BARNED'S FIRST HEARING IS SET FOR FRIDAY

ALDERMEN DOUBTFUL OF STAND

Compromise Candidate Is Expected To Take Field Against Mayor.

MANY MENTIONED

Ward Three Will Bring Out a Large Number of Candidates.

Permitted to simmer only slightly during the campaign of the provincial plebiscite last month, the municipal political pot shows indications of being brought to a boil on Monday, nomination day, and last-minute surprises were threatened today.

Possible candidates for all offices show a hesitancy in declaring themselves for office, intimating in most cases "that much depends on the other fellow." This spirit is clearly shown in the council itself where few aldermen have actually declared that they will definitely toss their hats into the ring.

Eleventh-hour efforts of the opponents of a second acclamation for George Wenige as mayor show more desire to compromise and join forces than at any time during the recent months. It is not improbable that several opponents for Mr. Wenige will be named at Monday morning's nomination meeting and the mayor's opponents hope to agree on one of these as their standard-bearer.

Many prospects have been named during the past month as opponents for the mayor in the coming contest. While practically all of these have, even after much pressure has been brought to bear on them, decided not to run hopes are still entertained in some quarters that a sufficiently strong candidate can be decided on.

S. F. Lawrason, Arthur Little, Ald. John Greer, Gordon Ingram, W. J. Stevenson and several other well-known men have been mentioned. Besides Ald. Greer, several other councillors have been suggested, including Frank McKay, John Anderson, Dr. L. H. Douglass and Edwin Smith.

From reliable sources, including workers from three different political parties, aldermen and former councillors, the Advertiser learned of joint efforts to oppose Mayor Wenige, and indications are that much may be done before Monday.

Nine May Run.

Few of this year's aldermen have come out flat-footed to declare their candidate in the coming election. "Anything may happen between now and Monday," is the canny way in which some of them side-step a direct query. However, it would seem today that possibly nine of this year's councillors will throw their hats into the ring on Monday. There is only one definite withdrawal from the field, and that is Nelson Walsh, one of the standard-bearers for ward two this year.

Ald. Allan Towe is the first candidate to definitely declare himself in ward one. He is a new man on the council this year, and was elected from a field of five. The two other councillors in this ward, Ald. Greer and Ald. Anderson, are still somewhat undecided.

"I don't want to vote for this, as my last act on the council," Ald. Greer was heard to say concerning one question that came up at last night's council, though it is thought possible that he may still be a candidate. But neither he nor Ald. Anderson have given a definite answer. A. R. Thrower, a losing candidate in the last election, is a likely starter, along with Frank Jones, a new man. Ex-Ald. John May was questioned

'Tiger' Denies He Challenged Lloyd George To Fight Duel After Conference Quarrel

Georges Clemenceau Admits Battle of Words, But Never Personal Combat.

SURPRISED AT STORY

Former French Premier Fails to Understand How Report Could Have Originated.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Georges Clemenceau made his bit of comment today on the Paris peace conference incident between the "Tiger" and Lloyd George, which H. Wickham Steed, in his recent book, described as culminating in personal contact between the two statesmen and a challenge to the British premier from the French leader.

"All I can say," Clemenceau declared, "is that all the members of the peace conference had heated, animated discussions frequently, but things never got to that point. I am surprised and astonished that Steed should have written it. I have known him for many years.

"But then, you know, his state of mind is rather agitated. I hear he was in Geneva for the last League of Nations assembly. The world's statesmen, you know, can promenade themselves in all the other cities of the world and come to a perfect agreement, but at Geneva—there they at once to begin to disagree."

"No," Clemenceau reiterated, "I do not know how such a story ever got started."

TRANSFORMER STATION WORK STARTS MONDAY

Total Cost of New Building Is Estimated at $16,000.

Construction work will be begun on Monday on transformer substation No. 4 on Carling street.

The new building, which will be erected on the rear of lot 118 Dundas street, will cost approximately $12,000. The land on which the building will be erected was purchased from the McIntosh estate for the sum of $4,000.

The building will be 20 feet by 60 feet and will be built of brick with facings of stone. The transformers will be placed in the basement, low tension wires and switchboard on the main floor, and high tension wires on the top floor.

Construction of the substation, which will be the eleventh in use by the public utilities commission throughout the city, should be completed about the middle of January, ready for the installation of temporary equipment, since it is the wish of the commission to get the station in operation at the earliest possible date.

The station should be completed and equipment fully installed early in February, or approximately the first anniversary of the opening of negotiations between the commission and the city council for the old registry office building, for which the commission offered the handsome sum of $10,100, but failed to secure the building.

U. S. Govt. Blazes Trail For New Overnight Service.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 15.—The government has blazed the trail for an eight to nine-hour overnight air mail service between New York and Chicago, both ways, it is disclosed by Carl F. Egge, general superintendent of the postoffice department's air mail division.

Routes have been mapped, way stations and emergency fields are being acquired; machines and personnel have been assigned; and all the powerful lighting equipment for night flying is being set up.

Colonel Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster-general, has ordered the new service installed early next spring, probably in April.

This, said Mr. Egge, "will give the government a double-track air mail system between here and Chicago," and with a transcontinental service covering 2,720 miles, will make a total of 1,905 miles over which night flying will be continuous.

POLICE AIDED THIEVES, PROBE JUDGE CLAIMS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—That the police knew the partners of thieves and permitted them to exist was the denunciation of Mr. Justice Coderre, investigation commissioner, who is inquiring into Montreal police affairs, this afternoon, following evidence which showed that secondhand dealers had received stolen property when there was god reason to believe that such had been stolen and had sold it back to its original owners, some of whom, in re-purchasing it, were acting under the advice of the police.

His lordship listened to many revelations centering on the business affairs of two secondhand dealers named Mendelson, and called the attention of the chief of police to these men in emphatic terms, declaring that he was absolutely convinced they were in collusion with thieves.

Arthur Bard, 23, was taken to a hospital with wounds in the head. Fighting was stopped only after four policemen had herded the crowd into the street.

CANOEIST FACES STORMS IN CROSSING CHANNEL

Associated Press Despatch.

Dover, Nov. 15.—P. C. Smythe of Toronto, who left Dover yesterday morning in a canoe, alone to cross the English channel on his way by canoe to Rome was caught in bad weather on the channel last night. After great difficulty he reached the South Goodwin lightship which picked him up.

The English channel was choppy and the atmosphere hazy when Smythe started from here on his paddling trip to the Italian capital but he faced the situation courageously and made good progress for some time. The channel, however, proved too much for him. He was aiming to land at Calais.

MILLERAND SAYS VATICAN POLICY NEEDS REVISING

Abolition of Embassy Is Provocation to Catholics, Millerand Says.

PLEADS FOR PEACE

"United France" Text of First Public Speech Since New Party Launched.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Nov. 15.—"United France" was the text of a lecture delivered by former President Millerand to the Paris Y. M. C. union last night. It was his first public speech since his new party was launched, and he seized the occasion to outline his program and criticize that of the present incumbents of office. After an eulogy of Woodrow Wilson, the speaker extolled the league of nations, which, he said, had "justified itself by results."

At the same time the league, as at present constituted, did not entitle France to reduce her defenses.

M. Millerand advocated reorganization of the French system of government, to give authority proper place within the limits of law. His criticism of the present administration was mainly directed against the recognition of the Russian Soviet and the abolition of the French embassy to the vatican.

The recognition, he said, he was unable to understand, as it was "moral encouragement to men who for years have not ceased to stir up revolt in our army, navy and workers' circles."

Abolition of the embassy to the vatican he termed "a provocation to the Catholics of France," adding: "Are we determined to have a recurrence of religious quarrels again? Six years have gone by since the victory. Our dead will not allow it."

TAXI-DRIVER VICTIM OF RUM WAR

BODY IS FOUND

Dead Man Strangled and Then Thrown Down the Mountain.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, Nov. 15.—The body of Fred Genesee, taxi-driver, who has been missing from his home in the east end of the city for two weeks, was found on the edge of the mountain half a mile east of Stoney Creek, this morning.

There is every evidence that he was murdered and the body tossed over the side of the mountain. He had been strangled with a towel which was found about his neck, his left eye was knocked out and he had a big dint in his forehead. It is not known how long the body had been there, but it is thought he was lured to his death about the time he disappeared.

The body was found by Sam Hildreth, who was graveling a township road. He had occasion to look over the mountain brow and saw the body. Coroner Thompson of Stoney Creek was notified and took charge of it. An inquest will be opened at Stoney Creek this afternoon.

It was while searching for Genesee last Saturday in the Albion Mills ravine that boy scouts found the body of Joe Baytoizae, who had been murdered, presumably by bootleggers. It is believed that Genesee may also have fallen foul of bootleggers.

A few years ago a series of murders shocked this district as far east as Niagara Falls. About twenty aliens were found dead in various places during a period of a couple of years. All were of alien birth and principally Italians, and a bootleggers' feud was believed to have resulted in their deaths. The two murders discovered last Saturday and this are thought to indicate a resumption of hostilities.

BOY SCOUTS CAMP CHIEF IS RETURNING TO AFRICA

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—Rodney C. Wood, camp chief of the boy scouts association of Canada, is leaving soon for his home in central Africa to resume his activities on his tobacco and cotton plantation.

Mr. Wood came to Canada at the desire of Sir Robert Baden Powell and his work has been of inestimable value to the boy scout movement in Canada. He is a big game hunter of note and served in the great war, but owing to ill-health he took leave and went to England. After being connected with the boy scouts in England, Mr. Wood came to Canada, where he has remained for the last two years.

ACCLAMATIONS LIKELY IN P.U.C.

No Opponents to T. M. McFarland and R. J. Webster in Sight.

With nomination day on Monday, present indications point to acclamations in so far as the members of the public utilities commission are concerned.

T. W. McFarland and R. J. Webster, the two retiring commissioners, have both announced their intention to stand for re-election, and since no names have been mentioned during the past ten days it would seem as if both will likely be re-elected without a contest.

Incidentally Mr. McFarland has contested only one or two elections since he was first chosen as a commissioner 12 years ago.

Mr. Webster was first elected to the commission two years ago, and is thus completing his first term.

P. J. Watt and Dennis Tallant, who ran for the commission last year against Jared Vining and Philip Pocock, the other two members of the commission, outside his worship Mayor G. A. Wenige, will not be candidates.

Mr. Watt left the city today for an extended visit to California, while Mr. Tallant is now a resident of Detroit.

Since the mayor is ex-officio member of the commission the identity of the fifth member of the commission will remain in doubt until after election day, unless, of course, Mayor Wenige is accorded his second successive acclamation as London's first citizen.

MENTAL HYGIENE BODY IS EXTENDING SCOPE

Greater Efforts Will Be Directed Toward Preventing Mental Defects.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Organized only six years ago, the Canadian national committee for mental hygiene has already met with a degree of success far beyond any the originators dared hope for, Dr. C. M. Hincks, medical director, declared at the annual meeting of the committee held here yesterday. But the great work of the organization lies ahead, its field a practically limitless one.

More and more will stress be laid on prevention, Dr. Hincks said. At the board of directors' meeting earlier in the day the sum of $30,000 a year for five years, was voted for the purpose of conducting research studies, particularly in Montreal and Toronto. It was also decided to carry on an energetic educational campaign, and arrangements were made for the appropriation of money for extensive mental hygiene activities in other parts of the dominion.

Owen Sound, Nov. 15.—Word was received in Owen Sound today of the death from burns of Rosanna Boyd, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Boyd of the village of Marr on the Bruce peninsula between Wiarton and Lions Head. The girl was preparing dinner for her father when a spark from the stove ignited her dress and in a moment she was a mass of flames. She ran to her father, who was working a short distance from the house. He tore the clothes from her body and extinguished the flames, but she had received fatal injuries and she died eight hours later.

F. BARNED'S TRIAL OPENS NOVEMBER 21

Preliminary Hearing Will Be Held in Niagara Falls City Hall.

APPEARS NERVOUS

Carefree Attitude Vanishes on Appearance in Court—Father Present.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 15.—Frank Barned, of London, who arrived here yesterday afternoon in the custody of Inspectors Ward and Greer of the provincial police, will have a preliminary hearing in the city hall here on Nov. 21 on the charge of murdering Smylie Muirhead, a resident of this city, who was run down and killed by a motor car operated by Barned.

Barned, who appeared before Magistrate Goodwin last night, displayed none of the carefree attitude indicated by despatches from New Orleans, and appeared to realize that his position was most serious.

Barned's father and his counsel, J. M. McEvoy, K.C., of London, were present in court last night and visited Barned in his cell.

Summonses are being issued today for witnesses who will give evidence for the crown in what is likely to be one of the most hard fought and interesting legal battles in the history of this city.

CONTROLLERS REQUEST OFFICIALS TO RESIGN

Heads of Hamilton Financial Departments Are Asked To Quit.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—The board of control today decided to ask for the resignations of the heads and deputies of the tax office, city treasurer's office, and auditor's office. The resignations are to be effective when accepted.

The six officials involved are: W. H. Davis, E. R. C. Bower, E. A. Dempster, W. A. Kerr, R. B. Griffith, and J. A. MacDonald. Advertisements will be published calling for applications for their positions. This action followed the presentation of the report of the auditors who investigated the city's books following the discovery of a defalcation of $50,000 in the treasury and the disappearance of H. S. Forbes, a clerk.

BILLOWY EARTHQUAKE DAMAGES JAVA HOUSES

Associated Press Despatch.

FIRST MOVE LAUNCHED FOR LIQUOR LEGISLATION

Canadian Press Despatch.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 15.—The first move preparatory to the introduction of the new liquor legislation for Saskatchewan was made yesterday in the legislature, when Albert Hermanson, government member for Canora, gave notice that he would on Tuesday move for a return showing the results of the vote taken under the provisions of the plebiscite act of 1924.

Armed with this return, members on both sides of the house will have the official figures of the vote in each constituency.

The sitting was one of the shortest on record, lasting exactly three minutes. In that time four cabinet ministers gave notice of their intention to introduce an aggregate of six bills Tuesday.

LONDON WORKMEN GIVEN PAY BOOST

BENNETT GETS $3,500

Workmen on the city relief jobs at the Western Fair grounds will receive 40 cents an hour, in place of their present wage of 35 cents, according to a recommendation indorsed by the city council last night. Sponsored by Ald. Frank McKay, the move was upheld by Ald. Douglass, Anderson, Drake, McKay, Bottrill, Hayden and the mayor. Ald. Greer and Ald. Shaw voting against. Three members of the council, Ald. Smith, Towe and Warren were absent.

The session was the last of the council until after election time. The present council will meet twice during December before the incoming councillors take office. Last night's meeting was only an hour and a quarter in length, and little else than discussion of committee reports was gone into.

McKay Opens Question.

Ald. McKay asked if it were true that the men on the relief work at the fair grounds were getting five cents an hour less than those engaged on sewer work. Engineer Near explained that the men were paid at the same rate as for tree-trimming last year.

"They were engaged by the public utilities," declared Ald. McKay. "We don't regulate their wages. It's only part time work. I'd like to see the old rate restored."

In explaining the action of the department, the city engineer said that some of the men on sewer work had asked to be shifted to lighter work. Some of them were not physically capable of doing really heavy work. If they wanted the heavier work they could have it. They worked nine hours a day with Saturday afternoons off, two shifts working week about. Later on, with dusk falling sooner, an eight-hour day, with full time Saturday, would be observed.

Supported by Greer.

Ald. Greer supported the 35-cent rate on the grounds that funds available could be made to assist a greater number of men than at 40 cents. Ald. Drake pointed out that the men received only $17.50 every two weeks for their work at the fair grounds. He contended that this was insufficient aid to the men, and when a vote was taken the council favored Ald. McKay's move by 7 to 2.

Salary increase to $3,500 for H. J. Bennett, assessment commissioner, was indorsed, the mayor being alone in the negative voting. Mr. Bennett is receiving the same salary now as his predecessor in office.

Standardization of salaries and classification of city hall clerks was indorsed. It was also moved that the new scale of wages to clerks be included in the estimates of 1925, the aggregate increase necessary by the revision of classification being $3,200. However, it was pointed out that saving had been effected in other phases of departmental administration.

Mayor Moves Report.

It was necessary for Mayor Wenige to move that the recommendation of No. 2 committee, in the matter of dismissing Building Inspector Piper, be upheld. When the report was read, no one would make the motion, and the mayor was forced to put his hand to it as mover. On the evidence submitted, the council, with the exception of Ald. Greer, head of No. 2 committee, voted to uphold the mayor's motion. An added clause, that the department be placed under the supervision of the city engineer, was indorsed with Ald. McKay voicing his disapproval.

On the motion of Ald. Douglass, permission was granted the G. W. V. A. to use another portion of the city hall basement as a cardroom, and authority was given to use a small grant for decorating work.

Schools will be secured for use during the election campaign of the coming fortnight, authority being given last night for the holding of eight public meetings, two in each ward.

WOUNDED BY BULLETS, WOMAN NOT IMPROVING

Mrs. Jennie Shaw of Aylmer, 45 years old, who was brought to Victoria hospital on Wednesday suffering from two bullet wounds in the abdomen, was reported today to be in an unchanged condition, little improvement being shown since the time of her admittance to that institution.

Mrs. Shaw accidentally shot herself with a 32-calibre revolver, and little hope is held for her recovery.

CANADIAN ELK COMING TO SPRINGBANK ZOO

Expected Pair of Animals Will Arrive in City Around Christmas.

It is quite possible that the Springbank zoo will number among its inhabitants on Christmas day a pair of Canadian elk (cerbus Canadensis)

In a communication received from the federal department of the interior this week it was learned that as soon as the elk were shipped from the National park at Wainwright, Alta., the department would so inform the authorities here.

Though the elk have been promised the commission for some months past, due to the energy of Frank White, M.P., it has been impossible to forward them from Alberta, owing to the fact that cold weather is essential for the shipment of such animals.

PROSPERITY SEEN THROUGH FRANCE

W. N. Manning Tells of Impressions Gained on European Tour.

W. N. Manning of the Sherlock-Manning Piano company has returned to London from a two-months' trip to London and Paris and other points of interest overseas.

Speaking of business matters, Mr. Manning remarked: "I couldn't help noticing while in France that the people there were busy and apparently prosperous, and they look well able to start in on the payment of their war debt to Britain. They are better off than the people are in England today, although one does not see the evidence of unemployment so much in London as in other parts of the country.

"I was in London during the British election and prior to it. On a visit to the British house of commons one day, a thing I had looked forward to for a long time, I heard T. P. O'Connor, speaking on the third reading of the Irish boundary bill. Their method of conducting an election campaign is far more vigorous than we indulge in here. There was only a short time and all the parties were out to make the most of it. There were campaign meetings going on wherever a speaker could get a hearing, and although they were very spirited there was never a disturbance. The people seem to have the faculty of minding their own business even in a time of excitement.

"The general feeling among the people I met was that the loan of $100,000,000 to Russia was the point where the country turned against the MacDonald government. One heard on all sides the remark: 'If the government has forty million pounds to lend, why not spend it here and start something for ourselves.' There was no call for a general election, and the MacDonald government could have run on for a year or so longer had it not been for the dealings with the Russian government. There was no desire, even after the election to detract from the ability of Ramsay MacDonald, and from many sources one heard words of appreciation of the service he had rendered."

Asked about business conditions, and more particularly as they related to his own firm, Mr. Manning intimated that he had been successful in booking orders for the London plant, and had reason to believe that more would follow.

CO-OPERATION KEYNOTE IN CITY SCHOOL STAFF

Suggestions For Improvement in New Course of Study by Inspectors.

Included in the list of 16 points touched on by Senior Inspector V. K. Greer and Inspector G. A. Wheable in a bulletin to the public school teachers of the city are a number of interesting items.

The teachers are asked by the inspectors to study carefully and follow closely the new courses of study and also to keep a record of suggestions looking to further improvement of the courses, which suggestions will be called for at the close of the current school year.

The teachers are urged to place particular emphasis upon the form of work stressed in the new course of study, including language, composition and supplementary reading. For purpose of comparison it is suggested that compositions written by pupils early in the year be retained and the progress noted carefully from time to time.

The inspectors commend and thank those principals and staffs who have succeeded in increasing substantially the number of penny bank depositors and urge upon all staffs renewed effort in this regard.

Notice is given the principals and staffs of the different schools that it is the intention of the inspectors to have the city public schools classified on the seven-year basis, as outlined in the new course of study, and as practically in effect here for some time past, beginning in September of next year. The schools will be divided into four forms as follows: form I, grade I and grade II; form II, grade III; form III, grade IV and grade V; form IV, grade VI and grade VII.

NOTED ARTIST IS COMING FOR ST. ANDREW'S CONCERT

The special artists for the service of praise to be given next Monday evening by the choir of St. Andrew's church, under the direction of Charles E. Wheeler, F.C.C.O., will be Agnes Adie, dramatic soprano, and Mrs. Charles Ivey, the talented young violinist.

Choral numbers by the choir and soloists of the church have always been a feature on these programs. An outstanding number will be F. H. Cowen's "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," a wonderful piece of choral writing, on the poem by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, for contralto soloist and full choir. Other selections by Hillier, Julius Harrison, Ashford, Forrister and Pinsuti will be given.

The excellence of a St. Andrew's choir concert is no doubt responsible for attracting the large audiences that are in the habit of attending these musical events.

The program provided for next Monday evening promises to be the best given by St. Andrew's choir.

HYATT AVENUE SERVICE.

A service of unusual interest will be held in the Hyatt Avenue Methodist church tomorrow, when it will take the form of a businessmen's service. Several young men of the district are to act as ushers, and six representative businessmen will assist. The pastor, Rev. R. J. McCormick, will preach on the theme, "Making a Name for Yourself" or "Recent Revelations in the Business World." Special music will be supplied by the James Cresswell orchestra.

NOMINATION DAY PLANS COMPLETE

Mayoralty, Utilities, Education, Hospital Trust in Morning —Aldermen Evening.

Monday is nomination day and arrangements are complete for the several nomination meetings which will be held in the morning and at noon at the city hall, and in the various wards for aldermanic nominations in the evening.

Mayoralty nominations will be made at the council chambers of the city hall from 10 o'clock until 11 on Monday morning. For these nominations, as well as all others, the mover and seconder of each nominee must be present. In order to discourage "complimentary" nominations, suggestion has been made in several quarters that more names than those of the mover and seconder be attached to nomination papers, and that they be more of the form of a well-signed petition. The movement has strong indorsation in some quarters, although the authorities cannot do anything that will discourage nominations.

Public Utilities.

At the same time that mayoralty nominations are being handed in those for public utilities commission and the hospital trust will be accepted. These nominations must be in by 11 o'clock.

After an hour's intermission, nominations for trustees on the board of education will start and will be accepted at the city hall from 12 to 1 o'clock.

Aldermanic nominations will be held for the four wards of the city on Monday evening between the hours of 7:30 and 8:30. Ward one nominations will be held at Simcoe street school, where Harry Bennett, assessment commissioner, will be in charge. Ward two nominations will come in at Talbot street school, with A. E. Burwell in charge.

Ward Three.

At the east end town hall, William Gray will be in charge of the reception of ward three nominations. City Clerk Baker is himself handling the ward four nominations at the city hall.

Qualification papers may be filled out and handed in directly after nominations, but they must be in the hands of the city clerk before 9 o'clock on Tuesday evening.

RUSSIAN ORE EXPORTS SHOWING BIG DECLINE

Associated Press Despatch.

Moscow, Nov. 14.—Soviet Russia exported 410,000 tons of manganese and iron ore during the last nine months, according to official statistics just issued. This represents only 24 per cent of the pre-war shipments. In comparision with the 1912 production, that of iron ore during the last year was only 11½ per cent, manganese 42½, copper 17½, and silver and lead 33 per cent. It is expected the production of these ores will be doubled during the coming year.

Aside from the coal, salt and gold mines, there are only 17,000 workmen engaged in mining as compared with more than 70,000 in 1912.

COLLECTION FOR MIKE IS SWELLING RAPIDLY

Police Free Two Suspects in $800 Swindle—Circulars Sent Out.

The collection which is being made by walters in almost all London restaurants for Mike Nidenoff, who was recently swindled out of his life's savings by two confidence men, is rapidly swelling.

According to Constantine Zaffrion, who is conducting the collection, a goodly sum of money will be donated owing to Mike's popularity among his fellow countrymen in this city. Men who had worked with Nidenoff in London cafes feel his loss and are of the opinion that everything should be done to reimburse him.

Police yesterday apprehended two men who were alleged to be familiar with the confidence men who swindled Nidenoff out of $800, but on questioning them at police station they proved to the satisfaction of detectives that they were in no way connected with the affair.

LEAGUE IS SUGGESTED IN IMPERIAL AFFAIRS

Viscount Grey Maintains It Could Be Used as Safety Valve.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 15.—Viscount Grey of Falloden in a speech here yesterday, which was widely broadcasted, suggested the employment of the league of nations as a safety valve in connection with imperial relations in foreign affairs.

Viscount Grey made the suggestion when dealing with the problem of developing the independence of the self-governing dominions yet maintaining the unity of the whole. He emphasized the need for frequent consultations between dominion and imperial premiers in order to secure a united British front.

In order to guard against embarrassment and perlexity on the part of the dominions on any occasion of an unforeseen crisis, like that in connection with the Near East in 1922 when an intimation was given the dominions that if Great Britain has to go to war she would like the assurance of help from the dominions, Viscount Grey suggested that Great Britain might promise the dominions to refer any disputes with a foreign power to the international court of justice of the league of nations, or some other arbitration board as a guarantee that the dominions would not be called upon suddenly to take a hand in a dispute the merits of which they had not had time to consider.

'LITTLE BLACK SATCHEL' PLAYS A NOBLER ROLE

Associated Press Despatch.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15.—The "little black satchel" of the senate oil investigation still loomed prominently on the stage of the government's Elk Hills lease cancellation suit as arguments were resumed in federal court today, but it was playing a dual role. Because it once contained $100,000 in currency, loaned by E. L. Doheny to former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, the little satchel became a symbol of the government's allegation that the leases and contract it seeks to cancel were obtained from Fall for Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, by conspiracy and fraud.

But yesterday Frank J. Hogan, opening arguments for the defence, dragged the much-discussed satchel into court as a battering ram to demolish the government's case. Picturing the 30 years of friendship that preceded Doheny's loan to Fall, the hardships they endured together as prospectors, the natural sympathy which the more prosperous of the two must have felt for his less fortunate friend, Hogan declared that the $100,000 loan was "a personal transaction impelled by impulses as fine as any that ever actuated a human."

Hogan expects to conclude his argument today.

CHECK UP DOGS.

Inspector George Tustin of the Humane Society made a close canvass of the market today to keep tab on puppy dogs that were being sold. Mr. Tustin reports that there are seven female dogs sold for every male animal, and wants the city council to put a stop to the sale of female dogs on the market.

ORDERED TO HOUSE ALL BEER ASHORE

Will Be Allowed Right-of-Way From Warerooms To St. Clair River.

APPEAL TO OTTAWA

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Nov. 14.—Local temperance workers were today preparing a resolution to be sent to the dominion government seeking the removal of liquor scows from the St. Clair river, this action being based on an appreciation of the fact that the control of the scows lies beyond the province of the Ontario temperance act. R. E. Lesueur, secretary of the plebiscite committee, said today that no steps will be spared to try and force export operators out of the business.

In the meantime scow operatives here have been advised by federal officials that in future they must warehouse their liquor ashore instead of afloat, and they will be given a right-of-way from their warehouses to the water front.

Scow operatives are busy searching for suitable buildings for warehouses.

The decision given by Magistrate Gundy in the Windsor police court by which $200,000 worth of liquor, seized from export warehouses along the Detroit river, is ordered returned to the owners, will not halt a case of somewhat similar nature to be heard here in county police court Monday, Magisrate C. S. Woodrow stated today when interrogated on the question. Magistrate Woodrow said that the circumstances are somewhat different in the local case. In the first place, we have already convicted a man for purchasing liquor from that scow. He said the owner has been shown to have sold liquor through his employees, and if we find out who the owner is then the whole stock of liquor is legally liable for confiscation under the Ontario temperance act. "I am still under the opinion that these liquor export men cannot legally break bulk consignments and sell in small quantities, and I shall require some very convincing proof before agreeing that they can do so."

MANY PROBLEMS FOR GOVERNMENT

Housing Trade Revival, Price of Foods Likely Topics For Discussion.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 14.—It is anticipated that the speech from the throne at the opening of parliament on December 9 will indicate the Baldwin government's intentions with regard to the housing, trade revival, unemployment and foreign affairs and an inquiry concerning food prices and perhaps some suggestion of national insurance against ill-health and unemployment.

