The Explanation That Doesn't Explain.

Mr. Borden has declined to notice the protests of the Liberal press against his repeated assertions that the Government proposed to pay nine-tenths of the cost of the Grand Trunk Pacific. His reply is that the obligations of the Government would range from $155,000,000 to $170,000,000 and those of the Grand Trunk to only $15,500,000. He says that this has not been seriously denied.

Mr. Borden's figures have been over and over again refuted on the floor of Parliament. The length of the eastern division of the Grand Trunk Pacific, Moncton to Winnipeg, is 1,875 miles. The Government's estimate is between $25,000 and $28,000 per mile; but allowing the outside figure of $30,000, the cost would be $56,250,000. The Government's liability on the prairie section, 1,200 miles, is limited to $12,000 per mile, or $15,000,000. Estimating the cost of the mountain section, 480 miles, at $30,000 per mile, the Government's liability on the whole would be $33,000,000. Here is a total Government liability of $89,250,000, based upon estimates of the cost, which are in excess of those which the Government itself puts forward. In addition, there is the seven years' interest on the cost of the eastern division, and on the three-fourths of the value of the bonds of the mountain section, which make a total of $11,512,225, according to the Finance Minister's calculation or $13,000,000 at the utmost. There is over $50,000,000 difference between the estimate of Mr. Borden and that of the Government engineers. Even if the Grand Trunk assumes only $15,000,000 of liabilities on the bonds, it must invest $48,000,000 in the construction of the western division and another $20,000,000 for equipment and rolling stock. This $68,000,000 stands as security for the Government, and as a pledge that the Grand Trunk, with its $150,000,000 of assets, will exert its moral and material influence to enable the Grand Trunk Pacific to meet the interest on its bonds.

As a matter of fact, this great project, according to the calculations of actuaries and engineers of the highest reputation who have advised the Government, will cost the country not more than $12,000,000, being the interest for seven years on the cost of the eastern division and on three-fourths of the bonds of the mountain section. Mr. Borden's bald assertion that the country pays nine-tenths of the cost is a flagrant deception and when he attempts to explain it he gives his case away.

The Educated Horse.

German savants have been absorbed for months by the performances of Hans, the educated horse. Scholars and scientists have tested the powers of the equine prodigy and have been non-plussed. Hans, by strokes of his paw, would give correct answers to questions in arithmetic, involving multiplication, addition and subtraction; he would make discriminations in music and color, and perform other feats, which called for the exercise of reason. A scientific commission sat in solemn judgment, and while not committing itself to any theory, reported that no fraud was practiced by the owners of the horse.

A cable dispatch from Berlin announces that the mystery has been cleared up. One investigator, more suspicious than the others, noticed that the horse answered questions only in the presence of the hostler. This gave him a clue which ended in the discovery that Hans stopped counting with his foot when the hostler raised his eyes from the floor. The owner had hoaxed the learned men, and Hans was no more a prodigy than the ordinary trained horse in a travelling show.

There are varying degrees of intelligence in animals, but it has been alleged in the past that the domestic economy of bees is so amazing that they seem to argue wisdom and foresight, yet the scientists tell us that the actions of these insects are not intelligent, but automatic—the product of instinct. Instinct has been defined as the performance of actions without necessary knowledge of the relation between the means employed and the ends attained. In other words, the bees have no preconceived plan in their wonderful architectural labors, but act from a blind impulse, the effect of habit in successive generations. Darwin tells of the result of observations of the caterpillar, which makes a very complicated hammock. If the caterpillar is taken out of its hammock and made up to the third stage of construction, and put into one finished up to the sixth stage of construction, so that much of its work is already done for it, it is much embarrassed, and in order to complete its hammock is forced to start from the third stage, where it had left off, and thus try to complete the already finished work. Actions due to reason are variously performed by different individuals, while actions due to instinct are similarly performed by all individuals of a species, under the stimulus supplied by some appropriate circumstance. A popular lecturer used to illustrate his argument that animals have no reason by saying that an ape would know enough to approach a fire to get warm, but not to throw on more fuel when the fire became low. However, if instinct is the result of habit, which has become stereotyped in the species, it is difficult to deny that the habit must have been acquired originally by the exercise of some wisdom and judgment. Whatever may be the intellectual gulf between man and the lower orders, he can claim one exclusive endowment—the moral sense. The rudiments of conscience have never been discovered in the animal.

