has contributed enormously to the discovery and development of Canada; one old French abbe, still living, did most of the early exploring of our own times. There are innumerable Irishmen in Canada who have helped to build up her development and are the chief of her greatest enterprises; notably Sir Richard McBride, the prime minister of British Columbia, and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Many Englishmen have done their share; the races of all Europe are among the new tide of immigration which is flowing into Canada; and the Americans have not been slow to see the immense potentialities of the great new land and to invest their millions there with their characteristic lavishness. I have myself been in a Canadian town of modern growth, Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan; and have heard that there were already twenty-five European races represented among its citizens.

Donald Smith is Born in Forres.

But there is one race which above others can claim to be the greatest factor in the development of Canada, and that is the race beyond the Tweed.

Alexander Smith was a typical North of Scotland man, the canny half-breed, who had lands in the highlands that were about to be transferred from the great company to the state. He was in revolt; they had found a better way to die on the scaffold; and the acquisition of the new territories was evidently to be a work of danger, and perhaps of bloodshed.

It was then that Donald Smith had to abandon his work as a peaceful man of business engaged in big operations in trade, and reconcoiled himself to a diplomat, a negotiator, and even to some of the risks of the soldier's life. He was appointed to meet the danger and his cheating forces; for now he was daily in risk of his life.

He had already been in the service of the

And here are the dresses in the Costume Department simultaneous with their appearance in New York. Both are the embodiment of artistic effect, the skirts being of a modified Turkish trouser type, sewn together at the bottom, with vents for the feet to slip through.

Both gowns will be on exhibit on Thursday in the Costume Department, Third Floor, James Street.

LORD STRATHCONA

A Study in Personality by T. P. O'Connor, M.P.

months he was virtually a patient, sweet-tempered, diplomatic in temper, unyielding in purpose, even under threats of instant death, he paved the way for the new state, and Garnet Wolseley and the Red River expedition finished the work he had begun; and the vast, peaceful and daily growing great west of America stands as the indestructible monument of Donald Smith's work—a monument far more spacious and enduring, and even it may be said stupendous, than any hand of man has ever raised in aid of the conquerors of the world.
Creator of the Great West.
But in an even more real and essential sense the next work of Donald Smith created the great west. Among his countrymen and related to him by marriage was another powerful personality, a drifter and simply Mr. Stephen Lord Mountstephen. It was Stephen Lord Mountstephen who was the captor of the great enterprise which first linked the two oceans between which the vast territory of Canada lies.
These are not the pages in which to tell the melodramatic story of the creation of the Canadian Pacific Railway. There are few people even today in England who realize what that vast enterprise meant with its system greater than any in the world; with its trains running their hundreds of miles across the great continent daily; with its vast fleet of appointed ships who had become enemies from being friends; quiet until he was aroused by his indignation, and potential in attack as well as in defence.

and at one time, placed by a combination of circumstances in a position in which his single voice and vote decided the fate of a great minister and the transfer from one great party to another.
The Sunset of Arcadian Career
And then came the wonderful and prolonged sunset of the arduous and conquered career, with all controversies left behind, with party politics abandoned, and succeeded by the representation of the great nation of his creators and parents.
This part of Lord Strathcona's career may be dismissed here summarily, for it is known to all. For more than a generation he has had his new life; he has added this new chapter to an already remarkable career. In spite of the weight of the more than ninety years, he is in his office daily at Victoria street. He is ready to receive everybody. He is always doing something for Canada; he is even more frequently doing something for Canadians.
Giver of Millions.
This is no money-grub sitting on his millions; but a man keenly interested in all the movements of the world, and ready to listen to every appeal of education, of religion, of philanthropy and of sorrow. His benefactions run to many millions. He does even yet his share of the entertaining of distinguished guests within the gates of London; he goes to all public ceremonies where his presence is needed to represent his land; he is as tireless as if he were beginning his strenuous life.
And how does he think of it all? With some wonder, with some amusement, with no self-flattery, with no illusions that glitter represents realities.
I met him on the steps of his office on the day Henry Irving was buried in Westminster. Looking at me with his bright but humorous eyes, thru the thicket of his long white eyelashes and thick and protruberant and bushy eyebrows, he said with conscious humor: "Once I had twenty pounds." I am not that he didn't pronounce the word "twenty pounds" a year and all found "twenty pounds a year and all found."

great. Physically, however, he had been recently declining of late years and the recent death of his wife, whom he married in his early pioneer days in the west and to whom he was devotedly attached, undoubtedly hastened his end.
Lord Strathcona was the son of a Scotchman and a Canadian, and was born in the town of Glasgow, Scotland, on the 12th of August, 1827.
The honor of the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George was conferred upon him in 1898, and he was made a baronet in the ensuing year, taking the title of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal. In 1908 the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order was conferred upon him. Other honors bestowed from time to time were those of fellow Royal Society, doctor of laws, privy councillor and deputy lieutenant.
Lord Strathcona's generosity was one of his marked characteristics. Having acquired many millions, he was in a position to distribute lavishly, and he did so. He was particularly generous in his contributions to the education and the fostering of all movements which would strengthen the ties of empire.
Numerous Benefactions.
In 1868, jointly with Lord Mount Stephen, an early associate in railway enterprises, including the C.P.R. and the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway, he gave a million dollars for the founding and endowment of the Royal Victoria Hospital. Later he gave a most million dollars for maintenance of the hospital.
He showed great interest in bettering the condition of the poor of London, and institutions for and wide; learned to look to him for support. The cause of music and art claimed much of his attention, and as a collector he gained distinction. "I cannot bring myself to neglect their particular interests. Practically all the well-known makes of corset include several models specially adapted to your needs. There is, for instance, the American Lady, notable as a good style from $2.25 to $3.50; the Nemo, with its famous self-retracting band, at $3.50 and $4.50; the Smart Set, the well-known corset at $6.00; and the B. and G., a classic all-round corset, from $2.50 to $4.00.

KILLED WIFE BECAUSE SHE MADE THE REQUEST

Octogenarian's Dramatic Story Resulted in Virtually a Life Sentence.
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—Tottering under the weight of his eighty years, William Eberwein stood in the criminal court here today and told a simple but dramatic story of how his wife, fifteen years younger, had pleaded with him to kill her and how he committed the deed.
After the old man had completed the story, Judge Walling of Erie, Pa., temporarily presiding in the court, fixed the crime at murder in the second degree and imposed the minimum penalty which, in this case, was practically a life sentence. It was solitary confinement in the penitentiary for not less than seven years or more than fourteen.
HYDRO-RADIAL SURVEY.
LONDON, Ont., Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—Surveyors and experts from the Hydro-Electric Commission are going over the routes of the proposed radial from this city to Stratford, preparing estimates, selecting the cheapest and most advantageous route and performing other duties in connection with the work. These figures will be available shortly.
TO UNSEAT COUNCILLORS.
ST. THOMAS, Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—Proceedings have been taken by a local lawyer against two of the council members, F. D. King and J. H. Strachan, calling upon them to show cause why their seats on the council should not be vacated. It is claimed that the men, King and Strachan, have not the necessary qualifications.

HUSBAND CLEARED BY JURY FINDING

Mrs. Thompson Was Intoxicated When Her Injuries Were Received.
"That Mrs. Christina Thompson died on Jan. 16 at the General Hospital from injuries at her residence, 112 St. Clarence avenue on Jan. 12," was the verdict returned by Coroner Kenny's jury, which enquired into her death, last evening.
The evidence showed that Mrs. Thompson had fallen on the sidewalk in front of her home on the morning of Jan. 12, breaking her right arm. She was taken to the General Hospital, and after having the arm set by the doctors left the institution against the wishes of the authorities. According to her husband she did not return home until late at night. She was intoxicated and fell over a chair. She sustained a fracture of the skull and was found in the morning by her husband. He called in Dr. Buck, who had her removed to the General Hospital, where she died on Jan. 16.
DRIVEN TO OLD FOLKS' HOME.
LONDON, Ont., Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—A woman who made the claim that she lost $8000 thru having her affairs handled by T. H. Luscombe, the London lawyer sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary, has offered her furniture and other household effects for sale by public auction, and, according to her friends, will spend the rest of her days in an institution for aged people.

York County and Suburbs of Toronto

WANT CITY TO PREPARE PLANS

For Township Improvements if Congested Districts Are Not Annexed.

MUST DO SOMETHING

Says Reeve Syme, But No Action Can Be Taken Until After Election.

"It's all right to talk about annexation," said Reeve Syme of York Township to The World yesterday, "but suppose the city refused to annex the suburban districts of the township, something must be done. These legislatures, sewers, a water supply and fire protection, and we are hoping that we may make some agreement with the board of control towards getting these improvements."

"What about transportation?" "I don't know that you can do much in regard to transportation," replied the speaker. "That's up to the City of Toronto. In fact, we haven't considered the matter yet. All these things will be discussed at our next meeting, when the election of a third deputy reeve has been disposed of."

"So far as sewers and water supply are concerned, what do you expect the city to do?"

"We expect the city to grant us these improvements within a reasonable distance from the city limits in thickly congested districts, and anything we do will be paid for out of the township's own plan. But it's too soon to discuss the matter seriously. We will talk the matter over with the board of control, and we hope to come to some kind of settlement without going to the city council. It is nonsense to talk about the township getting a source of water supply. Anything we get in the way of water or sewerage must be from the city. When the third deputy reeve has been elected, we will have a special meeting with the city council, and all these matters will be fully discussed."

"But suppose you get these improvements how do you intend to pay for them?"

"That will be a matter for arrangement," said Mr. Miller. "We may issue debentures and charge the improvements up against the property benefited. Whatever we do we want the city to lay out all the ultimate have control of the whole business, sooner or later."

"But even with these improvements," said the speaker, "is there not a certain proportion of the cost borne by the municipality, which will have to be assessed on the whole township?"

"That's generally the case," he said. "The township into districts, such as Oakwood, Cedarvale, etc., and the improvements will be put down on a frontage basis, and general rate charges will be charged up against each section."

