Mayor Stevely Throws Light On Yesterday's Power Meeting.

BIG LIABILITY FOR LONDON

And All Other Municipalities Entering Into the Agreement Some ---Interesting Facts.

In spite of the fact that a proforms contract with the hydro-electric commission was submitted to the Western Ontario Municipalities Niagara Power Union yesterday afternoon in Toronto, there seems to be considerable uncer has a copy of the contract, and he emphatically declares that it will not do in its present form.

The other representatives are of the same opinion, and as a result City Solicitor Meredith, of London, and the commission's solicitor, Mr. Lobb, will work out a more useful contract.

Much Uncertainty.

"The contract as it stands will not do," said Mayor Stevely this afternoon to The Advertiser, "There is considerable uncertainty about some of the clauses in it, and that uncertainty day evening last, it is not likely that must be done away with. In many gravel will be used instead of broken cases the meaning is not very clear. stone, in the Dundas street payement. The only certain cost of power we have had from the commission is at the rate of $9 40 per horsepower at Niagara Falls, for a minimum of 12 volts pressure. They say that at that rate power can be delivered in Toronto at not more than $18. It will cost us more than that here, and it will cost the municipalities in the Western Ontario zone more than that.'

Pay at the Falls.

"There was one feature I never knew before and that was that we charges the council must certainly will not be any gravel used." must pay for the power at Niagara Falls. ### The Farmer Is King

Financial storms and disturbances generally level to the ground many business, Financial storms and disturbances generally level to the ground many business, manufacturing and financial institutions that were supposed to be as solid as a rock. The only ones who seem to hardly feel such storm or disturbances are the farmers, and especially the farmers of Ontario. The credit of no class of people stands so high with the bankers as the farmers. The owners of farms in Ontario are laying by money every year out of their surplus earnings. If you do not own a farm now, buy one and become one of nature's true noblemen—a tiller of the soil. We have farms in Ontario to sell—different sizes, prices, in every locality, and suitable for all kinds of farming. No. 5562-188 acres, Township of Glanford, County of Wentworth, one mile to

NEEDED AMENDMENT OF THE ELECTIONS ACT.

Hon. Robert Rogers, a member of the Manitoba Government, has been working himself into a passion over Hon, Mr. Aviesworth's bill to amend the Dominion Elections Act, and threatens to go to Ottawa for the purpose of organizing obstruction to its passage. The feature of the measure against which Mr. Rogers specially vents his wrath, is the provision. that in Manitoba and British Columbia, where the voters' lists are not prepared as in Ontario and the Eastern Provinces, the Dominion Government shall arrange for such a revision as may be necessary. Mr. Rogers pretends not to understand why the Western provinces are thus singled out for federal revision of the lists. ## EX-MAYOR RUMBALL PRESIDENT

The election of a secretary was referred to the executive. A consulting committee, to be composed of the Companies Which Secured Rights chairmen of the various subdivisions, was also appointed.

The New President.

In introducing the new president, Mr. Gibbons, referred to the splendid service rendered the party by Mr. Rumball. There hhad not been a more unselfish, zealous worker for the party dency.

Mr. Rumball felt it a great honor to be elected president. It was some ting of which to feel proud. He felt rather nervous in following Mr. Gibbons, who was a loyal Liberal, and who had done more for the Liberal was respected and beloved by the rulers of the country. Mr. Rumball asked for in introducing Mr. H. H. Miller, M. P., The leases in question, which the for South Bruce, chairman of the

Interesting Figures.

In the decade from 1887 to 1897, under the Conservative rule, the total trade of Canada amounted to $54,760, The imports had increased from $6,- 326,373 to $240,000,000. The exports had increased from $48,-000,000 to $120,000,000.

The total trade with Great Britain had increased from $15,000,000 under Conservative rule to $109,000,000 under the Laurier Administration. The railroad traffic, a certain indication of the progress and development of the country, had increased from 9 .-000,000 tons under the Conservatives to 38,000,000 tons under the Govern- least advertisement was the British ticulars and proofs thereof, and the ment of Sir Wilfrid Laurier during the preference which the Conservatives nature of the securities, if any past decade. #### Some Facts.

