Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XX.

"You're wasting your sympathies, my dear," he said. "Eva knew quite well what she was doing; she was very frank about it all. I give her credit for that! She told me that she'd never cared for me, and she told me."

"He stopped with a gesture of passionate intolerance. 'Oh, why talk about it! The thing's done, and it can't be undone. After all, we're only like dozens of other people we know. I'm not the only man who has married a woman for her money. I . . . He stopped."

Married her for her money, had he? when his love for her was an unceasing torment that would not let him rest day or night; when it cut him to the soul with jealousy every time he saw her laughing and happy with Calligan. He squared his shoulders and laughed.

"Don't you worry yourself, my dear," he said more quietly. "We shall shake down all right. I shouldn't be surprised if we're not pointed at all round the country before long as being a model couple!"

And then—because he felt so utterly wretched that he hardly knew how to bear himself—he walked out of the room, whistling as if he had not a care in the world, and shut the door behind him.

The front door stood open to the dusky night, and remembering that he had left the car standing in the drive, Philip went out to take it round to the garage.

As he was leaving the yard, he heard the sound of voices, followed by a laugh.

He hesitated and listened; then he turned. From an open stable door a light shone out, a long yellow shaft in the darkness, and by that light he could see his wife, with her arm round the neck of one of his father's horses, talking to a groom.

She made a pretty picture standing there, bareheaded, and with the inefficient light shining all about her. Philip caught the gleam of a diamond on the hand that caressed the horse's neck and heard her voice distinctly as he stood outside, uncertain what to do.

"We used to keep horses at home, you know, Williams—no, I don't mean here at Apsley—this never really hasn't bothered you—I never ask what you do, or who you spend your time with. I've kept my share of the bargain, and you've no right to expect anything more."

"You're my wife, and I've a right to object to your allowing Calligan or any other man to make love to you. If I'd known this before he left the house . . ."

"How dare you?" Eva was trembling all over, her hands were clenched; she felt as if she could have struck him; to add insult to injury like this. He was not content with having wounded her to the quick once, but must needs strike again.

Her voice rose in passionate trembling. "If you ever dare to say a thing like that to me again," she said sobbingly, "I'll leave you and never come back again as long as I live . . ."

Her voice broke, and she turned and ran blindly from him into the darkness. There was a moment of silence. "I thought you had a headache," Philip said. "My mother told me that you were in bed with a headache."

"I wasn't in bed; my head ached, and I didn't want any dinner, that was all."

His eyes sought hers suspiciously, but she stood with her back to the light, and her face was in shadow.

"Do you often come here and make a confidant of Williams?" Philip asked then.

There was a sneer in his voice, but it was not intended; he was holding himself in a grip of iron, and his heart was burning with jealousy—jealousy even of his own room, a slip of a lad with a freckled face and slow tongue, with whom this girl preferred to talk.

She answered him quite calmly, though she had blushed a little at his tone. "I do sometimes . . . He loves horses, and so do I."

"You mean that I don't?"

"I have heard you say a great many times that you prefer a car."

She moved past him to the door. She was quite mistress of herself; she walked quietly and naturally; she hummed a little snatch of song under her breath as she went.

The little sound of indifference and composure maddened young Winter-dick; his hands were clenched into fists as he followed her.

"Mr. Calligan has gone, I suppose," she asked casually.

She half looked over her shoulder as she spoke, and for the first time Philip could see her face distinctly in the yellow light from the candle, and he saw that her eyes were red and swollen with crying. The little unformed suspicion that had stirred in his heart many times of late woke again; the smouldering fire burst into a flame as he caught her arm in a rough grasp.

"So that's why you wouldn't come down to dinner," he said brutally. "Because you've been crying your eyes out for him?"

Eva did not answer; she looked past her husband into the darkness of the garden beyond, and something very like despair settled on her heart.

Every day seemed but to add to the estrangement between them; she wondered dully how much longer this state of things could go on.

"Please let go my arm," she said quietly. "You hurt me."

Philip gave a stifled exclamation and released her, but when she turned to walk away he followed.

"I want to speak to you," he said; his voice was still rough and angry; her very composure maddened him. "We shall have to come to some arrangement. I'm sick to death of going on as we are. It's an intolerable situation for me."

She interrupted wearily. "If you about so all the grooms will hear."

"I don't care if they do—everyone will know sooner or later." He was walking beside her now, and they had gone beyond the yellow glow of light from the stables, and were in darkness again. "What is it you want me to do?" he broke out passionately. "You never speak to me if you can help it—I must spend your time avoiding me."

