Give up Fight in Dardanelles To Rush to Aid of Serbia Is Startling Rumor In London

Lord Milner Brings up Matter in House of Lords and Lord Lansdowne is Non-committal in Reply

London, Oct. 15.—Viscount Milner suggested in the House of Lords today that, in view of the need of all available troops on the western front, there was but one course for the allies to pursue, and that, he said, was to withdraw the 150,000 or 200,000 French and British soldiers from the Gallipoli Peninsula, give up the long drawn out campaign against the Dardanelles altogether, and transfer the men with all speed to the aid of Serbia, before that country is completely crushed by Germany.

A great explosion followed the striking of the torpedo and the destroyer foundered immediately.

ZEPPELIN RAID SENDS HUNDREDS INTO THE RANKS

Young Men Rush to Enlist After Latest Barbarous Attack on Non-Combatants

New York, Oct. 15.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables under yesterday's date:

The zeppelin structures which, for a long time, have been a source of dread to the non-combatants, necessarily prevent me from giving a comprehensive story of last night's Zeppelin raid over London, but it is possible to relate some of the incidents showing the ferocity of such forms of barbarous attack.

The official statement says: "The material damage was small. This is quite right, but nevertheless it is enough to congest the streets as they had not been since the early days of the war, to bring out dozens of recruiting bands to send hundreds of young men into the ranks, and to make the city the busiest place in Europe."

In Berlin they say the raids are for military purposes and aim at "terrifying London." Perhaps the German general staff is satisfied with the extent of military damage done by this raid, which killed fourteen soldiers, and terrified people are supposed to rush away in panic or hide in their homes.

A few demolished buildings, broken windows and bomb holes—that's the extent of damage to be found today. This raid came earlier than any others, and, naturally, more people were about the city. If the Zeppelin planes had been seen, they would have been known by the official statement.

HOW THE GERMANS WON BULGARIA OVER

Paris, Oct. 15.—That the Russian retreat, skillfully exploited by German agents, was the decisive cause of turning against the allies the sentiment of the Bulgarian people, who are intensely practical, was the assertion made by A. DePaulieu, French minister at Sofia, to the correspondent of the Journal at Ploesti.

"The event coincided," he said, "with the visit of the Duke of Mecklenburg, who found a ready tool in King Ferdinand, a blind believer in Germany's victory. The Champagne success came too late to restore the balance. The Bulgarian people understood nothing of diplomatic calculations. They see only Macedonia to be conquered. Certainly, if the Russian flag appeared at Varna or Burgas, it might rouse memories in their inmost souls, but interest comes before sentiment."

MRS. DUVAL AND MRS. CORBET HOME

Saddened by the loss of her soldier husband, Major Duval, M. D., and doubly grieved through his body being lost in the Hesperian disaster, Mrs. J. L. Duval returned to St. John at noon today. She was accompanied by her children, and her sister, Mrs. Corbet, wife of Major G. G. Corbet, M. D., who had gone across to England to comfort the sorrowing widow when the cables brought the distressing news of his death.

Mrs. Duval was met at the train today by many friends who extended sympathy, in which the citizens of St. John and other parts of Canada will join, for all have been touched by the pitiful experiences through which she has passed. She is bearing up bravely, largely for the sake of her children, and her only one source in her grief is the thought that the death of her husband was that of a hero, following wounds sustained while ministering to his comrades on the famous battlefield of Ypres.

Mrs. Corbet and Mrs. Duval came home on the steamer Metagama. While in England the former spent three days filled with happiness with her husband, Major Corbet, who had secured a six days' furlough from service at the front. Unfortunately her steamer was delayed by having to go out of her course because of submarines, and so their reunion was shortened to half the time anticipated. Her husband is keeping up well to the strain of duty at the front where he is medical officer with the artillery on the firing line and where he has been kept continually busy night and day.

"We in Canada," said Mrs. Corbet, "do not know there is a war, compared with the realization of the English people. A visit to London or any other centre in the British Isles will convince one of the stern reality of the dreadful war, but thought there are so many very sad sights, the people try to be and are very cheerful in the face of their grief. Recruiting is going on steadily and apparently very well, but the talk of conscription is daily growing stronger."