With regard to the housing problem the government, it is understood, will assure the trades unions that its schemes for providing more housing accommodation for the people will embrace a period of at least fifteen years, which, it is anticipated, will mollify the unions towards the admission of diluted labor, or at any rate the extension of the apprenticeship system and the promotion of semi-skilled laborers.

Regarding the proposed inquiry as to food prices, there are indications that this question will be looked into at a very early period by a royal commission, and the question of prices will be explored with reference to the imperial aspect thereon. An imperial economic committee may be appointed to consider the marketing of empire produce with the object of seeing primarily how the food commodities of the dominions can best be brought more prominently before the attention of the consumers in the mother country than is the case at present.

Woman Gives Birth To Baby While Flames Devour House

Special to The Advertiser.

Jersey City, N.J., Nov. 14.—While flames roared across a street intersection and thrust angrily through windows from which the panes had vanished, Mrs. Helen McCann of 211 Washington street gave birth to a baby boy today.

An ambulance doctor, alternately watching the woman and the progress of the fire, stood at her side. At a signal from him, police carried woman and child to the street. Later, at city hospital, Mrs. McCann's condition was reported satisfactory.

Ten minutes after the woman and child had been taken out the building, of frame construction, collapsed.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Action may be brought, it is understood, either by the Home bank liquidators or by the provincial government, or both, to recover the $58,000, which Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer, is said to have unlawfully received from the late Col. J. Cooper Mason of the Home bank.

G. T. Clarkson, liquidator for the Home bank, declined today to state whether or not he would bring action on behalf of the bank. "It is under advisement by the solicitors," he added.

CENTRAL "LIT" GIVES MUSICAL PROGRAM

First Meeting of Society Held in Auditorium Yesterday Afternoon.

The first meeting of the Central collegiate literary society was held yesterday afternoon in the school auditorium. The program opened with the school orchestra under the leadership of Douglas Featherston playing "Indian Love Lyrics." This was followed by a piano solo by Eric McKay.

Miss Mary Tichburn gave a splendid reading entitled "Tim's Vacation," which let her listeners in on the intricacies of a newspaper office. Gordon Brown then rendered a violin solo which was greatly appreciated.

The school orchestra played "Song of a Broken Heart," followed by a vocal solo by Miss Margaret Stevens, "Berceuse" from the opera "Jocelyn" by Godard, the words being sung in French. Miss Isabel Mortimer gave a brief reading, "When My Pa Was a Boy."

D. ROSS ELECTED FEDERATION HEAD

Prominent Merchant Is Re-elected President of London Brotherhoods.

The Federated Brotherhoods of London held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night and officers for the coming year were elected.

David Ross, St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, was re-elected president; John Elliott, Colborne Street Methodist church, was elected secretary by acclamation; Percy Taylor, Ridout Street Methodist church, was re-elected treasurer; vice-presidents elected were J. F. Maine, Askin St. Methodist church; H. B. Ashplant, Dundas Center Methodist church, and J. F. Jenkins of Beth Manuel Mission; finance committee, P. Young of First Methodist church; W. D. Yeo, Hyatt Ave. Methodist church, and D. R. Ross of King Street Presbyterian church.

The balloting this year was carried on in a different manner than in former years. Each brotherhood had a ballot box and all ballot boxes were turned in to a returning officer. In previous years it has been the custom to ballot for the officers at the annual banquet. This system was changed as it gave everyone a chance to vote, because sometimes it has not been possible for all to attend the banquet.

BERTRAND L. POWELL LAID AT REST AT BIRR

London Township Resident Was Prominent in Church Activities.

The funeral of Bertrand Langford Rowell of London township, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Rowell, was held from the home of his parents, Maitland street, London, on Thursday afternoon to Birr Methodist cemetery.

After a brief illness in Victoria hospital, he was thought to be convalescing satisfactorily, but died suddenly early on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Rowell was 27 years of age. He was educated at S. S. 3 and 10, London township, and Young's matriculation school, London. The young man was a member of Birr Methodist church and choir. He was regarded as a promising baritone singer, and was much loved by a wide circle of friends.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Verne and Floyd, and one sister, Hildegarde.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. C. J. Moorehouse of Clinton, and Rev. J. E. J. Millyard of Askin street Mehtodist church, both former pastors of Birr circuit. Two favorite hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," were played by Charles Percy.

Among the many floral tributes were "The Gates Ajar," from Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Rowell; spray from Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., and wife of Toronto, and spray from Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hanna.

The pallbearers included four first cousins, Langford Grose, Clifford McRobert, Mel Westman and Harold Westman and Ernest Guest and Egerton Haskett.

J. M. WEBER AGAIN HEADS LIBERALS

London Club President Re-elected by Acclamation—Other Officers Chosen.

John M. Weber, president of the London Liberal club, was re-elected by acclamation at a rousing meeting in the club rooms at Hyman hall last night. While the meeting was for the purpose of receiving nominations for the election a month hence, several executives were at once re-elected by the members, who expressed their appreciation of the enthusiasm which had marked the strengthening of the Liberal cause in London.

For first vice-president, Peter Cameron and Dr. A. J. Murray were nominated. J. W. Griffith was re-elected by acclamation, as was Secretary Allan Mercer. The treasurer C. C. Ferguson, was re-elected.

Twenty members were nominated for the executive, which is made up of 12 members. They are as follows: James Murray, E. Saunders, George Hare, H. V. Charlton, Harvey Dalton, Alex. Titler, George Burdick, Jun., D. Palmer, William Miller, A. Thrower, W. C. Morirson, John Russell, A. Chapman, Sydney Beard, Hugh Semple, Dr. A. W. McPhee, J. J. Jepson, Fred Pace and Andrew Beattie.

Andrew Robson spoke briefly on the aims of the Liberal club, and the progress made during the last year. In expressing the hope that the Right Honorable W. L. Mackenzie King might soon visit London, he paid a tribute to the prime minister, saying that he had tackled one of the biggest jobs ever handled by a statesman. He had stepped into office in the wake of the money-wasting Union government and the disastrous Meighen regime, and the fact that he was growing in power every day was the proof of his worth.

George Perie spoke of the successful gathering at Woodstock last summer, when the premier spoke and thanked those who had worked so hard for the success of the day. He hoped that the prime minister would see fit to visit London at an early date. He had the pleasure of hearing the Liberal chief speak at Timmins a short time ago, where he had been given a splendid welcome in the mining districts, where the electors pledged him two members at the next election.

President John Weber outlined the work of the past year. He showed that the club had shown favorable progress; that the young men were taking an active interest in the club, and concluding with a tribute to the past president, Andrew Robson, whose hard work in the interest of the club had made it most efficient.

DENIES ALLEGIANCE TO LLOYD GEORGE

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 14.—An incipient revolt which has been brewing in Liberal ranks against former Premier Lloyd George holding joint leadership of the Liberal party with H. H. Asquith, today developed in a decisive manner.

Mr. Lloyd George was rejected by the Conservative party in the famous caucus in October, 1922, which put an end to the coalition government. The Labor party would never have anything to do with Mr. Lloyd George. Now Captain Wood Benn, an influential member of the Liberal party, has written a letter to a prominent Liberal organ declaring he cannot in any way acknowledge Mr. Lloyd George as his leader in the House of Commons.

Captain Benn declares it was not defective party organization that brought about the Liberal disaster.

"The vital fault," he says, "is want of trust. The people have no confidence, and rightly so, in Mr. Lloyd George."

Irish Condemn Armistice Fete

Associated Press Despatch.

Belfast, Nov. 14.—At a meeting of the governmental party, held last night at Rathmines, a Dublin suburb, a protest was voted against the Armistice Day celebration in Dublin. The protesting resolution described the celebration as "a British demonstration under the guise of memorial services to the men who died in the army of our late enemies."

The resolution called on the government to enact the necessary legislation to prevent such demonstrations, which were styled "insults to the memory of those who made the Irish Free State."

LABOR HAS THREE IN CIVIC CONTEST

Meeting Last Night Is Not Productive of Further Nominations.

No further aldermanic nominations were forthcoming at a meeting of the Labor party last night, and only a definite three will be contestants at the coming municipal elections.

F. C. Wanless and Tom Clift, who were nominated to contest ward one and ward four, respectively, at a former meeting have not as yet signified their intention of standing. Ald. Frank McKay, L. R. Menzies and John Ashton will compete in ward three.

David Mills and A. Evans were nominated as candidates for the board of education after Mrs. F. White, Mrs. F. Wells and Raymond Smith had expressed their desire to be out of the race.

A letter received from the secretary of the board of education, in reply to one sent expressing the attitude of the Labor party in London on the cadet movement, was read at the meeting and the opinion was expressed that it was entirely unsatisfactory.

Labor has gone on record as being directly opposed to public money being spent on the cadet movement, and the letter received from the education board secretary failed to explain that body's attitude on the question. It was decided that another letter should be drawn up by the executive which will outline in a more explicit manner the party's feeling toward the cadet movement in the public schools.

It was stated earlier in the week that the row of evergreen trees on the south side of the Pipe Line road, near the Wonderland sideroad, were ordered cut down by Westminster township council. The work was authorized by the suburban area commission in order that the road at this point would be free from snowdrifts and pitch holes during the winter months.

BANKER'S REQUEST DENIED BY JUDGE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Application for a certificate of "reasonable doubt" in the case of Lieut.-Col. Clarence F. Smith, convicted Home Bank director of Montreal, was refused today by Judge Coatsworth.

Colonel Smith was convicted last week of approving of and concurring in a false bank return to the government. Sentence has not been passed. At the conclusion of the trial his counsel asked for a certificate of reasonable doubt.

Judge Coatsworth stated this morning that he had given the matter careful thought and regretted that he could not see his way clear to granting the request. He added, however, that he would do anything he could to facilitate any appeal action which counsel might bring.

DYNAMITE IS USED TO CHECK BLA E

HUNDREDS HOMELESS

Associated Press Despatch.

Jersey City, N.J., Nov. 14. — Fire, attended by numerous explosions, raged for hours in the industrial section of the city before it could be brought under control today, destroying more than thirty buildings, sending score of persons to hospitals for treatment for minor injuries, and making several hundred families homeless.

The damage runs into millions of dollars. The cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

A full square block was razed, and portions of six other blocks immediately adjoining it were destroyed. Two-thirds of Jersey's fire department fought the conflagration from 9 o'clock this morning to 6 o'clock this evening, when relief crews were put to the task of subduing the fire which smouldered in the ruins throughout the night. Two fireboats from New York helped keep the flames from the congested factory district in the North river front, while the reserve fire forces of the city joined by companies from the adjoining city of Hoboken, stood by for possible emergencies.

Dynamite had to be used to blast down a number of flimsy structures in the path of the flames.

The noise of frequent explosions, which shattered buildings within a half-mile radius, in addition to dense clouds of acid fumes and thick, black, chemical-filled smoke, added to the confusion and panic.

The fire started in a sub-cellar of the salt petre factory of the Battelle & Renwick Company at Morris and Warren streets. Soon after an explosion blew the roof of the salt petre company's four-story building. The flames immediately swept over the building in waves, and flaming fragments of the shattered roof fell on adjoining buildings and set them ablaze.

A dozen firemen and probably 30 men, women and children in neighboring houses, cut by flying glass or overcome by the chemical fumes, were rushed to hospitals or to emergency first-aid stations set up in neighboring drug stores.

FORMER LONDON MAN TESTIFIES AT HEARING

F. W. Reynolds Tells of Home Bank's Lumber Company in B. C.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—The story of the Reynolds Timber Company and its connection with the Home Bank of Canada was brought out today at the trial of J. F. M. Stewart, Home Bank director.

Fred W. Reynolds, former manager of the London, Ont., branch of the Home Bank, was the chief witness today. Reynolds was instructed in 1916, he said, to go to British Columbia and log six sections of Port McNeil timber limits which were controlled by the bank.

Witness went to British Columbia, but never started the logging scheme, finding that the cost, which would have been $250,000, was prohibitive. He came back to Toronto and Mr. Haney sent him to see Mr. Stewart. It was then decided to form a company, and Reynolds was instructed to establish an office in Vancouver, with a prosperous appearance so that a good impression would be made.

Mr. Haney visited the plant in 1917 and that year the company paid a dividend of seven per cent. The mill ran at a loss but the wholesale yard in Vancouver more than wiped out the balance. After Mr. Haney's visit a branch of the Home Bank was established in Vancouver, and the company kept its account there.

In 1922 the Reynolds Company assigned and witness left its employ. Witness knew that the bank was interested in several timber limits in British Columbia. When the Reynolds Company failed it owed the bank more than $100,000.

DREAM OF BONES IN CELLAR LEADS TO WEIRD DISCOVERY

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Nov. 14.—Mrs. Alice Cooper, who lives at 86 Monmouth road, Walkerville, turned over to the police today a half-bushel basket of bones, which she says she dug out of her cellar, following a vivid dream. The bones were submitted to a Walkerville physician this afternoon, who pronounced some of them, at least, to be those of human beings. An investigation is under way.

Mrs. Cooper's story is a weird one. She was awakened by a dream, she says, that bodies of murdered persons were hidden in her cellar. Her efforts with a small shovel were rewarded by the discovery of a quantity of bones, which appeared to have been in the ground for a long time. In an opposite corner of the cellar another collection of bones was dug up.

PARENTS OF SOUTH LONDON OUT FOR NEW COLLEGIATE

Executive of Parents' Association Will Take Action Toward Building.

MET LAST NIGHT

That the citizens of South London are determined to have a new collegiate institute before long was demonstrated by last night's meeting of the South London collegiate parents association, the first of the autumn season.

The result of the meeting will probably be the sending of a deputation to the board of education or the devising of some other scheme to promote a new school. The executive, of which Wendell Holmes is the head, has the matter in hand.

A very lively discussion concerning the school situation in South London featured the meeting, those taking part in the argument being Rev. T. D. McCullough, F. G. Stuart, E. W. Hessell, Mrs. C. S. Turner and Mrs. W. F. Hallett.

The subject was opened by the principal of the school, T. S. H. Graham. Mr. Graham pointed out the great need for further accommodation in South London, where the attendance was rapidly increasing. The number of pupils attending the school this year was 423, in contrast to 342 a year ago, he said.

The growth of secondary schools in the province during the past six years had been very great. While six years ago the attendance at adolescent schools in the province was 11 per cent, the attendance today was 29 per cent.

Rent Three Rooms.

To accommodate the pupils in the South London collegiate this year, it had been necessary to rent three rooms in the public school. This was no permanent way to solve the situation, which was getting more and more out of control as the attendance kept increasing each year. The opening of the new continuation school in Manor Park would feed the middle and upper school classes of the South London collegiate.

London, he said, had been doing remarkable work. And the standard should not be allowed to decrease owing to overcrowding and bad conditions in the schools. While the province had a percentage of from 57 to 65 successful pupils at the departmental examinations, London's percentage was as high as 85.6 per cent last year.

The chief feature of the evening was an inspiring address on "Education for World Citizenship" given by Prof. A. G. Dorland of the University of Western Ontario.

"Cultured persons are those who see life clearly and see it as a whole," he said, quoting from Matthew Arnold. "In our education," he continued, "we still have before us a whole series of adjustments of our thought and life to that of other people and other nations. We have found that we cannot live to ourselves any longer. New discoveries have made the world a neighborhood.

Very Fine Program.

"Education should seek to create an international consciousness. H. G. Wells declared that we are engaged in a race between catastrophe and education.

"Sir Philip Gibbs says: 'Civilization as I see it can only be saved by its children, and not by them if they are brought up as they always have been. If hatred can be taught, friendship can be taught also.'"

The program also included vocal numbers by Miss Jean Houston, Miss Frances Stewart acting as accompanist, and by Miss Margaret Campbell, a pupil of Charles Percy. Capt. T. E. Robson also sang, with Mrs. Charles S. Turner acting as accompanist.

MISS HELEN HUGHES,
who is playing the role of "O Hara San" in the operetta of that title which will be presented by the university glee club early in the new year.

Prof. Mulveney

Answers Telephone Call

Hello! Is that Prof. Mulveney's, Parkdale 4830?

Is Prof. Mulveney there?

Yes, Prof. Mulveney is speaking.

Have you a worm remedy for children?

Yes.

Could you tell me, if I brought my little girl down, if she had worms?

No, lady, I cannot tell by looking at children if they have worms.

You can't?

No, madam.

Couldn't you tell me if I told you all the symptoms?

No, madam. My remedy called "Mother's Friend" expels worms, is an excellent Tonic and Builder, good for the nerves, and is an excellent medicine for Regulating the Bowels; it brings away all filth and small Intestinal Worms, is perfectly harmless, and can be given to the smallest infant without fear of doing harm. A lady who is living on Shaw street got a bottle of this medicine for her baby, two years old. She said she had no peace with this child night or day for four months; the doctor was calling regularly and did not help the child in the least. The little one took a bad spell and was choking; the mother opened its mouth and pulled out a stomach worm that was strangling the child. She rushed over to me and brought the child, also the worm, which measured 8 inches long, with her. She purchased a bottle of Mother's Friend, and the second dose brought away 17 more. She was horrified at the sight, and brought the worms to me, which I have here in a bottle in my office, and many others from other happy mothers. So if you think it a good investment to try Mother's Friend it is $1.00. Now, you understand, it is not necessary to waste car fare bringing your children here, as I do not practice medicine, and have only the one remedy for sick children, which expels Worms if they are there. It is an excellent medicine for children and has relieved many little ones of St. Vitus' Dance and Convulsions, also fits. Call or send to 211 Ossington avenue (formerly Dundas street), Toronto. Phone Parkdale 4830. Mother's Friend in powder form; each package makes twice as much medicine for $1.00; no danger of breaking and no cost for sending. Just send $1.00.—Advt.

PROBE IS CONTINUED INTO OFFICER'S DEATH

Drowning of Ian MacDonald, Member of R. C. N. W. P. Being Investigated.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—"The final report into the death of Constable MacDonald has not yet been received by me," stated Commissioner Starnes of the Royal Canadian mounted police, when questioned today in regard to the drowning near Bailey island, in the Arctic region, of Ian Macdonald, formerly of Lunenburg, N. S.

The investigation is being continued. Information received at headquarters so far is that the late constable was making a trip on one of the trading schooners, and several hours before he was missed had been seen walking towards the rear of the vessel. The night was particularly dark and, apparently, he stepped overboard and fell into the icy northern waters, without his predicament being discovered.

WOMAN FINDS HER SUCCESS IN REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

This Line of Work Needs Patience, Energy and Much Tact.

IS INDEPENDENT

By JULIA HOYT.

A business which a number of women have recently taken up, and very successfully, is real estate. The only possible drawback to this line of work may possibly be that in order to get a start one needs a rather large circle of acquaintances. However, that is an asset in all businesses.

It has lately been proved to me that if a woman has acquaintances and is energetic, she can with amazing quickness build up quite a business. I know of a girl in New York with no business training, who less than a year ago decided she would go into house and apartment renting. She took desk room in an office, obtained her license as an authorized real estate agent, got apartment and house lists, told or wrote her friends of her proposed venture, and waited for developments. She is now employing three assistants, and has as much work as she can possibly handle.

Needs Patience.

This business takes a great deal of patience and energy, and a good deal of tact; in addition, an attractive personality is certainly no drawback. However, these are qualities that are helpful if not essential in most positions or businesses. This girl had barely the money to pay for her desk room for the first month, and she is now making quite a sum of money each month.

Again, as in shopping for others, the power to judge the tastes of one's clients is an important factor. In other words, the person who can judge pretty well the type of apartment or house that will appeal to Mrs. Smith will save a great deal of her own time, and will not so tire and discourage Mrs. Smith that she turns to another agent. As in all businesses where one comes into personal contact with customers, one must adapt one's personality to their and submit with grace and good temper to many irritating, and even sometimes unpleasant, experiences.

Must Be Independent.

There is one advantage in the real estate business, and that is that you can try to acquire anyone as a client, irrespective of how well you know them, and without embarrassment. It is not like trying to sell someone an automobile or a piano, etc., when you must try to persuade them that that particular make is better than any other, and feel a resulting sense of responsibility. In other words, the prospective buyer or lessee can judge equally as well as you the merits of the apartment or house offered to him, and it is simply a question of which real estate agent is the quickest in finding the place that pleases his taste.

For instance, I have seen the girl in question meet someone who has always gone to a certain agent when hunting an apartment. She hears them say they are looking for an apartment, finds out the approximate size they want, price they want to pay, and then proceeds to try and find such a one. She is absolutely at liberty to do this, as all the effort is on her part. The client is delighted to have an additional person looking for an apartment for her, and feels under no obligation to take the apartments offered, yet the agent has the chance of finding something that may just suit her, when her customary agent may fail.

The good real estate agent keeps her eyes and ears constantly open, never fails to follow up a prospective client, and always listens well for people who wish to rent their residences. If she does this, has some cleverness in bringing tenants and landlords to terms, and her patience and persistence in trying to find the right place for each client, she will find it one of the quickest ways of making a comfortable sum of money.

FOOD!

Up and up, well out of sight,
I sat within "the gods" one night,
To hear an artist sing a song,
My soul protesting 'twas not wrong
To spend the price of food this way,
For I could eat another day!

Dear Miss Dix—I have three girls and do not know which one to marry. The first one I like fairly well, but she doesn't seem to care whether I like her or not; neither does she seem to care whether I go to see her or not.

The second one is of a different nature. She corners me every chance she gets, and tries to get invited to every dance or party where I am likely to be.

The third one tells me that she loves me most sincerely, and always asks me to come and see her.

Well, I seem to care a little for them all, and haven't the nerve to refuse any one, so which one would you advise me to hold?

TROUBLED V. L.

Answer:

Yours is, indeed, a sad, sad story, mate. It must be terrible to have such an embarrassment of the riches of affection that you cannot decide which treasure to take. Moreover, the tragic part of it is that whichever lady you select you will be virtually certain to wish you had taken the other one.

If I were you I would take a good nerve tonic and bolster up my courage to refuse them all, and wait until some lady came along who I would know was IT and concerning my affection for whom I would have no doubt.

However, as between the three candidates for your heart and hand, whose claims you have submitted to me, I cast my vote for number three.

Number one I eliminate. She apparently does not care for you, nor have you any real affection for her. She merely piques your pride because she is the standoffish kind, the only one who has resisted your charms and whom you have not brought down with your bow and arrow.

Number two you would tire of because she is too easy. Love is like a pudding. We only crave it when we are hungry for it. If we have no appetite for it, it is nothing but a gooey, saccharine mess that cloys on our palate and has no more attraction for us than a mush poultice would have.

That is why a man never loves a woman who loves him too much; and if he marries a woman who has pursued him, he always feels that he is a captured animal, held in durance vile and domesticated against his will.

Number three seems to strike the happy medium. She blows neither too hot nor too cold. She is neither too anxious nor too coy. She is evidently one of the sort who can either take a man or leave him alone, and that kind generally have discretion enough to keep their husbands interested until the end of the chapter.

But don't marry any girl for whom you only "care a little." It takes lots of love to stand thirty or forty years of matrimony.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I adore my husband, and he loves me. He is a good husband; but I have to take it for granted that he loves me, and I hunger for tenderness. He is never enthusiastic over me unless I go away on a trip, which is very seldom on account of our circumstances. I am afraid that my real pleasure in going is the coming back and his making a fuss over me.

Now, even when I prod and cajole my husband into lovemaking, he always does it in the same fashion until I am tired of it and think to myself that where there is such a little bit of lovemaking he might inject a little bit more pep into it. It just seems that he cannot be affectionate, bless him! And I cannot be content without it, bless me! What shall I do?

ONE WHO AGREES.

Answer:

It is always more or less of a tragedy when a sentimental woman marries a prosaic man, because she is always demanding of him something that he cannot give. She asks for bread, and he gives her a stone; and she is not practical enough to see that the stone is very often a diamond of the first water.

For the man who cannot gush, whose tongue is so tied by nature that it cannot say the pretty things women love, nor pay the compliments they adore, the man who has no words with which to plumb the depths of the love that fills his soul, very often has a thousandfold more affection and tenderness for his wife than the glib talker who jollies a woman along and who covers up his selfishness under the flatteries.

In matrimony, it is deeds that count, not words, and as long as a man works like a dray horse to give his wife luxuries, and never finds fault with her, she may safely trust in his devotion, no matter if he is as dumb as an oyster.

Unfortunately, however, the sentimental wife cannot see the matter in this light. She isn't satisfied to know that her money is in the bank. She wants to see it, and handle it, and count it, and have visible evidence every day of how rich she is.

Sometimes a woman doesn't know when she is well off, and it seems to me that the wife who has a husband who chokes on his Adam's apple when he tries to be sentimental should thank God for her lot and let it go at that.

STUDENTS HOLD FINE "AT HOME"

Senior Technical Pupils Enjoy Pleasant Evening at School.

The "at home" held last night at the technical high school for the senior students of the school was a successful and delightful function.

Two of the classrooms, opening out into one big room, in the new wing of the building on the main floor, were georgeously decorated for the occasion. Halloween decorations and the school colors, blue, white and gold, were used in this connection, while a number attended in masquerade costume.

The program opened at 8:30 — by Principal H. B. Beal and Mrs. Beal leading off in the grand march. During intermissions in the dancing which followed, Miss Gladys Brown, Miss Doar Mitchell and Miss K. Fitzgerald provided entertainment for those present by giving some Irish and Scotch dancing. Miss Margaret Liberty sang a solo, which was very well received.

For those who did not dance, two large classrooms were set aside for games of various kinds, including guessing contests, box ball and table hockey.

Patrons and patronesses of the at home were Principal Beal and Mrs. Beal, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hone and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dickinson.

The committee in charge of the arrangements included Miss W. Balfour, Miss E. G. Leggett, A. D. Hone, C. M. Trace, J. Buchanan, R. Cook, W. Robertson and W. McWilliams from the staff, and Miss Grace Day, Miss Mildred Dodds, Miss Kathleen Wheeler, James Kennedy, Miss Amy Bowden, John Haylock and Alex. Cooke for the students.

Last year one big at home was held for the entire school, but owing to the fact that the school has grown to such proportions this year it was decided that separate functions should be held for the senior, intermediate and junior students. The latter two will be held during the next few weeks.

Last night's function broke up at 11:30 p.m., after the serving of a dainty buffet luncheon.

GOOD WINDBREAK URGED FOR BEES IN WINTER

The importance of a good windbreak cannot be overestimated where colonies of bees are wintered out of doors since, for protection from the prevailing winds, it is as essential as packing, says an article from the Dominion experimental farm.

Windbreaks may be natural or artificial. Natural windbreaks are considered to be the better. For good natural protection the apiary may be located in the lee of a grove of trees, young timber, an evergreen hedge or on a side hill slanting from north to south, along the top of which a hedge or fence is located.

Artificial windbreaks may be temporary fences or hurdles, such as are used by the railroads, in which the boards are placed horizontally with intervening spaces of 11-2 to 2 inches.

CONDITION UNCHANGED.

The condition of S. Frank Glass, former M.L.A. for East Middlesex, who has been in ill-health for some time, and who was removed to St. Joseph's hospital last week, remains unchanged, officials of that institution state.

Do Optometrical students receive instruction in both these branches?

Yes, practically every Optometrist is also an Optician, but many Opticians are NOT Optometrists.

THE SEA HAWK

By RAFAEL SABATINI

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Judges.

In the absence of any woman into whose care they might intrust her, Lord Henry, Sir John and Master Tobias, the ship's surgeon, had, amongst them, tended Rosamund as best they could when, numbed and half dazed, she was brought aboard the Silver Heron.

Master Tobias had applied such rude restoratives as he commanded, and, having made her as comfortable as possible upon a couch in the spacious cabin astern, he had suggested that she should be allowed the rest of which she appeared so sorely to stand in need. He had ushered out the commander and the queen's lieutenant, and himself had gone below to a still more urgent case that was demanding his attention; that of Lionel Tressilian, who had been brought limp and unconscious from the galeasse together with some four other wounded members of the Silver Heron's crew.

At dawn Sir John had come below, seeking news of his wounded friend. He found the surgeon kneeling over Lionel. As he entered, Master Tobias turned aside, rinsed his hands in a metal basin placed upon the floor and rose, wiping them on a napkin.

The surgeon tossed aside the napkin, and slowly drew down the upturned sleeves of his black doublet.

"All but dead," he answered. "The wonder is that any spark of life should still linger in a body with that hole in it. He is still bleeding inwardly, and his pulse is steadily weakening. It must continue so until, imperceptibly, he passes away. You may count him dead already, Sir John." He paused.

"A merciful, painless end," he added, and sighed perfunctorily, his pale, shaven face decently grave, for all that such scenes as these were commonplaces in his life.

"Of the other four," he continued, "Blair is dead; the other three should all recover."

But Sir John gave little heed to the matter of those others. His grief and dismay at this quenching of all hope for his friend precluded any other consideration at the moment.

"And he will not even recover consciousness?" he asked, insisting, although already he had been answered.

