"With Compliments of the Author." The messengers of morning,
With blue and gold and fleecy fold, Day's canepy adorning.

Tis all for you,

Each morn anew,

With compliments of the author."

The lilies of the valley ring
Their bells in shadowy places,
And violets blue, with eyes so true,
Life up their smiling faces.
'Tis all for you,
Each spring anew,
"With compliments of the author."

The bald and barren mountain peak,
The moorland's cloak of heather,
The moon's pale light, the solemn
The bright or sombre weather, Are all for you, Each year anew, With compliments of the author."

And life, this ever pulsing life, and life, this ever pulsing life,
With issues wast, supernal,
Its earthly fears, its hopes and tears,
And promises of life eternal,
Is all for you,
Each moment new,
With compliments of the author."

-Our Sovereign Lady the Queen has jus Money in 2.25 class at Halifax.

The principal attraction for the celebration of the Queen's birthday anniversary in this will have added another year to her reign. The Queen has long since passed the three score and the years allotted to the generality of mankind, and the present condition of her health is such that she may easily reach the octogenarian mile-post in life. At present there is but one reign in English history longer than the present one, viz., that of the Queen's grandfather, George the Third, who reigned sixty years, one year longer than the present reign. These two reigns are by far the most important in the history of the nation, insamuch as the former marks the extension and consolidation of the British empire, while the latter is notable more for the great advances in scientific investigation, improvements in the laws and social and political reform. Both reigns have produced a brilliant galaxy of public men, those of the former period excelling in eloquence, and those of the present reign in statesmanship. The parliamentary speeches of Burke, Pitt, Fox and Sheridan are incomparable examples of the eloquence of modern times, and rank easily alongside the orations of Demosthenes and Cicero and these great Englishmen up

The completed another year of her life, and if she of the eloquence of modern times, and rank easily alongside the orations of Demosthenes and Cicero, and these great Englishmen upheld the dignity of their country in very stormy and troublesome times. Persuasive eloquence was more of a power then than now, because parliament was not composed of the intelligent body of people as we now know it, but rather of men who looked to those to think as well as greak for them. others to think as well as speak for them,

Liberty of opinion andy freedom of speech have thus been fully es tablished. The Sovereign must be a member tablished. The Sovereign must be a member of the Church of England, and so must the Lord Chancellors, for they are the keepers of the Sovereign's conscience, but beyond these exceptions a man's religion is no bar to his rise in public life. Seventy-five years ago a Catholic could not sit in parliament; to-day the Chief Justice of England is a Catholic. Fifty years ago a Jew was under like disabilities, ons was served, and kept in close con finement at the mercy of the creditor until the debt was paid or until they could obtain bail. Instances are on record of people being locked up for as long as nineteen years because they were unable to pay a paltry debt or obtain discharge under bail. Now it is practically impossible to get a man in gaol for debt unless there is fraud in connection therewith. These and many other abuses have been swept away until to day England is proud of the justice as well as the administration of her law. It was the proud boast of Augustus that he found Rome a city of brick and left it a city of marble. Not less sweeping have been the reforms touching the rights and privileges of the British subject, and no: less proud could be the boast of the British Queen that all traces nent at the mercy of the creditor until

"God save Victoria Queen, Long may she live and reign," is the fervent prayer that at this season o the year springs from millions of hearts of her loving and loyal subjects.

