

DOES MUNYON CURE?

That Seems Like a Very Unlikely and Absurd Question After

ALL THE TESTIMONY.

All the Tests and the Thousands of Absolute and Unquestioned Cures That Have Been Made by Munyon in Canada.

Mr. W. S. Nelson, engineer, Evening News, Toronto, Canada, says: "I was troubled with the most severe form of catarrh for eight years. Had tried everything to get well, but without success. The pains across the forehead were so severe at night that I was unable to obtain my needed rest. I was also subject to sneezing to such an extent that I would sneeze as often as forty to fifty times a day. At the general hospital, where I went for treatment, I was told that an operation was necessary, and during it out the only hope. I have used Munyon's Cold and Catarrh Cure for one month, and became rapidly better. I believe Munyon has done more for me than all the other doctors, and I have sent hundreds of people to Munyon."

Munyon's Rheumatic Cure seldom fails to relieve in one to three hours, and cures in a few days. Price, 25c. Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure positively cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Cold Cure prevents pneumonia, and breaks up a cold in a few hours. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Kidney Cure speedsily cures pains in the back, loins or groins, and all forms of kidney diseases. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Headache Cure stops headache in three minutes. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Pile Ointment positively cures all forms of piles. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Blood Cure eradicates all impurities of the blood. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Female Remedies are a boon to all women.

Munyon's Catarrh Remedies never fail. The Catarrh Cure—price, 25c—eradicates the disease from the system, and the Catarrh Tablets—price, 25c—cleanse and heal the parts.

Munyon's Asthma Remedies relieve in three minutes and cure permanently. Price, $1.

Munyon's Vitalizer, a great tonic and restorer of vital strength to weak people. Price, $1.

A separate cure for each disease. At all druggists, mostly 25c a visit.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 11 Albert street, Toronto, Ont., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

Beware of imitators who are copying our advertisements, appropriating our methods, and following the plan adopted by us when we introduced our remedies to the people of Ontario a year ago. You can easily distinguish between the original and the imitation.

Prof. Munyon, founder of the new school of Homeopathy, does not desire that the public should be imposed upon.

LONDON BEATEN.

Ingersoll, Ont., Nov. 15.—Ingersoll defeated London on Saturday in a well-contested game of Rugby by a score of 9 to 1.

BERLIN DEFAULTS.

The Berlin football team defaulted to Seaford on Saturday by not turning up, and Seaford gets the Hough cup.

AT MONTREAL.

The Montreal-Ottawa College football match on Saturday was won by Ottawa College by 14 to 13 points. Just before time was called the score stood 13 to 13. Then Ottawa College scored another point. Ottawa College will now have to play McGill to decide the championship of Quebec.

HAMILTON TIGERS WIN.

Toronto, Nov. 15.—On Saturday the Hamilton Tigers, in the final match at Rosedale, won from Osgoode by 15 to 8. The score at half-time was 8 to 8 in favor of the legites. Five thousand people witnessed the game, including about 300 from Hamilton, who came down decked with yellow and black ribbons and yellow chrysanthemums. The Osgoode supporters wore white ones. The game was a first-class exhibition of Rugby, though it was one of the keenest contests seen at Rosedale for a long time. It was not particularly rough, although Flood and McAuliffe were sent off twice in the second half for scrapping. They were sent off for the rest of the game the second time. The Tigers thus win the senior Rugby championship of Ontario.

KICKS.

At Guelph, Ont.—Berlin played Guelph a return match in Rugby, and Guelph won by 4 to 2.

At Windsor, Ont.—The Peninsula Association Football League match between Essex and Windsor resulted in a score of 2 to 0 in favor of Windsor.

At Guelph, Ont.—In the final match for the Western Football Association intermediate championship, Ontario Agricultural College defeated Guelph by 1 to 0, and thus became the holders of the cup for the season.

A Chicago—Nearly 10,000 football enthusiasts saw the eleven from the University of Wisconsin defeat the University of Chicago on Marshall Field by a score of 22 to 5.

The Peninsula Association Football League match to have been played at Tilbury between Chatham and Tilbury, did not take place, Chatham defaulting.

At Port Hope—Upper Canada College Rugby Football team defeated Trinity College School here Saturday by 14 to 2.

At New York—Carlisle, Pa., Indian School 14, Brown University 18.

At Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard 0, Yale 0.

At Buffalo, N. Y.—Cornell 42, Williams 0.

