A QUEEN UNCROWNED

— OR —
THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XV.

"All the time Captain Nick had been thus eloquently delivering himself, the clear, bright, penetrating eyes of Jaquetta had been fixed on his face—riveted there with such a steady, unwinking gaze, that when that gallant mariner had concluded, and, looking up, met the piercing, burning, fixed scrutiny, he gave an uneasy start, shifted in his chair, tried to stare back, but failed, and finally burst out again in a bullying tone:

"Oh, come, Jack De Vere! none of that! I can stand a good deal, but I never was acquainted with Job, and ain't much like him in disposition; so I'm uncommon apt to flare up when provoked! It's disrespectful, too, as the old gent over there told you a little while ago and—"

"I beg you will not allude to me," said Mr. De Vere, haughtily. "With you, sir, I have nothing to do, and the seldomer you refer to me the better!"

Captain Nick sprang to his feet in rage.

"Why you darned old aristocrat! do you mean to say I'm not as good a man as any De Vere among you that ever had his head struck on a pole over London Bridge as a traitor. I tell you, my old cove! you'll find yourself in the wrong box if you attempt to bully me!"

"By Heaven, sir! do you dare to speak to my uncle like this?" fiercely exclaimed Disbrowe starting to his feet.

"Yes, my young grandee; and to you, too. Mind your own business, sir, and speak when you're spoken to. I have a little private account to settle with you before you go home to see your dear Norma, and tell her you amused yourself making love to another man's wife all the time you were in America!"

There was something in the last words that struck them all dumb. With a low, irrepresible cry, Jaquetta reeled, fell on a sofa, with both hands clasped over her heart. How well Disbrowe knew that gesture now!

"Ah, you can feel—you can suffer! That bolt goes home to your proud heart, my lady!" said Captain Nick, triumphantly.

"Oh, my heart! what does all this mean! Oh! will no one tell me!" cried Jaquetta, passionately. "What have I said—what have I done to be treated like this?"

"Ask that heart you have named. Let it disclose your guilt!" said Mr. De Vere, between grief and rage. "I should blush to speak it!"

Up to her feet she sprang, with the fearful bound of the aroused tress—her eyes flashing fire—her lips and cheeks white as ashes.

"Guilt—ashamed! Mr. De Vere, I command you to tell me of what I am accused!" she said, fiercely.

"What an actress was lost in you, Miss Jack!" said the captain, with a sneer.

"Now, Jaquetta, it's of no use," said Grizzle, in a wheedling tone. "You know just as well as he does what it means, and it is only a waste of good tragedy to rant and fire up like this. How often have you told me that you dreaded this day, and implored me on your knees not to tell what I have told? Calm yourself, and be reasonable. You may as well acknowledge your true father, and drop all this nonsense at once. It imposes on no one now."

"That's the chat!" said the captain. She looked from one to the other, like a wounded deer with the hounds at his throat.

"Oh, my God! we are all sinners, and none more unworthy than I. But what have I done to deserve this!"

There was a passionate solemnity in her tone that thrilled through every heart. Disbrowe arose, as white as herself.

"This is base—this is unmanly—this is cruel! If she were on trial for life, she would be told her crime, and allowed to defend herself. Will you not give her the same privilege as a public malefactor?"

"She knows well enough it's all sham!" said Grizzle, harshly. "She can play Persecuted Innocence to perfection!"

"Come! I'll ask her a question," said Captain Nick, in his bullying tone. "Right about face, Miss or Madam Jaquetta. Look at me—look at me well!"

"I am looking, sir!"

"Well; do you know me? Come, now, the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth!"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah, you do! Mark that, Mr. De Vere. Who am I, then?"

"Captain Nick Tempest—the greatest villain unhung!"

The answer was so unexpected—so completely different from anything he had looked for, that the gallant captain sank back in his chair, and stared at her, perfectly unable to utter a word.

Grizzle Howlet "grinned horribly a ghastly smile" of triumph over her old enemy, and muttered:

"Her father's daughter, indeed! Pluck to the last!"

And Frank, who had hitherto stood a silent and wondering spectator, called out, delightedly:

"That's you, Jack, hit him again!"

Mr. De Vere's brow grew, if possible, a shade more stern than it had been before.

"Do you know to whom you are speaking, mistress? Let him be ever so great a villain, it is your duty to be respectful. If you think to raise yourself in my estimation by any display like this, you are greatly mistaken in me, young lady! I cannot cease to forget as easily as you can, that there is a commandment which says 'Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord shall give.'"

"I have not tried to raise myself in your estimation, Mr. De Vere. I never yet sued for the good opinion of any one, and I shall not begin now! Neither can I see how the commandment just quoted can apply to the present case in the remotest degree."

"Do you mean to say," said Mr. De Vere, raising to his feet, and sternly confronting her, "that you do not know that man?"

She met his angry gaze unflinchingly.

"I mean to say no such thing, sir! I do know him quite as well as I am anxious to know him, or any one of his class."

"Take care we are not better acquainted before long, my pretty little dear! 'Any one of his class,' forsooth! To what class do you belong, if it comes to that, my high and mighty little princess royal?" sneered the captain.

"You prevaricate, young lady. Will you tell me in what relation he stands to you?"

"That's it! You have her now, squire! Drive her into the corner, where she can't dodge!" cried the captain delightedly.

"Silence, fellow!" angrily exclaimed Mr. De Vere. "I await your answer, madam."

"I do not understand you, sir. Do you mean to say that that man is any relation to me?"

"That is an Irish way of answering my question, and looks very much like shuffling evasion! Now, I will put the question direct. I suppose you do not need to be told that I am not your father!"

Her face turned dark crimson for an instant, and then whiter than before.

"I mean not your own father," he observed, hastily.

"No, sir."

There was a simultaneous exclamation from Pacinto, Disbrowe and Frank; but, no one noticed them, and Mr. De Vere went on:

"Then, as every one has a father, living or dead, perhaps you will be good enough to tell me who yours really is?"

"It is late to ask that question. You know as much of the matter as I do!" Captain Tempest whistled.

"Then you deny all knowledge of your father?"

"I do, sir. I know of no such person in the world!"

"Oh, Jaquetta!" exclaimed old Grizzle, holding up her hands in holy horror.

"What do you mean, you hag—your murderers—you second Jezebel!" exclaimed Jaquetta, turning furiously upon her. "Do you dare to say I lie?"

And she glared upon her like a young Honess, ready to spring.

"Jaquetta De Vere, you know you do!" said Grizzle, boldly.

"Come, madam, no savage outbursts of passion here," sternly interposed Mr. De Vere.

The Will

There comes a time in the life of every man when he must leave his worldly possessions to the care of another. In anticipation of this, therefore, the first obligation resting on an individual who is possessed of property is the making of a will, and this should be done before the capacities become impaired by time or the ravages of disease.

LUCK.

WALTER MASON

I had a wondrous streak of luck, one day, when I was playing cards; ten times or more I gained a buck—the luckiest of bad luck! "This is," I thought, "an easy way to garner needed dime; why labor through the weary day, to get my prunes and limes? It's plain I am a lucky, right, on whom Dame Fortune smiles, and I shall play by day and night, and heap up wealth in piles." Next day I played another round with graybeards in the store; and I sent up a doleful sound when that punk game was o'er. The robbers I had lately won were vanished from my purse, and I owed Green and Grimes and Dunn more than I could discharge. "You have," I said, "my I.O.U., which I will soon redeem; I'll sell my bus and milk-cow, too, which yields such luscious cream. I'll pawn my hat and six my gun, and raffle off my hay, that you may promptly have the mon that I have lost this day. But here I vow by good St. James, and by St. Bride I vow that I am done with all such games as we have played just now. Hereafter when I want a plunk, before I trust to luck I'll roam the street and gather junk, and haul it in a truck. I'll carry bricks in a hod up seven miles of stairs, for luck, a temper and a fraud that soaks an unaware. I charge you not with crooked tricks, although I think my thoughts; but I will pack my hod of bricks to earn my willie-waughts."

What Do You Think of a Fluid

That will draw roaches and ants out of every hole, crack, or crevice before killing them and not poison food?

That will kill bugs instantly and not leave an unpleasant odor?

That will knock flies off the wall and not harm paint or paper?

That will keep the bedroom, kitchen, or verandah clear of flies, mosquitoes, etc., for several hours after a few sprays?

That will take fleas off a dog and not harm the dog?

That will destroy chicken lice without any injury to your stock?

That applied in small quantities to the exposed parts of the body will insure you from mosquito bites?

That as a general disinfectant is stronger than the ordinary carbolic solution.

THAT FLUID IS SAN-O-SPRAY.

No insect can live where San-O-Spray is used. Yet San-O-Spray is non-poisonous to human beings and can be used with perfect safety in pantry, kitchen, dining room, and cellars, moreover San-O-Spray has an agreeable and delightful odor, removing all fetid or unpleasant odors. PEOPLE'S FUNNY IDEAS.

The woman who is always right about everything had been having an argument with an ordinary person, the kind of person who is apt to be mistaken about everything and needs to have it pointed out to her.

The woman who is always right about everything had been pointing out one of these mistakes to the ordinary person, and the ordinary person had left: "Isn't it funny how people can get such funny ideas about things? And stick to them so I really can't understand it. Well, she certainly had to admit she hadn't a leg to stand on!"

As a matter of fact, the ordinary person hadn't admitted anything. She had simply subsided into silence.

Just as we all do when we meet that type of people.

We subside, either because we get tired of arguing, or because we gradually realize the futility of trying to convince such "people" of anything. And then they think they have answered all opposition by the unanswerability of their arguments and become more sure than ever that they are the always right people and that truth shall die with them.

Resolutions Urging Interference in China Adopted by Japanese

Rum Running Conspiracy Involving $10,000,000 Uncovered—Newfoundlander Killed Over Money Matters is Belief of Bedford Officials—Chinese Government Troops Capture Prisoners and Supplies of Ammunition.

JAPANESE URGE INTERFERENCE IN CHINA.

TOKYO, Oct. 4. Five thousand persons, including members of the House of Peers and Representatives, attending a meeting in Shiba Park to-day, adopted resolutions urging the Japanese Government to interfere in the civil war in China as an ally of General Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian leader, who is carrying on hostilities against the Peking armies for the control of the central government of China. The Japanese Government must carry out a policy in China independently of the other powers, the resolution says. This is made necessary owing to Japan's special position in China. Major General Sato, retired, addressing the meeting said Japanese troops should be sent to China before the Peking troops entered Manchuria where General Chang Tso-Lin rules.

RUSSIAN ELECTIONS.

A month ago, is now being held and the discussion naturally centered on the subject of election. There has been an unprecedented demand from the general public for tickets for the London party conference opening in London next Thursday. For the first time in labour's political history it has been necessary to charge admission to the public balcony. An election lead is expected from Premier MacDonald, when he believes the inaugural address, but official circles consider that political prophets have got far astray in attaching such importance to the worker's weekly incident and the proceedings incidental to anti-Government motions proposed in the House of Commons on Wednesday. The general belief of the labour leaders is that Premier MacDonald's defeat and dissolution will come on the Liberal motion as regards the Russian treaty.

RUM RUNNER CAPTURED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. Prohibition agents claim to have uncovered a gigantic Anglo-American rum running conspiracy with $10,000,000 involved, when they towed in to harbor to-day the twin-screw British steamer Frederick E. with its crew of 28 men and two women, under armed guard, and with $500,000 liquor cargo aboard. Five special Government agents, under the leadership of William A. Walker, of Washington, general field superintendent of the dry forces, made the capture after they had, according to Mr. Walker, dickered for the purchase of 25,000 cases of whiskey from the vessel's master, paying $100,000 in currency and checks for contraband bankers in this country. Great Britain and Canada were concerned in the conspiracy, Walker said.

NEWFOUNDLANDER KILLED.

BEDFORD, Mass., Oct. 4. The theory that Frederick A. Clements, who turned from ministerial training in Newfoundland to run a garage at Burlington, was killed by a man after a quarrel over money matters, occupied the attention to-day of officials investigating his death. Belief that an arrest would be made by night was expressed by one of the officials.

SWAN IS MILES.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 5. Miss Eva Morrison, aged 19, daughter of the Chief of Police, Picton, N.S., to-day swam the twelve miles to Boston Light, the classic test of New England swimmers in seven and a half hours. The temperature of the water varied from fifty to fifty-four degrees.

COAL COMPANY'S TUG LOST.