A Subject Tabooed.

Not one of the speakers at Mr. Borden's Sarnia meeting made a reference to the oil question. Oil refining is the industrial mainstay of that flourishing town. If there is one item of legislation in which the people of Sarnia have a direct and practical interest it is that relating to the oil duties. Hitherto, the oil has been the staple topic of discussion from Conservative platforms in Lambton County, but Mr. Borden and his colleagues studiously dropped it from their oratorical bill of fare. This policy may have suggested itself to them when they visited the local refinery, to which the policy of the present Government has meant all the difference between stagnation and progress. In the short interval since Mr. Fielding's last budget, the number of employees has increased from 125 to 425. At one stroke the Government reduced the price of refined oil to the consumer by 2½ cents per gallon and restored prosperity to the refining industry. The oil producers were indemnified by a bounty, and now in a better position than ever before, while the country saves several hundred thousand dollars annually, the difference between the bounty and the amount formerly taken from the people by customs taxation. This arrangement has been denounced by the Opposition. To by-election, the Conservative candidate, speakers and press opposed any change in the duties on crude oil and proposed to maintain a condition of things which was ruining the refining interests. No wonder Mr. Borden and his associates shied at the oil question at their Sarnia meeting. Petrolia, the producers in the Petrolia district, however, are satisfied with the treatment they have received and the people of Sarnia know to what party they owe the revival of their town's industrial prosperity.

The Sarnians could not say that Mr. Borden had an oily tongue.

Tuckett, the big Hamilton tobacco man, has been a Conservative, but will support the Liberal Government because it has grappled with the trust evil. Courage always pays.

A Winnipeg paper predicts a general election within seven weeks. This is only guesswork, but the shorter the campaign the better people will be pleased.

Russia's admission that provisions under a neutral flag are not contraband of war is of more value to Great Britain than to any other nation. There will be no danger of starving out the tight little island while other nations have food to sell.

The Toronto Mail and Empire is in a serious quandary. It praised the new militia bill to the skies, saying it was the product of a broad-minded man, "doing his utmost to harmonize military interests." The Mail imagined Lord Dundonald was the author of the bill, but it transpires that his lordship bitterly opposed it. The bill was drafted by Sir Frederick Borden, and all the Mail says about its author is deserved. Once in a while the Mail tells the truth by mistake.

Misrepresentation.

[Hamilton Times.]
 At Aylmer yesterday Mr. Borden repeated his old absurdity that "the people were provided nine-tenths of the cash for building the Grand Trunk Pacific, and after it is built the only portion that was likely to be profitable in the next 25 or 30 years had to be handed over to the corporation which provided only one-tenth of the such misstatements. Let the reader ask himself, is the contract so favorable that it offers no ground for attack without falsification?"

Days of Enchantment.

[Washington Star.]
 "Two long ago, when 'neath the shade of willows kindly bending low,
 A careless boy I loved to wade,
 And watch the sunbeams come and go.
 How fine the rippling waters shone,
 How blue the sky, how blue the tone!
 In rhythm to some wild bird's tone,
 I never see such wonders now."
 How swift the flashing minnows dart,
 How curious glances all their own,
 How cleanly the crystal water flows,
 How like the waterwheels glides by,
 And what strange shapes endow
 The watery clouds on high!
 I never see such wonders now."
 The car speeds swift from mart to mart,
 With power flooded from nature's store;
 All swiftly to some instant shore,
 The battle monsters rage and kill,
 And struts the waterwheels glides by,
 Muse on their marvels as I will—
 I never see such wonders now."

He Knew About It.

[Saturday Evening Post.]
 Burton Holmes, the lecturer, says that the Indians of Alaska regard white men as "cannibal goods" and are closely associated that they are nearly synonymous. Wherever the white man is seen, canned meats, fruits and vegetables are found.
 When Mr. Holmes visited Alaska, recently he carried with him a phonograph and it was exhibited to an old chief who had never seen a talking machine before. When the machine was started and a human voice came from the trumpet the Indian was much interested. He listened gravely for a time, then approached and peered into the trumpet.
 When the machine finished its cylinder and stopped the Indian pointed at it, smiled an expansive smile, and remarked:
 "Huh! Him canned white man."

