LOCAL RESIDENT HEIR TO FORTUNE

Former Waterville Lady one of the heirs to $66,000,000 Estate of Sir Francis Drake—Money Has Been in Bank for 200 Years—Many Relatives in this Section.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. (Drake) Hull, 46 Green street, Lynn, Mass., claims to be one of the 29 heirs to the fortune left by Sir Francis Drake, the noted English explorer and sea rover. This fortune is said to amount to about $66,000,000 and has been in English banks for over 200 years and the heirs are now attempting to recover it.

In conversation with a gentleman in town yesterday the story of the Drake fortune was verified. The gentleman interviewed had a knowledge of the fortune and said that it was common talk among the various members of the family now residing in this vicinity that there was a very close relationship between them and the venerable gentlemen that died so long since and left this immense fortune. Our informant seemed well informed about the family affairs of Mrs. Elizabeth Hull and said that her husband was Robert Hull, formerly of Woodstock.

There have been numerous attempts made to regain the treasure that is now sought after and perhaps the people that are now interested are in possession of more details and more proof as to their relationship to the late possessor of this now immense fortune. The dispatch from Lynn states that Mrs. Hull intends upon receiving her expected share of the fortune to devote her entire time to charity among the poor of Lynn in whom she is greatly interested. The many friends of the Drake family in this section of the country wish them every success in their endeavors to regain the fortune of their ancestor.

BATH

Bath, N. B., April 20—The Easter holy days and holidays have come and as one person said—have went. Most of our young folk who came home for Easter, have returned to various institutions of learning, and others to business life. Among the post-Lenten celebrations were the Easter Monday Ball at Tara Hall, Johnville, which was well attended, and the ball at the K. P. Hall at Bath on Wednesday. Also the card party at the home of Miss Gallagher.

The ladies of the Hospital Aid met at the home of Mrs. S. McDonald, on Friday afternoon and engaged in their usual altruistic work. Monthly meeting of members of Women's Institute at Mrs. Garfield Larlee's residence. Program, business and a social hour on Tuesday.

Paul Wright, the new manager of the local telephone system, has moved into the premises of Charles Gibson on Mechanic street.

Miss Nellie Giberson is making a most successful trip through Bath and vicinity in the interests of a firm putting out a line of high class toilet requisites and beautifiers.

While a case was being tried in the local court, word was brought that the home of Newcombe Parker was on fire, and owing to the fact that every one in court speedily vanished to assist in getting the fire under control, an adjournment was imperative. In less than twenty minutes, thanks to the energy displayed, all that remained of the effects of the conflagration was a hole in the roof, and some damage by water. It was not found necessary to remove Mrs. Parker, who is slowly recovering from the illness which necessitated the recent operation.

Two new pupils have joined the advanced class now being taught by Mrs. Stanley Barker, privately at her residence.

Pat McFarlane, principal of our school, who went to his home in Fredericton, returned to his duties with renewed health and ambition.

Den Nixon, wife and family, have been spending a short vacation as guests of George Nixon of Main street.

Miss Aird of Beaufort was visiting Miss Marion Craig recently.

Friends of the late James Peters of Florenceville were sorry to hear of his death and many attended the burial service.

Mrs. Barter and daughter have been staying for a few days with Mrs. Bert Dyer. Sam Barter has been writing insurance here.

Gage Montgomery and wife were away to Hartland for Easter and have returned to their home here, and Mr. Montgomery has had to hustle to catch up with the business which piled up during absence.

Several of our local tradesmen are planning to move out their old stock through special sales to make room for latest spring goods.

John Fulton has the credit of selling the first car here this season. A few residents have expressed a desire to own a speed wagon and he it known that they have the money which talks in a loud voice.

We have very few pessimists here, even though the winds are decidedly chilly, and the sun does not give out the warmth, that we may expect. Some gaspateurs have been caught and our fishermen are busily engaged in overhauling rods, lines and nets ready for use.

This community was shocked early on Sunday morning to hear of the sudden collapse of G. W. Parker, through a paralytic stroke which occurred some time during the night at his residence. Harry Giberson had occasion to call on him early Sunday morning and found him on the floor of his bedroom, barely conscious and

RESUME POTATO PROBE AT BATH

Harry Hereford Again Returns to Carleton County and Reopens Investigation of C. E. Gallagher Co.—Several Days More Required to Finish Work—Report in Near Future.