At Philadelphia—University of Pennsylvania 22, Wesleyan 0.

At Detroit—University of Michigan 14, University of Minnesota 0.

At Chicago—University of Wisconsin 23, University of Chicago 8.

At Denver, Col.—The football game between the teams of the East Denver and West Denver high school students finished in a riot, in which all the players and a couple of hundred spectators took part. That no one was seriously injured was due to the fact that a dozen policemen were sent to the scene and dispersed the mob.

WHEEL.

Belle Air, Fla., Nov. 15.—An audience of nearly 2,000 persons witnessed Saturday's racing, which wound up the national circuit chase here. Summaries:

One mile, professional—Walthour 1, McFarland 2, Cooper 3. Time, 2:10.

Two-mile handicap, professional—Butler (scratched), 1, Hadfield (100 yards) 2, Freeman (120 yards) 3. Time, 4:01 2-5.

Half-mile open, amateur—Feabody 1, Fowers 2, Jones 3. Time, 1:18 3-5.

One mile, 2-5 class, professional—Brown 1, Hadfield 2, Freeman 3. Time, 2:07 3-5.

Two-mile match race—Powers 1, Peabody 2. Time, 4:56.

One mile, for Citizens' purse, each rider paced for a mile—Won by McFarland; time, 1:49 4-5. Bald second; time, 1:51 1-5. Brown third; time, 1:51 2-5.

JIMMY WINS.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Jimmy Michael defeated Fred J. Titus, of New York, in a match race of 25 miles for a purse of $1,000, at the Coliseum on Saturday.

The race was run on an eight-lap track, and Titus was two miles behind at the finish. The fifth mile was made in a remarkable time of 1:58 1-5. The pacing started was too warm for the New York rider, and early in the sixth mile he stopped to complain. On the third lap of the twelfth mile a tire on one of the Titus pacers exploded and threw him and the three men in a heap. Titus was not badly hurt, and he secured a new wheel and went to work one and a half miles behind the Welshman.

Indoor records up to the fourteenth mile made by Michael went by the board, but there was no incentive to speed after that time, as Titus was beaten after the fifth mile. Michael's time was: One mile, 2:01 3-5; five miles, 10:08 2-5; ten miles, 20:30 4-5; fifteen, 31:10 2-5; twenty, 41:46 4-5; twenty-five, 52:34 2-5. Twelve thousand people were present.

SPOKES.

The statistical find calculates that the number of cycles in the world now exceeds 10,000,000.

Quite a few orders are being placed for chainless wheels, but long-distance men, such as century riders and tourists, seem to be favoring the chain wheel with a gear case.

Miss Louise Rogers recently broke the world's unpaced hour record for women at the Buffalo track, Paris.

She rode 2 1/2 miles in the time, breaking all world's paced records.

The State Supreme Court of Iowa has declared that while no law compels bicyclists to use lanterns or bells at night, wheelmen without them are guilty of contributory negligence in case of accident.

Those Linton competed in a match with Bourdette, the French rider, on the Prince track at Paris, Oct. 24, in a 50-kilometer (31 1/4 miles) race. Linton won by four laps, and covered the distance in 59:37 2-5.

The leading features of the racing season in England are summed up as follows: "Poor gates at most of the important meetings, only medium performances by amateurs a higher turn of speed among professionals, and perfect pacing in their record attempts."

THE TURF.

LONDON HORSES IN NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 15.—The New York horse show will open today in Madison Square Garden, and is expected to prove the chief social event of the season in the metropolis. There are over 1,500 entries this year. Last year there were only 1,300. There is hardly a prominent horse owner who will not be represented on the catalogue.

Adam Beck, of London, Ont., is once more heavily represented in various classes.

ATHLETICS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 15.—What was to have been a four-round bout between Joe Butler, the colored pugilist, of Philadelphia, and Jack Bonner, of Summit Hill, Pa., at the arena on Saturday, was stopped in the second round, and Butler was placed under arrest for an attempt to assault the referee, Ernest Crowhurst. There were numerous fouls which the referee overlooked, but in the second round, in a clinch, both were in danger of going over the ropes, when the referee separated them and sent them to their corners. This angered Butler, who made a vicious lunge at Crowhurst. The latter narrowly escaped the blow. A policeman arrested Butler.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The principal attraction at the regular weekly boxing show of the Polo Athletic Club on Saturday was the meeting for the third time of Oscar Gardiner, the "Omaha Kid," and Chuck O'Brien, of this city. About 1,500 persons were present. Gardiner had the best of it throughout the fifteen rounds, and got the decision.

