The Next Papal Encyclical.

ROME, Feb. 6.-It is said the Pope will shortly publish an encyclical on the union of the Western and Eastern churches. The Pope traces the attempts that have been made to effect a union of the churches since the schism, and shows the endeavors of the Papacy to bring about a union. The encyclical indicates the political and theological obstacles in the way of effecting the desired end, and enumerates the advantages that would be derived by the Eastern church through a union with the Western. The Pope declares he is strongly in favor of keeping intact the rights, prerogatives, autonomy and discipline of the Eastern churches, for the Papacy though universal is not Latin. The encyclical concludes will be accomplished soon.

A SAD STORY.

Frank Finch, of Norwich, Drinks Himself to Death-Took the Gold Cure Too Late.

TORONTO, Feb. 7 .- A sad story of ruination by drink is that surrounding the death Monday, in the General Hospital, of Frank Finch, a hotel-keeper of Norwich, a town in Oxford county. Finch had a splendid business in Norwich for years and was reputed to be quite wealthy. He drank heavily at times and once, several years ago, he had delirium tremens. He was warned then by his physician that if a similar attack was incurred again through drink he would not live through it. Despite the efforts of his wife and daughter, Finch continued to take liquor. The mastery it had gained left him a helpless slave. Often of late he drank as much as 30 or 40 glasses a day, his friends say.

Five weeks ago Monday he came to Toronto with a friend, a Mr. Abrams. Finch's intention was to take the gold cure, of which he had long talked. He registered at the Empress Hotel and his friend went

The Big Prohibition Convention painful to hear. He had to be strapped in Toronto Begun.

> All Plebiscite Organizations To Be Continued.

Sir Oliver Mowat Interviewed by an Influential Delegation.

He Reiterates His Promise to Intro duce a Prohibitive Measure if the Constitution Gives Him the Right To Do So.

TORONTO, Feb. 6.—The first business in connection with the prohibition convention was a committee meeting which lasted all yesterday afternoon. This was the final meeting of the plebiscite campaign committee, and the small inner office of No. 56 King street west was crowded with men who had worked to bring the fight to a successful issue on Jan. 1 last.

The work which lay before the committee was to wind up the business of the committee and the campaign and to take action with regard to the convention which it had called. Both these items were attended to, and a vote of thanks to Mr. F. S. Spence, the secretary, for his services during the campaign was unanimously adopted, all standing up. THE CONVENTION OPENED.

The prohibition convention opened at the Pavilion this morning. The large building was crowded with delegates. Ex-Mayor Fleming presided. The morning was spent mainly in discussing recommendations of the committee which was in session yesterday. One of these advised that the county and the city organizations founded in connection with the plebiscite be maintained. This was carried without discussion. CONSULTING THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT.

The principal debate was around the recommendation that the Ontario Government be memorialized to promise to pass such prohibitory legislation as is in their Government in the afternoon.

Attorney-General.

THE DELEGATION.

A very large deputation then proceeded to wait on Sir Oliver Mowat. The principal point in the representations made to him was to demand of him that he would promise to grant at the earliest opportunity such a measure of prohibition as the courts may decide to be practical.

Sir Oliver received the delegation from the convention, and was heartily cheered when he appeared along with Hon. Messrs. Hardy, Ross, Dryden and Harcourt.

E. J. Davis, M.P.P., presented the deputation, and the first speakers were Rev. Mr. Kettlewell, F. S. Spence and Rev. Dr.

Mrs. Thornley, London, president of the W. C. T. U., followed. A public reform, she said it had been remarked, passed four stages. First it was a fanaticism, then an enthusiasm, then a great moral reform, and lastly a great moral victory. The prohibition movement had passed the first two and was now in the third. The deputation were there to ask that it be put into the fourth class. (Applause.) She spoke of the great change that had come over the moral tone of the country on this question. There had been a strengthening of temperance sentiment during the past few years, and though it might be ungenerous to say it here, a weakening of party ties. This, she thought, was a good omen. A Government that stands upon party prejudice was weak, while one that would stand upon the moral sentiment of the country was a good one. (Applause.) The majority in the plebiscite was larger than was expected. So far as the woman's vote was concerned she believed Sir Oliver would hear of it later-(laughter)-because the convention had arranged to have the facts with regard to it laid before him. Yet cramped and confined as the class was from whom the woman's vote came, 80 per cent. of it voted for prohibition. She believed Sir Oliver would never regret enlarging the woman's franchise, but, she concluded, they were now asking for the total prohibition of the liquor traffic. (Applause.) Mr. John Cameron, London, referred to the convention of which they were the delegates as the most influential and representative gathering ever assembled in Toronto. The people of the Province had voted, by 80,000 majority, for prohibition. What they meant by their vote was a threefold probibition of the manufacture, importation and sale. The delegates, to the number of 1,400, who were assembled in the city had decided to ask the Dominion and Ontario Governments to give the fullest legislation that it is in their power to give. "We ask each Government," he said, "to do the most that it has the power and jurisdiction to do." (Applause.) He concluded by saying that he indersed most heartily what had been spoken by his friends, Dr. Potts and the chairman as well as the president of the W. C. T. U.

SIR OLIVER'S REPLY. Sir Oliver was applauded heartily when he rose to speak. He said he had listened with extreme interest to the resolution and to the elequent words which they had just heard addressed to them. He recognized the great importance of the plebiscite. After so decided a vote as that he considered that no Government would be justified in disregarding it unless it were in favor of something that was not in the public interest, and he did not think that was the character of prohibition. (Applause.) He observed that it was being said that, after all, but a very small number of those entitled to vote had voted, but that was always the case in regard to every public vote taken. (Hear, hear.) The vote was a remarkable one-remarkable not only that the majority was 82,000, but when it was considered that the majority was almost as great as the total vote against. The vote, therefore, he declared, must be regarded as expressing strongly

Long ago, he said, he had perceived what a large amount of the evil in the world arises from intemperance, and as the years had passed he had seen more clearly that a large proportion of the misery, suffering, disease and poverty of the world has arisen from intemperance, and men who perceived this, but do not concur with them as to the wisdom of the method they adopted, must still regard their movement with the profoundest sympathy and respect. "I think," the Premier said, "that prohibition, if it is an experiment, and if not successful in all the States where it has been passed, is still worth trying." (Great applause.) The vote removed all difficulty about it being demanded by the people. Legislation, he reminded them, was limited by the demand of the people. There were many good things that public opinion was not educated up to and that were not, therefore proposed. But on this question the public have been educated, "I do not gather from the resolution that you have read," he continued, "nor the eloquent words that I have heard that you expect, or even, perhaps, desire that I should bring in any measure pending the ascertainment by the courts of our jurisdiction, and how far the Legislature can go. I stated my opinion strongly last year, and I hold the same opinion now, that that would not be in the interest of temperance, but quite the reverse. A prohibitory law under favorable conditions is not easy to enforce, and the difficulty is increased immensely if you add the difficulty arising from its being doubtful if there is a power to enforce it." This was not a case, he continued, where a few people were against the law. There were large interests and wealthy companies against it. It would be difficult to get convictions at all, and any that could be obtained would be appealed sentence while it was under appeal. There would be no limit to the drinking affairs. There would be drinking in licensed against, and it was impossible to enforce which would result under this state of and unlicensed places. There would be no restriction of it. "I have always been opposed," he declared, "to doing anything until I know what our jurisdiction is. When I know that I am prepared to act." It had been said that it would be better to pass an act and try its constitutionality by means of an action in the courts. That, however, was a cumbrous and costly method, while it was comparatively easy to get a decision by the means that had been adopted. He had promised to submit questions to the courts to obtain a definition of the powers of the Legislature. He had power at the earliest moment possible. A kept that promise. He explained the steps deputation was appointed to wait on the that had been taken, and showed how he had done all he could to expedite the mat-The convention occupied itself until 4 ter. The case was now set down for arguo'clock to-day principally in considering ment in the Supreme Court this month, the views that should be laid before the after which it would go to the Privy Council. In preparing the questions to be submitted to the courts he had tried, he said, to provide in them for every aspect, and in order to be sure that he was embracing everything in them that it was desirable for the temperance cause to have settled he sent a copy of them to Mr. J. J. Maclaren, who had returned them with the comment that he believed they covered everything. Concluding, he said: "As soon as a decision is reached by the Privy Council, at the first session thereafter, if the Privy Council decides that we have jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory law for the sale of intoxicating liquor, and I am still Premier, I will introduce a bill for that purpose. (Great cheering.) In case we have authority for a partial prohibitory law it is difficult to say anything, because we cannot anticipate what the power may be." Sir Oliver then read the following type-written statement of the Government's position: "If the decision of the Privy Council should be that the Province has jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory liquor law as to lowing session if I am then at the head of the Government. "If the decision of the Privy Council is that the Province has jurisdiction to pass only a partial prohibitory liquor law, I will introduce such a prohibitory bill as the sale, I will introduce such a bill in the foldecision will warrant. THE DEPUTATION SATISFIED. There was enthusiastic cheering when the Premier finished reading. The cheers and applause were continued for several moments. When it had subsided the chairman said to the Premier: "I am sure I need not say that your answer is every-thing to be desired." (Applause.)

