Drastic Measures to Check Smuggling at Border Towns

A Calais despatch of Nov. 2 to the Boston Transcript says:

Inclined to drastic measures by the extensive smuggling operations which have baffled the inspectors for the past several months, the United States customs department has issued a regulation to its agents along the Canadian border stationing in this vicinity, by which the latter are ordered to examine all street railway cars running between points in the United States and Canada, on their return from the Canadian side of the line. It is believed that the orders received here are copies of general orders sent to all the inspectors on the Canadian border line.

The residents of the border towns do not take kindly to the search, and the officers are meeting with much trouble in the fulfillment of their orders. It means much additional duty to them, and as yet no extra men have been detailed to assist them in carrying out the new regulations. The smuggling has been known to be going on for some time, but the combined efforts of both the American and Canadian inspectors have failed to apprehend the contraband carriers, and although the excitement which it has created is believed to have resulted in somewhat lessening the extent of the illegal operations, the business still flourishes. Several captures have been made lately, but in none of them, although complicity in the organized system was suspected, was it possible to obtain evidence pointing to more than petty cases. The livery dealers among the border villages are cautious as to whom they let their outfits to, as several of them have been confiscated within a short time.

Making Paper From Peat in Norway.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The peat bog furnishes the latest substitute for wood in the manufacture of paper. Paper making from peat on a commercial scale has already begun in Sweden, where a company, capitalized at more than $1,000,000, has made extensive purchases of peat bogs and prepared plans for the erection of mills for turning out wrapping paper and pasteboard. The money for the enterprises comes largely from London, but the process by which the vegetable fibre of the peat will be converted into paper is covered by an American patent. An account of the successful launching of the enterprise is given in a report of United States Consul R. S. S. Bergh, of Gothenburg, Sweden.

It is claimed that a ton of paper worth $30 can be made from peat at a total cost of $15, thus leaving a satisfactory margin of profit. It is further claimed that it takes only two hours to convert the peat into paper. It should not, however, be expected that peat as a material for paper making can take the place of wood pulp for all purposes. If it helps to meet the demand for the coarser grades of paper and thus relieves the pressure upon the timber supply it will do a great deal for the forests of the United States.

The quantity of peat in the world is enormous. It exists in all the countries of northern Europe and has been used as fuel for centuries. Deposits from ten to fifty feet deep and many miles in extent are not unusual. Siberia has thousands of square miles of peat, and much exists in the United States and Canada. It is a vegetable substance, deposited by slow accumulations during thousands of years the process being similar to that by which coal was formed.

Many good qualities have been claimed for paper made from peat. It is said that an article wrapped in it will not be attacked by moths, and for that reason it is assured to be peculiarly fitted for boxes and bags for storing furs and woolen clothing. It is further claimed that a process of bleaching will give the paper a snow-white color, and thus make it equal to the best pulp papers for printing purposes, but this claim does not appear to have been established by actual tests on a commercial scale. Wrapping papers, cardboard and paper boxes made from peat possess greater strength than similar articles made from straw.

Influences of Happy Childhood

The memory of early happiness is a treasure-house of sweet comforts. Its pure, simple, earnest joys become wells to draw from whenever we sit down in thirst and weariness by the dusty highway of life. Of this one good, the world can never deprive us. The sunshine in those days reaches across our little stretch of life, and mingles its rays with those that beam from the heaven of our hope. The actual present of the adult life, and the materials which enter into it, are made up, more than we generally suppose, of reminiscence. We ruminate like the kine. We lay up in the receptacles of memory abundance of undigested material that we recall and appropriate to our refreshment and nourishment; and this process of reminiscence, of living over again, grows upon us as we grow into years, until at last it becomes our all. Retrauded, power has no resource but to dwell upon its old play and its old achievements. How sad he is who can never go back to his childhood without a period when his life was filled with sweet and simple satisfaction, when a kind and loving mother read aloud to the family, the Home Reading department from the columns of this paper.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are growing to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all Dealers.

Forced Upon Him.

Very few persons acquit themselves nobly in their first speech. At a wedding feast recently, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, the bridegroom was called upon, as usual, to respond to the given toast, in spite of the fact that he had previously pleaded to be excused. Blushing to the roots of his hair, he rose to his feet. He intended to imply that he was unprepared for speech-making; but he unfortunately placed his hand upon the bride's shoulder, and looked down at her as he stammered out his opening and concluding words: "This—er—thing has been forced upon me."

A FISH STORY.

A story was told by Lord Claud Hamilton at a dinner of the Fly Fishers' Club. An Irishman had caught a big pike. Noting a lump in its stomach, he cut it open. "As I cut it open, there was a mighty rush and a flapping of wings,"

For high class Watch and Jewelry Repairing go to

said he, "and away flew a wild duck; and, begorra, when I looked inside, there was a nest with four eggs, and she had been ather sitting on that nest."

There is a language of umbrellas, as of flowers. For instance, place your umbrella in a rack, and it will often indicate that it will change owners.

To open it quickly in the street means that somebody's eye is going to be in danger.

To shut it quickly signifies that a hat or two will probably be knocked off.

