

The Same Story Retold.

No person who has understanding sufficient to carry him through the first proposition of Euclid can question our statement, that everything else being equal, the merchant who sells for cash can be content with smaller margins than one that sells for credit. If not, why is so much emphasis, in current publicity, laid upon the "spot cash" features of various fortunate purchases? If the public can buy to its good advantage on a credit basis, how does it happen that the merchant cannot? If either could, surely both could. But, of course, neither can and neither does.

RECEPTION.

Tendered to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Arnott.

St. James' Sunday school was the scene of a very pleasant function last Friday evening, the occasion being a reception tendered to Rev. Henry Arnott and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnott were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Althoff and Mr. and Mrs. Brander. Refreshments were served by the Sunday School teachers.

During the evening Mr. Geo. Stables read the following Address: Newcastle, June 26th 1908.

Rev. Henry Arnott, Rector of St. James' Church. Dear Sir—

Kindly accept the accompanying, with its contents, as a slight token of esteem in which you are held by its donors. Adherents of St. James' church. Also kindly extend to Mrs. Arnott, and accept yourself, their congratulations on the important life-crisis you have had the courage to embark.

Wishing Mrs. Arnott a hearty welcome and a pleasant and agreeable sojourn among us I am, on behalf of the donors,

Yours most Respectfully
GEO. STABLES.

With the above was a purse containing $100 in gold. Mr. Arnott made suitable reply. The reception was largely attended.

Woman's Missionary Society.

The annual Convention of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Chatham District met in the Methodist church Newcastle Tuesday June 23rd.

Delegates were present from Campbellton, Bathurst, Williamstown, Harcourt and Chatham sixteen in all.

Mrs. Ross of Hamilton, Ont. President of the W. M. S. in Canada, was present and also Mrs. Coulthard of Fredericton editor of the "Palm Branch" who did very much toward making the Convention a success.

In the morning the devotional exercises were led by Mrs. McLeod and after that reports were read from the different Auxiliaries, Circles and Bands.

In the afternoon session the devotional exercises were led by Miss Tweedie of Williamstown who is soon to leave her home and go as a missionary to Japan.

Several papers on the best methods of keeping up the interest in the different branches of missionary work were read and discussed.

During the afternoon Mrs. Ross gave a very interesting and helpful address.

The meeting in the evening was in charge of Mrs. Coulthard and she asked Miss Tweedie to give a talk on her reasons for becoming a missionary.

Mrs. Ross gave an interesting address on the work of the W. M. S. in Japan. Mrs. Ross and Miss Weldon of Chatham sang solos during the evening and the choir sang an anthem.

The convention was the most successful of any that has been held in this district. The ladies returned to their home much pleased with what they had seen of the town and with the hospitality of the people they had met.

EDNA COOKE.

The Wonderful. In speaking of the exquisite and altogether inimitable bare-back riding of Edna Cooke, there is no language too strong to proclaim her merits. Nor is it claiming too much to say that she is beyond all question the most finished equestrienne the world has produced. Her riding is revelation and a poem. Beautiful as an houri, and as graceful as a fawn, Edna accomplishes on her flying courser numberless feats none else ever dared attempt, and backward and forward somersaults are to her the merest bagatelle. There are many equestrians in the profession, but one name and she is with the Pan American Show which will exhibit at Newcastle on Thursday July 9th.

Positively only one performance at one p. m. on night show.

BIG GAME.

Moose and Deer are More Plentiful than ever.

Hardly a day passes but that the Advocate hears of moose or deer being seen in the vicinity of the town; and a number have been seen in the river at different times but yesterday morning it was truly grand to see two monarchs of the Forest enter the river near the mill cove and swim across to the opposite shore.

This occurred just as the steamer Alexandra was proceeding to Chatham at eight o'clock.

The Captain noticed a large bull moose and blew the whistle which called the attention of spectators to the sight. They observed the moose in mid stream heading for Chatham shore. When he had nearly reached his destination a cow moose was seen to enter the water and follow;

Neither of these animals seemed to be alarmed and majestically surveyed their surroundings and then trotted off to the woods.

June Wedding.

An extremely pretty home Wedding took place Wednesday, June 10th at the home of F. D. Wynne of this city when Miss Mabel S. Parkes was united in Marriage to Mr. Gerry of this city. The bride was formerly a Derby lady. The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. B. B. Merrill pastor of the First Congregational Church in presence of only the immediate family of the contracting parties and a few invited guests. Miss Helen Arty of this city a pianist of special ability played the wedding March. The marriage took place in the front room of the residence which was decorated very beautifully. After the ceremony they withdrew to the dining room where luncheon was served. The bride looked very charming in a travelling suit of blue granite cloth with a crepe-de-chene waist and collar of heral head and was unattended. There was a very handsome array of costly presents manifesting the high esteem of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Gerry are well-known in this city. See our Page.

There have been three and three-fourths inches of rainfall in Berks county, Pa., within a week, and the farmers are jubilant. The crops are looking much better. Several weeks ago the farmers were praying for rain. Last week firm believers in prayer asked the pastors in some of the country churches not to pray for any more rain at present, as they thought they had enough at the time. It had been customary to pray for rain at each service, and last Sunday was the first time this order of service was dispensed with for several months.

Piles Torture Many People

Who do not understand the nature of their ailment, and hesitate to undergo a local examination.