Dr. Potts-Eminently satisfactory. (Ap-Mr. Hardy responded to the calls for him. "You do not want more oratory,"

Dr. Potts-Experience, then. (Laughter.) "The Premier has spoken my sentiments," Mr. Hardy proceeded, "he has spoken the sentiments of all the members of the Government who are in the city-they are all here. I need not say more." (Applause.) Mr. Ross was also called upon, but excused himself by saying he hoped to be with them in the evening at their meeting. Dr. Potts wound up the speech-making. "I am sure I voice the feeling of the whole deputation," he said, "when I say that we cordially thank you and your Cabinet for the spirit in which you have met us, and for the answer that you have given us."

(Applause.) The proceedings were closed with three cheers for Sir Oliver, called for by the chairman. The convention held a jubilation meeting this evening.

Farmers Indorse Prohibition. ACTION OF THE CENTRAL FARMERS' INSTI-TUTE. TORONTO, Feb. 6. - The Central Farmers' Institute began its annual meeting to-day. The business of the day was largely of a routine nature. One resolution which evidently sought to commit the institute to a declaration in support of the Patron candidates in the field though the organization was not named, was shelved without coming to a vote.

A resolution was passed calling on the Ontario Government to offer its limits in lots small enough to allow local saw mills to become purchasers. Another resolution calling on the Dominion and Provincial Governments to pass such measures as lie in their power for the total prohibition of the liquor traffic was carried with but two opponents.

THE BLACK KNIGHT IN TORONTO Pours Shot and Shell Into a Congregation-The Soloist Left.

TORONTO, Feb. 7.-The spirit of strife made its appearance Sunday night in Trinity Methodist Church, where the acting pastor delivered a heavy tirade to the congregation for not joining in the Lord's Prayer.

He was followed by the Rev. J. H. Hector, "the Black Knight," who spoke in a similar strain, and informed the congregation that all they seemed to care for were some fashionable soloists. This sally roused the ire of the leading lady in the choir, who walked out slamming the door behind her. An act which called forth some trenchant remarks from Rev. J. H. Hector, who continued to pour shot and shell into the congregation.

When he finished he was somewhat surprised to be greeted with applause from the congregation.

Important Declaration Regarding the Attitude of West Middles:x Temperance Men.

At the recent Liberal convention in West Middlesex, Mr. W. J. French, Glencoe, said he appeared as a representative of the temperance people in the west riding, and he would tell the Minister candidly in what he and his friends were satisfied and in what they were not satisfied. The dissatisfaction, he promised. was very small. When it was proposed to hold the plebiscite, he candidly confessed, some of the temperance electors did not like it, but even before it was taken it was recognized even by one-time objectors to it as the best possible means for ascertaining the public sentiment. "As to the way the officials are appointed," continued Mr. French, "we are satisfied that it is in the best interests of the people that the license commissioners and their assistants should be appointed by the Government. We believe that it would be disastrous to the temperance cause were the appointments to be made by the county councils or by the municipalities. I am directed to say that the temperance people are satisfied with the manner in which the license commissioners of West Middlesex are doing their duty; but I am instructed to say that we are not satisfied with the license inspector. Cannot he be more vigilant in the discharge of his duties? We want to support Sir Oliver Mowat, because we believe that the legislation of his Government has ever been in the direction (of moral reform and progress. I believe that you will find the people will back up Sir Oliver in further legislation in this direction. We believe that no temperance man would be justified in voting either for Mr. Leitch or for Mr. Murdock in this campaign, because they are not men who sympathize with our cause. We believe that your present representative, who has been a temperance advocate and a temperance worker all his life, will be re-elected by a large majority, and we are prepared to give him all the aid in our power." This declaration was loudly cheered.

To the Editor of the Advertiser: Allow me to contradict a statement made by Mr. Jones at the City Council meeting in which he states or implies that I had one of my hydrants leaking all last summer, and, to use his own words, was too mean to pay a dollar to get it repaired. Having spent a portion of the summer in British Columbia, and as some of my tenants are under rental agreement to keep water taps tight, I was not prepared to contradict his statement until I had investigated. Thinking it might have occurred without my knowledge, but hardly possible during my absence, and knowing the periodical visits our city inspector makes, I defy him or anyone else to prove the statement. But if he refers to the summer of '92, when I was a month in Halifax, he can get any information concerning that leak from the waterworks office, they having been notified to turn the water off, which they did. My wife not knowing the nature of the leak and expecting my immediate return, the matter was delayed a few days with the inspector's consent. I would advise Mr. Jones to size up his man and before making any such statement, casting reflections on our inspector and others interested, to investigate the facts, and give the public truth instead of wind. Yours truly, JOHN M. PARSONS.

Many are the reforms suggested and earnestly worked for by those who have a desire to see society better and purer than it is to-day, and who feel keenly the hardships which so many suffer through unjust and selfish laws. The temperance wave seems to be quite high just now, and it looks very much as if the drink evil in Canada would be buried beneath it. What effect this will have upon the social troubles remains to be seen. Quite a few social reformers advocate the nationalization of land and all the a large grocery business on the corner of Oueliette avenue and Sandwich street and a products of industry, believing it to be the few years ago had a store on Sandwich street only solution of the great problem; others east. In fact, those who concentrate their The late Mrs. (Dr.) McKinney, of Aylmer, was buried Monday in the St. Thomas cemetery. Her funeral was largely atenergy upon and give their undivided at-tention to the land question, plainly see that monopolies can only exist just so long as we recognize private ownership in the bounties of nature.

The single tax, or, more properly speaking, the placing of all taxes upon the value of land, is no doubt the key that will unlock the door of the great storehouse of nature, and open it up to the children of all men, and be the means of breaking off the shackles which now fetter labor the fitted with a stove and lighting service and is enjoying the fruits of his lucky find. The gas is of a good quality and would seem to promise a lasting supply.

We love the cause of labor because of the value of freedom to the laborer, but we love and fight for this freedom because it is the battle that will free art, literature, science ond religion. The fate of the wage-earner is the fate of all.