An umbrella carried over a woman the man getting nothing but the drippings of the rain, signifies courtship.

When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings, it indicates marriage.

To swing your umbrella over your shoulder signifies "I am making a nuisance of myself."

To put an alpaca umbrella by the side of a silk one signifies "exchange is no robbery."

To lend an umbrella indicates, I am a fool.

To return an umbrella means—well, never mind what it means. Nobody ever does that.

An Interesting Copper Story

We want you to read every word of this story. It won't take you long and you will feel well repaid when you have done so.

Copper is today receiving more attention than any other metal, even gold. Copper is the mainstay of industrialism, the metal most clamored for by manufacturers everywhere. The demand far exceeds the supply, and what is more, the most sanguine confess they cannot see when the mines will catch up.

This wonderful demand is what makes copper high. Don't look at the fluctuations of certain defunct copper stocks—look at the price of raw copper (present market price 15c). Think of it—a few years ago copper went begging at half that price.

There is money in copper. Money for the engineer, money for the miner, but more money for the man who has funds to help develop ore-bearing properties. He is the man who gets the big slice. He commands the situation because he holds in his hand the one thing essential to all such work. The lion's share is due him, for he sows his seed, as it were, and waits patiently for harvest time, taking such risks as are common to all such enterprises.

Some people speak of mining, and particularly the acquisition of mining shares, as risky. Will someone kindly specify just what undertaking in this uncertain world is not a risk. If "taking chances" is gambling then we are all gamblers—even the man who builds a new house, for it may burn down. Your grocer who buys flour at $5.00 and sells it for $6.00, makes a profit. If unforeseen circumstances force it below $5.00 he loses, is he a gambler? So is your friend who trades horses, for he doesn't know what he is getting. The man who builds a new fishing boat or weir gambles on the season. If it is a good one he makes his money—if a failure he is apt to go "broke." Every investment is a gamble in one sense, but is that any reason why we should not attempt to make our money earn dividends?

Conservatism is in many ways a virtue, but when conservatism conflicts with the spirit of growth and progress, one is better without it. Better wear out than rust out. Better die in harness than waiting with folded hands for your ship to come in. How can it return to you with gold unless you load it first with an outgoing cargo?

Great Opportunity

mining stocks if they could but feel that they were buying actual mineral ground, and stood a fair chance of ultimately creating owning such properties, and they do well to hesitate. But when they have a great and unusual opportunity like this, but once in a life time, they should make the most of it.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

I must say that I envied them both—both Crawshaw and Tarrington. But chiefly Crawshaw. Most people, indeed, would envy a man who at the age of 40 was making his £5000 a year as a K. C. Obviously, Crawshaw was a man to be envied.

My reasons for envying Dr. Tarrington were scarcely so potent. He was a fat little man with a shiny bald head and a genial smile, a moderately successful general practitioner in the Kensington district. Compared with the brilliant K. C.'s position, the little doctor did not count for much. Still, he possessed in his wife one of the most delightful women in London.

In a sort of brown study, I gazed at Tarrington's shiny head. "I wonder how the dickens you have managed to make a success," I said, scarcely aware that I was speaking aloud.

"Eh, what's that?" he inquired, turning briskly upon me.

"It has always seemed to me that a man owes his success or his failure in life to some particular trait in his character, to some virtue or to some vice."

Crawshaw interrupted: "A man owes success entirely to luck."

Tarrington began: "I set up in a small way at Stoke-on-Tritham. It was such a small way that it was practically not a way at all. Do you know that for two years I didn't make a tenner? My governor lived a few miles out, and that's why I began in that infernal hole—ones of these horrible north-country towns, all fog and smoke and black clothes and drunkenness on Sundays. My father made me a small allowance, enough to live on and all that but I was bored to death; there was nothing to do. I got tired of waiting for patients who didn't come, who might never come. There was no society in the place. I am humble enough in all conscience, but there was nobody in my own walk of life for me to associate with. The evenings were to be tedious. Simply to kill time I got into the habit of going round to the King William."

"It happened that one of these auctioneers—Tatham, I think his name was—had a birthday, and he celebrated it with gin punch." At the recollection of the gin punch, it seemed that a suggestion of pallor overspread his rufous countenance.

"Gin punch," he repeated, "it is the worst stuff in the world. How much I had I don't know. But as luck would have it, I was sufficiently master of myself to understand that Mrs. Meadows, my housekeeper, was tapping me on the shoulder. Automatically, I seized my hat and umbrella and followed her into the street. It appeared that the mayor, Mr. Cumberbatch, the richest man in the town, and quite the vulgarlest and the stupidest, had suddenly been seized with an attack of some sort, and had sent for me. As I preelading the wet pavements by the side of Mrs. Meadows, I felt that my walk was not a suitable walk for a medical man. I was not so drunk as a lord, but I was far too drunk for a commoner."

"A heavy palefaced man servant opened the door. He seemed to recognize me. 'Will you step into the library, sir. With great elaboration I placed my hat on the rack and my umbrella in the stand and followed the man."

