The Jaeger Sanitary Slippers

KEEP THE FEET WARM AND DRY.
ALLOW EVAPORATION. PREVENT CHILL.

The temperature of the extremities exercises most important influence on that of the whole body. The Jaeger woollen cloth "upper," lined with porous undyed woollen material, maintains a comfortable, equal temperature, preventing excess of heat and protecting from chill and too rapid cooling.

The foot is, for the first time, enabled to breathe and to throw off those secretions which, when retained by an impervious covering, are a source of discomfort and ailments.

Everyone who desires health and comfort should make a trial of them.

Ladies' "Teek" Style, sizes 2 to 6, $1.75

Colors—Red, Brown, Royal Blue, Black and Tartan.

Gentlemen's "Alberts," 6 to 10, $1.50.

Colors—Black, Brown and Greys.

"Clarence" Boots, 7 to 10, $2.25

Colors—Black, Brown and Grey.

Sole Agent, PHILLIPS The CLOTHIER.

Merry Xmas.

XMAS MUSIC AT ST. ANDREWS.

There was a large congregation at St. Andrew's church last evening, when the special Christmas music was rendered, as per programme published in Saturday's "News."

The first anthem, "And there were Shepherds," was somewhat marred by the organ motor stopping, which nearly spoiled Miss McCully's solo. Mr. Adam Hall sang the bass solo in this number, most effectively.

Next followed the Quartette, "An Angel's Serenade," from the cantata of "The Nativity," in which Mrs. R. G. Strathie sang the contralto solo. It was Mrs. Strathie's first solo in the church, and the large congregation present, were both surprised and delighted, with her beautiful, full, and sympathetic voice.

Miss May Conrad sang "The Babe of light and glory," by Dressler, with taste and intelligence. Miss Jean McKenzie played the violin obligato to this number.

The anthem, "The Prince of Peace," was splendidly given by the full choir.

Many thought the anthem, "Brightest and Best," by Rubensin, the gem of the evening. Mrs. McKenzie sang the solo in this number, in her usual good style, her voice was flexible and sympathetic, and her enunciation almost perfect.

Altogether the choir sang four Christmas hymns, and a carol, "It came upon a midnight clear." The decorations were of holly and spruce, together with potted plants and festoons of smilax.

Rheumatic Warped Limbs

Mrs. H. Wills, Chesley, Ont., says: "My boy was all crippled up with rheumatism. Although we doctored, he was in this way for about one year, and the pain was terrible. Reading of many cases where Dr. Cass's Kidney-Liver Pills had cured rheumatism, we got a box. Before they were half gone he began to improve and is now quite well. I am very glad to recommend them to others. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box."

XMAS MUSIC—PRINCE ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

The Xmas music in Prince Street Baptist church was well rendered. In the morning beside the usual hymn service, the choir sang the anthem, "Glory be to God in the Highest," by Thompson.

In the evening there was a more extensive programme, consisting of the following:

Hymn—Sun of my Soul.

Quartette—Now the Day is Over.

Misses Lee and Messrs. Dwyer and Cutten.

Hymn—While Shepherds Watched their flocks. Tune—Shelburne.

Antiem—There were Shepherds, Earle.

Hymn—Hark, Hark my Soul.

Antiem—Sing O Heavens, Clare.

Hymn—Joy to the World, the Lord is come. Tune—Antioch.

Pastor Adams occupied the pulpit at both services, giving two interesting and instructive discourses on "The Star," and "God's Unspeakable Gift."

BORN.

WEBSTER—At Brunswick St., Truro, Dec. 19th, to Mr. and Mrs. Percy Webster—a son.

DIED.

STANFIELD—At Dominion St., Truro, Dec. 23rd, Charles E. Stanfield, a native of Yorkshire, England, in the 72nd year of his age.

GOLER—At Boston, Mass., Dec. 23rd, Hattie Grace, wife of James H. Goler, and daughter of Mrs. E. H. Jordan, Prince St. West, Truro.

THE NOVA SCOTIA NORMAL.

The Nova Scotia Normal, the organ of the Normal School people is one of our best exchanges. If it be any satisfaction to the Editor of the Normal (it has eleven) we can truthfully assert that the newspaper tract is more largely developed in them than their brethren of the Dalhousie Gazette, but then there are more of them. However, badinage aside, we have nothing but words of commendation for the Normal. The article on manual training is worth a good deal, but no matter about the importance of sense training and no matter what "Psychology" shows, we can depend that any manual training introduced into our schools will do them no harm, but will do other things, but it will become only an additional burden. As is the fashion now-a-days, an article about the picture of principal so can adorn the Normal. "Brevities" are all right; "Abnormalities" as normal as could be, signed them with a tucking in of her skirts and a writing of the one word "Mice," and they run up the gamut of inanities until they reach "Grease," and then scintillated skywards thus: "On the spur of the moment, it is suggested that we have a joke department in connection with the Normal." Well, they have.—Picquet Advocate.