His fall from the veranda, which he had been sitting on, was the cause of his death, but will be glad to know that his closing years were brightened by the sympathy of steadfast friends. Canadians in Greater Number In Casualty Lists

All Battalions of Both Divisions Now at Firing Line - Explosion of Mine Opposite Canadian Lines

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—Growing lists of casualties from the front indicate that the Canadian divisions are doing their bit in the advance movement of the allied forces. In the overnight list there were twenty dead and twenty-three wounded. In a recent report of 111 another witness, mention was made of the explosion of a mine by the Germans opposite the Canadian lines, and casualties which have been coming in since have told the tale of this explosion. About fifty have been reported killed, though all did not lose their lives from this cause.

THE ADVANCE IN IRON AND STEEL

Last autumn the iron and steel trade of the country was so poor and the outlook so bleak that the United States Steel Corporation could not earn much more than the full interest on its bonds, so saying nothing of dividends on some $70,000,000 of stock. So it first reduced and then passed the common stock dividend. For the three months ending September 30, this year, it has earned four times as much as it did in the December quarter, and its present revenues indicate a most promising return before the end of 1915. In August, pig iron production in the United States was at the rate of 85,000,000 tons per annum, compared with 18,000,000 tons in January, eight months ago the iron and steel mills of the country were running at about 40 per cent of capacity, and now at nearly 90 per cent. With this increased production has come a rise in prices. For instance, last September pig iron ranged from $14.00 to $14.50 a ton, and now it is $16 to $17—an advance of about 14 per cent. Billets that were $21.00 a ton are now $23.00 to $24.00. Wire rods were $20.00 and today $23.00. Steel bars and steel plates are up 12 to 15 per cent, and steel scrap and iron nails, which were unsaleable at $13 to $14 per ton, are quickly marketed at $14.00 to $15.50 a ton. The payrolls in Pittsburgh, Pa., Youngstown, Ohio, and Chicago districts are the largest in the history of the steel industry. The recovery in iron and steel has meant an enormous amount to all related industries. One is moving toward the lakes in quantities never before approached. The coal fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland, and Kentucky are producing in excess of the carrying capacity of the railroads entering the district. This means a serious effect every distributor of merchandise, every power plant, traction line, and bank in the neighborhood. It takes the corner grocery store a long time to feel the effect of full employment following a period of complete or partial industrial paralysis, and even longer is the railroad in noticing the benefits of a rising price in notching the benefits among wage-earners. This change was visible in the end in June, and three months later has begun to spread to nearly every part of the Eastern States.—From "American Business Transactions by the War," by Charles F. Spear, in the American Review of Reviews for October.

FAMED STRONG MAN DYING

Captain American, winner of many medals, victim of paralysis. One of the strongest men the world has ever known, Captain American, is dying in the City Hospital of Nashville, Tenn. Capt. Anderson or J. L. Taylor, sustained a stroke of paralysis on February 19, 1914, while playing his rounds at Charleston, S. C. Since then the physical culture king, as he is generally known, has been taken to many sanitariums and springs by his wife, and on August 5 he was taken to Nashville. They were in Lewisburg, Tenn., where Taylor was making a living. Mrs. Taylor telling fortune by palmistry. The captain was unable to rise from his bed, which was in a tent in which his wife was taking out an existence for both. Mr. Taylor has a book in which are many press notices and recommendations to show managers and his students. One of these clippings tells of Captain American winning the gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition in 1904 for being the champion strong man of the world. Captain American at one time was professor in the College of Physical Culture and Manual Therapeutics of Chicago. After leaving that institution he gave short courses in many towns in the south and west on physical culture. While in Nashville the captain broke quarter inch chains with one hand, tore one deck of playcards into sixteen pieces without removing the wrapper, tore a deck of playing cards with two sockets of iron placed between the cards, bent and broke any iron or steel spike of any proportion size with his hands and bent three-quarters inch bars of iron by striking them with his bare arms. When in the height of his strength, he allowed 8,000 pound automobiles to be drawn across his stomach. He was able to do this because he was so bound with interlocking muscles. Officials of the city hospital said that there was no probability that Captain Taylor would recover. They said that his stroke of paralysis has been coming on him for many years, but that they could not tell as yet what was the cause.