EASEBALL.

DOUBLE UMPIRE SYSTEM GOES.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 15.—The National League magnates met Saturday. The league adopted the double umpire system and also adopted a resolution having for its object the suppression of rowdism on the part of players.

For indecent language on the field, players found guilty after a full hearing will be expelled from the game for ever, and shall not be eligible to reinstatement.

FOR YOUNG MEN.

Inauguration of the Special Y. M. C. A. Campaign—Three Successful Meetings.

The special Y. M. C. A. services opened very auspiciously yesterday afternoon at the Auditorium with a men's meeting. Ex-Mayor Spencer presided.

Rev. Capt. Knapp, of Ayer, who is a great favorite, was the first speaker, and gave a very practical discourse from Matthew vi, 33: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Mr. Frank Robinson spoke on the "Need of dedicating Christ in work for men," and dwelt strongly on the necessity of counteracting the evil influences of large centers of population.

Mr. A. D. Benson, of New York, was also held in the King Street Presbyterian Church, at which Rev. Thos. Wilson presided.

HONORE'S FATE.

It was of the old photographer that they were talking in the garden, when Royden joined them again, and found Royden Keith leaning against the open window beside which Mrs. Disbrow lay, and Mrs. Payte and Phoebe sitting on the garden seat without. "It's a stupid idea altogether, I think," the little old lady was saying, when Honore came quietly up and stood among them. "How can you have the picture complete without having Gabriel Myddelton in it, and who would care for a picture where he figured? Rubbish altogether, I call it, and Lady Lawrence is a senseless old woman to want it."

"Perhaps it might be possible," said Royden, with the dash of keen amusement which sometimes shone so swiftly in his steadfast, handsome eyes, "for Verrier to copy Gabriel Myddelton's picture first, and then arrange the head among the others, so that the photograph might include him, too?" "None of the others would sit in that case," observed Mrs. Payte, tersely. "Why? Cowardice was his inheritance, not an acquired trait. What is your great, Miss Law?"

"A pair of heels," said Honore, smiling a little at her own inexplicable bluntness, as she turned to the inheritance, "and the motto below from the Musarum Delicieux. You know the lines: 'He that fights and runs away, May live to fight another day.'"

"The inheritance of cowardice," said Royden, smiling into her eyes, "and Gabriel's motto was a Craven. What is the legend of the crest?" "Our earliest ancestor," said Honore, "once engaged in single combat, and when he found the fight going against him, saved his life in a paltry manner by crying 'Craven' before the other went down. Knights were allowed, in those days, to end the fight so, to their dishonor."

"I call it a wise and prudent measure, too," said Royden, laughing as he turned to the sick lady within the room; "there are worse crimes in the world than crying 'Craven' before the sun goes down. Don't you think so, Mrs. Disbrow?" "Indeed I do," she answered, gently smiling as she met his gaze. "It is a gaze I like to meet," she had said to Mrs. Payte only that very morning, as they talked of Royden Keith. "I wish I thought that was poor young Myddelton's only sin."

"He was a Myddelton. How could you expect him to be other than what he proved himself?" interrupted Mrs. Payte, contemptuously. "If he ever could turn out a good man, it would be now that he has forfeited his name and his riches. The hope of stealing into such a fortune has made others sin besides Gabriel Myddelton, and is making others sin, and will make others sin; and the possession of such wealth would spoil many a man, and woman, too. It is beyond my power to imagine whom it would not spoil."

The sharp eyes under the broad brow went from Honore's face to Phoebe's, and back again to Honore's. Mr. Keith following their gaze, still leaning idly there against the window, the three dogs waiting at his feet. "It was the little old lady herself who broke the pause which followed by saying: 'I have a great wish to go to Abbotsmoor. I suppose I must pocket my pride and ask for an invitation.' Will you, will you, place, Mrs. Payte?" cried Honore, impulsively, "and let me stay with Mrs. Disbrow?"

"Now, Honore, how can you be so silly?" exclaimed Phoebe. "You know how angry Lawrence would be." "Will you, said Royden, turning his eyes quickly from Honore's face, "let me drive you there, Mrs. Payte? I am invited to bring a friend; please to be that friend." "There was a little hint demurring, but it was arranged, nevertheless, and the old lady seemed as well contented as she ever seemed about anything. They chatted a little longer, and then Royden prepared to go.