The brand "Union Blend Tea" is a valuable trade mark, for it is a guarantee of a superior and uniform quality, and the best value that can be obtained for the price, 25, 30, 35, and 40 cents a pound. $400. will be distributed among purchasers early in December.

XMAS MUSIC.

Immanuel Baptist

A portion of the Christmas music of this choir was presented last evening. One feature of particular note was the singing of the old tunes of Sherburne, Christmas Hymn, and Antioch, the two former being greatly appreciated by the older members of the congregation. The opening selection was the Anthem Carol, written by the late Sir Arthur Sullivan, "I sing the birth" the third melody of which was effectively rendered by Miss Chipman. The full chorus anthem, "We have seen and given a capital rendering, the opening bass solo being finely given by Mr. W. Kemp. The third selection was perhaps the most enjoyable of all being a male quartette of Lyon's, "Christ is Born," with two elegant baritone solos which were taken by Mr. Kemp. The other members of the quartette are Messrs W. Hopper, Parker and Dr. Walker. This same quartette will also sing at Midnight Mass in the church of the Immaculate Conception tonight.

The balance of this choir's Christmas music will be given next Sunday morning, and a particularly fine programme will be presented next Sunday evening.

KINDERGARTEN CHRISTMAS TREE.

The little folks in the Kindergarten entertained their friends Friday morning in true Christmas style. For the past two weeks they have been busy preparing gifts for mothers and fathers, grandmothers, etc., and certainly their work has done them credit. The tree, which was a beauty in itself, was decorated with sachets made of weaving mats, book-marks, blotters, tissue paper shaving balls, pretty tiny card board sleds, etc., etc. Some of the new Christmas cards were exceedingly pretty, having in the centre a miniature copy of one of the famous Madonna pictures, and around this a sewing design of bells.

One small boy who found it hard to learn this more difficult stitch required for this work, was fain to give it up, but being encouraged at home, as well as in Kindergarten, to persevere, he at last mastered it completely, and enjoyed his success to the full, emphatically declaring that something harder must be got for him now, as that was too easy.

One of the most pleasing features about the Kindergarten treatment of Christmas is that it develops generosity—the children taste and appreciate the pleasure of giving.

The games played Friday represented the different seasons of the year, "mud pies" being "baked on a shingle," "Little Gold Leaf," with all the other little leaves being chased around the circle by "Mr. Wind," and the "Wives Travellers" introducing a lively game of imaginary snow-balling.

The Christmas songs were good, especially the one ending with the words, "and give to all people a glad Christmas Day."

The two young ladies who are taking the Kindergarten course, and assisting Mrs. Patterson this year, Miss Claire Faulkner, of Truro, and Miss A. Y. Marchant, of Brooklyn Street, Kings Co., entered into the spirit of the whole affair with an ease and readiness not often attained so early in the course.

As the staff of assistants is smaller than usual, Miss Conrad, who is a graduate of the Truro Kindergarten, very kindly consented to help in the music, and added much to the success of the entertainment.

Miss Morton, who graduated in June last so creditably, has had charge of the Kindergarten during the greater part of last week, in Mrs. Patterson's absence at the Teachers' Institute at Great Village, and her manner of conducting the exercises on Friday, reflected great credit on herself, and gave promise of much success in her future work.

It is a pleasure to see our Kindergarten in its present bright, sunny quarters, and to know that it is free to all.

Delightful, Dashing, Daring.

about young master's apartments.
is a dreadful thing to say, but I am almost afraid that he has quarreled with his young bride. I heard loud and angry words from their boudoir a little while since, then he rode away from the house like one mad. Make some excuse to go and speak to her.
She will have little enough sympathy from his mother or Miss Claverling, poor thing! They have been trying to set him against her since he brought her here. It's a poor place for a bride in a mother-in-law's house."

"I will go down to her at once,"
said Gregory, with her kindly face full of sympathy.

She hurried through the long marble corridors to Florabel's room.
The door was ajar. She pushed it open and entered. Gregory was startled at the ghastly face turned toward her.

"Oh, my dear young lady, you are in trouble!" she cried, hastening toward her.

Florabel looked up with startled eyes.

"Yes, I am in great trouble, Gregory," she said. "I may tell you—the whole world will know it soon—my husband has left me!"