"The main point to be observed, however, is that we regard these improvements as more a matter for the city to deal with than the township. The city must plan everything, so that when the districts are annexed no changes will be necessary."

RUNNIBIDE

The ratepayers of School Section No. 25 of York Township held a meeting at Kings George School to discuss the raising of $10,000 to provide for additional rooms in the Kings George and the George Syme Schools. The trustees were represented by Messrs. Reynolds and Cross.

Mr. Cross advised that the providing of accommodation was absolutely necessary, owing to the increased school attendance, and stated that the two schools were at present taxed to the utmost.

A resolution was passed to issue the previous block of debentures of $25,000 and $10,000 additional to meet the needs of School Section No. 25.

The chairman introduced the question of procuring a water supply from the city. He claimed that this would cost very little and would be better than having to rely on the wells. It was essential, he said, that this be done for the school children, whose health depended on modern conveniences.

A committee, comprising Messrs. Queen, Woolner and Thompson, were appointed to take a census of those willing to subscribe for the city water supply.

MIMICO

A bylaw to borrow $10,000 for current expenses was a source of considerable discussion at the meeting of the Mimico Council. It was pointed out that they were paying 6 1/2 per cent. per annum, and only receiving 5 per cent. on the arrears of taxes, and the reeve threatened to sell the land that is in arrears.

A letter was read from Mr. Claisd, threatening to evict a family in a week if the rent is not paid.

The council and the Children's Aid Society agreed that the matter was one for the owner to deal with.

TODMORVEN

The Todmorden Conservative Association met last night in St. Andrew's Hall, Pape avenue, with an attendance of about thirty-five.

A resolution of condolence in her affliction was prepared and will be sent to Lady Whitney, Robert Barker, addressed to the meeting.

T. M. Humble, who was expected to speak, did not put in an appearance.

NEW BUILDING FOR WOODBRIDGE FAIR

Grounds Will Also Be Extended—Society's Annual Meeting.

PRESIDENT A. W. MARR

Financial Report Showed Largest Surplus in Any One Year.

The annual meeting of the Woodbridge Agricultural Society was held at the Inkerman House, Woodbridge, yesterday. There was a large attendance of members, and the financial statement read by Treasurer E. W. Brown showed the largest surplus in the history of the society for any one year.

"Plan Extensions" The necessity for increased accommodation was discussed, and the board of directors decided to enlarge the grounds and build an up-to-date building for sheep and swine, etc. Last year the entries in these classes were so numerous that the stock could not be accommodated.

The Woodbridge Agricultural Society was formed by the amalgamation of the old West York and Vaughan Agricultural Societies, both well known in York County, subsequent to the passing of an act making it compulsory for all societies of this class that amalgamated to be called by the name of the place where the fair was held.

Every section of York County is represented on the board of directors. The officers elected yesterday are: President, A. W. Marr, Woodbridge; first vice-president, F. H. Miller, Brantford; second vice-president, E. Johnston, Markham; secretary, V. L. Wallace, Woodbridge; treasurer, E. W. Brown, Woodbridge; directors, W. Q. Guesneau, Emory; John Gardhouse, Highfield; A. L. McNair, Valore; J. A. Cameron, J. T. Saigen, M. W. Marry, E. A. McNeill, Mathly, B. Willis, P. Cousens, A. Stewart, Pine Grove; Samuel McClure, J. Elderville, Weston; J. S. Smith, Wm. McClure, C. J. Walker, E. W. Brown, D. C. Longhorn.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday at Christ Church, Woodbridge, when Miss Rose Ellen Watt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watt, sixth concessionaire, Vaughan, was married to John Watt of the same place. Rev. William Evans, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony, the bride being given away by her father.

Three Judges. A meeting was held last evening in Oakwood when candidates for the third deputy reeve of York County were introduced to the ratepayers, who were out in force.

The following candidates were on the platform: Chas. T. Lacey, Thos. Wilcox, J. B. Woolner, J. Carter (representing Robert Barker). Reeve Syme was also on the platform. E. Cowley occupied the chair.

J. B. Woolner claimed that the township should be divided into wards, each having a representative, and that the reeve should be elected by the whole township. He favored the local improvement plan for sidewalks, garbage collection and the redistribution of the ward.

Chas. T. Lacey said he was the workman's candidate. He thought the council needed new blood to put some life into it. He thought the association in North Eastcote, was the foundation of the first ratepayers' association.

Thos. Wilcox said he had lived twenty-four years in Fairbank, and took a keen interest in municipal affairs. If elected, he promised to go over the western side of the township, and see what was required, so that he might attend to the needs of the district. He favored annexation on special terms.

Regarding Commissioner Harris' latest proposal of having a pumping station at Victoria Park, President W. L. Edmunds stated the place was wanted as a park and for no other purpose, and advocated a fight being put up in this connection. The matter was left in the hands of the executive committee.

The street railway question was the next up, and indignation was forthcoming from all sides against the dirt and debris carried on the street by the street car. Mr. Walsh bitterly complained that the taxes resembled Rosedale and yet many more the improvements which were lacking in the vicinity and mainly a proper street car service.

Board Has Power. Ex-Alderman Baker advocated the extension of the municipal cars towards the beach. He pointed out the fact that to go to East Toronto the Kingston road, and the only way was via King Broadway and then the Danforth city street. He stated that he would refer to the Kingston Railway at Kingston road," said the ex-alderman. Mr. Baker characterized the Coxwell avenue connection of the city and King street lines as "no good."

Should Get Busy. Speaking on the stub line franchise he said that a lawyer should be engaged in this matter. President Edmunds stated that Mayor Hocken's request that the association had laid low in this connection, and he now advocated the formation of a board of control to make them get a move on, as nothing would be accomplished except by insistent kicking.

W. H. Cunningham was hot of the stub line, and stated that some friends from Winnipeg unfamiliar with the district took the stub line and could not get down for dust and dirt.

Ald. Robbins started by pleading ignorance on all the little ins-and-outs of the stub line, but he certainly thought that the Ontario Railway Commission had power to compel the Toronto Street Railway to take notice of motion for a rehearing on the stub line (Hear, hear).

Referring to the redistribution of the wards, Mr. Robbins stated that the committee plans formulated whereby Ward One would be divided at Green Wood avenue, and the district east of the line would be known as Ward Eight. Besides this, changes were being made in Wards Six and Seven.

It was finally decided to have the association wait upon the board of control asking that the King street cars be made to run to the city limits, as formerly.

This brought Mr. Watt to his feet to say that the board would point out the thousands of people living in the city, but who were farther away from cars than the Balm Beach people.

President Edmunds then said that

SOME INTERVIEWS IN N. EARLS COURT

Regarding Annexation—City Should Square Off the City Limits.

METHODS CHURCH

Site Has Been Purchased on Vaughan Road, Fairbank—Other News.

The World yesterday had interviews with several prominent people, merchants and others, with reference to annexation of North Eastcote and Fairbank. In no case were any of the interviewed adverse to the city taking in the district. To quote William Pidgeon, an old resident, with property interests in North Eastcote: "The city might as well take in the district now as a few years hence. There is a large congested area just north of the new Morrison avenue main sewer, outside the city limits, and very few houses in a case, necessarily to have sewers, water and all the other improvements."

To Vaughan Road. Mr. Pidgeon is of opinion that the district should be taken in to Vaughan road and squared off. He thinks there will be an immense population in that area in a few years, and he has not the slightest doubt that it will.

N. Eastcote butcher shop grocer, Dufferin street, North Eastcote, said the wonder is that there is not an epidemic of sickness with the congestion south of the city limits, no sewers, and at the rate it is being populated. The city should take the district over on a five year fixed assessment basis and adopt the single tax scheme on vacant plots of vacant land. The district might be squared off at Eglington avenue, he thought, near two posts stand out in the district would not prosper after being annexed.

No Fire Protection. J. Ballard, grocer, Ennisdale road, North Eastcote, grumbled about the lack of water fire protection, and the price he was compelled to pay for his fire insurance, three times as much as his neighbors in the city. The reason, again, when the "wet" weather comes along, he said, "look at the state of the roads."

Want City to Get Busy—Don't Want Pumping Station as Proposed.

A good crowd turned out to dilute mainly on the antediluvian stub line and its disadvantages to the Balm Beach district at the meeting of the Beaches Association, held at the club house, last night. This method of get fire. It is an extremely difficult problem to know how ever they got hold of the idea. I am quite sure they did not obtain it from lectures on physics; so it must have come from some kind of practical experience.

Even with special apparatus it was not easy to accomplish the feat in a laboratory. One could easily understand how men had discovered that branches rubbing together sometimes caught fire. This would give the idea of rubbing sticks together, but so highly complex an operation as making fire by compressing air could hardly have been copied from any natural phenomenon.

The only thing he could think of was that those tribes might have been accustomed to shoot their arrows from blow pipes. If one of these wooden tubes got obstructed, it was conceivable that vigorous efforts to dislodge the obstruction would cause the blow pipe, or some part of it, to take fire.

SCIENCE METHODS IN SAVAGE RACES

Whistler lecturing on atoms at the Royal Institution, London, Sir Joseph Thomson alluded to an extraordinary method of obtaining fire that was practiced by at least two savage tribes—a method in which compressed air was used.

Sir Joseph had just been explaining how intense cold could be produced by suddenly expanding air, and how equally intense heat could be caused by compressing it. "It is one of the most extraordinary things in connection with the habits of savage races," he continued, "that at least two tribes use

New Ways Table Salt May Be Used

By Ann Marie Lloyd

THE value of common table salt in the household is not always thoroughly appreciated. Salt sprinkled on the rugs or carpets before sweeping will not only prevent dust from rising, but it will freshen and brighten the colors perceptibly and remove all the particles of lint and thread that are so apt to stick in spite of the most vigorous sweeping.