The sixth recruit of the day was Murray Finlay, who enlisted Wednesday morning. Mr. Creed is a member of the Bank of Nova Scotia staff in that city and a son of Frank Creed.

Fierce Fighting in West; Roumania May Be in War

London, Aug. 14—A British official statement issued tonight tells of the latest offensive by the British troops between La Bassee and Arras. It reads as follows: "Yesterday afternoon, after a bombardment, we attacked the enemy's trenches, under cover of a cloud of smoke and gas from a point about 600 yards southwest of Hulluch to the Hohenzollern redoubt. We gained about 1,000 yards of trenches just south and west of Hulluch, but were unable to maintain our position there, owing to the enemy's shell fire. "Southwest of St. Elix we prepared and held the enemy's trench behind the Vermelles-Hulluch road, and the southwestern edge of the quarries, both inclusive. We also captured a trench on the northwest side of the forest. We captured the main trench of the Hohenzollern redoubt, but the enemy is still in two communicating trenches between the redoubt and the quarries."

THE WAR.

The war news supports the dictum of Lord Kitchener that he must have more men. That, in fact, is the outstanding feature. Canada, New Brunswick, St. John, must do more than they yet have done.

The Post points out that whereas the British government undertook at the outset to provide an expeditionary force of 150,000 men, it has since raised an army of 8,000,000 men, and the British casualties have been nearly three times as great as the number of men in the original expeditionary force.

PRECEPT AND PRACTICE.

Canadian Finance of Winnipeg expresses the view that the government of Canada should take some of its own medicine. Sir George Foster, in a recent address to an audience of insurance men, quoted these words from a British statesman—

"Extravagance is always a folly; in these times it is a crime. Thrift is at all times a virtue; in these times it is a national duty." To which Sir George himself added: "I would like to engrave that sentiment on the heart and conscience of every man and woman in Canada."

Commenting on these utterances Canadian Finance pointedly says: "Here and there in the audience a soft voice comment might have been heard as to the desirability of the honorable minister of trade and commerce engraving the sentiment more deeply upon the hearts of his cabinet colleagues."

There, under the great hydrangea bush whose fading blossoms are now falling over the turf that soon will lie above his worn out frame, a block of black granite rests and bears his name. Let one of his own poems be his epitaph:—

Stranger, pause and drop a tear Over him that slumbers here; Pause and think, for like him, I, He, as thou, did trouble borrow From the phantom-peopled morrow.

He, as thou, did sometimes say "The world will miss me when away;" But who in all the world can tell His name, or where he chanced to dwell?

But if to men his name were known— If round the globe his fame were blown— Think'st thou 'twould give 'tis slumber rest, With the green turf above his breast?

LIGHTER VEIN.

"Yes," said the young singer complacently, "I had a great reception after my song last night. The audience shouted 'Fine! Fine!'"

"Good thing you did not sing again," said the critic.

"Why, would you do me?"

"They would have yelled 'Imprisonment! Imprisonment!' the second time." "Silly Sticks."

Sunday School Teacher—Did you ever forgive a enemy?

Tommy Tuffnut—Wunat. Sunday School Teacher—And what noble sentiment prompted you to do it?

Tommy Tuffnut—He was bigger than me—Life.

The curtain had dropped on the first act of the amateur play. "Ladies and gentlemen," said the youthful stage manager, stepping to the front of the stage, "you will observe that the programme says that there is an interval of two years between the first and second acts. This will be fully carried out. The leading lady has just swallowed the powder put under the impression that it was a marshmallow, and I think it is about that time before she is able to go on."

A young married man in Boston met a friend of his bachelor days and insisted on his wife's presence. He was to lunch. His wife was unprepared for visitors, and calling him aside told him she had only one dozen oysters and that when his friend had eaten his quota of four he must not be asked to take more. The wife looked distressed and the husband, when the guest had eaten his four the host pressed him to take more. The wife looked in agony and the guest refused to have the rest of the oysters brought from the kitchen.