"As I have said, you may count him dead already, Sir John. My skill can do nothing for him."

Sir John's head dropped, his countenance drawn and grave.

"Nor can my justice," he added gloomily. "Though it avenge him, it cannot give me back my friend."

He looked at the surgeon.

"Vengeance, sir, is the hollowest of all the mockeries that go to make up life."

"Your task, Sir John," replied the surgeon, "is one of justice, not vengeance."

"A quibble, when all is said."

He stepped to Lionel's side, and looked down at the pale, handsome face over which the dark shadows of death were already creeping.

"If he would but speak in the interests of this justice that is to do! If we might but have the evidence of his own words, lest I should ever be asked to justify the hanging of Oliver Tressilian."

"Surely, sir," the surgeon ventured, "there can be no such question ever. Mistress Rosamund's word alone should suffice, if indeed so much as that even were required."

"Aye! His offenses against God and man are too notorious to leave grounds upon which any should ever question my right to deal with him out of hand."

There was a tap at the door and Sir John's own body-servant entered with the announcement that Mistress Rosamund was asking urgently to see him.

"She will be impatient for news of him," Sir John concluded, and he groaned. "My God; How am I to tell her? To crush her in the very hour of her deliverance with such news as this! Was ever irony so cruel?"

He turned, and stepped heavily to the door. There he paused.

"You will remain by him to the end?" he bade the surgeon interrogatively.

Master Tobias bowed.

"Of course, Sir John." And he added, "'Twill not be long."

Sir John looked across at Lionel again—a glance of valediction.

"God rest him!" he said hoarsely, and passed out.

It was in the waist he paused, turned to a knot of lounging seamen, and bade them throw a halter over the yardarm, and hale the renegade Oliver Tressilian from his prison. Then with slow, heavy step and heavier heart he went up the companion to the vessel's castellated poop.

The sun, new risen in a faint golden haze, shone over a sea faintly rippled by the fresh, clean winds of dawn to which their every stitch of canvas was now spread. Away on the larboard quarter, a faint, cloudy outline, was the coast of Spain.

Sir John's long, sallow face was preternaturally grave when he entered the cabin, where Rosamund awaited him. He bowed to her with a grave courtesy, doffing his hat and casting it upon a chair. The last five years had brought some strands of white into his thick black hair, and at the temples in particular it showed very gray, giving him an appearance of age to which the deep lines in his brow contributed.

He advanced towards her, as she rose to receive him.

"Rosamund, my dear!" he said gently, and took both her hands. He looked with eyes of sorrow and concern into her white, agitated face. "Are you sufficiently rested, child?"

"Rested?" she echoed on a note of wonder that he should suppose it.

"Poor lamb, poor lamb!" he murmured, as a mother might have done, and drew her towards him, stroking that gleaming, auburn head.

"We'll speed us back to England with every stitch of canvas spread. Take heart then, and—"

But she broke in impetuously, drawing away from him as she spoke, and his heart sank with foreboding of the thing she was about to inquire.

"I overheard a sailor just now saying to another that it is your intent to hang Sir Oliver Tressilian out of hand—this morning."

He misunderstood her utterly.

"Be comforted," he said. "My justice shall be swift; my vengeance sure. The yard-arm is charged already with the rope on which he shall leap to his eternal punishment."

She caught her breath, and set a hand upon her bosom as if to repress its sudden tumult.

"And upon what grounds," she asked him with an air of challenge, squarely facing him, "do you intend to do this thing?"

"Upon what grounds?" he faltered.

He stared and frowned, bewildered by her question and its tone.

"Upon what grounds?" he repeated, foolishly almost in the intensity of his amazement.

Then he considered her more closely, and the wildness of her eyes bore to him slowly an explanation of words that at first had seemed beyond explaining.

"I see!" he said in a voice of infinite pity; for the conviction to which he had leaped was that her poor wits were all astray after the horrors through which she had lately travelled.

"You must rest," he said gently, "and give no thought to such matters as these. Leave them to me, and be very sure that I shall avenge you as is due."

"Sir John, you mistake me, I think. I do not desire that you avenge me. I have asked you upon what grounds you intend to do this thing, and you have not answered me."

In increasing amazement he continued to stare. He had been wrong, then. She was quite sane and mistress of her wits. And yet, instead of the fond inquiries concerning Lionel which he had been dreading came this amazing questioning of his grounds to hang his prisoner.

"Need I state to you—of all living folk—the offenses which that dastard has committed?" he asked, expressing thus the very question that he was setting himself.

"You need to tell me," she answered, "by what right you constitute yourself his judge and executioner; by what right you send him to his death in this peremptory fashion without trial."

"But you," he faltered in his ever-growing bewilderment, "you, Rosamund, against whom he has offended so grievously, surely you should be the last to ask me such a question! Why, it is my intention to proceed with him as is the manner of the sea with all knaves taken as Oliver Tresilliain was taken. If your mood be merciful towards him—which, as God lives, I can scarce conceive—consider that this is the greatest mercy he can look for."

"You speak of mercy and vengeance in a breath, Sir John." She was growing calm, her agitation was quieting, and a grim sternness was replacing it.

He made a gesture of impatience.

"What good purpose could it serve to take him to England?" he demanded. "There he must stand his trial, and the issue is foregone. It were unnecessary to torture him."

"The issue may be none so foregone as you suppose," she replied. "And that trial is his right."

WOMEN, OPIUM LINKED IN TALK

League Discusses Question of Restricting Use of Dens in Far East.

Associated Press Despatch.

Geneva, Nov. 14.—Whether women should be permitted to enter public opium dens in the far east formed the subject of a lengthy debate at today's session of the international opium conference, and before the question was settled various speakers brought into the discussion the French revolution, the League of Nations covenant, women's rights and the leadership of France and Britain as exponents of perfected civilization. Eventually the conference decided to omit the word "women" from the list of persons who should be excluded from opium smoking dens.

Incidentally M. Van Wettum of Holland, president of the conference, ruled that it was undesirable, in an agreement being framed by the conference, to refer to opium smoking houses as dens because he thought the word den implied some iniquitous thing.

The French draft of the convention originally provided that entry to public opium smoking houses should be prohibited to Europeans, women and minors. China succeeded in having the word Europeans deleted by contending that reference to Europeans involved racial discrimination against Asiatics because it implied that Europeans should not mix with Asiatics.

Honker At Last Believes That Farmer Brown's Boy Is To Be Trusted

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Peter Rabbit stayed over by the pond of Paddy the Beaver in the Green Forest all night. He suspected that Honker the Goose and his flock would leave early in the morning on their way to the Sunny South, and he wanted to be there to see them off. At the first hint of daylight they were awake. Peter heard them talking in low tones. Then he heard Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the eight young Quacks, now as big as their parents.

"If you want some of this good corn I told you about come with us," said Mrs. Quack as she and Mr. Quack, followed by the young Quacks, took to their stout wings and disappeared over the tree tops in the direction of the Big river.

Then there was a great beating of air with great wings, and, with Honker in the lead, the geese flapped up and then in their turn disappeared over the tree tops, headed for the Big river. How Peter did wish that he had wings, so that he could go along, too! But, having no wings, he did the next best thing—he made use of his long legs. He knew just where the Quacks had gone. He knew that they had gone to the mouth of the Laughing Brook, where it enters the Big river. So Peter headed straight for that place.

He was quite out of breath when he got there, for he had run very hard and it was a long way. He found all the Quacks busily plunging their heads under water and tipping up after the nice yellow corn Farmer Brown's Boy had thrown in the water for them the night before. But Honker the Goose and his flock were not there. Peeping out of the bushes at a point where he could see across the Big River, he discovered Honker and the other geese out in the middle of the Big river. They were sitting on the water, with their long necks stretched up, watching the Quacks. It was plain that Honker was still suspicious. Peter couldn't blame him, after the dreadful things Honker had told the night before.

Suddenly Farmer Brown's Boy appeared. He had a big bag with him, and he began to throw corn out into the water from that bag. You see, he had seen Honker the Goose and his flock the night before, and he had guessed that they might be on the Big river. Just as soon as he had emptied that bag he hurried away.

The Quacks called eagerly to Honker and his flock, but still Honker would not come. He had seen Farmer Brown's Boy, and this had made him more suspicious than ever. So the Quacks ate until they could eat no more. Then they settled themselves for a morning nap, hidden in the rushes and wild rice.

Honker waited and watched. The thought of that corn made him hungrier than ever. Finally he led the flock a little nearer to shore. Then he left them there and slowly swam in alone. As he drew near the shore he moved more and more slowly. Never for an instant did he take his eyes from the shore. At last he gave a low signal to his flock and they came swimming in. Then Honker led the way in among the rushes and wild rice. Presently they found the corn. My, how eagerly they gobbled it! But all the time the others were eating Honker kept watch until another took his place and he could go to get his share. At last he believed what Mr. and Mrs. Quack had told him. Here was a place where there was nothing to fear.

How Peter did wish that he had wings so that he could go along, too.

MONTHLY COLLIE SHOW TO BE HELD IN LONDON

London is to have a monthly collie show. The members of the London collie club reached this decision at their meeting at the Tecumseh House last night. The first show will be held on Nov. 28, and the last Friday of every month thereafter.

A silver cup will be awarded the winner of the most firsts throughout the season. At each show silver spoons will be presented to the winners. Special prizes will be offered from time to time.

The last collie show was an open air event held on the market square in April. The exhibition was such a success that the collie fanciers have been working toward more shows and a keener interest in the breeding of fine dogs.

President Frank Curran occupied the chair.

Neuritis

Neuralgia, Sciatica and Sciatic-Rheumatism

Had Neuritis Several Years

Mr. John Woodward, Lucan, Ontario, writes:—

"I was a sufferer fron neuritis for several years, and tried all kinds of remedies, yet never seemed to get any better. At last my nerves and whole system seemed to give way, through not being able to get any rest or sleep at nights for pain which mostly used to take me in all parts of the limbs and feet. My nerves would twitch till my whole body would seem to jerk right up as I lay in bed. Almost at the point of despair, I thought of Dr. Chase's Almanac and after reading different testimonials, I decided I would get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I did, and I feel it my duty to tell you of the benefit I derived. I am more than proud to say that after taking over twenty boxes I believe myself almost normal again, and for the past year I seem to enjoy my usual health."

Neuralgic Headache

Mr. Earnest Clark, Police Officer, 338 King St., Kingston, Ont., writes:—

"For three years I suffered from nervousness and sleeplessness. I believe my condition was brought about by overwork. I had frequent headaches, neuralgic pains and twitching of nerves and muscles. I had indigestion, was short of breath and easily tired. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and seven boxes of this medicine relieve me of all my symptoms. I am now feeling one hundred per cent. better than I was, and have to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the good health I am now enjoying."

Neuritis in Hands

Mrs. A. MacNeill, St. Marys, Ont., writes:—

"For some time I suffered from neuritis, which affected me mostly in the hands. The pain used to be severe at times. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and five or six boxes of this treatment broke it up. Since then I have not been troubled with those severe pains in my hands, and can cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering as I did."

NEURITIS is inflammation of a nerve. The pain is burning and tearing, not darting as in neuralgia, and is increased by movement.

There may be swelling and sensitiveness to touch, and sometimes redness of the skin.

Your experience will tell you that neuritis, like neuralgia and sciatica, only bothers you when your nervous system gets run down.

Restore energy and vigor to the nerves and you remove the cause of these torturing ailments.

Your experience with external applications has not been satisfactory. Drugs taken to deaden the pain are used at tremendous expense to the nervous system.

The nerves must be nourished back to health and vigor by the use of such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Rest and a course of treatment with this great nerve restorative is the most certain way to entirely remove the cause of neuritis and similar ailments arising from a depleted condition of the nerves.

It takes a little time to rebuild the wasted nerves. You will need a little patience. But you can use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food knowing that with each dose you are supplying to the system certain ingredients which go to instil new vigor and energy into the tired, starved nerves.

A few letters are quoted here to tell of the benefits others are obtaining from the use of this restorative treatment.

Ask your friends and neighbors about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for there is scarcely a community but can produce lots of evidence of its remarkable control over diseases of the nerves.

Neuritis and Neuralgia

Mrs. Wm. Mapletoft, Mount Forest, Ont., writes:—

"For about three years I suffered from neuritis in my right side. I had pains through my back and twitching of the nerves and muscles. I had also been operated on for appendicitis, and it left me a nervous wreck. I was very restless and uneasy, and bothered with frequent neuralgic headaches. My appetite was poor and I sometimes took weak spells. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and in a very short time I found relief. This medicine has done me the world of good and I can recommend it to all suffering as I was. One Spring, also, my husband was all run down and hardly able to work. I bought six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which he took, and he has felt fine ever since."

Rheumatism

Mrs. C. H. Christoffer, Greenbrier, Sask., writes:—

"It is a pleasure to me to write you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for over twenty years from rheumatism, neuralgia, violent headaches and palpitation of the heart. My back ached, I could not sleep, and was always tired and nervous. I had taken a great many medicines of one kind and another, but never got anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This did me more good than all the medicines I ever took, and I cannot say enough in praise of it."

Neuritis in Back

Mrs. George Taylor, 53 Malokof St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—

"I had been in the hospital for an operation, and afterwards found my system in a run down condition. I had also contracted neuritis in my back. I got a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found benefit from them, so I continued the treatment until I had taken about 24 boxes. This has made me much stronger, and built up my whole system. I also found that as I got stronger my back ached less. I certainly am pleased with the results I have obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am glad to be able to recommend it."

When Peter Smith Starts Again.

Peter Smith is at Portsmouth penitentiary, known now as prisoner K-831. For three years, taken from the best portion of the man's life, he will go through the routine of prison life. At the end of that period he will come out, and it will be his lot to again seek his place in the community.

When Peter Smith was in trouble in the first place he escaped jail because he had friends: there were a number of Stratford men who believed in him. They were willing to pledge their security that Peter Smith would put in an appearance when called on by the courts to do so; they were convinced that he would make no attempt to run away and escape the situation he had helped to create. Peter Smith was fortunate in that he then possessed the confidence of men who knew him.

On his trip to Portsmouth Mr. Smith was not alone; he had the company of the woman who has been his partner in life; she believes in Peter Smith no matter what the courts may or may not decide, and she was with him until the heavy gates of the penitentiary closed and separated them. She left then for her home to carry on alone as best she can until the three years of separation have run their course. Once again Peter Smith is fortunate in having the unbroken devotion of a wife in a time when a man needs that sort of friendship.

When the former provincial treasurer comes out he will have something to count on at least—something he has tried in the days of adversity—the unfaltering devotion of his wife and the confidence of the men of Stratford who pledged his appearance in court and whom he did not disappoint. That is the sort of material a man needs when he faces the problem of making a fresh start in life.

$3,000 Is Not Necessary.

During a New York court case evidence showed that art fakirs had been busy selling to Americans supposed specimens of the great European masters. One witness said that "the head of Christ in stone, purporting to date back to the thirteenth century, was sold to a Philadelphia man for $3,000, and it was a fake."

The man who carved it may have been a fakir, the man who sold it another, and the man who bought it badly fooled by them both. And yet it is possible to get a correct glimpse of the divine without paying $3,000.

A Christian worker, a regular genius in the way of reaching men and organizing them for service, a salary of $28 a week to keep wife and family. An offer of five times as much money to forsake his work to go and enlist with the money grabbers of the day. Quietly, and with no boast, he refuses. He had seen the face of Christ, and it was no fake. It wasn't chiseled in stone, but graven on his soul.

Away out in the heat of India is a woman; her hair has grown gray in the service. For twenty-seven years she has worked with the native women; she had medical training, and has cured their sick, ministered to the children, all the time watching for the opportunity to preach the gospel to these people. Progress has been slow, her own mission board has not sent the funds needed to extend the work. Has it been worth while? Could she not have invested her years to better advantage? As she wonders a native woman comes in asking for help for her son in a village three miles off—dust, heat, fatigue. A new light comes to her face, she gathers together the necessary things, puts them in her shabby little bag and goes. She can't quit. She has seen the face of the Master; if there had been a $3,000 fee to pay for the vision she would have been turned away, but it is without money and without price.

Grabbed Him By the Neck.

The business of writing memoirs was falling rather flat until Wyckham Steed, formerly editor of the London Times, came along with his book, "Through Thirty Years." Now the memoirs business has received a new lease of life and Steed will make more money than he ever did as editorial power behind the old Thunderer.

Former writers of memoirs have made their money by hinting at deep "inside" plots, or recounting conversations intended only for the high and mighty, and never spoken with the idea that they might reach the ears of the mob on the outside. But the general public, curious as it is, was "fed up" on this material; editors whose business it is to get for the public what the public will read and pay for have been in the habit of saying "I'm busy" when a new set of memoirs came in.

So it may be that Steed, an editor himself, sensed the situation and decided to throw his furrow in a rougher and less cultivated field. He recounts how Lloyd George, at the Versailles conference, was accused by Clemenceau of France of using so many inaccuracies that the Welshman seized the French Tiger by the neck and demanded an apology. The late President Wilson of United States was present and intervened. Steed says later on that Clemenceau told Lloyd George that if he still felt warlike he could choose either sword or pistol and have the thing settled in real French style.

Steed is bound to win. The public will be keen to devour that sort of material. It is so much more invigorating than to have Lloyd George saying "My dear Clemenceau, you must have got me wrong," and the Tiger of France replying "Perhaps, old top; we shall stroll on the terrace and discuss the point. Let us be gone."

This grabbing by the neck style, the vision of a sword and a brace of pistols at a peace conference—well, Mr. Steed, you can name your own price.

The Meanest Kind of Stealing.

There was something unspeakably mean about the swindling of Mike Nickenoff, a London Bulgarian. He was cheated out of $800, money he had saved by reason of hard work and long hours in a local restaurant. Mike handed over his $800 in good faith to two fellow countrymen, believing that he was to be manager of a new restaurant.

Men who would deliberately victimize a man as these skunks did Mike are in a class lower down than bank robbers, who at least take a chance of carrying away a few bullet holes in their worthless frames.

A man like Mike Nickenoff who works hard, minds his business and saves his money is a good citizen to have around. The confidence and hopes of such a man are things to be respected. His nest egg of $800 was proof that he would not become a charge on the community. It is to be hoped the law can put its hand on the men who gained his confidence only to miserably betray it.

Must Be a Farmer Movement.

Prof. Archie Leitch of the farm management department of the O. A. C. told the united boards of trade of Western Ontario that rural depopulation up to a certain extent was to be expected. With the increased use of farm machinery fewer men were required to do the work. That would work out all right if the population of the province showed no increase or if the markets available gave no indication of expansion.

Prof. Leitch takes care not to make his assertion walk on all fours. He qualifies it by stating that rural depopulation can with safety proceed to a certain point, after which it becomes dangerous.

It is quite evident, after looking over all the figures presented at the London meeting, that co-operative marketing is gaining in favor, and it is a work that must of necessity be done by the farmers themselves. They may get some measure of government assistance, and it is right that they should, but back of this must be the weight of rural opinion and action. There may be opposition from those engaged in present methods of distribution, but that cannot be seriously regarded.

Western Ontario can produce quality in butter, bacon, beef, eggs, poultry, fruit, vegetables, etc. The markets of the world will respond to uniform quality quickly; they have always done so. A co-operative movement that is going to lift Ontario farming out of its present depression must be based on that point, and the farmers of this western section are keen enough businessmen to work on that basis.

The movement must be a farmer movement. We have not much faith in the highly-paid orators who come in from other lands to tell how it shall be done. It is simply the application of business principles, steadily followed with the avowed intention of controlling certain worthwhile markets through the better quality of the goods and the consistent uniformity with which this can be sustained. The farmers of Western Ontario can do it.

Note and Comment.

Police methods may be very efficient, but so far they haven't caught the chap who first stuck bathing girls on car windows.

Paris women are wearing live fur-bearing animals around their neck, a poor substitute for a strong right arm.

Home Bank verdicts are being appealed, which brings to mind that the depositor had no such opportunity when told he couldn't draw out the money he had left there for safe-keeping.

France is to pay Canada $5,657,000 war debt. It's to be hoped that the amount can reach Ottawa intact without 5,657,000 people writing and wiring instructions as to where it can be spent to advantage.

The figure "1" does not mean a great deal by itself, but when it stands in line with others it does. Thus a 770-pound steer at the Guelph winter fair was changed to the 7701-pound class. The Guelph show has produced some remarkable animals, but not yet a 7701-pound steer. Such an animal would clean out a well-filled silo in about two meals.

Powderin' Noses

Young lady, I saw you today, I hardly knew just what to say, you were an orange color then, you're kind of green and blue today. How come, I ask, such things could be, some freakish change in human race, I 'spect it's 'cause you changed the stuff what you are dabbing on your face.

I saw you on the street today, the chill fall wind she blew your clothes, but you was workin' on the job of dabbin' powder on your nose.

Some years gone past why folks what went and painted rainbows on their face, they'd go upstairs and shut the door and work in some secluded space, but on the street car just today I tumbled as I lumbered out, by trippin' on some gay young thing a-puttin' powder on her snout.

I went unto my barber shop to get the whiskers off my chin, I paused and looked about a spell just as I got my frame within, for there she was with her hair cropped off in fashion like a movie sheik, and waitin' for her turn to come she dabbed fresh powder on her beak.

Sometimes the paste is pink and red, sometimes it's salmon in its hue, and when they can't get green or grey why purple's simply got to do.

I'd hate to be a nose today a-settin' on some lady's face, in days when things is as they is, a-travellin' at a dizzy pace—I'd get right up and yell I would, I'd holler till they let me be, rebellin' if they stopped each block a-dustin' powder over me.

It is a funny way, it is, I can't just see why it is done, one day a-usin' blueish paint, the next day like the settin' sun. Why can't they scrub the thing each day before they start out from their home, and go about their business then and leave the sufferin' snout alone?—ARK.

WANTED—SOMETHING NEW.

I swear I won't read a new novel,
I swear I won't see a new show,
If someone invites me on Saturday nights
To attend a new film I won't go;
I'm sick of plots dreary and vapid,
I'm bored to despondency of Monotonous plays, movies, stories and lays
In which the one subject is love.

I don't mind a show or a novel
That deals with the life of a fly,
And I'd revel with glee in an author if he Wrote a story on Eskimo pie.
Why don't they make plays about grapefruit.
A cockroach, a cabbage, or dove?
In fact, I'd esteem almost any old theme
Over stories that gush about love.

They've organized a home for broken-down trombone players. We would gladly subscribe if it would help to break down a few more.

There are only two things we can never forgive, and each of them is a trombone.

Wickham Steed, editor of the London Times, says when Lloyd George spoke to Clemenceau in 1919 he got "fiery hot under the collar." Fortunately it was not a celluloid one.

Lloyd George denies the story, and now it looks as if the fiery Steed will be the goat.

Unless they do the impossible, the gifts our friends give us this Christmas cannot be quite as useless as the ones they gave us last Christmas.

On useful gift was a tie from our Aunt Priscilla. This came in handy when we were out of dish-rags.

A book of Chaucer's poems was also quite useful. When we weren't using it to throw at the neighbor's cat it came in handy as a doorweight.

Another present that was much appreciated was a trained canary. This made an extremely tasty New Year's breakfast.

One man gave us a set of half a dozen nightgowns. As we always wear pajamas to bed, we were forced to join the Ku Klux to get any value out of them.

WINE.

The people of this continent are not connoisseurs of wine, or of any alcoholic liquors, as our tendency is to gulp them and to reckon their value by their after effects more than by their taste.

The French, however, know how to taste and recognize the subtle distinction between the juices of grapes grown perhaps within a few yards of each other during the same year.

The distinction in wine is made by them in color, in brilliance, in taste and in perfume. It is also a matter of dollars.

All wines, to be good, must be clear. A sediment may form in the bottom of the bottle in a few years, but the sediment is avoided by pouring off or decanting.

Always the temperature of red wine should be that of the room. Frenchmen abominate the habit of drinking all wines cold. The color and the taste of the wine form what the French call the bouquet. This is determined, generally, by rocking the glass or turning it around. The seat of appreciation of white wine is the palate, while that of appreciation of red wine is the tip of the tongue or the back of the throat.

Chateau Yquem is called the "Queen of Wines" and should be iced like champagne, but red wine should be of the temperature surrounding and not be iced at all.

The difference between the ordinary red and white wines and the "grand" wines is that the former are less than three years old. They may be just as healthy but their flavor and perfume have not had an opportunity to mature.

It is not sufficient to ask merely for Bordeaux or Bourgogne, as there are hundreds of divisions in each of these groups.

A wine is supposed to reach its highest state of perfection when it is ten or twelve years of age, but wines have been opened after eighty years and been found as brilliant as any fresher vintage, although they are usually more heady.

All wines that are mousseux, or foaming, are not champagne, as it is easy to make any white wine into a mousseux, but it lacks the qualities of champagne.

Election Lessons.

Poor Policy for Canadians to Divide Their Forces Into Three Political Camps.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—The result of the recent election in Great Britain, in which the Conservatives won such a sweeping victory over the Laborites and Liberals, and the result of the recent election in the United States, in which the Republicans have won so overwhelmingly over the Democrats and Progressives, shows the futility of having the reform elements of the electorate divided into several factions and political camps, while the Conservative element remains solid and well organized.

The Liberals and Progressives of Canada should take warning from what has happened in Great Britain and the United States, and instead of being divided in the next federal election campaign, should unite their forces and get thoroughly well organized in every federal constituency, and not, through short-sightedness and stupid selfishness refuse to co-operate.

Premier W. L. Mackenzie King is doing the right and reasonable thing in inviting the co-operation of the Progressives of Canada with the Liberals. If the Progressives of Canada are wise they will accept the invitation of Premier King and form a working alliance with the Liberals. The Liberal executive and the Progressive executive in each federal constituency should consult with each other and arrange a union convention for the selection of a federal candidate for the next federal election, and avoid three-cornered electoral contests. Liberals and Progressives have many good reasons for working together. Their policies and aims are similar. They can best attain their objectives by working together. They have a common political opponent in the Conservative party.

"DEPRESSION FOLLOWS LIBERAL PARTY RULE.

"Premier a Puppet in the Hands of Progressives, Says Mr. Meighen.

Canadian Press Despatch.

"Victoria, B. C., Nov. 9.—Three years of Liberal rule, years made bounteous by nature as never before in the history of the dominion, nevertheless found Canada, in 1924, with increased debt, with lost population and with the business life of the country firmly gripped by depression, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, dominion leader of the Conservative party, told a mass meeting of Victorians Friday night on his first appearance in the city in four years.

"'I am classed as a pessimist, even traitor, by some,' said Mr. Meighen, 'but I am not afraid to face the truth. Let the truth be known and we can know what to do.

"'We have had the three best harvests Canada ever has known. Is it reasonable that enterprise should come to a halt? There is no reason unless the government is on the wrong track in national policy.'

"Reviewing speeches here and elsewhere of Premier King, Mr. Meighen dubbed the prime minister a puppet in the hands of the Progressives and his public utterances as deceptive, boasting and idle platitudes."

Think what an insulting statement the above quotation from the Mail and Empire is! Insulting not only to the premier, W. L. Mackenzie King, but insulting also to all Liberals and Progressives. Why should not the Liberals and Progressives of Canada unite in reproving such flagrant, ungentlemanly speeches and shameful public utterances by the leader of the Conservative party in Canada?

The editor of the Mail and Empire, in the issue of Nov. 10, page 6, refers to the Liberal government of Canada as a "minority" government and to the Progressives as "The Progressive prop."

These are not the only instances where Conservative politicians and editors of Conservative newspapers have thrown out insulting jibes at the Liberal prime minister and at the Liberals and Progressives in Canada; they are frequently doing that sort of thing. They seem to have entirely forgotten the fundamental requirements of decency and truthfulness.

Instead of retaliating by saying insulting things about the Conservatives, it will be better for Liberal and Progressive politicians and newspaper editors to set the Conservatives a better example, and while not entirely ignoring the insulting statements of the Conservatives, give them a few hints on decency of expression and ask them to correct the bad habit they have fallen into. The ability to hurl insulting statements is not an indication of good statesmanship. Mr. Meighen is lacking in the qualities of good leadership. We don't want him to become prime minister of Canada. Liberals and Progressives should unite to prevent him from becoming such.

THE WONDERFUL LIGHT.

I saw the flash, oh! the light is here,
I feel its power, it has dried my tear.
The cords which held the gloom of night
Were parted by the coming light.

My mind with richest fancy thought
The world with all its wealth had bought,
Awoke to find it needed light
To realize a dream so bright.

I saw the flapping of the angel's wing
As he passed by and the light did bring,
I heard the song birds in every bower,
I felt life breathe its richest dower.

The beautiful colors of earth and sky
Are painted by the artist light
With shades of coming and departing night.