Harry Hereford, investigator under the Combines Investigation Act of 1923, together with Mr. Jackson, Mr. Doig, and Mr. Hughes, are in Bath, again looking into the affairs of the C. E. Gallagher Co. It is understood according to the Fredericton Gleaner, that Mr. Fred L. Estabrooks, M. L. A. for Westmorland, was asked to give evidence in connection with statements that he made in the Legislature in Fredericton. The evidence of Mr. W. W. Boyce was also taken. The charges that Mr. Estabrooks made during the debates in the Local Legislature were that the New Brunswick Potato shippers operate a combine which was associated with the "Potato Trust" in Cuba and that these interests controlled shipping facilities as well. Just what the outcome of the investigation, after the evidence given by Mr. Estabrooks and Mr. Boyce will be hard to forecast but there is one thing certain that the investigators are sparing nobody and there is every reason to believe that their report will be very thorough and will clear up the question of combine, etc. In the course of the next month we should know just what has been ascertained by Mr. Hereford and that will be gratifying not only to the growers but to the shippers as well as for their time has been greatly taken up during the course of the investigation.

RECENT MARRIAGES

McNabb-Shaw

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Shaw, of Florenceville, was on Monday, April 6th, the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, when their youngest daughter, Lillian Grace, became the bride of William Thomas McNabb, Rev. G. W. Wasson of United Baptist Church, solemnized the marriage in the presence of the family and immediate relatives. The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a blue suit with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of cream roses and maiden hair fern. Miss Evelyn McCain played the wedding march as the bride entered the room. The bridal couple were unattended. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served after which the bride and groom took their departure for Toronto and Hamilton, Ont., where they will visit the groom's relatives and leave there for their future home in Youngstown, Alberta.

MORGAN-BROWN

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Charles E. Sharp, Woodstock on April 15, when Perley A. Morgan and Ola M. Brown, both of Millville were united in marriage by Rev. P. J. Quigg.

took steps at once to let his brother know of his condition. Mr. Parker was then removed to the home of his brother, Newcombe Parker and the doctor was called, who did not hold out much hope of recovery. At the moment of writing he is some better. On Saturday he was working as usual in apparently good health. Herbert Crain is another to be added to the list of farmers who are taking year off to study the situation. His farm is rented by B. Crain.

PRINTER'S INK

The most important magazine in its field the world over devotes a page to Moire Bridge Box, praising its "attractive and colorful cover" and the idea of enclosing playing cards and score sheets with a pound of chocolates

Presidents of large American corporations, managers and other officials, have written to Moire ordering the Bridge Box as a gift for bridge friends and a prize at games.

So occasionally a Maritime industry can pioneer not merely for Canada, but the continent. Of course Moire Chocolates themselves proved that long ago.

TRAIN SERVICE TO BE CHANGED

Time Table of the Valley Line to be So Changed that the Residents of the Upper St. John Valley Will suffer Terribly—Move Now on Foot to Have New Schedule Changed.

We understand that the C. N. R. authorities are contemplating several changes in the schedule of the C. N. R. train on the Centreville route. The Fredericton Gleaner says that the changes are going to suit the public. Evidently they mean the public of Fredericton and points south, for there is certainly no consideration given to the feelings of those north of Fredericton and especially for those north of Woodstock. The new service that is expected to go into effect about the fourth of May will change the time table so that there will be a round trip between Centreville and Saint John daily but the unearthly time that the train leaves Centreville does not suit the people of the northern section. In order to go south the people of Centreville will have to arise in the middle of the night in order to catch the train that leaves at 5.20. This train will arrive in Fredericton about 9 o'clock, leaving immediately thereafter for Saint John where it arrives at 12.55. On the return trip the train will leave Saint John at 4.55 p. m. and arrive back in Centreville at 11.55 p. m.

This is very convenient indeed for the people of this section of the country, and it is understood that there is a petition being circulated asking for a later hour of departure from Centreville. One other great fault is the fact that the mail will be held over till the next morning, where before the change in many towns and villages it was possible to sort and receive the mail the same night. There does not seem to be any chance left for the Valley Railroad to pay. How many people on the upper reaches of the Saint John River will get up at dawn to catch the train to points south. They will wait several hours and then get into

A gloom of sadness was cast over the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lockhart of Bristol, when on the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding a little grandson, Ronald Hutchinson became suddenly ill and died in the early hours of April 18 at the age of 9 years and two days. What is loss for them is gain for him.