Later the wife said to her husband: "How could you urge him to have more oysters when I had explained to you that there weren't any more?"

"I'm very sorry," said the penitent husband, "but I forgot all about it."

"Forget about it? What do you suppose I was kicking you under the table for?" retorted his wife.

"That you didn't kick me," said the husband.

GOVERNMENT FAILS TO SUPPLY FUNDS FOR MILITARY NEEDS

Large Portion of Financing Left to the Hazard of Private Contributors -- Expect Military to Find It "On a Tree"--What the Government is Not Doing

(From the Toronto Star.) The Canadian government, according to Finance Minister White, has plenty of money for war purposes; also, according to the same authority, it is the government's intention to do its full share in providing well-equipped men to fight the battles of the Empire. Why, then, does not the government implement its promises and provide the necessary funds for military purposes instead of leaving a large portion of this financing to the hazard of private contributions?

These and other similar questions are continually heard throughout the city and country, in military circles, particularly. Local military men are not of the complaining sort, neither are they of the begging persuasion, furthermore, they are prevented by King's regulations and orders, from airing their grievances in the columns of the public press. The fact remains, however, that they have real grievances and away down the root of all their troubles is the lack of government financial support. Much has been spoken and written of "what the government has done" and it is worthy of much commendation. The task has been stupendous and the Star has not hesitated to give full credit. But the fact remains that much could be written about "what the government is not doing." Herewith are given some of the many particulars in which the government has proved, and is still proving delinquent.

This article is not inspired by any desire to attack the government, but in the hope that the projection of these unsatisfactory conditions into the bright light of publicity may result in a betterment of conditions.

Disablement Fund on Public

The general public of Canada has subscribed loyally and wholeheartedly to the Red Cross, Patriotic, Machine Gun, and various other funds, and they will be called on again and again to supplement these gifts. Undoubtedly they will respond to further appeals. Now, it is stated on high authority that the government proposes to shift the responsibility of a fund to be known as the Disablement Fund, also upon the general public. And this, in addition to the proposed Canadian war loan, which of course is a business proposition of the government, is in addition to the part of the government the questions are asked, where is it all going to end? What is the government going to look the situation fairly in the face and assume the responsibility which is undoubtedly its?

Mayor Church says that $50,000 is needed for the supply of city, home and overseas regiments. What is it needed for, and why isn't the need supplied by the government? The city recruiting depot is applying to the city authorities for a grant of $5,000 to carry on its work. Why does not the government pay its way instead of permitting, and indeed, soliciting aid from private sources? These are questions which are agitating the public, and which require an answer.

City Volunteer Regiments

The financial condition of city and other volunteer regiments throughout the country is a matter requiring attention. Early this year it was announced by the Militia Department that the militia would not train this season, and that the usual drill pay to the regiments would not be forthcoming. In most cases this pay, which amounts to about $12 per man has in former years been turned over by the men to the regiments, thus providing a sufficient sum of money to finance the expenses of the regiments, upkeep of uniforms, etc. This year the city regiments, despite their instructions to disband or not to drill for the season, have done more work than for any three years in their past history, but despite the heavy expense they have incurred, have not received one cent of government assistance. As one officer expressed it: "If we had not kept going in what kind of shape would recruiting depots and patriotic leagues would have gone for practically nothing? Regimental bands used constantly for patriotic purposes, are equipped and maintained by officers and regiments without aid from the government."

Lack Field Equipment

The equipment of regiments for overseas service is another instance where the government has shown its lack of desire to supply necessary funds. Two machine guns per regiment was the original allowance, but when the cry came from Europe: "Send us more machine guns," the general public was permitted to supply the deficiency. The government again failed to recognize its responsibility. Field kitchens for regiments on service were, and are still, recognized as most essential to the welfare of a fighting force. Does the government issue them? Not yet. The regiments are still supplied with the "dixies," an ordinary stew pan, which is useful for a bivouac or a picnic party. On active service the field kitchen, costing in the neighborhood of $550, supplies hot and nourishing food to an army on the march. The people of Canada are permitted to supply their regiments with these, but the government has so far shown no signs of filling this long-felt want. Water wagons and water bottles, both essential in camp or on a route march, are conspicuous by their absence in the Canadian militia. At Niagara camp, water bottles were not issued, while four water wagons were provided for the use of 14,000 men. "There are so many things they expect an officer to find hanging up on a tree that it gets very tiresome after a while," is the way one officer describes the situation. Other things the government does not provide are mess marshes for men or typewriters, hand instruments, and yet these things are essential to the existence of the regiments.

