WAR NEWS.

THE SITUATION AS IT APPEARS IN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The final answer from St. Petersburg to England's question whether the entire treaty of San Stefano will be submitted to the congress is anxiously awaited.

The Times expresses the opinion that more prudent Russian statesmen, even the Czar himself, ought to be ready to smooth the way for the assembling of the congress.

"The contention of our Government," says the Times, "is justified by Europe, and though the remaining objection is not one which ought to be fatal, it is by Russia rather than us that the objection ought, in strict justice, to be removed."

The preponderating opinion of the capitalists of the great powers seems to be that Russia will refuse, and that this will render the situation very critical in consequence of the presence of the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora and the position of the Russians about Constantinople; but that, if no unforeseen incident or complication arises from these circumstances, war may be avoided.

After a period of suspense, damaging to all the powers, a fresh proposal for a conference or congress will be brought forward under different forms with hope of success.

The position of Austria is a source of uneasiness to the British. The semi-official organs have declared the treaty of San Stefano utterly unacceptable, but the fact is equally certain that Austria does not support England's demands concerning the form of its submission to the congress. Various explanations of the latter feature of Austria's policy are given.

The Daily Telegraph's Vienna correspondent says, flatly, that a reconstitution of the triple alliance is preparing for the purpose of opposing the British policy. To this end Russia is offering Austria every concession, and he believes the negotiations will undoubtedly succeed. From similar advice this seems an exaggerated pro-Russian view. Austria's objections are to the whole treaty of San Stefano, or Russian concession on that point, and not to the details of the treaty. The fact that Ignatiev is going to Vienna would indicate that a negotiation is in progress, as the Telegraph's correspondent believes, but would confirm his estimate of its importance.

RESIGNATION OF LORD DERBY. A despatch from London, March 28, says: "The House of Lords was very crowded this afternoon. Many members of the Lower House were present. Lord Derby entered soon after five o'clock, and took a seat below the gangway, instead of on the Treasury Bench. He rose almost immediately and announced his resignation as Secretary of Foreign Affairs, which he said had been accepted by the Queen, and he only continued to hold office until the appointment of his successor. He regretted that under the circumstances it would not be justifiable for him to follow the customary course of explaining in detail the difference which led him to resign. The Cabinet had decided at certain conclusions in which he was not able to concur. To prevent needless alarm he would say he did not consider it necessary as necessarily tending to bring about a rupture of the relations of credit for sincerely desiring European peace, but he could not regard the measures which had been adopted upon the subject as in the interests of peace or necessary for the safety of the country, which the concentration of certain powers would vitiate. He indicated his opinion. He would state, however, that he did not dissent from the Cabinet's decision, but that he would not concur in the course of the Congress. He pointed out the obstacles to the meeting of the Congress, but the fact did not rest with the Government of the country.

Lord Beaconsfield said that he would willingly refrain from noticing the reasons which Lord Derby had given for resigning until a period when these reasons might be legitimately considered by the House. So that mischief might not occur from unnecessary disclosures, he was duty-bound to say that in consequence of the belief of the Government that the Congress would not be held, it was necessary to rectify the disturbed balance of power in the Mediterranean had ceased, it was the duty of the Ministers to prevent impending mischief. They had, therefore, advised Her Majesty to avail herself of the service of Her Majesty's forces. A message to that effect would be laid before Parliament.

THE ARMY AND MILITIA RESERVES TO BE CALLED OUT. In House of Commons to-night Hon. Galton Hardy, Secretary of War, in reply to various questions, said that it is necessary to call out the first class of the Army Reserve which was between 25,000 and 30,000. The Queen's Reserve, which effect would be presented probably on Monday. This would be followed by a proclamation calling out such of the Reserve forces as might be required. Mr. Hardy pointed out that this is not the embodiment of Militia which would not take place until it was necessary to send Regulars abroad.

There was great excitement in England yesterday over the prospect of war with Russia. It is reported that the Russian army about Constantinople is to be increased.