"In the library I found the mayoress, whose face was white with anxiety. In the presence of that pretty, frightened little woman I felt myself a brute. I knew that only three months before old Cumberbatch, a widower, had married a second time. The delicate little figure before me was that of a girl scarcely more than 18. With a great effort I bowed to her. My fists were tightly clenched. I'm sure that I stood absolutely bolt upright. I knitted my brows and glared hard at her. From her expression of alarm I fancied she considered that, even without seeing the patient, I had assumed the worst."

"Oh," she said, with her hands held out pleadingly toward me, "he was taken ill at his club. At least, he came home, and I thought he was dying. I just managed to undress him. I sent round to our doctor, but he was away. It's a matter of life and death. For heaven's sake go up at once, doctor. I will show you the way." All this she said in a breath.

"By the light of a gas jet half turned on, I saw the face of the mayor above the counterpane. It was a pallid, heavy face, from the cheeks of which sprang a set of coal-black whiskers, projecting over the sheets like bookmarks. The mayor was groaning heavily. No, he was not groaning, he was snoring. Then I lost all self-control, and dropped into an armchair limp as a rag. My hands fell by the sides of the chair, and I knew that I was contemplating my patient with glassy eyes that saw nothing but whiskers. The room began to swim round me. There were moments when I could not see my patient. There were again moments when the right whisker seemed to move across the face and change places with the left. There were moments when I could distinguish only one whisker.

"Heavens! I thought, suppose his wife were to return and find me motionless and incapable in this chair! With a great effort I roused myself. For two or three seconds I felt that I was balancing my body on my hands. I succeeded in standing erect. There was but one idea in my mind, and that was to fly silently from the house. As I reached the hall I saw that the library door was open. In ten seconds, I estimated, I could reach the hatrack. But she had heard me."

"Oh, doctor, it seemed like hours. You have only been up there a quarter of an hour, and it seemed like hours. Tell me, is there any danger?"

"My own view was that I had only been up there three minutes. I shook my head."

"Oh, thank you, thank you," she exclaimed, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Have you given him anything?"

"While plucking up courage to speak, to say something—heaven knows what I was going to say—I made some movement on my left wrist with my nervous right hand. She interpreted the movement."

"Morphia?"

"I nodded."

"Must you see him again tonight, doctor?"

I shook my head in negation.

"Can I go and see him?"

Again I shook my head.

"You will come first thing in the morning, tomorrow?"

"This time an affirmative nod."

"She held out her tiny hands to me. She took my right hand in hers, and her grateful little soul went out toward me. I believe you have saved his life."

"I believe I bowed. The door closed. Overcome by the tension of the thing, I fell a huddled heap down the wet steps. How I picked myself up and how I got home I couldn't remember, even when I woke up the next morning."

"I was aroused from my torture by Mrs. Meadows. She entered in great excitement. Doctor, doctor, the mayor is in your consulting room. So he was not dead. But what was he coming to say? What was he coming to do? Had he brought a hatchet with him?"

"Mr. Cumberbatch stood by the mantelpiece facing me, a strong burly north-countryman looking pale—but alive. He moved a step toward me, and in the pompous manner of the ideal mayor, held out his hand. His hand was hot and flabby. Although this was my own room, he commanded me to sit down."

"You are a tactful young man and will go far. You are quite sure that you said nothing to my wife?"

"Nothing, I replied."

"No; I'm quite sure," he answered, you said nothing."

"As I afterwards learned from her. We were both right. I had said nothing, and he was quite sure I had said nothing."

"She says that you gave me morphia last night. Oh you are a very tactful young man! She thinks that you saved my life last night. Oh, young man, you will rise to the top of the tree."

"I could neither make head nor tail of his appreciation. However, I nodded."

"Was I very drunk, doctor?"

"Then I saw daylight. It was with great difficulty that I restrained myself from shrieking with laughter."

"You were drunk, I said, shaking my head, very, very drunk."

He heaved a deep sigh of relief.

Very earnestly he spoke. Oh, it would have been an awful thing if she, the daughter of a minister, very strictly brought up, knew that her husband, only three months after marriage, had come home drunk from the club. He became even more pale at the horror of the idea. It would have been a terrible thing.

"Yes, it would have been bad, I agree. 'It would have broken her heart,' he said, as though contradicting me. I tell you it would have broken her heart. My first wife—who was very strictly brought up too, though not the daughter of a minister—told me that I was raining her life."

"He seized me with both his hands. You're a devilish good chap," he said—what a wonderful tact. I admitted that I was possessed of wonderful tact, and by that admission showed, at any rate, a certain amount of it. He shook me with enthusiasm."

"By Jove!" he cried, "it's a deuced lucky thing that Dr. Nicholson my own man, was not at home. He's an infernal talker, and the whole thing would have been all over town in a twinkling. But you are the tomb. I swore that I was the tomb; and have been till now."

The K. C. laughed.

"I suppose you succeeded Dr. Nicholson in the Cumberbatch home?"

"I was the mayor's medical adviser until he died, but I couldn't keep him off drink."

"What a pity!" I said. What a terrible thing his decease must have been to poor Mrs. Cumberbatch, who loved him so well. Did she die of grief?"