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 5. While nosing her way through fog at the entrance of Igonish Harbor, about half past three o'clock, Saturday afternoon, the Dominion Coal Company's 212 ton gross steel tug Douglas H. Thomas, struck the shoals and tore out her bottom, and sank in twenty feet of water in about ten minutes, her crew losing their belongings in their haste to escape from the craft. It is thought the ship will be a total loss. Wrecking tugs have gone to her assistance. The Douglas Thomas is registered in Newfoundland.

PRINCE SAILS FOR VICTORIA.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 5. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales concluded his short stay in Vancouver to-day, sailing at 1 o'clock this afternoon for Victoria on the Princess Louise, which the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had placed at the disposal of the Royal party. Ten thousand throats sent up cheers as they swung away from the pier, every point of vantage being crowded with persons anxious to get a glimpse at the Prince and to assure him of their loyalty.

CHINESE GOVT. TROOPS SCORE SUCCESS.

PEKING, Oct. 5. An official communication issued to-day says the Chinese Government troops on the Shan-Haikwan front have captured Hung Chuang Tau and taken prisoners and supplies of ammunition.

AIRMAN KILLED.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 5. Capt. Burt Skel, Commander of the Twenty-Seventh Squadron of the first United States Army Pursuit Group, Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, Mich., fell to his death from an altitude variously estimated at between 500 and 1,000 feet, at Wilbur Wright Field, yesterday, as he was preparing to swing into a flying start in Pulitzer Race, the last event of the International Air Races. Forty thousand spectators saw Skel's plane break in pieces and fall from the sky. As the seemingly match like splinters rained down, Lieut. H. W. Brookley, of McCook Field, shot his fellow flier's body lay imbedded in the soft clay and so on into the race.

GASOLINE REDUCED IN MONTREAL.

Many Advantages

There are many advantages in using Pearlina, the great washing powder. Women find it easier to wash with than soap and it does not injure the hands or the fabric. Pearlina makes light work of wash-day, and for cleaning pots, pans, kettles, etc. it has no equal. A package of Pearlina in the pantry is a good investment for every woman who prides herself on the cleanliness of the home. Ask your grocer for Pearlina, he can sell you a generous package for ten cents—2

Hindu Paradise

TWO THOUSAND GUINEA PICTURE IN GEMS.

The abode of Vishnu—the Preserver of the Hindu Trinity—is considered to be the highest of all heavenly abodes, where only the very select are privileged to go after death.

An Indian artist of olden times who tried to draw a picture of this paradise used emeralds, sapphires, diamonds, pearls, and other gems in the making of it; 7,000 stones have been used in its framework.

It has been priced at 2,000 guineas, and is now exhibited at the Benares silk stall in the United Provinces Court of the Indian Pavilion at Wembley.

Roast Partridge

Like all game, roasting is the best method of cooking young partridge. Pluck, draw, and singe the birds. Wipe them inside and out with a cloth wrung out in hot water and truss. Tie a piece of fat bacon over the breasts and roast in front of a clear, bright fire or in a good oven. Baste often with dripping or butter or the flesh will be dry. A few minutes before serving remove the bacon, dredge the breasts with flour and pour over a tablespoonful of butter or margarine, and again roast or bake until the breasts are nicely browned. Young birds take from 25 to 30 minutes to roast, older ones 45 minutes.

To Serve—Entrust the birds and dish on a hot dish. Garnish with watercress. Hand brown gravy, browned breadcrumbs, bread sauce, or fruit, potato straws, and a green salad. Two partridges should suffice for four people.

Wireless for Lighthouses

Weather Warnings to Ships at Six Brighter Beacons.

The Daily Mail is informed that all lighthouses on the coast of Great Britain will be fitted with wireless transmitting sets with a skilled operator in charge whose duty it will be to warn ships at sea of impending danger.

In addition to wireless all lighthouses have had the power of their beacons increased by the introduction of a petroleum vapour burner which gives double the light supplied by paraffin oil.

Four lightships have already been fitted with wireless, and the results obtained are considered highly satisfactory. An official at Trinity House, the headquarters of the Lighthouse Commissioners, told a Daily Mail reporter recently: "It may be some months before the wireless sets are fitted, but there is no doubt that they will greatly increase the warning capabilities of the lighthouse. Reports on weather conditions and heavy seas will be sent out to mariners, who will also have the light to warn them of dangerous coasts and shoals."

Pilotless Plane

FALLS INTO SEA OUT OF CONTROL
The veil has been lifted unintentionally from secret air experiments at Whale Island, in Portsmouth Harbour, in the control by wireless of small pilotless aeroplanes. One of the machines was flying recently and apparently it passed beyond the control of the ground operator, and set off on its own account on a pilotless flight. It came down in the sea off Bognor, nearly 20 miles from its starting point. When it was seen floating in the water fears were expressed for the supposed pilot, and there was considerable surmise about his fate until it became known that the craft was pilotless. When the machine passed tempo-arily out of control the Selsey coast-guards were asked to look out for it. British experimental work on wireless control in the air has been going on since 1915. In the United States a pilotless aeroplane has been flown for nearly 100 miles by wireless. The "flying bomb," a machine carrying a load of explosives, can be controlled from a ground-station and made to fall in any area.

Hair Dyed With Soap

Goats tallow and beechwood ashes were used in the earliest forms of soap made by the ancient inhabitants of Germany. The object was to give a reddish color to the hair, according to the records of the historian, Pliny the elder. Although mixed into hard and liquid material, it was not known as a cleansing substance, but was often employed in the treatment of skin troubles. The Gauls, it is said, introduced it into the other parts of the world. Not until about the second century of the Christian era was the product used as a cleansing article. It is claimed, and an ancient factory for manufacturing the material unearthed in the ruins of Pompeii still contained a quantity of it in a good state of preservation. Northern Spain and Marseilles later became the chief centres of the industry and produced large amounts of soap of the Castile variety from olive oil and lye.

C. L. B. Cadets

The C. L. B. Band will hold its first weekly promenade dance to-night. The supporters and admirers of these talented musicians who have done so much and given so generously to the up-keep of both Band and Brigade in the past, are invited once again to give the Boys a real good help toward the New Uniform Fund. It is twelve years since the Band had new uniforms, and during that period they have helped wear them out in giving of their time and talents to many charitable objects, and organizations of the city.

This will be one of the greatest opportunities ever offered by this musical aggregation to give their patrons, both dancers and spectators, a real night's pleasure. It is unnecessary to speak of the band's good qualities as previous performances have undoubtedly left a deep impression upon the music lovers of the city. It is hoped the public will show their appreciation by attending in large numbers.

Ladies of refinement entrust their beauty to Ivory Soap with perfect confidence in its pure, mild, gently cleansing lather.—adv.t.

A Remarkable Picture "Only a Shop Girl"

VAUDEVILLE ARTISTS AT THE MAJESTIC THIS WEEK.

Few motion pictures of the present day have the record of popularity behind them that is boasted by "Only a Shop Girl," the second of the great series of Blaney successes now at the Majestic Theatre.

Written for and produced on the speaking stage more than twenty-five years ago, this sterling drama has grown in popularity as the years have passed.

Its elevation to the silver sheet by far-seeing producers speaks well for the future of the picture business, for there is nothing cheap or flimsy in either the story nor the method of its production.

Magnificent scenic effects, wonderful gowns and an all-star cast make "Only a Shop Girl" a splendid evening's entertainment.

The cast comprises Estelle Taylor, Mae Busch, Wallace Berry, James Morrison, Tully Marshall, Claire Dubrey, William Scott, Willard Louis and Baby Josephine Adair.

The management of the Majestic wish to announce that by S.S. Rosalind Thursday there will arrive two highly recommended vaudeville artists, Strad and Legato, who up to Saturday last were working at Keith's Theatre, Boston, Mass. If this team is but half as good as Keith's claim, well who cares if it "Ain't" going to rain any more? See Mae Busch, Josephine Adair and Estelle Taylor in "Only a Shop Girl."

The Price of Fish

RENDER UNTO CAESAR, ETC.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Last we forgot may I raise, once again, that time-worn question, "Who raises the price of fish?" That, you will say, is a ridiculous question, and we have time and again proven in these columns that no individual has the power or influence strong enough to force the price upward to the value of a single cent. Perhaps not? We quite agree that no individual or combination of individuals has any effective power over foreign fish markets nor have they any means of regulating the law of supply and demand and thus regulate prices thereby; but the present scene we wish you to visualize is the one in which the confidence of the "grab all merchants" have through personal control become stabilized, they feel as if they are no longer doing business under the menace of a club and are willingly paying for fish all that the present conditions of the trade will warrant them in paying.

Last year with feelings of mistrust and I may add a larger feeling of contempt we heard the Water Street fish-buyers repeat the statement that they could pay more for fishery products than they were paying. It looked incredible, but when a friend of mine who is a fish exporter explained to me that the ruinous policy of the Regulations had still a trail of deficits to be squared and moreover that all "grab all's" were still void of confidence under the heel of its author, I could, with reservations of course "follow the gleam" and patiently wait for the new rule that must prove or disprove his (my friend's) assertion.

Now, may I ask you, sir, was it incidental, accidental or the guilting of natural circumstances which, right on the change from Autocracy to Democracy checked up the value of the quintal to the very satisfying sum of $2.00. Quite true the markets were favorable, but Mr. Coaker on his arrival from those markets last year announced the coming season's price as $5.00, and I have no doubt $5.00 it would have been if wise fate had not ruled on his demise from the political arena.

What is more than that he would have been vigorously applauded as the saviour of the fishery, and the most incredulous of us would have been half inclined to applaud also; shall we then shirk the effort required to point out that the political change brought them by Mr. Monroe has so inspired confidence generally, that the greatest expert extant on cod prices has been over-bid by $1.30?

Our modesty forbids us from becoming hilarious over such gratifying circumstances, but I cannot help joining the thousands of fishermen everywhere who refuse to thank any individual for rising the price of fish but who will not do less than thank the Monroe Government for creating a situation favorable to the present quotation—and they well deserve it.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER,
Bonavista.

Produce and Provisions

(Trade Review.)

Cod Liver Oil—This is the season when wholesalers and manufacturers of medical preparations are laying in their stocks for winter sales, and undoubtedly there are some large sales in progress. Reports state that a display of firmness by two of the largest holders is recorded, but as there is still a very considerable stock to dispose of this may not be a very permanent advance. There will undoubtedly be a large increase in the consumption of cod liver oil in various forms as a consequence of the spread of information with regard to the value of vitamins.

Common Cod Oil—A somewhat better enquiry is noted, but aside from that the situation lacks any new features of interest. Very few customers are disposed to purchase their requirements to any extent, but their more business is undoubtedly being done. The rescinding of the Export Tax means an additional five dollars per ton to the fishermen, and this helps to raise the price now being offered on our local market. The short catch of codfish will undoubtedly mean a curtailed supply of common cod oil so that no person need fear an over supply of this much needed article for tanning leather. We hope to see a steady demand right through the autumn.

Cleaning Tapestry

For cleaning tapestry curtains and upholstery an improvement can be effected by the use of bran to which a little salt has been added. Fill a large bowl with the bran and put this into an oven to heat. When the bran has become warm all through add a small handful of table salt, mixing the two ingredients well together.

This mixture must be gently rubbed into the tapestry, care being taken to discard the bran when it shows signs of being dirty.

The bran will clean the material and through the addition of the salt a marked effect will be noticed on the colors.

Mary Pickford's Gorgeous Gowns

Eighteen dressmakers were kept busy for three months preparing the twelve gowns that Mary Pickford wears in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," her latest United Artists offering, now on at the Star Theatre.

The gown worn by Miss Pickford in the banquet scene was made of black and gold brocade with heavy metal lace sleeves adorned with 100 gross of seed pearls, totaling 14,400 pearls. It took five women two weeks to string the pearls that decorated the sleeves. The underskirt used with the gown was of gold metal cloth with patterns of roses made from pearls. The bottom fringe of the skirt was of gold embroidery, set with topaz from Czechoslovakia.

Each costume and gown worn in Miss Pickford's latest production is a beautiful design from the Elizabethan period.

Allan Forest supports Miss Pickford in the leading male role, that of Sir John Manners. Others in the cast are Clare Eames, Anders Randolf, Marc McDermott, Estelle Taylor, Miss Daumery, Malcolm White, Courtenay Foote, Lottie Pickford Forrest and Eric Mayne.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

THE FOOLISH FISH. A wise man went out fishing and into his hand he said: "How foolish are the hungry fish, so eager to be fed, You'd think they'd see this covered hook and see this line line, And learn when boats are overhead it isn't safe to dine; But here we are deceiving them with morsels of delight And catching them with lures you'd think no fish would bite."

