AGRICULTURE Notes and Suggestions of Practical Utility FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND DAIRY. Cleanings of Interest for Our Country Readers. One breed at a time is enough. We have too many mutton dogs. Rivalry begets jealousy and envy. Give hens fresh cold water frequently. Be sure to cultivate when it is needed. Co-operation is better than competition. Put your farm machinery under shelter. Without good stock, success is impossible. Plan everything so as to economize labor. Hens are an important element in the soil. Sunshine is good for all domestic animals. Add a little lye to your whitewash for trees. Good management often saves half the work. The good draft horse is always in demand. Few sheep are valuable beyond five years. A few hens will largely pick up the living. When a crop is ready for harvest delay is loss. Little chicks need to be fed by themselves. Family trials are transmitted to offspring. A vicious man is likely to make a horse vicious also. One of the best crops to cultivate is love of truth. If you can't do as you would, do the best you can. Cut the first crop of clover as soon as possible. The "sandy foreigner" is what the carp is called. The better the tillth the more soluble the plant food. Sediment in milk is only another name for manure. We are just in the dawn of the new agricultural era. Claps on the legs of animals are liable to do injury. There is no value in blood unless it is of good quality. The non-exercise cow men are chewing a dangerous cud. The big assimilator of food is preferred to the big eater. There is more physical than moral courage among men. An people who eat horsefeed troubled with nightmares! Anything that will decay will add to the manure heap. Food well masticated is far advanced towards digestion. A stolen nut is sometimes best because it is less disturbed. The cow does not need the exercise of a horse but of a cow. Machine work is often as costly in the end as hand work. The larger the animal the larger the maintenance ration. It is often better to feed the crop and market the product. Some men, too poor to keep a pig, manage to keep two dogs. Summer conditions maintained in winter keep summer results. Change of pasture gives variety and keeps up the appetite. There are more weaned than fatted lambs sent to market. Prune sowing shrubs as soon as the blooming season is over. Scattering fertilizers indiscriminately incurs more or less waste. No horse can move with ease and speed if it is not built that way. No one can produce eggs and poultry for less cost than the farmer. There are many days' work in a machine and a machine wears out. What is called "forcing" is simply maintaining the best conditions. The unsuccessful are often better teachers than those who succeed. A good appetite generally, but not always, indicates good health. The drier the season, the more stirring of the surface soil is needed. Give the boys something useful and attractive to do; also the girls. A good neighbor is not the least of good things to recommend a home. The fumes of benzine or gasoline are said to destroy the bean weevil. Cultivation means surface stirring, not disturbing the roots of the plant. Nothing is lost that adds to the comfort and reasonable pleasure of home. Small fruits come on sooner than the larger ones and supply their lack. Since it cannot be cured in the shade, clover should be cured in the sun. All crops are exhausting to the soil to the extent that they contain value. It is said perennial plants will winter better if permitted to mature seed. Do Dardians who eat horsefeed have more "horse sense" than other people? There is more in the balance of this ratio than there hung in f. l. g.

THE DAIRY. Butter Making. The following is copied from the U. S. agricultural department bulletin No. 9: To the butter-maker the bacteria of milk present a different aspect. To him they prove themselves of enemies. After the cream is separated from the milk it proves of advantage to the butter-maker to allow bacteria to grow in it before churning. It is the content of butter-makers to allow their cream to "sour" or "ripen" for a number of hours before churning. This is accomplished by allowing it to stand in a warm place for from twelve to twenty-four hours. During this time the bacteria in it are multiplying rapidly and, of course, producing the first stages of the various forms of fermentation which they are the cause. Prominent among them will be some of the lactic-acid organisms, which will produce the souring of the cream. But the changes which occur are not confined to the lactic-acid organisms; the growth of various other organisms which happen to be present in the cream. The butter-maker finds certain advantages in such ripening. He finds that the cream will churn more easily and that he can get a larger amount of butter from a given amount of cream if it is ripened than he could if it were churned while fresh. He finds, further—and this is perhaps the chief value of ripening cream—that the butter made from ripened cream has a flavor superior to that of butter made from sweet cream. To obtain the proper flavor or aroma is one of the chief objects of the butter-maker. Taking up the last matter first, we notice that the aroma is undoubtedly connected with the decomposition products of the bacteria which they are the cause. The most eminent flavor to the butter are not present in fresh milk, but only appear after standing, i. e., after the fermentations have begun. For times it was thought that the aroma of butter was due to some alcohol-like product formed during the ripening or to the presence of lactic acid itself. In accordance with this last view a Swedish scientist, He assumed that the butter aroma was due to the growth of organically plants, and that, latterly toward growth and for the purpose of finding, if possible the proper species of producing the aroma. After considerable search he finally succeeded in isolating from ripening cream a single bacillus, which seemed to produce the proper butter aroma when it was used in pure culture to ripen cream. Shortly after this Weigmann studied the same phenomenon and also succeeded in obtaining cultures of an organism which produced a normal ripening and gave rise to a proper aroma. Adam and Eve were their people who were hung in f. l. g.