"What a beautiful fellow this greyhound is," said Honore, laying her hand lightly on his glossy, dun-colored head. "What is his name, Mr. Keith?" "Lachne," he answered, as he offered her his hand; "that means the glossy-coated; and this little terrier is Leucos, which means gray; and the spaniel, Labro, which means furious. Can you remember after whose dogs mine are named?"

"Yes—Actaeon's," she answered. "Have you fifty?" "Only these three now," he said, rather gravely, "trustworthy friends whom I have had with me many years. 'And from whom you would not like to part, especially this beautiful greyhound?' 'No; I do not know what would tempt me voluntarily to part with Lachne.' From East Cottage, Royden Keith rode on to Kinbury, and, dismounting at the door of the hotel, gave his horse to his groom.

"She is tired enough," he said, "take her in, Edwards, and bring me round Robin Hood in half an hour's time." "Saddled, sir?" inquired the groom, betraying a little of his astonishment, for he had not his master back in the saddle almost since daybreak. "Saddled, of course," returned Royden, as he mounted the hotel steers. "I did not expect you back so soon, sir," said Pierce, following Mr. Keith to his private sitting-room; "you ordered dinner at eight. Will you lunch so late as this, sir?"

"I lunched three hours ago," said Royden, as he took his letters from the chimney-piece, with his back to the valet, who seemed stirred a little from his usual middle-aged gravity. "I lunched at the Towers. Send me a glass of wine, that is all."

Following the waiter, who, with the mathematical precision of waiters, set the wine and biscuits before Mr. Keith, came Pierce once more into his master's presence. "I beg your pardon, sir," he said, making a show of removing the things from the table, "but are all well at the Towers?" "All well, thank you, Pierce."

"And everything going on as it should, sir—as it would if you were there?" "Just as it would if we were there," amended Royden, smiling at the man's real, though hidden, earnestness. "You seemed to be summoned so hurriedly, sir, I thought."

"Not summoned at all," said Mr. Keith, as he poured himself a glass of sherry. "No illness of the lady's, sir?" "No."

Royden put down his empty glass and took up another letter. The servant lingered still, but the solemn decorum of his face and manner hid the keen and anxious interest he felt in his master's answers.

"Leave those, Pierce," said Royden, looking up from the paper in his hand; "I am going out again in a few minutes."

"Riding again this evening, sir?" "Riding again this evening—yes," he answered, smiling a little now. "But I am only going round the Abbotsmoor woods, and shall be back to dinner. Poor Princess is tired out, but Robin will be fresh and fleet."

"The dogs seem tired, too, sir," said Pierce, wondering at the run their master had given them that day. "Then they need not come; they shall make their own choice. No-o," mused Royden, slowly tearing the letter in his hand; "I will take Lachne only."

Pierce looked in vain for any apparent reason for this change of purpose.

"To save trouble, I suppose," he thought. "There's always a scene if he tries to leave the greyhound behind."

So Royden Keith, ten minutes afterward, rode from Kinbury to find the answer to that doubt he had expressed at East Cottage.

"I do not know what would tempt me voluntarily to part with Lachne."

CHAPTER VII.

Mrs. Payte stood with the girls at the gate of East Cottage, watching Royden as he rode away.

"Do you like him, Phoebe?" she asked, abruptly.

"He is very handsome," Phoebe acknowledged, in a tone of praise as warm as she ever bestowed on any one save her guardian.

"He's not a man to go through life with his hands folded," remarked the old lady, tersely. "Honore, why are you staring up the road? You won't call him handsome, I know not you. Unless a man has languishing manners like Captain Trent, and can look at you lackadaisically under his eyelids, and talk in a lazy whisper, you haven't much to say in his favor. Ah, I see why you are staring; here they come! Sound their trumpet, beat their drum! What a delightful conjunction! They remind me of Prior and Swift, who used to walk round the park together—Prior to make him self fat, Swift to keep himself lean."

Honore's eyes had come back from their distant gaze to see the two advancing figures, and then she turned to Phoebe with a smile.

"I declare I did not know," said the old lady, "that Lawrence, Haigden and Hervey Trent were such close friends. What bond of union lies between them?"

Dr. Chase Cures Catarrh After Operations.

Toronto, March 16, 1897.

My boy, aged 14, has been a sufferer from Catarrh, and lately we submitted him to an operation at the general hospital. Since then we have resorted to Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, and the box of this medicine has made a prompt and complete cure.

Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

People Talk Back.

Many people talk back. Here is one. Miss Katharine Weese, Belleville, says: "I have had a pain in my back, accompanied by general debility, and tried various remedies for the same, but without deriving much benefit, until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, which I am glad to say entirely cured me. They are certainly a grand medicine, and I can say in my case proved to be a thorough specific."

"Yes—Actaeon's," she answered. "Have you fifty?"

"Only these three now," he said, rather gravely, "trustworthy friends whom I have had with me many years. 'And from whom you would not like to part, especially this beautiful greyhound?' 'No; I do not know what would tempt me voluntarily to part with Lachne.' From East Cottage, Royden Keith rode on to Kinbury, and, dismounting at the door of the hotel, gave his horse to his groom.

"She is tired enough," he said, "take her in, Edwards, and bring me round Robin Hood in half an hour's time." "Saddled, sir?" inquired the groom, betraying a little of his astonishment, for he had not his master back in the saddle almost since daybreak.

"Saddled, of course," returned Royden, as he mounted the hotel steers. "I did not expect you back so soon, sir," said Pierce, following Mr. Keith to his private sitting-room; "you ordered dinner at eight. Will you lunch so late as this, sir?"

"I lunched three hours ago," said Royden, as he took his letters from the chimney-piece, with his back to the valet, who seemed stirred a little from his usual middle-aged gravity. "I lunched at the Towers. Send me a glass of wine, that is all."

Following the waiter, who, with the mathematical precision of waiters, set the wine and biscuits before Mr. Keith, came Pierce once more into his master's presence. "I beg your pardon, sir," he said, making a show of removing the things from the table, "but are all well at the Towers?"

"All well, thank you, Pierce."

"And everything going on as it should, sir—as it would if you were there?" "Just as it would if we were there," amended Royden, smiling at the man's real, though hidden, earnestness. "You seemed to be summoned so hurriedly, sir, I thought."

"Not summoned at all," said Mr. Keith, as he poured himself a glass of sherry. "No illness of the lady's, sir?" "No."

Royden put down his empty glass and took up another letter. The servant lingered still, but the solemn decorum of his face and manner hid the keen and anxious interest he felt in his master's answers.

"Leave those, Pierce," said Royden, looking up from the paper in his hand; "I am going out again in a few minutes."

"Riding again this evening, sir?" "Riding again this evening—yes," he answered, smiling a little now. "But I am only going round the Abbotsmoor woods, and shall be back to dinner. Poor Princess is tired out, but Robin will be fresh and fleet."

"The dogs seem tired, too, sir," said Pierce, wondering at the run their master had given them that day. "Then they need not come; they shall make their own choice. No-o," mused Royden, slowly tearing the letter in his hand; "I will take Lachne only."

Pierce looked in vain for any apparent reason for this change of purpose.

"To save trouble, I suppose," he thought. "There's always a scene if he tries to leave the greyhound behind."

So Royden Keith, ten minutes afterward, rode from Kinbury to find the answer to that doubt he had expressed at East Cottage.

"I do not know what would tempt me voluntarily to part with Lachne."

CHAPTER VII.

Mrs. Payte stood with the girls at the gate of East Cottage, watching Royden as he rode away.

"Do you like him, Phoebe?" she asked, abruptly.

"He is very handsome," Phoebe acknowledged, in a tone of praise as warm as she ever bestowed on any one save her guardian.

"He's not a man to go through life with his hands folded," remarked the old lady, tersely. "Honore, why are you staring up the road? You won't call him handsome, I know not you. Unless a man has languishing manners like Captain Trent, and can look at you lackadaisically under his eyelids, and talk in a lazy whisper, you haven't much to say in his favor. Ah, I see why you are staring; here they come! Sound their trumpet, beat their drum! What a delightful conjunction! They remind me of Prior and Swift, who used to walk round the park together—Prior to make him self fat, Swift to keep himself lean."

Honore's eyes had come back from their distant gaze to see the two advancing figures, and then she turned to Phoebe with a smile.

"I declare I did not know," said the old lady, "that Lawrence, Haigden and Hervey Trent were such close friends. What bond of union lies between them?"

Dr. Chase Cures Catarrh After Operations.

Toronto, March 16, 1897.

My boy, aged 14, has been a sufferer from Catarrh, and lately we submitted him to an operation at the general hospital. Since then we have resorted to Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, and the box of this medicine has made a prompt and complete cure.