"Certainly not," he replied, hastily. "I married Mrs. Cumberbatch and bought a practice in Kensington."

DIDN'T CATCH ON
A proud young father telegraphed the news of his new responsibility to his brother in this fashion: "A handsome boy has come to my house and claims to be your nephew. We are doing our best to give him a proper welcome."

The brother, however, failed to see the point, and replied: "I have not got a nephew. The young man is an impostor."

"COME IN"
A story of extraordinary deafness was unfolded at a recent meeting of a medical society in Philadelphia, says Harper's Weekly. An elderly woman, exceedingly hard of hearing, lived near the river. One afternoon, a warship fired a salute of ten guns. The woman, alone in her little house, waited until the booming ceased. Then she smoothed her hair back in a quaint manner and said sweetly, "Come in."

A Word to the Boys.
If boys and young men could only realize how much comfort and pleasure it means to their parents when they are steady, reliable, honorable and obedient, and how much pain they cause by disobedience, reckless living, idleness and the like, we believe there would be fewer of them with the latter habits. Whenever you hear a father speaking proudly of his son, there is something to him. Mothers are often blinded by their devotion, but the old man generally sees things as they really are, and only gives credit where it is due.—Atchison Globe.

After the Storm.

Brooks raised the shade and looked out, saying things softly to himself. A sudden landscape merged into leaden skies, and a fine, driving rain veiled the slightly misty air.

every bent upon taking back to town Bess' promise, the dreary round of peevish life irritated him.

Dickie Langdon, who had been the life of the stormbound party, had rechristened Willow farm the Ark, with an allusion to the animals that went two by two.

The frown was still on Brooks' face when he went down to breakfast. Langdon's jollity irritated him, and when they went back to the parlor after the meal he was gloomy and dispirited.

Writing consisted in sitting before a table with pen and ink and paper near at hand and staring at the dreary landscape before him.

She darted away, and Brooks, with a new hope in his heart, caught up a pen and wrote the letters that he had been trying to compose all the week.

"I was afraid that it would be washed away before we could get up here," he said, with a smile. "This has been a nightmare week."

"I don't blame you," she said softly. "It must be hard to have your only week spoiled. But there is Big Rock."

"I wanted to come back here," he said reflectively. "I had a foolish notion that I should be fortunate if I spoke in the shadow of the Big Rock."

"Why don't you ask and find out?" she suggested demurely.

In a moment he was upon his knees beside her. He had given up all hope as the long wet days wore upon his patience.

"And you are not afraid—even of my temper?" "Bess," he said impetuously, "I'm going to try and have very few storms."

"Of course not, you foolish boy," she said gently. "I know how hideously unpleasant they are. All this week I've been growing more and more certain that you would never have me, and all the time you were looking for the rainbow."

"Love is the pot of gold that is buried at the foot of that sort of a rainbow," she said, with a smile.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness, and it is likewise essential to health. There is no apology for filth, and filth breeds disease. Germs do not like cleanliness, and they almost exert themselves to avoid it, so to keep clean is essential."

"I don't want to go up and have a look at the Big Rock this afternoon?" she asked. "I think it's going to stop raining at last. Anyway, I can wrap up well. It would be a shame not to see the old place before you go back."

A Verse From Solomon Told of a Marriage Engagement.

When she left her home in the small town to come to New York to take up a special course of study her pet sister was fast reaching the crisis of a love affair.

But the weeks passed, and not a bit of definite news about the progress of the affair did the older sister receive in her city boarding house.

There was a great scurrying about the boarding house, to find a copy of the sacred book. The girls were excited out in vain. On all sides the cry arose: "Who's got a Bible?"

THE SPECTER SWIMMER.

A Legend of the Sea That Still Appeals to Sailors.

The sailor as a class still holds fast to the superstitions that have been his special heritage throughout all ages. To him the sea is still peopled with phantoms.

Near Cape Finisterre there lived a fisher maiden in days when the world asked fewer questions than now, and with her lived her father, a worthy, sturdy, and honest man.

For years she wandered over the earth and ocean, and though her disguise was penetrated several times and she passed through a host of troubles which vary with each telling, she succeeded in keeping up her hunt.

"There is a certain exquisite factory in our grandchildren's company. Betty loves everything I do. I seem to her witty, accomplished and gifted."

"The thoroughly trained English servant is in his way the most perfect kind of servant to be found anywhere, and in his station and for his duties he is not to be matched in the world."

"It is most amusing," said the metal-hurist, "how the world relies on metals for its metaphors and similes. Thus an orator is silver-tongued or golden-mouthed."

"Mamma Remembered. Papa (struggled) and Constantia, daughter, I've never in all my life seen so soft, green, unspotted, spoozy an idiot as young Paddington."

"A web two and a quarter miles long has been drawn from the body of a single spider."

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidneys. The kidneys are the filters of the body, and if they become weak, the body is poisoned.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative "ALL DEALERS" Russia leads the world in planting forests, America in devastating them.

Wedding Rings. Wedding rings were worn by both Jews and Romans at dates long prior to the Christian era.