-In Russia the people are celebrating th nation of the Czar at his inland capital with festivities of unwonted splendor. The mention of the name of Russia calls up sad collections of peasants, exiles in Siberia, murdered Czars and other indications of tyranny, misrule and cruel oppression, but the grandeur of the last few days would seem to indicate a relaxation of the despotic power wielded by the Russian Bear. It hardly appears possible how a single man can rule a large Empire without first consulting the tatives of his country, but the Czars have done it. There is little of progression however, and the personal happiness of the Czar has during many periods been anything but desirable. Visions of Nihilists with bs and the memory of former rulers ruthlessly killed by the mob have made a cor stant supervision and guard over the ions to his people would have the effect of bringing about a state of harmony hitherto scarcely known in Russia. Th progress that invariably follows the teutopic that blood can be found and Russia seems to be more akin to the sluggish nations of Asia than to the progressive states of North Western Europe,

The four minute race—which is something new and the statesman who could crush an adversary by fiery eloquence, biting sarcasm or scathing ridicule, won the support of his admirers; and knowing wherein their power lay, these leaders cultivated to a high degree the power of clear and forcible expression. To-day things are different; men have learned to think for themselves, and the expression of a good opinion is as valuable, though it be not clothed in flowery language. Hence there is found in the British parliament at the present time less passionate oratory, but more sound wisdom than of yore. Measures are regarded in their true light to-day, and reasons must be presented to ensure their success. The beginning of the present reign was marked by the triumph of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of several great reforms, such, for instance, as the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the principles of the British subject, and no: less proud could be the boast of the British Queen that all traces of barbarism have been banished from her realm and men have learned what the true rights of their fellows are and to respect and tolerate dissentient opinions in a broad minded and impartial manner—a nobler boast by far than that of the heathen Roman Emperor.

To-day Victoria reigns over a mighty empire, the foundations of which were laid by the warlike Plantagenets and their predecessors, the Anglo-Saxons, but the bounds and dimensions of that empire have now reached a magnitude never contemplated by our forefathers in their wildest dreams of imagination.

Accident at Factorydale.

About 6.15 p.m. on Friday last an accident occurred at McNeil's steam mill in Factorydale, Kings Co., which may yet have a fatal result. A splinter thrown from an edger struck Mr. Herbert McNeil in the throat, and passed through the side of his neck to the back of his head cening out at the base of the brain. He has had the skilful attendance of Dr. Balcom of Aylesford since the accident, and though the effect of the oplates administered to relieve the pain in his throat renders it difficult to decide as to his real condition, hopes of his recovery are entertained.

The splinter was 17 inches long, ½ inch thick and 1 inch wide, except at a point near the middle, where a protruding knot made it a width of 1½ inch. At one point in the splinter, a small crack held a piece of flesh as large as the end of a man's little finger, which had been torn from the neck. The edger was a patent one, supposed to be safer than the ordinary machine, but the boys had not got accustomed to it, and Herb was the only one who had ventured to use it.

LATER.—Mr. McNeil's condition is very critical, and inflammation is feared.

Drowning Accident at Maitland.

A telephone message yesterday morning from Annapolis conveyed the sad information to Mrs. Gilbert Fader, of this town, that her brother, Mr. Allister Freeman, had been drowned in one of the lakes near his home at Maitland while on a trouting trip. As near as we can learn, Mr. Freeman and a companion named Robert Rowter had been in fishing in a stillwater, and when returning had to cross a lake in a boat. In passing a large rock they landed for the purpose of securing some gull's eggs, when the boat drifted from them out into the lake. Mr. Freeman, being a good swimmer, started to regain possession of the boat, when he was overcome by cramps a good swimmer, started to regain possession of the boat, when he was overcome by cramps or fatigue and sank beneath the waters, his companion finding it impossible to render any assistance. The deceased was a respected young man and a great favorite in the community and was about 22 years of age.

A pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. James Chute, Clarence, on the 20th inst. The principals were Miss Florence May Chute and Mr. Ralph Berry, of Clementsport. The bride appeared in a pale blue nun's veiling dress, with train, trimmed with white lace, lillies of the valley, bridal veil and orange blossome. She was attended by Miss Edith Harris, of Bear River. A reception was held after the ceremony. The presents were both numerous and valuable. The marriage was performed by Rev. J. Webb, S.T.B., assisted by Rev. F. M. Young.

Mr. John McKeown, H. H. Whitman, Postmaster James and Mr. S. Phinney, on their return from a fishing excursion, called on Mr. A. Oakes. They report a catch of one hundred and seventy-five trout.