Oh, the wonderful light, the light of day,
That bids the darkness flee away,
Away, away, away so far
So light can sing as a daily star.

Oh! I fondly hope man ever will Allow his soul to overfill
With joy, with gladness and delight,

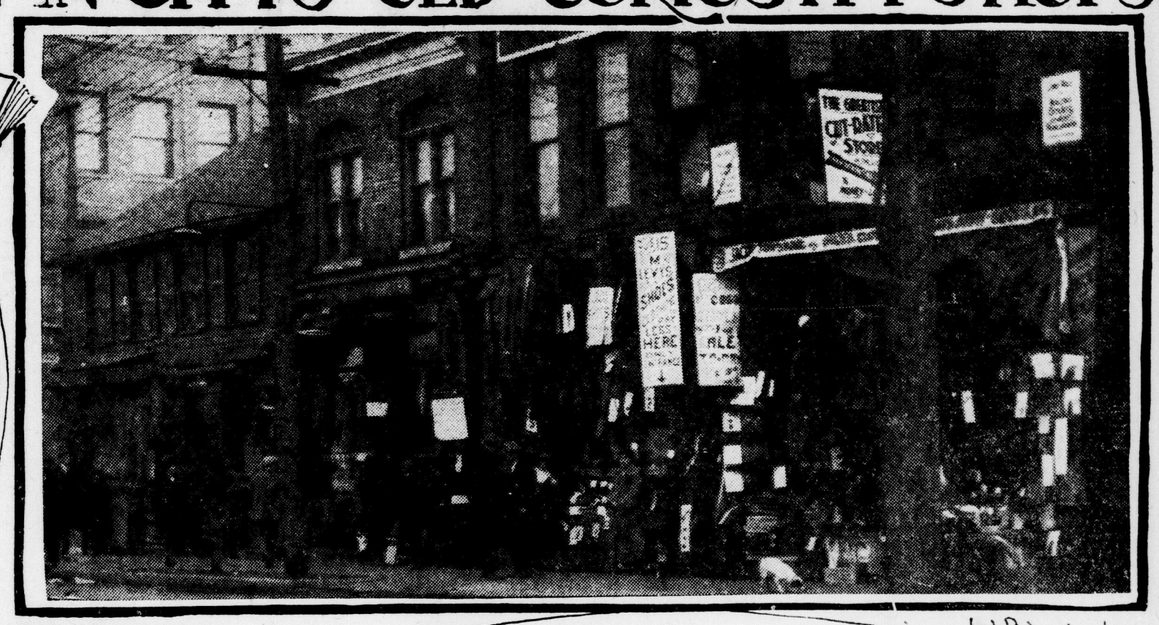
Tragedy and Humor Walk on King Street.

HEARTS FOR PAWN IN CITY'S OLD CURIOSITY SHOPS.

London's Pawnbrokers See Life of City, Its Tragedy, Crime and Fun--Charity Is Necessary for Success in Business.

By OLAF RECHNITZER.

Illustrated by H. B. West.



PAWNBROKERS' ROW ON KING STREET.

LEADING PAWNBROKERS OF LONDON:- STEWART GUSH, A PRODUCT OF THE PAWNSHOPS OF OLD LONDON; THOMAS FOX "KING OF THE PAWNBROKERS" AND JACOB FOX, HIS SON, OWNER OF "JAKE'S PLACE."

Down and out, his pension money gambled away, and longing for a square meal, a legless returned soldier hobbled into "Jake's Place" on King street last month, unstrapped his wooden limbs and asked the proprietor how much they were worth.

Jacob Fox, the owner, evinced no surprise. Years of experience as a pawnbroker had taught him to expect almost anything. A customer might offer to pawn his head and Jake wouldn't flicker an eyelash.

"I'll give you ten dollars," he told the legless one.

It was a fair bargain. The pensioner deposited his synthetic limbs with Jake, took the money, and walked out on his stumps. The following week his allowance came to hand and he redeemed the precious legs.

Last week a young woman in desperate need of cash extracted three gold teeth from her mouth, offered them as collateral for cash to another local pawnbroker, and received six dollars.

These are only two of the innumerable interesting episodes in the life of a modern pawnbroker. Every day he is besieged by persons who, driven by the lash of necessity, are forced to dispose of some peculiar relic or valuable to get ready money.

The location of these transactions is the corner of King and Clarence streets, where stand a group of insignificant little shops, their windows crammed with merchandise of all descriptions. Each is jammed tight against the other, and the variegated nature of the articles on display gives them an appearance as novel as it is grotesque.

This is the center of the pawnbroking business in London. Here drama and romance, poverty and opulence stalk arm in arm. Here denizens of the underworld, society women temporarily in need of funds, criminals, rich men, poor men, beggermen can be seen almost hourly negotiating for a loan on some rare heirloom, pawning a shirt or seeking an advance on a cherished gem, hoping to retrieve it at some more propitious date.

Unique Education.

To spend an afternoon in these shops is an education in itself. To spend a lifetime in them, as has Tommy Fox, "king of the pawnbrokers," is to have come in personal contact with more interesting types, more seasoned criminals, more sacrifice and suffering than the most tireless social worker or "slum angell" ever did or ever will. For, six out of ten of the articles displayed in these bizarre little stores were only parted with at the cost of many heartaches and much despair. Each symbolizes some degree of individual sacrifice and, like the cobblestones of old London, if they could tell their story there would be unfolded a romance of love, joy, hope and death such as the mind of Charles Dickens himself could not conceive.

"You may go to all the universities of the earth and you'll never get the education one gets in a pawnshop," Stewart Gush, one of the veterans of the trade, told the writer. "Here we knock up against every class and type."

"And we see more of human nature on the half shell than is seen in any other business." Jacob Fox, owner of the "Temple of Economy," added. "Men and women come here as a last resort when hope has fled and the pawning of valuables is the only means of relief. If we were to tell you all the peculiar things that have happened here you would have enough material to fill a hundred books."

The brokers themselves are one of the greatest aids in the apprehension of criminals the police know. Every day the shops are visited by detectives, who examine minutely the articles brought in. Many essential clues are obtained in this way. Notwithstanding their help to the police, however, every successful pawnbroker in the city has achieved a reputation for kindliness and benevolence.

Charity in Business.

It is not because they are more charitably inclined than any other class, but in this particular field a reputation for charity is a trade asset that shrewd pawnbrokers cannot afford to overlook. According to an ancient legend, the three balls of a pawnbroker's establishment mean it's two to one you won't get it back. Mr. Fox claims, however, that this significant phrase was originated by a cynic and is repudiated both by practice and tradition. What the three spheres really stand for, Mr. Fox declares, is Faith, Hope and Charity.

"Jake's Place," one of the main second-hand emporiums in "Three-ball alley," is as full of interesting oddities, jewels and relics as a museum and archeological gardens combined. At times there are many beautiful articles stored in the place, and objects of rare historical interest, archaic tomes, excellently carved antiques and other things of high intrinsic value are disposed of by Mr. Fox every week.

The shop owned by M. Levy is another that attracts all kinds and conditions of humankind in quest of someone who will pay a fair price for worth-while possessions. This is not a pawnshop. It is technically known as a second-hand store. But articles bought and sold are just as heterogeneous and of equal interest as those in the actual pawning offices.

It was here that an old soldier, who died last year, sold his Victoria Cross. The old man was destitute. Finally the veteran decided to sell his most cherished possession. He showed the emblem, the most prized of all British military decorations, to the proprietor, and asked how much he could get on it. The former gave the ancient warrior a few dollars and locked the V. C. in his vault. The following day, realizing the sentimental value the old soldier attached to his decoration, the pawnbroker returned the cross to him.

Why Things Are Pawned.

"You ask why people pawn their stuff?" Mr. Levy said in answer to a query. "There are many reasons. In the old days a craving for drink was one of the prime causes. Actual poverty is, of course, the main reason nowadays. Many dispose of things to get money for gambling; others to spend money on some trivial pleasure or to gratify some petty desire.

"The stories our customers tell are truly pitiful, but you can only believe about twenty per cent of them. There are old characters who always have a pathetic tale on their tongue, and their complaints go in one ear and out the other.

"In my time I've bought everything from $250 diamond rings to ragged underwear. Some men sell their last shirt to get ready cash and then leave the shop garbed only in a pair of trousers and a vest.

"Sure, there's always the danger of receiving stolen goods," Mr. Levy went on, "but we usually avoid that because we're forewarned by the police. We know practically every crook in London and Western Ontario. It takes a clever crook to put anything over on us."

Other second-hand dealers and pawnbrokers echoed these sentiments. An experienced criminal never has any direct business contact with pawnbrokers. Attempting to dispose of stolen property via the pawnshop is a hazardous game and only the greenest ever try to put their illicit gains "in hock." The merchants work hand in glove with the police because it is to their interests and for their protection to do so. That is why the police department regard local pawnshops as one of the best sources of information in the apprehension of criminals and for the curbing of crime.

What kind of merchandise do citizens most commonly submit for the appraisal of pawnbrokers? If you ask this question of any local "three-ball" specialist he will furnish you with a list of articles that includes everything from dilapidated jardiniers to trained cockroaches.

All Have Strads.

"We get all sorts of musical instruments, some good and some poor," one of the profession said. "Almost everybody who comes in with a violin claims it to be a genuine Stradivarius or Amati. As a matter of fact, I don't think there is one real Strad in this country. The instruments invariably bear a label which shows them to be imitations or models of the actual product of the great fiddle designer. The owners usually labor under the delusion that these instruments are genuine and always place a ridiculously high value on them.

"Lots of people try to sell their family Bibles, and it's curious how valuable they seem to think they are. Because a Bible has been in the family for several years they imagine it should fetch a big price. Others bring in parrots, canaries, pigeons, and once we had a woman bring in a pet cobra with the fangs extracted. Revolvers are frequently offered to us, but we are not permitted by law to accept them without a special license."

Coins, stamps, tools, candlesticks and antique brassware are sold every day of the year, M. Levy declared. Recently he purchased a number of American pennies issued in 1851. These are worth about 25 cents today. Shortly after buying them he placed the display in his window, and the same evening caught a would-be thief trying to cut the window open with a diamond drill.

"Jake's Place," situated at 209½ King street, has been the scene of some extraordinary sales and purchases. According to Jacob Fox, genial proprietor and son of Tommy Fox, London's original pawnbroker, many persons in dire want have been compelled to pawn their gold teeth, so distressing and pitiable was their plight.

"Some very funny transactions have transpired here," Mr. Fox, Jun., said. "Two weeks before the robbery of the Melbourne bank by Pat Norton, Williams and the Murrell brothers, a young woman entered my place and put a Colt .44 revolver here for safe-keeping. As it turned out, this was the identical revolver that Murrell used when he shot and killed young Campbell on that tragic afternoon in Melbourne nearly three years ago. The young woman, of course, must have given the gun to Murrell.

Big Help to Police.

"Pawnshops are of great assistance to the police because many persons wanted by them leave their goods with a pawnbroker, thus providing some mighty valuable clues. As an illustration, a young man from Toronto recently came into my shop with a $700 diamond ring and a stop watch which he wanted to pawn. After the transaction Inspector of Detectives Thomas Nickle dropped in, examined the ring and decided that it had been stolen in Toronto because he had that morning received a telegram from the Queen City police telling of the robbery. As a result of this clue the burglar was arrested and convicted.

"On another occasion a man pawned a purloined watch. At the back of it he had placed his picture and had forgotten to take it out. This single clue resulted in his identification and subsequent arrest."

"In the words of Tommy Fox, "king of pawnbrokers," the modern pawnshop serves not only the obscure and destitute but also the wealthy and prominent. This is exemplified by the experience of a well-known London manufacturer who, temporarily up against it, made such good use of a local pawnshop's services that he was able to breast hard times and re-establish his business on a sound financial footing.

The manufacturer in question could not get a cent from the bank to pay his employees. On Saturday morning the pay envelopes had to be filled, and on Friday the manufacturer was at his wits' end to know how to get the necessary cash. He explained the predicament to his wife and together they determined to pawn every available article of value they possessed. The wife collected all her jewels, and her husband his ring, scarf pin and cuff links. Late Friday evening they took the articles to a local pawnbroker and received an advance of $3,000 on the entire collection. This was sufficient to pay every employee the following day and allowed the manufacturer a week's grace, during which he was able to secure financial assistance from friends that enabled him to overcome all difficulties.

Pawnshop's Appeal.

There is something very appealing about London's pawnshops. Like the "Old Curiosity Shop" immortalized by Dickens, these places reflect an air of amiability and good fellowship that is missing in other commercial establishments. There is a subtle lure in the associations of articles piled high on the counters that few can resist. On all sides one discerns old necklaces, rings, cameo silhouettes, antiques, pictures, and a thousand and one other things, once the proud possessions of prosperous citizens. It is this old-fashioned atmosphere that attracts the many pawnshop habitues who make a practice of exploring the establishments every week in quest of odd pieces of furniture, queer cutlery designs, curiosities, and other paraphernalia with which to ornament their homes.

In almost every article there is a heart-throb. The numerous wedding rings sold by poverty-stricken housewives in order to feed their babes; the collections of old coins cherished for years by old men and given up by reluctant hands through the press of necessity; the fine antique candlesticks disposed of by families of respected lineage—each of these things tells its own story of hardship, suffering and fortitude.

"I didn't know you sold baby clothes too," the writer said to the owner of one of the shops as he noticed a pair of tiny shoes and a miniature overcoat tucked away in a corner.

"Well, as a rule we don't," the broker returned. "In fact, these clothes once belonged to a London woman and we just bought them to please her. Before her baby died she sold her wedding ring and almost every belonging of any value she had. When the baby died she wrapped all the child's clothes in tissue paper and put them away. But things went from bad to worse, and finally she was forced to pawn them. They say she's got a job in Detroit now."

"Wealthy young girls frequently sell valuable trinkets to us," another broker said. "Some just want enough money to go to a movie show or to buy a hat with, and they pawn their stuff rather than ask their parents for the money. Hundreds of well-to-do women come here to buy things, but those who pawn or sell usually do so out of curiosity."

Feeds on Golf Balls.

While conversing with an employee of "Jake's Place" a citizen well known in pawnbroking circles entered the store with a golf ball. He offered it for sale and after some bickering received ten cents.

"There's a fellow who makes his living finding golf balls," the writer was informed after the man had departed. "Sometimes he brings in twenty at a time. He roams the city golf courses picking up balls, and sells them to us."

Hundreds of military medals have found their way to the pawnbrokers of London. Very few are sold outright, the majority of ex-soldiers preferring to receive a loan in the expectation of being in a position sometime to redeem their decorations. In most instances they never see the medals again because the twelve-month period during which "hocked" articles are kept usually elapses before the owners are in a sufficiently flourishing condition to reclaim them.

Although not a pawnshop, one of the most interesting establishments in the vicinity of King and Clarence is Hamilton's book store. This is the only place in the city that deals exclusively in second-hand books. It boasts a larger variety of ancient and modern volumes than any other shop. Many rare tomes, some of them first editions, are purchased here.

Countless scientific and classical writings are obtainable at Hamilton's, yet, strangely enough, the big demand is for second-hand books that deal with sensational and erotic subjects. The clientele of such a place is composed of two distinct elements—those who lean toward "high-brow" or philosophical works and those who are more vitally concerned with the doings of penny dreadful heroes and heroines of the Bertha M. Clay vintage.

Forty Years Business.

Thomas Fox, London's veteran pawnbroker, was in the business forty years before retiring. His life as "king of the pawnbrokers" has been charged with many extraordinary experiences. To recount them all would require a great deal more space than is allotted here, but his definition of a pawnshop is well worth mentioning.

"A pawnshop," says Mr. Fox, "is the poor people's bank, the refuge of the unfortunate and the hope of the improvident. A shrewd pawnbroker is one who knows just when to drive home a close bargain and when to dispense charity. Charity is his principal asset, and I never knew a successful broker yet who wasn't ready to help out the truly deserving.

"Of course we have remarkable experiences. One I recall better than any other occurred several years ago, when a man came into my place to sell an old coat. I gave him $1.50 for it and he left. Half an hour later the detectives came in. The coat, they said, had been stolen in a restaurant. One of them ripped the lining open with a knife and $1,500 in bills fell out. The owner of the money had purposely put his cash in the threadbare coat so no one would be likely to steal it. The thief did not know, of course, that such a substantial sum was hidden in the lining."

It is men who deal most with pawnbrokers, but women, too, comprise a large bulk of the custom. When an object is pawned the broker gives a ticket as a sort of a check with which to redeem the article anytime within twelve months after depositing it. The only charge for keeping pawned goods is interest on the money advanced. According to Jake Fox, 70 per cent of all pawned merchandise is redeemed, the remaining 30 per cent automatically becoming the property of the broker after the twelve months period.

Today, if you go into a pawnshop, you will observe hundreds of hockey boots, skates, overcoats and furs. These have been stored in anticipation of the annual Christmas shopping festival. Yuletide buying in the pawnshops is always exceptionally heavy. While the writer explored the places dozens of farmers came in to purchase underwear, gloves, leggings, etc., as Christmas gifts for their friends.

"We get all kinds," Tommy Fox observed. "The variety of things in a pawnshop is only exceeded by the variety of persons who come to pawn or buy. During exhibition week we get men and women who've had their pockets picked and who haven't enough money to get home. Sometimes they pawn a coat, sometimes their cuff links or rings, if they have any.

"It's a great life with all its peculiar contacts, and gives you a wonderful insight into human nature. I never regret being a pawnbroker. It's the most interesting vocation in the world."

Sidelights on Men and Women in the Public Eye

EATON, PASTOR-FARMER NOW TURNS POLITICIAN

Born in Nova Scotia, Preached in Toronto and Now a Member of New U.S. Congress

WHEN the Congress of the United States of America gathers again after the elections now concluded, it will number among its members a fire-eating divine, born in the Bluenose country of Nova Scotia, a former pastor of Bloor Street Baptist Church in Toronto, a graduate of McMaster University, and now one of the outstanding religious leaders of the continent. He is Rev. Charles A. Eaton, representing the fourth district of New Jersey and elected on an out-and-out prohibition platform.

Rev. Mr. Eaton has always been outspoken. He has never believed that the preacher in the pulpit should be "a kind of kindergarten story teller with some elocutionary skill in rehearsing pretty stories about fresh water rivers in salt water oceans and the like," as he himself puts it. He believes that it is the duty of the church to take a hand in the vital questions of the day and exercise an opinion on national and political matters, and he practises his own doctrines.

In November, 1916, while he was pastor of Madison Avenue Baptist Church, New York City, and the United States was still hesitant about plunging into the world struggle which had involved the whole of Europe, he told his congregation exactly what he thought of the situation and declared that "as our women and children were slaughtered on the high seas and we did nothing about it except to engage in the exchange of explanative amenities, we exhibited a startling absence of any comprehension of national honor."

Naturally enough, this brought about a wave of criticism. His attitude was laid to the fact that he was Canadian-born. Replying, he said to his critics that "if a nation cannot or will not protect its citizens anywhere they may be on their lawful business, they are citizens of no nation." He gave it as his opinion that national honor was worth any price it might cost.

The controversy raged on and the question of the advisability of the church mixing up in matters of this kind was raised. Someone made a passing remark about "empty churches."

"An empty church is due to empty church members," was his epigrammatic retort.

"As long as I believe that the spirit of God is in the world, I shall hold that the pulpit should speak fearlessly on all great questions which touch the lives of men and affect the ideals of a nation."

He has also been known as the "commuting pastor." Born on a Nova Scotia farm, where the child is taught the virtue of industry and thrift and the evil of idleness and shiftlessness as soon as it can toddle, he decided to solve the high cost of New York living by adding agriculture to his other endeavors. He bought three hundred acres of land on the slopes of a New Jersey mountain.

IT was necessary, of course, that his church should not suffer. He had to commute to his charge in Gotham seven times a week. So he formed the habit of rising every summer morning at five and every winter morning at six, when a conference was held with the dominie's farm hands and the work for the day discussed. He traveled 50 miles a day between his home and his wealthy parish.

Bit by bit he turned his farm into one of the finest dairy properties in New Jersey. Cattle are his hobby and he has a magnificent herd of Holsteins. The results of his work, he can tell for himself:

"Well, Sun Bright Farm's milk is a by-word in Plainfield homes today. Its fame has spread

Rev. C. A. Eaton

so far that I could serve a wide area if I cared to increase my herd and plant.

"After putting in a hard day in my study in New York, where, aside from my multitude of duties connected with the church, I had an avalanche of correspondence to wade through, I found it mighty restful to get back to my home, sheltered by majestic hills and stately old forest trees."

NO CUSTOMERS WANTED

LORD DEWAR provides the world with whisky and wit. Here, then, is a bit of his wit. It relates how two old soldiers, noted for their love of the bottle, put their savings together on completing their service and bought a public-house in suburbia.

Their arrival was watched with interest by the community, and when opening time had long gone past, and the doors remained shut, one would-be customer volunteered to make inquiries.

"Whatcher want?" inquired the old soldier.

"When are you going to open?"

"Open?" asked the man in astonishment. "We've bought it!"

Finds 52 New Ways Of Using the Prune

Auntie Rose

OTHERWISE Mrs. Rose E. Barrett, known as the "Boss of the New York of the Pacific Coast." In other words, she is a woman city manager controlling a portion of the destinies of Warrenton, Oregon, but at the present moment a visitor to the east as a go-west missionary. The fact that she has discovered 52 new ways of using the humble prune is another jewel in her crown.

Meighen Lost His Ducks The Mayor Swiped Them

But the Ex-Premier Didn't Find the Culprit for Eighteen Years—Then Came the Explanation

AS premier of Canada, leader of his Majesty's loyal opposition, practising lawyer and plain citizen, the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen has had many experiences, annoying and otherwise, during his career, but it was in the role of a duck hunter that he once found himself the subject of real gloom and depression.

The ex-premier was practising law in Portage la Prairie at the time. During the fall it was his custom to visit the duck shooting grounds at Cran Creek, where he made a name for himself as a lucky shot.

One afternoon Mr. Meighen arrived back at the shack with the biggest bag of the season. He proudly strung the birds up outside the hut, and left the place for a few moments to visit friends nearby. Returning, he found that someone had taken down the string of fat ducks and had left in their place a much smaller string of inferior ducks.

This incident occurred eighteen years ago, and Mr. Meighen never found out, until this summer, who the perpetrators of the joke were.

It was recalled to him by Mayor Frank J. Mitchell of Windsor, one of the officials who welcomed the ex-premier to the Border Cities upon his arrival for a short visit.

"Do you remember the time a string of ducks disappeared from your shack at Cran Creek?" the mayor asked the Conservative chief. Mr. Meighen thought for a moment and then laughed heartily.

"Yes, but I never found out who took them," he said. "It's perhaps just as well that I didn't at the time, for I felt like having the offenders jailed."

Mayor Mitchell then related the whole story, and told the ex-premier how he and a number of friends "swapped" ducks with the lawyer's string, and later carried the spoils into Portage la Prairie and distributed them among Mr. Meighen's friends.

WEARS HIS SIDEBURNS IN HONOR OF OLD SCHOOL

SOME men wear beards, side-burns, or a goatee as a mark of distinction. Others simply wear them because they have always worn them. H. J. Scott, K.C., one of Toronto's leading lawyers, wears his side-burns because he is one of the old school and has always worn them.

Two young law students were eating their lunch in a downtown Toronto restaurant. It strolled a quiet-looking gentleman, just past middle-age, of average height, and sat down at the next table. He was dressed very quietly in a brown business suit, hair sandy brown and slightly bald—but what distinguished him from the other diners was a full bloom of sandy brown side-burns.

Says the one law student to the other: "By George, Bill, do you see the bird at the next table, with the side-burns? Talk about your typical English butlers. I'll bet his name is 'Awkins."

"You said it, Slim," said the other. "If that bird isn't a butler he's missed his calling. He could make a fortune on the stage saying, 'Yes, my lord.' But I'll bet he's a tailor or a grocer or maybe he works in an insurance office."

The conversation turned to other topics.

Next day the two law students were back in their accustomed place—but the tall one was quite excited.

"Good lord, Bill, we're a couple of bum detectives. Do you know who that bird is we were talking about yesterday? Well, I was up in the court of appeal this morning, and there he was laying down the law to five judges, and would you believe it, they were actually listening to him. I asked my chief who he was, and he says, 'Don't you know? Why that's H. J. Scott, K.C.—he's the counsel for Aylesworth and Co., and one of the biggest counsel in Canada! I thought everybody knew H. J. Scott.'"

"And you thought he was a butler. Watson, another needle."

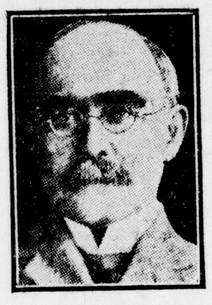
A Writer is Not a Land Shark And Mr. Kipling Now Knows It

The Famous Rudyard Is Vancouver's Most Outstanding Absentee Taxpayer — In 1889 He Bought Two Town Lots From "a Delightful English Boy" and Has Already Paid Over $2,000 Into the Civic Coffers in the Way of Taxes

RUDYARD KIPLING has one distinction of which he never boasts. He is Vancouver's most famous absentee landowner.

For thirty-five years Kipling has been paying taxes on two 25-foot lots in the residence district of Mount Pleasant, now a closely-built section of the city, but a wilderness when the author made his investment. The price he paid for the lots is not definitely known, but it must have been about $500, and he was strongly advised to wait for a rise in the market.

Kipling is a good waiter, but he must be a poor judge of real estate values. Since he bought in 1889 he could have sold at a profit many times, but it is doubtful if he could now get back the capital invested, to say nothing of interest on his money.



Rudyard Kipling

According to present values, the two lots are worth $3,000—if they could be sold! They cost $500. In the boom days they could have sold for $5,000 or more, depending on the optimism of the buyer. Officially, they are assessed at $2,025, and assessments in the west are always far below selling prices.

This year Kipling sent a certified check for $60 to pay his taxes. He has been paying this sum for fifteen years, and he probably considers it quite a jump from the $10 a year he paid in the early nineties. All told, he has paid about $2,000 in taxes.

Kipling's two lots are the only vacant ones in the block, and they are certainly not picturesque. A huge pine tree stump, about 20 feet high, is surrounded by an accumulation of tin cans and old tires. Rotting logs and huge granite boulders are scattered over the ground, and there is a tangle of second growth vegetation.

In his book, "From Sea to Sea," Kipling has given a delightfully quaint description of the Vancouver of 1889, and has related how he came to invest in Mount Pleasant real estate. He says:

"Many advantages which I had heard about, such as the construction of elaborate workshops and the like by the Canadian Pacific in the near future, moved me to invest in real estate in Vancouver. He that sold it to me was a delightful English boy who, having tried for the army and failed, had somehow meandered into a real estate office, where he was doing well. I couldn't have bought it from an American. He would have out-stated the case and proved me the possessor of the original Eden.

"All the boy said was: 'I give you my word it isn't on a cliff or under water, and before long the town ought to move out that way. I'd advise you to take it.' And I took it as easily as a man buys a piece of tobacco.

"So here I am, owner of some four hundred well-developed pines, a few thousand tons of granite scattered in blocks at the roots of the pine, and a sprinkling of earth. That's a town lot in Vancouver. You or your agent holds to it until property rises, then sell out and buy more land farther out of town, and repeat the process. I do not quite see how this kind of thing helps the growth of a town, but the English boy says that it is the 'essence of speculation,' so it must be all right. But I wish there were fewer pines and less granite on my land!"

KAISER WAS JEALOUS OF KING EDWARD'S DOG

It Attracted More Notice Than He Did Says Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

WHEN Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was a doctor in the South African war one of his patients, who was obviously dying of enteric, had a craving for solid food. A solid meal meant certain death, but as he was dying Sir Arthur, after consulting a colleague, agreed to let him have the food. A year or so later he received a letter from this patient saying that he owed his life to Sir Arthur's kindness. Since he had that square meal he had never looked back!

Sir A. Conan Doyle

Racy anecdotes are on almost every page of Sir Arthur's "Memories and Adventures" just published.

One story concerns H. G. Wells:

"His democratic frankness and complete absence of class feeling are occasionally embarrassing. I remember him asking me once if I had played cricket at Liphook. I said that I had. He said: 'Did you notice an old fellow who acts as professional and ground-keeper?' I said that I had. 'That was my father,' said Wells. I was too much surprised to answer, and could only congratulate myself that I had made no unpleasant comments before I knew the identity of the old man."

Roosevelt, Sir Arthur considers, had all the simplicity of real greatness, and was one of the raciest talkers he has ever met:

"He had no good word for Henry James. 'He is not a whole man. All that subtlety is really decadence.' He was very virile, not to say heroic in his views. 'A man should guard particularly against being led from his duty, especially a dangerous duty, by his women. I guess a woman would have had a bad time if she had tried to lead Leonidas from the pass."