The single tax is simple and practicable. It first means that when a man makes a coat, builds a house, starts a business or paints his fences, we don't tax him; but when he holds a portion of the earth, whether it is a 25-foot frontage, or a farm on the surface, or a coal mine, a gold mine, or any other kind of mine under the surface, he pays a tax upon the annual value which the people of the community, or country colectively, have given it, whether he uses it or not. If he doesn't use it that is his funeral. It has a value made by the people, and if he does not use it, or put it to its fullest use, someone else would, so he certainly should pay the tax. By this system of taxation everyone would be taxed equitably and fairly, and it would be utterly impossible for anyone to escape taxation. Not that the individual would be taxed. but as we are all land creatures, and consequently must live upon the land and on what comes out of the land, not a man or woman, whether actual holders of land or not, could escape taxation. The farmer on 100 acres in Muskoka would be almost free from taxation on it, because a farm has little value there, apart from improve-ments. It would not be necessary for farmers to go away back into the wilds, leaving between his Mayor Hay, of Woodstock, has been awarded the contract for the Singer Sewing Machine Company's tops. Just where the work will be done is uncertain. There is a rumor to the effect that he has an offer of a farm and civilization immense tracts of lands, held unused by people who themselves live in cities, surrounded by all the advantages that modern so-called civiliza-

Our coal lands are monopolized by speculators who mine only here and there a part of a coal tract and so keep up the price of coal, while at the same time they pay labor a mere pittance for heaving it to the surface.

The land of our cities is held out of use or not put to its fullest use by speculators who wait till the bitter need of some other man makes it necessary for him to pay the price which satisfies them. Everywhere is an artificial scarcity of land, and thus the poor man of the city pays tribute to ground rent collectors and tribute to the coal, king through the monopoly price of coal and worst of all finds his wages kept at residing a few miles out of town. It is starvation point by the bitter competition known that Mr. Wile had a narrow escape of people like himself seeking a chance to work.

Speculation in land, whether on the surface or under the surface, means the getting from some one else of a value not earned by the speculator. It means living upon some-

I experitax and without molestation, but the natural value of land, the site value, the enced great pain and weakness, which, despite all efforts of different remedies, value of the mere monopoly of any mine, lot or location, is not a product of indi-vidual skill or industry and belongs to the grew steadily worse and for two months 1 suffered terribly. I could not properly digest my food and got little sleep at community and is to be taken by a tax. To bring the change about, and set industry free and to discourage monopoly the single tax would be levied upon this site value of land irrespective of improvements. This would be done by the exemption of all personal property from tax, and by increasing the assessment on land values. It would thus exactly reverse the present system, for it would bear heavily upon the speculator in land and lightly on the industrious. It would tax railways, as all other monopolies, upon the annual value of myself completely cured, and from that out | their monopoly, not upon the value of their accommodation to the public needs.

This simple reform involves the most radical and far-reaching changes. The first effect would be to cheapen land; the speculator, seeing that the taxes on his land values were being raised in proportion as all nervous diseases are readily cured by a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink begin to improve or else sell to someone begin to improve or else sell to someone who would. With cheaper lands the farmer and the working man generally would find it easier to buy, and with no they will be sent post paid on receipt of 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2 50 by adtaxes on houses, etc., would have less trouble in building a home.

The solution of the labor problem lies in freeing labor by breaking down monopoly in mines, forests, building lots and farming land, and in thus opening wide to labor a thousand natural opportunities to employ itself. With nature thus brought into competition with employers, wages would naturally rise, the worker could make his own terms and his fear of poverty would be gone. His prosperity would instantly react upon all lines of legitimate business, which would also be free from taxation, and thus good times would infallibly dawn on all willing to work.

With the adoption of the single tax, other social reforms can be brought about quite readily; but leave the land question unsettled and monopolists have nothing to fear. We as single taxers, therefore, ask your co-operation in this great and good

HOW TO RESTORE PROSPERTY TO THE DOMINION,

The disintegration and unrest that has set in among the former supporters of the policy of high taxation in Canada was remarked upon by Hon. David Mills in his speech at the mass meeting of Young Liberals in Ridgetown on Friday night last. There is, as the honorable gentleman remarked, disorganization and dismay in the ranks of the men who foisted upon Canadians the policy of increased tax burdens as a means of benefiting the people. They are "forming new organizations to make political warfare upon those whom they regard as the authors of real or fancied | 100,000 people have within ten years been mind, while yet a general election conflict to that city, where has been the gain? It has not arrived, men are in a mood to listen to an earnest and candid discussion of the unsatisfactory state of the nation, and to fairly consider any remedies which may be offered to produce a better state of affairs." It is a fair abroad, for the use of which a cerstatement that there is a marked difference between the position of the Liberal and Conservative leaders with regard to the policy of "protection," which has proved so signal a failure in Canada. Mr. Mills thus refers to what was promised to the electors if they listened to the voice of the high tax sirens:

"In 1878, when the people were fairly well off-comparatively far better off than their highly-protected neighbors to the south of them -- a number of our friends deserted us and joined the adversary, who have added $100,000,000 to our debt, $14,-000,000 a year to our taxes, and have driven from us upwards of 1,000,000 of our people. I remember well how many maintained that the Government ought to see that the farmer never received less than 75 cents a bushel for his barley, nor less than $1 a bushel for his wheat. Sir Charles Tupper informed the country that no men were fit to govern it who could not create national prosperity amidst general depression, and that the people ought not to bestow their confidence upon men who could not create a ready market and good prices for all the farmer could produce. Sir Charles admits that he has failed, for he has retired from the business. The country has need at this moment for the fulfillment of street, in putting in drains and burying water those promises. And to talk about patriotism or a British market to men who remember the promises which were made, who believed them, and supported with the enthusiasm of real believers those whom ade them, is in the last degree disappointing. It is a beartless mockery of those who have been shamefully deceived."

Localizing the evil results in an interesting calculation that may well be applied in other counties, the member for Bothwell thus brought the loss sustained home to the people of Kent:

"This county pays into the public reasury of Canada $175,000 a year more than she paid fifteen years ago. What has she to show for this additional burden? In what way bas it made her better off? Her rural population has not increased. The lands of the farmer have decreased in value. All that has been spent within her borders on Government works and undertakings would amount to but a mere fraction of one cear's increased taxes. I do not complain that public money has not been spent. It is a great calamity to the country that so nuch has been misspent. You could not money lost in bricks, and mortar, and mend it here without adding to the burdens wood, and hardware, and glass, and which of the country, a dollar for every cent so in many cases represent the savings of expended; and so you would have the evil greatly intensified. What we require is that you shall stop your taxation; that you shall leave the money with the people to whom it belongs, for them to spend as their interests may demand. Do you think that the farmers from whom this money is annually taken would hoard it all? Not a bit of it. By far the greater portion would be spent in such purposes as would promote their interests, or satisfy their tastes. There would be improvements more melancholy spectacle in a new counmade which they now cannot afford; fences built, orchards planted, buildings erected. which now have no existence. See what the effect of this would be upon other classes; the purchase of lumber, the purchase of nails, of paints; the employment of carpenters, of masons, and of other mechanics and laborers. The greater portion of the money so earned, before the goods dealer for necessary domestic supplies. Can you put against this enormous expenditure of at least $150,000 by the individual cultivator of the soil the corrupt waste of $20,000 or $30,000 on a public building once in half a century? And yet it has been by appeals of this kind, as debasing and corrupt as they are foolish, that men in towns are sought to be persuaded that it is to their interest to perpetuate this absurd and corrupt system."

The aim of the Liberal party, in its de-Mr. Mills:

"We have started out under the conviction that the lighter we are taxed the more easily we can travel, and we are not disposed to further increase our obligations, but we aim at diminishing our burdens, inviting all who will to join us, and leaving every man the unrestrained builder of his own fortunes. We do not expect that we can make the idler or the spendthrift or the reckless man prosperous, but we hope to leave each one free to build up his own fortune by industry and prudence, and to permit him to retain it so ong as he can honestly do so."