Salt will smooth and clean floors simply and quickly. Sprinkle some on the paper at the side of your ironing board and rub the iron in it before trying them on starched goods. You will be surprised at their smoothness.

In making any kind of candy a pinch of salt is an ingredient only less important than the flavoring. This is especially true in all molasses candies or confections containing nuts.

Put some salt into the bottle of olive oil before putting it in the icebox and it will prevent it from turning rancid. To remove tarnish from copper and brass, salt and vinegar is the most reliable preparation to use, and no marketed stuff that has been tried gives any surer results. The articles to be cleaned should be rubbed with the salt and vinegar until all the tarnish is gone, then washed in very hot water and finally polished with a bit of salad oil.

Dampened salt thrown on a fire will smother it. This is a valuable tip to remember when the steak gets on fire in the gas broiler, for it is particularly efficacious in case of a grease fire.

There is no way of renewing the appearance of matting that is dingy or worn which surpasses the salt bath. Have a solution of salt and water hot and wipe the matting with it, using a soft cloth and being sure not to soak it more than possible and to remove all the water as you go along.

A pinch of salt should be added to all cooking where milk is the chief ingredient. Custards and puddings are greatly improved by salt in proper proportion. A pinch of salt in milk to be drunk removes fear of indigestion. Soaking colored cottons and wash prints in cold strong salt and water before washing will set the colors. If the top of the stove is greasy, sprinkle it with salt and being sure not to soak it more than possible and to remove all the water as you go along.

A PERFECT DINNER :: :: By Michelson

THAT word "perfect" surely can mean a great deal. Of course, perfectly good food is important, though some perfectly good persons don't know what they are eating under certain circumstances. You could feed them anything without risk.

Then the waiter makes a great difference. If he had wings like the hours and were walking on clouds, he couldn't have a quicker, more noticeable or more beautiful way of DISAPPEARING at the right moment.

The great point in a perfect dinner is PERFECT COMPANY—and not too much of it. This leads naturally up to the moment of congratulation—the moment when table and water and furniture and room all melt away and only TWO SOULS remain, the one man and the one girl. The realization of this is the one pre-eminence that makes the dinner PERFECT.

Sleep and Temperance Vanquish "Katzenjammer"

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirsberg.

KATZENJAMMER" is a picturesque name which points its own medical moral. It indicates truly that the loss of sleep, over-fatigue, over-eating and, perhaps, even excessive drinking the night before, carry their own punishment the morning after.

Some poisonous and widely advertised remedies to yet well permit, jump into your daily morning bath—and then drink two glasses of cold water before breakfast. Then a shave, another icy wash, a saline laxative and perhaps a chocolate will make a Doughty David of you.

Altogether, they entice you to use them again and again. But in this very comforting these ready reliefs contain a grave danger. They injure your tissues and they destroy the quality of your blood.

The safest method by which to combat "katzenjammer" is to take an ice-cold wash, pouring the frigid stream over the head, nape of the neck, shoulders, arms and hands—if time, opportunity and habit permit, jump into your daily morning bath—and then drink two glasses of cold water before breakfast.

Then a shave, another icy wash, a saline laxative and perhaps a chocolate will make a Doughty David of you.

Women and men, who seek somebody or other's ready relief, who take comely morning dopes and headache cures, merely defer the evil hour of reckoning to a sadder and more severe day of atonement.

To scotch the blue-devils and chase away the threatening cat-o'-nine-tails with any proprietary "cure," is to seek a day's present comfort for, perhaps, a future church-yard.

The makeshift relief and momentary well-being which follows a katzenjammer when some anti-dolorous, anti-twitching, anti-excruciating dope is taken, is a dear price to pay for the granary full of dangerous chronic maladies that will follow many years hence.

Answers to Health Questions

MODERATE SMOKER—Is there any scientific proof that smoking of the use of tobacco in any form is a preventive of disease? Does tobacco smoke ward off any germs except mosquitoes?

Tobacco smoke, the smoke from burning wood, from burning paper, in short, any old kind of smoke, contains noxious fumes such as poisonous carbon monoxide, sulphur dioxide, formaldehyde and many other germ-killing gases.

Therefore, tobacco smoke, like all smoke—the proof is to be had in chemical and bacteriological laboratories—certainly prevents some diseases by killing the microbes nearby, as well as giving an unwelcome notice to insects.

Twice I have caught contagious diseases when other hospital physicians escaped. The others all smoked; I do not.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

"Jane Eyre"

Condensed from the BRONTE novel By HELEN S. GRAY

JANE EYRE," by Charlotte Bronte, but first published under the pen name "Currer Bell," is a book that young folks like, because the opening chapters picture the life of a child.

Left an orphan when a few months old, Jane Eyre, at the dying request of her uncle, John Reed, is committed to the care of his wife, Mrs. Reed, and disliked Jane's mother and dislikes Jane.

When she is ten years old, Mrs. Reed sends her away to a charity school at Lowood, selecting the one that is reported to be the plainest and severest.

The author, in common with Dickens and several other English novelists, describes the hardships pupils had to endure in some English boarding schools. The school at Lowood is headed by two or three prelates in the living-room and schoolroom. The children are always cold and hungry. In consequence, after a winter thus spent, an epidemic breaks out. Three-fourths of the 80 pupils are prostrated and many of them die. The epidemic leads to a reorganization.

Jane remains eight years there, six as pupil and two as teacher. Then she advertises for a position as governess and goes to Thornfield Hall, to the home of Edward Rochester.

A year later she is summoned to the bedside of her aunt. On her deathbed Mrs. Reed confesses that three years before Jane's uncle, John Eyre of Madeira, had written to get her address, defining to adopt her and make her heiress to his fortune. Mrs. Reed could not bear to think of Jane's having a position of wealth and ease and a home.

and so she told him that she had died during the epidemic at Lowood. Her employer, Mr. Rochester, falls in love with her. The marriage ceremony is interrupted by two men on the grounds that he already has a wife living. He explains that he feels justified in marrying again under the circumstances, that he had been deceived when a young man both by his own father and his wife's parents into marrying a woman whose relatives for three generations had been idiots and maniacs. Her disolute life precipitated insanity four years afterwards and she is now confined in a cell on the third floor of his house.

Jane is crushed by the blow and slips away by coach as far as the few dollars in her purse will take her. For several days she wanders about obliged to beg food when she cannot get employment. Exhausted, she sinks down on the doorstep of a house where the servant refuses her admittance. There the owner finds her and takes her in. She and the two daughters become very fond of one another.

Meanwhile Jane's uncle dies and leaves her twenty thousand pounds. Search is made for her, which leads to the discovery that her new friends had on the house and burned it to the ground and had killed herself. Mr. Rochester had lost a hand and his eyesight in trying to get her and the servants out alive. Jane thereupon marries him. Two years later he regains the sight of one eye.

One-Cylinder-Brain People

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

A YOUNG man out West was very anxious to buy a Christmas present for his sweetheart, and he didn't have money enough to buy the sort of present he wanted to give her, so he went out and murdered a man to get the money.

He knew the man had the money, and he knew just where he kept it for the man was the murderer's best friend.

He killed his friend quite calmly—the young man in search of a Christmas present for his sweetheart—and when he was quite sure that his friend was perfectly dead he robbed the house of his friend and went down town and bought the present.

That evening he went to see his sweetheart and took her the gift. I suppose he thought that his sweetheart all day, and how pleased she would be when she saw what he had brought her.

He didn't think quite right, though, for the sweetheart was entertaining another man when he arrived, and the other man wouldn't go home and give the ambitious young person who had murdered his best friend a chance. So the young person gave his sweetheart the present right before the other man.

It was a diamond ring, in a beautiful purple velvet box. Just as soon as the other man saw what the present was, he snatched it out of the girl's hand, threw it into the fire and took the ambitious young person by the collar and threw him out into a convenient snowdrift.

Whereupon the ambitious young person began to cry about his dear friend whom he had murdered that morning, and then he went and confessed the whole matter to the police. Now he is in prison thinking it all over. Insane—no, that doesn't follow.

Just a one-cylinder brain, that's all. You know them, don't you, the men with the one-cylinder brain?

I know a man of that sort—a nice, pleasant, agreeable, rather clever man. One day a silly little girl told him that he was so handsome she couldn't stand to look at him. All off with the nice, pleasant, agreeable, rather decent, unusually clever man. From that moment out he lived but to be admired.

Winifred Black

He bought queer ties and hats that he thought were picturesque. He took cold showers in the morning and exercised at night—and any woman who would tell him that he was good looking, or even looked as if she thought he was, owned him, body and soul, till another woman came along who would tell him about it oftener and talk louder while she did it.

The man had a good wife, three lovely children, a pleasant home, a nice circle of friends and a fine business position. One by one all these things slipped away from him—away, away. He became a kind of cheap joke among his friends, or those that pretended to be his friends.

It was fun to see just what he would believe and how delighted he would be to believe it.

Poor fellow—he had a one-cylinder brain and he could only think of one thing at a time. That's why he made ducks and drakes of a perfectly good chance in life.

The woman with the one-cylinder brain—don't you know her? Housekeeping is her fad. She house cleans in the spring and in the fall and in the winter and in the summer. She puts up fruit, she makes marmalade and she embroiders dollies. And nothing in the world is of the least interest to her unless it happens somewhere within the four walls where she "keeps house."

Kingdoms may rise and fall, friends may die, her own family may drop and pine for want of sympathy and understanding love. Little does the woman with the one-cylinder brain care, so long as there are plenty of fresh tablecloths in the sideboard drawer and nobody pulls the shades down crooked.

Beware of the person with the one-cylinder brain. He's unsafe. She's not to be counted on. Such people live in a strange world of their own, and they never even see anything that is going on around them.

The young man out West who murdered his best friend to get money to buy that present for his sweetheart wasn't a natural born murderer at all. He was just a man with a one-cylinder brain and one idea at a time was all that he could accomplish. Look out for such people. They are dangerous.

The Ungallant Thomas Cat

By Tom Jackson.