Flower Essence. To extract the essence of any flower put the petals in layers in an earthen jar, covering each layer with one of salt.

Posters. Posters were originally stuck on posts; hence their name.

Plain Food. The man who enjoys plain food, says the Laprock, is miles ahead, physically and physiologically speaking, of the man who would leave his meal untouched if it were not that every item of it was calculated to "tickle the palate."

The Largest Serpent. The largest serpent ever measured was an anaconda which Dr. Gardner found dead in Mexico. It was thirty-seven feet long, and it took two horses to drag it.

The Peaceful Dove. In spite of the fact that the dove is the emblem of peace, a couple of cock birds of this beautiful species can give a very good account of themselves in a fight.

The Yellowstone Park. The Yellowstone National Park is sixty-five miles from north to south and fifty-five from east to west.

Fire Killed Wood. Government tests of fire-killed timber have demonstrated that this wood is good and should be considered as thoroughly seasoned timber so far as its use is concerned.

A Cunning Cricket. A hunter in tropical regions tells of seeing a cricket pursued around the trunk of a tree by a lizard. Suddenly the insect settled itself in a small depression in the bark, spread out its wings slightly and fastened itself so that the lizard actually crawled over it and went away without ever knowing what had become of it.

Ocean Drift. A box thrown overboard by the steamer Hunter was picked up twenty months and twenty-six days later, having drifted in that time a distance of 4,791 miles.

Trees and Lightning. Some trees are much more liable to be struck by lightning than others. Thus the oak and the elm are often struck and destroyed, but the ash is rarely struck, and the beech, it is said, never.

Spider's Web. A web two and a quarter miles long has been drawn from the body of a single spider.

CANADA AND JAPAN.

As a result of the trouble in British Columbia, a minister of the Dominion Government has been sent to Japan to discuss the subject of Japanese immigration with the Mikado's ministers. This action of the Government has called forth considerable discussion from platform and press. The stand and utterances of the leader of the opposition have not by any means clarified the atmosphere or settled the question. His own attitude towards the Japanese treaty, has rather hampered him in his attempt to make political capital out of the situation.

There are some who would like to see some drastic steps taken to stop the influx of our little yellow brothers and argue that while negotiations are going on, the stream of immigration will continue until the land will be flooded by them.

There are others who claim that this is a great and grave national question and must be dealt with in no hasty way, as in its present sensitive state, Japan can not be treated as one would treat an individual.

We in the East do not appreciate the question as do they in the West, for with them it is a burning question and one that is likely to overshadow all others in the forthcoming Dominion election, unless some satisfactory solution of the question be reached before that time. The friends of the government think they can trust their leader who has upon different and trying occasions proved himself to be the man of the hour.

GREAT BRITAIN AND RUSSIA.

The new treaty recently entered into between the governments of Great Britain and Russia, is one that has given much satisfaction to all concerned.

For a long time there has been a great deal of rivalry and jealousy between these nations which led to one most unfortunate war and on several other occasions nearly led to others. This treaty must put an end to all this.

No long since Great Britain entered into a treaty with Japan. One thing which led up to this was the fear of a Russian invasion of India. By that Japanese treaty, the government of Japan engaged, among other things, to come to the assistance of Great Britain in the event of such an invasion.

Now under this new treaty Great Britain and Russia have reached an understanding regarding the sphere of each in Asia, and entered into a solemn compact to each regard the rights of the other. This treaty renders the Japanese alliance of less importance than it has hitherto been, and so is regarded with greater favor by the anti-Asiatic in British Columbia, but must be gratifying to all peace loving subjects of both nations, and the world at large.

Fredericton, Nov. 8.—Three of the provincial government test wells being made in Sunbury county by Contractor Thomas Kent to see if water is obtainable by artesian well process for people along the river who claim that their water supply was spoiled by the legislature allowing the Fredericton sewerage to enter the river St. John, have been completed and another is now being bored. The latest one completed is on public ground on the roadway near McGowan's wharf. It was completed about four or five days ago, after the well had been bored 205 feet deep. Another well has been completed at Dr. Camp's, in Sheffield, where borings went down 230 feet, while the first well was bored at M. Mahoney's, Manguerville, where they went down 155 feet. Contractor Kent is now boring on public grounds at Oromocto. It has been learned that the rate at which Mr. Kent is working is $2.15 per foot, and the well on Dr. Camp's property cost $494.50 which many farmers of Sunbury feel shows that the cost of artesian wells for their farms will be greater than most of them can afford. On the three wells completed $1,268.50 has been expended, or an average of about $425.

"There's nothing doing, sir," she said.

The subject that seems to be submerging local political minds, at the present time, is to make a selection from those who want to be candidates and those who don't.
It is impossible to figure a very high standard in which to measure party allegiance, when such dazzling stunts are put on the boards by rule or ruin political comedians.
When a man writes a proposal of marriage to a woman, he has written something that will last forever. A woman never destroys a letter that contains an offer of marriage.
Ex-Prison Jernigan extracted gold from sea-water, and from other sources, it should be as easy to get latent heat out of coal ash. The sub-reservoir seems to lack the potent fire of Jernigan's genius.