The present Government had been accused of extravagance, but that charge was not borne out by the facts. Increased expenditure did not necessarily mean extravagance. It was extravagance, if the money was spent unwisely. In the postoffice department, the expenditure had increased from $4,897,-783 in 1897, to $7,270,383 in 1907, an increase of 50 per cent. The revenue had increased, however from $4,311,243 in 1897, to $8,713,457 in 1907, showing a net surplus of $1,443,-667 in the past year, as compared with This increased expenditure did not argue extravagance, but rather shrewd business ability. (Applause).

A great deal of money had been the Liberal regime in improving the roadbed, rolling stock and terminals but the result was a surplus not a deficit as formerly. The railway commission had increased the expenditure of Canada. but not a single individual argued now that this expenditure was not wise, nor would they say it was extravagant.

of the Empire held its annual meeting recently, when a very large number were present.

The regent, Mrs. F. E. Leonard, presided.

The secretary read the annual report showing the year just closed to have been the most successful in the history of the society and giving in detail some of the work in which the ladies have been interested in during the year.

Prominent in this line is the school work. One object of the society is the instilling of patriotism in the youth of the country, and every year valuable prizes are given in the public and separate schools to the children writing the best essays on given subjects, always on patriotic lines.

It Is Worth Your Consideration

An intelligent gentleman, past t three-score-and-ten-years of life, remarked the other day, that he thought one of the greatest advances of modern times was the improvement in the conveniences, which nov made it possible to enjoy luxuries in modest homes. He meant especially bathrooms, plumbing in general, and heating of the home. Now just give the matter a good square, honest look and see what you think about it. We know what your conclusions will

morning and evening. JURY SAYS BABY DIED OF NEGLECT

Inquest on Body of Infant Found in Outhouse in the North End.

The jury which, under Coroner MacLaren, investigated the cause of the death of the infant found in an outhouse last Sunday in the rear of the residence of Mr. A. N. Hewitt, Richmond street north, brought in a verdict last night that the child was apparently born alive, but had died from neglect. Who its mother was the jury was unable to say.

Mr. Hewitt was first called, and stated that he lived on the northwest corner of Central avenue and Richmond street. His little boys, while playing in the yard found the baby in the outhouse.

Mrs. Helen Hewitt, wife of Mr. Hewitt, offered similar evidence. Miss Harriet A. Griffiths, a boarder at Mr. Hewitt's, was also examined, but nothing new was brought out. Born Alive.

Dr. Drake, who made the postmortem, assisted by Dr. H. A. Stevenson, expressed the opinion that the infant was born alive, although it had only lived perhaps a minute. It was perfectly developed. ment, Sergt. Murphy Thirtieth Regi-

HE afternoon tea was apparently devised for the especial benefit of women who cannot afford to spend much money in entertaining. If hospitable inclinations and the amount of one's income always went hand in hand, it would be a simple thing to invite our friends to our homes. Often, however, it is the woman who desires. most earnestly to show hospitality who has to be so careful in managing her expenses that there seems to be no money left for parties after the bills have been paid. That is, for big parties. The housekeepers whose only idea of a social gathering is one which includes a generous meal may well hesitate before they plan to issue invitations. Their common sense tells them that there is no reason in asking their Triends and neighbors to share in a big dinner or supper, when by so doing they must stint their families before and after the merry-making. More than this, since the majority of the housekeepers-the big majority, too-keep no servants, it is a good deal of a burden to prepare for a large party and clear up after it. For the woman thus hampered in money and service the afternoon tea is the best way of discharging her social obligations, and at the same time giving herself the pleasure of seeing her friends in her home. Simplicity should be the keynote of the afternoon tea. Dwellers in cities. whose surroundings and whose purses permit, may fill their rooms with flowers from a florist. The woman who cannot do this may move her house plants to positions where they will show to the best advantage. If she is where she can get green things to fill her vases and to freshen her room, so much the better. The house should be scrupulously and daintily clean, of course, and looking its best. The hostess should wear a pretty afternoon gown to receive her guests, but beyond this no "frills" are necessary.