J. B. Mills addressed the public at the hall on the evening of the 19th. Attorney-General Longley made his appearance on the platform on the 21st. Both gentlemen did remarkably well; at least, so their particular friends tell us.

Councillor Fitch and Lenley Young, of Brooklyn, W. E. Palfrey, of Lawrencetown, and Mr. Albert Oakes, of this place, started on a fishing excursion on the 18th. They report a catch of 248 trout. Owing to Mr. Oakes having to leave the party to fight forest fires, the catch was not nearly so great as it might have been.

Camp-Meeting.

The vast crowds that throng the camp grounds at Berwick on the Sabbath, rendering it quite impossible to profit all by the services, has led the Association to change its methods this year, with the object of greatly reducing the Sabbath attendance. The season ticket will not include Sunday, and no tickets will be sold or money taket for admission on that day. Those only car enter or remain on the grounds who hold season tickets and also a special Sunday ticket (issued free), to be obtained only by personal application on Saturday. The camp opens Friday, July 31, continuing eight days. The Evangelists, Crossley and Hunter, begin their work on Monday. Lawrencetown. The Epworth League will meet this week on Friday evening.

We do not wait for the rising gong the next morning. Before six o'clock our port light is opened out for a sniff of Bristol Channel air. It is lovely; warm and calm; but hazy, and no land to be seen. We peer and peer, but nothing comes of it. The breakfast gong sounds, and just as we get nicely on our way to the table the word comes "Wales on the starboard bow." We rush on deck for first sight of the Welsh highlands. We know they are delightful to look at though the haze is so thick. Breakfast over and the glasses are all brought out and the stools arranged, for some how we all think we are to have a lovely time of it; and so we have, for soon the sun clears the haze and mist away, the ship comes upon an even keel and everyone is smilling, and invalids are brought upon deck. It being Sunday the officers have less duties to perform, and consequently lots of time to answer questions. We soon want to know if the highland is Hollyhead. It is, and no ship ever rounded it more satisfactorily to her passengers than did our ship Ontario. Furthermore, the officers assured us that it was a rare occurrence to have such a delightfully clear and calm time for the voyage.

We are now getting a fine view of the Welsh mountains, the Welsh green fields and hedges, the wind-mills and the smoke stacks. The Dee looks tempting enough to press us that way.

Our New Zealand passenger, I suppose, thinks we must be in a right humor for pictures, so he brings his fittings out and has a picture of the passengers, and then of the officers of the ship. We will never know, however, how we look in those pictures, for the gentleman takes them to New Zealand to finish up.

—It is a wise move on the part of the British government to send East India troops to fight in the Soudan, instead of British regiments. The East Indians, accustomed to heat, and acclimated to the perils of tropical life, are much better fitted for the work in hand than are the natives of the British Isles. They will be serviceable where the others would succumb, and be of much more value, man for man, than they.

—The Bishop of London was recently informed that many captains and other responsible officers of merchant vessels who are accustomed by prescription to conduct the devotions of the crews and passengers of their ships when at sea, would value episcopal recognition of their work. -President Cleveland has done his part

(New York Herald.) The last meeting for the year of the Patria Club was held at Sherry's last night. President Ellis H. Roberts presided, and the announcement that Andrew D. White, formerly president of Cornell University, would speak on "The Problem of High Crime in the United States," drew an exceptionally large number of members to the meeting.

Mr. White began his address by stating that it was a matter of fact that there were that it was a matter of fact that there were more murders committed in the United more murders committed in the United States than any other country in the world, and that in this country murderers were less frequently punished than elsewhere.

Statistics, he said, showed that since 1889 there had been a remarkable increase of murder. In that year there were 3,567 murders, but in 1895 there were 10,500 murders. In other words, in 1889 there were fifty-eight murders to every million persons, but in 1895 there were 115 murders to every million. Executions of murderers had decreased in like proportion, as in 1889 one murderer out of forty-five was executed, while in 1895 but one murderer in every seventy-four was executed. Lynchings, on the other hand, had greatly increased. Murder had increased 59 per cent, while the population had increased 25 per cent.