As she uttered these words her lips quivered, and the hot, bitter tears fell like rain down her face.

"Left you!" echoed Gregory. "Oh,
surely you don't mean it, ma'am.
He has not left you for good. No man in his senses could have done that."

"It is quite true, Gregory," she answered, and her voice sounded like nothing human. "He has gone never to return."

"Oh, poor child!" and the woman paused; her horror was too great for words. "Poor child!" she gasped,
"what shall you do? and you loved him so well."

"That is it, Gregory," she answered, piteously. "What shall I do? I—I have heard of such things, but I hardly thought they were real. Oh, Gregory, what do other wives do when their husband's forsakes them?
I—I never thought what those wives did—never dreaming that such a thing could ever happen to me."

And the hapless girl turned in her agony to the older woman, who had seen and knew more of life.

"Are you quite sure there is no mistake?" said Gregory. "It seems so impossible."

"It is quite true," faltered Florabel, tears still falling like rain down her pale cheeks.

"Then, poor child, you ought to send for your relatives at once."

She never understood why Florabel drew back, looking so white and scared.

"I cannot stay here, Gregory," she sobbed. "I will go away. Think of the bitter anger and reproaches his mother and Miss Claverling would cast upon me if I were to stay here. They have made life bitter enough for me already."

"If you would but stay here, and not mind them, I am sure he would come back when his anger had time to cool. Most men are hasty. They always repent."

"He will never come back," wailed Florabel. "He said so. He left me with almost a curse on his lips," she cried, wringing her hands. "No, no, Gregory, I will not stay here. I am going away. You must help me to get my things ready. I am going to New York by the midnight express."

In vain the maid pleaded. Florabel was firm. His mother and Miss Claver-ling should not gloat over her terrible misfortune to her face, telling her they were right glad Max had left her at last, and that it was the wisest step he had ever taken. No, no, she could never endure that.

When Gregory found that she was firm in her purpose, with weeping eyes he helped her to pack the little hand-satchel she had brought with her.

"That was my mother's, she sobbed. "I shall take that with a few necessary articles. All the rest I shall leave behind."

"But your jewels!" cried Gregory, aghast. "Why, they are worth a small fortune, child. Surely you wouldn't leave them behind you?"

"Yes," said Florabel, resolutely.
"I shall leave them here."

In vain Gregory protested. She would not touch the jewels. Nor would she allow the faithful maid to accompany her to the railway station.

When the midnight train started, it carried with it poor Florabel.

She had left a note pinned to the cushion on her table. They would find it on the morrow, and that would explain all.

She was a spirited little thing; he remembered that she always rebelled against coercion.

"I would not ruin two lives by being too hasty. He would temporize with her.

He turned his horse's head about, and rode slowly back through the dewy fragrance of the night.

Those notes might have meant nothing which Hurlhurst slipped into Florabel's hand; perhaps the name of some piece of music, or a new book, and that meeting in the rose-arbor might have been accidental, after all. He would not believe the fellow was anything to Florabel; that might have been an ingenious manner she had adopted to test his love for her, to allow him to imagine so.

He was fiery-tempered—the curse of the Forresters for generations back had been passionate jealousy; it had led to grave results before now; and Max resolved to combat, step by step, the family foe.

It was a great concession for a man of his proud nature to make—to return, once more, and plead with her, for the old love's sake, to set the matter straight that was drifting them apart.

If it was a lesson to cure him from flirting with Inez Claverling, he would heed and profit by it. Young and foolish wives had been known to try such experiments, so see if their liege lord's love had waned. He almost smiled as he entered the gates.
There was a faint light in Florabel's room. She was expecting him to return, he told himself; all the rest of the house was dark as the tomb.

The hour was too late, he put up his horse without disturbing the groom; then hurried into the house, and no warning came to him of the blow that awaited him when he should reach his wife's boudoir.

He tapped lightly, but, assuring himself she did not hear, he entered unceremoniously.

He was not losing her beauty-sleep, by sitting up waiting for him—that was evident.

So many pretty little trifles, reminding him of Florabel, lay strewn about.

He saw her jewel case, with the lid open, lying on the marble mantel.
Ah! that was very careless of Florabel, indeed, to lay her jewels about like this. He must speak to her about it.

Of course, the servants were all very honest, still it was best not to tempt them like this.

He closed the lid on the sparkling gems, and carried them in his hand toward the inner apartment.

"Florabel," he said, gently, thrusting aside the pale blue plush portieres, hesitatingly, with his white hand. "Florabel, my darling!"

There was no answer. The stillness that reigned was oppressive. No golden-haired little creature sprang forward to meet him, flinging herself, with sob, into his outstretched arms, crying out how unhappy she was, because they had quarreled. Where was Florabel?