Of the German Emperor he said that he was jealous of the king's dog at the king's funeral because he attracted the more notice.

RUBBING IT IN

ALL the way from Nairobi, in British East Africa, comes the following story, the narrator thereof being Mr. S. Couper, general manager of the Uganda Railway.

In a certain outlying district of the Kenya colony is a resident magistrate. When he is away a doctor acts for him.

Recently each agreed that he had broken the law by riding at night without a light. Both thought that the law would be vindicated if each appeared in court before the other.

The magistrate sat first and fined the doctor five pounds.

When it was the doctor's turn to be "the beak," he fined the magistrate twenty pounds.

The magistrate looked aghast, but the doctor justified his severity by emphasizing that an example was needed, since obviously the offense was becoming a common one. There had been another case that very day!

WHEN Lieutenant Erik Nelson, one of the American round-the-world flyers, took part in the successful series of globe-girdling hops, he carried with him—next to his heart, no doubt—the photograph which is reproduced above. It is a striking picture of Miss Ruth Butler, a well-known Follies beauty. And when the aviator had returned and the applause had died down for a moment, it was discovered that he was making prompt preparations to exchange the photograph for the original. The wedding is expected to take place any one of these fine autumn days.

What's in a Mere Name? Sometimes An Acquittal

MANY years ago, before James P. Haverson, K.C., well-known Toronto lawyer, became famous as the man who drafted the O.T.A., and a counsel who was constantly defending those charged with breaking it, the Ontario mining country got a sample of his effectiveness in legal skirmishing.

Mr. Haverson was appearing for one of his clients in Cobalt, then a dry mining camp, under the dominion law. His client was charged with "having caused one barrel of beer of intoxicating strength to be brought into Cobalt, etc."—the usual formal charge.

The case had been adjourned from week to week till three months had passed, but its turn finally came. Mr. Haverson, however, paid no attention to the preliminaries as the charge was read: "The Lion Brewing Company of Berlin is charged—"

Finally the judge said: "Well, what do you plead?"

"Oh, I'm not interested in that case," said Mr. Haverson.

"Then why are you up here?" asked the cadi.

"I am representing a client."

"Isn't this your client?" "Oh, dear me, no. I represent the Berlin Lion Breweries, Limited." The officials present smiled at the apparent naiveness of the Toronto man.

Another blue form was filled out and the magistrate re-read the charge. "I'm afraid you are a bit late in charging my client with that offense," remarked Mr. Haverson. "It occurred three months ago, and if the charge is not laid within thirty days of the date of the offense it cannot be laid after that."

And that is why James P. Haverson, K.C., is still referred to in the north country as "One of the smoothest lawyers ever seen."

HAS ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF BIG M'INTOSH REDS

Success for Eastern Man Who Went West With Courage—President of Greatest Fruit Organization

WHEN A. T. Howe of Toronto nine years ago went to the Okanagan Valley, that favored agricultural section sheltered between the mountains in British Columbia, little he thought that to-day he would be president of one of the biggest co-operative fruit-marketing organizations on the continent.

He left his wool business in the eastern city to the direction of his son. To grow fruit in the western province, where the winters are not severe and the long summer days help healthy trees to grow abundant fruit crops, was Howe's ambition.

An orchard in the famous Coldstream section, near the town of Vernon, held particular attractions for Mr. Howe and his family. They bought it.

Mr. Howe first found that some of the trees in his orchard were not of the best varieties and that they were not good sellers. This proved no handicap to him. He set out between the rows of the older trees McIntosh Red fillers, and as the latter grew to be sturdy and strong, out came the unwanted varieties and bigger grew the Macs.

To-day Mr. Howe has a hundred acres in McIntosh apples. Expert horticulturists say it is one of the finest blocks of Mac trees in the country.

It took courage to pull out those eight and ten-year-old trees that were bearing well. But Mr. Howe is a man of courage, and when he is convinced that a certain policy is right, he upholds that policy. If there is anyone—and there are very few—who can show him that he is not on the right track, he will gracefully change his opinion, but not until he has been shown by facts and figures and by men whose opinion he knows to be sound.

It took the same kind of courage to accept the nomination for president of the Associated Growers of British Columbia, Limited, the big co-operative fruit marketing organization that was brought into being on the Pacific coast last spring. It was a new organization. Its numbers, numbering approximately five thousand, had previously shipped their fruit through many agencies. All these growers had their own ideas about the way the new co-operative association was to be conducted. They told their district directors so. And these district directors came to Vernon, most of them strangers to one another, to get under way the biggest organization of its kind on the continent.

It was a big job, and Mr. Howe knew it, when he was asked by his fellow directors to take the position. The year had been a perplexing one. Just when cherries were ready to be picked, heavy rains came and split the fruit; the big black varieties did not carry well to market.

What is more, just as the busiest season started the $15,000 a year Californian who had been given the job of general manager had to throw up his position because of a nervous collapse. He resigned on a Saturday and was on his way south on Sunday.

A short time ago Mr. Howe was in Vancouver and having lunch with two Vernon friends. Just before sitting down he had received a telegram saying that a fire had done more than $2,000 damage to his tractor shed at his stock farm. (Mr. Howe runs a herd of fine Shorthorn cattle as well.) But he laughed and joked at the table as if nothing had happened.

This is typical of the Toronto man who came west to forget about active business; to grow fruit by a beautiful lake and to enjoy life. His guiding hand is directing a fruit growers' organization which, if it continues as it is going now, will make history in Canadian agricultural affairs.

Bang! She Fires a Count Sister Nina a Humdinger

Says She to the Count: "Nu Skal de Ha' Farvel og Tak," Which Doesn't Sound Like the Sort of Thing One Usually Says to Counts — A Short Sketch of Denmark's New Woman Minister of Education

SAYS she to the count: "Nu skal De ha' Farvel og Tak," which almost any book of etiquet will tell you is hardly the thing to say to counts, Danish or any other. For it means: "Thank you now, and don't come back."

This terrible social blunder was made the other day by no less a person than the new Danish minister of education, Mrs. Nina Bang, when she dispensed with the services of the charming Count Schack. At any rate, that is the versian given by a catchy ditty of the Copenhagen music-halls. For this first woman of full cabinet rank in the world is, or at any rate quite recently was, popular enough to be the subject of several widely sung ballads.

"Sister Nina, she's a humdinger, all right," seems to be the principal refrain of some of them. How did this woman official capture the public's interest and support right away, at one ministerial stroke? Signe Toksvig tells the sprightly tale in the American-Scandinavian Review.

It seems that the new Danish minister of education, in addition to the schools and the university, found that she must supervise the museums, the art galleries, and last, but not least, the royal theatre. She appears to have found altogether too many museums. Says the writer:

"The royal theatre of Denmark is an admirable, state-supported institution where the classics are kept alive, and good modern writers encouraged. It also has a fair opera company, an excellent corps de ballet, and a large deficit—nothing to compare even proportionately with the Chicago opera, but still a worrisome fact. It has been the pin on the tabouret of every minister of education. There were no less than four contradictory directors, juggling the ball of responsibility, and a count by the name of Schack was the head. By the iron law of tradition, the head had to be a count, and, there being so few in Denmark to choose from, the chosen one did not always have a vocation for the theatre.

"Fru Nina was scarcely in office before she dismissed three of the directors, leaving one capable man by the name of William Norrie in sole charge. As for the count, she declared that he was 'an unnecessary vestige.'"

She appointed an unorthodox man as head of the state training school for teachers. He is "just short of the devil!" her enemies said.

"A ball startles the anteroom. It is my turn.

"The room is wide and lofty, there are Turkish carpets, a conference table, walls of books, all highly ministerial, but no minister. Then she walks in briskly from another huge room, and, one, two, three, she has me seated where the light is on my face and she can question me at her ease. I have to push and shove and stem all that will to information, probably acquired in her own newspaper work, before I can get her to realize that she is being interviewed. But how perennially true it is that the camera always lies. No photograph that I have seen has done justice to her fine, clearly cut, sparkling face. There is not the least trace of heaviness in it, and her rosy complexion, her white hair, are everything that the most fashionable matron could desire. She is short and rather stout, but she carries it well in a straight black satin dress.

"Feminine and impulsive?" Before that determined face, those glinting eyes, that cool, direct, final manner, I shudder to think myself into the place of some unregenerate teacher, male or female, about to be examined by her. It is with some timidity that I bring out the real question in my heart—was she appointed as a woman or as a Socialist? The answer is sharp and definite. "I sit here because I am a sensible human being, and because those who appointed me think I can do my work."

This calm tradition-breaker is a practical teacher, and also a mother. Here, it has been said, are the ideal qualifications for a minister of education.

THEY HANGED HIM BUT HE DIDN'T SEEM TO MIND

Strangest Experience That Anybody's Ancestor Ever Had Was This Escape of Soldier MacDonald's

TAKEN FROM THE GALLOWS AND PRONOUNCED DEAD

Then He Jumped Up From Dissecting-Room Table, Killed Another Man Disappeared and Prospered

By WILLIAM DYER

"THERE are a good many things written in books which must be taken with a grain of salt," Sylvester said as he sat by the table in his little shop and sharpened Captain Nicholson's mighty ivory-handled razor. "Very often what we read in a book is not the thing that happened, but what the writer wished had happened. Now there was the case of Half-hanged MacDonald—it makes a very strange story as it has been written, but when the whole truth is told it is stranger still. Up to a certain point it has been recorded truthfully enough, but the very best part of the story has always been left out, and that was because the writers did not know all the facts; but I can tell you the story as it really happened from the start to the finish."

MacDonald was a soldier, serving in the 42nd Royal Highlanders, and although but a lad of nineteen, he was by far the most powerful man in the regiment; he did not realize what tremendous strength he really had. He was a peaceful and sober living lad, and when there were brawls in the street or in the pubs he gave them a wide berth. In fact he spent a great deal of his spare time in reading books, so that he was a well-informed boy and wasn't far away from a corporal's stripes when the event took place which was to cause him no end of trouble and which was the great turning point in his life.

One winter evening in the year 1741 MacDonald and some others were having a dram in a public house in a town in Lincolnshire, and an argument arose which grew more heated as the evening wore on. MacDonald did not take any part at first; but later in the evening it seems that he was drawn into the dispute, and on being called a liar by a man named Parks, he became enraged and struck Parks a slap in the face. When it was seen that MacDonald was at last aroused everyone fled from the place. MacDonald, who was now worked up to a fury, gave chase, and overtaking some men in a dark lane he struck one of them, whom he mistook for Parks, a blow on the back of the head. It was a blow of such terrific force that it caused the man's death within a few hours. MacDonald gave himself up, and told the whole truth about the unfortunate fracas. But he was tried, found guilty and hanged—or as it turned out half-hanged. It was this half-hanging that was the means of putting his name in history.

It is said that hangmen sometimes bungle their work now-a-days, and that is not strange, for hangings are few and far between; but in old times there could be very little excuse for bungling, as there was always enough material on hand to keep the hangman's hand in practice.

Surprise For Surgeon

ANYWAY, this is what happened: My ancestor, for my ancestor he really was, in spite of what the law and the doctors did, or thought they did.

He was hanged, pronounced dead, and his body handed over to the students of the medical college in the town for dissection. The students had just laid the body on the dissecting table when they found it was time to be off for dinner. So they left it there, intending to return in an hour or so and have a fine time exploring in the mortal remains of the hanged man.

A few minutes after they had left a young surgeon, having forgotten something, returned to the room, and to his utter amazement found MacDonald sitting up on the table. MacDonald begged that his life might be spared, but the surgeon, who must have been a callous wretch, struck him on the head with a mallet and killed him outright.

Now that's the way they have it in the books, but the writer of that story had reckoned without his MacDonald. The story as told is all true up to the time when the surgeon returned to the room and found MacDonald sitting up.

What really happened then was that my great-greatgrandfather sprang off the table and struck the surgeon a blow on the head with his fist, intending to stun him. The surgeon fell heavily to the floor, and MacDonald removed his clothes and put them on himself. He then placed the naked man on the dissecting table in his own stead. Then he made his escape from the building, expecting every minute that the surgeon would regain consciousness and set up a hue and cry. However, this never happened. MacDonald's blow had again proved fatal.

What happened when the students returned can only be surmised, but it seems certain that they went on with their gruesome work, not realizing until too late, if they realized at all, that matters had got mixed up during the dinner-hour.

I suppose there was a vain search for the lost surgeon, whose parts were likely placed in pickle, but I can tell you nothing about that. What I do know is that MacDonald made good his escape and soon enlisted in another regiment, not even changing his name. Some years afterwards he reached Canada, by what means I do not care to say, but he lived to a good old age in this country and died, leaving several sons, one of which was my own great-grandfather.

This seems to be the only case which has brought my family into written history, and you can see how far astray the historian went on the most important point.

Do you wonder that I always take what I read with a grain of salt?

Jilted at the Altar

SHE was telling a friend that she had been to a wedding. She described the bride's white satin gown, the veil, the slippers, the flowers, and everything.

"And what did the bridegroom wear?" asked the friend.

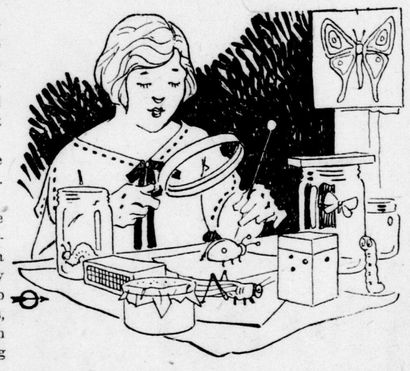
BUGHOUSE

By Malcolm Macdonald



I'VE been thinking some of writing a tender note to Premier Ferguson. It's about the high school curriculum. There was a time when my home was not an insect menagerie. The "three r's" functioned there, peaceful and noiseless, and I was contented, even happy at times.

It changed when Bill began high school. The quiet "three r's" had led far away—in zoo-ology. Bill began a collection.

Previously, collections hadn't troubled me except Sundays; and then only when I got reckless and went to church. Now my home is a zoo. Incarcerated insects crawl with ghostly steps inside little crates that once were tobacco boxes, yeast and match cartons, petrolatum jars, and such. They are ultimately gassed to death in some atrocious way, but—perhaps following the precedents of the well-known law machine—a period of imprisonment is allotted them to prepare for death. My idea was to ask the premier to amend things so they could be ushered at once into whatever hereafter was due them.

I admit they are sometimes entertaining; and I have myself let them out to walk around under suspended sentence. For instance, Thothmes, the grasshopper, who was crummy. I liked to see him scratch his back with his hopper-legs, and try to catch the cooties. But as a whole it's an intolerable nuisance. The crates are often insecure. Sometimes the acoustics are abominable. There are restless insects in tin, drumming through the night; insects of unsound mind, swishing about in paper. And my sleeping room adjoins this menagerie room where Bill does her homework, assorting bugs.

There was one cage that got my full approval, but failed to retain it. It was loaned to Bill by Kelly the Bee-Man. It's a wee crate that he gets his "queens" shipped in. Its dimensions are three inches by one inch by half an inch. There's a wire screen to provide fresh air. Thus foreign bee-queens who have abdicated their hive in distant parts, or p'raps been dethroned, may be exiled quite comfortably to Kelly.

This little cage was the prison of Caruso, a bumble-bee of pugilistic build and a rich baritone voice. Caruso, poor bee, sang only when free. In captivity he grumbled only, and in language that must have been profane. The wire screen, the feature I admired most, proved the weakness of the crate. It should have been tacked. Caruso broke jail by prising it up, and took sanctuary in my nest. There, at dead of night, he got mad and attacked me like an armed bandit. He is now dead.

During another night, Snappy annoyed us. Snappy is a snap-bug. In his babyhood he was a wire-worm, and likely gnawed holes in my potatoes. He was one of nature's curious inventions. He had a hinge in his backbone, and a contraption that went off like a released spring. He crawled about his cell in a crazy way, till he fell on his back; then he snapped his mainspring on the chance of landing on his feet. Often he fell again on his back. Then he wound up for another try, pulled his trigger, snapped his mainspring, hit the side wall of his prison, rolled over on his back and tried again.

Now, I sleep soundly through a thunderstorm, and a burglary has the same effect as chloroform. But snap-bugs are different. On the night I mentioned I had just dozed off to Dreamland when Snappy snapped. So I came back.

Again I dozed. Again he snapped . You know how that kind of thing annoys you.

I did not think of the collection. (I seldom do, except when I wake up in church to find the plate under my nose.) But I determined to get rid of that noise. I got up and listened. Snap. I moved towards it. Snap. Closer. Snap. Still closer. Snap. I shot my flash-glim. Under a geography I found a yeast box labeled "Snappy." I put it away in the attic.

Snappy has since been gassed and stitched to a square of cardboard like a fancy button. Caruso never arrived at the cardboard stage; he was mangled beyond recognition.

It's an interesting square of cardboard. Embalmed beetles are fascinating. There are butterflies in various colors—brown, yellow, mauve, all the fashionable shades. One is a polka-dot; another a white-and-blue cretonne—very fetching. Great advertisers, the butterflies; their show window embraces most of their stock-in-trade. They are the children of the bright lights.

What the Advance Man Has To Say

FAIRBANK MASTERPIECE IS "THIEF OF BAGDAD"

Opens at Grand Theatre Monday With Special Music.

In Bagdad, magic city of the east, dwells Ahmed the thief. He is an audacious rascal, living by his wits. He wanders into a temple, where the Holy Man is expounding the theory that "happiness must be earned." The thief flouts this philosophy but carries away an impression that is vaguely disturbing.

Aided by the magic rope, which he has stolen, he gains entrance to the palace of the Caliph. While looting a chest of jewels, he is intrigued by the sound of sweet music. He follows it to the bed chamber of the princess who lies sleeping. He kneels beside her couch. Her slumber becomes restless, her hand touches his. With a cry of alarm she wakes and throws aside the silk coverlid which falls over the crouching thief. He is thus hidden from the guards who rush in. The Mongol slave girl spies him, but he threatens her to silence with his dagger and escapes.

Meanwhile, three princes from afar have come to woo the princess. She sends them away for a journey of seven moons, agreeing to wed the one who returns with the rarest treasure. One of the suitors a Mongol prince, plots to raise a secret army and capture Bagdad and a Mongol slave of the princess' bed chamber is his ally.

The thief sets out on his journey, having palmed himself off as a prince of the island of Wak, which takes him through the valley of monsters, to the crystal realm beneath the sea, and up the flight of a thousand stairs, he rides the flying horse up to and through the clouds, and braves the cavern of fire. He is beset with temptation and attacked by beasts, but he wears the armor of righteous intent and comes through victorious, bringing with him the magic chest of nazir. This chest contains his birthright, true manhood and power over men.

Meanwhile, the suitors for the hand of the princess obtain their treasures. The indian prince has a magic crystal the Mongol prince a golden apple that will cure all ills and the Persian prince the magic carpet of Bagdad. At the end of the sixth moon the three princes foregather and compare treasures. In Bagdad the princess has been poisoned by order of the Mongol prince. The Indian prince, through his magic crystal sees that the princess lies dying. On the Persian prince's magic carpet they fly to her aid and with the golden apple of the Mongol prince they cure her.

The Mongol army now rises and in a surprise attack captures the city.

This news reaches the thief, who rushes in the winged horse to Bagdad. He now makes use of his magic chest of nazir, creating from nowhere an imposing army that retakes the city and restores the Caliph. Wearing his cloak of invisibility, he is able to reach the princess and on the magic carpet they sail together over the housetops headed for the land of love and we see them gliding gracefully toward the star-studded sky, in which the twinkling beacons of light spell out the words: "Happiness must be earned."

The "Thief of Bagdad" will be shown on Monday evening at 8:15 and twice daily on Tuesday and Wednesday at 2:15 and 8:15.

At the Majestic

One week, commencing Monday, Nov. 24, matinees Wednesday and Saturday, the Majestic Players will present as their opening attraction Anne Nicholls' farce comedy that broke the world's laugh record, "Just Married." Each week the latest and best royalty productions will be presented, and many pre-season attractions will be among the numbers. The Majestic Players will be a permanent organization in London.

SCENE FROM "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD."

A band of real Arabs, a symphony orchestra, full stage equipment, scenic investiture, original score, mechanics and special machines are carried with "The Thief of Bagdad," Douglas Fairbanks' wonderful exposition of a fantastic tale in which Fairbanks himself plays the leading role. The picture will be shown in London for three days only at the Grand opera house, beginning Monday evening at 8:15, and twice daily thereafter, at 2:15 and 8:15. It will positively not be shown elsewhere in London this season.

BRILLIANT COMPANY TO OPEN MAJESTIC

Broadway's Newest Productions Will Be Presented To Londoners.

To open a permanent engagement at the Majestic theatre here the Majestic Players, under the management of Clifford A. Schaufele and direction of Forest Cummings, the play that has broken the world's record for laughs has been chosen. Its name is "Just Married," and it is authored by Anne Nicholls, who, with "Abie's Irish Rose," brought more laughs to the footlights than probably any other individual.

"Just Married," a honeymoon farce, will be presented at the Majestic theatre starting Monday, Nov. 24, and will be offered for an entire week at prices which are not only popular, but which make the attraction a genuine bargain. At the matinees the prices will be no higher than 35 cents, and the evening performances the top prices will be 75 cents.

The Majestic Players promise that "Just Married," presented line for line as it was written by Anne Nicholls and not merely the title of the great stage hit with different ingredients. The same hilarity, the same everything, that caused it to become one of the most popular shows on the road will be used by the new stock company, which is to become a permanent fixture in London.

"Just Married" abounds with fun and wholesome frolic and cannot help but be a great drawing card and a splendid introductory vehicle for the Majestic Players when they make their initial bow to theatregoers here a week hence. The members of the company, including many persons who have for long been associated with Broadway attractions and various forms of stock, will arrive here Monday afternoon, and rehearsals will commence immediately. With capable people in the various roles the public are assured of supreme enjoyment at prices that will assuredly attract widespread attention for lowness.

The box office seat sale will open next Thursday, and no time should be lost in securing reservations for the opening week.

'ALONG CAME RUTH' COMING TO LOEW'S

Viola Dana's Latest Starring Vehicle Here First of Week.

No difficulty in interpreting small town characters was experienced by the members of the cast of "Along Came Ruth," Viola Dana's newest Metro starring picture, which is coming to Loew's theatre on Monday. With the exception of Viola Dana, who appears as a "big town" girl, every player hails from some hamlet or village where the arrival of each train is an event of civic importance.

Edward Cline, who directed, was born in Kenosha, Wisconsin. Raymond McKee was born "down on the farm" in Iowa. Gale Henry first saw the light of day in Bear Valley, California, up in the mountains near Big Bear Lake. Walter Hiers hails from Cordele, Georgia, a town that will never rival New York in size, although it does turn out some sizable citizens, to which Mr. Hiers' 240 pounds bear visible witness. Nelson McDowell is from the wilds of Missouri. Brenda Lane's native city is Port Huron, Michigan. Tully Marshall was born in Nevada City in the northern part of California, and was a member of the Nevada City volunteer fire department. Victor Potel and Adele Farrington were born in Ohio in villages not far apart, and DeWitt Jennings was born in Kentucky in a town of 7,000 inhabitants.

Viola Dana alone claims a large city as her birthplace. "I was born in Brooklyn," she said, "but the people in New York consider even a city the size of Flatbush just a village when you come to think of it."

NAT JEROME WILL HEAD VAUDEVILLE AT LOEW'S

In the course of time vaudeville brings everything to our door. The entertaining cycle of the varieties will be reached at Loew's next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when Nat S. Jerome will offer a pleasing little playlet, "Our Children," written by Emmet Devoy.

This sketch has been played by him for the past four or five years, and the play, which has been such a tremendous success in New York, known as "Abie's Irish Rose," contains the same identical plot — almost. Inasmuch as Mr. Jerome's playlet was written and presented before "Abie's Irish Rose" saw the light of day—well, the answer is obvious, is it not? We do not know whether Miss Ann Nichols (the author of "Abie's Irish Rose") ever saw the sketch or not, but, inasmuch as his sketch has been playing for four or five years, she may have seen it. Of course, the basic principle of idea of both the sketch of Mr. Jerome's and the play of Miss Nichols, is founded more or less upon the same situations.

LEADING MAN OF MAJESTIC PLAYERS.

Edward Cullen, leading man with the Majestic Players, who will open a permanent engagement at the Majestic theatre commencing Monday, Nov. 24. The company is under the management of Clifford A. Schaufele and direction of Forest Cummings, both of whom have long been associated with various theatrical organizations. "Just Married," Anne Nichols' laughing farce-comedy, will be the opening attraction.

NERO USED CONCAVE EMERALD TO SEE SPORTS IN COLISEUM

Written Especially for The Advertiser By C. H. CLARKE, D.O.R.O.

The ancients undoubtedly understood the laws of refraction to a certain extent and were not ignorant of the use of lenses and optical instruments. It is recorded in history that the great Roman emperor Nero found that a concave or hollowed emerald enabled him much better to see the sports of the day at the famous coliseum. However, the first use of spectacles was for the correction of presbyopia (old age), and to Roger Bacon is given the credit of having first worn and recommended their use—years 1214-1292.

For many years the use of spectacles was confined to correcting the deficiencies of the eye due to age, and not until some fifty years ago was this important subject carefully studied by eminent scientists, which has resulted in great advances being made in the treatment of the eye and disease associated with it, and for the correcting of the various optical defects by properly adjusted glasses. In no other branch of the sciences has such progress been made—so much relief to suffering humanity been given—as in the science of optics.

Common Defects.

The most common defects of the eye are: Presbyopia, known as old sight; hyperopia, known as far sight; Myopia, known as near sight; astigmatism; cyclophoria; esophoria, muscular; hyperphoria, insufficiencies; and exorphoria.

Presbyopia is a natural condition due to the inability of the eye to focus or adjust itself to close work, such as reading and sewing, etc. This condition manifests itself at any time from 40 to 45 years of age, although cases are on record which have developed as early as 30. The symptoms are a demand for brighter light, holding reading at a greater distance than formerly, print blurring or running together, and eyes feeling tired after prolonged reading. A contest with age is hopeless, and it is wise to yield gracefully to the first sign, especially in a case of your eyes.

Hyperopia is really mechanical defect—that is, the eye ball being flatter than is natural, with a result that images falling on the retina or back of the eye are blurred. The only way to overcome this condition is to supply a convex or positive lense that will adjust the rays of light so that they will bring the image to a sharp focus. Hyperopia is a most common and troublesome eye defect, and also the most deceiving to the one who suffers from it. The eyes look perfectly clear, and long distance may be quite sharp, in fact, the symptoms do not show directly on the eye itself. The strain which is always present with this condition manifests itself by headaches, dizziness, nausea or nervous irritability. Properly fitted glasses by an experienced optometrist in a great many cases immediately remedies the trouble.

The Closed Eye.

Myopia—The word myopia is of Greek origin, meaning to close the eye—the partial closing of the eye in order to see distinctly being characteristic of all myopes. They thereby concentrate the rays of light, getting a more defined and distinct image. Myopia is known as a disease of civilization, it being seldom found in uncivilized countries, and is generally hereditary, but ofttimes is acquired by young children when compelled to do close work. The condition of myopia is directly opposite to that of hyperopia, and the treatment of that is also the reverse of hyperopia. The eyeball in this case is too curved, and the rays of light come to focus before they reach the back of the eye, and therefore concave lenses must be used to lengthen the focus.

Astigmatism was first discovered in the year 1801, by Thomas Young, an English scientist, and was first corrected by cylindrical lenses, in 1827, by Prof. Airy, an astronomer at Cambridge, one of the most versatile scientific writers of any age.

Volumes could be devoted to the explanation of astigmatism and its complications with presbyopia, hyperopia and myopia, but to those not familiar with the anatomy of the eye it would be impossible to convey a clear idea without an object lesson, as it were, with different lenses, charts of the eye, etc. Of all the refractive errors of the eye, astigmatism and its complications require the most skill and experience in correcting, yet only a few words can be devoted to the subject.

Malformation.

Astigmatism is also a malformed condition—an optical defect of the eye, in which, from want of uniformity in the curvature of the cornea, different meridians have a different focus. The perfectly formed cornea is part of a sphere or globe, and has the same degree of convexity in all directions, consequently the same focal distance for all meridians. The astigmatic cornea is not symmetrical, but has different curvatures in all directions to each other. The rays of light passing through the greatest curvature have the shortest focus difference, and those passing through the least curvature have the longest focal distance; no sharply defined image can be formed upon the retina by such a cornea. For example, draw a line around an egg, and another line through the middle and at right angles to the first. It is first evident that these lines have a very different curvature, and that if the egg was made of glass it would form a sharp focus, as a glass sphere does; it would be astigmatic. All lenses for astigmatic cases are ground to fit each particular eye, and require very delicate tests to determine the exact amount of correction for each particular meridian.