Funeral service was held in Primitive Baptist Church, Bristol, and was conducted by Rev. A. Hatfield, assisted by Rev. G. Giberson. ### FACTS ABOUT TEA SERIES—No. 4

The Two Types of Tea

There are two distinct types of tea, namely Black Tea and Green Tea. Both are made from the same bush and both are equally pure. The difference is in the process of manufacture which gives each a different flavour. Black Tea after it is plucked is withered and partially 'fired' or dried, then allowed to oxidize by being exposed to the air. This gives Black Tea its dark reddish colour when drawn. Green tea is immediately steamed after plucking, which prevents oxidization. There are delicious blends of "SALADA" in both of these types and also a unique blend of Black and Green Tea Mixed. All are sold in four qualities.

For Baby's Bath

More than that of any other member of the family, baby's tender, delicate skin needs the greatest care and attention. The soft soothing oils in Baby's Own Soap make it specially suitable for babies, and its clinging fragrance reminds one of the roses of France which help to inspire it.

FACTS ABOUT TEA SERIES—No. 4

The Two Types of Tea

There are two distinct types of tea, namely Black Tea and Green Tea. Both are made from the same bush and both are equally pure. The difference is in the process of manufacture which gives each a different flavour. Black Tea after it is plucked is withered and partially 'fired' or dried, then allowed to oxidize by being exposed to the air. This gives Black Tea its dark reddish colour when drawn. Green tea is immediately steamed after plucking, which prevents oxidization. There are delicious blends of "SALADA" in both of these types and also a unique blend of Black and Green Tea Mixed. All are sold in four qualities.

their cars and drive to Woodstock, there to catch the C. P. R. That's the situation and the people of this district should be sore and I suppose they are tired of being sore at the conditions and troubles they have had to buck against. Why can't the C. N. R. authorities work in conjunction with the people that they are trying to serve? Why is it that they are always bucking and fighting their customers?

Well do the authorities know the trouble the people experienced when a similar service was in effect two or three years ago and a repetition of that service will more than make the people sit up and take notice—Ed.

Peter Lala's Race

By FRED H. STEVENS

(The following is one of a series of stories of adventure by the founder and late editor of The Observer, which were written and published in 1907. This one appeared in the Montreal Witness, July 2nd, of that year.—M. W. S., Ed.)

It was sunrise; the hour for the departure of the stage for Woodstock, the little frontier town sixty-four miles further up the St. John River. In the stable-yard behind the King's Inn the grooms were busy harnessing four able horses to a venerable yellow cab.

The last straps and buckles were made, secure, the lynch-pins driven home after a liberal greasing of axle-trees, when a tall, spare figure strode silently through the driveway. The flapping brim of a tattered felt hat did not entirely conceal the shrewd black eyes and swart skin of the Indian. A discolored scarlet tunic cast aside by one of His Majesty's soldiers at the barracks, showed plainly the native's love of gorgeous attire.

Peter Lala, of the Millicete tribe, was known all over Fredericton as a good Indian. Long ago he had discarded the blanket of his fathers for the white man's garb. He did the work of white men. He earned the white men's money. Even now there lay secure in his breeches pocket a shining gold doubloon, the result of a month's hard toil at the Douglas Booms. Industrious, honest, a regular attendant at the little chapel at St. Mary's, Peter also possessed the rare virtue of sobriety.

Today he was intending to go to Woodstock to join the gangs of river-drivers engaged in bringing more logs to the booms. When the stablemen observed his approach a volley of good-natured banter greeted him. He received it with the Indian's characteristic imperturbance and addressed himself to the driver who at the moment came from the inn's back door.

"Injun go Woodstock with you?"

With only the merest glance in his direction the driver clambered to the high box, deftly gathered up the handful of reins, and with masterful command of the stamping horses, turned them into the driveway.

The Indian gazed fixedly after him, then his sinewy shoulders straightened with injured dignity. His stolid features gave no sign but as he turned toward the group of men left behind his eyes showed plainly how deeply the rebuff had cut him. Why should he not ride in the white man's carriage? Were not his clothes those of the King's own braves? Was not his money good money? Was he not the good friends of every one in Fredericton?

"He don't know ye, Pete!" sympathized one of the by-standers. "Run around to the inn and show him your money; he'll take you quick enough!"

Peter glided away in the direction the coach had gone. At the inn door he boldly presented himself among the numerous passengers about to board the vehicle. To the driver he declared with stolid dignity: "Me go Woodstock!"

"Get out—!" But the driver checked himself as his eye caught the yellow gleam in the Indian's palm. As he hesitated, a murmur of protest came from those within the coach.

"Me ride on top with you," Peter promptly suggested.

"I intend riding outside myself," spoke up a dapper young Englishman who, suiting action to the word, climbed nimbly to the box.

The Indian was silent while his beady eyes deliberately surveyed the equipage and its occupants. "Huh! Injin race you," he challenged, "me be there first."