CHAPTER XV.

Max Forrester stood quite still in the boudoir, and glanced uneasily about him.

As his eye roved past the center table near him, he saw a letter lying on it, addressed to himself. At the first glance he had recognized Florabel's delicate chirography. What could that mean?

Then there came to him the conviction that there was some terrible sorrow in store for him. He turned up the gas jet, and, sinking down in the nearest seat, tore the envelope open.

As he read, great drops of moisture gathered on his forehead; the waver-ing words seemed to be half hidden beneath a blood-red mist.

There were but a few lines, which read as follows:

"Max—When this falls into your hands I shall be far away from Forrester Villa. When you know all, you may find it in your heart, perhaps, to pardon Arthur for my sake.
I am going to him now, to plead with him to come to you, and tell you all, for I could not—no, no, I could not.
You took me into a life for which I was unfitted, and the end has come.
When you hear our terrible story—for all the world must know it sooner or later, Arthur says—by the old love I plead with you not to curse me, even though you bitterly regret your proud old name was ever linked with mine.
Yours unhappily,

"Florabel."

He sprang from his seat with a cry of rage and pain that startled the whole household in that dead hour of the night, and brought the servants hurrying around him. They found him standing there in the middle of the room, his face as white as death, and intensely excited, as they gathered about him.

His mother and Miss Claverling had thrown on their dressing-gowns, and came hurrying to the scene; but where was Florabel, his young wife?

"I will go for his wife," cried the for the inner apartment. "She is not there. My wife has fled—gone to Arthur Hurlhurst. I have no wife!

She has gone! Do you hear me? She has fled from me!"

The servants fell back with a cry of consternation; his mother fainted. "Heaven help us!" cried the housekeeper. "Our young master must be mad to say such a thing."

Faithful Gregory uttered no word.
Max strode from the room, leaving them in little groups talking the matter over. Miss Claverling followed him out into the corridor, laying a little white, fluttering hand on his arm.

"I am sorry for you, Max," she said; "but you are best without her, I saw how it would end long ago, and I warned you. Let her go. Never let your heart break over the falsity of a woman."

"Think of the disgrace, Inez," he groaned. "By to-morrow every one will know it."

"You will have to face it," she declared. "Face it bravely, like a Forrester should."

"I'll tell you what I shall do!" he cried. "I will follow Hurlhurst to the end of the world and hunt him down, showing him less mercy than I would a dog. Such men are not fit to live. He tempted Florabel away, and he shall answer for it by his life, or he shall take mine."

Inez Claverling was terribly frightened.

"Oh, Max," she cried, "do not do it. Your life is worth more than a thousand fickle hearts like Florabel's.
She was only a—"

He stopped her short by an imperative gesture. "No matter what she has done, do not say anything about my poor little Florabel," he commanded. "I could not endure it," and he turned on his heel and left her, strode back to Florabel's deserted boudoir, and locked himself in.

Meanwhile the train bearing Florabel was whirling swiftly toward New York.

Flight from her home seemed to Florabel, even in her excited, illreasoning state, a terrible step. But on the other hand, now that Max had deserted her, they would be glad she had gone, for they hated her.

When she reached New York she took a cab, and shortly after found herself at the street and number her brother had given her.

She rang the bell, and a tidy maid showed her into the parlor.

"No card?" she said, lifting her eyebrows in surprise. "Then who shall I say is waiting for Mr. Hurlhurst?"

"His sister," responded Florabel, simply.

A few moments later and Arthur Hurlhurst came hurrying into the room. He cried out in alarm when he saw her white face:

"Great Heaven, Florabel!" he gasped.
"What is the matter? Why are you here? What has gone wrong?"

"My life has gone wrong," she answered, simply. "My husband has left me, Arthur."

If a clamor had suddenly yawned beneath his feet—a thunderbolt from a clear sky fallen on his head—he could not have been more astounded.
He had not as yet received her letter.

"I—I do not understand, Florabel," he cried. "I think my ears must be deceiving me. What is it you say?"

She stood before him like a drooping lily, her pale face, her lovely golden hair disheveled, her hands clapsed nervously together, her tearwet, hazel eyes regarding him intently, and oh! so piteously.

"I said that my husband had left me, Arthur. He has gone out of my life forever. I—I could not remain in his mother's house, for she hated me, and so I came away."

He fell back thunderstruck. He was literally speechless.

"Take off your hat and cloak and sit down and tell me about it, Florabel," he said, nervously.