Strengthens Muscles.

Eye Muscles—This is indeed the newest and also very important branch of optical science, the exercising and strengthening of the various muscles of the eye. At each side and also the top and bottom of the eyeball, there are a set of muscles attached, which enable the eye to be turned in any direction. If these muscles are not balanced correctly, there is a great strain on the nervous system, as increased nerve force is needed to supply the weaker muscles. Some of the more definite symptoms of muscle imbalance is cross eyes and squint. There are, however, a great number of people who suffer from lesser defects, who are troubled with headaches, pains in the head, sometimes stomach trouble. It is not always necessary to wear glasses for the relief of these conditions, as the weak muscles of your eyes can be exercised and strengthened the same as any other muscle in the body. This must be done, of course, under the direction of a thoroughly competent and up-to-date optometrist.

Scientific instruments are used in a modern examination of the eye. The days of the old trail frame and ready-made spectacles are gone. Among the most important of the devices used today for eye examinations are the phorometer, optalmeter, retinoscope and opthalmoscopes.

The modern phorometer takes the place of the trial frame of bygone days, and is used in determining the refractive errors, that is, the defect that can be remedied by the use of proper lenses. Every combination of lenses, regardless of power or application, can be prescribed by use of this instrument.

Measures Curves.

The ophthalmeter measures the corneal curves and determines with certainty the amount of corneal astigmatism and its axis. The positive knowledge of positions of the meridians of the least and greatest refraction, and of the whole amount of corneal astigmatism, is of the greatest value, enabling the operator to conduct the examination logically and quickly, and to save the patient the time and annoyance of a long examination. It has positive diagnostic value of the cornea due to the lesions of the cornea tissue as a result of granular eyelids, ulcers, wounds, etc.

Retinoscope—This instrument is also used for the refraction of the eye, by means of a bright light put into the eye through the pupil. The shadow or reflection seen by the experienced optometrist enables him to quickly form an exact diagnosis of the trouble. This type of examination is used on very young children, illiterates, or people of foreign birth, and the examiner is in no way subject to their answers, as there is no questioning necessary in a procedure of this kind.

Ophthalmoscope—A thorough examination of the inside of the eye, the blood vessels, retina, macular and fundus would be impossible without the opthalmoscope. In the hands of an experienced refractionist, the ophthalmoscope is invaluable for examining the nerve heads and general health of the eye. Excess of alcohol or tobacco is readily shown when this instrument is used.

Crookes Glass.

Sir William Crookes, the eminent English scientist, was the discoverer of this widely known and very beneficial glass. He spent years of the most painstaking work in the study of the absorptive properties of glass made under his supervision, and finally succeeded in producing a glass which, while almost without color, absorbs the ultra-violet and infra-red light, which are the rays which cause such great discomfort to the human eye. When this glass is used the patient can readily go into strong sunlight or bright reflections without the least discomfort, and yet at the same time see everything in its natural colors. This glass is used almost exclusively in bright sunny climates, and is being sold very largely in Canada to motorists and other people whose occupation brings them in contact with bright light, either natural or artificial.

Bifocal Lenses—It is a long step from Benjamin Franklin crude, old-fashioned, split bifocals to the invisible bifocals of today. It was Benjamin Franklin who first conceived the idea of having more than one power or strength of lenses in the same frame, and it has given untold satisfaction and convenience to millions of eyeglass wearer. The first bifocal lens consisted of two half lenses in the same frame, with a big crack across the center. Next came the cemented bifocals, which for a great many years enabled us to see far and near with the same glasses. These consisted of a small, thin segment of glass cemented on to a major lens.

The new invisible bifocal is the last word in glasses. Made in one solid piece without seam or cement, they enable the wearer to read or sew properly and also to see at an indefinite distance. The principle on which these lenses are made is based entirely on the refractive indices of the different glass used, namely, crown glass and flint glass.

Frames—Ten years ago there were only two or three styles of frames and mountings known to the optical profession. Today progressive optometrists can show you from fifty to fifty-five styles, some appropriate for work and sport, others for afternoon and formal wear, to fit long faces and fat faces, dark hair or fair hair, and let it be said here that nothing is more conspicuous, and either attracts or detracts to a person's appearance as a person's glasses. It is no more logical to wear the same glasses for everything than it is to wear the same dress or shoes. There are proper glasses for every occasion, and the well dressed person of today pays as much attention to the selection of their eyeglass frames as they do to the cut of their clothes. Glasses either complete or mar your appearance.

Fitting Important.

No matter how carefully your eyes are examined, or how much care is exercised in the selection of proper lenses, the glasses will not be satisfactory unless they are properly fitted and adjusted.

It is a well-known fact that no two thumb prints are the same, and it is also true that there are no two faces exactly the same measurements. It is quite common to have one eyebrow higher than the other, or one side of the nose more curved than the opposite, and it is to these details that the expert frame fitter must pay attention. The most important measurement in regards to the frame is the pupilary distance, that is, the distance between the two pupils, and also that you look through the center of the lenses from top to bottom, as well as from side to side. In bridges alone, there are commonly stocked fifty sizes, and also five or six different lengths of sides. This, along with the fact that there are dozens of different sizes and shapes of lenses. The foregoing will give some idea of the minute attention necessary to have each individual frame fitting the way that it should.

Facts About Optometry

What are the duties of the Optometrist?

He detects by the use of various instruments and other means the errors of vision of his patients.

Anything else?

Yes, he determines what lenses are required to correct the errors and supplies them.

Then the Optometrist specializes in errors of vision?

Yes, Optometry is a profession distinct in duties from all others, and not conflicting in any way with any other profession.

What indicates the value of Optometry?

The fact that it has been legally recognized in every state and province.

What is one important provision of the Optometry law?

A Board of Examiners in Optometry.

Do the Optometry laws make Optometry of more value to the public?

Yes, as an incompetent person is not permitted to practice.

What does Optometry embrace?

The pathology, anatomy and physiology of the eye. Its extreme liability to abnormalities. The means by which they may be corrected. The detection of all errors of vision when not caused by a diseased condition. The correction of these errors by lenses, without the use of drugs. Also the preparation of the necessary lenses and their adjustment to the features of the patient.

It would appear that Optometry occupies an important relation to public welfare?

Yes, it is fully as important as any other profession.

Information relative to the care of your eyes will be published each Monday, Wednesday and Saturday on the Woman's Page. Read these carefully.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID LATE DR. WARNER

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Nov. 14.—Hundreds paid silent tribute beside the bier of the late Dr. Warner, beloved principal emeritus of Alma College, as the body lay in state in Central Methodist church following a private service at the late Dr. Warner's apartment at Alma College, conducted by the family pastor, Rev. Robert Hicks. Six Alma daughters formed a guard of honor and accompanied the remains to their last resting-place.

At 2 o'clock a procession, headed by 38 black-gowned students-in-training, and nearly a block in length, left the college and divided, forming a lane to allow Dr. Warner's brother ministers and former associates to enter the church. Dr. Dobson, Rev. Mr. Hicks, Rev. Anthony, moderator of the Presbyterian church of this district, Rev. Dr. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist church in Canada, Rev. Wilfrid Gaetz and Rev. H. J. Uren, London, president of the London conference, were followed in order by more than 40 ministers from all parts of Western Ontario. The college board and Alma daughters were next in line, and behind them students and ex-students of Alma.

Order of Service.

The service was fittingly opened by the use of Dr. Pace's famous hymn, "I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise;
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies."

Rev. Uren called on Dr. G. T. Henderson to lead in prayer. The Scripture lessons, one from the Old and one from the New Testament, were read by Rev. John Garbutt of London and Rev. Wilfrid Gaetz, the latter choosing that favorite lesson from the Gospel of St. John, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Dr. Chown in his address testified to the perfect spirit of devotion which Dr. Warner had always shown in his work as a minister, as principal of Alma college and then as principal emeritus. As spokesman for the board of evangelism and social service, which met Wednesday, he conveyed an expression of their sorrow and their sympathy to the bereaved family. He told something of the development of the college under the administration of Dr. Warner.

Dr. J. W. Graham, secretary of the department of education of the Methodist church, spoke on his association with Dr. Warner, of his gracious personality and the sweetness of his life. He had been an idealist, a great believer in the home as the foundation of community and national life, and although a modernist, he never departed from his conservative ideas that the school should be a cultural institution for development of personality.

Rev. Anthony, moderator of the Presbytery of London, carried the respects of the sister church to a "leader in Christian life." Dr. Dobson spoke of his five years' association with Dr. Warner and of the untiring assistance he rendered the problems of the institution. He read letters of sympathy from the Hamilton conference, old associates and from Sir Adam Beck. Rev. Robert Hicks closed the service.

Interment was made in St. Thomas cemetery.

Ministers in Attendance.

The ministers in attendance were: William Jewett, George Jewitt, John W. Graham, D.D., (Toronto), John Garbutt, David N. McCamus, George T. Watts, J. E. J. Millyard, R. J. Garbutt, H. J. Uren, president of London conference, R. J. McCormick, W. L. Hiles, John A. Agnew, Arthur Love, Arthur Page, Harry Boyle, G. W. W. Reeves, H. B. Parnaby, S. Anderson, Heber W. Crews, George N. Hazen, D.D., Leonard Bartlett, W. F. Gaetz, David Rogers, A. E. Moorehouse, Robert Hicks, P. S. Dobson, S. R. McVitty, H. T. Ferguson, Waldemar Williams, A. E. Millson, James Husser, A. McKibbin, C. L. L. Cousins, Canon Andrew, Rev. Harding, Rev. Hammond, Rev. Newnham, Rev. Geer, Dr. Chown, Rev. Gaetz, Dr. George Henderson, Rev. Anthony.

The guard of honor was Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Duncombe, Mrs. Giles, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. McTavish and Mrs. Kerr.

GIRL GOES TO DANCE AND FAILS TO RETURN

Search Started For Margaret Phalcox, Port Alma, Missing Since Wednesday.

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, Nov. 14.—Margaret Phalcox, a 16-year-old Port Alma girl, is reported missing. According to the information in the hands of county police, the girl left home about a week ago to take care of an aged woman in Wheatley, and on Monday night left that town to atend a dance in Tilbury. It is thought that she went to Tilbury in a coupe, carrying a Michigan license, and driven by a stranger. The couple was seen in Tilbury during the evening, but no trace of them can be found since that time.

TRADE BOARDS TO SEEK FOREST CONSERVATION

Move Also To Preserve Lake Levels—Associations May Amalgamate.

ELECT OFFICERS

C. M. Iredale of Preston Chosen President For Ensuing Year.

C. M. Iredale of Preston was elected yesterday president of the United Boards of Western Ontario Association for 1925, at the closing session of the annual convention. Vice-presidents for next year are F. McClure Sclanders of Windsor, Frank Harding of St. Thomas, Amos Tipling of Wingham and A. T. McNeill of Woodstock.

The last session of the meeting was marked by the introduction of a resolution by Mr. Sclanders as a definite step towards the solution of the problem of forest preservation. It urges the federal government to make a public statement in the press of the country as to the present situation in the Canadian lumber industry. The mover stated that this was not intended in any way as an embarrassment to the government but merely in order that the general public might be assured of the exact standing of the country in regard to one of its most important natural resources.

He said there was a good deal of apprehension abroad as to the safety of the forest resources, and that he believed the forests generally were not receiving the attention to which they were entitled.

Chicago Menaces.

The same speaker also warned the representatives that the city of Chicago was making vast preparations to have legalized the use of at least 10,000 cubic feet of lake water, and possibly 16,000 feet for their drainage canal, and brought in a resolution commending the federal government for its activities in this matter.

"Chicago has retained 25 of the most expert engineers in the country," he said, "for the purpose of making representations to congress to have the use of the water made legal. If the supreme court of the United States, soon to settle the question of legality, decides against the city, a determined effort will be made to obtain legality in the way I have pointed out."

Inter-provincial trade and relationship was discussed in the morning, when a resolution calling for a movement in this direction was moved. Colonel Brown, bespeaking its favorable attention by the meeting, stated that if speakers from both the West and the Maritimes could be induced to tell their problems to the people of Ontario that that would do a great deal to bring these three parts of the country into closer touch and understanding. He suggested that members of the federal house who came from these parts should be asked to deliver addresses during the winter sessions of the house in various parts of old Ontario. This was the gist of a resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

Lauds Government.

Mr. Sclanders was responsible for a resolution brought in late in the afternoon, which was an approval of the attitude of the federal government toward the Chicago water diversion, and expressed the appreciation of the united boards of trade at the live interest being now displayed by the government in this question.

Amalgamation of the united boards of trade of Western Ontario with the associated boards of trade of Ontario, which has been one of the wishes of several members of the Western Ontario organization for some time, was aimed at in a resolution sponsored by the London chamber of commerce. It leaves the actual details of the amalgamation in the hands of the executive, but this is merely a matter of financial arrangements as to the payment and amount of fees, and no difficulty is anticipated in the carrying through of this project.

George Mathews of Brantford strongly supported the idea, stating that it was a move in the direction of closer union of all the trade interests in Ontario, and that it would contribute largely to the educational development of businessmen about other parts of this very large province.

Removes Opposition.

Mr. Sclanders was anxious that resolutions passed by the Ontario association would be as vigorously followed up as they had been in the past by the united boards, and on being assured by Mr. Mathews, who is on the executive, that they would, withdrew any opposition he had held toward amalgamation.

Mr. Sclanders' resolution on forest conservation provoked some discussion, asking the federal government to make public a statement showing the exact position at the present time of the timber resources of the dominion.

This resolution asks for:

(1) The estimated present merchantable lumber and pulpwood.

(2) The estimated cut in each of the last three years of lumber and pulpwood.

(3) The estimated annual destruction during each of the last three years from fire, insects, fungi and other causes.

(4) Estimated proportion of new growth becoming merchantable annually at present rate of annual depletion.

(5) How long is it estimated that the available supply of lumber and pulpwood will last at the present rate, taking new growth into account.

(6) The nature and extent of present reforestation activities, and its percentage proportion to present denudation.

(7) What are the government's objections to the institution of an embargo upon pulpwood and pulp to the United States? ?

Wealth Depleted.

"I have every reason to believe," he said, "from what I have heard on reliable authority that the forest wealth of this country is being seriously depleted, and that there is no appreciation among our people of the real situation. In little Sweden, with its total land area less than Manitoba, the spruce yelds an annual revenue of over $100,000,000, and with them the spruce takes longer to mature than it does in Canada. It is simply the result of careful government conservation and reforestation. There is no valid reason why we should not be in a proportionately similar position."

George S. Mathews pointed out that the Ontario government had in operation at the present time legislation whereby it would supply all the necessary seedlings to plant any piece of land donated for reforestation purposes. He thought that the fact should be better known throughout Ontario.

Colonel W. J. Brown, speaking on lake-shore erosion, recommended the planting of sweet clover on the banks where most serious inroads occur, to be followed later by the planting of white willows.

Plant Willows.

"It has been found," he said, "that the white willow tree is a tree easy to grow. Its roots will in time completely stop erosion, and it has been successfully used on banks near the shores of the lakes for some time. The sowing of sweet clover on the sides of the gullies which are so common around the lake shore will do a great deal to prevent this waste and breaking up of the foreshore."

Reading from statistics obtained from the department of geological survey, Ottawa, he said the chief erosion in Ontario took place on the shore between Kingston and the base of Point Pelee Peninsula. In some parts, however, the shore had advanced out into the lake. It was estimated by the department that at Scarboro heights, Toronto, the erosion had eaten away half a mile of land in the last 50 years.

UNITED STATES SHOWS LARGE TRADE INCREASE

Associated Press Despatch.

Washington, Nov. 14.—A favorable trade balance for the United States of $217,000,000 was shown today in foreign trade figures issued by the commerce department for the month of October.

The figures indicated that the balance had more than doubled in favor of the United States since last year, when it was $90,908,205.

Exports of merchandise for the month were valued at $527,000,000, against $399,199,014 for the same period last year. Imports were valued at $310,000,000, as against $308,290,809 a year ago. The export increase was principally due to enlarged movements in cotton and grain.

U. F. O. WILL URGE FLAT HYDRO RATE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 14. — Among more than seventy resolutions which will be discussed at the annual United Farmers of Ontario convention, to be held here December 16 to 19, are ones covering education, hydro, O. T. A., women's institutes, and military training.

One will ask the government to instruct the hydro commission to approach a flat rate and that farmers be given representation on the commission.

Another is to have all glorification of the war as an institution removed from school books in Ontario. Military training in the schools is strongly repudiated and expenditure of monies by the government for the purpose is disapproved of.

That the Ontario temperance act has been of the greatest benefit to the province and that members of the United Farmers of Ontario will do everything in their power to inforce it, is another resolution.

Taxation on gasoline, the revenue from which is to be apportioned to the municipalities for the upkeep of roads, is also favored. All the resolutions are now being prepared by the executive committee, and copies of them will be distributed to all the United Farmer clubs throughout the province.

THREE MEN ARE KILLED AS M.C.R. FLIER HITS CAR

George Morris and Two Employees Meet Death Near Fletcher.

FATHER SAVES BOY

Hurls Son From Auto As He Himself Goes To Death.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Tilbury, Nov. 14.—George Morris, Sr., 45, and James O'Boyle, 25, were instantly killed, and Allie McCausland, 28, died within a few minutes when an auto in which they were riding was smashed to pieces when struck by the Wolverine, one of the fastest trains on the M. C. R., at the Williams crossing about half a mile west of Fletcher at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Robert Morris, eleven-year-old son of George Morris, was thrown from the auto by his father just before the train struck the machine and escaped with serious bruises.

The party was motoring to Chatham to meet Vida and Donald Morris, children of George Morris, who are attending the collegiate institute there.

Thrown From Car.

Details preceding the accident are almost impossible to secure, as Robert Morris can hardly tell what happened. He knows he was thrown from the auto by his father, and says no one in the car saw the train until it was right on them.

There is a slight grade leading up to the crossing, and it is believed the auto stalled on the tracks.

John Labonte, who lives close to the crossing, was attracted to the scene by the cries of the lad who lay alongside the track close to the crossing. As he went to the boy he noticed that the train which had passed was coming to a stop. Hurrying the injured lad into his home, he called John Williams, who lives close by, and together they returned to the scene of the fatality, and with members of the train crew found the auto a mass of wreckage with the bodies of Morris and O'Boyle nearby, and McCausland in a dying condition. Labonte says he did not hear the sound of the crash and did not at first see the auto because it was some distance up the track and darkness obscured his view.

Dr. McCall of Tilbury was called, but before he arrived McCausland had died. Coroner Dr. J. B. Bell of Merlin was also summoned, and after a jury had been hurriedly summoned and viewed the remains he ordered the bodies brought to the undertaking parlors of Joseph Moss. The inquest was adjourned until Wednesday next at 2 p.m. in Tilbury.

Came From Ireland.

Robert Morris was later removed to the bereaved home, concession 8, Tilbury East township.

McCausland and O'Boyle came to Canada from Ireland about six months ago, and have since been employed on the Morris farm. They have no relatives in this country.

Survivors of Mr. Morris are his widow, a daughter of the late George Adams of Jeanettes Creek, and four children, Vida, Donald, Robert and George, Jr.

The train was in charge of Conductor John Sheehan and Engineer Michael Tracy, both of St. Thomas. The track at this point is straight and the train frequently makes 70 miles an hour. The view of the crossing is comparatively clear. The train crew had no statement to make tonight.

GAS ASSOCIATION STRONGLY URGED

Ontario Commissioner Tells National Supply Is Rapidly Diminishing.

ANNUAL MEETING

Special to The Advertiser.

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—Delegates to the number of more than 100 from all parts of southwestern Ontario assembled at the Royal Connaught hotel this morning for the sixth annual convention of the Natural Gas and Petroleum Association of Canada.

A feature of the morning session was the re-election of President C. E. Steele of Port Colborne to the presidency. Mr. Steele has held this office since the association was first organized at London in June, 1919.

Other Officers.

The other officers of the association for the coming year are as follows: First vice-president, G. D. Wickett, Windsor; 2nd vice-president, S. B. Severson, Buffalo; secretary-treasurer, S. A. Morse, Chatham (re-elected); directors, P. S. Coate, Chatham; H. R. Davis, Buffalo; H. B. Pearson, Calgary, Alberta; P. A. Little, Buffalo; E. P. Rowe, Toronto; J. B McNary, Hamilton.

Messrs. Wickett and Severson, as first and second vice-president, replace Messrs. P. S. Coate and H. R. Davis, who held these offices last year. Messrs. Coate and Davis, while declining re-election to their previous posts, consented to serve on the directorate.

The remainder of the morning session was taken up with the reports of the various committees. President C. E. Steele presided.

The stabilization of the natural gas industry in Ontario in recent years was reflected in the comparatively small amount of business reported by Chairman H. R. Davis of the board of directors, this being in marked contrast to previous years, when the much-discussed rate question kept the association officers decidedly busy.

After conferring with representatives of the workmen's compensation board regarding the classification of the natural gas industry under the workmen's compensation act, the directors had deemed it advisable to retain the present classification.

Finances Good.

The report of Secretary-Treasurer S. A. Morse of Chatham showed the association to be in thriving financial condition.

Mr. Steel, in his address, emphasized the importance of an educational campaign amongst consumers of natural gas. Real facts should be presented to the people by the companies, he said, and if this was done, the president thought that many of the problems of the business today would automatically disappear.

"Until the price of gas reaches a point commensurate with the price of substitute fuels the gas conservation act is a misnomer," continued the president. "I think it only fair to say, however, that the present government deserves credit for its consideration for the situation in Canada."

Col. R. B. Harkness, Toronto, commissioner of gas, referred to the fact that the natural gas supply was rapidly diminishing, which was a matter of deep concern. The need of conservation was stressed. There was an investment in the industry in Ontario of $25,571,000, he said, and 839 employed. The total production in 1923 was 8,128,413,000 cubic feet, with an approximate retail value of $4,066,244. Substitute fuel to render the same service would cost $14,432,432, it was estimated.

Hold Banquet.

The convention closed tonight with the annual banquet at Hotel Royal Connaught, when T. A. Daly of Philadelphia spoke on "The Poetry of Business and the Business of Poetry."

After a spirited contest between Niagara Falls and Toronto, decision was reached to hold next year's convention in Toronto, the meeting favoring a two-day convention.

CURRENT DEPOSITS SHOW INCREASE, SAVINGS SLUMP

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—The bank statement for September shows increases in both assets and liabilities of Canadian banks during that month. Current deposits increased by approximately twelve millions during the month, while savings deposits showed a decrease of somewhat over a million. The decrease of two million dollars in the total reserve fund was due to writing down of the reserve of the Molsons Bank, which was taken over by the Bank of Montreal. Liabilities aggregate $2,670,599,562, compared with $2,355,792,116 a year ago, while assets totalled $2,690,578,550 as against $2,624,894,244 for September of last year.

HER NERVES BETTER NOW

Received Much Benefit by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chatham, Ont.—"I started to get weak after my second child was born, and kept on getting worse until I could not do my own housework, and was so bad with my nerves that I was afraid to stay alone at any time. I had a girl working for me a whole year before I was able to do my washing again. Through a friend I learned of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took four bottles of it. I gave birth to a baby boy the 4th day of September, 1922. I am still doing my own work and washing. Of course, I don't feel well every day because I don't get my rest as the baby is so cross. But when I get my rest I feel fine. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and am going to keep on with it until cured. My nerves are a lot better since taking it. I can stay alone day or night and not be the least frightened. You can use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. CHAS. CARSON, 27 Forsythe St., Chatham, Ont.

Thanks Gin Pills for excellent health

"I have been unable to rest at night with pains around my kidneys and through the small of my back, at times so bad that I was unable to rise from bed without assistance. The trouble so affected my kidneys that urination was at times difficult, and at other times so frequent as to cause me great inconvenience. I started on a course of Gin Pills and before I had taken half a box I felt relief. Before I had completed the second box the pains had left my back and I felt quite restored and well again. I attribute my present excellent health entirely to Gin Pills."—J. S. Lillis, Hamilton, Ont.

Gin Pills never fail to bring relief to sufferers from weakened, disordered kidneys. If you have any symptom of kidney trouble—if you are bothered by headaches, pain in the back, bladder weakness, or rheumatism, do not delay. Order Gin Pills to-day and say goodbye to suffering.

Chiropractors Giving Assistance and Relief to Locomotor Ataxia Patients

Primarily the human species lived in accordance with the laws of Nature, in the open, free health-giving air, with foods in their neutral state for substance, and as God willed. The vitality was great, life was long, disease not prevalent.

But—humanity has progressed to a less rugged means of existence, and today the world stands unveiled as the home of a deteriorating and diseased family of unhealthy individuals.

Without a solitary doubt it is the effect of a single cause, aided and impelled by a combination of circumstances, becoming more unreasonable and irresistible as the so-called "Modern Civilization" of the world advances and modes of livelihood depart more and farther from the natural and primitive.

The combination of circumstances has been recognized for years, but unfortunately the pre-disposing cause of an unhealthy state was not discovered until late in the 20th century, when the science of Chiropractic was in its advent.

All disease, regardless of the specific name applied, is the result of a lack of vital bodily force at the affected part; and having fundamentally realized and accepted this hypothetical truth, to determine the cause of this deficient force, we must look to its point of generation, and mode of transmission to different parts and extremities of the body.

DO YOU WANT HEALTH?

We breathe air, digest foods, secrete liquids, excrete poisons from the body without notice or control upon our part as to why or how the action takes place, and in questioning these processes, it has been definitely and unquestionably proven that every bodily action or function is produced by a vital force generated in the brain. Thence it is conducted to every tissue of the body by the nervous system as a medium.

Passing downward from the brain, through the canal in the spinal column, the main nerve trunk, or spinal cord, gives off its branches, which pass through the openings between the segments of the backbone and, following a process of subdivision, ultimately become the means of supplying force to the individual cells of the anatomy. This is the expression of bodily energy, also organic and glandular functions, with health the result.

HOW SICKNESS IS CAUSED.

Through accident, injury, sudden shock or over-exertion, the segments or single parts of which the backbone is made up sometimes lose their direct and natural apposition to the vertebrae or segments above and below, thus closing to a minute or exaggerated degree, the opening between them.

This produces pressure on the nerves passing through the opening and the result is a pinched nerve, unable to carry its full capacity and disease, the effect of an inhibited supply of "vital force" at the spinal column. In other words, the loss of direct or accurate apposition (technically termed a subluxation) is the cause, while disease is the result of an inhibition of "vital force" produced in the brain but prevented from reaching the cells of the body because of interference at the spine.

APPLIED TO LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

Locomotor Ataxia is no exception to this truth, readily proven by knowledge that it is a disease which embodies a hardening and atrophy or wasting away a part of the spinal cord.

As the nerve fibres originating in the brain converge to form the spinal cord, the means of exit being at the base of the skull, there is a subluxation of either the first or second spinal segments which produces a pressure on the cord, not its branches and this in conjunction with improper functioning of the kidneys has been clinically proven the cause of Locomotor Ataxia.

So Chiropractors to correct the disease, adjust the subluxation at the top of the spinal cord in combination with a subluxation which will be found in all cases impinging nerves which lead to the kidneys. This allows for an unobstructed medium for conduction of vital force with ultimate health as a result.

SYMPTOMS

In the initial period the tactile sense in the lower extremities is lost, combined with abnormalities of vision in some cases. Following this there is the appearance of the so-called "Ataxic gait," a peculiar means of progression brought about by inability to feel with the feet. Also loss of sensation and lack of muscular control, making it necessary for the patient to place his feet according to eyesight and stand with eyes open, that equilibrium may be maintained. Also during the Ataxia stage there are ordinarily present excruciating pains, occurring at the intervals, of a neuralgic nature, usually in the lower extremities, but occasionally throughout the body.

The paralytic stage occurs at that time when the patient is no longer able to walk, has no control over the legs whatever, and there is complete lack of tactile sense. Death rarely is the result of this disease, but usually results from an accompanying incoordination.

There is no definite termination for either Stage, no set course, as the first and second stages vary in duration from a few months to twenty years, although the same general symptoms are found in nearly all cases.

WHY DO CASES DIFFER?

But let it be considered that the irregularity of the disease, the deviation of affection in different cases is the result of a difference in degree of impingement of nerves and not a difference in the cause of the disease.

Further, that the general bodily vitality and physical makeup of any patient has considerable to do with fighting the disease and is a fortress against its weakening effects, that other subluxations co-existing will prevent co-ordination aside from the Locomotor Ataxia, and that atrophy of nerves will occur in some individuals at, say, six months, while in others it may take years.

Remember that each case is separate and distinct in itself, apart from all others, governable so far as possibilities of recovery are concerned, by failure of no other diseased individual to respond.