Wednesday night the bottom seemed to have dropped out of the clouds, and the way the water raged through the streets made people feel like hunting up their arks. The sewers that are built and those not built, carried the water off and the streets were navigable, once more, for pedestrians.

An old man from Mace's Bay was in the drug store the other day and surveyed the handsomely framed portrait of His Majesty, King Edward which hangs on the wall. "Fine picture that of Dan Gilmor," he said admiringly. "That the King" shouted the druggist. "Can't hear a word you say, young man, but I know that picture of Dan Gilmor anywhere. Voted for him and his father before him and the old man picked up his parcels and walked out.

The rapid approach of winter brings up the question of winter sports. We have mentioned this matter several times and will gladly assist in any way to bring about interest in any of the many healthful out-door sports. The rink project seems to have met with popular favor and it is acknowledged that skating is the winter sport par excellence, but beyond the feasibility of the scheme and the admitted fact, that everything is in favor of such a move, there seems to be little interest in it. Apparently there is a great deal of apathy among those who are in a position, to very materially assist in carrying to a successful conclusion any project for the amusement and advantage of the younger element of the town. Let's have the rink.

The regular meeting of the council was held Monday evening with Mayor Lawrence, Aldermen Gilmor, Dewar, Murphy, Craig which, Goodell present. Report of town treasures received and placed on file. A number of bills referred to finance committee were recommended for payment. The street committee was instructed to complete work on Main Street.

The Sec'y of the Alms House Commission having resigned, he was instructed to hand over books to John McDougall for audit. Motion to insure town hall was carried. The Mayor reported work on town hall progressing favorably. $55 was ordered to be paid street commissioner. A drinking fountain was ordered to be put in at the cold spring. The matter of payment for entering sewers was left over till next meeting. Adjourned.

THE Broadway BRAND

The makers have studied Clothes making scientifically and perfected the details to such an extent as to render their productions faultlessly modeled and tailored clothes of quality.

The only difference between Broadway Clothing and the tailors is the price. He charges you about double and we defy you to distinguish the one suit from the other, either at close or long range.

Due respect for our departed loved ones demands that we erect not only

ARTISTIC but ENDURING MEMORIALS

Marble has proved such a failure that some cemeteries now prohibit its use. GRANITE is everlasting and our Egyptian Black Granite is far more artistic and expensive than any other granite. We have hundreds of beautiful designs from $4.00 to $4,000. Write at once for designs and samples if you are interested, stating about what expense you anticipate.

The result of our business shows that our Red and Grey Granites have a fine place on the market, and a detailed explanation why we are enabled to produce the best at the lowest price is unnecessary.

Frederickton, N. B. The record for New Brunswick moose has been broken, Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Providence, R. I., arrived here Thursday night after a three weeks' hunting trip near the headwaters of the Nepisiguit river, and had with him the head of a moose he shot ten days ago. Its antlers had a spread of 68 1/4 inches, which is the largest of which there is any record. The best previous was 67 1/2. E. C. Russell, an English sportsman, killed this season one with a spread of 61 inches.

The Daily Standard published at Eureka, California, October 7th, contained the following announcement: "Thos. Cottrell, the venerable father of Augustus and John A. Cottrell of this city, died at the home of the latter, on C street, at 6.40 o'clock this morning from the natural breaking down incident to extreme old age. The old gentleman was two months over ninety two years old at the time of his death, but up to a week ago had been comparatively hale and hearty. He was a native of Oak Bay New Brunswick, and in that province had been a noted man for he served as magistrate for forty five years and for eight years was a member of its legislature. He leaves besides the sons mentioned, two daughters, the Misses Olive and Marie Cottrell, the former of New York and the latter of this city."

At a meeting of the conservative party held Monday evening, the following persons were chosen as delegates to the convention to be held at St. Stephen to nominate candidates for the local house: A. M. Mealy, H. V. Cornell, Walter Messenett, Dr. Taylor, Henry Baldwin, Nicholas Meating, George Craig, Joseph McCormick and E. D. Harvey.

In Rimonski, Danjon, independent liberal, defeated Fiset, the choice of the liberal convention, by a good majority.

In Nicolet, Hon. Chas. R. Devlin, the new provincial minister of public works, was elected by 364 over Sevrigny, conservative.

In Montmorency, Hon. Alex. Taschereau, the new minister of mines and colonization, was elected by 825 over Berlier, conservative.

King Edward Lodge of Pennfield held a pie supper and dance on the evening of Nov. 5, which in every way was a success. The ladies' fur was worn by Miss Susie Tyler and was very warmly contested their being over 400 votes cast. Mrs. Alma Justain received 185 votes and Miss Tyler 199. The pies sold from $3.25 down. The amount realized was $86. Professor Mooney and daughter furnished the music, and dancing was continued to the wee sma hours.