She unfastened her long travelling duster, and there, in picturesque disarray, were the blue mull and white lace evening dress she had worn the evening before, with a spray of faded rosebuds clinging to the corsage.

He looked on in utter dismay.
"Great Heavens, did you travel in that?" he cried—"an evening toilet!"

To be Continued.

Indigestion and Dyspepsia

Mr. Henry Moore, Pickering, Ont., states:—"I used three boxes of Dr.
Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for Constitution and Stomach Troubles, and never found anything to compare with them. I had suffered from these complaints for many years and taken many kinds of medicine, but it remained for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to cure me; am now well and strong."

Mr. Patrick J. McLaughlin, Beauharnois, Que., states:—"I was troubled with Kidney Disease and Dyspepsia for 20 years and have been so bad that I could not sleep at nights on account of pains in the back, but would walk the floor all night and suffered terrible agony. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills made a new man of me, and the old troubles seem to be driven out of my system."

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dec. 17.—After looking through the items of the "Truro News," I fail to see any news from the "Banner Town" of Nova Scotia. I think Pictou should be represented in the columns of the "News," so I begin now.

Mr. Thomas Meagher has gone to Prince Edward Island on business.

Mr. William Yorston left for New York last week.

Mrs. Margaret Crocker, who has been spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. James Thompson, left last week to spend Christmas with her daughter, Mrs. H. B. Laidlaw in Halifax.

Mr. Elwin McCoul, of Eastville, Upper Steviacke, spent Sunday with his sister Anna.

Miss McCoul, who has spent the last five months here, will leave for her home in Eastville this week. She has made a large number of friends who regret her departure very much. During her stay here she has learned the art of dressmaking with the Misses McLellan, of this town.

Merry Xmas To All.

DEATH OF C. E. STANFIELD.

Well Known and Sterling Citizen—Energetic and Active in Business—Unassuming in Manner—Of Strict Integrity—A Decided Loss to Truro.

Mr. Stanfield was born in February 8, at Wakefield, Yorkshire, England. He was the eldest son of the late John Stanfield, of that place. He belonged to one of the oldest families in that country—a prominent Truro business man, who was born at Wakefield, but 12 miles from Wakefield, says the Stanfields were one of the oldest and most respected names in Yorkshire.

Mr. Stanfield was ambitious, and might he could do better in the "New World," so in 1854, he came across to the United States. His old-fashioned traditions did not find much genial air among our cousins, who the way, are far more agreeable than now than in those days, so soon left that country and settled in Tyron, P. E. Island, where in 1857 he married Miss Lydia Dawson, daughter of the late Thomas Dawson, who survives him. Here he established a successful woolen mill, but finding the market too small, removed to Truro the year the Truro Branch of the I. C. R. was established, and opened a manufacturing business on the South side of the railway tracks, at the Truro Station, in connection with the British American Hat Company.

Mr. Stanfield a little later, started the well known woolen mills at Wakefield, afterwards the property of Messrs. Blair, Little & Cook. For two years he had a most successful business in St. Croix, Hants, and thereafter he established the Knitting Factory in Truro, that he afterwards sold to Messrs. Craig & Webb.

In 1882 he organized and started a well known and successful knitting mill, now conducted by his sons, John and Frank, under the name of the Truro Knitting Mills Co. In all these enterprises Mr. Stanfield showed a decided business tact, an almost untiring energy. He was the soul of honesty. No more could be said for an unobtrusive man. Until illness prevented, he was a member of, and a regular worshipper in St. John's Episcopal church. The funeral will take from St. John's at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, thence to Terrace Hill Cemetery.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION AT GREAT VILLAGE.

The sittings of one of the most successful Conventions ever held in No. 10 Inspectorial District, came to an end on the 21st, and Inspector Craig and his able Executive Committee are to be much congratulated on the results of their efforts.

About 130 members enrolled, and the meetings were well attended throughout.

On Wednesday after the preliminaries of enrollment, etc., had been completed, an interesting lesson on Reading, was given by Miss Barnhill, of Five Islands. Afterwards Mr. G. U. Hay, M. A., editor of the Educational Review, of St. John, gave one of his always interesting and instructive talks on the "Teachers' Opportunities."

At the afternoon session, "Geography" was ably dealt with by Mr. F. O. Foster, B. A., from Acadia Mines, and "English" by Principal McVicar, of Springhill, was handled well and thoroughly.

Thursday morning's session opened with a model lesson on "Chemistry," by Miss L. Messenger, of Parrsboro, followed by a Nature Lesson on An Oyster, by Miss Grace Patterson, of Truro. We must congratulate this young lady on the splendid lesson given—a lesson we are assured by competent judges, to be one of the best ever given at such a gathering.