The number to be invited to an afternoon tea may be regulated by the space at command and the teacups in the pantry. Except that a little more tea is put in the pot and a little more water poured on it, that the quantity of sandwiches made is somewhat larger and the proportion of cake bigger, there is no more to be done for entertaining forty than four. It is a mistake to ask more than the rooms can accommodate comfortably without prowding.

The difference in the manner of inviting may perhaps vary a little if a large company is to be asked. When only half a dozen are expected the invitation may be verbal. "Come and take a friendly cup of tea with me next Friday afternoon," you may say to a friend. If the occasion is to honor a visiting friend, you may add, "My friend Mrs.—— is visiting me, and I wish to have her know some of my friends here." Or, if you prefer, you may write a note to this effect.

Should there be a larger number to invite, write in the lower left hand corner of your calling card, "Tes b to 7," or "4 to 6," and the date. If a special friend is to be introduced, write in the upper left hand corner, "To meet Mrs. ____," inclose it in a card envelope and post it four or five days before the date of the party. Even if only half a dozen are to be invited you may pursue this method if you prefer it to the other.

al request of several correspondents.) for your tea need not be elaborate. To my own mind, it seems a great pity that the informal afternoon tea as we adopted it from our English cousins should ever have been changed into the big afternoon reception it now is in some places, where the dress is such as one would expect at an evening party and the collation is a heavy and expensive affair. Make your own afternoon tea simple, both to save yourself work and cost and as an example to those others who wish to entertain and have little money with which to do it.

BreadontheLoaf

At such a function as I am trying to describe tea is, as a matter of course. the principal if not the only beverage. Should you know, however, that there are some of your guests who do not drink it, you may prepare chocolate also-although this is not essential. I know of hostesses who entertain on a generous scale and have their drawing rooms well crowded on their at home days who offer their guests only tea as a drink. Save your chocolate until some time when you wish to give a "chocolate party" for your grown daughter or some other voung creatures who have not yet learned the solid comfort there is in tea.

TEA "WHILE YOU WAIT"

If there is some one at liberty to preside over the tea table in your drawing room, and if you have the equipment, it is always pretty to make the tea "while you wait," so to speak. For this a hot-water kettle and spirit lamp are needed, but if you are not provided with these,_ have your tea made in the kitchen and keep it under a cozy, as the wadded cover to the teapot is called. A good plan to follow is that of putting the tea into little bags of thin muslin which are large enough to permit the leaves to swell, dropping them into the teapot, pouring boiling water upon them, and removing them when the tea is sufficiently drawn. When this plan is followed the tea may be kept hot indefinitely at the back of the stove without becoming too strong or acquiring the stewed taste it gets if permitted to stand long on the leaves. Sandwiches or thin bread and butter are the correct thing to serve at your afternoon tea. The bread must be at least a day old to cut properly. and if it is close in texture, so much the better. Have a very sharp knife, butter the bread on the loaf, slice it as thin as possible, lay the buttered sides together, trim off the crust and cut your sandwiches in squares, parallelograms or triangles, as pleases you and as the shape of the slice permits. Lay a dolly on a wide plate, arrange your sandwiches on this, and. if they are to be kept any length of time before serving, throw a damp napkin over them to save them from drying out and put them in a cool drying out and put them in a cool place.

Thin bread and butter is really the only unswestened solid demanded at afternoon tea, but if you desire variety the whole field of sandwiches if open to you. One of the nicesi and simplest of these may be of brown as graham bread, spread first with outter and them with gream chases, which has been a little softened by oream and butter and seasoned lightly with salt and perhaps a little which pepper. If you wish you may make the sandwiches still better by dipping a crisp letture leaf in French diese ing and laying it between the slices you have spread them with the butter and cheese.