The manner in which the government has handled the question of ambulances for use at the front is a further instance of how the general public has been called on to supply a military essential. These motor vehicles have been supplied in large numbers by patriotic and philanthropic institutions and individuals. The government succeeded in purchasing a number of Cadillac chassis on the American side, the bodies of the ambulances being manufactured in Canada. The government instead of rushing these much needed ambulances to the battlefield in Flanders, immediately on their completion, has been turning them over one by one as paid for to private persons or societies which desired to donate an ambulance to the cause.

No Provision for Aviators

The manner in which prospective members of the Royal Navy Air Service, training in Canada, have been treated by the Canadian authorities is an instance of governmental side-stepping which is particularly noticeable in Toronto, owing to the fact that a large number of young Canadians are in training here. Notwithstanding the recognized value of this training, no provision for trained aviators. Only this morning it is announced that Premier Borden has given out the statement that as the airmen are not being trained for a Canadian service, the government cannot lend them any financial assistance unless the British government asks the Canadian government to do so. Another opening for private contributions.

Will Halifax Get the 64th-Sussex Soldier Wins Honor at Front

There are about 2,800 men at Camp Sussex. Seventeen men arrived in Sussex on Thursday from Collins, and were examined for the 88th Battalion. In three instances Collins families were represented by two recruits each.

The medical examination of men desiring to enlist in the 88th began Tuesday and up to Wednesday evening eighty had been passed by Dr. Barnett and will be signed on at once. Among the Sussex boys who passed were Murray Gambin, Stanley Hunter and George Chapman. Many other local men purchased the first class certificate from the Infanteries of Instruction at Fredericton and holds the 88th will soon have comfortable quarters. Acting Quartermaster Percy Hising, Quartermaster Sergt. Gambin and Lieut. Black and Hanson of the Brooks are on duty and assisting Col. Fowler.

On Tuesday the whole battalion was given a route march of over twelve miles and the men showed splendid form. There is much speculation regarding winter quarters for the 64th, but it is now said to be the general impression that Halifax will be the place. Norman Bardon, son of Frank Bardon, of Sussex, recently wounded, has made a great record as a soldier. For bravery in the bloody battle of Langemarck at which Canadians gained such distinguished honor and praise from General French and the British press, the wounded hero was recommended to receive the much-prized distinguished courage medal. His name was also mentioned in the despatches for the pluck and endurance he displayed in helping to recapture the 47 guns lost by the Canadians. Two brothers of the wounded hero, Walter and Aubrey, are also doing their bit for King and Country both being in the fighting line in France. Weldon Clark, who was recently killed in France, was the elder son of Albert and Gertrude Clark of Bellefleur. He was twenty-three years of age. He leaves father, mother, three sisters and one brother. For the past two years he had been living in the west at Simpson, Sask., from where he enlisted in the 46th Battalion in December last. After training at Regina he was selected among others for transfer from the battalion to reinforce the first Canadian contingent and was sent to Shorncliffe, England, where he remained only a few weeks before being ordered to the front. On his arrival in France he took part in the severe bombardment of the German lines preparatory to the great offensive and was killed in action on September 13. Mr. Clark was a descendant, through his mother, of the old Loyalist family of Marvins, and has worthily upheld the honor and loyal traditions of his ancestors.

The completion of the Collis Canal, on the Oregon side of the Columbia River, adds Idaho to the list of states having a seaport. It is now possible for stern-wheel river steamers to pass from the Pacific Ocean to Lewiston, at the head of the Snake River, a distance of 480 miles.