Let's read the wise man's history. A stranger came to town And whispered words of flattery the wise man swallowed down. He praised his business judgment, and then whispered in his ear A proposition which he said would make ten thousand clear. The wise man hurried to the bank, twice almost three o'clock, And he paid three thousand dollars for some pretty mining stock.

Another time the wise man met a stranger with a ring. "I found it on the street," said he, "a large reward 'twill bring. I'm hurrying to the train. Give twenty-five to me. And when the ring is advertised you'll get the larger fee." The wise man swallowed hook and line. He has the ring to-day. The ten-cent store shows dozens of its like upon a tray.

Hold out to most of us the lure of easy gold to make And paint your promise fair enough, the bait we'll rush to take. Something for nothing, whisper low and sense and reason fly. We give our hard-earned coins away, and later wonder why. The moral, I am sure is plain, I'll write it if you wish: There's none of us has any right to criticize a fish.

Peter Put-to-Bed

Oh, who is Peter Put-to-Bed? At twilight every night he swings the fragrant garden gate and puts the bees to flight; the little birds, half gone to sleep, soft twitter far and near. "It's just old Peter Put-to-Bed; old Peterkin is here."

He wears a rumpled lilac gown and has a beard of gray; his slippers flop with every step in such a sleepy way, he's often known to stop and yawn and nearly shut his eyes before he stoops to fold to sleep the weary butterfly.

He strokes the perky pansy heads, and bids the froggies sink down deep beneath the lily pads and quite forget to wink. He strokes the wings of Bobolink and tucks away her head. But Peter's quills too wise to try to put the owl to bed.

Giant Zeppelin to Start

ON ITS TRANS-ATLANTIC TRIP ON OCTOBER 5. Friedrichshafen, Sept. 27.—The Z-R-3 will start on its Trans-Atlantic trip to Lakehurst, N.J., on October 5 or 6, provided that the weather over the Atlantic Ocean is favorable at that time. Dr. Hugo Eckener, Director of the Zeppelin Company, announced last week.

Lieut. Commander Garland Fulton, U.S. naval officer, who has been observing the construction of the giant dirigible for the United States Navy, has advised Washington that the airship will start for the United States within seven or eight days.

The U. S. Navy Department, it is stated, is sending three vessels to take up stations at different points on the Atlantic, for the purpose of keeping Dr. Eckener advised of weather conditions.

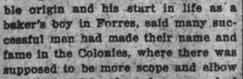

Baker Boy's Rise to Fortune

The freedom of Forbes, Elginshire, was conferred on Sir Alexander Grant, managing director of Messrs. McVitie and Price, and a native of, and a generous benefactor to, the town. The Prime Minister and Miss Isabel MacDonald were present at the ceremony.

Provost Geddie, who presided, referring to Sir Alexander Grant's humble origin and his start in life as a baker's boy in Forbes, said many successful men had made their name and fame in the Colonies, where there was supposed to be more scope and elbow room. Sir Alexander, however, had shown what could be accomplished by grit, perseverance, and industry in the old country.

Geysers in Rhodesia

While the report that there is a volcano in Rhodesia has been satisfactorily disproved, a correspondent of a Johannesburg Journal tells of other wonderful things. He says: "At Fulunkes, east of Walker's Drift, and about one and a half miles from the river, is the so-called geyser. This emerges from a large slab of volcanic rock, and shoots up a perpetual jet of hot water to the height of about 7 feet. The temperature has not been ascertained, but it is not far off boiling point. Connected with it are about ten other springs, which emerge within a circle of a very few yards."

The water is very disagreeable to the taste, and appears to contain properties of soda. The natives out of superstition regard throw stones and sticks on the geyser, which in time pile up to a considerable mound. "About ten miles southwest of Walker's Drift are the so-called "Chabi Springs," on the Shumba river. There is a considerable volume of warm water of saline composition. The salt is deposited farther down, where much is collected by natives, and the place is frequented by game on account of the deposits.

Again, on the Shangani river is the Lumbini salt marsh, which also contains a powerful hot water spring. Here, too, natives collect salt, and it is a favorite "rich" or "game" area. This area is now infested by the tsetse fly, and an active campaign was begun by the Rhodesian Government some years ago to check the further spread of the fly by destroying the game.

Pity the Eskimos!

There is much in the observations of Capt. Donald B. MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, on the culture and civilization of the Eskimos in Greenland on which to meditate. We are prone to patronize these hardy children of the ice and snows—and the fact that their culture extends back farther than our own does not touch us with humility. We are civilized, they are not.

The Eskimos have a religion that has withstood the missionaries of other religions for centuries—we are losing ours. They observe the law without the threat of a club—we are lawless despite the club. They have sense enough to respect the authority they set up—we have not. They live in peace and covet no man's land—we slaughter whales to grab another's ground and call it "patriotism."

Our civilization is a cultivation of a distaste for labor—they are not so far advanced. They have priests to drive away the evil spirits—we flirt with ours. They believe, like us, in a hereafter, but their heaven is in the earth—ours in the sky.

When they marry they require no parchment with written words to remind them of the marriage—we frame the license. They always respect the women that they take—we don't. If they take three wives they provide for all our courts proclaim that we often fail to provide for one. They are no regulations prohibiting children in the igloos. But they are healthful!

They have no slums, no fells, no madhouses, no degenerates, no wealth, no poverty, no sham, no Andersons, no Summers—but they are healthful. Pity the poor, benighted Eskimos!

The Peppermint Harvest

Within a few miles of London there has grown up an industry of which very few people know anything about. This is the growing of peppermint, the leaves and flowers of which are distilled for the oil they contain.

As soon as the fragrant plants are cut down they are carried to the distillery—nowadays it is distilled green—where the charge-men, stripped to the waist, load each still with 1 1/2 tons of "herb," as the mint is called. The huge lid is then lowered into place by means of pulleys, and the boilerman, who has been busy getting up steam during the loading process, allows the steam to pass into the stills.

As the released steam passes through the "herb" it collects oil as well as water, which on being condensed is allowed to flow down into a large cylindrical tank. This acts as a separator, for the water, being heavier than the oil, sinks to the bottom of the tank, whilst the oil floats.

Each load of "herb" takes about seven hours to distill, and the separate stands in a locked compartment of which only the charge-man has a key. This precaution is necessary for the supply of oil yielded from each ton and a half of "herb" is seldom more than $15. to 10lb. and it is estimated essential that it should be carefully checked, for every drop is valuable.

BUY GERMAN GOVERNMENT BONDS NOW

In November, 1923, German Government Bonds touched their lowest level. The European political and financial outlooks were gloomy and involved. The world's financiers and bankers realized how important to the world's trade and progress the re-habilitation of Germany was. International conferences decided upon the urgent necessity for some equitable and immediate settlement of the German reparations question. Germany was in the position of a bankrupt debtor. The Allies, more especially France, desired to receive the payments due to them. Conferences culminated in the setting up of the Dawes International Expert Commission. During this period, German Government Bonds reflected the optimistic views of the convened nations. They rose steadily in value. The adoption of the Dawes report and the acceptance by the Allies, drove these Bonds further up in value. The immediate acceptance of the Dawes conditions in the German Reichstag set the final seal upon the potential values of German Bonds, and caused them to make sensational rises.

To-day our clients who purchased German Bonds in November, 1923, are comparatively wealthy. German Government and Municipal Bonds, at their quotations to-day, still sell at a fraction only of their real value at date of maturity.

FORTUNES EARNED BY SHREWD AND THRIFTY INVESTORS

Situation in November 1923

European conditions were at their darkest in the fall of 1923. Exchange rates of European countries crashed. Foreign Government and Municipal Bonds depreciated. German Government 5% Bonds, valued at $235,500.00 during the war, were sold at $4.00. Other German Government Bonds, Polish Government, Austrian Government, and Municipal Bonds of these countries were almost unobtainable, and in fact, difficult to give away.

C. M. Cordasco & Company

offered Polish Government Bonds at $10.00 per 1,000.00 Marks Bond; City of Berlin 4% Bonds, 1914 and 1915 issue, went begging for a few dollars; City of Bremen Bonds, pre-war issue, were practically valueless; City of Hamburg 4% Bonds, could scarcely be given away.

The House of C. M. CORDASCO & COMPANY advertised throughout the length and breadth of Canada, through Newspapers, Circulars, and all other available channels urging upon Canadian investors that these bonds had great potential values, and strongly advising their purchase. Each and every one of our clients was written to separately, and informed of the respective merits of each of the bonds, and insistently advised to purchase the bonds which, to their minds, showed greatest promise of recuperation and ultimate profit.

Our advice received very mixed reception. Many Newspaper's Financial Writers informed the reading public not to touch these bonds. We received much puerile and at times hostile criticism. We received many letters from all parts of Canada informing us that all Continental portfolios were valueless. We were informed both by expert Foreign Exchange Brokers and the ordinary investing public that the German Currency was a more lucrative medium for speculation than German Bonds.

Happily, however, all our advice was not ignored. Many far-sighted and astute investors maintained an open mind and assumed that such advice coming from a reputable house, must necessarily be based upon sound and exhaustive inquiries. An example we might give here was the following:

One of our clients had already invested $1,000.00 in German Currency before he had read our advertisements. A few days later, he came to us and purchased 60,000.00 Marks German Government 5% Bonds at an average cost of $19.00 per bond, or for a total of $1,140.00. To-day his German Money is valueless. A few days ago he sold out his bond holdings, and obtained $185,000.00 for those bonds, a profit of $183,860.00 on his original money.

Worst of European Situation Over

It was becoming daily more evident to Bankers, Economists, and Financial Experts throughout the World, that the gloomy state of depression in Germany had reached a point where it was unlikely to lead to any satisfactory settlement of the Reparations Question. Germany was powerless to lift herself out of her slough of despair. Aggressive oppression by military methods of the powers occupying the most wealthy portions of Germany had been instituted. The German Economy and uninterested countries realized the importance to the world of a stable German Government. New methods had to be found. Allied Nations convened conferences. The outcome was the setting up of a commission under the American Financial Expert, General Dawes.

Astute investors began to see that there were, after all, signs portending large profits in German Bonds. German Government 5% Bonds now became $200.00 per 1,000.00 Marks bond. Other Foreign Government Bonds were appreciated in value.

European Reparations Settlement

The International Commission of Experts issued a report which was enthusiastically received by England, Italy, and the United States, France, and Belgium, and ultimately accepted by the German Government. The report called to the conference eagerly sought to place the report before their countrymen. The German Reichstag immediately adopted it. The constantly increasing favorable news from Europe gradually caused a rise in the value of all German Government and Municipal Bonds. Public opinion throughout the world considered the Report to be a fair, sound, and business-like one, and as the most likely means of ultimate settlement of the European Situations which had been in a chaotic condition since the cessation of hostilities. The adoption by the Reichstag of the Report caused sensational rises in the value of German Bonds. German Government 5% Bonds now became $2,800.00 per million. Polish Government 5% Bonds became $450.00; City of Berlin 4% Bonds, 1914, were quoted at $15,000.00; City of Stuttgart 4% pre-war issue, were quoted at $18,000.00; City of Munich, 4% pre-war issue, rose to $20,000.00; and all other Government and Municipal Bonds increased in value.

Immense Profits Made

The investor who had followed our advice, and purchased bonds when we urged him to, now became comparatively wealthy. Our clients who had ridiculed our suggestions to them, now insistently begged us to buy some of these bonds for them, even at a high figure. Our most invective critics now praised our foresight. We were content that many of our clients were satisfied and had made large profits by following our advice.

History Repeating Itself

The history of the world is repeating itself to-day. The sale of Foreign Securities has long since passed the stage of being considered a speculative one. It is, on the contrary, full of exceptional possibilities for potential profits. The opportunities represented for profits of these bonds will never again occur in a lifetime. The United States was financially bankrupt after the Civil War. Their Securities could then be bought for practically nothing, yet, in a few years time, the Americans were on their financial feet again, and are to-day considered the richest nation in the world. England, too, suffered the same financial distress when Napoleon nearly brought her to her knees. British Bonds went begging for next to nothing, but the victory at Waterloo sent them sky-high. The Rothschild family accumulated the majority of its wealth in these bonds. The experience of France in 1870 is a further example.

A nation with the skill, natural resources, and latent wealth of Germany will stabilize herself and again take her place in the foremost rank of nations in a very short time.