Chicken, minced very fine and made to a paste with melted butter and seasoned to taste, is also an excellent filling for sandwiches, and so is boiled ham or tongue, chopped and treated in the same way. A little sweet cream is a benefit to almost any of these sandwich pastes. does not mean that there must be a big variety of rich cake. I have clear recollections of one of the pleasantest teas I ever attended where the only sweet was a very delicious sponge cake, prepared by an old family recipe. A certain southern housekeeper of my acquaintance offers what she calls "Old Dominion pound cake" at her teas. It is invariable and it is the solitary sweet-but it does not go begging. If one wishes to launch out into fancy cakes there are many which can be prepared at home with little additional trouble. A knowledge of how to make fondant icing is a boon to the woman who aspires to fancy cakes at home.

Your bread and butter or sandwiches cut, your cake made, your tea planned for, set your table. This may stand in your parlor, if you please, and should be daintily spread with a pretty tea cloth and laid with a little dish of sliced lemon for those who prefer this to cream in their tea. Should you have but a few friends with you, you may waive formality to a greater degree than with a big party and give the affair a more homelike aspect by encouraging the guests to gather in a little knot at close quarters while they take their tea. In one home I know, where the parior and the dining room adjoin, the tea is spread on the dining table on the "at home" day of the hostess. Sometimes there are many guests and the tea is carried to the guests in the parlor; but if only a few are present they draw up cozily around the table and have a very jolly and informal time of it. In other homes I have known of guests being asked to a "jam tea," which did not mean preserves, but that those who were asked should come prepared to sit about a table-or to "jam" about it-and make a merry, free and easy meal of their tea

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

KINDLY let me know through rour helpful Exchange how to clean sponges. I have had several large ones given to me just as they were taken from the sponge fisheries. They have an offensive odor. Perhaps you or some of our many readers may know of a process of cleansing them.

In return I send a recipe for Orange Pie.

Cut three medium-sized oranges into thin slices; cover with a small cupful of sugar and bake as you would apple pie. Sift flour over the lower crust before putting in the oranges. Sweetening Rancid Lard

"M. E. B." (Gracey, Ky.) is having the same trouble I met with the first of January. I had a fifty-pound stand of pure country lard, carried over from last year. When it was opened it was quite rancid. I put two galions of cold lard in a large preserving kettle and heated it gradually. Meanwhile, I cut enough Irish potatoes to make a half gallon of Saratoga, chips when fried. As the lard heated, I dropped in a small piece of raw potato to prevent burning. When it was hot enough for frying purposes I put in all the potatoes at once, stirring them in with a wire egg-beater and taking them out as fast as they browned.

I then set the lard aside to cool and settle, and while it was still hot, I strained it through the cheeseeloth.

I must add this caution: Put the lard into a large vessel to heat. The water in the potatoes boils up furlously when they are heated in large quantities. If it were not so, the lard would be discolored by long cooking.

This treatment made my lard perfectly sweet.

My hame is in the Southland. My hus-This treatment made my lard perfectly sweet.

My home is in the Southland. My husband's business takes him often to the large northern cities, and he tells me often of the good oatmeal and baked frish potatoes he has had there. He says that the oatmeal is almost as coarse as rice, and that the notatoes are dry and mealy when the skins are removed. Will you tell me how to cook both? I insist that we do not set the same kind of oatmeal in our markets.

Mrs. J. H. McC. (Nashville, Tenn.).

You give us good news in the remedy for rancid lard. Do you suppose that the same process would take the taint from "strong" butter and make it available for cooking purposes? I do not approve of 'cooking butter" as a rule, but it is hard to condemn pounds of the valuable commodity to the soapgrease pot when it might be made tolerable for frying and seasoning vegetables by some method akin to that you describe. I wish some one would nake a test of the next lot of equivocal butter that falls in her way and report results to us.