H. L. SPENCER, PROMINENT MAN OF LETTERS, DEAD

H. L. Spencer was born at Castleton, Vermont, on April 28, 1829, and received his education and spent his early years there. For a time he taught school and later was engaged in commercial pursuits, his business-taking him to the southern states before the civil war and to the maritime provinces and Newfoundland during the latter part of the war.

He began to write in the early forties, his work appearing in the Knickerbocker, Sartain's and Graham's Magazines. Later he wrote for the New York Tribune and Post and the Boston Journal and became editor of the Herald in Rutland, Vermont, in 1869.

In 1868 Mr. Spencer came to St. John and entered business here, also editing the Maritime Monthly. Afterwards he became a valued member of the staff of the St. John Telegraph and the Standard, later of the Record and the Gazette, corresponding also for other papers. Although much of Mr. Spencer's best work was done in the newspapers and not preserved in other forms he published a booklet of poems in 1867, Summer Gatherings Away Down East, 1870; A Song of the Years and a Memory of Acadia, 1881; a volume of selected poems at a later period and The Fugitives, A Sheaf of Verses, 1909.

Mr. Spencer was a familiar acquaintance with Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne and several of their famous literary contemporaries in New England. He was a classmate of Henry Cabot Lodge, Redfield Proctor and others who became prominent in public life. He also corresponded at intervals for many years with Elbert Hubbard, the famous writer and lecturer who was one of the victims of the Lusitania tragedy. The Montreal Standard during the last two years published many of Mr. Spencer's poems.

After giving up newspaper work Mr. Spencer went to the home of an old friend, John Edwards, and opened there a little store, which he conducted for several years. There was very little trade, but he kept his active mind partially occupied. He also wrote at intervals during that period a series of short sketches for The Evening Times. These, under the heading of the Inland Nook Philosopher of Kennebecasis Bay, were read with universal interest, not only for their quaint and original ideas, but for their fine literary quality. The birds, the trees, the flowers, the children--Nature in all her moods--furnished material which he lively imagination used with good effect to embellish a story, present a word picture or point a moral.

But some five years ago his physical weakness became such that the little store had to be closed and Mr. Spencer returned to the city. Kind friends have since ministered to his comfort as he grew more feeble, and the newspaper men of the city, the Women's Canadian Club and others have given him on more than one occasion tangible proofs of their regard and their recognition of his poetic genius. The Women's Canadian Club and others have given him on more than one occasion tangible proofs of their regard and their recognition of his poetic genius. The Women's Canadian Club and others have given him on more than one occasion tangible proofs of their regard and their recognition of his poetic genius.

Mr. Spencer leaves no relatives in St. John. His wife and son, are buried in Rutland, Vermont. He had a great daughter, but for many years has had no knowledge of her whereabouts or whether she were living or dead. He had a few correspondents, whose regular or occasional letters cheered his later years. One of these was in Montreal, one in Calgary, one in Chicago, one in Los Angeles, one in Castleton, Vt., one in New York, N. H., and one in Japan.

Mr. Spencer came to St. John about fifty years ago as the representative of J. C. Ayer & Company. For a time he was in active business, and was one of the sufferers by the St. John fire of 1877. His store on Church street was then destroyed, and he was left absolutely penniless.

Among the literary friends of Mr. Spencer when he was in his prime were the late Rev. Dr. James Bennett, Hon. William Edward, and George Stewart, and others long since dead. He was also a great admirer of the late John C. Myles, the artist, who once painted Mr. Spencer's portrait in oils. To both these men of artistic temperament the beauty of the scenery along the rivers and shores of New Brunswick appealed, and while one sang of it in verse the other endeavored to reproduce it faithfully upon his canvas.