THE TOM CAT is an animal that walks the fence at night. If he can keep good folks from sleep it fills him with delight. He causes much profanity, but then he doesn't care; he loves to hear hot words of wrath roar on the midnight air. Folks throw things at the Tom Cat, hoping it will make him hub—big boots and family bric-a-brac, soap dish and shaving brush. Sometimes they hit the Tom Cat, and they think they've knocked him dumb. But next night he is on the fence accompanied by a chum to yowl and howl, with all their might, beneath the window-pane. You may pet them with your precious coal, but they'll come back again.

Ah! many men have doctors called, who've thumped their chests and slats and said, "You have got Bright's disease," when it was only cats that had made them nervous wrecks, all hollow-eyed and glum. Six healthy cats per neighborhood will put it on the bum. The Tom Cat he looks innocent when sleeping in the house. To earn his board, 'bout twice a year, he grabs a little mouse. He likes to doze and sleep all day, but soon as it is night he takes part in a concert as a to-a-finish fight. Though Tom Cat nightly dodges bricks, air-guns and things like that, still right upon his chosen fence he's always standing pat. He teaches man a lesson, too. He does not know defeat, and every time he is thrown down he lands upon his feet.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie: I went out to a dance the other night, and on the way to the party my shoe came untied. GRIEVED.

The last time I went to a dance with the same escort my sash came untied. He seems to be cross with me about it—keeps making sarcastic remarks and saying things that hurt my feelings. Do you think he has any right to do so? I didn't have these things happen on purpose, and I don't see how I am to blame, do you?

WHY, yes, you are, too, to blame, you foolish little Grieved, you. Who else is it not you? Other girls go to dances without losing their sashes or having their shoes come untied. Why don't you think about these things when you're getting ready to go? But no, you're so crazy to start that all you can do is to hum ragtime and practise your steps, even while you're pretending to do up your hair. What can you expect?

To tell you the truth, in my heart of hearts, I like your kind of a girl a lot better than do the sort who is so awfully neat and so painfully particular. But then, I'm not your sweetheart, don't you see, and he seems to have quite a different idea of things. I don't think it's very nice of him to say sarcastic things to you about such an accident, anyway. Rather a self-satisfied young fellow, isn't he, and self-conscious—ain't that what seems to be the matter with him? If he said too much to me about it I'm afraid I'd forget all about him and begin to think pleasantly of some one who is not quite so critical.

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her care this office.

Observations of a Cynic

An accurate knowledge of the future would change many hopes to fears.

If poets are born their number would lead one to suppose that most of them are twins.

In advocating the greatest good to the greatest number some men believe that they are a host in themselves.

The man who makes but one corn grow where two were wont to stand is a chiropractist worthy of the designation "Professor."

Money is a snob. At least it evinces a partiality for the society of the rich.

The danger about waiting for the last and best laugh lies in the fact that the joke will soon become old.

The man who would most prize seeing his name in print can have the delight only by patronizing a job printer.

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

JIMMY CRICKET was walking down the road one morning, before the sun had come up, when he spied Luther Locust almost asleep under a bramble bush.

"Come along," said Jimmy Cricket, "and let's take a walk."

"I can't," answered Luther.

"Is there something the matter with your legs?" asked Jimmy.

"Now, look here, Jimmy, you ought to know that a Locust cannot start the day until the sun comes up."

"Do you mean to say that you have to stay in the house when it rains?" asked Jimmy Cricket.

"Of course, I do," answered Luther. "I do not understand why it is, but my wings do not work unless the sun shines."

"All right," said Jimmy, "you might tell me a little about Lady Bug's party. I could not be there."

"We had a good time," said Luther. "I played in the band and that kept me busy. And you should have seen them dancing. Dr. Beetle had the Lady Bug for a partner and everybody stopped to watch them. I got so excited I forgot to beat my wings and the band sounded very funny without a bass drum."

"After eleven o'clock we had the most delicious ice cream and cake served on little bits of leaves. I ate so much ice cream I almost froze to death."

"I do not quite understand what dancing is," said Jimmy Cricket. "I have never seen any one dancing."

"You see," said Luther. "When you have an idea in your head and you write it into a story it makes people sad, or glad or amuses them. When you have music in your head and write it down, sometimes it makes you sing and sometimes it makes you dance. Dancing is trying to show the meaning of the music by the movement of your feet."

"Thank you, very much," said Jimmy Cricket. "Here comes Mr. Sunshine Man. Now let's take a walk." And with that they started down the road.

TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 20.

WILL MR. HANNA OBLIGE?

What was emphasized beyond everything else at the civic survey luncheon yesterday when Mr. Winford B. Holton, Jr. discussed the civic department of works was the need of a new municipal act for Toronto and other cities of similar dimensions.

We commend this to Hon. Mr. Hanna, whose progressive work, provincial secretary, warrants the hope that he has some sympathy with the difficulties of a municipality which has to put up with a gardener's frowl where a plow is needed.

Is it too late to take up the matter this session? At least a commission might advantageously be employed on this matter to get legislation in shape for next year.

DO NOT RELY ON FALLACIES.

There is an impression in some quarters that Mayor Hooken is riding for a fall. He has really done nothing and said nothing to leave such an impression, but a turn has been given to several of his acquiescences and tentative suggestions, by those who would like to see his extinction as a public man, and the vagueness of the impression has left a hazy feeling that there may be something in it.

The Telegram keeps parroting that "the deal is dead." The Globe, in a gleam of hope in President Gundy's declaration that he is against purchase on present terms. A lot of people are against purchase "on present terms," having unfortunately an entirely wrong-headed idea of what present terms are.

Yet practically this is the fallacy President Gundy relies upon, as many others do, and it is the kind of ammunition with which The Telegram and the Globe charge all their guns.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

But for the uncertainty caused by the delay in issuing the French Government loans it is probable that the Bank of England's discount rate would have been still further reduced.

This and the still smouldering trouble in eastern Europe will tend to retard the release of capital in the lending centres. The action of Turkey, which is practically bankrupt, in buying the Brazilian breadstaple now bearing completion in Britain, has a sinister aspect and has caused the belief that an effort may be made to retake some of the islands ceded to Greece.

So powerful a battleship would be more than a match for the Greek fleet. Then again the appointment of a German officer to the command of the Turkish army, with unusual administrative powers, has disquieted the triple entente, particularly Russia, with her objective always at Constantinople.

Apart from these untoward factors, there is little doubt that the general monetary situation would have been more greatly relieved. The alarmist reports regarding industrial conditions in the United States, circulated with the object of making political capital for the Republican party, have not been sustained. On the contrary, the passing of the industrial vealed a strong underlying sentiment looking for an early trade revival. President Wilson is said to have received assurances that prospects are good and business interests are evidently inclined to regard the future course of the administration with confidence. A clear up in Europe would unquestionably be followed by an unusual outflow of capital from the lending centres.

TRADE RECESSION.

Last year was marked by a financial stringency common to all nations because it originated in the great lending centres. For self protection at a time when the peace of Europe depended on the limitation of the Balkan war to the countries immediately implicated every great power prepared itself for possible emergencies and the money markets felt the strain. Nevertheless until the closing months of the year the volume of international trade was well sustained.

Again, the increasing cost of living is a new movement. It has been in evidence for years and was due to causes only slightly concerned with the presence or absence of a protective tariff system. Britain, a free trade country, has suffered less than the United States and Canada, but so have Australia, New Zealand and France, all protected nations. Notwithstanding this world-wide phenomenon the respective positions in the United States and in Canada place the blame for the dearer dinner pail and the larger volume of unemployment on the administrations that ousted them from office.

This may be human nature, but it is a weakness from which party leaders who call themselves statesmen should be free. Obvious fallacies of that kind cannot impose on any intelligent citizen, whatever may be his political affinities. As the matter stands on the North American Continent, the result is ludicrous. In the United States the Republicans are ascribing the slowing down of the wheels of industry to the lowering of the tariff. Here in Canada the opposition find the reason in their defeat over reciprocity. Meantime and to all appearances free admission of food products will not lower prices in the United States, but rather will increase them in countries where it restricts previous supplies.

RESTORING BUSINESS FREEDOM.

President Wilson's message on trust legislation followed closely the anticipatory forecast published last week, but of all the controversy and argument of recent years the fact has at last emerged that the public interest is identical with that of legitimate business and that the only enemy to both is the group of millionaires who fought by interlocking power to control the whole money power of the United States. Hence it is that enlightened business men, recognizing that they are about to regain their right of individual action, welcome legislation that will free them from the tyranny of monopoly. Freedom place all independent order and courtesy are watchwords of the house.

GOVERNMENT PHONES WERE NOT FAVORED.

A. B. Ingram and Francis Daggert of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board returned from Chicago and the west, where they attended the convention of the National Telephone Association of America. Mr. Ingram states that there is a clear and well defined objection to government ownership of telephone systems in any form. They believe, however, a very strong feeling in favor of control by the interstate commerce commission and the various state commissions.

The independent telephone companies of the west have passed thru practically the same experience that is in respect to cash payments in this province, and now many of the larger independent companies are buying out the smaller ones with a view of preventing duplication, unnecessary competition, and of obtaining a more efficient interchange of service. Municipal ownership is not popular in the United States.

cost. All the troubles that have afflicted the railroads have arisen from their direction, not by their ostensible managers, but by the high financiers who were more concerned in stock manipulation than in proper operation. President Wilson is providing the only remedy when he insists that misleading shall be visited not on the organization, but on the individual or group of individuals directly responsible for the illegal acts.

THOUSANDS WERE AT ANNIVERSARY

R. S. Williams and Sons Firm Was Founded Sixty-Five Years Ago.

THREW BUILDING OPEN

Visitors Were Ushered Thru Handsome Rooms and Shown Everything.

The two thousand or more who visited the R. S. Williams & Sons firm yesterday on the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the widely-known house, were struck with the general harmony and order everywhere visible, and by the wealth and variety of musical instruments and appointments stored in the immense area of space devoted to them.