An Arkansas man the other day married a woman he owed rather than go to jail for debt.

Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

It is said that salmon, pike and gold fish are the only fish that never sleep.

People Talk Back.

Many people talk back. Here is one. Miss Katharine Weese, Belleville, says: "I have had a pain in my back, accompanied by general debility, and tried various remedies for the same, but without deriving much benefit, until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, which I am glad to say entirely cured me. They are certainly a grand medicine, and I can say in my case proved to be a thorough specific."

Bolled alligator flesh tastes much like veal. It is much eaten in India.

Nearly all women have good hair, though many are gray, and few are bald. Hall's Hair Renewer restores the natural color, and thickens the growth of the hair.

Sunflower seeds, used as bait in the trap, are said to be irresistible to rats.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

To Grocers.

We have direct proof that peddlers of washing-powders say that the stuff they're selling is "made in the same factory" as Pearlina—and that buying from them will save going to, or ordering from, the grocery store. Do you want people "saved" that. You have these same washing-powders in stock. Possibly you are giving them out, whenever you can, in place of Pearlina. You are trying to push them into notice; they are trying to crowd you out. You think you are "making more money on them." But will it pay you, in the end?

Send. Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearlina." IT'S FALSE—Pearlina is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearlina, he's a dishonest—send it back.

Canada Talked Of.

Some Good Things Written of the Dominion.

Old World Views of the Amity That Should Exist Between This Country and the Neighboring Republic.

London, Nov. 15.—The Daily Chronicle, in a special article of the meaning of the Canadian negotiations at Washington, reviews the past commercial relations between Canada, Great Britain and the United States, and says: "Important communications have passed during the last few days between Downing street and Ottawa, and the cordial reception which the Canadian ministers are meeting at the hands of Washington officials and the American press make it quite possible that we are on the eve of a most happy change of attitude toward one another of the three countries." The writer of the Daily Chronicle's article concludes by inquiring: "Is Canadian reciprocity with the United States to take the place of exclusive preference for Great Britain? It would disappoint many in this country, but the question must be viewed in the broad light of Anglo-American relations. No one will deny that Canada, the United States and the mother country have each far more to gain from closer intercourse than the present policy of mutual exclusiveness."

GOOD WORDS FOR CANADA.

New York, Nov. 15.—Discussing editorially the visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Washington and Canadian affairs generally, the Tribune yesterday, under the heading of "The Prosperous Dominion," says: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier has this one great satisfaction and source of strength, that he comes hither as the representative not of a bankrupt and distressed nation, but of a particularly prosperous and progressive one. The present year will rank in Canadian annals as one of the best. The Dominion has known. The Canadian farmers have fully shared the prosperity which good crops and high prices of wheat have brought to their neighbors on this side of the line. So great is their harvest that the railroads are overtaxed to carry it to market. The Dominion has also shown marked growth in the production and export sale of poultry and fruit. Great progress is likely to be made. As for every dollar that has come, or will come, from the Klondike to this country, two dollars will find their way into the Dominion's pockets. The progress is seen in the extension of lines of commerce. The proposed canal of exportation between the Atlantic has already been told of in these columns. Rapid progress toward completion of the scheme is being made. Practical steps are being taken for cutting a canal from the St. Lawrence at Montreal direct to Lake Superior, thus giving an unequalled route from the wheat fields of Manitoba to the ocean. No wonder that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is looking forward with confidence to the future. Instead of 90 per cent of Canadian trade going from United States ports, as at present, 90 per cent of the trade of the Northern States will go from Canadian ports. At the present rate of Canadian progress and of United States difference, such a change is entirely within the range of possibility, even of probability. As for the Canadian Pacific steamship service, it is already an established and successful fact, and there is every reason to expect that within the next few years the Canadians and Japanese will divide the carrying trade of that ocean between them, to the practical exclusion of the United States. In all this there is no possible ground for complaint against the Dominion. She is simply attending to business and promoting her own interests, as this country ought to do, but does not do, if it is not for Canadian rivalry. It is a proper source of pleasure to the United States that Canada is prosperous. We do not want an impoverished and unthrifty neighbor. But it must be a cause of shame to this country actually to be outstripped by its smaller and less advantageously situated neighbor."

The most efficacious stimulants to excite the appetite are ANGSTURA BITTERS, prepared by Dr. J. G. B. Siefert & Sons. Beware of counterfeits. Ask your grocer or druggist for the genuine article.