Mr. Philo Hanson, who is generally successful in his hunting expeditions, eclipsed all his previous records on Monday by shooting a huge bear. Mr. Hanson, accompanied by "Lewey the Indian," was near Lily Lake, in search of big game, when he saw brain only a short distance away. One shot was sufficient to put him down and out. The animal was very large and the skin, which is a most excellent one, has a prominent place in Mr. Hanson's home and is undisputed evidence of his skill as a hunter.

WEDDING BELLS.

An interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Tatton, Pennfield, Nov. 6th, when their daughter Ada Belle, was united in marriage to Wm. H. Boyd. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. A large number of relatives and friends were present at the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. H. I. Lynds. The bride was beautifully attired in liberty satin, trimmed with Valenciennes lace. Miss Florence Greene of Eastport acted as bridesmaid. Mr. Everett McKay supported the groom. After refreshments were served, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd left a mid showers of rice, on a brief honeymoon. The newly wedded couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents.

Cat Did Not Come Back.

When the cat died, the whole family went into mourning, figuratively if not literally. No common back door cat this, but one that must be buried with all honor. The question was how and where.

Some one proposed cremation, but this was rejected on the ground that it sounded too much like lynching. It was finally proposed that the father, who had to cross a ferry every day to his place of business, should drop it overboard, and as a burial at sea rather appealed to the sentimental attitude of the family, this idea was received favorably.

The following morning, the remains of the cat were made into a package and securely tied. It was a lovely day, and the ferryboat was crowded with passengers, and what had seemed so simple at home assumed unexpected difficulties in the face of a curious crowd, ready to imagine anything and to put the worst construction on an apparently mysterious action.

Finally it occurred to the father that the best time would be the evening, and he could slip the cat overboard without attracting notice in the dusk. Through the day it occupied a corner of his office, what the man said who got the cat— and he was glad when the time came for the return trip.

He waited until the boat was well out in the stream and then, glancing around furtively, laid his hand on the package. Suddenly it struck him what would seem strange in broad daylight would seem doubly so at night.

With a smothered groan, he replaced it on the seat beside him. There was no help for it—he would have to carry it home again.

As he took his seat in the train that was to convey him the rest of the way, he placed the cat on the shelf above his head and for the first time that day forgot all about it. Hurrying to get off the car when he reached his destination, he was halted by someone behind him, who thrust into his hand the ill fated package.

When he reached his house, he threw it down on a chair in the hall and went in to supper. In the middle of it the maid came in and asked how she should cook the meat he had brought with him? "Meat!" he exclaimed. "That isn't meat! It's..."

But at this moment the maid produced the package and showed him a choice piece of meat. History does not say may do much to check evil tendencies, or to develop good ones, but it is a good thing to inherit the right proportion of faculties to start with. That man is rich who has a flavor of wit and fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is a man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a dispondent and complaining fellow, a timid, care-burdened man, these are all born deformed on the inside. Their feet may not limp, but their thoughts do. A man of fortune on the brink of the grave would gladly part with every dollar to obtain a longer lease of life.

NOT SO DULL

In a little village, there once lived a boy who was supposed to be dull-witted, says a writer in the Tatler. The men of the village used to find great amusement in offering him the choice between a threepenny bit and a penny, of which he invariably chose the penny.

A stranger one day saw him choose the penny rather than the threepenny bit, and asked him for the reason.

"It is because the penny is larger!" the stranger asked.

"Naw," was the response, "not 'cause it is the biggest. But if I took the threepenny bit they'd soon stop offering it."

Rich Without Money.

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of them with nothing in their pockets, and thousands without even a pocket, are rich. A man born with a good sound constitution, a good stomach, a good heart and good limbs and a pretty good head-piece, is rich. Good bones are better than gold, tough muscles than silver, and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function, are better than houses and land. It is better than landed estate to have had the right kind of a father and mother. Good breeds and bad breeds exist among men as really as among cattle and horses. Education

Odd Things Women Are Doing

Mrs. Leonora Lake of St. Louis has been addressing temperance meetings at Wilmington, Del., so successfully that the friends of license are afraid the city will go dry at a special election, Nov. 5.

Mrs. Jennie D. Hart, wife of Prof. Ed. Hart of Lafayette College, has asked for a divorce on the ground of cruel treatment. She is a Christian Scientist, as are her three children, and when they left the home of the professor in July he attributed their action to religious differences. This Mrs. Hart denies.

Riley Row, a farmer at Ravenwood, Mo., whose mother committed suicide years ago by shooting, recently found the body of his wife hanging from a scaffold improvised in the attic.

Eva Truesdell, a 17-year-old St. Louis girl, ran away from home to earn her own living because she thought that with the increased cost of living, she was a burden to her father. She was located and returned by the police.

Mrs. Charles H. West of Norristown, Pa., who had been haunting for her husband since he deserted her a year ago, found him when he married another wife and caused his arrest.

"I am married and please don't write or bother me any more. I have a home and can't afford to leave it for you. I

No Sponge Diving For Mike.

They tell a story from Tarpon Springs. An Irishman happened along one day during the sponging season and was employed by an American to dive for sponges, who thought he could man a boat with divers and make as good a stake out of the new mode of gathering sponges as the Greeks. Mike was willing, and the next morning, he was engaged in a diving suit, the helmet was screwed on his head, and he was lowered down some thirty or forty feet.