FRANK CLAMPITT SENT FOR TRIAL

As a Result of the Stabbing Affair on the Night of Labor Day.

Frank Clampitt was this morning sent for trial on a charge of wounding Arthur Shaw on the night of Sept. 5, Labor Day. He will come up at the general sessions in Detroit. Although the accused man's counsel was Love, the latter was of opinion that the case did not come under his jurisdiction. Clampitt was released on bail after the evidence for the prosecution was taken.

Shaw was able to leave the hospital this morning, and to give evidence as to how he was injured. He was able to move around freely and did not appear to be any the worse for his experience save a scar on the left side of his head.

Crown Attorney Kilgill conducted the case for the crown, and first called upon Dr. John D. Wilson, who was summoned to the police station to attend Shaw the night he was injured. Dr. Wilson found three wounds, on the left side of Shaw's head. There was also a bad gash under the right eye, wound on the head he found four parts of a knife blade and two days after, at a hospital, he found a smaller piece which fitted with the other part. The covering of the brain had been touched by the blade. There would be no serious results, he thought.

Shaw was then called. He stated that he was a cigarmaker and that he lived with his wife and three children. He said that he had met at the Brunswick House and had a drink to drink. They had gone out and when they got to the street a little way from the Brunswick House, he was suddenly going to strike Shaw. The latter, however, ducked his head and landed a blow on Clampitt, which he followed by another which sent him to the wall against the wall. Shaw went towards him again, and then he was suddenly struck in the head. He felt the pain of a blow and he knew was down. Face, Clampitt had gone into the hotel, witness Shaw, who had seen Clampitt, although he would not swear that he had not done so. He produced the knife which he had used, and which had penetrated.

Cross-examined by Mr. Faulds, counsel for the prisoner, Shaw said that he had known Clampitt for two or three years, but that he never had any particular chum of his. They had never had a fight, he said. He did not know Clampitt to be a fighting man. Clampitt said that he had quite a few drinks that day, but he had one with Clampitt. Witness denied that he had offered to say in the witness box that it was all his fault, if he received $100 from Clampitt. He had seen Clampitt at the hospital and had offered to be as lenient as possible, if he paid figure up to about $100. Clampitt had refused to do this. Clampitt had been under the influence of liquor when he came to the hospital.

SUNLIGHT SOAP REDUCES EXPENSE

December sessions. His bail for the sum of $1,200 was renewed.
 A stiff sentence was handed out to John Boyle, who had been remanded on a charge of drunkenness and of assaulting Frank Snyder. The prisoner had pleaded not guilty, but today he admitted his guilt. Nevertheless, the magistrate decided to hear Snyder, and the latter said that Boyle had been with his (Snyder's) wife in a house on York street, drinking. Coming some time later, Snyder hit him several times with a stick. In view of this, the magistrate fined Boyle $20 or two months in jail on the charge of assault, and $20 or 21 days on the charge of drunkenness.
 Timothy Sullivan pleaded guilty to being drunk again, and was given $10 or 10 days. He was not a matter of defence that he took the latter.
 A young boy named Bavin, charged with being a vagrant, was bailed for a month to see if he could secure work.
 Maurice Baldwin was allowed to go on a charge of letting his horses run at large.

NAILED AT LAST

County Constables Finally Land H. Hall, Wanted Since August.

Henry Hall, for whom the county authorities have been on the lookout ever since Aug. 10, was arrested by Detective Northgreaves yesterday afternoon, and brought before Squire Lacey. The prisoner's brother, Wellington Hall, of London township, charged the defendant with trespass, use of abusive language and assault. The information regarding his catalogue of crimes was laid some time ago, but Henry carefully avoided it. He was held in the Detective Northgreaves saw him at the fair, and found out where he was staying. Hall was bailed for $100, to appear again before the magistrate on Saturday. The fraternal troubles will then have a hearing.

OUR SHORTHORNS THE BEST

Hon. Mr. Dryden on the Cattle Exhibit at World's Fair.