Public money may be properly spent to open up the country and to cheapen transportation; but Mr. Mills pointed out that in recent years vast sums of money had been spent with little or no gain to the taxpayers. The immense territories opened up have, so far, a sparse population. "Men have come and gone," he said, "like pilgrims of the east. We have not even retained our own population." He con-

"In a few instances cities have grown, but the population in our rural districts has, in many places, diminished. This is an unhealthy condition of things. The growth of towns and cities should be the outcome, the expression, of the prosperity of the rural districts. They do not come into existence to diminish foreign commerce, or to undertake the industrial work which is more efficiently and more cheaply done elsewhere. There is ample room in Canada for manufacturing enterprise, springing from our necessities, peculiar and indigenous to the country, and suitable to our needs. A city population that grows in consequence of Government interference may be anything but evidence of prosperity. It may imply the withdrawal of capital required for carrying on business in the surrounding country. It may also represent the withdrawal from the same localities of many thousands of people into a city where they fail to find profitable employment."

In adducing the experience of Toronto at the present time as an illustration, the honorable gentleman asked:

"Has Toronto grown as New York, Detroit or Chicago has grown, by the addition of a large foreign population? Most assuredly not. Chicago adds immense numbers of foreigners to her population every year. They bring with them some capital: they bring with them the power of producing by labor a considerable amount of wealth beyond that which disappears by consumption. A country may gain in material prosperity something by the migration of her own population from districts where that population is dense to districts where that population is sparse. But when removed from townships and towns lying within a radius of 100 miles from Toronto does not exist. Let me point out to you the loss. Consider the millions of dollars which have been withdrawn from this outside area, from business moderately prosperous, but which for a time was embarrassed by this withdrawal. These millions have been replaced by money brought from tain sum is annually exported. What has become of the capital taken to Toronto? Much of it has been wholly lost. Many thousand dwellings have been erected for which there are no tenants. The erection of these houses has necessitated the building and paving of streets, the laying of water mains and other necessary works for the health and convenience of the people in a modern city. See what an enormous addition has been made to the city debt and the serious burden imposed to meet the interest upon it. Toronto, then, has been a center where many millions have been lost by private persons, and where many millions more have been sunk by the corpor-

"You have a large area of country denuded of its capital, and you have that money carried to the city and much of it lost. You have an immense sum borrowed that in the present state of affairs is also lost, and you have the income of the population taxed to pay interest upon capital brought from abroad to replace the domestic capital which has disappeared and the foreign capital which has been wasted. Toronto has grown of late years, but it has grown by the addition of people drawn into the vortex by a boom. Does anyone doubt that men employed in making miles of mains and gas pipes would not have been more profitably employed in draining and cultivating fields, in erecting buildings and fences, and in feeding stock for the domestic and foreign market? It may be these men, for the moment, would have had no more to spend for the purchase of drygoods and groceries, of hardware and paints, than they have had as residents of Toronto. But they would have been paying to the merchant money received in exchange for the products of their industry, and for the obtaining of which the country incurred no liability. For ten years the propertyholders of Toronto, have been paying out for labor, moneys borrowed, and for the repayment of which their property is pledged. What they have received for merchand ise is not income but capital, and every man in his senses must see the great difference this must make in the wealth and prosperity of Toronto and the 20,000 square miles of territory which environ it. I think I am within the mark when I say that more than half the dwellings of West Toronto Junction are vacant; and can anyone be so infatuated as to believe that the years, has not along with poverty and distress, produced a mischevious effect on scores of towns and villages throughout the country? You may depend upon this, that when a man has put all that he possesser into a house which he deserts, because he has found it impossible to earn the means of subsistence in the neighborhood, and when he is forced to leave the place the chances are that he try like Canada, where there are illimitable areas of unoccupied land, than to see towns deserted, the edifices of which represent sufficient capital to furnish homes for a population large enough to occupy the area of a whole township, and in the case of this city the area of a whole year ends, goes to the grocer and the dry- | desire for residents of towns and villages to see them become active business centers, but care must be taken that in the promotion of this view visionary schemes are not adopted which must end in embarrassment and failure. It is, he remarked, a popular notion that the expenditure of public money on public works and undertakings is in itself advantageous; but this very notion, cultivated craftily by interested politicians, has, as Mr. Mills termination to promote the public welfare points out, done more than anyby reduced taxation, was thus stated by thing else to increase our burdens, depreciate the value of our property, to expatriate our population and impoverish the country. One place cannot be thus helped out of the treasury without causing a demand for expenditures in a hundred other places similarly situated, and the bribe of a public building or a new postoffice in a place where the public revenue is small and it would be easy to hire a building for a much smaller annual expenditure, is always costly for the general taxpayer. As Mr. Mills well puts it:

Mr. Mills conceded that it is a laudable to you that we have long struggled age inst

"How is it possible that you can have diminished taxation, freer commerce and a greater industrial stimulus if the money which the people should retain is being constantly expended in this way? For it is undoubtedly true that the tens of thousands who earn the incomes they have will make a better use of their money, will confer upon their neighbors greater benefits by its expenditure than would be conferred if the whole was put into the hands of some Government official, to be spent upon some undertaking begun mainly to strengthen the friends of an administration in some locality which is a pivotal point in a con-

Such expenditures are sure to destroy selfreliance, to multiply the public burdens, and to end in corruption. Not only should such expenditures be narrowed, but Parliament should abstain from interference with the conduct of a man's business. Mr. Mills expresses this view thus:

"In modern times there are two mischievous schools of economy, the one claiming for a man the right to that which he has not earned, and which the party who has earned it, and to whom it rightfully belongs, is not willing to bestow upon him: the other extreme is a denial of the right to possess to the full that for which the party has labored. Either view may be upheld by legislation, but neither can be supported by any sound rule of ethics, and both are acts of spoilation. Apart from that which we inherit from others, we have nothing which industry does not produce; and it is to the industrious man that the reward should go. We must also bear in mind that the stimulus to labor is in the proportion of capital to labor; for the more abundant the capital is the greater will be the demand for labor; and it must always follow that the wages increase with the increased demand

If attempts are made by means of a taxation policy to direct well-established British industries to our shores, they must. in Mr. Mills' opinion, fail, unless the operation is conducted at a great loss to the people of the Dominion as a whole. "The great need of Canada to-day," said Mr. Mills, "is a population to take possession of and cultivate her waste lands. Settle these lands and you have not merely an agricultural population, but you have carpenters and joiners, brick-makers, masons, painters, tanners, shoemakers, blacksmiths, tailors, dressmakers, merchants and scores of others engaged in various pursuits." Mr. Mills thinks we may yet be shipping our wheat flour to China to sell in exchange for the tea, rice and cotton of that country, and he has faith in our future as a woolen manufacturing country. Says he:

tains is becoming a sheep growing district. On the western side you have as you approach the coast, a climate not unlike that of England, mild in the winter season, humid throughout the year, and one which may be found like that of England capable of admitting of the highest style of woolen manufacture. You know that with the same workmen, and with the same machinery and material, we cannot here produce woolen goods of the same fine texture and the same fast colors that can be produced in England. The water, the light. the condition of the atmosphere forbid. But the climatic conditions of British Columbia are very different from ours, and this difference may give to her industries a different complexion. We shall rejoice in the prosperity which she may obtain from her natural advantages. We want to see her become populous, wealthy and prosperous. This, however, we know to be the case, that industry, intelligence and high character, will secure prosperity to a people far less favorably situated than we are. And if we possess these, in spite of the mistakes in the past, in spite of the burdens which we have rashly and unwisely as-and keep in step with the foremost communities of our race. No one can deny Mr. Mills' assertion that the people of this Province have been most highly favored by Providence. "We have a good climate, a fertile soil and the advantages of a most favorable geographical position, and we are the hub of North America by virtue of that position." But even the fertile county of Kent, in which Mr. Mills spoke, has been kept back, and its growth of prosperity and population retarded by the dispersing of her sens and daughters. This has arisen from the hampering of trade, the compulsory decrease in the purchasing power of the people and the acceptance of visionary schemes to insure prosperity. Mr. Mills reminded his bearers that every class and calling was hurt by the following out of class legislation. He sumed, we may still regain our lost ground,