"If all murderers in that time were locked

"If all murderers in that time were looked

Mr. White declared that communities were frequently terrorized by "tough" characters. In one case a man who had committed eight murders was only slightly molested, and was allowed to continue in business in the city where he committed his crimes.

where he committed his crimes.

Another great defect in our present system was that through long-determent convictions lost much of their deterrent effects. This was so much the case that an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court had said recently: The taking of life for the highest crime, after due process of law, seems to be the only way of taking life to which the average American has objections."

the only way of taking life to which the average American has objections."

"This is true," said Mr. White, "and the reason for it is that there is no longer right-cous indignation over crime, but in its place exists nothing but maudlin sorrow and sickly pity for the criminal.

"The tendency seems to be, especially as regards murder, not to make justice easy and speedy, but to make legal proceedings a game in which the chances shall be mainly on the side of the criminal. The evolution of chicanery has become immense; facilities for re-canery has become immense; facilities for retrials, appeals, escape, and pardons have gone on increasing."

The speaker, continuing, declared that "another cause for the steady increase of high crime is the careless, culpable, even criminal, exercise of the power to pardon by the govenors of our states."

Mr. White spoke of how Governor Taylor in Tennessee, in 1892, has won for himself the title of the "pardon governor," and his last act had been to pardon eighteen men. During his term of four years he had pardoned 801 men guilty of every crime in the calendar.

"Governor David B. Hill of this state," said Mr. White, "released nine men from prison on the last day of his term, and of these two were murderers. He also pardoned a political ruffian who murdered Dr. Edward Duggan of Brooklyn in 1887. It was learned that no report had been asked by the Governor from the district attorney's office on this case, although this was the invariable rule. Further than this, it was discovered that no popular petition had been

Mr. White declared that another reason for the increase of crime lay in the criminal education that was so wide spread among children. Illustrated newspapers, dime novels, posters for sensational theatrical productions and plays, in which the solvent of every important crisis was the pistol or the knife—all these, he declared, caused youthful minds to turn to crime.

First, more attention to elementary instruction as to morals in our schools, both religious, public and private; second, let our pulpits preach righteousness; third, constant effort toward creating a better sentiment through the press; fourth, repressive laws, carefully made and vigorously executed, regarding educating the minds of youths in obscene books and sensational papers; fifth, all universities should establish a course of instruction dealing especially with problems furnished by insanity, inebriety and crime, with practical examinations, under the supervision of a professor, of alms houses, jails, asylums, penitentiaries and prisons; sixth, prisons should be remodelled; seventh, all places known as contributing to crime should be dealt with sharply and decisively; eighth, habitual criminal acts should be passed; ninth, a system of indeterminate sentences should be inaugurated, and no criminal turned loose on society until he has clearly shown himself fit for liberty; and, tenth, a better public sentiment for holding everybody to account. "Some would abolish canital purishment

"Some would abolish capital punishment and substitute imprisonment for life. Sta-tistics show that even in the worst cases this means no more than ten years."

We slacked rein, the horses lifting their ears in wonder at the unusual sight, for the wary prairie wolf seldom permits civilization to come so near him, particularly in the daylight. His hunger must indeed be rav enous, and his blood thinned by starvation, for him to stay, gnawing bones and smelling had never seen a pack before, though I have night when I lay awake for hours in a settler's cabin in the heart of the wilds of Muskoka, listening to the timber wolves howl up through the forest, and their companions answering faintly across the frozen lake. But here were their Western cousins, gaunt, lean, agile, wary, typical of the wilds and istricts to which they be-

Until that day I never understood the individual-character of wolves. Those fellows had as distinctive dispositions as seven men. In the brief moments we had to watch them, we could distinguish the fighting wolf, the gluttonous wolf, the mean wolf, the amiable wolf, the timid wolf—why, there was even a lazy wolf, who, famished as he was, would in the world, and I strongly recommend Pink Pills to all in need of a medicine. nes. He was content to snatch what the fours, holding his morsel between his forepaws, and lazily gnawing and licking while his fellows squabbled for a larger share.