PARAGRAPHS On All Subjects of Current Note at Home and Abroad. ANECDOTES, HAPPENINGS AND GENERAL COMMENTS. Clipped and Condensed for the Readers of THE GLOBE. Peter the Great superintended the management of the first Russian newspaper. St. Paul's Cathedral, the national monument, was built from a tax on sea-coal. It is computed by an authority that the mines of the world produce twenty-five tons of gold every week. An Australian matrimonial agency advertises that a clergyman is kept on the premises to perform the marriage ceremony. London contains about 200,000 domestic animals, and these it is estimated that 10,000 are always out of employment. If there was but one potato in the world, a careful cultivator might produce 10,000,000,000 from it in ten years, and that would supply the world with food again. There are one hundred and seventy-five different pieces in the average watch, requiring in its manufacture twenty-four hundred separate and distinct operations. Dated about all over Britain there are somewhere about 3,000 observatories and up to London periodical reports of weather experience on hills and in valleys, on moors and heaths, in towns and villages. Mr. John Harding, of Leeds, has collected over 450, consisting of nearly 20,000 pennies, for local charitable institutions. He would never accept more than a penny, although he has been offered as much as a sovereign. It was stated at a conference of Young Men's Christian Association, held in Birkenhead recently, that in 1892 they had 292 centres, and now they had close upon 600. They had 80,000 members, and their property approximated to £400,000. A monster ball, one of the largest of its kind, was given for the use of the church of the Sacred Heart on the heights of Montmartre, has been completed at Ansee, St. Savy. This immense instrument, which when hung in its lofty position will be audible all over Paris, weighs with its clapper nearly twenty-five tons. A JAPANESE SCANDAL. Judges Charged With Gambling. The London Courier says—An extraordinary trial, known as the Judicial Gambling Case, has just come to an abortive conclusion at Tokio. What lent unusual interest to the case was the fact that the defendant accused of illegal gambling were persons no less distinguished than the President and the judges of the Supreme Court. The case was known in public circles as "The Flower Hay Matter," because the game of cards in which the judges are supposed to have been indulging was the Japanese game of Han Awan, or flower matching, so called because the cards bear representations of various kinds of flowers which have to be brought into couples by the players. Owing to the grave scandal occasioned by such charges being preferred against the very administrators of the law, strenuous efforts were made to hush the matter up, but the accused judges, especially Judge Kojima Iken, the president of the Supreme Court, declared their resolve to have the whole matter thoroughly sifted. The most eminent counsel on the Japanese bar were retained, and a special tribunal was called. An admission tribunal was opened in the administrative court for the purpose of conducting the investigation. The inquiry, which was conducted with closed doors, resulted in the court pronouncing the defendants to be beyond the reach of prosecution.

THE GLOBE. Export of Liquors to Africa. All vessels bound for West and South Africa, from ports in Europe and America, stop at Madras. Here is the list of liquors which, according to "Regions Beyond," passed through in one week. It is taken from the daily returns posted in Liverpool:—800,000 cases of gin, £240,000; 51,000 barrels of rum, £240,000; 30,000 cases of brandy, £30,000; 25,000 cases of Irish whiskey, £25,000; 800,000 demijohns of rum, £240,000; 24,000 barrels of rum, £72,000; 30,000 cases of Old Tom, £30,000; 15,000 barrels of absinthe, £45,000; 10,000 cases of vermouth, £30,000. Messrs. Tuckett & Son are often asked to sell their "Myrtle Navy" tobacco to retail dealers. They never in any case do so, and for the best of reasons. The wholesale trade of the country have a distributing machinery which handles the "Myrtle Navy" without any addition to its permanent expense. If the manufacturers were to undertake that work, as they would by selling to the retail trader, it would require an independent machinery, the whole cost of which would have to be borne by the process of the tobacco sales, and of course it would fall upon the consumer. Selling to the wholesale trade alone is, therefore, for the consumers benefit, and is a convenience to the retail trade because every traveller who calls in the grocery line—can take orders for "Myrtle Navy."