Germany's Potential Wealth

Few people realize that Germany has an area of 472,000 square kilometres, with a population of approximately 60,000,000 people. Before the war, Germany was one of the three most powerful nations of the world. She controlled the second largest mercantile marine. Her exports of manufactured goods was the second largest in the world. The industry and inventive ability of her skilled workmen was unsurpassed. She was almost pre-eminent in iron manufacture; minerals in large quantities were found throughout her territory. Her North Sea and Baltic Fisheries were important. Before the war, her national wealth was placed at about $1,000,000,000,000.00. A nation defeated on the fields of battle by practically the whole civilized world came out of the conflict without one square inch of her territory attacked. To-day her potential wealth is greater than ever. Minerals are produced in Prussia, Bavaria, and other places. Her present mercantile fleet has already recovered over one-third of its pre-war tonnage. Experts, especially appointed to examine Germany, believe that she is to-day far more wealthy than in 1914. General Dawes' Report says: "After a short period of recovery, we believe the financial and economic conditions of Germany will be returned to a normal state. Everything tends to a brighter and more prosperous future."

What to Purchase

INVESTORS IN SELECTED GERMAN GOVERNMENT BONDS WILL REAP AMPLE PROFITS.

This has been our slogan during the past eight months, and we now have the daily pleasure of seeing our clients reap handsome profits on their outlays made by following our advice. To-day we advise you to make immediate purchase of German Government Enforced Loan Bonds, issued in 1922. When the people of Canada fully realize and appreciate the potential profits to be gained from these bonds, YOU may be too late. There is not an illimitable quantity of them on hand. There will arise a scarcity of these bonds, which fact alone, coupled with the insistent and increasingly large demand, will cause them to come to a very high figure.

We urge upon you to make immediate purchases of German Government 4-5% Enforced Loan Bonds issued in 1922. A few words concerning this bond. It was issued in denominations of 100,000 marks in 1922. The rate of exchange at this time was approximately 400 marks to the dollar. A bond of 1,000,000 Marks denomination had, therefore, a value of $2,500.00. Keep before you the fact that this is known as the Enforced Loan. German Government loans were made during the war and since the war, precisely similar to our own Canadian Victory Loans. Would you ever again invest in Canadian National Securities if our own Government repudiated its debt, or failed to repay the principal of its borrowings? The German regards the German Government as you regard the Canadian National Loan. We therefore have the position that the German Government received from its citizens $2,500.00 in the value of Canadian money, for every million Marks bond it issued. The German people will, therefore, insist that they be repaid the money they loaned to their country, plus the interest accrued.

But keep before your mind this most important fact in connection with the 1922 Enforced Loan of the German Government. Observe the words "Enforced." The German people were compelled to subscribe to this loan precisely in a similar manner as you are compelled to pay your Income Tax. Every citizen of Germany was compelled to subscribe to this loan in accordance with his means, based on a grading of his income.

If such a loan were issued by the Canadian Government, and you were forced to purchase a holding, would you be content to receive back anything less than what you had loaned to the Government? Your answer would be "NO." The German gives the same answer. Is it not plain, therefore, that the German will be repaid at the rate, in Canadian currency, of $2,500.00? YET TO-DAY YOU CAN BUY THIS BOND FOR $85.00 per million marks bond. This loan will show you a profit of $2,415.00 on an outlay of $85.00.

We urge upon you to big to be true. Yet, consider what we have spoken of above, regarding German Government 5% Bonds. People have made these large profits on their small outlays, and you are probably regretting that you are not one of those fortunate ones. Are you going to lose this opportunity? In twelve months' time, do you intend to be amongst those who wish they had followed our advice?

Grasp this opportunity. It has been said that the German Government would repay its loans true? The following judgment of the German Supreme Court in Leipzig, which bears a close resemblance to the Supreme Court in Canada, will prove conclusively that this is not to be the case.

Some time before the War, a man named Stolz loaned to one named Reinschagen the sum of 13,000 Marks, secured by mortgage on property. The mortgage became due in 1920. Reinschagen then demanded that the mortgage be cancelled, and tendered payment of 13,000 Marks for the 13,000 borrowed. Stolz refused to accept the proffered amount, claiming that as the value of the Mark had depreciated so considerably, he must be repaid in gold value to what he had loaned. The German Supreme Court upheld his contention, stating that it would be in contradiction to the principles of fairness and justice, if the creditor was compelled to accept anything less than what he had loaned to the debtor. Reinschagen was therefore compelled to repay his loan in marks of gold value. So will the German Government be compelled to repay their bonds in marks of gold value for the sum they receive for them.

We have received a limited quantity of the 4-5% Enforced Loan Bonds of 1922. These bonds will yield interest at the rate of 4% per annum up to the year 1930. From 1930 onwards, the rate will be 5%. Before advising you to purchase this bond, we made the most exhaustive investigation concerning its merit and have come to the conclusion that the purchase of these securities at the present price of $85.00, will earn rapid and material profits in a reasonable space of time. In fact, we believe that all German Government and Municipal Debentures offer exceptionally favorable opportunities to investors, but we think that the Enforced Loan is pre-eminently the best investment.

BUY AT ONCE. The actual coupon Bonds of the German Government 4-5% Enforced Loan are now on hand, and we are able to make early shipment by registered mail upon receipt of order, provided that remittances are forwarded with order to cover immediately. All that is necessary is to fill in, and clip off, the attached order blank, forwarding same with remittance to cover by return mail. We do not undertake to be able to confirm sale to you without the remittance.

We await your immediate reply to the above advice, and extend to you the services of our expert staff. WE SHALL BE READY TO REPURCHASE THESE BONDS AT ANY TIME YOU MAY DESIRE TO SELL, AND TAKE UP YOUR PROFITS.

Reducing the Fire Hazard

We have had a dry, hot summer and the number of serious fires recorded in the city has been much lower than for many years. This is admirable. In the first place the citizens are to be congratulated upon exercising greater care. The firemen also deserve great credit for their excellent work and prompt responses to calls. The fire insurance companies no doubt likewise deserve to be complimented upon the marked improvement which must have shown in their balance sheets, but the congratulations of policy holders would be somewhat heartier if the Companies gave a more tangible indication that they appreciated the efforts that are being made to lessen the risks.

The new fire fighting appliances have proved their worth both in winter and summer, and on several occasions a conflagration which would formerly have wiped out a section of the city has been quickly subdued. The effect has been that the firemen's reputations have been enhanced, the non-insured citizen has had cause to pat himself on the back on account of his "thrift," the fire insurance companies have felt highly gratified because of the result, and persons insured have had the doubtful pleasure of paying an increased premium. It is business, we presume, but somehow it does not seem to be exactly a square deal, unless we take the view that it is more blessed to give than to receive, but then, is that a business principle?

A feature of the summer of 1924 for which the whole country has every reason to be grateful has been the almost entire absence of devastating forest fires. Our timber resources are rapidly becoming a vital factor in the industrial life of the country, and to have them practically untouched throughout the season means thousands of dollars saved, and at a later date, employment for many people. Improvements which have been made in the fire patrol system are no doubt in part responsible, but there always will remain a big element of chance, and we can only continue to take every precaution and trust that the good fortune may continue.

The fire hazard during the year has decreased, the general prosperity of the country has improved, and in that prosperity the underwriters have no doubt shared. Would it not, therefore, be in order for them to help in reducing the risks of fire by reducing the rate, and would it not at the same time be an appropriate way of expressing their gratitude for blessings received?

The Erring Sign

As a rule, when criticism is aimed at the City Council, it is on account of sins of omission, but recently they were guilty of a serious error which, since the opening of the schools in the city, has tended to lower them considerably in the estimation of the younger generation. Prominently displayed in front of the various educational institutions is this glaring violation of an elementary rule, SCHOOL DRIVE SLOW, which even the Juvenile who commits the same grammatical blunder many times during the day just by way of showing his contempt for rules of syntax was quick to observe and correct.

The purpose of the sign is admirable, and it is to be hoped will be observed by those for whose guidance it is intended. The construction is deplorable, and for the sake of our reputation as an English-speaking people it is also to be hoped that the correction will be made as soon as possible.

Bonavista Bye-Election Oct. 27th

A Gazette Extraordinary was issued Saturday evening directing that nomination of candidates for the District of Bonavista shall take place at Bonavista on Friday, October 17th. Monday the twenty-seventh day of October instant is set for Polling Day. The bye-election is necessitated by the vacancies created through the acceptance of offices of emolument by Hon. W. S. Monroe and Capt. William Winsor.

That there will be a contest is not yet definitely known, but the opinion is expressed in well informed circles that the Opposition will not hazard its prestige—such as it is—in an issue which offers such small hopes of success. Hon. W. S. Monroe and his Government lost no time in beginning the clean-up process and signs are not wanting that the old order of waste and extravagance has passed. Should a contest take place we are convinced that the people of Bonavista will confirm the decision made in the General Election and return Hon. W. S. Monroe and Capt. Winsor with increased majorities.

To-Night's Band Concert

By kind permission of the Municipal Council, the C.C.C. Band will give a concert in Bannerman Park to-night. The band has prepared an excellent programme of music for the occasion, and in view of the fact that the proceeds will be to defray the cost of the Band's new uniforms, it is safe to predict that a large attendance will be present. This will be the last open air concert for the season.

Susu in Port

S.S. Susu, Capt. Jacob Kean, arrived at Port aux Basques at 4 p.m. yesterday, bringing a few passengers besides a part cargo of fish and oil. Capt. Kean reports the fishery practically over, though at Fogo, Change Islands and Barré Islands, there is a good sign of cod, boats getting from 2 to 3 quintals daily. Practically all the schooners have returned from the Labrador.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Oct. 4th.—To Water Street, and there got a very good pair of brown shoes for wearing with my new suit, but the price out of all reason, nor would I have bought them unless I had the greatest need of them. Meeting Povey, he gives me news of the bye election in Bonavista, which he says, is gazetted for the 27th, as I did not know. I abroad, and he tells me also how Mr. D. Thistle is made King's Printer, and The Royal Gazette, which he publishes, is now called The Newfoundland Gazette, and the first number out this day. This night, to the West End Restaurant, where the Pelidian Club has a Committee Meeting and a partridge supper served. So much good discourse makes the evening pass to my great content.

Oct. 5th. (Lord's Day)—A fair, warm day, the warmest I have known in October, and gives promise of being a glorious fall. I abroad, and meeting Mr. Briston, to talk with him of the tombstone I did see some time since in Belleoram, which is a place he knows well. He tells me of some old documents which he finds and which relate to baptisms and confirmations by Bishop Field in Belleoram a high 80 years ago. Anon, to walk with Mr. Jeffery and much good discourse of public affairs. Talking this day with my wife, I did think to get her consent to go to the country for a few days, but she laughs in my face and says how she do know it is my intent to keep her from the Tennis Club Dance, but she will go with Povey, his wife being away. But Lord, how fickle is the wretch since she will go with Povey and waits not for me to ask her. Anon, to take a walk around the pond, and so home, mighty tired and dusty. The Summer Time ends this night, to my great discontent, being that from now on I must go home from the office in the darkness. And, indeed, citizens do not give enough thanks to Mr. Anderson for his Daylight Saving's Bill, Albeit one of the greatest boons that was ever given us.

Harvest for Fishermen at Port Blandford

FOUR HUNDRED WHALES DRIVEN ASHORE.
 On Tuesday evening of last week a large school of whales were seen departing in Port Blandford Sound, and early next morning a number of men from the nearby settlements set off in seven motor boats to capture some of the mammals. The boats formed a circle outside and without difficulty drove ashore the whole school numbering about 400. They were not about whales, the largest being about 85 feet long. The big fish piled upon a stretch of beach a couple of hundred feet long was a remarkable sight, and the cause of much excitement. About thirty-five men engaged in the chase are now busy taking off the fat and converting it into oil. They expect to make about $250 each. Last year a school of 75 whales drove ashore at Chapel's Arm, T.B., and the men there cleared $100 each from the harvest.

Fall Fair Assuming Definite Shape

Arrangements for the forthcoming industrial exhibition at the Prince's Rink are assuming definite shape, and the event promises to be the biggest of its kind ever held in St. John's. Merchants and manufacturers are evincing a keen interest in its possibilities as a trade stimulant, and anticipate a large influx of visitors from the outports, made possible by the reduced transportation fares. So far Messrs. Bowring Bros. and T. A. McNab & Co. lead in the range and size of their exhibits. The Riverside Woolen Mills' exhibits promises to be very interesting. They will have a working loom in one of their booths in which the process of manufacturing blankets and cloths will be shown. The Newfoundland Light and Power Co. will also have an interesting stall.