To the very last Mr. Spencer was keenly interested in local and world affairs, and his mind had lost very little of its clearness, except loss of memory, until very nearly the end of his long life. A few close friends will miss him much, but he leaves a lasting memorial in his contribution to the poetry of Canada. The last sonnet in The Fugitives is now of peculiar interest. It is as follows: The flowers of Spring will never open again; Beyond recall are Summer's sober blooms;

MONTREAL FANS WERE REBUKED

Col. Hanson Told Proxy Sports to Get Into Uniform.—Reinforcements For The Construction Corps

While a large crowd, which included many young men, was watching the bulletin boards in St. James street, Montreal, for the returns of the baseball game in Boston, Lieut.-Col. Paul Hanson, formerly of St. John, who was wounded at St. Julien, appeared at an upper window and made a brief, but vigorous recruiting speech. He told the unattached young men that instead of idling away their time and wasting their opportunities in such a trifling thing as a money-making contest between two foreign teams of professional athletes, they should be doing something for their own land and the Empire, and he urged the slacker to show a real sporting spirit by donning the King's uniform and getting into the greatest and most important game in the world, that of beating the unspeakable German. The applause which followed his remarks was very lively.

The Construction Corps. Lieutenant Simms, who has charge of the work of getting together 100 additional men for the Overseas Engineering Corps, a C. P. R. engineer in the west, but undertook this new work when the call came to him. He has collected a fine body of men from all the system, and outside it, but mostly from the west. All are well set-up, keen as mustard, and willing to endure hardship, although not a few of them had positions which did not involve manual labor.

The C. P. R. it may be recalled, collected through the aid of Lieut.-Col. Ramsay of the C. P. R., 500 men for the first contingent. These were lined into shape at St. John before sailing for the seat of war. By all accounts, they have done good work in the line for which they were adapted. It was for this reason that the British military authorities asked that this number be reinforced at the front.

Walsfield, Oct. 15.—Miss Margaret Dean of Cambridge will be eligible for a place on the state rifle team when women are enlisted. She qualified beyond all question at the Bay State Rifle Range yesterday, where she was the guest of her uncle, Lieut. Dougan.

The young woman has long had a fondness for shooting, and has conquered both the regulation and the indoor rifle. Yesterday she and her uncle went to the 300 yard range for an infor-try-out. Three strings at nineteen shots each were fired from a prone position, and the following scores resulted:

Miss Dean . . . . . 46 48 49—143
Lieut. Dougan . . . . . 47 48 50—145

Having beaten Miss Dean by two shots Lieut. Dougan was somewhat inclined to boast of his performance and challenged his niece to beat his score. She quickly responded by making 81 consecutive bullseyes.

Tailors to His Majesty -- "The Man"

HOW WE DO IT!

WE are frequently asked by our Customers, "How do you do it?" It's simple as A-B-C!

"A" The ordinary tailor—selling at $25 to $45—disposes of, on an average, 10 suits a week, and has to make from $10 to $15 profit on each order. We sell hundreds of suits a week at a minimum of profit—Large Production and Small Profits.

"B" The ordinary tailor purchases fabrics by the suit length and linings and trimmings in small quantities. In consequence he pays the top price. We import our fabrics and linings "Direct-from-the-Mills" and purchase trimmings in large quantities, thereby getting the very lowest cash price—Large Purchasing Power.

"C" We have a magnificent organization and transact our business on scientific lines. Our Designer is second to none in Canada and our Tailors are specialists in the particular branch of work assigned to them.—Satisfaction Assured.

Mrs. Taylor had resided in Vancouver for about thirty years, but kept in touch with her friends in the east, and was here on a visit four years ago.

MARTIN ARMSTRONG DEAD AT AGE OF 88
 At the advanced age of eighty-eight years, Martin Armstrong, a familiar figure in the city since he was quite a young man, passed away yesterday afternoon following a short illness. He was a native of Donegal, Ireland, but came to this country in his youthful years and was for some time in the early seventies engaged in the dry goods business with his brother, the late John Armstrong, at the corner of Church and Prince William street.
 He continued with him as assistant for some time until he started in business on the opposite corner of the street for himself, likewise conducting a dry goods store. He was widely known about St. John. Before the fire of '77 business fell off and he was compelled to abandon the store. In the early eighties he became a member of the Salvation Army and continued one of its most faithful adherents. He was liked by those with whom he did business as he went about selling magazines, books, stationery and other articles, wearing the army uniform. The funeral will be held tomorrow from the residence of his brother, Samuel Armstrong, Loch Lomond road.