There are divers brands of oatmeal. Some of them are, as your husband says, quite coarse—like the Scotch oat-meal, "parritch." which, a certain meal, "parritch." which, a certain statesman aversed, "was only fit for norses." But which the true Scot prefers to any other. Other brands, senerally the Iried, are ground more knety.

Cake Making

I read with much interest your directions for cake making. I, too, believe in strict measurements, and I know the rule in making cake is to cream butter and sugar. But here is a recipe for a cake pronounced perfect by my friends. It is a pound eake, and the butter and sugar are not creamed:

Break three eggs, whites and yolks together; add a heaping cofies cup of sugar; again beat thoroughly. Now a coffee cup of butter. Beat again and well. Sift together a level pint of flour with a quarter teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat hard until very light. If the batter be too stiff, add enough milk (cream is better) to thin the batter until it falls easily from the spoon. If these directions be followed implicitly you could not tell this from real pound cake. Be careful not to make the batter too stiff. I am a novice in cookery, and this oake tenuine pound cake.

A novice and already a composer.

A novice and already a composer. That would seem to prophesy a triumphant career. I congratulate and thank you.

The Polished Table

S ometimes there are ways of doing things that are so simple that we forget to employ the simple that we forget to employ them. Here is an instance: The polished mahogany dining table is a source of some anxiety and care in many households. An easy matter it is to keep it bright and unspotted if, after each meal, you wash it with cold water, using a sponge; then dry and rub briskly. This keeps the table top clear and bright and free from that greasy look that we often see upon indles in even well-regulated households.

White spots sometimes appear upon the poliched surface of furniture. Just

Then there was that Isabella Chetwynd who, after being divorced by Mr. Poole of Marbury Hall, Salop, married the late Viscount Combermere, the co-respondent in the case. Then there was Sir William Chetwynd, in whose divorce case Lord Llandaff was cited as co-respondent.

Dick Chetwynd's death recalls an odd suit which took place some time prior to his divorce and in which the plaintiff was a man of the name of Straus.

Engaged in the wine business, he first made the acquaintance of the Chetwynds by selling them a few dozens of wine. It was not long before the man, whose social ambitions were only equaled by his vulgarity, little jobs for them in the city, such as buying and selling stocks, etc.

In course of time Mrs. Chetwynd got tired of Mr. Straus. Perhaps his vulgarity and presumption ended by palling upon her, or perhaps she found some less objectionable factorum to do a "flyer" on the stock exchange.

Be that as it may, Mr. Straus was no longer invited to dinner, and when he called at Mrs. Chetwynd's house he was invariably informed that she was "not at home."

Exceedingly disgusted and annoyed, he thereupon resorted to the form of revenge which most naturally suggested itself to him. He sent her a bill for all the wine that had been supplied to her husband and which had remained unpaid. Mrs. Chetwynd denied the liability, on the ground that the indebtedness was not hers, but that of her husband.

Few people ever stop to consider what pallor to the countenance means. In the first place it indicates an absence from the manner in 1886, being accidentally blood of the rich, red, life-giving elements so requisite to health; and in the second place it indicates a weakened heart action. The tragedy blighted the whole sub-sequent life of the unfortunate son, could look at the heart of one of these who had thus, to his bitter grief, become a parricide.

Al. H. Wilson.

No announcement could be more welcome to the patrons of our local theater than to learn that the ambassador of German dialect, Al. H. (Metz) Wilson, will be here on Wednesday evening next, and that he will present for their enjoyment "The New Metz in the Alps"-the play of picturesque Switzerland, in which this popular median is scoring such a great success this season, and which will doubtess create as much public interest in this city as it has elsewhere. Like good wine, Mr. Wilson's reputation improves with age-as does also his wonderful singing voice, which is heard to great advantage in the rendition of several new songs that have been especially written and composed by Mr. Wilson for the "New Metz in the Alps," among the most notable of which is probably "Fairest Flower of All." This song promises to rival in popularity all his past successes, even "The Winding of the Yarn." Of the play itself much of interest can be said, for it contains so nice a blending of humor, pathos and sentiment that it touches the heart very closely. The scenes are laid in far-famed Switzerland, and the story is so cleverly told that anyone with the slightest imagination can for the time being dweil among these interesting people, who call the land of snow and ice home, and partake with them of their joys and sorrows. In the presentation of the play special attention is given to all the details—especially the smaller details, which have so much to do in the aggregate in building up a great and successful play.