Piles, or hemorrhoids, are small tumors, which form in and about the orifice of the rectum. They are caused by an enlarged and inflamed condition of the veins, which are very numerous in this portion of the body. Piles frequently attack women during the expectant period or after childbirth.

In bleeding piles the hemorrhage is sometimes so profuse as to cause death.

Protruding piles are the most dreaded because it is commonly believed that a surgical operation is the only means of cure.

Any form of piles causes dreadful suffering on account of the itching and burning which accompany them. One can scarcely walk at times, and during the night, when the body gets warm, suffering is intense.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only absolute and guaranteed cure for every form of piles. It has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates and Co., Toronto. The value of the Marconi system of ethergrams and incidentally the honesty of the British merchant were impressively revealed to a passenger upon one of the Cunard line of steamers during a recent voyage. A passenger had handed a large tender a £10 note instead of £5 note, and the mistake was not discovered by the Irishwoman until after the ship had gone. She handed £5 to the representative of the Cunard Company at Queens-town. The steamer was caught by Marconigraph in mid-ocean and the £5 refunded by the company's agent to the passenger.

"In diseases that come to women only, as a rule, the doctor is called in, sometimes several doctors, but still matters go from bad to worse; but I have never known of a case of female weakness which was not helped when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used faithfully. For young women who are subject to headaches, backache, irregular or painful periods, and nervous attacks due to the severe strain on the system by some organic trouble, and for women of advanced years in the most trying time of life, it serves to correct every trouble and restore a healthy action of all organs of the body."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a household reliance in my home, and I would not be without it. BATHURST.

Beautiful weather this last week and the farmers are all very satisfied. It is true a little more rain would be welcome, but we had several showers, not generally speaking, the crops all over the country are looking well. One of the greatest drawbacks is the pest of potato bugs, which in several districts is almost impossible to fight against, and so far nothing has been invented that will altogether destroy this voracious little beast. Perhaps it is not generally known among our farmers, but we have been assured that it is a fact that the presence of toads in a potato patch is one of the best means of reducing potato bugs. It is said that a few toads who feed on the bugs, will keep quite a lot of them off the potatoes. If this is true, it is a very useful suggestion, which, like everything else in the world, has its uses. We also read in a Western paper not long ago that a flock of turkeys turned into a potato field will clear the plants of bugs in a surprisingly short time, but whether this is true or not is a question. Anything, however, that would rid our fields of this source would certainly be a blessing, for since they have appeared in New Brunswick it has become more difficult each year to combat with them.

The salmon fishery on the coast has been steadily improving, and during the past week a considerable number of fish have been taken in the Salmon Beach stands. As a rule the fish taken in these nets are our own salmon, that is, Nepequin fish, which it was feared had been getting very scarce, but the fish appear to be later in coming to the river this year than usual, on the river itself the catches have only had fair luck so far, but now that the coasts are getting some fish no doubt the fishing in the river will improve. In this connection the law cases brought against several of the nearly all of the Salmon Beach fishermen information by the fishermen employed by the Angling Club have engaged Messrs. N. A. Lamb and J. P. Byrne, Barristers, to defend them, while Mr. George Gilbert appears for the Angling Club. A mass of evidence has already been taken, and there is a great deal of interest manifested in cases, and as usual when it is a question between a rich corporation and comparatively poor men the sympathy of the general public appears to be with the fishermen. At the same time there is no doubt but that the ventilation of the whole matter in this manner will do some good. Although after all it appears to all reasonable people that the Department of Fisheries is the proper tribunal to deal with such matters. As mentioned in our last week's notes the principal complaint against the net fishermen is that they do not comply with the law in regard to the Sunday close time. The regulation requiring that these nets shall be arranged every Saturday that fish shall have free passage from six o'clock on Saturday night until six o'clock on Monday morning, and the fishermen on their part claiming that the manner in which their nets are arranged is according to the regulations given them by the local fishery wardens, who in turn have acted under the orders of the Inspector. It appears that the Angling Club also wish to bring up the question of the bottoms which are in the nets, and which the fishermen claim are there so that when dead fish which have been already used and shaven out of the meshes, may be saved. The opponents of this method claim that it is nothing more or less than a trap and that if fish once get into it, they cannot by any means escape and even if they are alive, they may be simply rolled up in the bag, which is made by the nets and bottom and taken out alive. Some years ago, we understand, the Fishery Department investigated these bottoms and allowed the net fishermen to retain them in their nets, but the Angling Club appear bound to have the question reopened, claiming that there is certainly Edward J. Stewart died at Bathurst on Sunday morning after a short illness, leaving a widow and three children to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and father. There were few better known men, or men more thoroughly respected, on the North Shore than the late Mr. Stewart. Coming to Bathurst about twenty years ago he established himself in his business as a blacksmith, and being perfectly honest, most obliging and a good and generous landlord, he made himself a household name in the community. The remains will be buried with Masonic rights in the Presbyterian Cemetery on Tuesday at three o'clock.

PERSONALS.

Mr. John Kelly, Inspector of Light House, spent Sunday in Bathurst.

Mr. R. G. Gill of Ottawa arrived in Bathurst on Sunday morning and has gone into camp on the Nepequin.

Messrs. Jones, sons of Simon Jones, Esquire, of St. John, have also arrived for their annual visit to their fishing lodges on the Nepequin and went into camp on Monday.