"I thought you would prefer it. I have tried not to be a tie to you."

Her voice shook a little. "You were crying to-night because Calligan has gone," said Philip violently. "You can't deny it."

"I don't want to deny it. He was very kind to me."

"I dare say he would have stayed if he had known you were so keen on his staying if you had asked him."

"I did ask him—"

"You asked him . . . Philip's voice was furious.

Eva stood still. She felt as if she were at the end of her tether. It was agony to be with Philip and keep up the pretence; she could hardly believe that it was her own voice speaking as she broke out:

"I am not going to be ordered about by you. I am not going to be dictated to as to my choice of friends. I haven't bothered you—I never ask what you do, or who you spend your time with. I've kept my share of the bargain, and you've no right to expect anything more."

The Sale of a Skull.

The impending sale by auction in London of a silver-mounted skull, used as a drinking cup, once the property of Lord Byron, the poet, has aroused much comment in the press of the metropolis.

It is alleged in some quarters that the poet, finding a skull of peculiar whiteness during the course of some building operations in his ancestral home, Newstead Abbey, caused it to be mounted in silver, converted into a drinking cup, and then founded an order at the Abbey entitled "The Order of the Skull," in the ritual of which the skull cup filled to the brim with port played a leading part.

The real story is entirely different. The conversion of the skull into a drinking-cup was done at the instance of the fifth (the "Wicked") Lord Byron and grand-uncle and immediate predecessor of the poet and the slayer of his guest and neighbor, Squire Chaworth of Annesley Hall, a crime for which he was tried for his life by the House of Lords, escaping, however, with a fine.

The skull was not that of some nameless friar, but one of the principal abbots of the Abbey at Newstead, whose tomb was purposely opened and ghastly desecrated by the fifth Lord Byron in order to obtain the skull for use at the orgies of the Order of the Skull, founded and organized by him and which was composed of men of the same evil character as himself.

This fifth Lord Byron's two sons predeceased him and he was succeeded by his grandnephew, the poet. The latter endeavored to repair the wrong done to the Chaworths by offering to marry the murdered squire's lovely daughter, with whom he was infatuated. But, because of the manner of her father's death, felt compelled to refuse his advances.

During the unhappy life of the poet the drinking-cup disappeared, not, however, before he had caused to be engraved on the silver mount one of his poems in six verses beginning:

"Start not! Nor deem my spirit fled.
In me behold the only skull.
From which, unlike the living head,
Whatever flows is never dull."

Byron, when overtaken by financial reverses, was obliged to sell Newstead Abbey to his old Harrow school-mate, Col. Wildman, who in turn disposed of it to the late Col. William Frederick Webb of the Seventeenth Lancers.

Col. Webb, while passing by a London bric-a-brac shop in Bedford street, Covent Garden, one afternoon caught sight of skull in the window, mounted in silver. On examining it he discovered it to be the famous drinking-cup of the "Wicked" and fifth Lord Byron, and having bought it he caused it to be bricked up in the walls of the ancient chapel of the Abbey.

How the curse resting on the Abbey dogged the footsteps of its several subsequent owners and even of its lessees has been too frequently told to need repetition. The Abbey, indeed, won for itself such a name for ill-luck that it was found impossible either to sell or to rent it. The consequence was that its contents were dispersed by a public sale last winter and that the buildings are now being razed.

Indeed, to-day scarcely anything is left of the Abbey, which was built and endowed by Henry II. in expiation of his instigation of the murder of St. Thomas-a-Becket in the Cathedral of Canterbury.

Presumably the wreckers, in tearing down the Abbey, stone by stone, came across the skull cup bricked up in the walls of the chapel. That, indeed, is the only way by which its reappearance, and its being offered for sale by public auction in London, can be explained.

Dyed Her Draperies and a Faded Skirt

"Diamond Dyes" add years of wear to worn, faded skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, hangings, draperies, everything. Every package contains directions so simple any woman can put new, rich, fadeless colors into her worn garments, or draperies even if she has never dyed before. Just buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then your material will come out right, because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to streak, spot, fade, or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.

Household Notes.

A simple frosting is made by adding fruit juice to powdered sugar, and beating until smooth.

A six-pound electric iron is the best to choose for laundry work because it holds the heat longer.

Add boiled rice, macaroni rings or noodles to chicken or meat broths to make them more interesting.

