WONDROUS RAINBOW

12, 1914.—It had been a dull grey day—the water, the land and the sky alike had worn the sombre, yet rich, coloring of the garbs of the old-time Friends, always of refreshing memory. There were times during the day when the sun for a few minutes at a time broke through for a few minutes at a time broke through the grey clouds and gave them trimmings of the whitest and the fleeciest ermine. At times the rain came pelting down from sodden passing clouds, and over land and water there hung that wondrous haze of early autumn. The brilliant green of trees plants and grass in the foreground. early autumn. The formant green of it stood out as a tremendous bludgeon or trees, plants and grass in the foreground—with here and there the brightness of the sturdy autumnal blooms, the bright red berries of the mountain ash, the mass es of golden rods, and myriads of clusters of yellow seeds bearing down the branches of the cedars on every side—made up a gicture of rare attractions.

He stood out as a tremendous bludgeon or trees, plants and grass in the foreground—then a baseball bat for a giant—brought out clearly as to color by the reflector of the sun that seemed to smile and enjoy the spectacle. The lower and thinner section, now detached, spread over the water, thence to the land, and into the water. He was driving of rare attractions.

As night drew near there came a gathering of heavy nimbus clouds in the east, garnished by the light and fleecy brown mist floating like clouds of smoke. They moved slowly and steadily from the east toward the south, and far away to the south great streamers of light clouds shot south great streamers of light clouds shot down past the horizion, across the waters of Passamaquoddy Bay, beyond the dark woods of the distant shore of Maine. There came a distant fall of rain and the view was obscured, yet to the southeast stood out the hills of Deer Island, on the other side of which is the Bay of Fundy. The German snbmarine "blockade numbered fewer victims in the past week than in any preceding week for some time and they were mostly fishing craft and small merchant steamers. The dastardly attempt to sink the Cunard liner, Orduna occurred in the preceding week, on July 9, but it was not reported till her arrival in New York on the 18th.

—Fire destroyed the residence and barns on Woodstock road at the line of Fredericton and Parish of Kingsclear, and owned by A. E. Kilburn, Fredericton, last Friday morning. Mr. Kilburn and another man, who were asleep in the house at the time, had difficulty to escape with their lives, but were able to save about all the contents of both the residence and barns. The loss is estimated at between $5,000 and $6,000, and there was about $2,000 insurance.

The total casualties of the Dard aelles expeditionary forces to date in killed, wounded and missing, is 42,434 officers and men. Premier Asquirth so told the House of Commons on July 19. This includes both naval and military. Out of an aggregate of 8,084 casualties among officers, the killed numbered 1,933.

travelling suit of blue, silk with hat to match. After the ceremony a dinner was served in the dining room, which was decorated in pink and white. A bouquet of pink and white centered the table, and a white wedding cake was placed before the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Bennington left later in the day for Portland, where they will sail for Los Angeles and will visit the fairs in San Francisco and San Diego. After July 15 they will be at home to their friends on Hoyt avenue and Fifteenth street.—Everett Daily Herald (Wash.), May 13, 1915.

It would have been easier to prevent Germany from obtaining these colonies than it has proved to turn her out of them. As Earl Grey says in his brief but extremely interesting introduction to Mr. Lewin's book. "unstatesmanlike lack of foresight, apathetic indifference to the requirements of the future, and a timid reluctance to seize the opportunities brought within reach by individual effort appear to have been the distinguishing features of the Government action recorded in these pages." Earl Grey gives some striking examples of the way in which the late Cecil Rhodes interfered to prevent German diplomacy from securing strategical positions which would have made our present task of conquest even more difficult than it has been proved to turn her out of them.