Mr. William Wharton of Boston, who was assistant secretary of State under the Cleveland administration, accompanied by his brother Edward of Lowell, Mass., are in camp at the Pabineau Falls, and are enjoying a good sport.

Mr. Silver of Halifax is in camp at the Ragu Waters, where the Nepequin.

Mr. E. S. Crocker, of the Royal Bank, St. John, is spending part of his holidays in Bathurst.

Mr. Harold Green, for some time teller of the Royal Bank at Bathurst, has been promoted and ordered to head office at Halifax, and Mr. W. E. Amundson, of St. John, P. E. I., has arrived to take Mr. Green's place in Bathurst. Much regret is expressed among the banking people in regard to the removal, as he is a good sportsman and will be particularly missed in the Tennis Club, of which he is an enthusiastic member.

Messrs. Gibson and Pidgeon of the Bank of Montreal and Nova Scotia, Chatham, respectively, spent Sunday in Bathurst.

Miss Gillespie and Mrs. Miller of Chatham are visiting Mrs. George Gilbert.

Miss Adie Johnson of Chatham is staying with her friend, Mrs. Henry Bishop.

Miss Williams of Moncton is visiting Mrs. A. Desbriay at Elmwood.

A host of old friends among the young folks of Bathurst are delighted to see Mr. Gas, Scott, formerly of Bathurst but now of Portland, Me., in his old home. Mr. Scott is travelling in Maine for one of the largest grocery firms in England, he has a fine position which he has won by his energy and integrity and is well liked by his employers and the public generally.

Mr. Stout tells us there are a number of Bathurst and other North Shore boys in Portland all of whom are doing well.

Owing to the backward season the extra's are filling up slowly, but now that summer has at last set in those who have engaged them will do doubt soon come along.

Mr. James Ferguson of Duluth is visiting his relatives at Gowan Brae, Youghall.

Mrs. Weiss and Miss Helens Burns are visiting friends in Halifax and Mrs. J. P. Byrne and Miss George Burns are in camp in Tracadie with W. J. McLaughlin and family.

Upper Blackville.

June 26.—A building boom has struck our village this summer. Four houses are well on their way to completion, one being built by Alex. Arbeau one by Henry and Peter Arbeau, one by D. Donald and one by Eugene Weaver.

Sorry to report that a citizen of our town has been sentenced to a term of ninety days jail for alleged disobedience of a firewarden to assist in fighting forest fire.

The people are very indignant over the matter and consider it an outrage. A petition praying for an investigation, has been circulated and signed by nearly every person in the place.

Two persons have made oath that the young fellow was not properly summoned, the warden failing to show his authority, or explain the law to him. Looks as though there will be trouble about it.

The recent rains have proved a great blessing to the country. Crops of all kinds show remarkable improvement since, and growth is almost wonderful.

Moose and deer are so numerous as to be almost a nuisance. They wander at leisure over fields of grain and hay with utter disregard for owners feelings, or for his fences.

Joseph Arbeau is soliciting subscriptions for purpose of putting a pagewire fence around church and cemetery. It will be a decided improvement.

Glad to report Mrs. Elijah Arbeau much improved in health, and Jennie Davidson fully recovered.

One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Number.

The handsome colored cover enclosing the July Canadian Magazine is in celebration of the hundred and twenty-fifth issue of the periodical. The contents are also indicative of the progress made by Canada and things Canadian. The frontispiece contains pictures of Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier so as to show the similarity and contrast of the two faces. The opening article, thirty-six years of Dominion, gives an admirable if brief resume of Canadian development since 1867. This is illustrated with portraits of Howe, Blake, Thompson, Tupper, Grant, Borden, Dufferin, Allan, Norquay, Dumsour and others prominent in this thirty six years of a united and developing Dominion. There is a clever character sketch of A. F. Gault, whose name has been so long associated with the cotton industry. "Fleets and Modern Steamers" and "A Dominion Exhibition" are two bright illustrated articles. D. A. Stewart describes the disaster at Frank, and this is also illustrated from excellent photographs. Mr. Colquhoun's essay, which won the prize in Sir Sandford Fleming's competition, is one of the features of the issue. It is entitled "Canadianism and the University." There are short stories by E. W. Thomson, Duane, Campbell, Scott, J. A. McShane and Isaac Landman, besides the usual light department. It is certainly a most creditable issue.

GRAY RAPIDS

This little village seems to be quite forsaken since the men have all gone to work.

Willard Harris cut his foot quite badly while working in the bark woods last week and had to come home.

Miss Laura Roban, who has just come home from Portland where she has been for two years, was visiting her grandmother last week.

There was a beggar travelling through here last week he claimed his arm was badly broken and his fingers cut off which the folks round here learned since was not true.

Mr. Hurst, the Baptist minister has been holding some meetings here which I am sorry to say were very badly attended owing to his preaching in an old school house.

Henry Curtis is building a new barn. William Barry is home again from Campbellton.

Peter Coughlan, is starting a large party of men for the woods. He intends to summer log as well as to peel bark.

I am sorry to have to report that Mrs. J. T. Hancock's baby is not progressing in health as was expected.

than any other man on earth and that you hated him worst. But I wanted you to marry him because he was good and noble and a rising man, a brave man and altogether a—

"Hero and angel in one. What did the prince say to that?"

"He only repeated what he had said before."

"Then what?"