Hon. John Dryden, who has just returned from a brief stay in St. Louis, was particularly struck with the fine play of cattle at the World's Fair. It was, he said, the best collection he had ever seen in America. He was not greatly impressed, however, by the exhibit of shorthorns. The cattle of this breed were, he remarked, anxious to those seen on this side of the line. In Canada, he said, the shorthorns had been bred to a standard type—a modification of the Marengo—er success than in the United States, where the individual breeders were vainly following their own fancy, and the result was a hodge-podge of interest that was taken in the past. He read at the exhibition on "Breeding as a Business." A number of questions were put to him for present at the conclusion of his address.

To Divorce Louise

London, Sept. 20.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Vienna says that Emperor Francis Joseph, in an interview with Prince Philip of Coburg, suggested the desirability of the latter parting a definite end to his unhappy relationship with his wife, Princess Louise, who was rescued from a mental asylum and eloped with Lieut. Mattiasch. Princess Louise, who was the jailer of the Emperor, was an interview, declares that Lieut. Mattiasch had transferred his affections to Mme. Stoger, the consort of the princess.

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I became pregnant, my husband got me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the distress of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use until I was able to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."

AN OLD, OLD, SCHEME

Spanish Swindlers Once More Trying to Work in United States.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Pending an investigation of the case, state department officials are disposed to treat as fraudulent a scheme to obtain money, the information which press reports from Pasadena, Cal., state has come to a relative of Congressman McLachlan, of California, on the reported death of Louis Blaisdell in a Spanish hospital and had detention of his 14-year-old daughter in a convent at Aranjuez. According to the views of the department officials, the report bears the earmarks of the work of a gang of impostors who have operated at various places in Spain for a long time and who have obtained sums of money from foreigners who have believed the representations made to them. The customary practice of these impostors is to report that a parent has died, leaving a confession with a priest and the information is conveyed that certain amount of money is required

Explanation: Owing to a mix-up in the types, Monday's installment of this story did not follow Saturday's in regular sequence. The installment below is the proper continuation from Saturday's paper:

"At the house of the savages," replied the major with a smile. "He is staying—your name?"

"Looking round with an apologetic smile, 'you all know Sir Herrick's eccentricity—he is staying actually—at a wayside inn.'"

A smile ran round the group, and a friend of Sir Herrick's, who was dealing, laughed outright.

"Just like Rick," he said.

"At a wayside inn," said the major sadly, as if he had said that his nephew was in a jail.

"What's he doing there?" asked Lord Hurstley, sorting his cards.

"I believe he explained that he was—'fishing,'" murmured the major sadly.

"Fishing?"

"The man who had dealt the cards laughed.

"Fishing, eh? Just like Rick, well, major, you sympathize with you."

"Bring him here," said Lord Hurstley good-naturedly.

"Would to heaven he'd come," the major thought, as he said aloud:

"Thanks, dear Hurstley, I'll convey your kind invitation."

"So Rick is wandering in the wilds, with a fly-rod and a basket of flies?"

"I wonder what Flossie thinks of it," he added, in an undertone, but the major, though his face did not proclaim it, heard him.

"Good-night," he said, with sweet sadness; "I will go to bed. If I stay, I should only bore you, Good-night."

And he went up to his bedroom—the most comfortable room in the house—by the way—where his valet was waiting for him.

For the first time since he entered his master's service, the valet—the one of the best valets in the kingdom, "a treasure," as the major admitted—silent, discreet, and an artist in "making up"—for the first time this admirable servant found the major restless and uneasy.

"I wish you wouldn't put my arm off, Morgan," he moaned, as the man gently rid him of his coat, and don't break about the room so. Have you got new boots on? There's a draught somewhere, I'm sure! And they told me this room faced the south."

And he continued grumbling in this vein, to the amazement of the man, who uttered never a word, until the last office had been done, and the long-suffering "treasure" was leaving the room, when suddenly, without reason, the major brought his white hand down upon the dressing-table and exclaimed:

"I've got it!"

"Beg pardon, sir, what did you say?" said the valet, pausing.

"Nothing, nothing, Morgan," replied the major, with his usual bland smile. "Good-night, Stop, Morgan."

"Yes, sir."

"I'm afraid I have been very irritable, and—trying, tonight, Morgan."

"Indeed, no, major," returned Morgan in his subdued voice.