"What is good for the farmer is also good for the merchant, the mechanic, the manufacturer, the laborer, whether skilled or unskilled. The merchant is not helped by a dull market and bad crops. The manufacturer is not helped by a monopoly that gives him a high price, but which gives him impoverished customers in diminishing numbers. He may be apparently more prosperous for a short period of time, but in a long series of years he is far less prosperous, because his customers are far less numerous and far less wealthy. It would indeed be a calamity if instead of moving on as an organic body, diversified but united, animated by a healthful public spirit, cordihas also left the country. I know of no ally supporting and trusting each other, we divide into Ishmaelite factions, bent not on the redress of grievances, but on the possession of power, seizing it as an enemy might a citadel; not to give peace and security to the adjacent country, but to establish the domination of one class over another; not giving to the country perfect freedom and perfect equality before the law, but a change of masters. Let me say the monopoly of trusts and combines, and it has not been to give to any other class the power now wielded by the one in possession. It has been our aim to put an end to this inequality and to emancipate the country from this thraidom, and to put it, so far as it is possible for the law to do so, in the power of every man to become the author of his own prosperity, the builder of his own fortune. As it is with the individual so is it with the community, and it is a wholly false notion that men of different callings can never trust each other in seeking to pro-mote the general welfare. We must take a more just, a more generous, a more Christian view of the relations of the different members of the State towards each other. We must seek to discover for the time being in what direction the public welfare lies, and travel in that direction together, whether we be mechanics or merchants, farmers or workmen, doctors, lawyers or clergymen. Human nature is the same in all classes, and the human heart is equally capable of generous thoughts or mean suspicions. By which shall our conduct be governed? Which shall we make the basis of political sction? For my part I hold that that equality of treatment and impartial justice is the highest wisdom. I ask my fellow-countrymen to assist me in establishing the government of the country upon this basis as the one upon which it ought to rest."

Noted Masonic Event in London Last Night.

son during the last two laps of the two-mile | Hon. J. M. Gibson, Chief Head and Ruler of the Craft, Warmly Received.

> Address of Welcome and Speech in Reply-A Fine Musical Programme-And a Good Hop-The Reception a Complete Success.

Last night the most worshipful, the grand master of the Masonic body in Ontario, Hon. J. M. Gibson, M.P.P., paid his first official visit to London on the invitation of the eight lodges of the city and suburbs. The blue room in the temple, where the grand master was received by the brethren, was crowded, several hundreds of the fraternity being in attendance. While the proceedings were in progress there the lady participants were conducted through the various halls of the other Masonic bodies by an energetic committee, at the head of which was Right Wor. Bro. Geo. C. Davis. The lady visitors enjoyed themselves investigating the wonderful wherever found, but rumor has it that no one stumbled across any signs of the proverbial goat. Right Wor. Bro. P. W. D. Broderick, D.D.G.M., presided in the Blue Room, and was supported by Right Wor. Bro. A. W. Porte, chairman of the reception committee, John Boyd (Belmont), J. S. Dewar, R. W. Barker, A. B. Munson, R. B. Hungerford, Col. Lewis, John Simpson, Very Wor. Bros. M. D. Dawson, J. D. Clarke, Ed. Burke, Jos. Hook, O. J. Bridle and A. Rowat (Nilestown), Wor Bro. Ben Allen (Toronto), and a very large number of worthy brethren, the various chairs being filled by the present masters of the city lodges.

THE WELCOME. R. Wor. Bros. Porte and Dewar were appointed a deputation to introduce the grand master, who was received with the grand honors. The D. D. G. M., in welcoming the grand master said: I can assure you that your brethren in London have looked forward with pleasure to your coming among them. We believe that your coming to London will not only be profitable to the eight city lodges that join in the welcome, but give you some degree of pleasure as well. It is through no lack of cordiality on our part that your visit has been so long delayed. I can assure you that I voice the sentiments of every Mason in London when I say that we feel we are welcoming to the midst of us to-night one of the most deservedly popular, if not the most popular, grand master the Grand Lodge has ever possessed. (Applause.) We can assure you that London district is loyal to the core not only to you as Bro. J. M. Gibson, but as chief head and ruler of the craft in this extended jurisdiction. (Cheers.) R. Wor. Bro. Porte then read the follow-

"Most Worshipful Sir and Brother,-The brethren in London and suburbs greet you with a hearty and fraternal welcome on this your first visit to the Forest City since your unanimous election to the Grand East of Craft Masonry in the Province. They are not unmindful of the fact that your manifold public duties to the Province By Canadian Advocates of Irish Home must necessarily occupy a very large portion of your time. The welcome we offer you, however, for your kindness in complying with our desire at present is all the more cordial, and we trust that you will you so ably preside. "M. W. Sir,-Be pleased to convey to Mrs. Gibson and family our fraternal friendship and good-will; and coupled with the hope that both may be long spared to each other, we beg you to accept this addresss as a token of our esteem and regard, on behalf of the Masons of London.

THE GRAND MASTER'S REPLY. The most worshipful the grand master, on rising to reply, was cheered. He said: was told that a reply is expected from me, but owing to the lateness of the hour, and the fact that I never prepare a Masonic speech that I can deliver as prepared, I will speak but for a few minutes at this time. Let me say now, R. Wor. Bro. Broderick, that I thank you and the worshipful brethren, officers and brethren for the most hearty and cordial reception which you have given me this evening. My visit to London has been on my mind for a long time past-I may say ever since it has been my fault that I have not come to this hospitable city before now, because I have been frequently requested by many kind friends in the London lodges to arrange to visit you, and have promised to do so. I am personally acquainted with a good many of the London brethren, and in no part of the jurisdiction do I feel more enter upon anything like a speech with reference to the common purposes which we have at heart would be injudicious on my on behalf of the jury, rendered an open part. We have a musical and literary programme in another part of the temple, and we have to consult what I know must be lood poisoning caused by injuries, but the wishes of the ladies who are promenador by whom he received said injuries | ing this atructure at the present time, as we are ready at all times to do. They are waiting patiently for us to proceed with the programme in which we shall have their company. (Applause.) Before sitting down, however, let me thank you very heartily, not only for this magnificent and cordial reception, but for the sentiments contained in the beautifully-engrossed address which has been presented to me. I appreciate it, and shall treasure it for all time to come most heartily. I cannot assume, for the moment, that all which is said in it is deserved by me. There are some statements, however, that I will admit are really well-founded. I am not, by any means, a very skilled grand master, but I try to perform the duties which devolve upon me to the best of my ability. I aim to act promptly in all things pertaining to my office. Promptness lessens labor, but there is a tremendous amount of work -work that would be intensely interesting to me if I were possessed of more leisurewhich I am not able to perform. Visits like this to the well-known Masonic centers, such as London is, are extremely enjoyable. Meeting brethren whom I have long known, and extending the circle of acquaintances by making new friends, to a man who is an enthusiastic Mason must ever be a source of great pleasure. I would have liked to visit the craft more extensively than I have been able to do. You cannot, however, expect me to emulate my worthy predecessor - a grand master who illustrated most foreibly how much substantial work can be accemplished for the craft by a man who has both time and inclination to undertake it. (Applause.) On behalf of my wife, who, observe, you have most kindly referred to in this addeess, let me thank you with all the enthusiasm I am capable of exhibiting. (Applause.) When I married her, perhaps I need hardly say, she was not a very ardent admirer of Masonry. (Laughter.) It took a good deal of argument to soothe her and to familiarize her with the inconveniences of Masonry. (Renewed laughter.) But when I was elected to the deputy master's chair-a post of honor that is regarded as generally leading to the Grand East-there could be found few, if any, women who took a greater interest in the craft than she did. And I am not exaggerating when I say that now my wife has the greatest respect for Masonry. (Applause.) No one takes more profound satisfaction, or feels prouder of the fact that I am the grand master of so strong a body than she does. I will have great pleasure in conveying to her the most kindly sentiments which have been expressed to her. And now let me once more thank you most heartily for this warm welcome to the Forest City. (Loud and long continued applause.) The secretary (Wor. Bro. Morgan) read letters of regret at unadvoidable absence, through illness, from M. Wor. Bro. Col. Moffat, past grand master, and R. Wor. Bro. J. J. Mason, grand secretary.