"I said—why—now, don't get angry at your old dad—I said you were a self-willed creature and acted on your own whims."

"That is nothing to get angry about. I do. But I fear that between us we have sent the Paulpoffs to their doom."

"For goodness sake, how?"

"It was natural that—"

"It wasn't natural at all. What did I say—that have you done—to cause Vladimir Paulpoff to plot against the czar?"

"Heaven! Are you so blind? The Paulpoffs are as innocent of this charge as you or I. It was against Vladimir the plot was laid."

"I begin to catch your meaning. Who was it—Neslerov?"

"It is impossible to say whether he did or not, but I suspect him. You remember the day he was here. I met him as I came home from the bazaar, where I had been buying books for Vladimir. I did not, of course, suspect that he had been talking with you about marrying me. Unwittingly I told him they were for Vladimir and asked him also to take an interest in him."

"I also told him of a blacksmith in whom you were taking a great interest. He has put that and your independence together and has imagined Vladimir. Well?"

"I had my fears that something was said about Vladimir. It was so clearly a plot that I knew the jealousy of Neslerov had been aroused. When I learned what had been done, I waited two days at Perm to see Governor Gushav, but he was away, and I could not see him. It was the superintendent of police who gave me the little information I got. It seems that an inspector discovered—so they say—that nihilists were meeting in the forge. Letters were found on them which implicated Vladimir. There was a trial, so it was claimed, and Vladimir was found guilty. I am sure Vladimir would have sent to us if he could."

"I don't want to get mixed up in any nihilist scrape."

"But you will help Vladimir, will you not?"

"What can I do?"

"You can at least stop at Perm and see the governor. It will not delay us long."

"I will do that, certainly; but I don't fancy there is much use talking to Gushav. He is a stern old soldier and has no sympathy for lovers or plotters."

"But he is just and honorable."

"Yes, I am sure of that."

"Then come. We will go to Perm together and see him."

"Well, I suppose I must do as you say, but we are about ready to start for the Obl. We can stop at Perm for a day."

"That will do."

The preparations were hastily made, and four days more saw them at Perm. The governor was at home and received Mr. Gordon. The name being an open sesame anywhere in Russia, Mr. Gordon plunged at once into the matter of Vladimir's arrest.

"That he was arrested, if the circumstances were suspicious, I grant, was proper enough," said Mr. Gordon. "But was there a fair trial? Pardon me if I speak plainly. Your institutions of justice here are quite different from ours at home. I have known where men were hustled off to Siberia with no semblance of a trial."

"But they were guilty," said the governor, with a smile.

"Yes; I believe in all the instances that came under my observation they were."

"It was the same in this case. The Paulpoffs had been using their isolated position for base ends. A circle of the brotherhood of nihilists congregated there. Letters were found upon them. These letters were all signed by Vladimir Paulpoff."

"Did he admit anything?"

"They never do. It is only when a man is captured in the very act of assassination, and he knows he cannot escape the death penalty, that he admits his crime and glories in it. The Paulpoffs denied everything, of course."

"Poor Vladimir! He was as innocent as I am," broke in Frances.

"Impossible. The letters were proof enough."

"Are the letters here?"

"No; unfortunately, they were carried away by one of the men who escaped."

"Then you did not see the letters?"

"No; I regret that I did not."

"What was said concerning them?"

"Their import was given by Inspector Jansky and Prince Neslerov, who found them. Their testimony so pleased the minister of justice that Jansky has been promoted to be superintendent of the police at Tomsk. You seem to think there is some doubt of the guilt of these people," said the governor, turning to Mr. Gordon.

"For my part I am quite sure they are innocent. My daughter has been interested in them since the railway ran through Perm. It is not like them to plot. They are too simple and ignorant."

"But Vladimir is not. He is shrewd and intelligent. He has been a reader of books."

"Yes; my daughter furnishes them."

"I am not at all doubtful myself," said the governor, with a grim smile.

"Were I, I would begin an open investigation at once. But, you understand, the accused was a prince and the governor of Tomsk, and the minister of justice has set the seal of his approval on the thing. It is a delicate matter for me to reopen. But I promise you this: I will guardedly look into the thing, and if I see any chance for doubt for your sake I will do what I can to help the Paulpoffs."

"Thank you. That is all we can ask," said Mr. Gordon. "We may see them at Tomsk. I may say to them that your excellency is working to know the truth?"

She looked out at the savage faces and shuddered.

"You may."

The interview ended, and Mr. Gordon and Frances continued their journey. The first person they saw when they entered the train was Neslerov. The mark made by Frances' bullet was still there, but he had not, to all appearances, been seriously injured. He looked curiously at the two travelers, as if wondering when the outbreak of wrath from Gordon would come. But that gentleman walked up to him and held out his hand.

"How do you do, your excellency?" he said. "We are going to Tomsk together, it seems."

Neslerov was almost stunned, but he took the hand. Was it possible that Frances had not told her father of the scene in Paulpoff's cottage?

It was so, and Frances had her own reasons. She loved the liberty she had for years been permitted to enjoy. But she knew that if dangers and narrow escapes came to her father's ears her liberty would soon come to an end.