Prof. Sears, of Wolfville, also gave an excellent address on a subject he so well handles, "Science and the Farmer."

Mrs. Patterson, of our Truro Kindergarten, gave a most helpful talk on Primary work, and the extension of the Kindergarten principles to the lower grades of the Common Schools.

The afternoon session was devoted to a talk on Manual Training by Mr. Kidner of our Macdonald School, in which some other lines of manual occupation for "Hand and Eye" training, capable of application in the ordinary school house, were advocated and explained. A series of specimens of card board modelling were on view, and Mr. Kidner gave an interesting demonstration, of the drawing and construction of them, which was much appreciated.

Next came a capital paper by Supervisor McKay, of the Halifax Schools, on "Drawing." In a carefully thought out paper, illustrated by many actual specimens of drawing and brush work done by children, he showed clearly the importance of this branch of Education. An animated discussion, in which Dr. McKay, Superintendent of Education; Principal Lay, of Amherst, and other gentlemen took part, then ensued, and some light was thrown on some much discussed points of our Provincial Examination papers.

In the evening a largely attended public meeting was held in the Presbyterian church. An address on the objects and aims of the system of Manual Training, now being introduced into Canada by the scheme of Sir Wm. Macdonald and Prof. Robertson, given by Mr. Kidner. S. E. Gourley, M. P., then followed, and dwelt on the necessity of the co-operation of the parents, if school life and education are to be of the highest efficiency.

Principal Campbell of the Truro Academy, came next with an address on some new features of educational work, referring more particularly of course, to the Truro Domestic Science and Manual Training Schools. He gave some interesting instances of the popularity of these new departments, and stated emphatically that he felt their introduction into the curriculum of our public schools, would meet a long felt want, and would help to broaden and round out our pupils very considerably.

Dr. McKay gave then a most inspiring talk on school work generally. He strongly advocated the formation of libraries for public use, and showed how, by co-operation with the school authorities, such a thing as the formation of a library could be easily brought about. He gave some hints, too, as to the way in which sections may avail themselves of the liberal provision made by the Council of Public Instruction for the introduction of Manual Training and Domestic Science. Nova Scotia is far ahead in this respect, of the rest of the Dominion, and already there are indications that before long, few towns of any size in the Province, will be without a Cookery and Domestic Science Department, and a Manual Training School.

On Friday, Mr. Hepburn, B. A., of Amherst, gave an instructive talk on the teaching of History, and with the usual votes of thanks, this profitable and pleasant Convention of 1900, came to an end.

Mention must be made of the extremely warm way in which the citizens of Great Village received their visitors, and of the joyful "At Home" at which the members of the Institute were entertained on Wednesday evening.

FOR HOMES OF TASTE.

The famous old Delineator, which for 27 years has occupied a unique position in the American magazine world makes a great departure with the January number, just out, by printing a prospectus of what will appear in the twelve issues for 1901. With The Delineator in the house half a million practical women know that they have the very latest dress news at hand, set forth in such a way that by her own needle each woman can keep up to date positively and inexpensively. The science of house-keeping the care of children in sickness and in health, the art of living and of living well, a life progressive and beautiful—of all these things The Delineator is acknowledged to be the best exponent in the world.

WALL PAPER.

The Successor of Tapestry, Stamped Leather and Paper Cloth.

A remarkable fact in regard to wall paper is that the method of printing the better sort of paper is probably the same now as it ever has been. Wooden blocks with the design cut in relief, one for each color, are applied by hand, and in order to suit the productions of the paper mills these blocks are made in England 21 inches wide and in France 18 inches wide. The length of the block is limited to what the workman can easily lift with one hand, two feet being about the limit as the blocks are necessarily thick and in many cases made heavier by being inlaid with copper, especially the thin outlines, which, if made of wood, would not stand the wear and tear of printing.

It was not till the eighteenth century that wall paper in anything like its present form came into common use in Europe, although it appears to have been used much earlier in China. A few rare examples, which may be as early as the sixteenth century, exist in England, but these are in imitation generally in "book" like the old Genoese and Florentine cut velvets, and hence the style of the design in no way indicates the date of the wall paper, the same traditional patterns being reproduced with little or no change for many years. It was not till the end of the eighteenth century that the machinery to make paper in long strips was invented. Up to that time wall papers were printed on small square pieces of handmade paper and were very expensive. On this account wall paper was slow in superseding the old mural decorations, such as tapestry, stamped leather and paper cloth.