THE DEMAND INCREASES. Dr. A. F. Cornell, Greenmount, Ont., writes—"The demand for Pink Pills continues to increase, and I have yet to hear of a single complaint regarding them." JINGLES OF HEARS. A Little Nonsense Gathered for Leisure Reading. The bicycle rider covers the most ground when he takes a "header." The banker is one of the men who takes a great deal of interest in matters generally, and makes good use of his time. "Of-course, Mr. Smith I feel very much flattered by your offer, but—let me see you hardly expect a decided answer, as I have known you for so short a time." "Well, what am I to do? All the girls who've known me longer have refused me." "Teacher—John, of what are your boots made? Boy—Of leather, sir. Teacher—Where does leather come from? Boy—From the hide of the ox. Teacher—What animal, therefore, supplies you with boots and shoes and gives you meat to eat? Boy—My father. Chopin might revel in the touch. And cadence of her tenuous fingers; Beethoven, too, is honored much, As in his strains she lightly fingers; But when o'er Schubert's "Serenade" The laughing and perverse young jade Changes the air to "Annie Rooney," Rev. Mr. Squeeze (to Sunday school class) Will, children, what did Ananias do? Janice Coo—He wrote the weather reports. "Brown is an awful polio fellow." "Is he? I never noticed it." "Why, yes, I wanted to borrow an X of him yesterday, and before I had left him he had borrowed one of me." The telephone, it seems to me, Is named exceedingly well. For what folks say to it, you see, The "Thous doth straightway Tel."

Business Men's Wives, Please Note. A delegation of young men lately waited on their employer's wife with the oldest request on record. "You see, madam," said the spokesman, "we want to have a half holiday every Saturday. Now, if you will be particularly nice to Mr. Jones for a few days, we will go to him and ask—" "Gentlemen," the lady laughingly interrupted "do you imply that I do not understand what is due to my husband?" "Oh, I know all about it madam," the spokesman went on. "I'm married myself. Things go wrong in the house, and you're tired and cross at breakfast. Then we suffer at the office. You stay up late to chaperon your daughter at a ball, and we have more trouble at the office. You're a bit cross three mornings in succession for one reason or other and we have a—terrible time at the office. You see how the matter stands, and how greatly you will oblige us by being more than usually agreeable to Mr. Jones for three or four days! The fourth day give him the best breakfast you can—everything that he likes best—and we'll get what we want in three minutes. Talk about a woman having no influence in the business! Why the humor she's in has more effect than a bank failure or a boom in trade!" She thought she ought to be angry, but, instead, she laughed, and agreed to the proposition, and four days later, when they waited on the head of the firm, he made the closing hour twelve o'clock, and said that never in the history of the firm had things run so satisfactorily as they had during the last four days.

THE GLOBE'S NOTES. If Her Majesty lives a few months, she will take second place for length of reign among English sovereigns. Before her only three monarchs ruled for over fifty years. Curiously enough, they were all the same. Henry III. reigned between 55 and 60 years; Edward III. was king for 57 years, while Her Majesty's grandfather, George II., was nominal ruler for 59 years. Of these, only the last was over age when he came to the throne, he being in his 23rd year. Henry III. was only nine, and Edward III. only 15 when they entered on their respective reigns.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history, few are more apparently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade, and the Earl of Brandy. They are, or were, however, real titles, bestowed by a genuine monarch on three of his favorites, and that, too, during the present century. In 1811 a revolution occurred in Hayti and Christopher, a negro, declared himself Emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pagantry of a Royal Court, and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character. In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the Middle Ages.

After a woman passes a certain age she would just as soon get married on Friday as on any other day. ADVERTISE IN THIS PAPER

LEISURE.