The beautiful rooms with their countless instruments arranged in cases and at intervals about the walls, were enhanced by the decorations of smiles, pale primrose and the glowing groups of lights placed artistically about. An intelligent understanding of the instruments was made easy by the courtesy of the members of the staff, who were on hand on every floor and in every department to demonstrate and impart information.

A great variety of band instruments which included the Boosey & Company English make, fifty varieties of accordions, seventy-five different classes of violins, besides many other lines, were on exhibition. Suites of individual rooms, everyone displaying a different line of decoration and each trying to outdo the other in beauty, were open to all comers. Here different musical instruments were in operation and demonstrators busily illustrating the wares to prospective buyers.

The sample stock and repair rooms were all interesting, and the large stock of flageolets, flutes, clarinets, piccolos and oboes, especially the better-known pianos and violins, attracted admirers. Old instruments, such as the spinnet, gave room for contrast with the great modern developments of which the combination representing a full orchestra is a marvelous example.

BIGGEST DIVIDEND IN LONG HISTORY

Bank of Hamilton Declared Twelve Per Cent.—Savings Deposits Growing.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Points to Stability of Financial Statement—General Manager Resigns.

The declaration of the biggest annual dividend in the history of the bank featured the 42nd annual meeting of the Bank of Hamilton, held in Hamilton yesterday. Of the year's profits, amounting to $749,411.26, the sum of $260,000 was distributed as a 12 per cent dividend. The balance remaining to the credit of profit and loss is $151,131.76, $100,000 having been carried to the reserve fund. The same amount entered under the head of appreciation of securities, and $34,529.51 transferred to the pension fund.

In his address to the shareholders Senator William Gibson, president of the bank, laid particular emphasis on the bank's action in writing down the securities held to the extent of $100,000.

"This money is not lost," he said. "With the next swing of the pendulum values will improve again. However, it has always been our policy to make ample provision for any shrinkage in the market value of our investments, in order to maintain the financial stability of the bank."

The resignation of General Manager Turnbull was announced, and Senator Gibson made reference to the faithful service rendered by the bank during a quarter century by Mr. Turnbull. He will be succeeded in office by J. P. Bell, who has for the past two years been assistant general manager.

The retiring general manager seconded the adoption of the annual report. The general condition of business in Canada was described as being "fairly good," which had resulted in extravagant living and the straining of capital resources. The falling off in the amount of saving deposits, which had come to a head during November, was no longer a factor in the bank's business, and the present tendency was in the other direction.

Action by William Liversmore, a carpenter, to recover damages for injury to his right arm by a circular saw while at work for defendant. Action by G. S. Gibbons, a miller, for damages for injury to his mill. Judgment: The answer of the plaintiff to the sixth question amounts to a finding that there was at hand a "splitter" or "divider" which plaintiff could have used as a kind of guard for the saw if he had been so inclined. There was abundant evidence to support such finding. It is evident from the amount of damages which they have awarded, $85, being about half of the damage actually proved, that there was an effort on the part of the defendant to carry out the Quebec rule and make plaintiff bear part of his own damage, so that I should have been glad if I could have seen my way to carry out the parent wishes in entering the verdict, but their answer to the question regarding plaintiff's negligence inexorably prevents any recovery by plaintiff under our law. MIDLAND TRIPLES SCORE ON ARGOS

Brilliant Work of Gilbert in Goal Saves Oarsmen From Worse Defeat.

MIDLAND, Jan. 20.—Midland defeated the Argos here today in their Senior O.H.A. fixture by 7 to 2, the score at half-time being 4 to 0. The game was two hours late in starting.

It was lightning fast at the start, the skaters doing the pressing with Sanderson on the fence for a trip. Midland opened up a bombardment on Gilbert, the Toronto goalie making a dozen phenomenal stops in quick fashion. Midland got the first counter in the latter came out to check him. Lavigne handed Waugh a beautiful cross check and he shot it away with it. It was brilliant end to end play, with Midland trying some new ideas. The second half was a pass, west thru the defence and netted one from close in. Both clubs were handling good stiff checks with Argos playing Midland at their own game of stopping them.

Midland on to the boards. Barrett and Uffelman were into the thick of the mauling all the time and Uffelman has Scott worried by finding every time in the goal mouth. Argos tried just as the half was up, but Gilbert's hands saved him until they got their second wind. Simpkins slipped in another after three minutes from a scramble completely fooling Gilbert. Midland had Argos on the run for a spell, and Nicholas netted 4 from the boards. Waugh, O. H. A. Nichols took the count from a hard body check, but continued after a while. It ended without further score, Midland's Argos 7, O. H. A. Nichols 2.

Gilbert's work in the first half was the most wonderful ever seen in Midland, and to him belongs the credit for keeping down the score.

Second Half. They went at it in whirlwind fashion with Argos wanting the checks. Argos netted one when Uffelman batted in a pass at the goal mouth, but the referee called offside. Barrett dumped roughly, but the referee was not looking. Sanderson at last got one in from the side with two Midland men checking him. He gave the double blue a new lease of life and they were all over the home team for a few minutes. The checking was strenuous, but Argos gave as much as they received. The checking was working in better shape it was a battle royal. Argos kept pushing away, and Scott was called for a foul. Waugh dumped Gould and roared. With a one-man advantage it was Midland's turn to press, but they only had chances by hogging the puck. Waugh got on again only to be banished again with Simpkins for roughing. It took Midland 12 minutes to get the next one and Gould's Beatty a pretty pass to the side. Midland's Argos 7, O. H. A. Nichols 2.

Second half was a runaway after the first ten minutes for Kingston, and the game suffered severely by the contrast of the Levees. Kingston pressed from the start, and Crawford led a score up in five minutes with a long shot. He buried hard and laid out with his fall. Forge walked thru a minute later and put his team in the lead as he did the trick three minutes later, and then Crawford trailed four with Reid intervening once. Brouse tallied about five minutes before the half, while Brouse beat Cook with a sizzler just before the game ended.

OSGOODE DOWNED LEGALITES AGAIN

Return Game With Osgoode Hall Was Won by Frontenacs by Great Come Back.

After being behind one goal at half-time, Kingston came thru in the last half last night at the Arena and trimmed Osgoode Hall by five goals, the final score being 7 to 4 in favor of the Frontenacs. The result was not a surprise, inasmuch as it was one-sided, and, although certain supporters of the legalites were optimistic enough to believe that they could go the distance and turn the tables on their opponents, their hopes were rudely dispersed early in the last half, when the Limestone City squad got working.

It was not a fast game, yet it was a good one to watch. The large number of tallies made this possible, as interest in each one of these efforts usually was hard-fought for, and the result was always in doubt, especially as Scott, assisted by his luck, pulled some brilliant saves. There is no doubt that the better team won; but after all was said and done, it is too bad that the students could not keep up their pace of the first half. As has been seen here before this year, the Kingstonites game strong on end and the result was not long delayed.

Crawford was the best man on the ice, and more than made up for his mistakes on his former appearance here. He was never seen loafing at all, and more often than not was the instigator of the rushes that ended in tallies for his team. In the last half it was more than the legalites' defence could do to hold him, and he zig-zagged his way thru no less than five-times for tallies. Ferguson displayed a lot of speed, while Brouse and Reid were very effective in their work, and fed their centre men well.

Forge was the strong man for the Osgoode Hall septet, and his end-on-end rushes proved very dangerous at all stages. Lack of assistance spoiled many of them, Scott put up a phenomenal game in goal. He cleared under all kinds of difficulties, and his work was nothing less than marvellous. That he was lucky and helped him a lot, as several of those were practically in, only to be either right on the line and scooped out again, or accidentally hit something and he was out again. Once a puck hit a buckle on his pants and came back.

The first half was very interesting, as Osgoode Hall went out and scored twice, and Kingston, after hanging away at the nets all the time, tied the tally until just before the gong rang. Kingston was unlucky in that respect, as on the goal mouth, he recovered his equilibrium, however. He recovered his equilibrium, however. He recovered his equilibrium, however.

EMPLOYERS FIND TWENTY FLAWS IN COMPENSATION PROPOSALS LABOR MEN DEFEND MEREDITH

Interested Parties Well Represented Before Meeting of Cabinet Ministers—Grouping System Declared to Be Faulty and Scale of Benefits Far Too High—Bancroft Represents Labor.

The bill drafted by Sir William Meredith on workmen's compensation for the province was yesterday tossed back and forth between waves of criticism from the labor forces and the manufacturing organizations gathered from all parts of Ontario. At the close of the day's hearing the lines of cleavage between the two great interested parties stood out even more clearly than in any of the preliminary meetings. The labor organizations to a man rallied to the defence of the draft bill as it stood; the manufacturers almost without exception introduced amendments great or small.

So outspoken were the delegates at different periods in the day that half-veiled expressions of contempt or threat were muttered. Towards evening, however, the atmosphere mellowed somewhat and both interests were content to leave the ultimate disposition of the bill in the hands of the ministers. Hon. Messrs. Lucas, Hanna, Duff, Hearst, Foy and Reame were in attendance most of the day.

Twenty Objections.

There is no doubt of the position of the manufacturers. A list of twenty objections shows that the bill in its proposed shape is considered a hardship by them. P. W. Ellis for the C.M.A. introduced these points to the meeting in detail.

Fred Bancroft, representing the Dominion Trades and Labor Council, intimated that if the vital principles of the Meredith bill were not adopted by the house something violent might be expected.

"If the manufacturers' draft bill is accepted, you will have the biggest fight on your hands that you ever had," he declared to the capitalist interests before the meeting. "But as we know the Ontario Government they will not dare to deface the bill." Retaliations followed. The manufacturers criticized the bill, chiefly on the ground of inadequacy and unfairness.

Scale Too High.

The first claim was that the scale of benefits was far in excess of any other in the world. It was three or four times that of any other province. The loss of a finger would mean a pension for life; it should be a lump sum. Compensation would follow also in cases where death or disablement followed willful misconduct; thru willful or intentional acts of their fellows; in uncontrollable accidents like cyclones.

