Brogden's brow darkened.
Chut, chut. What need of all this false retence. By the powers it is no pre-mos. To is well smough known that you stide with the old people. I did not see hem upon that night. Again that bitter laugh.

True, it is believed that my hand struck

And it did—it all, Brogass roce in excitedly.

It is false, and you know it is; but
for your own safety, you would have me bear the stigms.

It cannot affect me whather you or any one else bears it.

Cormas extretched out this hand towards his companion meascingly.

Benjamin Brogden, beware, he said in a deep toned voice, which seemed to ring out from the rocks.

The echoes of the shore rang jubilantly along, crying. Beware—beware.

Brogden's lip twitched nervously.

Dash it, don's shout out, in that way, he muttered in a surly voice.

Gormac continued in the same manner as before. DRINTS AND BRILLIANTS

'This guilt hangs over me like an evil power; it shadows my life, darkens every hope of happiness; it has branded me throughout the land as a foul curse, a black thing, to be destroyed as they would some ravenous wolf. But beware, for I will bear it no longer.

foot. He did not look towards his companlon. You mean, 'he said, in a low sneering tone—' you mean that you will accuse me?'
Perhaps.'
'Ha, ha! And pray who do you think would believe you.'
' You may learn to you coat.'
' Bah, man, Brogden said fierc-iy; 'before you could utter half's dozen words—before you would raise you flager to point out the guilty, be you would torn piecement, trampled under foot. I tell you that you have but to show yourself to be crushed to death'
' I know all this; I have known it long.
The curse clings to me and drags me downward.'

he curse clings to me and the curse clings to me and the curse of the curse against you. I desire that we should be friends—at least come to amicable terms.

'To the effect—'

'That neither of us in any way harm the ther. 'And the conditions?' And I will find means to get you out of the country.' Cormac laughed loadly, deristely.' Again the cohoes were stirred from their rest, and ung along the shore as if a hundred demons were triu.nphing over some poor vic-checked the animal, uttering many curses upon it.

You offer wonderfully fair terms, Cormac said, sarcastically, but you must learn that it is I alone who have the power to make terms and claim conditions. For I have mow a heart to pity me, to sympathise with me; a tongue to declare the wrong that has been done; a tongue that Justice's self will. listen to with respect; a kind hand to rise up in my defence against my false accusers.

'And pray where have you found all this?' Brogden sheered.

'In one whose breast owns not one evil thought. One who knows you, and abbors you.—Ailleen O'Sullivan.'

Brogden's fingers closed with spasmodic tightness upon the heavy handle of his whip his lips quivered nervously, and for a few moments he stood spechless.

At length he spoke in a. hushed, choking voice.

'You have told her?'

voice.

'You have told her?'
'I have.'
'And she believes you?'
'She believes me.'
Brogden leant heavily upon the neck of his horse. His disengaged arm hung nervaleas by his side; his head drooped, forward, and he stood utterly anmaned.
The passion of his dark feoul was shattered; his plots, his schemes, his hopes weel blasted and scattered to the wind. The woman for whom he had rushed deeper into sun than he had ever deemed possible—the an for whom he had rush an for whom he had rish tion—the woman for whom he had done all this, for whom he was ready to do it all over again—could never, never be his. The fiat had gone forth. Fate was against him. (To be opntinued.)

A FEW years ago Mr Fellows ventured to recommend a new combination of Hypophosphites (Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites) to the medical profession and the public, based upon the affects he himself experienced from its use; since then it has been employed with marked success in the treatment of various debilitating diseases, and the sale which was first numbered by single bottles, has now reached large proportions. Many cases of confirmed Consumption are known to have been cured, while great improvement has been marked in all. The inventor has yet to be informed of a single instance where Bronchitis has not been successfully treated by it; while in other Lung difficulties it far surpasses everything hither to known. Its freedom from the constipating tendency of many otherwise valuable remedies, makes it obviously adapted to a wide range of diseases.