The wall papers now printed by machinery have the designs cut on the surface of wooden rollers, under which the paper passes. In the cheaper grades all colors are applied rapidly, one after the other, without allowing each to dry separately, and a somewhat blurred appearance is generally the result. Designing wall paper patterns is an occupation for women, which is highly lucrative to those who possess skill and ingenuity.

THE ONLY REAL CURE FOR CATARRH.

Royan, Que.—"I have tried a great many remedies for Catarrh, but none of them ever helped me. In my opinion, Catarrhoxone is the only real cure for Catarrh." F. G. Fadden.

Minden, Ont.—"I am delighted with the results from the use of Catarrhoxone. I think it is the best remedy in the world for Catarrh." Thomas Cox.

WHAT SHALL I GIVE FOR CHRISTMAS?

This is the question of the day, but a visit to Phillips, the Clothier's will easily, delightfully and economically solve it.

The simplest and humblest present on Christmas Day looks immense in grandeur. Of course it may come a little hard on paternal families who pay for the whole business, sub rosa, his own included, but a man expects to be more or less bankrupt after Christmas. After all, its largely a question of "langing for a sheep or for a lamb," and as between the two, let it be a sheep by all means.

LET NO ONE BE OVERLOOKED. "IT'S YOUR MOVE."

PHILLIPS, the Clothier.

A FINE CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

The Christmas number of the Presbyterian Review, just issued, is a splendid issue of 62 pages and cover. It is beautifully illustrated and full of interest from cover to cover; well-known writers, such as Principal Grant of Kingston; Rev. D. D. McLeod of Barrie, J. W. Bengough of Toronto, H. Margaret Fairlie of Kingston, Rev. F. D. Roxburgh of Norwood, Rev. J. McP. Scott of Toronto, with others equally well known, have contributed to its pages. Many of our readers will find in Mr. Scott's article upon "The Forward Spiritual Movement" just what has been desired, a careful resume of a work that is destined to be one of the mighty agencies for good in the immediate future. Mr. Roxburgh writes most entertainingly of his trip "Over the Alps a week," and the illustrations from photographs taken by himself give added interest to it. But all the articles are good and timely. The Poole Publishing Company seem determined to make The Presbyterian Review a paper without a peer in Canada.

Now I Feel Real Well

Mr. W. H. LaBlance, Bonfield, Ontario, writes:—"I was once a sufferer from catarrh, and while using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure I was recommended to use also Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to build up the system. My nerves were exhausted and I was too weak to do a day's work when I began using it, and now am strong and healthy, and feel real well. I am perfectly sure that anyone who uses Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will derive as I do, that is the best strengthener and restorative obtainable."

LOCAL AND GENERAL

General French completely routed the Boer army of 1,500 on the 19th. The British had 14 wounded, while the Boers fled, leaving 50 dead on the field.

Kitchener says the Cape Colony raid is gradually being checked, and that General Clements on the 22nd inst was fighting the Boers, but the result is not yet known.

The joint note of the Powers to China has been made public. China must pay in full for crimes she has committed against the ratsious. It is a pretty steep bill of fare for the Chinese to digest.

There will be no skating in the Metropolitan Rink to-night, as it is desirable to keep the good ice for to-morrow afternoon and evening. In the evening the band will be in attendance.

Among the busy officials in town to-day are the obliging clerks at the Post Office, who are working hard every moment handling the tons of parcels and extra mail matter which are passing through the office at this season.

We are sorry to hear that the Morning Chronicle has also suffered from the ravages of fire and great destruction of property by water. It appears out, though, in good form this morning a commendable feat indeed.

Mrs. Pugsley and Miss Bertha arrived home on Saturday morning from the "Queen City of the West," after a very enjoyable visit among relatives, of some four months. They took in the Toronto Exhibition, and visited many Western cities.

Mrs. E. H. Jordan, one of the most respected colored women in Truro, received a wire that her daughter, Mrs. James H. Goler, who had been ill for some time in Boston, had died yesterday. The good mother started this morning for Boston, to be present at the funeral of her much beloved daughter.

Selby S. Purdy, son of Ellisha Purdy, Lower Onslow, went to Mt Uniacke on the 22nd inst. to take charge of the engine in the new rotary mill now being up at that place by Messrs Dr. McDougal, of Truro, and and Chisholm, of Oxford. This mill will be ready for sawing in about a week and will be under the personal superintendence of Mr. Chisholm.

The Christmas Carols rendered in St. John's church after the service last evening were very fine and was a song service that was greatly enjoyed by all. The regular choir was out in full force and with two valuable altoes added for the Xmas music gave rendition of these bright, yet simple, Carols that were delightful to hear. Miss Neilson is to be congratulated upon the success of this charming service, which was interspersed with appropriate scripture passages read by the Archdeacon.