Not Enough Restrictions.

The manufacturers held that the powers of the board were altogether too extensive and indefinite. A system of local medical referees was inevitable and this was a great danger to a state measure.

They argued against the special treatment afforded to railway and navigation companies. Employees of transportation companies would be discouraged from bringing claims, whereas others would be encouraged. Further, they would be allowed to commute claims for 75 per cent. after six months and they could contract themselves out of the act for the first four weeks of disability.

Administration Costs.

It was practically impossible to collect the premiums for such a system and some would have to pay when others failed. The proposal that the government pay the cost of administration involved an enormous expenditure.

They declared that the capitalization rate would be much higher than the current cost plan, which was avoided. As an insurance measure the bill failed in having some small classes where reinsurance would be necessary; no interinsurance reserves, year-end assessments, entirely inadequate; different businesses of one man not accounted for; employees receiving out of a fund not contributed to by the employer.

Other things urged against it were the inclusion of clerical staffs, elimination of crown employees, abolition of employers' liability insurance defences, authority to consider any disease an industrial one and the arbitrary system of grouping.

The protest called for a contribution in some form from the workman, either in a decreased scale of benefits or a "waiting period," and pointed out the discrimination by which some subscribed to the state system and others did not.

Nine Omissions.

Nine omissions were pointed out.

among them the lack of adjustment of pay roll, adjustment between contractors and sub-contractors, no premium adjustment between successive owners of business; no provision for capitalization reserves nor for action by the board against a negligent employer, nor obligation of physician to report, nor for lions nor for associations to make representations in doubtful cases.

George Lynch-Staunton brought a special protest from Hamilton in combating the grouping system. There was no scientific basis to the bill, he said. It should follow the plan of other companies. Further the qualifications of the commission were the new board were unreasonable. If any commission demanded able, long-headed scientific men it was this one, and yet if they owned securities they could not sit.

Except $10,000 Man.

He stated that appeals to law were necessary and that it was a shame to bring men from all parts to Toronto or else to send the commission racing about the country in a private car. He doubted the idea that a man drawing $10,000 a year should come under the act.

E. E. A. DuVernet, K. C., took the ground that the smaller manufacturers of the city would have to close up shop if the bill were put into force. The British act gave them the opportunity of insuring if they wanted to do so. The Meredith bill would pension foreign labor and increase the ranks of unemployed.

C. A. Maston, K.C., suggested that the effect might be to send manufacturers out of the province thru competition.

R. D. Fairbairn, representing the Toronto branch of manufacturers, supported the bill broadly, but felt that the details were unfair. The same ground was taken by Mr. Henderson from Windsor.

Sir William Right.

Fred Bancroft stated that the manufacturers were unduly alarmed and had always been protected to the suffering of the laboring class. Their argument that in Germany men did not receive compensation until after 13 weeks was wrong in that they received sick benefits for that period and then the compensation. Sir William was right in recognizing that when common law defences had failed they should be abolished.

Mr. Harris of the Toronto Employers' Association added some interest to the occasion by challenging the labor delegate.

"If they are going to start something, let them start it in my office. Our motto is defence, not defiance. If labor gets compensation, then the employer should also."

The Golden Rule.

William Best of the Locomotive Engineers urged the golden rule in legislation, and hoped the scale of compensation would not be lowered.

Thomas Miliken of the Builders' Association objected to ephemeral employers escaping their obligation. Others would bear their burden. This was supported by W. C. Phillips of the Phillips Co., who also wanted the option of private insurance.

Joseph Gibbons of the Trades and Labor Council, argued that the street railway was making no objection, and theirs was the only company which could not charge it to the public, the fares being fixed. Care eliminated accidents.

Never Went to Law.

Vice-President Findlay of the Massey-Harris Co. stated that in their history there had been no litigation, and that workmen had been compensated. He liked the independent system.

F. W. Wegmann then summed up the position of the manufacturers. Hon. Mr. Lucas asked if Mr. Wegmann would back up the Ontario scale, which calls for 88 per cent. of earning capacity, but Mr. Wegmann evaded. The chairman made it plain that the benefits arranged for in this instance were greater even than those in the Meredith bill, and told him to lay it before the manufacturers for their opinion.

The hearing then adjourned.

REMOVE OBSTACLES TO INTRAPROVINCIAL TRADE Manitoba Willing to Meet Ontario Half-Way Regarding Company Incorporations.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—A strong deputation, headed by Sir William Whyte, and consisting of officers from all the trust companies in Winnipeg, waited on Sir Rodmond Roblin this morning in connection with a bill now before the legislature regarding the incorporation of an Ontario company in Manitoba.

In the past Ontario has refused reciprocal treatment in Manitoba companies who desired to operate there. There is a tendency in Ontario to withdraw the restrictions, and the deputation today was anxious that everything possible should be done toward securing closer relationship between the two provinces.

ASSISTANT DEPUTY PAYS NO ATTENTION Says the Remarks of A. W. Miles Will Have No Effect on His Actions.

The statements made against Assistant Deputy Chief Aehbald at the annual meeting of the Ontario Motor League at King Edward Hotel Monday evening by A. W. Miles apparently had no effect on that public official, for yesterday morning when spoken to regarding the criticisms made against him, he said that the remarks made by Mr. Miles would have no effect upon his actions in the police court in the future, as he was merely carrying out his duties to the best of his ability and without favor to anyone.

Reports say several thousands were secured. A posse with bloodhounds has started on the trail if the robbers.

PRICE BUREAU INQUIRY

Was Continued Today—Suit of Clothes Part Payment for Plans.

Evidence to the effect that Acting City Architect Price had received a suit of clothes and $50 for drawing plans for Solomon King was brought out at the enquiry being held by Judge Denton, which was re-opened yesterday morning. The statements also showed that plans drawn by members of the department were passed thru the department in the course of three days, while plans drawn by outside architects were kept for two and three months before being passed.

Solomon King, at one time a clothes manufacturer, but now a contractor, stated that Price had drawn plans for three houses on Argyle street in 1912, for which he received a suit of clothes. Later on Price turned some work of King's over to a Mr. Makepeace, who afterwards sent in a bill of $800, which was two and a half per cent. of the cost of construction, which was $30,000. King refused to pay this, but was afterwards ordered to pay $600 by Judge Winchester. The case is at present under appeal. Price had been given a cheque for $50 for having this work done, but when the case went to the court he returned the money.

Fixed Them Up.

Mr. Redmond, a former employe of the department, told of fixing up some plans for Architect Foulds, which he had not been able to get passed by the department. Redmond was familiar with the bylaws and the men in the department and easily had them passed. Architect Foulds stated that he had paid Redmond $200 by cheque, and that an additional $25 was asked for someone in the city hall, whom he did not know.

Blot on the Books.

Mr. Redmond produced his books, which showed that the money had been paid to Korin and Thompson, but these names apparently replaced those of some one else, which had been erased. In all likelihood a hand expert will look at the book to ascertain whose handwriting it is that made the change on the book.

EXPLORER IS FOE OF BOILED WATER

Landar Always Takes His Straight and Laughs at Critics.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The microbe mania has driven many people to injure themselves in refusing to drink ordinary water, according to Henry Savage Landar. The explorer declares that water, even from sources considered impure, is often harmless, and cites instances when he has drunk from polluted streams.

"When you boil water you devitalize it," he explained in a recent discussion of drinking water. "I have been drinking from streams and ponds in the tropics and all over the world for twenty-five years and I am convinced that people are wrong in believing that there is any danger in water that is dirty or that may actually have disease germs in it."

SENATOR MASON IS OPTIMISTIC

Canada, With Banks' Assistance, Has Weathered Storm, He Says.

TRADE SATISFACTORY

Wild Speculation and Undue Expansion Checked in Country.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—(Can. Press).—The address in reply to the speech from the throne was moved by Senator Mason of Toronto in the upper chamber today.

Senator Mason noted with satisfaction the growth of Canada's trade, which in 1911 was $317,000,000, in 1912 $1,005,000,000 and in 1913 $1,132,000,000. There was one item in the imports with which he was not altogether satisfied. That was the importation of iron and steel to the value of $140,000,000. Canada had iron, coal and men and should be able to provide this commodity from her own natural resources.

In his opinion the statement in the speech that the business depression was temporary was fairly justified. Business troubles were not confined to Canada alone. In Canada, the some individuals suffered through the business depression, none of the basic industries were allowed to suffer. This spoke well for the banks against which some unjust criticism had recently been directed.

Banks Serving Public. The banks had performed a public service in checking speculation and undue expansion and warning the business community to turn its sails before the storm which they saw approaching.

The increased cost of living he attributed to the increased population and the failure of agricultural production to keep pace, not to a more luxurious standard of living, but in a greater degree to consequences from wars, particularly that in the Balkans and the troubles in Mexico, which affected money through the world.

He was sure that Finance Minister White would give the country a useful piece of legislation in the way of relating to trust and loan companies and closed by congratulating Hon. Mr. White on the success of his financial administration which last year had resulted in the greatest surplus in the history of Canada.

Senator Thorne in seconding the motion said that the financial stringency was largely due to over-speculation in the west, particularly suburban properties.

"Saved - - -"

In June, 1910, a prominent New Brunswick lumber merchant was granted an Imperial policy for $2,500.00.

His fourth annual premium was due June 15th, 1913. He didn't pay it—and it wasn't paid on August 26th, when he died.

But the Company continued the insurance in force under its Automatic Non-Fortitude provision, and paid the proceeds of the policy to the assured's four young children on September 27th, 1913.

Now think what would have happened had the policy not contained this saving clause, which is common to all Imperial policies.

Men on Civic Works Are Happy at Prospect of Six Dollars.

SOCIAL SERVICE BOARD TOO MUCH RED TAPE

Has Simplified Unemployed Problem by Centralization—Shoes Are Needed.