Across Continent

PLANS FOR LONG JOURNEY BY MOTOR-CARS.
 DAR-ES-SALAAM.—Already extensive dumps for petrol oil stores are being prepared at various points in Central Africa for the forthcoming interesting attempt of 6 French car-trip motor-cars to cross the continent.
 The expedition contemplates starting from Algiers in November, crossing the Sahara, thence eastward following the course of the River Niger to Lake Chad, and thereafter traversing French Equatorial Africa to Kisumu, on Lake Albert.
 Thus far the route is all French. It then depends on conditions and results whether the expedition divides—one half proceeding to Djibuti, in French Somaliland and the other crossing Tanganyika territory to the east coast, taking ship to Madagascar, and continuing.
 The journey will thus for the first time link by motor-car the most important French African possessions.

(From Boston News Bureau, Sept. 24.)
FIK RUBBER CO.

At Least $12 A Share Balance for First Preferred This Fiscal Year—Dividend Resumption Possible.
 Boston—Statement of Fisk Rubber Co. for the nine months ended July 31 showing a net profit of $1,710,000 before taxes, equivalent to $9.02 a share on the $18,951,500 first preferred stock, furnishes tangible evidence of the manner in which this concern is better than the Oct. 31 fiscal year, and the chances are that it will reflect a substantial improvement Fisk Rubber will return a balance of $12 a share for its first preferred.

Both the Fisk and Federal business came along in the style during the summer, the July quarter developing one of better than 60% of the total for the previous six months, July and August, in point of fact, were the biggest months for branch business in the history of the company. The result of the conservative production program early in the year was to pull down stocks to the lowest level in years, so that since June the company has had steadily to build up its manufacturing schedules. At present it is operating at practically capacity, or 24,000 tires a day. Next month this figure may drop down to 22,000 and hold around that level until the turn of the year, when 24,000 will be resumed. A capacity program has also been laid out for the first quarter of 1925.

 Fisk has been cutting down its loans, and, with a ratio of quick assets to liabilities of 6 to 1, is in prime financial shape. The annual statement will reveal only modest borrowings. With business running as it is and finances so sound, there is an excellent chance of the directors ordering the resumption of preferred dividends, on which accruals Nov. 1 will amount to 2 1/2% before the snow flies.

COPPER SITUATION ENCOURAGING.

N. Y.—"Europe is most optimistic regarding in copper consumption abroad as result of adoption of the Dawes-Young plan," said Joseph Cleland, director of copper sales for Guggenheim Brothers, returning from two months abroad. "Europeans know far better than we their requirements in copper in order to secure equal advantage with others in competing in world's markets and for meeting home needs.
 "German industries are well equipped for re-entering world markets. Germany will, however, need considerable copper for domestic improvement as well as for export. France England, Italy and other European countries must electrify their industries to secure lowest costs.
 "European consumers cannot understand our anxiety to sell copper in view of statements to them from this side that consumption is practically on par with production, which we know to be a fact. The effect is to discredit such statements, destroy confidence in the markets and encourage hand-to-mouth buying. Every country, except Germany, is using copper in increasing quantities. Germany will get its stride just as soon as its cash and credit position is restored, which should be determined one way or the other before long.
 "A little less eagerness to sell when buyers have temporarily provided for their requirements, a little more willingness to hold, will surely result in more stable market conditions, and secure for each seller a fair share of going business, as better than present prices. It will also place producers in position to get the full benefit of the changed market conditions generally expected in the not distant future."

Smallest Fish in the World

Lake Buhl in Luzon, the largest island in the Philippine group, is said to be the habitat of the smallest fish in the world. These fish are only half an inch long when full grown. They belong to the family of gobies, distinguished by a sort of sucking disk used for attaching the fish firmly to stones. These gobies are found in numbers in Lake Buhl and are the object of an important industry. They are caught uncouthly by means of cloth nets, and are not only used in the towns along the shores of the lake but are also shipped for considerable distances. Tabios, or Sinaparan, as they are called in the Bikol language, are eaten fried when freshly caught and are pressed into cakes and dried when the market is over-stocked. A hungry workman literally eats thousands of fish at a meal.

British Fisheries

During the month of July, 1924, 835,960 cwt. of fish, valued at £200,000, were landed on the coasts of England and Wales, according to advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its English Information Service. 1,526,841 cwt. of fish, valued at £322,953, were landed on the coast of Scotland. The total value of fish, including shell fish, landed on all British coasts, exclusive of the Irish Free State, in July, 1924, amounted to $1,351,847, comparing with a valuation of £1,487,159 for fish landed during the corresponding month of 1923.

In My Garden

VIOLETS FOR WINTER.

Frame culture of selected violets to supply blooms during the winter is extending, and is now a part of the regular routine of flower growing in large numbers of small gardens where the scope for raising winter blooms is extremely modest.
 Beautiful single violets are produced in small quantities by some people even without a frame, for they prepare a patch of sheltered soil, build it around with bricks, and place on the latter a glass covering on the lines of a frame light when the cold weather comes. Parma violets are not so hardy as the singles and their culture in this way is precarious.
 Good Foundation Soil.

But, of course, a frame is better in any case, but one that has grown cucumbers successfully is particularly useful, and the foundation soil is there already and needs only to be forked over and have an addition of mixed loam and leaf soil with a little coarse sand sufficient to bring the bed's surface nearer the light.

The latter is important, because when the plants are put into the frame they should come as near the light as possible, leaving room so that they can grow without ultimately touching the glass.

If a bed is to be made up the soil should be light and rich, containing a good proportion of old, rotted manure. It should be made quite firm and then left for a few days before the violets are transferred to it from the plot in the open where they have grown on during the summer. It goes without saying that the frame should be placed in a warm, sunny position.
 About the third week of this month double violets should be put into the frames and the single sorts two weeks later. In preparation for transplanting each plant to be lifted should be cut round with the spade, and watered (if necessary) and left for a few days. Cut sufficiently widely round the plants to ensure each one being lifted with a large ball of soil.

At the same time clean the lights and sides of the frame, and make in the soil within it large holes corresponding in size with the cut around the plants outside. These holes should be so arranged that when planted the violets stand a few inches clear of each other.

Points On Planting.

At lifting time the plants should be taken carefully with the large ball of earth surrounding them and placed in the holes made ready. The soil in the frame should be nicely moist. A good watering the day before will be necessary if it be dry. Plant so that the crowns rest at the surface level in a perfectly natural way, just as they were in the open bed, and press the soil as firm as possible around them.

A slight watering through a fine hose should follow, and then in the case of Parma violets it is well to adjust the lights, though never forgetting that with these as will all other violet plants of fresh air is desirable at all times when there is no fear of frost. It is an essential of successful violet culture.

The single violets are treated similarly, and they can be left quite uncovered until the arrival of frost. When really severe weather comes the lights should not only be shut right down, but also the precaution of laying mats over them will be necessary. Parma violets in frames are often helped through frosty weather by banking warm manure around the frames, renewing the manure now and again to maintain the added warmth thus given.

All through the winter the importance of fresh air whenever it is possible to have it must be borne in mind. Decayed leaves and any runners that appear should be snipped off and taken away, and occasionally the surface should be stirred with a small fork in order to prevent the formation of green mould.

Necessary Attention.
 Watering will not give much trouble. Little moisture should be required, but when it is given it should be early in the morning of a sunny day, and be applied overhead through a fine rose can. When the blooms come, pick them freely, and in the height of the blooming period it will help the plants if an occasional dose of weak liquid fertilizer be given them. But this must be applied direct to the soil around the roots, and the soil must be moistened just previously. Do not let fertilizer flow on to the plants themselves.

A Plague of 'Hoppers'

Tanganyika Territory, in Africa, is afflicted with a plague of hippopotami, these giant animals having multiplied so greatly of late that there are now thousands by the Rufiji River.

They leave the water at night, and even by day sometimes, ravaging the native grain plantations, tramping down and destroying far more than they eat. So serious has the pest become that the authorities are encouraging sportsmen to thin out the animals.

The hippopotamus as seen in a zoo is a heavy, slow-moving animal, but in its native haunts it is far from being unwieldy. It has been described as "agile as a minnow" when in the water, and a dangerous animal to anger.

The great creatures lie about in the river, which is full of shifting sandbanks, and herds of from fifty to a hundred are seen at almost every bend. They splash and snort and play, but directly they see the sportsman's boat they sink and leave nothing to indicate their presence but the tips of their ears and nostrils.

They walk on the bottom of the river, often with every part of the body covered, but they must come up at intervals for air. They can swim quite rapidly when totally submerged.

If a hippopotamus is annoyed or irritated it may charge a canoe and bite it in two, and sportsmen thrown into the waters of the Rufiji River would stand little chance of escape, for plenty of crocodiles are always lurking

Balloon to Pull a Train

Balloon power is to be used on a unique railroad in Bavaria to haul cars to the summit of a mountain peak.

The big bag fastened to a small passenger car, is sixty-six feet in diameter and has a lifting power of 10,560 pounds. The car will run on a single T-shaped rail which is anchored to the ground.

By allowing 3,300 pounds for passengers and crew 4,260 pounds for the balloon, ropes and car, a margin of 2,640 pounds is left in favor of the gas-bag "engine" so that it will not be stalled on the upward climb. In descending, gravity is the only force required and water ballast provides the necessary extra weight to make the down grade.

Wasting Money in Russia

Dr. A. Veach, an American oil expert, who returned to New York in the White Star liner Majestic, recently, after flying from Moscow, told a Daily Mail reporter that the Russians would only abuse the loan if it was granted to them.

Textile and oil industries had decayed under Soviet ownership. Large sums of money have been squandered in both these industries that could never be recovered.
 Any money received would only be squandered in an effort to recover the money already lost through the bad management of the country by a system that could never succeed. Good money would therefore be thrown after bad.

"NARD'S LINIMENT FOR ACHES AND PAINS.

The Care of Your Hair

At this time of year many women complain that their hair falls out and they become very uneasy as to the cause. In numbers of cases a little extra attention to the scalp will soon be repaid by a strengthening of the growth and an improvement in the general appearance of the hair.

To stimulate growth of the hair by massage it is not sufficient to rub the scalp with the tips of the fingers. The scalp must be loosened. A light scalp always results in excessive falling of the hair and often in loss of colour, because it prevents the blood in the tiny vessels beneath the skin from circulating and nourishing the roots.

How to Massage.
To massage the scalp, place the first, second and third fingers of both hands on the head on either side of the middle parting. Let the tips of the fingers rest firmly on the head, then begin to move the scalp about till it feels loose beneath the fingers. Then slip the fingers further along the head and continue the treatment.

The use of a good tonic for six weeks or two months twice a year is also of great benefit in stimulating the growth and nourishing the roots. This can be applied after the massage.

Dull-looking hair can be made to appear beautifully bright and glossy if after being brushed in the usual way it is stroked with an old silk handkerchief which has been folded up to form a pad. This treatment is particularly effective after a few drops of brillantine have been brushed into the hair. Very greasy hair should be brushed with a few drops of bay rum in place of the brillantine and then "brushed" with a folded silk handkerchief.

Shampoo Hints.
When shampooing the hair it is best to give two applications of the shampoo, the first to remove any dust and grease, and the second to soften and beautify the hair. Divide the shampoo powder or mixture into two and after using one half, rinse the hair with clean lukewarm water before applying the rest of the shampoo. To the final rinsing water add a little lemon, vinegar, camomile lotion or solution of henna, according to the colour and texture of the hair under treatment. Lemon should be used for greasy hair, vinegar for dark hair, camomile lotion for fair hair, and henna for auburn or reddish-brown hair.

Musical Aspirants

ADVICE BY A PROFESSIONAL CRITIC.

Again and again young would-be professional musicians come to ask my advice concerning their careers. Because I believe in being honest—occasionally—I tell them frankly, when I consider they have not reached the standard which justifies their attempting to earn a livelihood in the way they suggest.

The difficulty lies in making such aspirants realize that there is a very great deal of difference between performing in the drawing room at home or even in the local concert hall, and coming out as a full-fledged professional to take a stand against the greatest in the land (for this is really the only standard for which to aim).

An Unpleasant Experience.

I recently attended an audition at a concert agent's office. It was one of the most unpleasant and pathetic experiences that I have had. Some of the performers had done a certain amount of professional work already. But out of twenty there were only two whose performance gave me any degree of pleasure, and afterwards it struck me as being very pathetic that all these people had probably spent a great deal of money, to say nothing of time and mental anxiety, in getting some sort of technical equipment.

Aspirants to musical fame should seek the counsel of someone who really knows about the matter before attempting to take up music as a profession. An already established artist, a musical critic, or other persons who are continually using their critical faculty could soon tell them whether their talent is merely one for pleasant use at home or one which should be given to the world. If the criticism is adverse a very great deal of time and money will be saved, and if it is favourable they will have new heart to go on with their studies.