He went down well and bravely. He remained on the bottom some minutes then he signalled impatiently to be drawn up.

They drew him up, and he motioned for them to remove his helmet. As they started to do this, the foreman said: "What's the matter, Mike?"

"Take the darn lid off me," he replied.

"I'm done wid diving," he exclaimed.

"I never worra," was the excited answer, "at any job where I can't spit on me hands."—St. Petersburg Independent.

THE CZAR'S KITCHENS.

Tests to Prevent Poisoned Food Reaching the Royal Table.

No chef in all the world occupies a more peculiar position than M. Eugene Kratz, the little known but august cordon bleu who presides in the imperial kitchens of the Great White Czar. This remarkable man draws a salary rather larger than that of the president of the United States—about $55,000 a year—and has paramount control of the palace kitchens in all the homes of the imperial family, from Peterhof, the Antichoff, the Winter palace, the Tsarsko-Selo, all the way to Livadia, in the Crimea.

Six times a year M. Kratz makes the round of all the imperial kitchens throughout the empire, and his peculiar position may be realized from the fact that his social rank equals that of a general in the Russian army. Aid an army this wonderful chef certainly commands, with absolute authority—an army whose "weapons" are not the less important for being mere pots and pans.

Of course a culinary artist of such rank as M. Kratz does little or nothing at all with his own hands, but is rather an inventive genius, utilizing the palate of the emperor and his august guests, for when the autocrat of all the Russias wears of Russian, French, Italian and English dishes he must be tried with some fantasy such as chicken gumbo as made in New Orleans or some of the delightful sweet dishes of the Balkan states and Turkey.

It is well known that in the kitchens of the czar most elaborate tasting ceremonies are gone through, and when the czar is in residence at Peterhof, a palace about half an hour distant from the capital, not only M. Kratz himself, but also his under chefs and certain high officials of the imperial army, are called in to taste every dish that goes to the emperor's table. After each experiment a reasonable time is permitted to elapse to see whether or not the tasters are poisoned. This curious survival of other days comes down from the time of Ivan the Terrible—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A New Pharmacy Prescription.
 With the bottle of medicine the druggist handed out a slip of paper.
 "What is that?" asked the customer.
 "A list of the things you should not eat while taking this medicine," said the druggist. "Possibly the doctor neglected to give you instructions about that. Very often the doctors do forget. Druggists used to be equally careless, and most of them are yet, but we druggists are not to be accused of so many mistakes of which we were guilty that in order to save our own reputation and that of the drug trade in general we established a school of dietetics. In so many cases where complaints were made about the medicine not having the desired effect we were accused of using inferior drugs, whereas it was injudicious eating that caused the evil results."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Employs Deaf Mutes Only.
 Over on New York's east side a prosperous merchant engaged in the bottling industry makes a specialty of employing deaf mutes in his establishment. These silent hands are reported to be more industrious than is usually the experience with unafflicted labor. On an average, the deaf mute bottler earns higher wages than his fellow workman, and he is generally more economical than the latter. Both in perspective and receptive faculties the deaf mutes are said to excel as compared with those not so handicapped. In point of sobriety, the nonhearing, nonspeaking brother is reported to set an enviable example.—New York Press.

A Horse With an Annuity.
 A horse with an income is King, formerly owned by the late George C. Watts. He is now passing his old age on a farm on a monthly allowance of $150 left him by his former owner. Under the will of Mr. Watts, King was to have an allowance of $200 a year during the period of his usefulness and after that an income of $150 a month until his death. Billy, a pet dog, also received an allowance, but he died last February. Mr. Watts left an estate of $100,000, of which a part will go to charity, but the division of the estate has been delayed pending the death of the horse. King is twenty-one years old.—Chicago Tribune.

Ambergris.
 Ambergris is worth at present 60 to an ounce. Last year there was used about $120,000 worth of this peculiar substance in the manufacture of perfumes. It is a fatty substance of an ashy gray color with red or yellow streaks in it and is found floating on the sea or taken by whale fishers from the carcasses of the sperm whale. Much is also picked up on the shores of the Bahamas. It is generally agreed that ambergris is secreted by the sperm whale as the result of a disease. It is chiefly bought by scent makers, but is also valuable as a constituent of certain medicines.—London Standard.

The War Afloat.
 It is a sweet dream, but it will never come true. Humanity will forbid. The week after the empyrean warship is constructed, the Saturday Evening Post thinks the powers will meet at The Hague and agree that nothing more harmful than pamphlets shall be dropped from the flying monster.

 "Do you think," he asked her younger sister, "there is any hope for me? I have tried four times to persuade her to say yes, but she always puts me off. I shall not care to live if she finally refuses me."
 "Hope on, Charley. She may keep putting you off, but she's busy getting stuff for her wedding outfit."—Chicago Record-Herald.

How He Catches Them.

 "Well," replied the lawyer, "seeing that you are not in my line, I'll tell you. I look over the marriage licenses every morning and send my card around to the contracting parties."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J.