The availability of the Social Service Commission to systematize activities on behalf of the unemployed is receiving general appreciation. Centralization of the unemployed and the means of employment at the bureau conducted by the commission has shown the number of unemployed to be most satisfactorily less than approximated in the starting headlines of a couple of newspapers, and the class of unemployed to be really deserving of work.

Murray A. Stewart of the works department reports that several hundred who registered at the municipal bureau are now employed on civic works. Of these 200 are on the grading work at Bathurst and Christie street hills. Those who have picks and shovels bring them along, and those who have not these tools are supplied with them. The men represent the classes unaccustomed to hard labor, as well as those who are all brown and muscle.

For the past three days 150 men of the best type of the industrial class have been carrying a day's grading work in High and Riverdale Parks. They worked eight hours a day. Another lot of 150 men went on at this work this morning, and next Monday morning another lot of 150 men, perhaps more, will go on with the work. It is now expected that the first lot of 150 men will provide another turn at three days' work by next Thursday morning.

Representatives were present from the Wellington County Council and from the Counties of Grey, Huron, Bruce, Dufferin and Perth.

REPORT ISSUED ON WORKS DEPT.

W. B. Holton Made Many Suggestions for Improving Civic Branch.

TOO MUCH RED TAPE

Many of the Reforms Proposed Have Already Been Made.

Winford B. Holton, jr. of the New York Bureau of Municipal Research, presented a report on the works department yesterday, at which he of the works department, and a dozen members of the department were present. John McDonald occupied the chair, and there was an excellent discussion.

Mr. Holton's remarks were not so general as those of Mr. Driscoll in dealing with the works department, and he remarked that the public took more interest in a charge against a constable than in a charge against a constable. He said that $500,000 were wasted yearly in the works department, because the cash balance was too high. Mr. Holton, however, had no charge to make against the present administration, but commended the work department for its initiative and resourcefulness.

Suggestion Made to Parks and Exhibition Committee—Baseball Space Needed.

Commissioner Chambers recommended yesterday that legislation be asked for power to issue debentures for the purchase of parks, playgrounds and boulevards, and permanently improve them. His plan is to get authority to issue debentures to an amount equal to a one mill levy.

Ald. F. S. Spence put thru a motion that legislation be asked for authority to issue debentures, equal to one mill levy, for the purchase of parks, and that improvements be paid for out of the general funds.

MONTREAL WILL LOSE ONE PAPER

Sir Hugh Graham Gives Telegraph Staff Week's Notice—To Amalgamate With Herald.

(Special to The Toronto World.) MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—Sir Hugh Graham acquired control of the Montreal Telegraph several months ago at a time when it boasted it was to be the official Liberal organ of the province. Associated with Sir Hugh is acknowledged to be A. E. Roberts, former of the Tramways Co. Elberts were long made to obtain Hon. W. S. Fielding as editor, and it is reliably said that Hon. Mr. Fielding on acceptance was given an absolutely free hand in editorial policy outside the navy issue.

At the time of the purchase of the Telegraph it was acknowledged it had also an option on The Herald, but afterwards Lorne McGibbon declined to deliver the goods. He has now done so at a reputed big profit.

Today the purchase of The Telegraph received a week's notice to terminate their engagement. It is believed The Telegraph and Herald will be combined as one paper, and Donald Alexander Smith found in the wilds of the sub-Arctic regions the field for which he was destined and the opportunity that comes to him who can seize it.

HOUSE WILL ADJOURN

(Special to The Toronto World.) OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 20.—The formal announcement to parliament of Lord Strathcona's death will be made by the prime minister when the house assembles at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. It is expected that Mr. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and others will pay tribute to the memory of the great Canadian and that the house as a mark of respect will thereupon adjourn for the day.

HEART FAILURE CAUSED JOHN O'CONNOR'S DEATH

Proprietor of Nealon House Died After Illness Lasting Over a Year.

The death occurred on Tuesday afternoon of John O'Connor of the Nealon House, in his sixty-eighth year, surrounded by the members of his family, and to the surprise of his friends, who had expected to see him for many years.

The immediate cause of his death was heart failure, from which trouble he had suffered for over a year. He was a man of sterling qualities and noble bearing, and is mourned by a host of friends.

Besides his immediate family he leaves a brother, Peter O'Connor, and sister, Mrs. B. McCabe. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, to St. Michael's cemetery.

TWO NOVA SCOTIANS DIED FROM EXPOSURE

SYDNEY, N.S., Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—Steven Curry of Port Morien, and James McLeod of Dominion No. 6, who had been reported missing since Saturday, were found today frozen to death.

A searching party found Curry's body on the roadside between Birch Grove and Morien this morning. The body of James McLeod was found on the beach a short distance away.

HAZEN MAY BE SENT TO LONDON AS STRATHCONA'S SUCCESSOR

Sir Hugh Graham's Name Also Prominently Mentioned, But Premier Borden Favours Personal Friend From New Brunswick—Col. McLeod Possibility for Cabinet.

(Special to The Toronto World.) OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The announcement by Hon. Clifford Sifton that he would not accept the highest commissionership leaves the candidacy of Sir Hugh Graham in an apparently commanding position, but there are many in close touch with the government who declare that there is no likelihood of the Montreal knight being appointed. They say that if the prime minister has his way the appointment will go to his personal friend and colleague, Hon. J. D. Hazen, minister of marine and fisheries.

LORD STRATHCONA'S END WAS PEACEFUL

(Continued From Page 1.) week later he presided over the Hudson Bay Co's meeting. This was his last appearance in public and a meeting in December at the Mansion House, under the presidency of the lord mayor, to further the scheme for the Dominion's exhibition at the Crystal Palace next year was without the presence of Lord Strathcona, who had been the first to take an active interest in the project.

His lordship had booked a number of engagements for the next few months. Less than ten days ago he wrote to correspondents that although he was suffering from cold he hoped to be about again in a few days.

Colonial Secretary Harcourt, referring to Lord Strathcona recently said: "He wears the laurels, or rather the maple leaves of unselfish and industrious life, which made a crown for him and honored age."

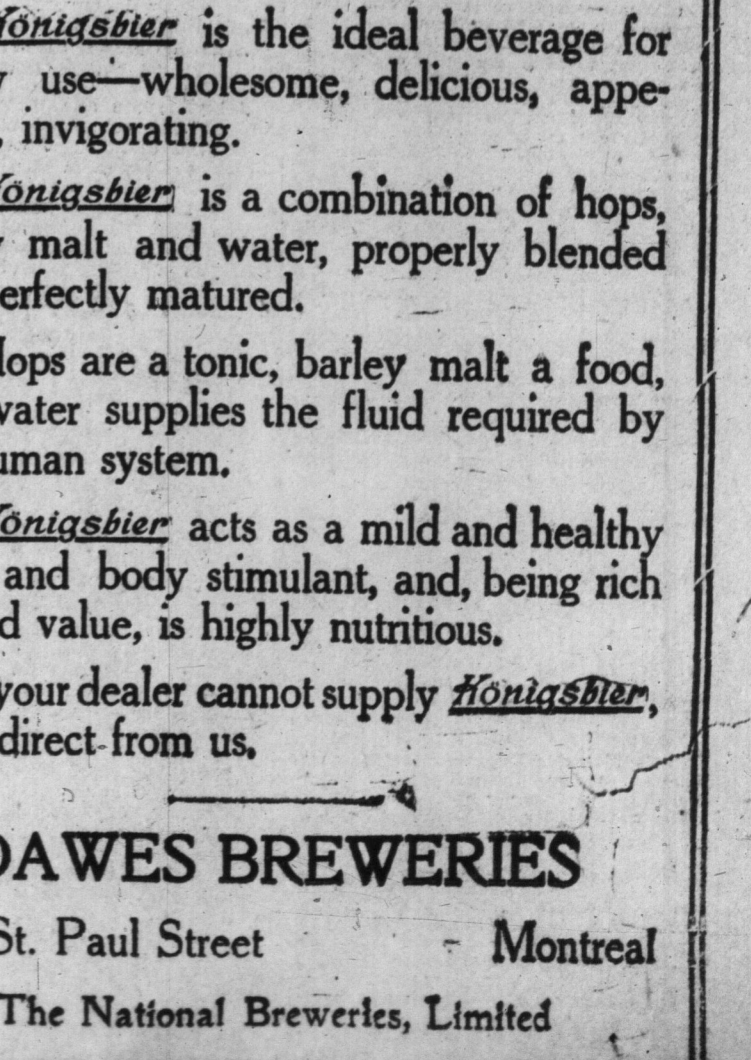

"WHAT IS LIFE TO ME WITHOUT MY WIFE?" With Lord Strathcona's death there has passed not only a great personality but a man who will rank among the like many another English nobleman who turned westwards at a time when Canada was little more than a name. He proved himself peculiarly fitted for the new and strange environment. Hardy in body, strong and tenacious in purpose, keen in intellect and acute and far-seeing in vision, Donald Alexander Smith found in the wilds of the sub-Arctic regions the field for which he was destined and the opportunity that comes to him who can seize it.

Lord Strathcona was ripe in years. He attained an age that few reach, and he had that best accompaniment—honour, reputation, troops of friends. These were well deserved, for to his tenacity of purpose Canada owes in large degree that conscious sense of unity which is the foundation of a truly national spirit. That is the splendid work he did for the Dominion, with which his name will be inseparably linked. What lands an added touch of pathos to his end is that it came directly from the most intimate of sorrows—"What is life worth to me without my wife"—that had in it the sadness of farewell. But Strathcona's name will remain in Canadian history.

STRUCK BY A STREET CAR

Crossing the roadway at the corner of Bloor and Delaware last evening during the blinding snow storm, Mrs. A. Bowers, 260 Delaware avenue, was struck by an eastbound floor car (1772) and thrown to the ground. She was conveyed to St. Michael's Hospital in the police ambulance, where it was found that she had received a severe gash on her hand, after medical attention she was able to return home.