Completing The Training.

For the more fortunate ones I should like to emphasize the necessity of really completing the initial course of training before asking for a public audition with a view of getting engagements. So many make the mistake of trying to come out before they are ready, and consequently they saddle themselves with a label of incompetency which is very hard to lose in after years. It is quite incorrect to say that there is no room for beginners. I know for a fact that many big concert agents spend hours bearing young artists in the hopes of finding someone really worth while.

Standard Planes

MAY REDUCE AERIAL GOODS TRANSPORT CHARGES.

A four-ton type of "lorry plane"—a monoplane machine driven by two 450-horse-power Napier engines—is being designed for use as a standardized craft for the transport of goods over the 14,500 miles of air-routes which will soon be in operation throughout Europe.

The scheme under discussion by the companies forming the International Air Traffic Association provides for a standardized type of cargo plane on the main trunk routes.

It is proposed that goods for air-despatch should be packed in a uniform type of metal container, which will slide in and out of receptacles in the hulls of the standardized aéroplanes. A consignment of urgent merchandise, despatched from London in a special container, could thus be transferred from one machine to another as it crossed Europe in stages without any disturbance of the actual goods. It is stated that when a large fleet of such lorry-planes can be employed the air transport of goods will be possible at rates very little higher than those for motor-lorry transport on land.

Wedding Bells

GREENE-CAREY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Cape Broyle on Sept. 25th, by the Rev. A. J. Mahar, when Sergeant Gregory Greene (of the Royal Nfld. Regt.) led to the altar Miss Molly Carey, daughter of Mr. John Carey, H.M.C. of that place. The bride looked charming in a costume of navy blue with gray hat and squirrel fur, she was attended by Miss Jessie Freebairn and Miss Genevieve O'Brien. The groom was ably supported by Mr. George McNamara and Mr. Fred Walsh. The grooms gift to the bride, was a cheque, and to the bridesmaids, cameo rings and the grooms men, cuff links, after the ceremony a reception was held at which the usual toasts were honored, after which the happy couple left by motor for Ferry-land where the honeymoon will be spent. Among the guests present were Sir Michael and Lady Cashin, Dr. Freebairn, Mr. Jack Kennedy, H. Worsley and R. Bearns. Their many friends wish Mr. and Mrs. Greene many years of unalloyed happiness.

Photograph in Eight Colors Telephoned Here From Chicago

THREE PICTURES SENT FOR PRIMARY HUES AND PUT TOGETHER.

The transmission of colored pictures over telephone is the latest feat of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. A colored picture was placed in a sending machine in Chicago and was reproduced in New York in all its original colors, within an hour.

In the newest development of the transmission of pictures over telephone wires, which was placed on a commercial basis by the company last May, the actual colors are not sent over the wire that separated at a point of sending and reassembled at the point of receiving.

A photograph of the picture, screening out all colors except red; a second photograph, screening out all colors except yellow, and a third photograph, screening out all colors except blue was taken, and each of the three pictures was transmitted over telephone wires as black and white pictures, and, on being received in New York, restored to the color which it represented in the original picture. The result was that not only the three primary colors, but five other hues or tones, were reproduced as in the original in Chicago.

The test was the result of a suggestion by Stephen H. Horgan, a recognized expert in color photography and a pioneer in picture reproductions of all kinds. Mr. Horgan is associate editor of the Inland, Printed in Chicago.

When the telephone company announced last May that transmission of pictures over its wires, dreamed of since 1847, when the first experiments began, was to be placed on a practical basis and that photographs of the Republican National Convention at Cleveland would be transmitted over 522 miles almost instantaneously for New York newspapers, Mr. Horgan concluded that if black pictures could be sent, then colored pictures likewise could be sent. He induced the telephone company some time ago to undertake the experiment.

The sending operator in Chicago of pictures is simple. For the test Mr. Horgan selected a picture of which red, blue and yellow predominated. It happened to be a picture of Rudolph Valentino in the character of Monsieur Beaucaire. Three photographs of the colored pictures were taken. In the first the yellow portions were taken, in the second only the red and in the third only the blue.

The sending operator in Chicago then sent the three photographs over the wires separately. The process of sending was that of transmitting ordinary black and white pictures, with one difference. The difference was that the lines in one picture were at an angle of 60 degrees to the lines in the other pictures.

The pictures on their receipt in New York looked much alike, except that their lines ran in different directions and there were differences in the toning of the blacks and whites. The first picture, which represented the yellow in the original, the second which represented the red, and the third which represented the blue, were reproduced in their original colors and the three pictures were blended into one.

Naval Question Source of Worry

REPORTS FROM GENEVA ALARM BRITAIN AND MAKE FRANCE DISSATISFIED.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—British uneasiness over reports from Geneva that the British navy is to be placed to a considerable extent under the authority of the League of Nations has had a striking repercussion abroad through disappointment that it is not the case.

Les Journal Des Debate says plainly that if the British people are being told that under the new pact their navy will not be absolutely pledged to carry out the League's prescriptions they are being deceived and, on the other hand, if conditions stipulated by British opinion with reference to the use of the British fleet are interpreted as authoritative then it is the other nations who are being deceived. The paper concludes with an outspoken demand for absolute frankness in regard to the situation.

The French press is particularly disappointed at the attitude displayed by the British press and the public disinclination to allow the British fleet to become the world's policeman. British diplomats explaining to Geneva the difficulties of such a scheme are pointing out their unbelief that the minority of the League when voting against an aggressor would be willing to support the majority action, with consequent international groupings within the League and all the dangers such divergence of opinion would bring.

The suggestion, made at the British Foreign office, of the adoption of a percentage voting plan with the acceptance of the idea that all forces would be called upon to act against the aggressor both in blockading and in the actual application of force, such forces to be made up in part at least of units from every signatory power so that all would be forced to accept the onus of action, brought the comment that the idea might tend to solve many problems connected with the use of the fleet or army.

$25,000 Gem as a Paperweight

The world's largest sapphire, weighing ten ounces, and valued at more than $25,000 is being exhibited at Wembley Exhibition.

It is intricately carved in the form of an ear-ornament, and must originally have been about twice its present size. It was discovered in the home of a Mohammedan official in Hyderabad State, where it was used as a paperweight, by Mr. Wakefield, Director-General of Revenue, who was told that the children of the family had played with it as they would with an ordinary stone.

It was eventually sent to England and arrived at Wembley a short time ago, and is shown in the Bombay Court of the Indian Pavilion. The stone has a long and romantic history. It was formerly an ornament of a Buddha belonging to the Ballala kings of South India in the twelfth century. It was then handed down from one conqueror to another until it came into the hands of Tipu Sahib, who gave it as a present to the ancestors of the official in whose house it was found.

Had Goods on Him

But Didn't Know It—Escaping Pick-pocket Slips Watch in Police Sergeant's Pocket and Later is Seized—Judge More Careful Now.

If a man is arrested on a charge of having robbed a citizen and the stolen property is found in his possession, the evidence is usually considered incontrovertible by the courts. If the accused is poor and without influential friends to vouch for him the chances are that he will be sent to prison. In nearly every case of this character the accused is guilty, occasionally he may be innocent. A police magistrate talking to members of a church, took the opportunity to warn them against appearances, and pointed out the wisdom of always giving an accused person the benefit of any doubt whether it appears reasonable or not. Then he told this story:

"I was on my way home one evening during the rush hours. The subway was jammed and the crowds kept constantly moving through efforts of passengers to get in and out. I was standing in the aisle of the centre car, and the movement of the crowd in this car appeared to be unusual. There seemed to be a restless spirit there. I noticed several young men who kept stirring, pushing here and there, and peering sometimes out of the windows, and sometimes asking a hurried question, as if they were strangers and doubtful of their location.

"As the train was drawing toward a station a man standing by my side suddenly cried out that he had lost his watch. Then followed a hurried search of his clothing, and then he seized me by the arm and cried out, 'Give me my watch; you have taken my watch!' I assured him that he was mistaken, but he kept up the cry and would not let me go. I was extremely embarrassed and told him that if he would get off the train with me I would go with him wherever he wished and would submit to any indignity to convince him that I did not have his watch, and would, moreover, prove to him that I was a person of character and standing in the community.

"The three young men who had been so restless had crowded toward the centre door of the car when the cry was raised that a watch had been stolen, and in rushing to get out one of them had pushed roughly against me. My suspicions were aroused, but I kept quiet, through fear of making a mistake like the one my accuser had made. At the next station the man who held me pushed me toward the door and we got off together, and as soon as we reached the street he set up a cry for the police. A policeman came, recognized me, declined to place me under arrest, and sought to quieten the excitable man and who would not listen to anything until after my clothing had been examined.

"At my suggestion we walked to the police station, where the Lieutenant listened smilingly to the charge against me. 'I want you to search him,' said the man, who still gripped me by the arm, but the Lieutenant flatly refused. He told the man that I was a police magistrate; that beyond all question I did not have any of his property, and that the charge he had made against me was ridiculous. He gave my accuser my name and address and sent

Words in English Language

The late Prof. Max Muller, of England, one of the greatest authorities of his time on words, put the number of words in the English language at 100,000. He compared the growth and development of our language with the putting of grain in a sieve. Most of the chaff has been winnowed off and with it have gone many good grains. If we include all the words which have fixed places in the dialects of the country, and include also many which we know were spoken in earlier times, we shall have to put the total at 400,000 for the English language. The number is constantly growing. Words have to be formed for new industries, for discoveries and inventions, and they become part of the language. The number of words in the French language is somewhat smaller than the number of English words.

him away entirely dissatisfied and still believing that I should have been searched.

"I was dreadfully hurt at the charge made against me, and the fact that I could see no reason for feeling sore at the man who had made it did not tend to relieve my feelings. I told my family about it, which aroused much indignation and turned loose a lot of suggestions that were of no value in easing my lacrated mind. I had a dinner engagement that night that I was forced to attend, but I had no heart for it and dressed with languid motions. When I slipped on my overcoat something jingled and I thrust my hand in one of the outside pockets and pulled out a watch and chain.

"The explanation flashed upon my mind. One of the three young men had stolen the watch, and when the cry of thief was raised had slipped it into my pocket and had then hurried out of the train. I was in some thing of a dilemma, but a moment's thought showed me that there was only one thing for me to do and I did it. Half an hour later I was again standing before the police lieutenant. I laid the watch and chain upon his desk and said: 'Well, Lieutenant, I had that fellow's watch all the time. I didn't have to say a word of explanation. The lieutenant understood and laughed and told me to forget all about it. He said:

"I'll send the property back to the man who lost it, and let him think that it was recovered through the sagacity of the police. He'll get his property back, the police will get some credit and you will not be hurt. Better say nothing about it."

"So when a person is brought before me on a charge of theft I am very careful to go rather deeper into the matter than some of the members of the police force and some others, perhaps, consider necessary."

If they charged you a dollar a cake the makers could not give you a better soap than Ivory.—adv.,lf

Pocahontas the Tomboy

One of the most picturesque as well as the most interesting stories in all American history is that of Captain John Smith and Pocahontas. Every one loves the story, but scarcely anyone knows that Mataoka was the real name of the Indian maiden who saved the gallant captain's life: Pocahontas, which means tomboy, was just her nickname.

Mataoka loved to play like the little Indian boys of her tribe. She shot her arrows and turned handsprings just as well as the boys of her age. One day, when she was about ten years old, she was playing as usual near the door of her father's hut. She was turning handsprings so fast she did not see Rabunta, a runner. He came dashing in from the forest with a message for Mataoka's father, Powhatan, who was the tribal chief. The runner turned the corner just as the little daughter of the chief made one of her most vigorous handsprings. Her flying feet struck the runner in the chest and knocked him down.

All the Indians who saw the episode set up a roar of laughter, for a rough joke was particularly pleasing to them. The chieftain, however, was very much annoyed by the boyish prattle of little Mataoka. He called his daughter to him and said: "Mataoka, this is not maiden's play. Will you ever cease to be a Pocahontas?"

The other Indian children who were listening to the reprimand caught up the name, and it clung to little Mataoka ever afterwards.

Captain John Smith and his fellow Virginia settlers called the girl by the same name as did her playmates, and later, after she married an Englishman, the spelling was changed a little. However, the name has come down in history almost as it was spoken by the famous old chief in the years before 1607.

A Tramps Story

Says he came from Vancouver and is trying to reach his home in Newfoundland.—Nothing to eat for two days.