It was a long journey, and a weary one as well. Day after day they passed through the same scenes, crossed rivers on bridges that had been built by Jack Denton, Frances' old playmate, and the strong structures perhaps caused her to think of the hardworking young man who built them and was now planning a very large and excellent bridge across the Obl. But whatever was in Frances' mind, did not find expression through her lips, for her father and Neslerov smoked and chatted and played cards with two officers going to garrisons on the border.

Frances said nothing more about the prince, for in the place to which they were going he was supreme, and to involve her father with him in a quarrel would have been to invite a disaster similar to that which had overtaken the Paulpoffs.

Day after day Frances leaned her head against the glass window and watched the passing scenes. At last they reached the Obl. The train crossed the border into that province, which was almost as much Neslerov's own as though he were a king.

There were but few passengers by that time, for the road had not been finished, and the train must stop at the Obl. Frances, half-dreaming, lay back, looking at the great expanse of tundra, the new villages springing up, the old huts that were now deserted and the waste of railway supplies along the track.

The prince had asked her father to go into another car and smoke. This left her alone, and she closed her eyes and dozed.

She woke up with a start. A hand was on her shoulder. She saw Neslerov bending over her. A smile of triumph was on his face. Frightened, she glanced out of the window. The car was still. She looked forward—the rest of the train had gone on.

"What has happened?" she cried, leaping to her feet. "Where is the train? Where is my father?"

"Speeding toward the Obl, my dear," said Neslerov. "Unfortunately, at this point the couplings between this car and the next were broken, and the officers of the train, not missing you or me—for I had just come in with a cup of coffee for you—left us and went on. We are in a wild place, surrounded by various tribes, of the remarkable collection of savages over whom I am governor. But I am governor, and if you will obey me I promise that you will reach Tomsk in safety."

Frances leaned back weakly and stared.

"My father gone?" she cried, and as she looked out at the savage faces that passed and looked at the car in wonder she shuddered.

"Unfortunately, your father was in a forward car. It was with his consent I came to you with let me say nothing, however, for, though we are in a wild region, I am governor and will protect you. I love you, and no harm shall come to you—if you obey me."

CHAPTER VI.
AN AMERICAN GIRL'S PLUCK.

ANOTHER glance from the window showed Frances that the car had come to a stop near a new bridge over a branch of the Irish. Involuntarily she sighed for the man who had built that bridge—Denton, whose eye was keen and steady, whose muscles were of iron.

But Denton was miles farther on, at the Obl.

"Now," said Neslerov, as the girl sat back in her seat, "let us face this situation, my dear. Let us realize the true significance. We are practically alone, you and I. Save for the poor wretches in that village yonder, we are the only people on this earth just now. Can you realize the fullness of that statement? You are mine—absolutely and wholly mine."

"Oh, you are! You coward!" exclaimed Frances. Her hand went as if by instinct toward that pocket from which she had drawn her revolver on a previous occasion. Neslerov saw her face turn whiter still, and he laughed pleasantly.

"Of course I guarded against that," he said. "I knew you would, with your American impulsiveness, try to shoot me again. So, while you slept, I quietly took your little toy pistol from your pocket. I have it here. This, I believe, deprives you of the power to do any more mischief."

"Oh, you miserable coward! You thief!" said Frances in a tense voice. "I wish there was a good American fist here to strike that grinning face of yours!"

"Undoubtedly," said Neslerov, with an exasperating coolness, "that would be pleasant for you, but it would be unfortunate for the American who owned the fist. One blow—peste! He would be torn apart by my agreeable savages yonder."

She could not resist the temptation to follow his finger as it pointed through the window on the side of the car. A short distance, on the banks of the stream, she saw a wretched, miserable able village of rude huts. Men and women, dressed in leather, undressed skins, heavy cloths from Moscow merchants, stood in groups, all with their faces toward the car.

"Were I to say the word," said Neslerov, "these people would tear you limb from limb and would perform the same agreeable service for any fool who attempted to interfere between us."

"Monster!" she gasped.

"Of course I am a monster to you," he said. "All Russians are monsters to those who do not like us. We may have our little peculiarities. One of them is that what we cannot get by fair means we get some other way. I spoke to your father, and I spoke to you. I offered the honest love of a Russian prince. I was spurned. But now the game is mine, and I shall win. You shall become my wife before your father has time to return from the Obl."

"Never! I would prefer to be torn apart by your savages!"

"You believe that now while you are in the heat of anger, but a short period of rest and contemplation will show you the folly of your refusal. Think of this. I shall go out now and obtain some food. We may remain here a week. Who knows? Before I leave you I wish to say that until you consent to have the priest of that village make you my wife you shall not be permitted to leave this car. I much prefer, as would any man, a willing bride; but, denied this, I will compel you to obey. It will be the worse for you. I offered love—an affectionate embrace. You refused. Now I command! Think this matter settled only when we are married."

"Never! You have my revolver and, I suppose, one of your own. Show me if you will. I will not marry you!"

"It will not be you I shoot. What do you think your father will do when he finds you are left behind?"

"Without doubt he will obtain a special train and come here after me. Then, Prince Neslerov, beware!"

He smiled like a wolf and showed his teeth.

"That is what I wanted you to say. If when your father comes here you are not my wife, I will shoot him dead."

"You dare not!" she gasped.

"I dare anything. No report of mine would be discredited at St. Petersburg. I could prove that your father was a conspirator against the government and was shot while fighting my soldiers."

"There is a government of the United States of America."

"True, but at a distance. I do not fear it. But consider what I have said. I will return with food."