If a lump of camphor is placed near silverware which is not in use, the silverware will not tarnish.

Dates chopped and mixed with orange marmalade and nuts make a delicious filling for sugar cookies.

"Butcher" aprons for the kitchen are uncomfortable if the tape goes around the neck. A better plan is to run a tape from one front corner to the opposite corner in the back, having the two tapes cross in the back.

Slices of hard-boiled eggs and thin slices of lemon add to the interest and flavor of black bean soup.

A simple and delicious desert is slices of loaf cake served with lemon, chocolate, vanilla or maple sauce.

Just before baking a chocolate cake, cut up a raw potato into 1/4-inch cubes, and add these to the batter.

To procure a soft, rich shade when dyeing, add one package of black dye to a package of the color desired.

To clean a photograph wipe with a soft cloth wrung out in warm water and a little ammonia. Dry with another cloth.

Make small hollows in the centers of cup cakes and fill with a mixture of nuts, minced marshmallows and whipped cream.

Hot mayonnaise is good with corned-beef hash. Beat yolks of 2 eggs, add 2 tablespoons oil, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1/4 cup water, and seasoning. Cook in double boiler until mixture thickens.

Pontiff Passed Away Sunday Morning.

Four Hundred Church Bells Told Mournful Symphony---Craig and Collins Hold Conference---Coal Miners Riot and Loot Stores at New Aberdeen.

POPE DIED EARLY SUNDAY MORNING.

ROME, Jan. 23. Pope Benedict breathed his last at 5.59 o'clock this (Sunday) morning. The news was announced just as the ponderous bells of St. Peter's overlooking the Vatican court yard, began tolling the hour of 6. Then one by one the bells of Rome's 400 churches joined in the "horologium" symphony that marked the passing of the head of the Roman Catholic Church. The end came after a long night of intense agony and suffering, the Pontiff now and then lapsing into delirium throughout the long night. Shortly after midnight he took a little nourishment, which seemed momentarily to revive his spirits, but within an hour he began to sink.

BODY LIES IN SISTINE CHAPEL.

ROME, Jan. 23. All that is mortal of the late Pope Benedict XV lies today in the Sistine Chapel, a beautiful chamber in the Vatican where the Popes for nearly five hundred years have officiated in great state ceremonies and have at last rested before interment.

SACRED COLLEGE WILL MEET NEXT WEEK.

ROME, Jan. 23. The meeting of the Sacred College in conclave to elect a successor to Pope Benedict will open February 1 or February 2, it was stated today.

SPECULATION AS TO POPE'S SUCCESSOR.

ROME, Jan. 22. Speculation is already a life concerning the successor to Pope Benedict. Cardinal Gaspari is among those most prominently mentioned, although the election of a Papal Secretary of State is almost without precedent. The College of Cardinals is understood to be divided into two nearly equal groups, one thinking the successor should come from the Eternal City, and the other favoring a new Pope from outside Italy. Certain members show a strong liking for Cardinal Merry Del Val, a native of Italy, and do not hide their choice. Among native Italians Cardinal Maffi, of Pisa, is most strongly supported in Italian centres, but his advanced ideas are likely to arouse opposition, particularly from the group headed by Cardinal Merry Del Val. It is considered possible that Cardinal Gaspari may be chosen as a compromise between these two groups. All speculation, however, is based on very slight data.

Sir James Craig had arrived at a mutual understanding which holds out the promise of a peaceful settlement between the North and South. In addition to arrangements to settle the boundary question, it was decided to cease forthwith mutual boycotts. What is regarded as of vast importance is the decision to devise a better system than the Council of Ireland, as provided by the Act of 1920 to deal with problems affecting the whole of Ireland. Ulster Unionists welcome the raising of the boycott, but are apprehensive of trouble with the shipyards on the question of restoration of Catholics to the shipyards whence they were expelled after the murder of Colonel Smythe in Cork.

CREW OF EILEEN LAKE RESCUED—COOK DEAD.

BOSTON, Jan. 23. The rescue at sea from an open boat off St. John's, Nfld., of five men, who had been exposed for several days and nights after abandoning the British schooner Eileen Lake, was announced by the Belgian steamer Porlier in radiograms received here today. The cook of the schooner lost his life, dying the second night. The Eileen Lake was abandoned January 19, on St. Pierre shoals. The schooner, 164 tons, was commanded by Captain Noseworthy, and owned by Lake & Lake of Fortitude.

LOSS $10,000.