As police officer Clarence Johnson was patrolling his beat on Water Street last Saturday he met a man of about 35 years, who gave his name as Butler. He was very poorly dressed, and on his back carried bedding and some cooking utensils. When accosted, the man stated that he had tramped from Vancouver, but refused to give any other information. He also became eaucy, so the officer took him to the station. Finally he said that he had had nothing to eat for two days, and it was because he was hungry and thought every man was against him that he was impudent.

The officer got something for the man to eat, after which the tramp further said that he had gone on a vessel from his home in Newfoundland to Vancouver and had become stranded there. On the way from that place he passed through many cities, but Halifax was the first place he was held up, and that within a few hours after his arrival. He was taken to the immigration officials, but they did not believe his story, and he was taken back to the station, where he was held until yesterday, when he was let go.

Before leaving, the arresting officer gave him some money to buy a couple of meals, and the man said he would try to work his way back to Newfoundland.—Halifax Recorder, Oct. 5.

Locusts Puzzle

WHY DO THEY USUALLY FLY EAST AND SOUTH-EAST?

Some light is thrown on the habits of locusts in the annual report on the Bechuanaland (South Africa) Protectorate for 1923-24, issued recently. The campaign against the pests began in 1922 and has been vigorously continued since. The territory was divided into locust districts, each under the supervision of a district locust officer, and with both European and natives as local locust officers. Almost the whole of the Southern Protectorate was infested.

Camels were purchased by the Department of Agriculture to make possible the organization of the natives living in the Kalahari Desert (350,000 square miles in extent and known as "the tormenting desert") and also with the object of patrolling and locating the locust hatching, so that farmers could be warned of the approach of flying locusts to enable them to reap any crops which might be ripe and were threatened by the pests.

Locusts, says the report, hatched out in absolutely uninhabited parts of the Kalahari Desert more than a hundred miles from any water. Districts which had been free from locusts for some months were heavily invaded by the pests from those uninhabited regions. More than 3,000 swarms were destroyed in the Kalahari by four camel officers with the help of natives.

The disclosure is made in the report that "locusts as a rule fly east and southeast, and, eventually, in the laying stage, fly back west and northwest."

Where Shaving is Very Painful

In savage lands shaving is not the plain operation it is in civilized countries. Excruciatingly painful methods still obtain in some parts of the world.

For instance, the aborigines of Australia shave with pieces of glass or shell. Even more terrifying are the methods employed by some of the South Sea Islanders.

In some of the islands, a "treacle" substance is pasted over the face, then allowed to dry, after which it is jerked off, piece by piece, bringing the hairs with it. One marvels that the natives do not all affect beards.

There is nothing about the New Guinea "shave" to recommend it, and certainly even the most fastidious European dandy would cultivate a beard were no other means of shaving available. A "barber" performs the operation, and the steticism displayed by his clients is positively amazing for the "shave" takes some hours to complete.

A few hairs are selected at a time to which is securely knotted a length of a fibrous material. The hairs are then pulled out literally by the roots, this operation being continually repeated until at last the "shave" is completed.

New Light on Remote Period

Archaeologists working in Egypt 30 miles south of Assiout have brought to light an ivory female figure 5 ft. 6 in. in height, which is regarded as the most important find of the year. It belongs to a hitherto unknown period and its surroundings tell of a civilization differing in every detail from the well-known pre-historic culture, and almost certainly earlier. The probable dates of this civilization are about 10,000-9000 B.C. The ivory figure illustrating it shows no trace of neopold type. The body is slender; the head wide above with pointed chin, the nose large, the lips thin.

The Many Perils of the Herring

By A NATURALIST in London Daily Mail.

Recently Moray Firth fishermen found hundreds of young codfish of quite abnormal shape. When examined more closely it was found that their strange appearance was caused by masses of newly laid herring spawn, which had been sucked from the rocks. This is the first of long chapters of accidents which cause one to wonder how herrings survive to a stage fit to serve as an hipper or blenters. Every roving fish which has the luck to find a bed of herring spawn greedily devours it. But in spite of marauders, many of the herring eggs survive the incubation period. These produce teeming masses of tiny thread-like fishes. As these grow they offer ready prey to all the fish and fowl of the sea. Recently it has been found that even the little jelly fishes known as "sea gooseberries" and other low forms of life take toll of the feeble herring fry.

Mackerel, pollock, whiting, and saithe (or coalfish) show a never-ending interest in young herrings. Given a gentle south-west wind in early autumn you are sure to find at many points on the rocky coast from Flamborough Head northwards areas where the "billist" or young codfish are chasing tiny herrings right into the beach. At times acres and acres of splashing fish can be viewed; big splashes for the codfish, hundreds of little splashes for the escaping herrings.

Man's demand at this early stage is not large. But whitebait consists chiefly of young herrings. Were those who visit London and partake of this crisp, dainty dish to eat as many full-grown herrings during the rest of the year our fishermen would have no need to deplore their lost markets of Russia and Central Europe. There is no reason to believe that the herring stock is materially affected by this removal of millions of herrings, as whitebait, from the sea reach off Southern Pier.

What goes on in the deep sea one can only guess. From a cod a dozen herrings in various stages of digestion can commonly be taken. Huge herring whales love to swim round the fishing boats as the nets are being hauled. In the fish which fall and sink they find an easy meal. But they have to fend for themselves when the boats are in harbour; and it must take more than a few dozen herrings to maintain a mammal nearly the size of a steam grifter.

Porpoises, too, seek meals of herrings, and in their eagerness sometimes get wrapped up in the nets. Packs of dogfish hunt the herring shoals, and ill-luck it is to the fishermen whose nets they come near. For then they find herrings ready caught and, feasting from the meshes, tear the delicate cotton to shreds.

The birds and beasts which chase herrings often guide the fishermen to where shoals are thickest. Gannets making their clean dives from great heights are a good sign. So deep can these birds reach that at times they meet their fat meshes in the walls of netting fathoms down.

Don'ts for Mothers

Don't slam a door after telling a child always to close it gently, and don't rebuke a youngster for shouting with your own voice raised to sky-scraping heights.

Don't allow a child to be deliberately cruel to any living thing. Tell the boys that it is neither daring nor manly to kick a dog or stone a kitten, but just low-down cowardice.

Louis Does as Bandit Tells Him

BUT WITH A DIFFERENCE TO BANDIT.

Louis Rice, No. 123 Prospect St., who is fourteen, a feet tall and a close student of the ring, careers of Johnny Dundee and other diminutive boxers of Italian extraction, was standing guard on the shoe repairing and hat cleaning establishment at No. 125 Sands Street, Brooklyn, while the proprietor and employees were out at lunch, when a gangly, six-foot south street fish, one that looked like a walrus, and said:

"P-a-put up your h-i-hands."
Rice complied. He put up his left and grabbed the wrist of the hand holding the pistol, which dropped to the floor and was revealed as a toy fashioned of glass. He put up his right, leaped into the air and socked the intruder on the jaw. Then he kicked the intruder on the shins, socked him on the belt buckle and tried to trip him.

The tall youth was the stronger and just as he was about to land a blow of Navy Yard ripperation, which Louis had learned at the stranger's, and the noise of the fight, had been heard by Isaac Soloway, who runs a jewelry store next door. Mr. Soloway instinctively picked up a loaded revolver and ran to the sidewalk in time to see the tall youth start a sprint up Sands Street, with Louis in pursuit.

Soloway fired three times but didn't hit anything. The shots were heard by patrolman Hughes of the Poplar Street Station, who got into the chase and speedily captured the fugitive. At the station house the would-be bandit said he was George Weatherly, nineteen, of St. Louis. He reached New York Sunday night, he said, with two silver dollars in his pocket. Only 20 cents remained this morning and he invested that in a glass pistol and started out to be a hold-up man.

"It's lucky for you," Lieut. Reuben Commers told Weatherly, "that it was Mr. Soloway who shot at you and not Patrolman Hughes, because the gentleman has three medals for excellence in marksmanship and he would certainly have winged you."
Weatherly was charged with attempted robbery and looked up.

Backwoodsman's Tobacco

Many old smokers in civilized parts imagine they have nothing to learn about tobacco. Many experienced Australian bushmen could teach them otherwise. The town smoker knows tobaccos by the packet. The backwoodsman knows it by the leaf.

Wild tobacco, without duty and without price, is in reality a shrub. The leaves of this plant resemble those of tobacco plants, but are smaller. The leaf gives off a nicotine oil, is pleasant to the taste, and burns well.

Another perfect substitute for nicotine lies in a wild weed closely resembling English watercress. It abounds in most shallow water and marshland. Gathered by the handful and dried in the sun for a couple of days, it smokes with all the flavour of best Cavendish.

Some varieties of sunflower leaves and certain wild lettuce may also be pressed into service as a plausible tobacco substitute, while coltsfoot leaves make a good smoking weed either alone or when mixed with tobacco.

It must not be presumed that because backwoodsman have several smoking "weeds" close at hand they merely gather and dry the leaves before filling their pouches. Bushmen, as a rule, show great discrimination in their smoking and are adept at "cutting."

After the leaf is gathered it is allowed to wilt but not dry. In the fermentation process stamp racks are thrown over the leaves in a warm and shady place for about a week. Then follows the drying in some airy place until the leaf shows a leathery texture.

The midribs and stalks are now removed and the leaf is arranged in layers and sprinkled with heated saltpeper. The whole is then packed in a box and pressed until the curing is complete. Very little extra trouble is involved in the making of "slur" tobacco.

Oyster Feast
WOMAN MAYOR TO PRESIDE.
For the first time in its 900 years' history Colchester Oyster Feast, which is held for October 24, will be presided over by a woman—Mrs. C. B. Alderton, mayor of that borough. The Duke of York will be among the guests.

There is a legend that Queen Elizabeth was the first woman Mayor of Colchester, but there is no proof that she ever attended an oyster feast in that capacity.

Last year, speaking with reference to this function of her forthcoming mayoralty, Mrs. Alderton said she would like to see women guests present but that it was her intention to follow precedent and not make any startling innovation. Mrs. Alderton's advice to women oyster-feasters was to take them sweet with a little lemon juice added, without pepper or vinegar. Half a dozen were enough for the average woman.

A Hint About Silk
When satin and silk have been subjected to a good deal of hard wear they shine with a super-sheen. In the same way as worn serge shines.

To remedy this, sponge the material with a weak solution of borax and water, always rubbing with a gentle movement the length of the material and not across it. When the shine has disappeared, press the material on the wrong side with a warm iron. Be sure the iron is only warm—not hot—or the material will crinkle and be ruined.

Stitches That Save Linen
In mending table linens, threads drawn from old linen are best to use. If the breaks are too small for a patch, strengthen the place with a darning stitch, running the threads surrounding the break to a distance sufficient to protect the weak spot as well as possible.

If a patch is inevitable, lay the piece to be inserted under the hole, making sure that the threads run the same way, and baste it neatly in position. Then turn in the lips of the tear neatly and sew down the edges with as fine and careful stitches as possible. Next, turn the cloth on the other side and turn the patch neatly, then ravel the edge a little before turning in under. The raveling makes the turn-under softer. Now, sew down the patch with a little stitch on the right side and a longer one underneath. This is the best that can be done, and after laundering, it does not look badly for common wear.

Ordinarily a dolly or dish may be used to cover the spot. When the cloth gives out on the edge of the table, it is cheaper to make a centerpiece of the top and napkins of the rest, for it is impossible to mend a long, thin place so that it will not show.

Big New Film Opens To-Night

"THE GREAT WHITE WAY" IN ALL ITS GLITTER TO BE SHOWN AT NICKEL TO-NIGHT.

"The Great White Way," the Cosmopolitan Corporation's big motion picture which graphically brings modern New York and Broadway to the screen, will have its premiere to-night at the Nickel Theatre.

Among the celebrities appearing are Jack Kearns, Tex Rickard, Irvin S. Cobb, Kild Broad, Pete Hartley, Johnny Gallagher, "Bugs" Baer, H. C. Witwer, Tammany Young, Damon Runyon, Billy De Beck, Johnny Dundee, Benny Leonard, Billy Gibson, Young Stribling, Earl Sande, Joe Humphreys, the leading sports writers of all the metropolitan dailies and many notables of the stage and screen.

Many of these celebrities play actual parts in the film itself, which is woven around the turf, the prize ring, the theatre and Broadway. One of the big features is a realistic prize fight, in which Pete Hartley, well known professional lightweight, battles Oscar Shaw, leading man of the picture. Another thrilling feature of "The Great White Way" is a big race track scene, filmed at Belmont Park on Futurity Day. Earl Sande is one of the cast in this particular sequence.