Men cannot understand why this should be so. To them it is a mystery because in nine times out of ten this condition is caused by a serious feminine derangement.

A remedy is necessary which acts directly upon the organs afflicted, restoring a healthy normal condition to quickly dispel all hysterical, nervous and irritable conditions. Such is

Miner Entombed For 23 Days

THE STORY OF THE SCOTCH COLLIER, JOHN BROWN.

Lived for Three Days After Being Rescued-An Event of 1835.

Hamilton Times: On Dec. 4, 1907, three miners were entombed at Ely, Nev., in a shaft 1,085 feet below the surface of the earth. Fortunately, 24 hours after the cave-in which entombed them, it was found possible to furnish them regularly with food and drink through a six-inch pipe, and even a portable telephone through it, enabling conversation to be carried on. Grave fears were felt that the settling of the earth might break the pipe and thus prevent the success of the work of the rescuers. This, however, did not take place, and seven weeks after they safety to their friends.

This was a long entombment, but it gravestone in the Dailly churchyard bears this inscription:

Anything from Kipling's pen is read with avidity. Many Canadians will not agree with the sentiments expressed in the series of articles on Canada new being published, but they will read the "Letters to the Family," as they are entitled, if for nothing but Kipling's inimitable literary style: No living writer wields so virile a pen.

The Advertiser has purchased the serial rights to Kipling's letters, and they will appear in the Saturday edition. The first one The Eldest Sister," has been given in part in this journal and will not be reproduced in full. It is largely a political tract. With the second letter entitled "The Relatives at Work," Kipling strikes a less discordant note, and his real description of Canada begins. Here it s in full:

CRITICISM ON THE PAPER-CUT-TING BY GRADES I., II. AND III.

Perhaps I did not make it quite plain to you that you were to send in your trains of cars, automobiles and engines on 6 by 9 inch paper. I wish I had, for some of the huge mounts were terribly in the road. My desk fairly overflowed and I felt that they should have been put up the full length of a very large room away, so I could see them properly. They were all so very good, too, that it was a tremendous task to pick out the six best.

Although it makes the task of picking out the best ones very difficult, the closeness of the competition is gratifying, for it shows that the standard in each school is coming up, and that not only two or three gifted ones, but all the children taking part in the competitions, are being benefited. I wish you could all feel that a prize is not the thing that counts most. It is pleasant to win a prize, but the prize is not going to increase your powers of enjoyment nor help you to make a success of your life, while the striving to control your hand and make it obey your thought, and the development of your powers of observation and your appreciation of good things, are going to make for both joy and success in life. Therefore do not get discouraged. If you could see as I do how you have improved, that would be sufficient incentive to go on faithfully and joyfully. There is no doubt that if you go on trying your very best and never give up you will gain a prize, too, in the long run

So many rumors reached me about! the difficulty of your last lesson, that I was almost inclined to feel that perhaps I had strained to the breaking-point, my faith in your ability to come up to what was expected of you. But not a bit of if; you are to be depended on and my faith in you has but increased. None of the cutting was perfect; but

If they were managed that way on the road there would be more accidents than there are now.

One or two of you made shutters that would fold back for the windows. We do that sort of thing when we are constructing cars and houses from cardboard or stiff paper, but never when we are cutting a flat picture of anything. When we mix things in that way it becomes neither one thing nor another, like the bat, which is

Upon the whole there is only one warning you appear to need for cutting vehicles in future, and that is, to study wheels, try to make them in better proportions and place them more carefully. At least one poster should be made by each class that has sent in cuttings. They are too good not to be made use of in that way.