SYDNEY, Jan. 23. Rioting at New Aberdeen, near Glace Bay, was resumed to-night when men brushed away the police guard and continued looting goods from the Dominion Coal Company's store there. Shots were fired by the police over the heads of the mob, but no injuries were reported. It is estimated that the loss will be $10,000. (A later message which places the damage at $30,000, says all is now quiet. The miners claim the store refused them credit in retaliation for their recent strike at No. 9 Colliery.)

VISCOUNT BRYCE DEAD.

LONDON, Jan. 22. Viscount Bryce died at Sidmouth today.

The Death of William Pitt.

The death of William Pitt on January 23, 1806, came at a critical juncture in England's long struggle with Napoleon. Born in 1759, the year of his father's administration, the year of the battle of Minden, Hawke's victory off Quiberon, and the conquest of Canada, Pitt died at a moment when Napoleon had brought down the latest coalition with a crash by the capture of Mack's Austrian army at Ulm, and the defeat of Austria and Russia at Austerlitz. The only effect was the great naval victory of Trafalgar, purchased at the cost of the life of Nelson; and Pitt, in his last public speech, a brief utterance at the Lord Mayor's banquet, had ventured the prediction that "England has saved herself by her exertions and will yet, I trust, save Europe by her example." But at the opening of 1806, such an end to the war seemed more than ever remote. "Roll up the map of Europe," Pitt is reported to have said on receipt of the news of Austerlitz; "it will not be wanted these ten years." His forecast was two years over the reality; but it was due more to the unmeasured development of Napoleon's ambition than to the efforts of Europe that the French empire fell in March, 1814. Nor is it surprising that Pitt's naturally frail constitution was worn down by the cares and anxieties of office at a time so agitating. He died, however at his post, and Parliament did well to recognize his services by voting to discharge his debts of £40,000, and decreeing him a public interment in Westminster Abbey. The recognition assuredly was merited, for Pitt, if he committed errors, yet must be regarded after all deductions, as one of England's greatest ministers.

The Humber Project.

If Guaranteed Proposals Were Relaxed, Proposition Would Get More Favorable Reception From Public.

(Trade Review.)

The Humber proposition was the chief subject of discussion amongst the citizens of St. John's the past two weeks. Those who express opinions against it are not opposed to the idea of securing badly-needed employment, and the development of our resources, but rather to the guarantees of interest and principal that go with the agreement.

The advocates of the project say that the guarantee clause is only a matter of formality in order to make it possible to raise the money, and that the proposition is such a safe and sure one that the money specified in the guarantee will never be asked for. The industry is so good and sound, and the water power so cheap, that there is no room for doubt that the industry will pay. One thing is recognized by both sides in these arguments, and that is, there was never a time in the history of Newfoundland when labor was so badly needed by our people, and that there is likely to be a wholesale emigration from the country in the spring, if there is no work in sight in addition to the fishery. It must be borne in mind that it is now absolutely necessary to have other industries in order to keep the people employed.

A large percentage of the able-bodied men in Newfoundland developed the past twenty years who know nothing about the fishery, and don't want to know. They get their living at other industries. They have been working at Grand Falls, Bell Island, Sydney and Port aux Basques for years past, and those industries have ceased to take on labor the past year, or so to one quarter of the capacity that the situation requires. Now the question arises, are we to lose men by emigration next spring? They will not go fishing because they are not fishermen and don't want to be. In St. John's the old avenues of work are closing up more and more every year. Longshore work is no longer capable of giving a living to one-third of the men here who want that kind of work. There are upwards of 2,000 idle men to-day who see no prospect of getting more than a few days snow shovelling, or a weekly turn on a boat till next May, when in the ordinary course of events things will be getting better at home and abroad. The same condition of affairs applies to many of the outports where fishermen failed to make good the past summer. All these things are strong requirements in favor of the acceptance of the Humber proposition, but at the same time it would not be fair to drive the country to too hard a bargain because of her temporary poverty.

It is the general opinion that if the guarantee proposals were relaxed to a more reasonable extent that the proposition would be met with a favorable opinion all over the country.

For Sweet Charity's Sake.