Then there was one poor brow-beaten creature that slunk about the outer circle of the pack, endeavoring to get a place, but always snapped at and pushed away by the stronger and more ferocious majority. She was a little animal, with great, glaring eyes and sunken sides, and a peculiar, pitiable, apologetic way, that made me long to get down and scare the whole pack off with the driver's whip; but after all they were a vere quite as noble and had as much fellow feeling as any seven people you might chance to collect together. But the prairie wolf is not a courageous animal. He has always a man; but he is a fine member of the animal world, with a cunning brain, a subtle instinct, and a strange nomad, prowling nature. Few wild animals are such naturalborn scouts, such indefatigable self-suppor ters, such playful fellows among their kind Many a settler in the vicinity of Georgian Bay has seen the ordinary timber wolf start out with his brothers on a midnight raid, and pause, on reaching the lesser forest frozen surface. I had for a number of years before this attack been a sufferer from dyspepmore acute form, and to add to my distress my liver appeared not to perform its usual ions, and my heart troubled me greatly. and there were as well other conplications which baffled the skill of four doctors whom I successively called in in the hope of regaining my health. From the knees down my legs were as cold as ice; my bowels would bloat and I suffered great pain. My case went from bad to worse despite the medical treatment I was undergoing and at last I got so bad that I was forced to give up business. I could hardly eat anything, got but little sleep at night, and as you will readily spair. My father urged me several times to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, but I was so discouraged that I had no further faith left in any medicine. However, more to please him than from any hope of beneficial results, I began the use of Pink Pills. The first beneficial effects I found was the warnith and natural feeling began to return to my limbs, my bowels ceased to bloat, and with the continued use of the pills my appetite returned. Many a man has his first start in life just by a move of this kind. The very simple problem of getting a home together leads up o higher and better things, it acquires good habits, teaches how to save, starts a system that, when once ingrafted in the mind with the result acquired standing prominently forward as a just reward, never stops, but is always going forward and ever seeking to vercome all obstacles, no matter what nature they may turn up in. Now, dear REV. R. C. LIHMANN, OF ST. MARY'S R. Injuies by Electricity.

The use of electricity has become so gen eral and accidents are so frequent that everybody should be advised how to extend aid to a person injured by an electrical current. A German medical publication gives the following suggestions: (1) The current should be shut off at once if the means are at hand and the person called upon understands how to do it. (2) If this cannot be done, be careful not to touch the injured person's body with the hand. If no Indian rubber gloves are at hand, the body should be dragged away from the wires by the coat tails, or the coat should be taken off and folded (a dry cloth may be used for the purpose), when the injured person may be graspe through it and dragged away. (3) When it is not possible to remove the injured person from the wires, raise that part of the body that is in contact with the earth or the wire from it, using the covered hand. This will break the current, and it will generally be possible then to get the body away. (4) If this cannot be done, take a dry cloth and place it between the body and the ground, and then disentangle the body from the wires. (5) If the body is freed from the wires, remove all the clothing from the neck and treat the injured person as one drowned. Open the mouth and grasp the tongue, which should be covered with a cloth; then pull the tongue forward and gradually allow it to fall back; this movement should be repeated sixteen times a minute. Take care that the root of the tongue is thoroughly moved. (6)

The bystanders should not be allowed to give the injured person wine or liquors.

Bran and Middlings for Poultry.