Bear in mind that the old saying, "A failure by one may be made a success by another," also that Chiropractors have and are giving assistance and relief to Locomotor Ataxia patients, not only in the initial but also in the secondary stages, bringing about complete recovery in numerous instances which are on record and may be obtained on request.

PRIVATE OWNERSHIP OF TIMBER IS RAPPED

Manitoba Progressives Join Forces to Growing Opposition to Sale.

Associated Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—The proposed sale of certain areas of pulpwood land in Northern Manitoba to private interests by the federal government is meeting with opposition from various organizations in the province, the latest of which is the provincial Progressive party.

The Progressive representatives to parliament for Manitoba constituencies held a conference here yesterday attended by Robert Forke, M. P., their leader. In a statement issued after the meeting, Mr. Forke said: "The return to the prairie provinces of their natural resources is still under negotiation and the Dominion government should not in the circumstances dispose of these limits except in strict accordance with precedent and under conditions to which the consent of the provincial government could be obtained."

The limit which is known as "berth No. 2," comprises forty thousand square miles on both sides of Lake Winnipeg and as far north as Norway house. A number of mills are now operating in the territory, and it is declared approximately eight hundred men will be out of employment if the sale goes through.

MAJESTIC PLAYERS OFFER "JUST MARRIED"

Anne Nicholls' Hit To Be First Offering at Re-opening.

Hereafter it won't be necessary to travel to the bright lights of Broadway to witness the latest in dramatic productions. The Majestic Players, a stock company new to London, but who have now made a name for themselves at the Temple theatre, Hamilton, where another branch of the organization are now in their second successful season, are to open at the Majestic theatre on Monday, Nov. 24, a permanent engagement in this city, and will present the latest Broadway productions at prices that will be indeed popular.

"Just Married," a play that has broken the world's record for laughs and a composition of Anne Nicholls, the author of "Abie's Irish Rose," is to be the opening attraction. It is to be followed by "The Rat," that well-known mystery play by Mary Roberts Reinhardt, and all the scenic and electrical effects carried by the road show of the same name will be used. Following later on will be "Ashes," and there will be a continuous succession of attractions produced precisely as they are presented on New York's famous avenue. Just to give the public some idea of the "up-to-the-minuteness" of the plays to be presented by the Majestic Players, it may be mentioned that many of them will be what are known as pre-season attractions, in others words plays that have as yet not played outside of the precincts of Broadway's bright lights.

Habit Formed.

The Majestic Players are under the management of Clifford A. Schaufele, who is also in charge of the Temple Players, playing at the Temple theatre, Hamilton. So successful has the Temple theatre organization been and so popular has it become with the residents of the Ambitious City, that the habit has now been formed of purchasing seats a week in advance, and by so doing the patrons are given, if they so wish, the privilege of retaining identically the same seats each time they visit the theatre. With this, the second season of Temple theatre stock in Hamilton, the patrons there have come to realize that it is necessary to secure seats well in advance in order to be sure of their ability to see the respective shows. A third branch of the organization is shortly to be opened at the Grand theatre, Toronto, where the same commendable policy that has brought success in its wake in Hamilton will prevail.

Introducing the members of the company who are to become residents of London, there is Peggy Coudray, the leading feminine light. Last season Miss Coudray was the leading woman in a company playing in Washington, D. C. The summer before she led in Buffalo, and for five seasons was associated with A. H. Woods, the famous New York producer.

Leading Male Role.

In the leading male role will be seen Edward Cullen, who last year played foremost parts in Brooklyn, N. Y., and for two seasons played in the leading role of "The Bat." Lyle Clement, another member of the company, for the past two seasons has played in stock at the Temple theatre, Hamilton. Another member of the cast will be Rita Davis, who also has been associated with stock in Hamilton and in Montreal. Nellie Neil, will be the ingenue. She is formerly of the St. James' theatre, Boston, and Mae Richards of Brooklyn has been associated with Broadway productions.

Forest Cummings is to be the managing director of the Majestic Players. Formerly he was a director for the Philadelphia theatre guild, and was also engaged with Harder and Hall, an organization which controlled five stock organizations in as many cities in the United States. For three years he directed at the Princess theatre, Toronto. He has just finished with that New York production now attracting considerable attention on the road, "The Goose Hangs High."

Richard Ryan will be the resident manager. He has been associated with three of the largest dramatic theatres of New York. During the summer months, "Dick" Ryan was employed at the Yankee stadium and connected with major league baseball.

COMING TO THE GRAND.

Anna May Wong, the Chinese flapper, with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad," the beautiful, fanciful story of old Bagdad, coming to the Grand opera house Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. There will be one showing on Monday at 8:15, and the picture will be shown twice daily thereafter, at 2:15 and 8:15. No picture ever excelled the magnificance of "The Thief of Bagdad."

GERALD GRIFFIN COMES IN ROSE OF KILLARNEY

Londoners To Hear New Irish Singer at Grand Next Week.

The management of the Grand opera house takes great pleasure in announcing the coming next Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the international singing star, Gerald Griffin, in his great comedy success of two continents, "The Rose of Killarney." Although this will be Mr. Griffin's first appearance in this city, he requires no introduction as his name is a household one in every home that boasts a phonograph and a familiar one to music lovers and theatregoers the world over.

His success in Australia, New Zealand, England and Ireland has been phenomenal, so much so American theatregoers have been persistent in their demand for a more extended tour of the states and Canada, and this city is fortunate enought to be included in his itinerary this season.

Patrons are advised that reservations will be accepted for this attraction any time now if accompanied by check or money order.

Do not fail to send them at the earliest possible moment, for Mr. Gerald Griffin has tremendous drawing power and seats are invariably at a premium everywhere he appears.

To miss hearing this great artist's glorious voice of incomparable sweetness render his new enchanting songs would indeed be a keen disappointment. He will come surrounded by his original cast and glorious scenic production which broke all records for box office returns in Australia, New Zealand, Cape Town, Liverpool, Manchester, London and Dublin, Ireland.

As a special offer, in view of the fact that Mr. Griffin has never appeared in London before, two seats will be offered for the price of one on Thursday evening only. On Friday and Saturday the regular prices will prevail.

GLORIA SWANSON STARS IN THE WAGES OF VIRTUE

Heart-Appealing Story Will Be Presented at Loew's Beginning Thursday.

The new Allan Dwan-Paramount production, "Wages of Virtue," starring Gloria Swanson, opens a run of three days next Thursday at Loew's theatre.

The story is a heart-appealing love tale of the French foreign legion, with Ben Lyon (courtesy of First National Pictures) in the leading man's role, opposite the star, and Norman Trevor, Ivan Linow, Joe Moore and others in the big supporting cast.

Miss Swanson has the role of Carmelita, who becomes the daughter of the legion, that famous international regiment, composed of "men without a country," which is renowned for two things, its courage and its discipline.

Carmelita is snatched from death by Luigi, strong man with a small travelling circus, and is trained to become a member of the troupe. Luigi, in a fit of jealousy over the girl, kills his young violinist, and flees to Northern Africa and enlists in the foreign legion to escape justice. Carmelita, loyal to him, opens a small cafe in the village. Luigi, in the meantime, begins to pay considerable attention to another woman. The entire legion sees that he is not true to Carmelita.

The girl meets and falls in love with a young American recruit. This incurs the wrath of the regimental bully, Luigi, and he frames Marvin (Ben Lyon). Carmelita, however, bribes the guard and frees the boy. Luigi hears of this and is about to "tend to the little pup his own way," when John Boule, veteran of the legion and Marvin's guardian, interferes. He helps the young couple to escape into the desert where he himself is shot down by Arabs, while Carmelita and Marvin reach port, board a boat for America—and happiness.

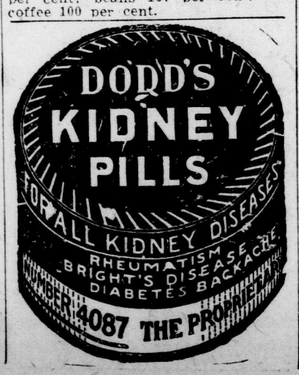
There's more fast-moving action in "Wages of Virtue" than in all the previous Swanson pictures combined, more novelty, more appeal—a bigger, better picture from any angle you look at it.

LIMBERGER PRICES MOUNT WHILE QUALITY DECLINES

Associated Press Despatch.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—Limburger cheese is 133 per cent dearer in the current market than it was in 1913, and not half so pungent. Cheese experts insist it is not made with the care it formerly was, and less attention is paid to ageing it.

Codfish is 124 per cent more expensive than in pre-war Germany: onions 200 per cent; sauerkraut 100 per cent; beans 167 per cent, and coffee 100 per cent.



VIOLA DANA STARRING IN "ALONG CAME RUTH"

Popular Actress Will Appear at Loew's First Half of Week.

Ruth Ambrose (Viola Dana), an unsuccessful commercial artist in the big city, recklessly spends $15.30 of her entire capital, amounting to $18.40, to get to Action, Maine. Once there, she induces Israel Hubbard (Tully Marshall), owner of a tumbledown furniture store, to give her room and board for a week in return for promoting his sales. During Hubbard's absence to raise money to pay the rent to his landlord, Captain Bradford (De Witt Jennings), Ruth works a complete change in the store—cleans the windows, sweeps the floors and advertises a big sale which brings out the entire town. When Hubbard returns he is overwhelmed to find the rent paid and a large surplus besides.

Allan Hubbard (Raymond McKee), a struggling young lawyer and Israel's son, is amazed at the change wrought at his father's store and makes it his business to meet Ruth.

A year later the elder Hubbard is a candidate for mayor. Allan, now deeply in love with Ruth, is buttonholed the night before the election by Mrs. Burnham (Adele Farrington), who, believing him a great catch for her daughter, Annabelle (Brenda Lane), a beautiful dumbbell, insists that he drive with them to the banquet given for the candidates. Consequently Captain Bradford, also in love with Ruth, takes her in his expensive car, although Ruth would have preferred going in Allan's shabby flivver.

At the banquet, Israel Hubbard, who hates the girl in spite of the wealth she has brought him, insults her and insists that she leave his son alone. The prominent men of the town, seeing how Hubbard is behaving, are not so sure they want him for mayor. And when he wanders off with Mrs. Burnham, indulging in an overdose of punch, and is found drunk by them, they accept Bradford as a candidate at the suggestion of Ruth, who has just "gently but firmly" refused his proposal.

Alan, disgraced, starts to take home his unconscious father, but is prevented by Bradford, who assumes the responsibility and nobly insists that Allan take Ruth home. Once in Allan's car, Ruth slyly encourages the down-hearted young lawyer to propose, and she accepts him just as Bradford whizzes by in his big car.

BRYNE GRANTED LEAVE TO APPEAL C. P. R. CASE

Privy Council Will Permit Re-hearing of Action Taken by Province.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 14.—Leave to appeal to the privy council was granted today by the judicial committee of the privy council in the case of the attorney-general of New Brunswick, Hon. J. P. Byrne, versus the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, an action involving the question as to whether the right to regulate the navigation of the St. John river rests with the dominion or with the province. The case arose over an obstruction to navigation alleged to have been caused by a bridge in course of construction for the Canadian Pacific transcontinental line at St. John, N. B.

In connection with the case the question of the interpretation of the Ashburton treaty between Great Britain and the United States also arises. This measure stipulates that the navigation of the St. John shall be free and open to both parties and shall in no way be obstructed by either.

When the petition for leave to appeal was being granted by the judicial committee of the privy council, Lord Haldane remarked that the matter was of considerable constitutional importance and the attorney-general should be given an opportunity to intervene.

CLEAN UP YOUR BILLS

PAY your grocer, butcher, baker, shoe, furniture, dress goods, haberdasher, hardware, jewelry, millinery, stores, garages. They in turn will pay the wholesalers and the wholesalers will pay the manufacturers. The manufacturers will start the wheels turning again and put more men and women to work.

A clean slate means contentment, courage, optimism, a spirit fired by the satisfaction of being able to look every man in the eye.

Business is slowly on the upswing. To speed its recovery and return to full-time work and wages, calls for extra exertion of everyone. Bills paid up give a new lease of life—send fear and despondency scurrying to the shadows of yesterday and open the shutters of self-doubt to sunshine, cheer and self-assurance.

It's contagious. The merchant says to the wholesaler, "Collections are fine—business is better—book me up for more goods." The wholesaler says to the manufacturer: "Collections are improving, business is better—increase my orders for Christmas goods." The manufacturer says to the banker: "Collections are improving, business is coming back speedily to normal—I want sufficient credit to start the factory going right away to put the staff back on full time and pay—orders are coming—they must be filled—business is lively at last."

Would you like to share in such conditions? Of course, you would. Then do your bit—the sooner everyone starts, the sooner the good news indicated above will be a reality.

NEW YORK APPROVES OF PLAN PROPOSED BY CONNIE MACK

General Opposition Expected From Minor League Club Owners.

YANK MOVE DOOMED

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 14.—New York baseball officials approve the plan of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, to compel the payment of part of the purchase price to expensive minor league players, but are inclined to let Mack figure out the system.

"The managers have nothing to lose under Connie's plan," said one high in Giant circles, "but I expect a general refusal on the part of the smaller leagues. Either they must receive lower prices, or must raise the prices to the extent of the bonus to the player. Then perhaps the majors would be ready to defeat their own proposition."

The Yankees' proposal to extend the player limit to fifty is regarded as doomed. New York, it is argued, may be able to carry such expense because of its enormous population and capacious baseball parks, but other cities could not accept the burden. Officials here predict a speedy death for the proposal.

Charles A. Stoneham has been unanimously re-elected president of the Giants, and the entire board, including Manager John J. McGraw, has been returned to office, according to announcement from the New York National league headquarters.

MINORS OPPOSE PLAN.

By JOHN B. FOSTER.

Copyright, 1924.

New York, Nov. 14.—Minor league owners are lining up in opposition to the major league proposal to increase the maximum player limit of the major league clubs to fifty. That would put 800 players into possession of the majors. The minors have felt for years that the majors were taking more players than they should. The minors have an equal right to extend their player limit if they wish to, but most of them would go broke if they did.

In the midsummer playing season, the major clubs limit themselves to 25 players each. During that period they must farm 400 more out if the limit is increased to fifty. If the minors were to shut down on taking players from the majors there would be less desire on the part of the majors to acquire them, but so long as it is easy to farm players out, the big fellows will go on with big lists.

The minors have thought for some time that the present limit of 40 players was too high for the majors and have thought that 30 was about right in view of the fact that the majors concede they can get along with 25 in midseason. The majors' theory, of course, is that the early part of the season is experimental, and that they must have a good list from which to choose the eventual 25.

If the majors extend the limit to fifty they will have a stranglehold on practically all the good baseball material in the country. For of all America's millions, there are very few young men who can play the big league brand of baseball.

The minors, in opposing the present proposed increase, argue that if the majors boost their numbers now, they are likely to do it again and again as the crop of good young players broadens, and eventually will leave the minors nothing except borrowed players and school boys.

$1,400 Horse Sold For $25

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—"Leaside," a race horse well known on local tracks, which was stolen from his stable some time ago, has been located on a farm near Aurora, Ont. Harry Willis, 16, of Toronto, is under arrest, charged with stealing the horse, which is the property of Jas. Wright, and is valued at $1,400.

According to the police, the horse was stolen from a barn at the rear of his owner's home here and taken into the country, where he was sold for $25 to a farmer. The owner has gone out to claim the horse.

OFFER OF $30,000 FOR COLT REFUSED

Special to The Advertiser.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 14.—Johnny Troxler, owner of King Nadi, has turned down an offer of $30,000 for his crack juvenile. This offer was made by an eastern turfman. Negotiations are still pending for the transfer of the colt, but it is not likely that Troxler will make a deal.

"I think more and more of King Nadi every time I see him," said Troxler. "The colt cost me $600 as a yearling, so he stands me very little. I may sell him but at present contemplate shipping him to New Orleans. He will be well suited there as he can run in any kind of going."

Troxler thinks the Capt. Hal is the champion sprinter of all the juveniles, but figures seven furlongs is the limit of this youngster. He thinks King Nadi can beat Capt. Hal at one mile.

King Nadi is not eligible to start in the Breeder's Futurity, but he will sport silks in an allowance race one day next week. Troxler thinks he has picked a soft spot for the colt and that he is sure to show his heels to the opposition.

NATAL RUNNER BREAKS RECORD FOR 50-MILE RUN

Special to The Advertiser.

London, Nov. 14.—Arthur Newton, Natal runner, despite his 41 years, broke the world's 50-mile record, which he held, by running 52 miles, the distance which separates London from Brighton, yesterday in 5:53:43. He thus clipped 17 minutes, 20 2-5 seconds off his previous mark.

Newton's run was made on a wet, slippery road against a cold northeast wind almost all the way. W. G. George, the runner who accompanied Newton, described him as the most wonderful runner he had ever seen, possessing perfect style.

FIRST AND SECOND PLACES WON BY DERBY HORSES

Associated Press Despatch.

Derby, England, Nov. 14.—The Earl of Derby took first and second places in the Derby cup race of £1,200, run here today. The winner was his Spindrift, by Chaucer, out of Rothesay Bay, while High Brow took second money. Cloudbank, owned by James White, was third. Twelve horses ran. Spindrift won by a short head, while High Brow finished a length and a half in front of Cloudbank. The betting was: Spindrift, 10 to 1; High Brow, 9 to 4; Cloudbank, 10 to 1 against.

VARSITY-M'GILL TILT TODAY RINGS DOWN GRID CURTAIN

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—While there is nothing at stake in tomorrow's rugby game here between McGill and Varsity beyond the victory itself, the annual Varsity game here is generally the climax of the inter-collegiate rugby season in Montreal. Tradition is associated with the struggles between these two old-time rivals, and the fact that in this city there is a big graduate group of the University of Toronto adds to the enthusiasm. Indications are that with fair weather tomorrow, there will be a good-sized crowd.

BELIEVE DOLAN SUIT HAS BEEN ABANDONED

Former Giant Coach Takes Sudden Departure From New York.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 14.—The sudden departure of Cozy Dolan from New York combined with the failure of his attorney, W. J. Fallon, to file papers in the threatened damage suit against Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, has led to reports that plans for court action has been abandoned.

Dolan has given up his apartment on Washington Heights and moved all his furniture, but it is not known where he has gone. Fallon would not comment on reports that suit would not be filed.

The lawyer announced recently that suit would be filed, seeking to collect for Dolan a share of the world's series money and vindication of the charge that he was involved in an alleged attempt to bribe Heine Sand of the Philadelphia National league club. Fallon had said that damages of not less than $100,000 would be asked.

VICTORY OVER LUIS ANGEL GIVES WEINERT AMBITION

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 14.—Charley Weinert has visions of heavyweight greatness, according to stories from his headquarters following his victory over Luis Angel Firpo in the Newark armory, Wednesday night.

The Jersey boxer, who has declared his intention of preparing himself for a severe schedule, is waiting for word from Tex Rickard regarding the possibility of appearing as a headliner in a bout at Madison Square Garden.

Meanwhile the undaunted Firpo carries on, announcing that despite his failures he will again climb the path to Dempsey by putting himself in perfect physical condition for his coming contests with Quintin Romero in Buffalo and Martin Burke in Boston.

Batting Revolutionized By Cobb's Style At Plate

CHAPTER XIV

By H. G. SALSINGER.

Ty Cobb began revolutionizing baseball in 1907. Having discovered a way to cross up the fielders in batting, Cobb set about to discount the advantages other batting leaders had in weight and power. He realized that a bat in the hands of a giant like Lajoie, Crawford or Wagner was much lighter and easier to handle than a bat in his hands.

Cobb decided that this handicap could be offset by using three bats. Just before his turn at bat he would pick up three bats and swing them until he took his position at the plate. Then he would throw away two of them and the weight would be reduced two-thirds. That is what he practiced and he discovered the idea correct. He was the first player to carry three bats to the plate and nearly all players do that today.

By using what was regarded as a freak position at the plate, and by swinging three bats until the pitcher was ready to deliver the ball, Cobb overcame the physical handicaps. Instead of planting his feet flat and firm and getting set for the delivery, Cobb was on his toes. He used a snap swing, a quick chop, and therefore he did not have to set himself.

Could Meet Any Ball.

Being on his toes he could quickly shift his body and using the chop he could meet any kind of ball the pitcher delivered and place it. Where the orthodox system demanded that the batter wait until the pitcher put the ball over the plate, or gave him one that he liked, Cobb could shift into position quick enough to meet a ball on the inside or outside, low or high, and still have time to hit the ball because he saved a fraction of a second in chopping, instead of swinging. His eye, wonderfully quick and accurate, helped.

Cobb's style revolutionized batting. He perfected the chop stroke and with his stand at the plate, the quick, changing shift, he perfected the scientific style of hitting. There are not six players in the major leagues today who are on the La-opposed had a good first baseman, followed this style when Cobb broke into the big leagues. Now, nearly every batter shifts. Only about half a dozen men can be described as natural hitters, men that stand firmly at the plate and swing, always in the same fashion. The others shift and mix their style.

Cobb proved that his style enabled him to hit in any direction. Fielders found it impossible to play Cobb accurately. He had no specified lane. He has hit to center, left and right fields on three successive times at bat. Fielders found it impossible to play him accurately. He could place a ball as well as any man that ever lived, and he always tried to get one infielder out of position and pull the ball through the opening. If the team Detroit opposed ha da good first baseman, Cobb never hit in his direction. We do not remember Hal Chase ever fielding a ball batted by Cobb. If the opposing team had a good third baseman Cobb never hit the ball in his direction. If the opposing team was weak at either corner Cobb would invariably try to pull the ball outside the fielder.

Mastered Them All.

Cobb could hit any kind of ball that he could reach. Some pitchers stopped him for a while, but sooner or later he mastered them. Fielders became nervous whenever he came to bat. He almost always had them crossed up. No man ever took quicker cognizance of an opening in the defense; no man ever took quicker advantage of it. He would bunt when he was expected to hit and he would hit when the infield was sure he intended to bunt. He nearly always did the unexpected.

It was Cobb who first used the system of swinging hard on a ball, fouling it off or missing it altogether, with the purpose of driving back the infield, sure that he intended to hit. And then, with the infield back, Cobb would bunt. Or, he would reverse this order. He would miss a bunt or bunt foul for a first strike, pull the infield in, and drive through on the next ball that he liked. If he bunted a foul or missed a bunt for the first strike and the infield refused to be pulled in, then he would bunt on the next one. He managed to cross the infield either way it played him.

Drove Between Fielders.

With the style he developed Cobb never became a slugger. He tried to drive the ball between fielders and not over them. With his unorthodox stance he could not get the power behind the ball. He never tried for distance; his object was always to get on base.

Cobb, a left-handed batter, was weaker against left-handed pitchers than against the right-handers. He set about to overcome this weakness by practicing against left-handers. He would induce the left-handers on his own club to pitch to him. If they were not available he would engage the services of any left-handed thrower to pitch to him. In this way he accustomed himself to meeting balls thrown from the left side of the body. He practiced so long that he became as proficient in hitting left-handers as he was in meeting the deliveries of right-handed pitchers.

CHAPTER XV.

Before Tyrus Cobb became a national figure in baseball it had always been taken for granted that it was up to a pitcher to study the batsman, discover in him the strong and weak points, and pitch accordingly. But ball players had never considered that it was just as important for the batter to study the pitcher. Cobb decided it was. He believed that a batter could get just as much advantage in studying the strong and weak points of a pitcher as the pitcher got by studying the batter, so he set about to study every pitcher that came into his line of vision.

No man ever studied pitchers more closely than Cobb. No man ever found out more about them. Cobb knew faults about pitchers of which the pitchers themselves were never aware. Certain twirlers who covered never figure out why Cobb was able to hit their curve ball do not know to this day that in pitching the curve they had a peculiar little move that they did not have in pitching a fast or slow ball. Cobb discovered these individual physical charactertistics. Often, when he was given credit for outguessing a pitcher he did not outguess the pitcher at all; he knew every minute movement the man made in pitching; there was no guesswork; Cobb knew what was coming.

He Solved White.

Cobb sooner or later mastered every pitcher that he faced. It took him some time to solve the delivery of certain men.

The pitcher who gave Cobb the most trouble for a while was "Doc" White, a star of the world champion Chicago White Sox in 1906. White was a tall, slender left-hander, a hard pitcher for any team to beat. Many batters had difficulty in batting against White, but of all the men he pitched to he found Cobb the easiest. In one game he struck Cobb out four times and in another, as has been told, he struck him out three times in succession and when it came to Cobb's turn at bat again Freddy Payne, second-string catcher, pinch-batted for Cobb.

White pitched a ball that dropped and it was this delivery that fooled Cobb. The star batter of the league was lucky if he ever touched White's drop ball. Cobb would "break his back" swinging at it. Cobb continued studying White. He noticed that the ball which he could not hit always broke right over the plate. He decided that if he stood far back he could "get hold" of the ball after it broke.

The next time that Cobb faced White he stood as far back as possible in the batter's box. In that position he was two feet behind the home plate. White broke his drop over the plate as usual. But the ball travelled two feet after the break before it reached Cobb and the batter was able to connect. White never again struck out Cobb, and the batter who had been the easiest in the league for White, the man who could not hit a foul off his delivery, became his Nemesis. Cobb batted against White in 46 American league games, and his life-time average against White is .335, so Cobb made up for lost opportunities when he finally solved White's delivery.

Joss Bothered Him.

The pitcher who had the most success against Cobb was Addie Joss of Cleveland. Addie died several years ago, but he is still remembered as one of the great pitchers of baseball. Among his achievements was a no-run, no-hit, no-man-reach-first game. Cobb batted against Joss in 25 games, and his average for those games was .253.

Carl Weilman of St. Louis who was just as tall and just as thin as Joss, was almost as difficult for Cobb. This pitcher, who also has passed on, was the most difficult man a Detroit team ever faced. In one season he beat Detroit eight times. His success against other teams was not pronounced but he could beat the Tigers by "tossing his glove into the box." Before the tall and skinny Weilman they were helpless. He had little on the ball. Many clubs could find him an easy man to hit. But Detroit could not get hold of the ball. Cobb had little more success than his team-mates. His average against Weilman was .276 in 25 games.

"Dusty Rhoades of Cleveland, a team-mate of Joss, was just about as hard as Weilman for Cobb. He batted against Rhoades in 20 games and batted .275.

After considering all pitchers that Cobb has faced, Weilman must be regarded as the man who gave him the most trouble. Joss and Rhoades were pitching when Cobb broke in and most of their pitching against him was done before Cobb fully developed as a batter. After he blossomed out at bat he was able to hit Rhoades and Joss. But Weilman made his debut after Cobb was well on the high road to success. Cobb had fully established himself as a leading batsman before he saw Weilman and therefore the success that Weilman had against Cobb in the 25 games he pitched against him must be regarded as the most successful showing of any pitcher in relation to Cobb.

WEAKENED BRANDON CLUB MAY DROP OUT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—There is now a possibility that the teams from the head of the lakes will again play in the Manitoba senior hockey association this year. A meeting has been called for the week-end, at which representatives from Fort William and Port Arthur are expected to be present. The final outcome of the meeting, it is believed in hockey circles here, will see Fort William and Port Arthur clubs lined up with Selkirk and the Tiger-Falcon combination in a four-team circuit. The raids of the Western Canada professional clubs on Brandon have made the prospects of that club extremely poor, and in all probability they will be asked to retire.

Optimism Prevails Despite Possibility of Perry Being Out.

STONEHOUSE HURT

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Nov. 14.—Rarely has there been so much excitement locally as that prevailing among rugby fans tonight at the prospect of the tussle between Ace Van Alstyne's intermediates and the Hamilton Tigers tomorrow, when the first of the home-and-home series of the O. R. F. U. semi-finals will be played at the athletic grounds here.

All attendance records are expected to be broken. Without minimizing the serious nature of the job in hand, there is nothing in the nature of fear in the local camp, despite the fact that Perry may be unable to turn out owing to ankle trouble, and Stonehouse has a bruised hip.

According to "Red" Wilson, the London team had it all doped out how they were going to beat Hamilton when they had disposed of Sarnia, and so the blue and whites have done some figuring on similar lines.

The selected Sarnia line-up is: Wilson, Perry, Karn, Houston, Cowan, Richardson, Blaikie, Bossenberry, Wilson, Smith, Manore, Stonehouse. Gray will probably take Perry's place if the star halfman is unable to function.

REGULATION DIAMONDS SOUGHT BY GALT CLUB

Canadian Press Despatch.

Galt, Nov. 13.—At a special meeting of the G. A. A. A. executive, Archie Spalding and C. R. Widdifield were named delegates to the inter-county league's annual meeting here tomorrow night, and were advised to recommend the forwarding of a resolution to the O. B. A. A. annual meeting that the present body should take only a third of the receipts of the final games. The question of regulation diamonds is due for an airing tomorrow night, with indications pointing to the league suggesting that the O. B. A. A. insist upon all final games being played on fields that come up to the rules.