The following very interesting article is taken from the Boston Herald, upon which paper Mr. Lee has obtained employment as a special editorial writer. Read it and be interested:

"It is not often that the Herald prints a sadder or more heartrending story than that which appeared in Saturday's paper. It has all the elements that strongly enlist our sympathies. Mr. Lee, as a youth passed through experiences in which he did himself great credit, and entered upon professional life with prospects as bright as those which have been in the possession of average men. He was burdened with debt, and in order to escape from it by a quick and easy process he resorted to speculation in western grain. This was at the very best a risky proceeding for a wealthy man, and for one who wished to improve his fortunes it was taking risks that were simply mad, mad and wild. It plunged him into deeper debt and compelled twisting and turning in every direction to keep his accounts straight. Then in his desperate struggle came the temptation to hypothecate securities not truly belonging to him for his debts, and which was followed by getting deeper and deeper into debt, until his case was hopeless, and he had to take to flight to prevent his arrest as a criminal. During all this terrible struggle, it appears from his story that he never had thought of defaulting or defrauding any one. The tide of things was against him. He struggled and struggled to no purpose, and when he left his home he even had to borrow money enough to take him to Boston. There was none of the cunning depravity of a once 'good man' in his business career. He was simply trying to make the best of things amid adverse circumstances and his story is pathetic and real to the last degree. It represents the trials and temptations of many business and professional men who get into holes and do not know how to get out of them. The honesty and integrity of Mr. Lee speak for themselves, and it is a brave man who turns about in the last ditch and faces the world with his whole story. There are points in this narrative which we need not enlarge upon, but which come home with terrible closeness to the untold experiences of many who are in a similar pinch."

"Poor fellow! The writer says he never printed 'a sadder or more heartrending story' than the history of Lee's great trials from boyhood to the present time. But on which side this condenser of his case it does not appear, whether it be for Lee's victims or Lee himself. The Herald attempts to one side of the story only as if it had no other side. It is honest for a respectable paper to treat crime in this way and thus mislead its readers through a gushing sympathy for one who, if the writer only knew, one half of the other side of the story, would if he has any principle at all join almost everyone on this side of the line in wishing him a suitable situation in the Penitentiary. We are told that the poor fellow was twelve thousand dollars in debt when he married! Then why in the name of common sense did he get married with such a load upon his shoulders? But it is all hanging, which no one but the Herald writer believes to be true, to tell us that a mere boy, having no practice and no money, was called upon to support his mother and family, after the father's death, more especially when we know that the relatives and connections of that family are highly respectable and well-to-do people! If the Herald man, however, believes this part of the story, he ought to know that a young man unknown as it were, having no means of his own, must have commenced borrowing from the beginning—of whom? Who was there to credit an unknown person? Again, has not the whole of his career been one of deception and rascality, a most dangerous man to be at large in any community? Has he not borrowed from high and low to cover up his sins, to ward off the current hastening along to his destruction. What does the Herald think of the principle that would insidiously rob poor servant women out of their savings of many years, in one case $1,000 and in another $600; who would take the money for building a church (and a great churchman, observing all the sacraments and also a lay reader in the church at the very time, when he had his hands deeply into the pockets of the widow and orphan) and placing it in a gambling pool, called stocks, for the purpose of repaying his rascally losses, or raising the wind to continue on at his old game. Has the Herald writer any knowledge of the many poor people who have lost all through Lee's villainy? If he does not he should withhold his sympathy; if he does he is an arrant knave for calling upon his readers to stand lean over the threadfully hard lot of this poor fellow.

EXTRAVAGANCE AND CRIME.

The Rev. Mr. McNeill of St. John, delivered an excellent sermon on Sunday last, in his church in St. John, the foundation of which no doubt was the Lee escapade, although of course no name was given. The Rev. gentleman took the opportunity to rake up persons who lived beyond their income and thus became incipient robbers. It is not that the FREDERICTON GLOBE is published on Saturday and therefore could not reach St. John until the same evening, we should say that the Rev. gentleman had taken his cue from our article of that day wherein we dwelt at considerable length about the conduct of salaried men living beyond their income and borrowed from whoever was silly enough to trust them; and that such officials were really dishonest. A man in St. John or Fredericton with a salary of one thousand dollars especially with a small family, should live handsomely upon it. When they get beyond this and know they have no means to repay their borrowed booty, they are rogues to a very great extent. Here is an extract from the Rev. Mr. McNeill's sermon—see how viciously it fits the purpose, and carries conviction with it:

"Then he went on to show how all this extravagance is related to crime. It cripples a man's power of usefulness, for squandering on luxuries he has nothing for clarity and useful work. It produces pauperism. Many spend every dollar of income, laying up nothing for a rainy day, and then families suffer terribly. Actual crime begins the moment expenditure goes beyond income. To incur debt without the probability of paying it, is to steal. This leads to greater acts of dishonesty. The preacher described a recent typical illustration of the young man deliberately beginning life in debt, increasing it every year, launching out in crime which became more and more incurable until he landed in shame, disgrace, irretrievable ruin. The sad story, he said, was a familiar one, and whenever repeated gave new evidence of the close connection between extravagance and crime. If it be true that public corruption is becoming rampant, as the daily press tells us, is it not to be traced to the same source—extravagant living. Every court of justice furnishes evidence. Thousands of defaulters have confessed it. We are hearing again and again the stale, significant confession that men lived beyond their means and bankrupted because only a question of time. They spent their earnings, then followed speculation, embezzlement, exposure, downfall, penitentiary. Thousands in prison stepped down thither through extravagance, debt, crime. Thousands of criminals outside of prison walls because their crime was successful were produced in the same way."

THIEVES SURE TO BE CAUGHT.

There is no doubt now that the midnight thieves who have just been busy in Fredericton and St. John are sure to be caught, the evidence being so conclusive as appears by a St. John paper:—"Traces found about the residence of Senator Lewis, at Lancaster, indicate that on the night of the residence of Mr. Joseph Scammell was robbed, the burglars contemplated a visit to the senator's, yesterday a pair of rubber soled shoes, such as those supposed to be worn by the burglars, were found under one of the barns near Mr. Lewis's house, and a match like those at Mr. Girvan's was also picked up. It is supposed that the burglars did not get a chance to enter Senator Lewis's house, owing to some of the family being about with the early morning."

Why bless your dear heart, those old rubbers were thrown under that barn by the Senator himself two years ago, after having used them for four years and considered no longer fit for service. "Give the devil his due" but don't try and fit those old rubbers upon the feet of the burglar. As for that single match found upon the premises, it is to be hoped it has been sent over to the Chief of Police for safe keeping."

NO GOVERNOR YET.

The last brain creation is Mr. George W. Day, the veteran printer of St. John, says a late St. John paper. Why not, perchance our contemporary—if a member of the medical profession is singled out simply because he is a doctor, why should not the printer have a chance? There is a bright particular star (who sometimes shines by day as well as night) on one of the St. John dailies who would not make a bad governor, provided always &c., &c. What does our present governor think of the composition of the different candidates so far named for his office—to say nothing of a host of others yet to be named? He must certainly blush.

Suspended Work.
Mr. Foster, who had charge of the work on the Howard & Orange building, had some words with one of the firm yesterday which resulted in the entire force of workmen knocking off.

NOTES AND NOTIONS.

Running Comments on Passing Events.

Sundry Ebulitions in Prose and Rhyme.

How the Domestic, Social and Literary World is Wagging.

A certain lady was once described by a rival as having "organs of hearing which were unfortunately too large for ears and not large enough for wings." Caller: "I had to wait a long while for my turn to get in to see you." Busy Man: "Well, I will equalize matters by letting you out immediately."

A country paper has this personal item—"Those who know old Mr. Wilson of this place personally will regret to hear that he was assaulted in a brutal manner last week, but was not killed." Sharpe: "I say, Steele, we can settle the case of Smith v. Thompson for $100. That's $20 for you and $80 for me." Steele: "But how about our client? Where did he come in?" Sharpe (impatiently): "Oh, give him $10."

The two most absent-minded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home and then took it out to see if he had time to go to the office, and the man who put on his office door a card saying: "Out; we will be back soon," and on his return and down on the stair step to wait for himself. "Home once more!" muttered the weary man, as he leaned on his well-worn staff and surveyed the village. "The hope that has hitherto kept me up now most deserts me, and I gaze round at the strange faces and shops that have sprung up in the streets. How different is everything from what it was when a boy! Where is the old familiar baker's shop round the corner, outside of which I used to spin our tops? Where the cissy old wheeler? Ah!—can it be possible—they have pulled down the church, and built a—"

"Now, then, get out of this," said the policeman. "Muddleton ain't the place for the likes of you!" "Muddleton?" echoed the weary traveler. "Where's Muddleton there?" "Twenty mile on."