R. Wor. Bro. Broderick announced that the grand master was pleased to grant a dispensation enabling the brethren to wear their regalia in all parts of the temple that evening. An adjournment was then made to the banqueting hall, which had been tastefully decorated, and where there followed

Campbell also gave an attractive recitation. All the pieces were artistically rendered, and by the plaudits of the audience show to be highly appreciated. Rt. Wor. Bro. Porte presided, and introduced the grand master, who had an even warmer reception than was extended to him in the hall below. He briefly thanked the audience for their generous welcome, and said he would carry very pleasant memories of his visit away with him. At the close of the concert, the concert room was clearned, and an hour or two was enjoyed in dancing to the music of the harpers band. During the evening refreshments were served in the adjoining long room. The event was a thorough success from beginning to end. It was brought to a close at an early hour this

London, Feb. 7. WEEKLY REVIEW.

About the only change of any consequence that we can see in the grain situation since our last weekly review is a decline in the value of oats of about 2c per 100 lbs. Receipts of al kinds of grain have been moderately good.

In provisions the market has not changed much outside of a decline in eggs. They seem to have settled now at 14c to 16c by the basket.

In means the amount of business done was heavy; prices fluctuated considerably, and reasses of beef sold from 5c to 6c; poor Poultry was steady. Turkeys were easier and sold at 8c to 9c per lb. Apples continued very scarce, and sold quickly at $1 25 to $1 50 per bag.

Potatoes were easy at 65c to 75c per bag.

Clover seed came in sparingly, and a few lots sold at $6. Timothy seed sold from $1 50 to $1 75.

Hay sold easier towards the close of the week at $7 to $3 25.

Straw ranged from $2 50 to $3 50 per load, according to brightness or size. General quotations are as follows:

John Swan & Sons, in their weekly report of Jan. 19, say: Supplies of fat cattle at all the principal markets continue large. The exceedingly cold weather operates against the state of trade in the meat markets, consequently prices throughout have been in favor of buyers at a reduction of 10s a head. The quotations from the English markets continue similar to those here. Supplies from Ireland are very small. Fat cows and bulls recovered the fall of last week, There have been over 700 States cattle at Yorkhil, which are reported to have met a worse trade. The numbers of fat sheep on offer have been about the same as last week, Owing to the unfavorable weather buyers were very cautious the same as last week. Owing to the unfavorable weather buyers were very cautious and limited their purchases, and prices fell from 1s to 2s each. The few lambs on offer this week were not quite so good quality as last and they made up to 45s. Calves—A very large show, but the quality was very indifferent. Best made full prices; secondary decidedly cheaper. There was an active demand for pigs and higher prices realized. For good descriptions of store sheep and cattle there is a good inquiry, but secondary sorts, more especially of the latter, are difficult to quote. There has been a very large show of milchicows, and, taking numbers into consideration, a fair trade has been experienced at prices the turn in favor of buyers. Best beef, 7s 9d the turn in favor of buyers. Best beef, 7s 9d to in some cases 8s per stone; secondary, 7s per stone. Best mutton, 7id to 9id per lb; secondary, 6id to 7d per lb.

Tancock, Milligan and Wilkins. -The Week of Jan. 26 devotes five columns to an interesting review of the character of Caius Julius Cæsar from the pen of A. Burris Gahan, a 17 year old pupil of the London Collegiate Institute. In his criticism on this celebrated personage he draws conclusions from Shakespeare, Plutarch and Roman history, and presents a most creditable and well-written essay in every particular. The Collegiate Institute is to be congratulated on the honor done to one of its pupils in receiving so much space from a journal of such well-known literary standing as The Week, and it is safe to predict a brilliant future in the world of letters for the author of the article. Come again, Master Gahan.

-The annual meeting of No. 1 company, Seventh Fusiliers, was held in the armory of the company at the drill shed on Monday evening, with a large attendance. The company has had a very successful year, the shooting match at the "Clay Banks" and the trip to St. Thomas being the principal events. Color-Sergt. Freeland presented the financial statement, showing a clear sheet and a good balance on hand. The following committees were appointed for the ensuing year: Recruiting, Corp. Hogg, Ptes. E. Hessel, Seadman and Brenton; rifle, Sergt. Osmond, Corp. Palmer, Pte. F. Hessel; amusements. Sergts. Osmond, Footit, Corps. Hogg, Palmer, Pte. E. Hessel, Col.-Sergt. Freeland acting on all the committees. A vote of thanks was passed to Col.-Sergt Freeland for the able manner in which he conducted the business of the past year. Refreshments, speeches and songs were then in order, and with three cheers for Capt. Graham the company retired.

The London club (Alerts) will be constituted as follows: Weber, Quinn, catchers; Sheere, Hiscot, pitchers; Burton, first base; Johnston, second base; Player, third base; Arthur, short stop; Ball, Hynd, Farnsworth, outfield. Hutchinson, Handley, Sheppard and Delaney, who played last season, will not be on the leam. There will be no outsiders employed on any consideration. The players will be purely

'At the annual festival in aid of St. Mary's Orphans'Home, Hamilton, last week, Bishop Dowling, speaking of Dr. Burns, of the Wesleyan Female College, who has hosts of friends in London, said: " One year ago I was upon the Atlantic. I was bearing a message to the Holy Father of love and affection, and nothing pleased me more than this, that when I left Hamilton among those who were kind enough to be at the station to wish me godspeed was a Protestant clergyman, and when I said to him: 'And what message shall I carry to him my kind regards and wish him long life, health and happiness.' That was Dr. Burns. (Applause.) And when I returned I brought back the Holy Father's blessing to all the citizens of Hamilton and particularly to Dr. Burns."

In reply Dr. Burns said: "There is one word I want to say about religious technicalities, and it is that the Lord will not allow any technicality to come in the way

As we stood up for the last hymn I saw the old sexton hobbling forward to get the offertory plate, and Harry feeling in his pockets. I remembered the ten-pound note. and groped for my own purse, but found I had come without it. Harry seemed to have no small change about him, for after a moment of hesitation, he began trying to detach the lucky sixpence from his watchchain. His poor trembling fingers could not manage it for a minute, and in response to my mute gesture he took the chain from its button-hole, and held it out for me to do. The old sexton was approaching so quickly that I was a little flurried, and the moisture still in my eyes made them a little dim; and it was only as I gave the watch-chain back to Harry that I discovered I had taken off the wrong bit of money in my haste, and dropped the old Dewcaster Roman coin into the plate, instead of the last year's sixpence. I felt very vexed at my carelessness, for I knew how Harry valued the little coin, and it had touched me greatly to see him still cherishing it; and I watched the clergyman as he bore the plate towards the altar, wondering if I should stay after service and ask for it back, or whether a note the next morning would do as well. I saw the rector reach the altar, and bend forward to lay the plate upon it. Suddenly the whole church was lit up with a vivid flash of light, which showed lurid and clear against wall, and pillar, and oaken pew-and a clap of thunder so violent that it rocked the church to its foundations, and seemed to fill earth and air and

One instant of half-unrealizing terror, and all was still again-only a cry from the frightened schoolchildren in the gallery, and the rector raising himself from the chancel floor where the violence of the shock had hurled him-and the offertory plate and its contents-a mere molten mass of shapeless metal-lying in the further corner of the sacred enclosure.