LEPERS CHEERFUL IN MISSION HOMES

Rev. J. McP. Scott Tells of Conditions in Eastern Lands.

FINANCES SHOW WELL

Subscriptions to Mission to Lepers Total Higher Than Last Year.

The annual meeting of Toronto auxiliary of the Mission to Lepers was held in Toronto, Bloor College, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Trees presided.

The meeting was addressed by Rev. J. McP. Scott, who gave a very graphic description of his visit to the Fusan Leper Asylum in S. Korea, and the Henderson Memorial Asylum at Dhar. Mr. Scott said he was struck with the cheerfulness of the lepers in the leper asylums, where they were as comfortable and well cared for.

Reports Given. The secretary's report was read by Miss Mill, and the treasurer's statement for the year showed that $1,224.50 had been received during 1913 from friends in Toronto, an increase over last year of $201.06.

WOULD HAVE THE BIRDS PROTECTED

Put Those of Migratory and Insectivorous Habits Under Federal Control.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—(Can. Press.)—William S. Haskell of New York, general counsel of the American Conservation League, who is here attending the annual meeting of the conservation commission, is to seek the assistance of the commission to bring about an international treaty that will prevent migratory birds in Canada being ruthlessly slaughtered.

International Treaty Sought. "A treaty," said Mr. Haskell, to the Canadian Press today, "is much more effective than a statute. It is a guarantee of the law. The protection of insectivorous birds is important to the United States as well as to Canada. When the experts tell us that insects inflict a loss on the United States estimated at $300,000,000 it will be readily understood how necessary it is to protect such birds as ducks, bobolinks, flycatchers, grosbeaks, meadow larks, thrushes, woodpeckers, wrens, swallows, warblers, etc., all of which are great devourers of all kinds of insects that destroy foliage and vegetable matter."

"The United States Government, I have been assured, is ready to sign such a treaty as proposed. One clause of the United States federal law prohibits shooting ducks in the spring," he said.

Mr. Haskell says that he has received assurance from the officials of the conservation commission here that they will do everything possible to have the proposed treaty put thru as quickly as possible.

FRESHMEN IN PHYSICS BARRED FROM LECTURES

One Hundred and Fifty Varsity Students in Embroglio With Prof. McLennan.

Dismissed from attendance at physics lectures on account of creating disorder in the classroom, freshmen find themselves barred from attending Prof. McLennan's lectures until permission is given them to return. Last week some of the professor's remarks were interpreted by some adventurous freshmen, and the tumult which followed was so great that all the students except the co-eds were ordered out of the lecture room. They returned yesterday morning, and were informed that they were not to go back until an arrangement had been arrived at between Prof. McLennan and the students.

A general conference of the physics students of the first year from all the colleges has been called for this afternoon, when an attempt will be made to bridge over the difficulty.

Osborne, his graft investigator. In probing highways department irregularities, Osborne discovered that both Republican and Democratic state campaign committees have made it a practice to assess each candidate elected or appointed three per cent of his salary each year.

MORE REVENUE TO BE OBTAINED

Provincial Government Will Increase the Tax on Active Corporations.

MOVING PICTURE FEES

Cost of Censorship and Licenses Soon to Be Advanced.

It is understood that the budget speech at the legislature this year will contain some interesting remarks relating to the increase of the supplementary revenue of the province. The income is now undergoing revision, and in its final shape is expected to call for a more material taxation of active corporations.

There will be additional demands made on life insurance companies and all those pertaining to fire insurance, loans, trusts, etc., railways, telephones and telegraph, power and electric light and express concerns. The increased revenue to the province from this source will reach $100,000.

Another feature will be the raising of the censorship fee of moving picture films from the present rate of 50 cents to $1.50 apiece. This will also make a material change in the government receipts.

Among the minor regulations concerning the moving picture houses will be one which apportions the fee to the time used. If a proprietor opens in the last six months of a year he will only pay for that, whereas before he paid for the year. This will relieve a hardship and not affect the revenue materially.

J. TURNBULL, General Manager.

In moving the adoption of the Annual Report Senator Gibson said in part: I am sure you will be pleased with the satisfactory statement which has been placed in your hands, especially when you consider the difficulties of the financial situation during the past year. The profits for the year were a little larger than last year, which was the largest in the history of the Bank. The dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum is the largest that has been paid.

It has become the practice to refer to the percentage which the profits bear to the Capital—16.81 per cent., but we submit that it is more correct to consider the percentage earned upon the total amount of Shareholders' funds, that is, the Capital and Reserve combined, which was 7.8 per cent., a modest though satisfactory return.

The Reserve Fund now amounts to $8,800,000—120 per cent. of the paid-up Capital, $7,300,000.

It has always been our policy to make ample provision for any shrinkage in the market value of the Bank's investments, and this year we have thought it wise to set aside in addition a special sum of $100,000 for that purpose, owing to the steady decline in quoted prices of investments carried. Those which are considered the best have really been the worst offenders, such as Consols and Government stocks, easily accounted for by the largely increased value of money. While we regret having to write down the securities, it increased the financial stability of the Bank. The money is not really lost, and with the next swing of the pendulum values will improve.

In seconding the adoption of the Report, Lieut.-Col. Hon. J. S. Hendrie, C.V.O., referred to the satisfactory outcome of the year's business, as evidenced by the figures of the Statement, and commended the careful and safe course which had been pursued.

In conformance with the requirements of the new Bank Act, two auditors were appointed, Mr. C. S. Scott, F.C.A., of Hamilton, and Mr. E. S. Read, C.A., of Winnipeg.

A By-law was passed increasing the authorized Capital Stock from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

A By-law was passed authorizing the Directors to establish a Guarantee Fund, having more especially in view those servants occupying subordinate positions in the Bank who are not already covered by bonds.

A By-law was passed increasing the number of Directors from seven to eight.

The usual votes of thanks were passed.

Senator Gibson stated that he greatly regretted to have to announce that Mr. Turnbull would no longer be General Manager, that Mr. Turnbull had come to this decision after some years of consideration, although for upwards of twenty-five years he had occupied that office to the great acceptance of the Directors, and the substantial advantage of the Shareholders. The President then announced that Mr. J. P. Bell, for the past two years Mr. Turnbull's Assistant, had been appointed to succeed him as General Manager.

In replying, Mr. Turnbull stated that his relations with the Directors and Shareholders had been of the pleasantest and most harmonious character, but he felt that, having been over fifty years in the Banking business, and nearly twenty-six years as General Manager of this Bank, the time had come when the reins should be handed to younger men. He expressed his satisfaction in knowing that the affairs of the Bank would be left in the hands of one thoroughly competent to assume their care, one of whom he held the highest opinion, both as to energy and capacity, and in his judgment thoroughly fitted for the post.

Mr. J. P. Bell, the new General Manager, expressed his personal regret at Mr. Turnbull's retirement, and his satisfaction at having him remain as a Director, and stated that while he felt a deep sense of the responsibility involved, he was sure that with the good Board of Directors and loyal and efficient staff, the Bank would continue to hold its place as one of the prominent financial institutions.

The Shareholders then voted a retiring bonus of $20,000 to Mr. Turnbull in consideration of his long connection with the affairs of the Bank and the services which may still be required of him.

The following Directors were elected: Hon. William Gibson, George Rutherford, Lieut.-Col. Hon. J. S. Hendrie, C.V.O., C. A. Birge, C. C. Dalton, W. A. Wood, J. Turnbull and C. H. Newton.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors the Hon. Wm. Gibson was elected President, and Lieut.-Col. Hon. J. S. Hendrie, C.V.O., was elected Vice-President.

WINTER CROP IN GREAT CONDITION

Wheat Bulls Rather Staggered by Estimates—Other Grains Also Lower.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Bullish prospects for the winter crop in the United States more than counterbalanced in the wheat market today an effort to lift prices because of unusually cold weather and lack of snow protection in western Europe. Despite an early bulge the close was steady at the same as last night to a shade decline. Other speculative articles all showed a net loss—corn 3/8c to 5/8c, oats 1/8c to 3/8c, and provisions 7/8c to 1 1/2c.

Surprise over unexpected strength at Liverpool gave the wheat market a tendency at first to bulge.

The Ohio state report estimated the condition of winter wheat to be 101 against 90 a year ago. Radical depression in the value of red winter grades at Toledo was regarded as significant, and was coupled with news from Kansas City that red winter premiums there were fading away on account of nearly half the receipts being of that grade.

Wheat Receipts Small.
Smallness of arrivals northwest acted as a check on the wheat bears. Blizzard weather here in that direction was expected to reduce further the amount of fresh supplies.

Just the contrary belief that colder weather, rather tending to increase the demand for feed, would soon start shellers again to work, led to heavy selling. The theory was that country roads which are now in generally bad condition, would be much improved by a freeze.

Oats had no independent action. Cash demand was said to be decidedly slack, especially east.

Provisions sagged, partly from the weakness of the grain list and partly from disappearance of any important support.

TREND DOWNWARD IN MONTREAL LIST

Brazilian One of the Few Stocks to Show Gain for the Day.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—Price movements were narrow, but the general tendency was reactionary and the usual leaders net losses were in a proportionately over net gains at the close. Somewhat irregular markets in London and New York, with lower prices for C.P.R. were the chief influences. On the whole stocks were well taken at recessions, and declines for the most part were held within the limits of small fractions and were offset to some extent by strength in special issues.

C.P.R. declined one point from its high of the previous day and finished at the low with a net loss of 1/2. Power also finished 1/2 lower at 21 1/2. Iron reacted 1/2 to 3/4. Cement at 30 showed a like loss, and Toronto Ralls finished 1/2 lower at 158 bid after selling up to 123 1/2.

Brazilian, on the other hand, displayed a firmer tone, going 1/4 above its high of Monday to 8 1/2, and finishing 1/4 higher at 8 1/2. Iron reacted 1/2 to 3/4. Cement at 30 showed a like loss, and Toronto Ralls finished 1/2 lower at 158 bid after selling up to 123 1/2.