Bran and middlings are excellent food in winter, as they contain more of certain substances than do the whole grains. The middlings are sticky, and when scalded are of a consistency of dough, a condition which is not disagreeable to the hens. To obviate this difficulty not more than one-fourth of the mixed ground grain should be composed of middlings. An excellent formula is middlings 1 lb., bran 2 lbs., ground oats 1 lb., cornmeal 1 lb., and ground meat 1 lb., scalded with boiling water an hour before using, and covering the vessel to retain the warmth. There will be just about enough middlings to the mess to stick well. The object in allowing only half a meal of the mixed food is to avoid overfeeding of the hens. About one pint of the ground grains, dry, is sufficent for ten large hens, with one pint of wheat or corn, for one day, but it is best to give one half pint of the ground grain and one-half pint of wheat or corn, in the morning and one pint of wheat or corn a

At these times the whole pack breaks loose into schoolboyish fun, rolling and tumbling over each other like kittens, racing and playing tag until, as an old woodsman told me, "You can almost hear them laugh."

But frolic as he may, he does not lay aside his fighting nature. At close quarters he can hold his own against man or beast, for hunger is his birthright; and from the time heard, or ome to the conclusion it is worth trying for, it is a forlorn hope indeed, and verily, with you, life can be set down as a failure. That is all you can demand from peopleand all one can insist upon from one's self -to do one's best in every sphere and situation. In the shop or factory, at home or at school, in the pulpit or on the bench, the inexorable law is the law of doing one's best. As to what is the best, that is left to the individual, and it is not our business to set hatchet cast of countenance and murder the down a canon or standard as to our neighbor's conduct. Let us sweep the snow from ou own sidewalk first; let us do the nearest duty to be done; let us breathe into our work all our manhood or womanhood, all our earnestness and determination. Then we can peep and the consideration and loyalty of his wife | a little at our neighbor and see how he is getting along and whether the result is worthy or unworthy.

But it was not left to an Edison to establish a telephone in the stomach of human beings. The Great Maker of man in the economy of human nature provided such an instrument centuries ago. It is a fact that within the stomach of every man and woman there is a little instrument that telephones to the nerve centres in the brain as quickly as any food reaches that part. When for any reason this communication is stopped the food is undigested and physical trouble ensues. With word promptly sent from stomach to nerve centres, these supply the necessary juice that aid digestion, and nature successfully does her part, good health is enjoyed and man is able to perform with energy and pleasure his everyday duties. One of the Wonders of Physics. An experienced mechanic who was asked what he regarded as the most wonderful thing for general utility, replied: "The tracking of a car wheel is the mos wonderful thing to me in the whole range of science and invention. Here are two rails, un hill and down hill, around sharp curves and along false tangents, and upon them flies at the rate of more than a mile a minute, without jar or jostle, a dozen heavy cars, drawn by an engine weighing sixty tons. Passengers realize no danger, yet there is only the little flange of a wheel behalf of steel turned up on the inner side of the wheel holds up the whole train as if it were bolted there in grooves."

He waited long for an answer, but none ame, and he turned over and went to sleep. Next morning he found the "spirit" of his mother in law had carried off his watch and purse, his trousers and his coat.

Thought He Lost His Head. A few days since, a gentleman, while taking a ride with his groom, had the misfortune to have himself and companion thrown vio-lently to the ground, by his horse taking fright and running away. The gentleman was not seriously injured, his principal loss being his wig, which he found shaken off; but he found Pat in a much worse condition with the blood trickling from his head, and holding his master's wig, which he was an

A wealthy German, intent upon a day's outing, wanted to hire a horsedealer's best horse and buggy, but not knowing his man the horse dealer demurred at trusting them in his hands. Determined to have his drive the German proposed paying for the horse and the vehicle, promising to sell them back at the same price when he returned. To that the other saw no objection, so his cusomer's wants were supplied, and off he went. He was back on time at the stable, his

and he turned to go.
"Hold on," exclaimed the dealer, "you have forgotten to pay for the hire." "My dear sir," was the cool reply, "there is no hiring in the case. I have been driving my own horse and buggy all day," and he