In addition to these highlights, the new picture brings to the screen for the first time the entire chorus of the famous Ziegfeld Follies. Ned Wayburn was engaged to produce a special and miniature musical comedy for the new photoplay.

The regular professional cast of "The Great White Way" includes Anita Stewart, Oscar Shaw, T. Roy Barnes, Tom Lewis, Dore Davidson, Olin Howland, Hal Ford, Stanley Forde, Harry Watson, Billy Gould and Frank Wonderley.

Obituary

MRS. F. C. EARLE (Change Islands).

Many in St. John's and elsewhere in Newfoundland will have learned with sorrow of the passing of Louisa Julia Earle, but it is at Change Islands that the loss is felt the keenest. Born at Rochester, New York, in 1856, the eldest child of Joshua and Mary Walden, she became the wife of Frederick Chas. Earle, at Toronto, Canada, forty-two years ago, and came to Newfoundland, making a home at Change Islands. From a great city to a lonely outpost in Newfoundland was a greater change in those days than it is to-day, but here Mrs. Earle has lived the whole of her married life.

She was ailing all through the summer, and on the first of September she was stricken with paralysis, followed by a second stroke ten days later, when she lost consciousness and shortly after passed quietly within the Veil. And now the little town is mourning the loss of her who, by the life she led, endeared herself to everyone. Of a quiet and retiring disposition, she was always kind and gentle, unfailingly generous and glad of an opportunity to be of service to others. To the poor and those in trouble, truly, she was a friend indeed. Her religion expressed itself in deeds rather than in words, and many of the senior Church of England clergy can tell of the willing hospitality they always found when, with a large family to care for, she ministered to the wants of missionary deputations as though she had no other work to do.

All that was mortal of this beloved woman was committed to earth, on Saturday, Sept. 13th, the funeral being attended by the Sisters of St. Margaret's C.E.W.A. Rev. R. F. Mercer, Rector of Fogo, conducted the service in the church and at the graveside.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and devoted mother, are her husband, three sons: Messrs. Fred and William, at Change Islands, and Mr. Arthur at Fogo, and three daughters: Mrs. J. S. Gilliver, and Mrs. F. C. Kimmerly, of New York, and Mrs. (Rev.) Heber Gosse, at Change Islands; also one sister, Mrs. Halden Meek, of Toronto, Canada. To all of these we extend our deepest sympathy.—Requiescat in pace.

Queer Occupation

Worked as a Match-Striker for Thirty-Six Years.

For 36 years it was mentioned at an inquest at London Hospital, Thomas Tutill had earned his living by striking matches at Bryant and May's factory at Bow to test their quality. He died from blood-poisoning after fracturing his thigh while at work. This queer occupation, it was explained, was created by the firm to employ Tutill after he had suffered from infantile paralysis and needed an easy task. The match-striking was done by hand, and the man spent his whole time testing safety and ordinary matches, work which otherwise would have been done by foremen and other workmen.

Gentleman Burglar Captured in New York

Immaculately dressed and bearing himself with the carriage of a man of influence Patrick H. Dealey, one of the most dangerous criminals with whom the police of New York City have had to deal in many years, was placed in the line-up in the detective bureau at police headquarters, and more than two hundred detectives for forty-five minutes made a critical observation of his characteristics. Dealey had been arrested by detectives while he was walking through West 124th Street, near Broadway.

He had been sought by the police of the city for more than two years as a result of his spectacular escape from Sing Sing, where he was serving a twenty year term for robbery. A professional theatrical performance was going on in the auditorium of the prison, and Dealey managed to don the garments of one of the actresses and make his way through the main entrance of the prison.

Dealey had been known to the police of New York as a "two-gun man." They knew his boast that he would kill to avoid arrest was no idle one. He was suspected of having participated in many daring robberies in the city and in addition to the one on which he had been convicted, and when word of his escape from prison reached the authorities, special instructions were issued to every detective and policeman in the city who knew him to effect his capture at all hazards.

Dealey apparently did not make his way to the U.S. Metropolis until he felt that the police hunt for him had died down, and then he appeared in one of the haunts of confederates in the Cathedral Park section. It was about this time that the police began to recognize in a description of one of a group of robbers who had hold-ups a resemblance to Dealey. The hunt for the fugitive was renewed with vigor and not the slightest hint as to the criminal's whereabouts could be obtained. The police, however, did obtain information from the underworld which convinced them that Dealey was one of a band of robbers who had devoted their efforts to "hi-jacking" or holding up bootleggers.

In Many Hold-Ups.
 Reports of jewellery store and payroll hold-ups in which Dealey was suspected of having been one of the participants continued to reach the police; but it was not until the latter part of last week that they obtained a real clue, which resulted in Dealey's capture as he was on his way to keep an appointment with several other known gunmen. When the detectives held him up with guns trained at his head, Dealey, who is but 28 years old, made a quick move to his right hip pocket. A blow from the pistol of one of the detectives stilled the movement of his arm, and the next second Detective-Sergeant Mahoney pulled a loaded 38-calibre pistol, with a long barrel, from his pocket. Then Detective-Sergeant Sullivan noticed something bulging at the waistline of Dealey's striped silk shirt. It was another loaded pistol. Then he submitted to arrest without further trouble, remarking: "You fellows are lucky I did not get the drop on you or there'd be a few dead cops around here."

How to Keep a Plant Moist

WHEN YOU ARE AWAY.

A plant can be kept sufficiently moist for a considerable time in this way: Fill a large bowl with water and place the plant close to it. Into the water put one end of a strip of material or cotton wool, placing the other end on the earth round the plant. This strip will conduct moisture from the bowl to the pot. The amount of moisture can be regulated by the width of the material used.

In the Realms of Sport

BOWLING SEASON OPENS TONIGHT.

The opening games of the Commercial Bowling League takes place in the Seaman's Institute to-night, and from now until the end of the year, the Alley will be the chief centre of attraction. Since the formation of the League great interest has been taken by the players and spectators alike, and with the experience gained during the past few years, the forthcoming games promise to be hard fought and keenly contested. Great rivalry prevails amongst the various firms, and the series is looked upon to be very successful. Two games will be played each night during the week, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday. The participating teams for to-night will be as follows:—
7.30—Nall Company vs. Hickman's.
8.00—Winter's vs. Job Brothers.

JUNIOR FOOTBALL LEAGUE WINDS UP SEASON'S BUSINESS.

On Saturday night last, the Junior Football League met and finalized their season's business. The reports showed that the season was a very successful one as far as the playing of the game was concerned, but there was a noticeable falling off in the gate receipts over the previous year. The matter of providing medals for the champions was discussed and in view of the League's financial standing after the year, it was thought this would be difficult. However, the Executive will endeavor to secure quotations on medals, which will be submitted at a later meeting. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Senior League officials, and all those who acted as referees, or in any way helped the Junior League during the past season.

The first round was drawn as follows:—

Monday, Oct. 13.—St. Bon's vs. Felldians.

Wednesday, Oct. 15.—Collegians vs. St. Bon's.

Saturday, Oct. 18.—Felldians vs. Collegians.

Nothing in Particular

By TRINCULO

SHOOTING.

Smith was unusually loquacious. "Until," he said, "you have had a day's shooting, you will never have tasted the joys of life to the full."

"Indeed," I said.

He continued, "Yes, my boy, shooting is the only sport worth while. To tramp the barrens on a fine October day, to watch a good dog picking up the scent, and to crown it all, a fine bag of birds. It's the only life, old man, the only life."

I listened intently. It is not often Smith gets wound up like that. When he does, he's worth listening to.

"Sounds good," I said. "I should like to try it. What about Wednesday? I shall be at a loose end."

"Right," he said. "Wednesday will suit me. Can you get a gun?"

"On yes," I replied. "I shall manage to find one and I'll leave the dog to you."

So it was settled. Wednesday came and we were up at daylight, and within a couple of hours we had reached the Witless Bay line, left the car and were out on the barrens.

Smith was the sort of sportsman you read about but seldom see. His breeches were new, and looked as if they had been blown up with a motor pump, he had on a wonderful sports coat of weird hues, a cap with fancy-ting checks, and carried a gun that looked as if it had just come out of a shop. On his back were haversacks galore, he wore a cartridge belt that a Mexican bandit would have shot his grandmother for, and his equipment was completed with a great water bottle and a sheath knife.

For the first time my suspicions announced wish of the meeting that both Ron O'Toole and Wm. Linegar be sent. In view of their past performances, it was felt that they would be able to hold their own against the 'Canucks' and with bright possibilities of sharing in the honors of the day. With the race only three weeks away, it was decided to send the local athletes by the Rosalind on Saturday next. This will give the runners sufficient time in Halifax to become acclimated and get a sufficient amount of training and make themselves familiar with the 10 mile course.

The selection of Mr. Jack Bell as Manager and Trainer, is a man well fitted for the job. Mr. Bell has a wide experience in the long distance running game, and we wish him every success with his charges.

A sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. J. M. Tobin, J. P. Créty and H. J. Wyatt, will look after the transportation arrangements.

Before the runners leave here they will get in as much practice as possible.

After a few minor matters were disposed of, the meeting adjourned.

WORLD'S BASEBALL RESULTS.

New York Giants Win Opening Game—Johnson Weakens in 10th.

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Oct. 4.—The New York Giants defeated Washington Senators and Walter Johnson today in a twelve inning battle that opened the 1924 world series. The Giants won, 4 to 3, in a desperately fought contest, but only after the Senators had tied the score in the ninth and staged a spectacular rally in the final inning. The Giants clinched the game in the 12th when Johnson weakened and two runs were scored on three hits, two bases on balls and a sacrifice fly, but the Senators came back in their last turn at the bat, scoring one run on an error and successive hits by Harris and Rice, who, however, was thrown out trying to stretch his hit into a double, and with Harris on third Goslin ended the game by being thrown out at first.

SECOND GAME.
Washington Defeats Giants In A Flashing Finish By Old Run.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Batting with the indomitable courage that carried them to their first American League pennant, Washington Senators to-day turned the tables on the New York Giants, and won the second game of the 1924 world series and put themselves back in the thick of one of the most exciting struggles ever staged for baseball's greatest honor. In a flashing finish that was equally as spectacular as the climax to yesterday's opening tussle, and twice as thrilling, to another capacity home crowd of 25,000, Roger Peckinham, veteran Washington shortstop, lifted himself to heroic heights by driving across the winning run in the ninth inning after the Giants had knocked Zachary, southpaw star, from the mound and tied the score with 2 tallies in their part of the final inning. The final score was 4 to 3, the same margin by which the first game was decided, and to-night two of the mightiest clubs that ever met for the championship shifted their battleground to New York, where the third game will be played to-morrow.

were aroused, but I said nothing. Time would show.

Smith loosed the dog, which led us up hill and down dale at a speed which at my time of life, was anything but comfortable.

How Smith managed to keep up with him, loaded down as he was, mystified me completely.

Suddenly, the dog halted near a likely looking bush and began to sniff around.

Smith dropping his voice to a stage whisper, informed me that the brute had picked up a scent.

"Watch me," he said, "you had better not fire the first time until I have shown you how it's done."

As he spoke there came a flutter from the bush, a small covey of partridge flew over our heads, there were two shots, and an excited cry. Almost simultaneously with the shots my cap was lifted from my head.

As soon as I had recovered from the shock, I turned on Smith and cursed him violently. I had good reason for there were two holes through the peak of my cap.

Smith replied with groans. He sat on the ground, his gun by his side, and tenderly caressed his right shoulder.

Suddenly a lone partridge started from a bush. I brought my gun quickly to my shoulder, took sight and fired. It was a hard shot but successful. I had obtained first blood.

I turned to Smith who was gazing at me, and mumbling something about beginner's luck.

"I shall talk to you later, my man," I said. "Now pick yourself up and come along."

He followed silently, still nursing his shoulder.

The birds were not very plentiful but I managed to bring down three before I felt it was time to have something to eat.

There was no water near so I asked ed Smith for a drink from his flask. He passed it to me. It felt pretty light, and there was a reason for it. The silly ass had forgotten to fill it. I said nothing. It wasn't any use. The day passed, and I had fair luck, bringing down about ten birds. As for Smith, he complained that his new fangled gun had damaged his shoulder so much that he could not use it. He told me patronizingly, that I had done very well for a novice but I had missed several that an old hand like himself could not have failed to bring down.

This was too much. "Look here," I said. "Have you ever handled a gun before?" I read the answer in his eyes before he could manufacture a good lie. Then I opened out on him, and before I was through, he was squirming like a worm.