"I am not hurt, my friends," said the rector, the first to recover his self-posession, "only somewhat shaken by the force of the electric current Let us offer our thanksgivings for this merciful preservation of us

When we rose again, after the few words of closing benediction, Harry was still kneeling, his head leaning upon the book-rest of the pew, and his face hidden. He kneit there so long that I felt a little anxious, my nerves being a good deal unstrung by the events of the evening; but just as the last clatter of village shoes ceased to echo back from the stone porch outside, he stood up, and strode out of the little narrow pew. His step was so firm and so steady that I glanced up at him in wonder, and was struck by the sudden change in his expression. He was deathly pale, but his eyes were shining with a new light, and there was in all his bearing a calm confidence, a resolute serenity which field me with a of mine had the Dyspepsia very bad, she trembling joy.

I paused a minute at the gate to speak to the old sexton, who seemed terribly overcome by the late adventure.

"No, Mr. Coates ain't no way the worse, savin' for pins and needles all over his arms and legs, and a headache, and sich. But that there plate's ruined-clean ruined-just a clear lump o' metal—coppers and silver and the bit o'gold Mr. Coates put in hisself -can't tell one o' them from t'other, all one lump, and so hot still, as you can't tetch him with a ten-foot pole. What with that gret crack in the tower wall, and the hole in the chancel tiles, there'il be a pretty penny to settle; and the lightnin' rod, as Mr. Coates says must be put up immediateockin' the stable door after the horse,' says I; as we never needed no lightnin' rods before, and I here, man and boy, goin' on for seventy year. Well, well, times is changed -what with the earthquake last spring at Biddeswell, and this here lightnin' stroke to-day; for never before in all my days did I see a bolt fall from a sky wi'out a cloud

I looked up, surprised. Sure enough, the wide sunset light glowed upon an unbroken sea of blue, wherein one or two faint, tender stars were just beginning to shine. I turned mechanically towards the little wooden bench under the churchyard wall.

"No, not there," said Harry, speaking clear and low; there was such a touch of his old masterfulness in his voice, that my heart leaped up to meet it. "I'll walk home with ou, darling. I want to talk," and he passed his hand under my arm as we turned.

'Darling!"-it was twelve long weary months since I had heard that sweet name from his lips, and the sound blotted out all the suffering that had ever gone before.

"Something has happened to me-I can't tell what. I feel a new man since I've met you to-night. That awful pain has gone from my head all at once—and the weight and the horror. Something seemed to give way when that thunder-clap came-I thought it was death, and was glad to die beside you, till I found it was only life coming back. It's so strange-that thunderstorm on the moor was the beginning of it all-and this has ended it. Never mind, it doesn't matter how or why it's happened; it's enough that I am rid of that agony, and my own man once more. Darling! I've been thinking of what you said just now-you're right, I feel; it's never to late to begin again. I've made up my mind what I'll do. They want troops for this Soudan business. I saw it posted up in Colchester last week. I'm going to enlist to-morrow for the East. What? No, darling; no, Kits-no sitting down at ease for me while the past is unretrieved. I must win back name, and honor, and fortune. I must live down all that's gone before. And then, Kitty-then, darling, may I put back the little ruby ring into it place once more "Put it back now, Harry," I whispered, laying my cheek against the hand that held mine, in oh, how firm a clasp! "I've never been anything but yours, and I never could be; so, though I'll wait for you while you fight your battle, were it twenty years, I might as well wear the sign on my finger that I belong to you alone.' Well, well; there isn't so much to tell, after all. Harry took the Queen's shilling the next day, and when I parted from him on my way home to mamma, he was in the uniform of a private soldier. I wouldn't let him put that shilling on his watch-chain, in the place of the Roman coin, as he wanted to do, so he had it made into a brooch for me, and I wear it as my proudest ornament to this day.

I fear my poor fellow had a hard time of it, rather—it's always rather a rough road through the ranks for a gentleman; but he got on splendidly, and his constant letters were always brave and cheerful. It was a dreadful trial when he went off to Egypthe was just corporal then, and I felt it a terrible hardship that his kit wouldn't allow of his taking a hair-brush!-but all that time of hopeful waiting was as nothing when compared with that awful hopeless year before. He was color-sergeant before the battle of Et Teb, and was promoted on the battle-field to lieutenant for his gallantry in saving his colonel's life, at the risk of his own-and he got the V. C. too, so that even mamma's opposition went down before such brilliant success; and when Harry ex-changed into the Second Wiltshire, now in India, and wrote that he didn't think he possibly could wait till he had a chance of getting leave, there was no very special outcry at my instant declaration that I meant to start in the next P. and O. steamer.

Colonel and Mrs. Maylands came down to Bombay to meet me—it was so wonderfully kind, but it seemed as if they didn't know how to be good enough to Harry after all that had gone by. And when we got to Jubblepore, and I put my head out of the carriage window, and saw Harry's brown face in the station, all joy and eagerness to welcome me—it did seem as if all the dreadful past were but a vanished dream.

It seems more dreamlike even this evening, as I write in the broad veranda, with its shaded swinging lanterns, and the full, calm moon outside. It is all so silent and so peaceful, like our own restful hearts-one could not believe all we had borne and suffered, if they only saw us now. And a little bit further this way. The shadow hides you when you sit there—and you know I'm wretched when I can't see your

And of all the shadows we have passed through, and the darkness that is left behind, there is no trace left this evening but the deep, grave look under the laughing lightness in my dear Harry's eyes, and the rent fissure in a little seacoast church tower in Essex, where they still point to it in all the country round, and tell in awed voices of the thunderbolt that fell there, out of the cloudless summer sky, and melted the plate and the offertory in it, as they lay together upon the altar.

A Man Made Happy .- GENTLEMEN,-For five years I have been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the pit of my stomach was almost unbearable and life only seemed a drag to me. When I would go to sleep I would have horrible dreams, and my life became very miserable, as there was no rest either day or night. But with the use of only two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY this unhappy state has all been changed and I am a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may be the means of convincing others of the wonderful curative qualities possessed by this medicine, that are specially adapted for the cure of Dyspepsia. A lady customer could scarcely eat anything, and was troubled with pains similar to those I suffered with; and she cured herself with two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGE-TABLE DISCOVERY. I wish you success with your medicine, as I am fully convinced that it will do all you claim for it.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription

> H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it." SEE TO THIS. It cannot be too fully impressed upon citizens of London-and more particularly upon young men and new comers-that the only qualifications required to get on the Ontario voters' lists now being revised are: (1) That the applicant is a British sub-

(2) That he is 21 years of age; (3) That he is at the present moment a esident in either of the six wards of the city of London; and

(4) That he has had a residence in the Province for the last twelve months.

Examine the lists any day or evening at the Young Liberal rooms, and satisfy yourself, or you may be without a vote in the coming elections.

-Mr. Robert Berry, of London West, is recovering from the edects of a kick from a colt, which cracked three ribs.

-Mr. C. L. Young, formerly of Hamilton, has accepted a position with his brother, Wm. Allen Young, of this city. -Next week her Excellency Lady Aberdeen will be entertained at Hellmuth Ladies' College, of which institution she is a patron.

-Miss Flora McDonald, formerly of Shelbyville, Ky., now of Nashville, Tenn., is at present visiting Mrs. John Hunter, 1071 Dundas street, city.

-The allocation of pews in the new Park Avenue Presbyterian Church was made last evening. There are still a number of good sittings for intending applicants.

-The Board of Education of 1894 meets to-night to organize for the term. The meeting starts at 7 o'clock, when the election of a chairman will be proceeded with at once. The candidates are Dr. J. B. Campbell and E. J. MacRobert.