He left the car, securing the doors to prevent her escape. When she saw him striding toward the village, she leaned against the window and studied the rude people.

"I am helpless—absolutely helpless!" she muttered. "Oh, if he had not taken my revolver I could have shot him—or myself."

She looked about her for some method whereby she could, if the need should come, take her own life rather than submit to his demands. She knew that if there were a priest in this squalid place he would obey Neslerov, and mumble some words perfectly meaningless to her, but which would give Neslerov power over her. She walked the length of the apartment like a caged lioness.

Women turned into their huts and came out again. She saw Neslerov start back toward the car carrying a wooden tray. She shuddered again.

"God give me strength, courage, calmness!" she murmured. "To lose consciousness would be to fall a victim to him."

She served herself to meet him as his footstep sounded on the platform. The door opened, and he entered with a bowl of roast, some steaming potatoes, roast fowl, coffee and some coarse bread.

"It is not quite like our usual fare," he said, "but it is better than being hungry."

He set the dishes on a table he improvised out of the back of a seat. He had a large traveling bag with him, and from it he took a bottle of wine.

"We will pledge each other," he said, with a laugh.

"I do not wish any," said Frances.

"Come, don't be childish! Let us get over the unpleasant part. Drink a toast to your future husband."

"I will not. I will not touch it!"

"Drink—drink my health!" he commanded.

"I will not!"

"I will make you!"

He held the cup in his right hand. With his left he grasped her by the hair. He bent back her head.

"Open your mouth. Swallow the wine. I will choke you!" he cried.

With a powerful effort she wrenched herself free and to her feet, and the wine went to the floor with a smash.

Her eyes were glaring with desperation. She clinched her fist and rained blow upon blow upon his face.

Curses deep and terrible burst from him. He clutched her round the waist and struggled with her. She exerted all her strength. She was like a ferocious tigress. Her nails scratched his face and tore his hair. Her blows cut his lips on his teeth. But he was a powerful man and used his strength against this captive woman. With a gasp she succumbed and sank helpless and exhausted almost in his arms.

"Curse you!" he spluttered between his swollen lips. "I have wasted my kindness on you! I should have starved you. But I will delay no longer. I'll drag you to the priest, and in ten minutes you will be the Princess Neslerov—and my slave for life. I'll break your heart, you devil!"

He closed his arms tightly about her and dragged her from the car. The villagers stared in astonishment as they saw him toward them with his bur-

Were entirely cured and health greatly improved by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mrs. J. LAKTER, 123 Cross St., Charlotte, N.C., and whose husband is a contractor, states:—"I had suffered a great deal with pains in the small of the back, my digestion was bad, and I was frequently troubled with spells of racking headache. I have been entirely cured of these distressing symptoms by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and find my general health is greatly improved since I have been using this preparation."

"I can also testify to the merit of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as I was cured of a severe attack of bronchitis by the use of this remedy."

Pains in the small of the back are an unmistakable symptom of kidney disease, and should be sufficient warning of the approach of this dangerous and fatal ailment. There is no treatment so prompt to relieve all these ailments as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. A box of these pills, 25 cents, is sent by mail on receipt of 10 cents.

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

GREAT DEMAND FOR CHICKENS.

The present time is most favorable for the production, fattening and marketing of farm chickens. There has been such a substantial increase in the consumption of chickens and eggs within the last few years that it is not possible to rear a greater number of suitable market chickens than can be sold with profit. Last year there were not sufficient chickens sold in Canada to supply the home markets. As a result of the shortage of chickens the trade with Great Britain was lessened. This is unfortunate on account of the great demand for Canadian chickens in Great Britain and the good prices that are paid.

The Chief of the Poultry Division, Mr. F. C. Hare, states that numerous letters have been received from produce merchants, poultryers and commission merchants who desire to learn in what localities chicken can be bought in great numbers and at reasonable prices. From several Canadian cities, and especially from Montreal, produce firms have asked to be informed where market chickens suitable for shipping to Great Britain could be obtained in the greatest numbers. British poultryers and commission merchants have repeatedly asked for the same information. The letter of a well established produce house in London, England, was received last week. This firm wished to start an undertaking for the purpose of importing Canadian poultry to Great Britain. They desired information as to the probable success of such a project and the possibility of obtaining poultry (especially fowl) in large quantities and the best districts for the collection, etc., of them. Last fall Cape Colony wished a poultry trade developed with that Colony. One shipment of Canadian chickens was made to Cape Colony which arrived in a satisfactory condition and pleased the trade. A new York firm wrote that they desired to import Canadian chickens and were recommended by the Department to a firm in the Maritime Provinces, from whom they purchased chickens and were impressed favorably by them.

The above and similar requests are difficult of solution even by one in touch with the Canadian produce firms and packing houses that are buying and marketing chickens. The majority of our established firms are equipped with a complete plant for marketing in Canada or Great Britain several times more chickens than they can buy. Their profits are diminished through scarcity of chickens. Nevertheless merchants in Great Britain, Cape Colony, the United States and even in Australia are looking to a supply of Canadian chickens to satisfy their growing trade.