There is a manifold reason why the spirit of "the greatest of these" should be exercised during the prevalent depression, caused by lack of employment in the city. It is undeniable that many families are in extreme want, many young children cry for bread which their parents cannot give them, and the wall of the hungry little ones is heard through the length and breadth of St. John's. Can we as a community refuse to hearken to that wall and not do something to make glad the hearts and nourish the bodies of the immature in our midst. Can we not unite in some kind of entertainment or exhibition whereby funds can be raised to meet the immediate demands that charity ever makes upon us. No person wants to witness the suffering of the little ones for lack of good, substantial food. The future calls us, yea challenges us to get busy. Peaked faces, shrunken limbs and generally unhealthy bodies will be but a poor gift to Newfoundland, and will damn for all time our professed christianity. It is our paramount duty to look after the "hostages given to fortune," whether by ourselves or others. The need of the times appears to be relief. The cry of the growing generation is "Give us bread." Will that cry fall on heedless ears. We can find time and money for various sports, for the erection of buildings and for numerous other purposes, but there are hundreds of human structures in this city to-day, which need repair, if we are to retain them for the ultimate good of the Colony. The boy is the father of the man: the woman is the mother of the girl. If we permit the potential fathers and mothers then to grown up, illnourished and anaemic, how are we to continue in a physically fit condition? What kind of a population can we expect succeeding years to produce if those upon whom this natural increase devolves are permitted to reach maturity—if ever they do—physically unfit to be the coming parents of our successors in the carrying on of the religious, commercial, political and social business of the capital of Newfoundland. May we suggest in this connection that the Clubs of the city—through their Executive Committees—get together and arrange for a big billiard exhibition to be held at a nominal charge fee for admission, in one of the Halls, the whole proceeds to be devoted to charitable purposes. Dispositions for such an exhibition would not be difficult, and we believe that the attraction and the cause which would be its object, would return a sum, which divided up proportionately amongst those who are actually in distress, would bring gladness to many an adult as well as juvenile heart. Think it over gentlemen of the Club Executives of St. John's.

At the January Clearance Sale at BISHOP'S, Boys' Serge Sailor Suits that were upwards of twenty dollars are selling for eleven dollars and thirty-five cents per suit.

Bell Island Miners Meet.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM DISCUSSED.

At a mass meeting of over 1000 unemployed miners on Bell Island, a committee was appointed to thoroughly investigate the labour difficulties and obtain information concerning the possibilities of future work on the Island. Messages with regard to local conditions have been sent to the Directors of the British Empire Steel Corporation and the Government, and the following delegates were elected to interview the Prime Minister, Sir R. A. Squires, on his arrival, and present to him Bell Island's claim for assistance, namely Rev. Ira F. Curtis, Captain Leo Murphy and J. C. Stewart, Esq. Another public meeting will be held to-day and the reports of the Committee will be presented. The committee appointed is as follows:—B. King, T. Sweeney, Hy. Stares, Stephen Murphy, A. S. Murphy, Councillor, E. J. Ryan, E. S. Spencer, J. C. Stewart, Councillor, R. T. Kent, Rev. J. J. Stead, Rev. J. J. McGrath, Rev. Ira F. Curtis, A. J. Stickleland, S.A.; Capt. Leo Murphy, George Brown, J. Humber, Edwin Ross, Thomas Conway, Water Davis, Andrew Dart, Councillor Richard Bugden, John J. Murphy and Water Jackman.

Held Over.

Because of extra pressure on space to-day a considerable quantity of correspondence and other local literary matter is unavoidably held over until to-morrow.

Rumour.

It is rumoured around town that the opening of the House has been delayed until next week. The members are determined that nothing will stand in the way of celebrating in a fitting manner Scotland's National Day.

It is unquestioned that the standard bearers of the St. Andrew's Society have been the Ladies' Auxiliary, who have done so much to make these anniversaries so successful.

This year they commence the supper at 8.30 and continue until 12.30 p.m.—surely a wonderful performance. In the words of Burns:

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some hae meat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
And so the Lord be thankit.

The prominent society man who fell on the ice on Saturday will be welcomed to-morrow night at the C. C. Hall. It will be a real Scotch night.

The Passing of the Pope.

HIS HOLINESS POPE BENEDICT XV.

Born, Genoa—Nov. 21, 1854

Ordained Priest—Dec. 21, 1878

Consecrated Archbishop of Bologna—Dec. 22, 1907.

Proclaimed Cardinal—May 25, 1914.

Elected Pope—Sept. 3, 1914.

Crowned Pope—Sept. 6, 1914.

Died—Jan. 22, 1922.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HIS HOLINESS.