-Mr. E. Tregenza, fireman, G. T. R., vishes to express his appreciation of the skillful care and the kindness shown his son by the staff of the General Hospital, in which the boy was a patient for over two months. Both the physicians and nurses, he says, showed him every courtesy and attention. -Do you tell us, O candidate for the custom of the community, that you can't afford to advertise because your business is dull? Listen! It is dull because you don't advertise, and you don't advertise because it is dull, so the vacant circle is complete. We tell you if you are doing ill to advertise that you may do well, and if you are doing well advertise that you may do better. -A deputation from the East Middlesex Temperance Association waited on the London Township Council on Monday, and asked them to pass a bylaw limiting the number of tavern licenses in the township to ten. Rev. Messrs. Little and Redmond, and Messrs. Knapton, Cranston, Robson, Coleman and Weekes addressed the council in favor of the request, but the council took no action in the matter.

-"Elizabeth Barrett Browning" was the title and subject of a lecture delivered in the "Y" rooms last evening by Principal Miller, of Huron College-the first of a series to be given under the same auspices during the next few months. The address was given previously in Huron College by the learned divine, and may be ranked among his best efforts. Principal Miller's scholastic attainments have been a notable gain to the literary endeavor and prestige

-A benefit concert was given in the City Hall last night by Messrs. W. Sales, F. French, Jas. Moran and a number of others. The proceeds of the evening are to be devoted to assisting a number of unemployed friends of the projectors of the affair, and judging by the large attendance a good sum will be realized. The programme consisted of songs by Sim Fax, J. O'Neil and G. Birmingham; whistling solo by J. Hughes; sand jig and wing reel by Master Tiny Morkin; sand jig by J. Shrimpton, and acts of contortion by Mr. F. Taylor. The trio, "Johnny Dugan," by J. Dismingham M. McKeangh and Messrs. J. Birmingham, M. McKeough and C. Reidy, was very funny, and created a great deal of laughter. After the concert an assembly was held, and a large number enjoyed an hour's dancing.

Christ Church Pound Social. The "pound" social held in Christ Church schoolroom last night was a pronounced success in every way. It was under the auspices of the King's Daughters, and the admission fee was any article suitable for distribution among the poor. The proceeds consisted principally of groceries and provisions. There was a large audience, and an excellent programme of solos, duets, drills, choruses and recitations was furnished by Misses Skinner, Phænix, Wright, Winnett and Maybanks. Miss Law gave a much-appreciated guitar sole. The rector, Canon Smith, presided, and addresses were delivered by Messrs. C. R. Sayer and T. W. Birks. Miss Winnett presided at the piano. The Betting Case. An Ottawa dispatch says: "The case which arose out of the $500 bet on the Carling-Hyman election in London has reached the Supreme Court. Mr. Trebilcock, who bet that Mr. Hyman would be gazetted, and notified Mr. Walsh, the stakeholder, before the election, that he withdrew from the wager, afterwards sued Mr. Walsh to recover his deposit. The courts below decided in favor of Mr. Trebilcock, Chancellor Boyd dissenting. On Saturday Mr. Travers Lewis moved in the Supreme Court Chambers on behalf of the stakeholder, for approval of security, allowing an appeal to the Supreme Court. This was opposed by Mr. Gemmill, both as a matter of discretion and on the grounds taken by the Court of Appeal, which had already refused the application in Toronto. An order, however, was made by the registrar in chambers approving the security, and thus permitting an appeal, which will probably be heard in May next." Mr. Trebilcock, who is backed by the decision of three courts, says he will defend his case to the utmost. "Robin Hood" on Monday Night.

An event of unusual importance in amusement affairs is the appearance at the Grand Opera House Monday evening, Feb. 12. of Barnabee, Karl & Macdonald's "Robin Hood" opera company. This is one of the largest and strongest musical organizations now before the public. It is an established fact that Barnabee, Karl & Macdonald have not in all their public career been identified with anything but the highest class of opera productions.

Absolute superiority has been their guiding motto, and a strict adherence to this principle has resulted in making them pre-eminent in American THAT COUGH Hood" company is an exemplification of their business m thods. It embraces 60 THAT COUGH artists, chosen by Barnabee, Karl & Macdonald from the wide field of American talent. There is a cast of principals that cannot be improved upon. There is a superb chorus of 35 fine voices, and there is an operatio orchestra to bring out the full beauties of the instrumental score. Also there is every detail of stage investiture, a full car load of special scenery, costumes, properties, etc., being carried. This is the way Barnabee, Karl & Macdonald do things, and it is an explanation of the fact that these gentlemen are so successful.

Miss Van Cortland improves in her methods year by year, and has wisely surrounded herself with a most capable company, including several specialty performers. The comedians, Warner and Streeter, are really clever artists. For to-day's matinee the old favorite, "East Lynne" is on the boards, and to night "Fanchon," a powerful play, will be given.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY PATRONS.

Annual Meeting-Election of Officers-Co-operation Discussed.

The annual meeting of the Middlesex county Patrons of Industry was held in the county council chamber yesterday afternoon. President A. F. Anderson, of Westminster, was in the chair, and there was a large attendance of delegates from the various associations. All the reports presented showed a gratifying condition of the order and an increasing interest in the work. Messrs. Mc-Cready, Shore and Bogue, a committee appointed to report re the purchase of the Meadow Lily Mills, to be run in conjunction with a co-operative store, recommended that the same be secured, as the concern is equipped with modern machinery. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President - A. F. Anderson, Westminster (re-elected). Vice-President - Thomas Lane, Dorchester.

Secretary-Treasurer-J. H. Alexander, Adelaide. Sentinel-Joseph Thomas, Caradoc.

Auditors-Thomas Knapton, London township, and Daniel Currie, West-Representatives to Grand Association-

J. H. Alexander, Strathroy, and B. J. Donaldson, Adelaide. In the evening a joint meeting of Patrons and workingmen of the city was held to take action on the subject of co-operation. There was a large delegation from the Trades and Labor Council, including Messrs. H. B. Keene, A. Gough, James Reardon, O. E. Brady, John Holmes, Wm. Carroll, Jas. Taylor, Wm. Donohue, W.

Bird, H. Pearce, John Summers, T. C.

Thornhill, Paul Wild, Henry Johnson, R. H. Hessel, Jas. Boyle and Frank Ardoe. Mr. T. C. Thornhill occupied the chair and Mr. George Wrigley acted as secretary. The constitution was submitted, and from it was gleaned the fact that the objects of the society were to prosecute manufacturing and commercial enterprise among the organized laboring classes in the city of London and Patrons in the county of Middlesex. The principle of operation in the society is that of co-operation among the members, who shall hold stock therein, on which dividends will be paid, and profits by sale of goods or otherwise, shared according to the amount of purchases, all sales to be made at current prices, and all business done on a strictly cash basis. The business of the society is to be managed by a board of nine directors. The number of shares to be issued is 1,000, to be increased as seen fit to an unlimited extent. The directors in six months from the time of commencing business are to declare a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. if the profits will so allow, the balance of profits to be distributed every six months, one quarter to be kept as a reserve fund and the remaining three-quarters to be distributed among the purchasers of goods during the term in proportion to their purchases in such a way that the shareholders shall receive twice as much as the non-shareholders its distribution. The constitution was fully discussed, and adopted with slight amendments. The following comprise the board of directors: From London-R. H. Hessell, H. B. Keene, Wm. Gough and James

Anderson, Westminster; J. M. Keiser, Delaware; Thos. Knapton, London; Jos. Thomas, Caradoc; and S. J. Henderson, Dorchester. Messrs. W. McCreadie, the Patron candidate of East Middlesex for the House of Commons, and T. O. Currie, grand vicepresident, addressed the meeting in support of the plan.