The problem of wonderfully increased demand for chickens can be solved by the farmers alone. Instead of the farmer rearing fifty or a hundred chickens that receive little attention or feed, he should rear from 200 to 1900 chickens annually. These should be of a utility type, such as can be found in the popular breeds Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes. The chickens should be hatched and reared by incubators and brooders and when ready for market the cockers should be placed in fattening crates and fatted. The equipment required to do this work is not an expensive one; $200 to $250 is the cost of incubators, brooders, houses and fattening crates for finishing 1000 chickens.

It is as necessary for realizing the greatest profits from the poultry business as threshing and mowing machinery is for general farming. The work connected with finishing 1000 chickens with the proper appliances is no more than is necessary for rearing 200 chickens by the natural means. Poultry farming is a business that requires to be developed in the same manner as the butter, cheese and fruit branches. A substantial profit can be made from the poultry business when it is carried on as an adjunct to farming, and with the same careful attention and financing.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to increase the poultry trade of Canada; to encourage the growing of the greatest number of high class chickens, and to assist in the marketing of them. A revised edition of the bulletin "Profitable Poultry Farming" has just been issued, and will be mailed without charge on application to the Commissioner of Agriculture and Dairying, Ottawa. The information it contains is of great value in the poultry work, and it should be in the hands of every interested poultry man in Canada.

THE CURING OF HAY.

Since the hay crop is likely to be light this year, it is doubly important that it be handled to the best possible advantage and cut and cured in such a way as to secure the largest amount of nutrients in the most digestible and palatable form.

To this end it is well at this season to bear the following facts in mind:

Early cut hay is relatively richer in flesh-forming elements; it is more palatable and digestible; it has a sweeter aroma; but it has the disadvantage of being much more difficult to cure. Grass, as it approaches maturity, gains considerably in weight; part of this increase consists of starch and sugar, which is valuable to the feeder, and part consists of crude fibre which decreases digestibility and renders the hay less palatable. Early cut hay is more valuable per ton than late cut; but a larger amount of digestible nutrients per acre is obtained by later cutting. Late cut hay has also the advantage of being more easily and rapidly cured, thus diminishing not only the labor but also the risk of loss in harvesting.

Early cut hay is especially valuable for sheep, calves, colts and dairy cattle; while for fattening cattle, late cut hay will give as good results. In experiments conducted by Prof. Sanborn of New Hampshire, and Prof. Henry of Wisconsin, to determine the relative value of early and late cut hay for fattening steers, the advantage was a little in favor of the late cut hay.

Whether hay should be cut early or late will depend, therefore, on the following conditions:—First, the stock should be kept at least enough hay should be cut early to supply the dairy cows and young stock. Second, the season; if the weather be catchy it is generally wiser to defer the cutting until somewhat later. Third, the acreage to be handled; if the crop be large, it will be necessary to begin cutting earlier.

By earlier cutting is meant cutting at or before the time of full bloom. By late cutting is meant cutting between the time of full bloom and ripening. In any case, however, hay should be cut before it is ripe enough for the seed to shell readily. A crop of mixed clover and timothy hay is at its best, if both quality and quantity are to be considered; when from one third to one half of the clover blossoms have turned brown.

Hay should be cured and stored as rapidly as possible after cutting. With this in view, it is better to defer cutting in the morning until most of the dew is off. If 30 tons or more of hay is to be handled in a season, a tedder will be found a good instrument. Care must be exercised to avoid storing hay while at all damp from rain, dew or absorption from the ground. Moisture of this kind will spoil hay much quicker than the water contained in its own sap.

Last year attention was called to the method of curing clover hay practised successfully by Mr. Henry Glendenning, and a number of other prominent and reliable farmers. Mr. Glendenning thus outlines his method. Cut when in full bloom, or when the blossoms contain the most honey. Cut in the morning after the dew has dried off. That cut in the morning may be cocked up in the afternoon. The mower should not be run later than 4 p. m., and all cut that day should be put into cocks before dew falls. This hay should be put into the barn the next day and well tramped into the mows. He especially emphasizes the following conditions:

Do not cut in the morning until the grass is dry. Do not allow fresh cut hay to lie on the ground over night exposed to dew or rain. If any hay should get wet with rain, let it stand in the cocks until thoroughly dry before taking to the barn.

Mr. Glendenning states that his hay came out as green as when it was put in, with the blossoms a beautiful pink color, which would indicate that it had not heated so much as one would naturally expect.

The advantages of this method are: The saving of time between cutting and storing, lessening the risk of damage from rain. All leaves and blossoms, the most valuable parts of the plant, are saved. The hay is cleaner and brighter than that cured in the old way.

Of course hay cannot be cured by rule: conditions vary. A good method of curing on a gravelly, upland farm would be quite unsuited to the flatter clay and humus soil.

The length of time for which hay should be exposed in the swath will be determined by its ripeness, but the humidity of the atmosphere, the temperature and moistness of the soil, the presence or absence of wind, etc. So that every man must be, in a large measure, a law unto himself, and his practice must be governed by personal experience.

It appears to be a fact, however, that when the conditions are favorable, and the necessary skill and judgement exercised, clover may be stored much greener than was formerly thought possible, and that the very best quality of hay may be secured in this way.

CANADA AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

St. Louis, Mo.—"Canada will take part in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition as a Nation." Such was the answer given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Canada from his seat in the House of Commons, to an inquiry made to the government on one of the Canadian members of parliament.

The great "silver-tongued" man of Canada meant what he said. The news just received from Ottawa, the seat of the Canadian government is to the effect that extensive preparations are being made to show to the world the immense resources possessed by the neighbors to the North.