The teaching staff of Willow St. School—Miss Mack, Miss Boole and Mr. Moxon—gave their scholars a fine treat Friday, in the shape of a Christmas Tree. The tree was nicely decorated with colored papers and flags, and the branches were laden with a great many pretty little musical bags of candy, which were distributed by a real live Santa Claus, among the boys and girls. Several exercises were carried out, and all the school joined in singing familiar songs, before disbanding for the Christmas vacation. The occasion was greatly enjoyed, and will be in deed a pleasant remembrance for the younger scholars especially.

One of the good results of our Exhibition. In an interview with many of our city grocers, they report that the sale of Red Rose has increased very much within the past few months, particularly since the Exhibition, when this popular Tea was brought so prominently before the notice of the people.

Just arrived from Grosse & Blackwell, England, a shipment of this firm's goods, such as pickles; marmalade in seven pound tins and one and two pound bottles; also anchovy Sardine and Bloaters in pots; sauces, Lee & Perrin's Worcestershire; Mushroom Ketchup; Ess. of Anchovies, Capers, etc.; seasoning, such as Sage, Summer Savory, Mint, Thyme, Parsley and Mixed Herbs; these are all fine goods, put up in patent stopper bottles that are always useful.

Knew Something Besides What He Had Read in Books.

The wise, up-to-date, modern doctor is no longer tied down to the hard and fast rules of what his medical books say he shall use, and what he may withhold in treating his patient. The successful doctor nowadays, is the one who is quick to avail himself of any remedy, new or old, which holds out a chance of cure, no matter whether it is Allopathic, Homeopathic, or neither one.

Dr. Jenkinson, in an interesting article on indigestion and dyspepsia, says: "Nine-tenths of all people, who apply to me for advice and treatment, think they have this ailment or that ailment, but I find on close examination, that their whole trouble arises from poor digestion.

They have little appetite, and if they do have an appetite, the food they eat does them no good. Why? Because it is but half digested, causing thin blood, weak nerves, sleeplessness, itching bones, pains in chest, formation of gasses, belching, etc. They tell me they believe they have consumption, or heart disease, rheumatism, nervous prostration, or in fact, more every disease, but the right one.

In reality the whole trouble is in the stomach, and nowhere else. Now what do I wish such people? I don't feed them on pre-digested foods like babies, nor "stomach bitters," nor patent nostrums which I know nothing about. No honorable physician will prescribe a remedy unless he knows what it contains and its probable effects.

For all such patients I have but one prescription, I advise them to go to the nearest drug store and get a 50c. box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I use them with remarkable success in all cases of indigestion and stomach trouble, because I know what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets consist of, and what they will do. They contain the vegetable essences, diastase and government test pepsin, which are the things every weak stomach lacks to restore natural digestive vigor, and if I had dyspepsia myself, it is the one remedy I would take.

When a patient comes to me complaining of dull headaches, sour stomach, bad taste, nervousness, belching of gas, or heart trouble, which is generally caused from indigestion, I tell him to take one or two of Stuart's Tablets after each meal, and as often during the day as he has any trouble, and I feel confident I have given that patient the best advice I could give.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are large, pleasant tasting lozenges, containing diastase and pepsin, combined with fruit and vegetable essences. They are not cathartic, and do not act on any particular organ like ordinary drugs, but simply act entirely on the food eaten. They are a natural digestive, pure and simple. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by druggists at 50 cents per package throughout the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

THE DASHING DEWET.

DeWet's escape with 2,000 men through the encircling British troops is the boldest and most dashing feat of the Boers in the whole war. Ex-President Steyn led the charge over four miles of flat country, and DeWet brought up the rear. British artillery and rifles rattled incessantly, but the feat was accomplished, the Boers losing only 25 prisoners and a 15-pound gun.

Willie McLaughlin, son of the late Joseph McLaughlin, of Onslow, aged about 10 years, while engaged stowing away hay in Lee's livery stable on Tuesday, fell through an open hatch way to the floor, about 15 or 18 feet, breaking both legs above the knee. Dr. J. H. McKay set the broken limbs, and made the unfortunate little fellow as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. It will be remembered that this boy's father was killed at Bible Hill two years ago this Fall, while operating a threshing machine. We sympathize very much with the lad in this painful and unfortunate accident that has overtaken him.

One Short Puff Clears the Head. Does your head ache? Have you pains over your eyes? Is the breath offensive? These are certain symptoms of Catarrh. Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder will cure most stubborn cases in a marvelously short time. If you've had Catarrh a week it's a sure cure. If it's of fifty years' standing it's just as effective.