Off he darted up the street. They watched him until his red tunic was lost to view around the bend where the Front Street joined the Great Post Road. "He'll soon get tired o' that," the driver sneered. "If he gets to the Half Way House some time tonight, it'll be all he'll do."

But when, a few minutes later the stage rolled into the post road, the driver descried the red-coated figure still keeping up the quick gliding strides, a good half-mile ahead.

"He'll soon tire o' that," the driver again voiced his prophecy.

The passengers, beyond a brief moment's regret that he could not have secured passage, promptly forgot the Indian's avowed intention to "be there first." That he should outdo four fleet horses was an idea too preposterous for a moment's reflection.

But none had reckoned with the red man's remarkable power of endurance.

More than the proverbial nine days' wonder, the story of that race has been the favorite fireside tale for more than one generation of young people that have grown up in the locality where it occurred.

It was when the horses had accomplished the steepest and longest of the Kingsclear Hills that the driver again caught a glimpse of Peter's flying figure as he disappeared over the crest of the next and last hill—a mile ahead!

When the hot July sun had burned through the thick mantle of fog that risen from the river, had hung as a gray heavy cloud overhead, the heat became intolerable to those in the crowded coach. As many as could be accommodated besought the driver for the privilege of riding outside. There the fierce sun smote them unrelentingly, yet the air was fresh and full of the thousand sweet odors of midsummer. Not a leaf was stirring but the onward rush of the coach made a vivifying breeze.

Until those rough hills were passed the horses could make but slow progress. After the last one a comparatively smooth road lay before them. But through the long vista of arching maples no Indian was to be seen!

"Well, well!" exclaimed the Englishman, gleefully. "That chap really means business—he is leaving us away behind!"

The driver again declared scornfully that Peter would soon tire of the race. Nevertheless he urged his horses into a brisk run.

The passengers, in admiration for his pluck, readily permitted their sympathy to go with the Indian.

Excitement grew apace. Mile after mile passed behind as the huge vehicle rolled merrily over the hard, white road.

The horses, lathered with sweat panted heavily. The driver well knew that at the present rate of travel, they could not hold out for the distance to Half Way House, where a fresh relay was in waiting. He held his team down to an easier pace.

"That fellow's dodged us, I reckon. He's took to the woods and let us pass him."

"Why not ask the farmer yonder?" suggested one. At the passenger's behest the driver reluctantly drew rein. "Did I see 'im?" grinned the farmer. "Wal now, I saw a red streak o' somethin' go by half an hour ago. Guess 'twas Peter Lala, the Indian; an ye've got to move lively to overtake him. What did he—?"

At the crack of the whip the horses plunged forward, leaving the farmer to think out the situation for himself.

Along level places, over hills, the great coach thundered. Eager eyes kept a sharp look-out but no red coat was sighted.

A horseman met by the way reported having passed him two miles or more further on. Others were hailed as the stage careered by them. But the invariable answer was that Peter had gone by some time before. He was plainly gaining!

The driver keenly realized that he, a new driver on the route, would be the butt of jocularities for all Woodstock should Peter win the race. But the horses were becoming fatigued and his humane instinct forbade any further undue urging of the poor, tired beasts.

However, a little later the horses dragged wearily into the yard at the Half Way House. Prone on the grass in the shade of a big balm-o-gilead tree lay Peter, eyeing them unconcernedly. When the passengers showered him with congratulations upon winning the first half of the race, he turned his face away as though he had not heard.

The driver guffawed. "Didn't I tell ye? He's tuckered out, just as I said he'd be!"

An hour later, after the party had eaten and the fresh horses were in readiness for the start, Peter had already gone.

"hour ago," the landlord chuckled. "He got here an hour before you did; eat his dinner and laid there on the grass a spell, then scooted. Said he was going to get to Woodstock first, an' I—I guess he will." Mine Host concluded with a mischievous wink at the driver.

The driver hurried aboard the coach, the now thoroughly enthusiastic passengers, and the long race was speedily resumed.
But they were not to overtake Peter that day. Although the trip was made in record-breaking time, it was not until they bowed into Woodstock, four hours later, and a chorus of loud cheers smote their ears, that they saw him.

He had arrived less than an hour before, and was quick to inform the people there of his accomplishment.

Bowing low, he stepped out from the crowd to meet them. He had won.
The passengers cheered again and again, while each rushed to grasp the Indian's brown hand.

That was a momentous occasion for Peter Lala. He felt little doubt of the white man's friendship that night, for there followed an ovation such as no Millicote had ever received before.