And so it was. He had mistaken the name of Germany is often addressed by his subjects in writing. In the following stilted style: "Most serene and August Emperor and King, Most Gracious King and Lord." The German newspaper refers to him as "The Allhighest," and generally employ the plural the number, the effect at times being somewhat curious; e.g., "They will say, 'His Majesty are at Cologne.'"

The Turkish Sultan's kitchen costs the empire $200,000 annually. The building extends 150 ft. on every side. The dials are in the kitchen by no less a person than Osman Pasha, and here of old and are unassailed in the Sultan's presence.

An admirer of Wagner has lately paid as much as $11 sterling for the portion of the opera "Lohengrin" which he performed at Bayreuth, where the "Maister" used to quaff his daily beer. It was not the whole bench, but merely the part where Wagner was wont to sit.

Only one instance in which a lady has changed her name three times in one day is on record. Mr. Croft, son of Sir A. D. Croft, was married at Wexley Hill, Hants, to the eldest daughter of Mr. Marsh, at one time M. P. for Salisbury. The same day the old baronet died suddenly, and his son succeeded him. Thus the lady was in the morning Miss Marsh, in the afternoon Mrs. Croft, and at night Lady Croft.

Immense sums are now being paid by fashionable New Yorkers to operate stars for their services at private houses. Miss Emma James, for instance at a large reception recently, received the sum of £200; and it is said that one of the De Russes' determinedly refused to sing at a private house until he had secured £1,000 for his share in the evening's entertainment made him break through his resolution.

Domley: "Brown, I understand that Robinson referred to me yesterday as an old fool." Brown: "Why, of course it ain't right, Domley. You can't be more than forty at the outside."

A young lady ate half a wedding cake, and then went to sleep to dream of her future husband. She woke in the middle of the night in a dreadful state of alarm, and declared that she would rather remain single for a thousand years than marry the man she saw in her dream.

Young Man: "I want an engagement ring for a young lady." Jeweller: "Yes, sir, about what size?" Young Man: "I don't know, exactly; but she can twist me round her little finger, if that's any guide."

One of the duties of the Lord Chamberlain, on the occasion of a State concert, is as follows: The member of the Royal Family representing Her Majesty occupies the centre chair on a raised dais; at the end of the room facing the orchestra, immediately she is seated the Lord Chamberlain bows very solemnly, approaches, kneels down, and gently takes the right foot of the Royal lady and even more recently places it on a crimson and gold footstool. Then the Lord Chamberlain retires.

A remarkable instance of Shakespearean enthusiasm has recently been recorded in the case of Dean Burgoon, who once passed an October night on a settle in the room in which the Bard of Avon is supposed to have been born, in the expectation that Shakespeare would appear to him in his dream. The result proved unsatisfactory, the only consequences being that the sleeper was awakened in the early morning half dead with cold and completely disillusioned. The Dean himself is the authority for the statement.

Prince Blamarck is so proud of the first medal he received that he always wears it even with his grandest decorations. It was presented to him for saving at great personal risk, the life of a groom called Hildebran, whose horse became unmanageable, and dashed with its rider into the Lippener Lake. One day at a public reception a newly-made diplomat came up to Blamarck, and asked what the small unpretending-looking medal meant. He replied: "I have the habit of sometimes saving a man's life."

The most successful of American authors, judged by the power of earning money, is a gentleman whose fame has not yet travelled across the Atlantic. We are told that Mr. J. W. Pool has written fourteen books, the aggregate circulation of which exceeds 2,500,000 copies. His works are all of a religious or philosophical nature, and are sold on the subscription plan. The most popular is his "Beautiful Story," which has reached a sale within only 3,000 of 500,000 copies in less than two years. His last two works, "The Living World" and "The Story of a Man," have both gone beyond 200,000 copies each. During 1888 Mr. Pool's royalties amounted to nearly £7,000, and this year they will exceed £10,000.
