The retiring secretary treasurer, W E. Klapetsky, who has been in active service for 15 years, and having resigned, was voted a life member of the J. B. I. U. of As and elected as mansgaing editor of the Journeyman Bar-ber, the official organ of the union.

Hesclutions were adopted extending the thanks of the convention to Hon. Chas. H. Granger, Mayor of Louisville and to Barbers' Union No. 45, of that city, for their good will and kind hospitality shown the convention. A general good time was had, the Louisville barbers doing their atmost to make it pleasant for the delegates and visiting brothers. A grand banquet and ball, smoker and social were indulged in, and as the brothers departed for their repertive homes, each cherished the memany of the good time enjoyed amid the nonpitality of the South.

So far as the outcome of the present contest is concerned, it is just about all over at the present writing. The great majority of the electors have made up their minds on how they will record their votes. All the advice which this or any other paper may give will have but little effect upon the general result. We wisdle just like to announce, however, that regardless of how the vote may decide the question of public ownership, it will still be a line issue, and the next attempt to get a pronouncement upon the question will be decided without carrying with it the defeat of a strong Government. so far as the outcome of the present

When the American Silver company pened its office at La Paz on conces-ons granted by the Peravian government if was tacitly understood that the would be "assessed" offenacy leader, but there was to be no further extertion. There was none, and the profits began to pile up.

Then there came a cull from Senor Casalani. The senor was not the presdear of Peru nor yet the general of IX repited Cinyton, its army nor the admiral of its navy. If do not undersit He was simply Casolani, outlaw and guerrilla. When Pern was at war he was a guerrina and simed to kill more es than friends. When he was at peace he was an autiaw and robber and showed no favor. He had his headquarters to the mountains and a band of Bfty cutthrouts to do his bid eting, and he was bown feared and se-spected. Many attempts had been made to capture or kill him, but he alwere offered he took the money and

A sign of the growtp in importance of the English tongue is the recent section of the school authorsties of the Herman Government in making legish an optional study in the public scheeds of Saxony. This action was induced by a petition addressed to the Government by the Dresden Schoolmasters' Association. The petition was an excellent syllabus of the arguments in favor of English as a subject for study in the German labilic schools. A portion of it was a follows: First-English is the most widely

It is only within recent times that English has been taught exceedily even in English and American schools. The old theory was that a student learned English best by reading the Latin and Greek authors. While the benefits of a knowledge of Latin and Greek are very great, and certainly assist in acquiring the accomplishment of using English correctly and elegantly, the close attention now given to English in our own schools will improve the average quality of English composition.

We scarcely appreciate what a trea sure we possess in our English tongue. The vocabulary of English has been enriched, by plunder from every land and every language. It is every land and every language. It is a flexible tongue, adeptable to any idea, and a tongue which welcomer accessions when necessary. It is not by its intrinsic virtue, however, that the English language is apreading and becoming the cosmopolitan reduum of communication, but rather by the increasing importance of the people that speak English. The British and the Americans control a large portion of the world's trade. Their influence is felt everywhere. They sell to everyhody and, asprybody wishes to everybody and marybody wishes to seil to them. Verily, the English language has come forward since the tien when liacon, despairing of the perpetuity of the English tongue, translated some of his works into