THREE RECOVERED

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, Nov. 14.—With their three injured players fit and ready to get into action again, the Woodstock collegiate rugby team is confident of its chances in the second of the final games of the junior W.O.S.S.A. series to be played at Windsor Monday against the Windsor-Walkerville technical school. Hugh McLeod, the heavy local line plunger, who did not figure in last Monday's game at all, is now in good shape, and he will stiffen up the Woodstock line tremendously. Bailey, the half, who was injured in the first minute of last Monday's game, and Milburn, who was carried off the field in the last quarter, are also ready to go the full route.

"I will not say that we will win," said Merton L. Entwistle, the coach of the team, this evening, "but our boys are in splendid trim, and are very confident that they can come out on top. With McLeod back on the line, things will look much different from what they did last Monday, and Sinclair in practice is kicking further than ever."

ALEXANDRIA WINS TITLE BY DEFEATING RECTORY

Last night the soccer team of Alexandra school annexed the championship of the public school league for this season by defeating Rectory, 2 to 0, in the deciding game on the latter's grounds.

It was an even struggle all the way, and appeared to be anybody's game up to the last few minutes.

GARVEY IS LOST TO TIGER TEAM

Must Appear With Woodstock Intermediates or Remain Idle.

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, Nov. 14.—Local hockey fans are greatly interested in the report that "Chick" Garvey, who played intermediate hockey here for the past two years, and who, it was expected, would be with the Hamilton senior Tigers this season, would not be eligible for the mountaineers. In the summer months "Chick" is always found on board one of the boats that ply between Sarnia and the upper lake ports, and for that reason is classed in the O. H. A. rule book as a sailor.

Now it happens that the rules also state that a sailor must play for the town or city in which he lived the first of January previous. That means if Garvey plays O. H. A. he will have to like back to this town, where he was located, and wear the red and white sweater. However, this is not likely.

Garvey is one of the best defence players in Ontario today. The first year in Woodstock he was head and shoulders above anything in these parts. Last year he was in no shape when the season opened, and his work was more or less a great disappointment. In shape, "Chick" Garvey is good enough to play on any team, and it would not be surprising to see some of the pro managers after him.

NEW ORLEANS FIGHTER GETS DECISION OVER SIKI

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 14.—Antoine "Young" Maruflo of New Orleans won a judges' decision over Battling Siki, Senegalese heavyweight, in a twelve-round match at Madison Square Garden tonight. Siki weighed 173 and Maruflo 165½ pounds.

'Black Sheep' Tennis Players Arouse Wrath of Association

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 14.—A committee of the British lawn tennis association and the referees' association met yesterday to consider charges of bad manners against first-class players competing in open tournaments. It was the first time in the history of the game in this country that such an inquiry has been held. The charges included the use of profanity on the courts, loud enough to be heard even by the spectators, disagreement with the umpires' ruling, and laxity in complying with the regulations, all of which offences, it is declared, were tending to bring the game [illegible].

The great majority of players are not affected by the charges, which concern only a few "black sheep," who, it is alleged, show bad temper when they disagree with decisions, and sometimes use disgraceful language.

"I have known a famous woman player to leave the court in tears because of the way her mixed doubles partner addressed her," one umpire told the Daily Mail, and other instances of like nature were cited.

The meeting agreed that disciplinary measures must be taken against the offenders in the interests of clean sport, and it is expected the question will be brought up before the coming general meeting of the lawn tennis association.

Ruling of O.H.A. Stumbling Block

Intermediate Grouping in This City Unlikely.

It is hardly likely that the local Manufacturers' league will be granted its request to the O. H. A. for an intermediate grouping.

The O. H. A. ruling regarding industrial teams has been on the books for some years, and is plain enough.

The O. H. A. has another ruling which declares that teams must be run by recognized amateur clubs, and at all times preference will be given to organizations representing a municipality as a whole.

It is rather unfortunate in a way that the intermediate series should be dropped, especially from the development standpoint. However, it was clearly indicated last year that nothing less than a senior team would revive hockey interest in London and for the first season the choice had to be made between intermediates and juniors, and the choice naturally fell on the juniors, in which series there is more interest shown all over the province than in the intermediate. Intermediate hockey, however, is bound to come back one of these seasons at either the expense of senior or junior teams.

OWEN SOUND SEEKING GAME WITH LONDON TEAM

Owen Sound, Nov. 14.—Owen Sound Greys, managed by Jimmie [illegible], are making efforts to arrange an exhibition game with either Hamilton or London, to be played on the artificial ice arena at either of these places. It is understood that the London management is looking for exhibition games to get their own team in shape, and if a favorable answer is received from London it is likely a game will be arranged for next week.

Seniors Present Bang-Up Set-To Local Big Five Crew Setting Faster Pace.

With their first game just a week away, the London seniors seemed to feel the urge to set a faster pace last night, and officials who were on hand, and then stayed over to watch Stratford, were more than satisfied with what they saw.

The seniors staged a bang-up game last night, the forwards against the defence, and both helped out by volunteers. There were times that it looked like a real battle, but there were no casualties and no goals to speak of but [illegible] scored.

The seniors will lay off until Monday night, when they'll enter the last lap of their stage of preparation for the game with Stratford next Friday.

The juniors are also off until next week.

Stratford seniors held a brisk workout. The Carson brothers were both absentees, as they are still on a hunting trip up north. Gross and Burke, the young defence pair, looked better last night than they have at any practice yet.

Juniors To Play Exhibition Nov. 28

On the night of Friday, Nov. 28, London hockey fans will be given their first chance of seeing the local junior O. H. A. outfit in action in a regular game when the St. Marys Juniors of Toronto will appear here in an exhibition.

The St. Marys team, from all reports, is a classy outfit this season, and should be able to pretty well show the London youngsters where their weaknesses and strong points are.

ST. THOMAS JUNIORS MEET SARNIA TODAY

Elgin Regiment Twelve Has Edge in Semi-Final Series.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Nov. 14.—The local Elgin Regiment players are preparing to maintain their lead over the Sarnia juniors in the semi-final clash for O. R. F. U. honors, and have perfected their plays, feeling that they will need all their resources to beat the Tunnell City players on

RAILROADS AGAIN FEATURE STREET

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 14.—Stock prices displayed a strong undertone in today's market, despite a large volume of profit-taking sales and a marked falling off in business, the day's sales dropping below the 2,000,000-share mark for the first time since a week ago Thursday. The general industrial average was lifted to another new high since 1920. The general railroad average showed a moderate advance.

Speculative interest, which has been shifting from one industrial group to another within the last few days, reverted to the rails just before the close. New York Central crossing 117 to its highest price since 1912. Missouri, Kansas City and Texas preferred was another strong feature, touching 70, its highest price in 14 years, and then sagging to 68½, up 2% on the day on realizing sales. Other strong spots in the rail group included Atchison, Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, Gulf, Mobile and Northern preferred, and New York, Ontario and Western, all of which closed 1½ to 2½ points higher.

Buying of the industrials was of a more selective character, with the merchandising, motor and public utilities shares making the best showing. Fisher Body was the spectacular feature, soaring 11 points to 191. Other outstanding strong spots included International Harvester, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Waterworks, American Beet Sugar preferred, Jordan Motors, Baldwin Locomotive, Gas, Pennsylvania Coal and Coke, Savage Arms, United Fruit and Worthington Pump, all of which closed about 3 to 4 points higher. More than 50 issues ascended to new peak prices for the year, the list including Western Union, Radio Corporation, H. R. Mallinson, Nash Motors, Coca-Cola, Postum Cereal, Montgomery-Ward, American International Corporation and General Asphalt.

Except for a gain of more than 1 point in Baldwin, the so-called pivotal industrials showed little change on the day. American Can and United States Steel common each receded fractionally, and Studebaker showed a small gain.

Call money held steady at 2 per cent all day. Time money rates held steady with a plentiful supply of funds available. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was a further rise in demand sterling to $4.64, the highest price since last summer. Other European rates showed only nominal changes. South American exchanges were strong, the Argentine and Uruguayan rates reaching the year's highest levels.

ST. JAMES CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

Rev. J. D. MacKenzie-Naughton Will Preach at Services.

One of the most interesting events in church circles tomorrow will be the celebration by St. James' Anglican church, South London, of its 51st anniversary.

In conjunction with that anniversary the congregation will also celebrate the 7th anniversary of the rectorship of Rev. W. L. Armitage, the present rector of St. James, and only the second rector the congregation has had during the long period of its progressive and colorful history.

The preacher of the day will be Rev. J. D. MacKenzie-Naughton, D.D., of Owen Sound. Special music will be rendered by the choir under the direction of the organist, A. W. Anderton.

Lieut.-Co. the Rev. George H. Williams of the Metropolitan Methodist church, Toronto, will preach at the anniversary services at Centennial Methodist church.

Colborne street Methodist anniversary services will be taken by Rev. Amos J. Thomas, M.A., of Windsoor.

Tomorrow morning at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Rev. D. C. MacGregor, D.D., will discuss "The Doctrine of the United Church of Canada."

At the evening service in First Methodist church, Rev. J. Bruce Hunter will speak on the all-important question, "What Must H Do To Be Saved?"

Rules Bar Boy From Oxford

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 15.—Famous men of the past, like Milton and Macaulay, who were familiar with Latin, Greek and other profound studies when they had hardly passed their infancy, have to some extent a modern counterpart in a 12-year-old Liverpool boy, Harry Mace, who, according to the Daily Express, has passed all the tests qualifying him to enter Oxford university.

Harry is an adept at Latin, Greek and mathematics, and is eager to go to Oxford, but must wait a few years, as the modern rules of the university do not allow the matriculation of so young a student.

POPPY DAY CAMPAIGN NETS G.W.V.A. $896

Daughters of Zion Head Organizations in Collections and Number of Workers.

A comparative report of the receipts and expenditures in connection with the poppy day campaign has just been issued by James Gray, head of the committee. The campaign yielded $1,776.42 and expenditures totalled $879.50. Net receipts are given as $896.92.

Their collections totaled $530.21, an average of $33.14 for each worker. They had sixteen convassers out, the greatest number of any individual group, and they sold 3,514 poppies.

ALDERMEN DOUBTFUL OF ELECTION STAND

this morning. He ran in ward one last year. He will not be a candidate this year, though he promises support for some of the others.

In ward two, Ald. Douglass and Ald. Bottrill are likely starters, with J. M. Donahue as another probability. Ald. Douglass, one of the mayor's opponents earlier in the year, has shown a consistent attitude in measures of economy, but of late he has shown no political ambitions for a new term. However, he has not refused and will likely start with Ald. Bottrill. Ald. Walsh, off course, has definitely declared he is out of the fight.

Keen Election.

Ward three promises to offer one of the keenest elections for aldermen. Five candidates are already out there and if Ald. Warren runs again the field will be augmented. Ald. George Drake is positively a candidate in "three," and Ald. Frank McKay and ex-Ald. John Ashton are also definitely in the ring. L. Menzies and Lloyd T. Hockin have also declared themselves. Nine candidates ran in this ward last year.

In ward four Ald. Hayden and Ald. Edwin Smith, though they have not said definitely that they are in the field, appear to have little opposition as yet. Ald. Ernie Shaw, who headed the ward in last year's vote, is not sure because of the illness of his father and because of his business demands. Tom Clift is a new man mentioned and his name will be amongst the nominees on Monday.

WANT NAME.

The social committee of the young men's department of the Y. M. C. A., want a name for their division. The members will meet Wednesday night to consider the matter, and also plan for a "ladies' night" in the association building.

AUTO CRASH SUIT IS FIRST NON-JURY ACTION

The first non-jury action to be tried before County Judge J. C. Judd at the sittings opening on Dec. 2, was set down for trial this morning by Ivey, Elliott & Gillanders, acting for the Canada Rug Company.

The company is suing Louis Harris of this city for $500 damages as a result of a motor car accident on the Longwood road west of Melbourne on Dec. 21 last year. The plaintiffs claim negligence on the part of the defendant, who inturn alleges that the plaintiffs were to blame. Spencer & Braund are acting for defendant.

Grain Markets

WINNIPEG

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—A much easier tone was in evidence in the wheat market today, with a sharp falling off in the demand. Prices broke about 3c shortly before the close on large offerings from "longs" who were taking profits. The trade volume was small, compared with previous days, and the market was acting stubbornly throughout, large price fluctuations being the rule. At the close, which was weak, November was 3⅜c below Thursday's finish, December 4c and May 3⅞c. On the extreme breaks some buying came out, while most of the early offerings were hedging sales by elevator companies. Liverpool cables were steady, closing unchanged to ¼c lower. Seaboard advices stated that export business was only moderate.

Trade in future coarse grains was not urgent at any time, and prices eased off in some places, oats losing 1⅞c, barley 1⅝c and 2c and rye 2¼c to 5¼c. A good demand from the crushers held the flax market fairly steady.

All grades of cash wheat were in poor demand, and the spreads on No. 1 and No. 2 northern fell off ½c, while the low grades declined ¼c to 1c. No acceptances were reported overnight, and there was no demand for any grade in any future delivery position.

All the contract grades of cash coarse grains continued to go through the clearing-house, with a moderate demand coming out for the lower grades. Canadian crushers and exporters continue in the market for the top grade of flax.

Cash prices:

The 30 members of the team travelled in a special coach via Canadian National. They were joined here by the St. Thomas team of 25 members who went on to Sarnia with them.

CASE DISMISSED.

Although complaint was made at the police station early this morning that Walter Kelly who lives at the corner of Woodward avenue and Pall street was running about the neighborhood half naked and causing a general disturbance, his case was dismissed upon his appearance in coprt this morning.

He was arrested in his own home, and no evidence was offered to show that he had been acting disorderly.

Local Market

Although the morning throng was large, today's market with an apparent over-abundance of apples and many lines of vegetables, was none too brisk.

Trade centered around dairy produce and a few lines of vegetables such as potatoes, celery, cabbages and cauliflower. Honey and cider were also in good demand.

The grade of potatoes offered today was, in the majority of cases, satisfactory and buyers were not slow absorbing the best of offerings.

The present tendency is towards the smaller varieties as housewives fear that the larger the potato the more likely it is to vaunt a hollow center making it undesirable for table use. Lots are still quoted at 90 cents a bag while the single bags bring $1.

The celery offered today was as fine in quality as has been seen this season and the demand was steady throughout the morning. The price varies from 75 cents to $1 per dozen bunches.

Small cauliflowers sold well at five cents each, while the medium size found a fair market at $1 a dozen.

Although the supply of pickling onions was rather small and the quality about average, not much trouble was encountered in disposing of them for 15 cents a quart.

Only a few gardeners offered lettuce but the quality was splendid for the time of year. It sold well at 2 bunches for 15 cents.

Dairy butter hovered between 40 and 45 cents a pound with the former the most popular price.

The egg supply seemed adequate with the usual steady demand. Strictly fresh eggs were offered by many at 60 cents a dozen though a number persisted in asking 65 and even 70 cents with sales negligible at the latter price.

Today's poultry offerings were not as numerous as last Saturday and neither were they as attractive. Chickens ranged from 80 cents to $1, while a small number of ducks were offered at $1.25 and $1.35 apiece.

The average price for small pigs is $8 a pair though as high as $10 is asked.

At present this concern is making great quantities of sweet cider which is sold in bottles, gallons and kegs throughout the city and district. This is delivered in any volume to households or stores.

For many years past Embleton's famous pure spirit English malt and cider vinegars, made in the plant of the London Vinegar Works, have enjoyed an ever-growing prestige due to their consistent goodness and high quality. This has been due to the efforts of the manufacturers to always use the best and nothing but the best, and to render the best service possible.

HICKORY GROVE DAIRY PRODUCTS POPULAR

Trade Covers Every Part of City of London and Suburbs.

Perhaps the first thing that will catch the eye of the visitor to the Hickory Grove Dairy, 345 Wharncliffe road north, will be the scrupulous cleanliness of the whitewashed walls.

The plant is everything that one would naturally expect of a modern dairy, electrical machinery for pasteurizing and bottling, the bottles waiting to be used, shining like cut glass, and through it all the fresh odor of clean dairy products.

The Hickory Grove Dairy provides milk for the baby, as well as for the grown-ups. Cream and buttermilk can also be procured from the courteous drivers.

It has been the motto, "service," that has built the Hickory Grove Dairy into what it is today.

Through a strict adherence to a standard of supplying nothing but the best in dairy products, J. T. May, proprietor of this concern, has built up a trade that, from a small beginning, now covers the entire city of London and its suburbs. Products of the May plant have attained a wide reputation for purity and excellence, and the owner assures the public that Hickory Grove products will never deviate from this standard.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry
For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out, and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

TERRY GARAGE AIMS AT GIVING SATISFACTION

"The Owner Must Be Satisfied," Motto of Progressive Concern.

In his poem, "The man behind the gun," Rudyard Kipling made the expression famous by emphasizing that in war the man on the job was what counted. So it is with automobile service stations and this is illustrated in the story of the Terry Garage on Fullarton street.

According to Tom Terry, manager, the desire to serve is at the base of the most successful organizations, and service is the mainspring of all business machinery today. The inspiration to efficiency is found in the query, "How can I better serve my public?" Constant striving for the ideal of perfect service has made a high competency, which characterizes the Terry Garage. Here is an organization equipped and manned for specialized service on all makes of cars and trucks.

The spirit of service pervades the organization, receiving its initial impulse from Manager Terry, whose attitude toward the public is summed up in the slogan: "The owner must be satisfied."

To give satisfaction has been the constant study of Mr. Terry, and a rapidly growing volume of business indicates the success of his policy.

In line with this policy, modern time and labor-saving machinery has been added to the equipment of the repair shop, which is one of the most complete in the province. The service department consists of a battery section, where the company can take care of recharging batteries and all battery repairs; the repair shop proper; radiator department; generator and starting motor department; paint shop, where all used cars are repainted; also a parts department.

The parts department is a veritable establishment in itself, with thousands of parts—more than enough to build a score of new cars—all numbered in their separate compartments. This is for speed and convenience in the repair shop. There is no sending away for a part—no delay of any kind—for everything required is here—from a bolt to a battery—from a pet cock to a piston—immediately at hand.

NORTH LONDON FIRM SUPPLIES BUILDERS

Brick Manufacturing Company Has Kept Step With the City's Progress.

For many years past the Brick Manufacturing and Supply Company, Limited of 609 William street, has been known as one of the leading concerns of this nature in London. Long before the time when the city had attained its present size and importance, this firm was serving London contractors and individuals with materials necessary in construction work.

Hundreds of local factories, churches, schools, residences and other buildings have been erected with materials from this North London yard, and today the business of this establishment has attained great proportions.

"The building supply business," says L. A. Ross, the manager, "is one in which the dealer cannot appeal to the public by resorting to frills. Instead, he must depend upon plain, every-day methods to better his trade. That is our aim here. We have always maintained a standard of keeping only thoroughly reliable lines of building material, and it is to this that we attribute our constantly increasing trade."

All classes of lime, cement, tile, pressed brick, fireproof wallboard and all other material needed in construction work are handled by this firm.

ALL PARTS HANDLED BY WHITE WRECKERS

Simcoe Street Firm Has Complete Line of Motorists' Necessities.

The White Auto Wrecking Company plant at 749 Simcoe street is the big market in London for used cars and motor car parts. It is there that one may find real bargains in used cars that still have many miles of transportation in them. In addition to this feature, one finds here a most surprising stock of used parts and car accessories, such as just fill a requirement which otherwise would take perhaps days and weeks to meet.

Parts for all makes of cars may be obtained there, for the supply of the White Auto Wrecking Company is greatly diversified. One may get a gear to fit a model of car which has been termed obsolete, or secure an entire motor, or rear axle, or front axle; in fact, almost any one of the thousand and one parts which go into the construction of a motor car or truck.

Prices set by this firm are remarkably reasonable.

WASTE MATERIAL TURNED INTO MONEY

Householders Benefit by Selling Scrap to W. Leff & Company.

The firm and staff of W. Leff & Co., Bathurst and William streets, invites anyone interested to inspect their plant and learn the many processes through which accumulations of scrap go in being made ready for use by various foundries, mills and factories throughout the country.

At present the Leff concern has excellent outlets for auto tires, old plates from storage batteries, rubbers, inner tubes of all descriptions, old newspapers, and all types of old metals.

Although business conditions have not been brisk at all times of late this firm has turned out hundreds of cars of scrap this year, and has kept all its employees on the job with practically no lost time.

This company is equipped to handle any quantity of any grade of scrap, whether it is an armful or a carload, either by contracts to cover a certain period or by single collections. An up-to-date warehouse, yards and office facilities guarantee prompt attention to all transactions.

A few of many grades that are being handled daily are: Waste and scrap papers, old newspapers, old magazines, and old books, rags of every description in new or old cotton or woolen, rubbers, auto tires, metals, both in ferrous and non-ferrous, bags, and many others.

Whether you live in the city or in any part of Western Ontario this concern can be of service to you.

Outside of the trade enjoyed by W. Leff & Co. from the factories and homes in London and elsewhere, many schools, churches and societies in Western Ontario have made money through the collection of old papers, magazines, rags and auto tires and rubbers, and in disposing of them to W. Leff & Co.

BEST MATERIAL USED BY ALLEN-POPE FIRM

During the time that the firm of Allen & Pope, hot water and steam heating contractors, of 156 Chesley avenue, has been in existence in London it has grown from a small concern to one of the leaders in its line in this district.

The proprietors attribute this growth to the response of the public to their consistent standard of adhering to the use of dependable materials and employing none but expert workmen.

The work done by this concern in the homes and factories and other business institutions in the city has come to be recognized as of the highest order. The reasons for this are that Mr. Allen and Mr. Pope and their entire staff are experts in the installation of heating apparatus, and that all materials used by them are of the highest grade it is possible to obtain. Because of these two facts—expert workmanship and reliable materials—persons who seek the services of this popular concern are assured of having something worth while for the money they expend.

WHY RHEUMATISM OFTEN COMES BACK

The Usual Treatment Does Not Reach the Root of The Trouble.

Most treatments for rheumatism do no more than aim to keep down the poison in the blood and enable nature to overcome that particular attack. Then when the system becomes rundown from any cause the disease again gets the upper hand and it all has to be done over.

Sufferers from rheumatism, who have found their condition unrelieved or actually growing worse while using other remedies, would do well to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The tonic treatment with this medicine has proved in thousands of cases that it builds up the blood to a point that enables it to cast out the rheumatic poisons through the regular channels, the bowels, kidneys and the skin. When this is done rheumatism is banished, and as long as the blood is kept pure and rich the patient will be immune from attack. This is fully proved by the case of E. E. Davis, J.P., of Dinsmore, Sask., who says: "I feel it my duty to sufferers from rheumatism to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Some years ago I was a great sufferer from this trouble and was confined to my room. I tried two doctors without relief and had become despondent. Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills recommended for the trouble and got six boxes. Before they were all gone I was able to get around on crutches, and when I was on the eleventh box I started to work. I have not missed a day's work since on account of rheumatism. On two occasions since I have had light touches of the trouble, but a box of the pills soon put me right. I strongly recommend rheumatic sufferers to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Advt.

NEW FLIVVER RADIO SET EASY TO MAKE, EFFICIENT

Long Signals and Long Distance Possible With Simple Hookup.

USE PEANUT TUBE

W. B. CARTMEL, B.S., M.A., M.E.I.C.

Probably the simplest and most efficient set for a beginner to make up is the new Flivver. This set gives loud signals and long distance reception. The apparatus required is simple and the wiring of the set is easily done. There is only one coil required and it has no movable parts. The coil is made of winding 110 turns of No. 28 gauge double cotton-covered wire on a 3-inch tube with a tap at 75 turns. Bakelite tubing may be used, but just as good results will be given with ordinary cardboard tubing, provided it is dry.

Some prefer to shellac the tube inside and out before winding it, but be sure the shellac is very dry before winding on the wire. Make two pinholes half an inch apart, both of them about half an inch from one end of the tube. Push your wire down through one of these holes and cut through the other and then go ahead and wind your coil. When you have wound 75 turns, take off a tap and then continue winding 35 more until the complete 110 turns have been wound on, when the end of the wiring may be again secured by weaving the end of the wire in and out of two more holes similar to those at the beginning of the coil.

List of Parts.

1 coil having 110 turns of No. 28 gauge double cotton-covered magnet wire, wound onto 3-inch tube and tapped at 75 turns.
2 No. R500 or No. R62-B condensers (23 plate).
1 No. R215-A peanut tube.
1 No. R40 socket for peanut tube.
1 No. R53-C grid condenser, .00015 MF.
1 No. R42-C grid leak (2 megohms)
1 No. R-CH-2 rheostat.
7 No. R26 binding posts.
1 No. R6 head set.
1 22½-volt battery (Eveready No. 764 or No. 765).
1 dry cell (Eveready No. 7111).

It will be noted that all the battery required is a single 1½-volt dry-cell and one small size 22½-volt battery. The 1½-volt dry-cell will give considerably more than one hundred hours of actual use, while the B battery should give service for two hours a day for a year. The small battery requirements make this a very portable set.

Peanut Tubs Is Urged.

In the above apparatus I would especially emphasize the use of the peanut tube in order to get good results. Do not use some makeshift socket but the regular R40 socket, which is made for the tube. I would also recommend a good fixed grid leak and grid condenser as called for. The grid leak and grid condenser are the last things that one should economize on, because much of the performance of the set depends on these two pieces of apparatus and even the very best grid leak and grid condenser are not costly. The baseboard should be of dry wood. The panel should be of hard rubber or of any of the various types of panel material that are on the market; size 6x12 inches should do very well. A good dry wood panel will be found very satisfactory. Either bare bus wire or rubber-covered wire may be used for wiring the set.

Shielding.

It will be noted that a shield is shown between the panel and the tuning condenser. This shield consists of a metal plate a few inches square, which may be ordinary tin or other thin sheet metal. The feedback condenser may be shielded also if desired. It will be noted that the ground wire is soldered to this shield.

How to Tune the Set.

After properly connecting the batteries, aerial and ground wire, turn on your filament current by means of the vernier rheostat. Begin with both of your condensers at zero. It should be mentioned that your dials should be so adjusted that when they read zero the plates of your condensers are all out, and when your dial reads 100 the rotary plates are completely meshed within the fixed plates. Having both of your condensers set at zero turn the feedback condenser until a slight hissing noise is heard in the phones. Now turn on your tuning condenser and you will notice that the hissing noise disappears, and then turn on your feed-back condenser a little more until you hear the hissing noise again. As a matter of fact it is desirable to turn the two condensers together. Begin by producing the slight hissing noise by means of the feed-back condenser and then as you turn on your tuning condenser follow up with the feed-back condenser turning the two condensers together so as to keep the set just at the hissing point.

As your tuning condenser is moved you will note that at certain points you will hear different stations come in with a zip. If there is a whistle as you pass the station your feedback is turned on too much, and it should be turned back a little. It is very important to take great care that you do not have enough feedback so that you pass stations with a whistle. Any whistle that you produce in your set will make a whistle in your neighbor's sets. Those who live in large cities should be very careful about this, as they may cause considerable annoyance to their neighbors, and, furthermore, the set will give the loudest signals and the longest distance reception if it is kept just below the whistling point.

How to Do Fine Tuning With Set.

Having found your station in the manner outlined above, turn your tuning-knob back and forth past the station and if you notice any sign of a whistle turn back your rheostat until the whistle disappears. Then turn on a little more current by means of the vernier adjustment, and as you do you will notice the signal get louder. If you turn it on too much the tube will spill over into an oscillating condition, and you will bring in whistles again and the signals will not be so loud. In that case turn back the vernier rheostat and then turn it on again gradually until you are set to the very loudest point. In this way you will get the most distant reception. Do not let your tube oscillate, because an oscillating condition spoils the music both for yourself and for your neighbors.

Associated Press Despatch.

Warsaw, Nov. 14.—Wladislaw Reymont, the Polish writer, who has been awarded the 1924 Nobel prize in literature, received notice of the honor while here recovering from a serious attack of pneumonia.

M. Reymont was born in 1868 and belonged to a peasant family which took an active part in the Polish revolution against Russia in 1863. His anti-Russianism resulted in his expulsion by the Russian teachers from the school at Kielec, and he started work, though very young, as a telegraph operator in a small railroad station. Later he joined a travelling theatrical company and then drifted to other occupations, at one time being a railroad worker and another a farm hand. He once went to the famous Polish cloister at Czestochowa, intending to become a monk. His first stories were published in magazine form in 1893.

His most famous work, the novel "Peasants," issued in four volumes—"Autumn," "Winter," "Spring" and "Summer," has been translated into all the European languages.

M. Reymont is wealthy and has an estate near Posen.