"But I have," returned the major in his meekest tones. "I beg you will overlook it, Morgan. I have been very much tried and—yes, worried. But, with a bland smile of triumph on his face, 'I am all right now, I am better. Good-night, Morgan. Oh, by the way, I shall have to get up quite early in the morning and give my compliments to his lordship, and ask if I can have something to take me over to Flossie tomorrow. Good-night! I am all right, now, Morgan."

Then as the man departed, inwardly amazed and wondering, the major leaned back in his chair, and smiled, with ineffable satisfaction.

"I quite forgot," he murmured. "Good-night, Stop, Morgan."

"Yes, sir."

"I'm afraid I have been very irritable, and—trying, tonight, Morgan."

LARGE RECEIPTS

IN CITY LEAGUE

Said that the Total Will Reach $2,500—Al Watts Has Returned.

The success that baseball is meeting with in London is surprising. For about the last four years back it has been steadily ahead, and this year it has taken the greatest bound in the history of the City League.

Last year, when all the receipts of the year were counted up, it was found that there was a surplus of over 2 thousand dollars in the treasury, and the hearts of the players were glad. This year, however, that amount has been more than doubled, and by the time the season is completed it is expected that fully $2,500 will be counted up.

This indicates as plainly as possible that baseball has a firm foothold in this city, and that the people will patronize it loyally when it is conducted in a manner strictly in accordance with the law. Al Watts, the local twirler, who has made a reputation for himself abroad, has returned home after a very successful season with the Sharon, Pa., team. Out of 45 games pitched he won 30, and because of it, he has secured a number of splendid offers.

FINE TURNOUT OF PLAYERS

Over Forty Men to Choose Senior and Junior Rugby Teams From.

By the showing made at the first practice last night, London's chances are brighter this year than they have been for years. Forty men were in uniform and they lined up and had a good work-out for about an hour, ending with a few turns around the track. The players all showed up remarkably well, considering it was the first practice.

As there are only ten more practice nights before the opening game here with the strong Hamilton Tigers on Oct. 1, everyone is requested to turn out regularly and get in shape. Arrangements have been made for practice to be held every evening at 8:30 in Tecumseh Park.

In the evening at 8 o'clock at a large-attended meeting held at the Tecumseh House, it was finally decided that two teams, a senior and a junior, be entered in the O. C. F. U. Both will be strong, as there are about 40 men to choose from, and reinforcements can always be found.

LONDON AND DISTRICT
The case of the King vs. H. M. Moir, of St. Marys, late agent of the Canadian Express Company, has been adjourned until the recovery of Judge Brown, who is ill.

Rev. Mr. Griffin, superannuated Methodist minister, is dangerously ill at his home on Askin street. He is suffering from paralysis, with which he was attacked three weeks ago.

Messrs. W. J. Smith & Sons, undertakers, have bought the property, 113 Dundas street, from Mr. R. W. Puddicombe. The building adjoins the firm's place of business.

The death occurred at Victoria Hospital on Saturday evening of little Victoria McGillivray, aged 7 years, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. McGillivray, 559 Bathurst street. He will be greatly missed by all.

Rev. Mr. Walwin, pastor of Emmanuel Avenue Church, who has been ill for some time, is reported somewhat better. Sunday morning his place was filled by Rev. Mr. Kennedy, and in the evening by Rev. Mr. Beer, Jun., a young clergyman of very pleasing personality.

FIRST BREAK IN TWENTY YEARS
"Yes," said Mr. R. C. Struthers yesterday, "it is the first break in twenty years in not going to the old country this time. My son Harry left yesterday on his initial purchasing trip. I have been going twice a year for twenty years and it will be more of a novelty to remain home. Trade has been extra good this fall."

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A MONTH FOR LONDON'S MAYOR
City Council Puts Through a $500 Increase.

ALDS. JUDD AND COOPER DIFFER
Insinuations and Counter-Insinuations—Live Time at Meeting Last Night.

The mayor's salary after Dec. 1 next will be $1,200 per annum, instead of $700, as at present, but the increase, which was made by the city council last night, did not pass that body before it gave rise to one of the liveliest debates yet known in the history of the city. Ald. Judd, who recommended the increase, said that he had no objection to the increase, but that he had no objection to the increase, but that he had no objection to the increase.

Ald. Cooper, who opposed the increase, said that he had no objection to the increase, but that he had no objection to the increase, but that he had no objection to the increase.