On Sunday, January 22nd, at 6 a.m., the death of Pope Benedict XV was proclaimed by Cardinal Vanutelle, Dean of the Sacred College at St. Peter's, Rome. The official confirmation of the passing of His Holiness was received by His Grace Archbishop Roche on Sunday afternoon in a message from His Excellency Most Rev. P. Di Maria, Apostolic Delegate at Ottawa. Benedict XV was born in 1854, and was therefore nearly 68 years old at the time of his death. The Pope's family name has an interesting history. Away back in the fifth century the great St. Ambrose entrusted with the spiritual and much of the temporal care of the wide regions around the city of Milan, to cope with the task, appointed a number of captains to defend the church against the assaults of Arian heretics. In the course of time some of these captains and their descendants became known as champions of the church (capitani delli chiesa) which later on grew into the family name of "Della Chiesa." In the centuries that followed the Della Chiesa became rich and powerful with branches spread over North Italy, and allied by birth or marriage with many of the Italian nobility. One branch settled at Pegli in the neighbourhood of Genoa. Pope Benedict XV, Giacomo (James) Della Chiesa, was born at Genoa on the 21st of November, 1854. Being destined for the church he completed his classical studies in his native city. He next entered the Capranica College at Rome and during his course attended lectures in philosophy and theology in the Gregorian University. Taking his degree in Canon Law he was ordained on December 21, 1878, being then 24 years old. With further study at the Academy he perfected himself in the knowledge of Canon Law and qualified for the diplomatic service of the church. The young priest was before long attached to the congregation of Ecclesiastical Affairs Extraordinary. Here gaining the friendship of Cardinal Rampolla he spent four years with him in Spain as his Secretary, retaining the position when the Cardinal was made Secretary of State under Leo XIII in 1887. Mgr. Della Chiesa's next promotion came when Pope Leo recognised his ability as a painstaking, energetic and prudent official, appointed him to the important post of Under Secretary of the Congregation of Ecclesiastical Affairs Extraordinary. This position he had filled, until on December 22, 1907, he received the appointment of Archbishop of Bologna. Seven years afterwards he was destined to change the violet of the Archbishop for the Cardinal's red or Roman purple, as on May 25th, 1914, he was created and proclaimed a prince of the church. Less than four months later a solemn conclave for the election of a Pope was held. On the morning of September 3, 1914 the Cardinal Camerlengo gave the announcement to the world that Giacomo Della Chiesa had been chosen Bishop of Rome, Vicar of Jesus Christ, successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Primate of Italy, Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Provinces, and Sovereign of the Temporal Dominions of the Holy Roman Church. On Sept. 6th, after he had chosen the name of Benedict XV he was crowned as the 258th occupant of the Holy See, and immediate successor of Pious X. That the new Cardinal was amongst the candidates nobody suspected, nor was there any rumor that he had been mentioned before the conclave. Seven years previously Benedict XV had been a minor official in the office of the Secretary of State. The previous Pope Benedict XIV reigned from 1740-1758 and died at the age of 83.

Rotary Luncheon.

SIR P. T. McGRATH ADDRESSES MEMBERS.

Sir P. T. McGrath addressed the members of the Rotary Club at their regular weekly luncheon to-day on "Some Outstanding Personalities in the Recent Canadian Election." The Chairman to-day was Rotarian V. P. Burke. Nineteen members were present at roll call and the guests were: Sir P. T. McGrath, K.B.E.; Messrs. J. R. Bennett, R.R. Stewart of Leicester, England; A. B. Morine, C. J. Cahill, R. T. Joy (Advocate), C. T. James (Telegram).

The repeat was an excellent one and was enlivened by the singing of the customary Rotary songs.

After the toast to the King had been honoured, the Chairman introduced the speaker of the day. Sir Patrick on arising was given an ovation, and immediately entered upon his subject, beginning with a review of Canadian political history since 1896, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier swept the Bowell-Tupper Conservative Government out of power, which they had held for a considerable period. Briefly but graphically he traced all the events down to the recent election, when the Meighen administration was outwitted, and from thence took up the subject of his theme and gave short biographies of all the political leaders during the period covered. The address was listened to with great attention and at the close the speaker was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

The luncheon concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

Preaches on Bolshevism.

REV. R. J. POWER QUOTES "TELEGRAM" EDITORIAL.