Canada has grown and prospered wonderfully during the last decade. Its trade has increased to enormous proportions. Its crops have been such as to merit for Canada abroad the title of "granary of the world". Its mines are ore fields, particularly those of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton, have been developed in such a way as to set dreaming the most pessimistic and it is now generally conceded that the finest jewel of Great Britain's crown can more than supply its home market for minerals while it exports annually millions worth of grain, fish, lumber and timber.

Of the industries based upon natural resources the fisheries rank second in Canada. This country has over 5600 miles of sea coast, in addition to inland seas, innumerable lakes, and a great number of rivers. The exports of the fishery products in 1897 amounted to $22,783,546. The home consumption is estimated at a value of $15,000,000, giving a total yield from the fisheries of nearly $38,000,000 annually, exclusive of the catch by foreign fishermen.

The sea, inshore and inland fisheries of Canada furnish cod, mackerel, haddock, halibut, herring, lake, salmon, shad, alewives, striped bass, smelt, lake trout, muscalonge, white fish, sturgeon, pike perch, black bass, brook trout, pike, eels, and gold-eye, besides oysters, lobsters, seals, whales and walrus.

The richest whaling regions in the world are said to exist in the Hudson Bay and Arctic regions of Canada.

The Pacific coast fisheries furnish halibut, black cod, oulachan, anchovy, herring, smelt, and many species of salmon and trout. The salmon of British Columbia are worth over $5,000,000 annually, and the total yield of the fisheries of that province exceeds $6,000,000. Lumbering ranks third among the extractive industries of Canada and the forest wealth is very great. It is stated that 122 species of trees grow in that country, 94 occurring east of the Rocky Mountains, and 29 on the Pacific coast. The forest belt extends a distance of about 4000 miles East and West, with a breadth of some 700 miles. The trees consist principally of the following species: black and white spruce, banksian pine, white pine, red pine, larch, balsam fir, balsam poplar, aspen, canoe birch, bird cherry, white cedar, black ash and mountain ash occur sparingly in the southern part of this belt.

British Columbia is thought to possess the greatest compact reserve of timber in the world. The wooded area is estimated at 285,000 square miles and includes many kinds of timber. The Douglas spruce is the show tree of British Columbia and indeed of Canada.

The forests of Canada contain pine, spruce, hemlock, oak, elm, maple, beech, birch, loblolly hickory, bass, wood, etc. Nearly 38 percent of its whole area is forested.

In 1899 the capital invested in the pulp mills of Canada alone was about $15,000,000. The capacity of the mills was over 1200 tons per day. The value of the forest products exported in 1901 was nearly $33,000,000, and their total must have been at least three times that amount.

It will readily be seen that indeed, Canada has something to show and she intends to spring a universal surprise next year. Mr. William Hutchison, Canadian Exposition Commissioner, is just back in Ottawa from Japan, where he represented his country at the Osaka Exposition. Mr. Hutchison's trip to Japan is certain to be of considerable future benefit to Canada and already trial shipments of wheat and flour have been made to the Far East country just visited by him.

The Canadian Commissioner is now actively engaged in making preparations for the world's fair at St. Louis. On his way home from Vancouver to Ottawa he made preliminary arrangements for a thoroughly representative exhibit of the timber, fisheries and mining industries of Canada. British Columbia will furnish the forest monster and an effort will be made to obtain the largest and longest piece of Douglas fir ever shown.

The salmon canning industry of the Pacific Coast and the numberless kinds of fish from the maritime Province will be well represented at the Exposition in St. Louis. Canada is second to none in her natural resources and her showing of next year will well prove it.

A young gentleman of our town was out driving the other day with one of the fair sex and met with a peculiar accident, driving over a cow that was lying on the road and doing considerable damage to his carriage. We are not saying much, but would advise the farmers to keep their cows off the road or persuade the young man in question to pay more attention to his horse next time.

On Monday, June 22, Edward O'Brien, of Tabusintar, lost his home, all the furniture, and $90 in money, by fire, which is supposed to have originated from a spark from the chimney. When discovered, the attic was full of flames, which rapidly spread, until the building and contents were reduced to ashes. The house was comparatively new, and as there was no insurance the loss was very heavy.

When Mr. McKnight, Burnt Church, was going to his mill to work one morning recently, he noticed a lad of six or seven years fishing from the wharf. After a while he heard the lad making so great an outcry that he ran out to see what had happened. The youngster was dancing around a big trout he had landed and whooping for all he was worth. "Mister," he shouted to Mr. McKnight, that is the biggest trout I have seen in all my life! And then, with the fish still on the hook, he shouldered his fishing pole and started for home and friends.—World.

HEAVY BRITISH LOSS

In Fighting in Somaliland.

PARIS, June 27.—A despatch received here from Jibuti, Abyssinia, says the Mad Mullah has destroyed five British posts between Burao and Bobote in Somaliland. Thirty-nine British officers out of forty-two white men were killed in the engagement. Two thousand native soldiers were made prisoners.

LONDON, June 27.—The War office has received no telegram from Somaliland enabling it to contradict the French report of a British disaster.

The last news of the Mad Mullah was that he was moving eastward of the British forces, threatening the lines between Burao and Bobote, which were the only means of communication with the coast. General Manning was expected to reach Bobote June 26 with reinforcements.