In his sermon at the Sunday evening service at the Kirk, Rev. R. J. Power quoted extracts from a recent editorial article in the Telegram dealing with the unemployment question. The subject of the address was "Bolshevism and its Meaning." The preacher traced the origin and spread of Bolshevism, imparting to his congregation information which is not generally known. Bolshevism originated in Germany and was brought over to America. It began in Russia with the arrival there, from New York, of Trotsky and 450 anarchists, who introduced its doctrines. On several occasions, while in Canada, Rev. Mr. Power had received pamphlets from the Canadian Government asking him to use his influence and help combat the evil doctrines of Bolshevism. Canada has spent thousands of dollars in propaganda for the purpose of combating that evil. The rev. preacher complimented the Telegram on its recent unemployment editorial and read several extracts from the article. He said that the workman certainly had a grievance and in many cases did not receive value for his work. On the other hand, others had received more than they deserved. The address was an eloquent one and was greatly appreciated by the congregation.

Miss Mary McCarthy

IN "UNDER THE GASLIGHT."

There are many friends of this talented young lady who felt that in "Deacon Dubbs" real opportunity to display the histrionic ability which she undoubtedly possesses was lamentably absent. In the production of "Under the Gaslight" at the Casino next Monday, Miss McCarthy will portray the emotional character of Laura Courtland, around whose early womanhood a poignant story weaves itself. It is a part calling for the highest skill, ranging as it does from the rather boydenish simplicity of youth to the pathos and tragedy of the sterner realities of life, and one which will enable this popular B. I. S. player to fully exhibit the power and depth of her dramatic ability.

In the last presentation of "Under the Gaslight" the character now being played by Miss McCarthy was brilliantly portrayed by Miss M. McGrath, now Mrs. Martin W. Furlong.

"UNDER THE GASLIGHT."
 Captain O'Brien may be called "the perfect lover of the movies", but in all theatricals it may be safely said that fear of contradiction that the poor falls to Capt. O'Grady. His varied career with visiting home troupes stands him in good stead in his characterization of Rayford, the lead in "Under the Gaslight". His portrayal is neither turgid nor emotionally false, and all through he noted a careful study of the play lines of this thrilling melodrama. The part was originally played by Mr. W. E. Hasey, long since dead, whose clever impersonation of the character is still vividly remembered.

Curliana.

The Curling fixtures opened yesterday. During the afternoon about 180 players but the real games did not start until after tea when the White Division played from 7 to 9 for the Davista Trophy. Eight teams competed. From 9 to 11 the Red Division played for the Buchanan Trophy. The continuation of the first round was played to-night with the Blue Division from 9 to 11 for the Greiner Cup. A feature of last night's games was the showing of the Junior Curlers who did remarkably well.

Sugar Advances.

Sugar took a jump on Saturday of approximately forty cents per hundred pounds and the wholesale price is now the vicinity of $10.40. We understand that importers have been selling at a little or no margin owing to the former weakness of the market.

Glorious Dead.

CHURCH SERVICE—MEMORIAL SERVICE—WHITE PREACHERS' SERVICE—SAINT JOHN'S GALLERIES.

merged into the service. Such was the interest which pervaded the service at the Parish of St. Thomas's, the old St. John's, hallowed religious associations and time when it was the capital of the island, being Thanksgiving, the occasion of the War Memorial service of those men who gave their lives for their country, and also returned with their banners. The service was a fitting one and a patriotic hymn was sung. The hymn was "The Lord is my Shepherd." The service was held at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. King, Esq., was in the chair. The service was held at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. King, Esq., was in the chair. The service was held at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. King, Esq., was in the chair.

Following the reading of the names, the plenary notes of the Last Post rang out in the old Garrison Church whose walls had often resounded to similar strains, and immediately following came the brighter notes of the Revellie. The Dedication by the Bishop came next, and was as follows:—

"Dear beloved in the Lord, we are gathered here to set apart in solemn manner this Tablet, the gift of the congregation, to the greater glory of God, and in commemoration of the heroic services rendered to our King and country by the men whose names are inscribed thereon."

Prayers and a hymn followed. During the singing of the latter, floral offerings were laid near the font. These were placed in the following order:—

A powerful and eloquent sermon was preached by His Lordship, Bishop White. The text was taken from the Book of Ruth, 2nd chapter, 20th verse. "Blessed is he who hath not left of his kindness to 'the living and the dead.' His Lordship first referred to an article in the London Times, which said that the French were kind to their dead. It had been a new thing for England to find the flower of her youth blown away like autumn leaves in the storm swept fields of Flanders.

Other wars had been but skirmishes in comparison with this. This harvest of death had searched the soul of England as nothing had ever searched it before. It made necessary the showing of kindness in larger measure to both living and dead. There is a desire to perpetuate the memory of those who died in the war. This was as true of Newfoundland as of other countries, although we possess no National Memorial. It was only fitting that some day a national memorial should be erected, and it was fitting also that every parish should have its own small memorial.

If we allowed the memory of those who fell to fall in anyway, we would be bankrupt of the finest traits of Christian charity. The men who had fallen had set a new standard of manhood before the world. We wanted, they gave, we ought not to forget. We ought to remember them because they paid for our freedom the price we were unable to pay. Gratitude, at least demands that we remember the dead. They gave all they had, gladly, generously, at a time when life was sweet and full of promise. His Lordship then quoted from Rupert Brooke, the following beautiful lines:—

"Blow out, you bugles, over the rich dead!
Their none of these so lonely and poor of old,
But dying they made us rarer gifts than gold.
These laid the world away; poured out the red that every parish should have its own small memorial.
Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be
Of work and joy, and that unhoped
That men call age, and those who would have been Their sons, they gave, their immortality."

How, asked His Lordship, could we dream of forgetting them? The world was now suffering from disillusionment. Some were asking if these noble lives had not been given in vain. If the new earth had not arrived, at least, serious efforts were being made to usher it in. There would have been no Disarmament Conference at Washington if the war had terminated otherwise than it did. What had been begun in sacrifice could only be reaped in sacrifice. The world wants to forget that. The old world had passed away in flames which scorched our civilization to a cinder. If there is to be order out of disorder, a new vision of duty and a new responsibility must become ours. It will be only by mutual helpfulness that democracy will be made safe for the world. Lastly, said the preacher, the men whose names were on yonder tablet had died in the morning of their day. The life of men is judged not by its length, but by its nobility of service, not by what a man has or gains, but by what he gives. When he gives all, what could he give more? Following the sermon, the hymn, "O God our Help in Ages Past" was sung, and the National Anthem, played out on the organ, and sung with full heart by the entire congregation brought the service to an end.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

KING EXPRESSES SYMPATHY.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—King George, to-day, sent a message of sympathy to Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, on the death of Pope Benedict.

INDEPENDENT'S OPINION.

DUBLIN, Jan. 23.—Satisfaction with the agreement, reached late last week between Michael Collins and Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, relative to boundary between North and South Ireland, was expressed to-day by the Independent. "It is a great and decided advance toward Irish union," the newspaper declared, "and this advance is all the greater because an agreement was scarcely hoped for at this early stage of the negotiations. Since this much has been accomplished, it is too much to hope that greater and more vital agreements will follow future conferences."

REPUIS AND POLICE BATTLE.

TRALEE, Ireland, Jan. 23.—An attempt on Friday to seize a police automobile, when one civilian and three constables were wounded, led to three hours fighting on Saturday night, between police and Republicans. Police with rifles and bombs, rushed through the city in an armored car. Many people ran to the churches for shelter, and remained throughout the night.

PURELY FROM AFFECTION.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Princess Mary, whose marriage to Viscount Lascelles takes place in Feb., is anxious to remove certain erroneous impressions in connection with various subscriptions, which are being raised for wedding gifts, says an official statement from Buckingham Palace. Her Royal Highness, the Princess adds, is in no way responsible for the initiation of any fund or form of gift, or method of raising subscriptions, and it has always been made clear that any form of gift must remain with the donors themselves. It is needless to add, the statement concluded, that the Princess is deeply touched by the numerous funds initiated, and gratified to think that in these days of stress, many charities will benefit therefrom.

Eleventh Annual Report

NEWFOUNDLAND POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

In making the Eleventh Annual Report of the Newfoundland Poultry Association we wish to congratulate its members on the success that has attended its operations during the year now closed. Much interest has been shown in the work of the Association, and its meetings have been made interesting by the addresses given by various members on the subject of work in the different branches of Poultry raising. Emphasis has been laid on the prime motive and aim of the Association, that of promoting the raising of thorough bred stock, stock that will produce egg layers and meat producers.

MONTHLY ADDRESSES.

At the February meeting Mr. G. R. Williams gave an excellent address on artificial brooding, which was most instructive and profitable to his audience. In March, the Treasurer, Mr. W. R. Butler, told of the methods employed by him in the hatching and rearing of chickens and the reasons for his success. This was a very able address told by the veteran in plain language and conveying to breeders many excellent hints and much good advice. In April Mr. A. J. Bayly introduced a motion establishing a propaganda and publicity campaign to foster the rearing of Standardbred Poultry, which we believe will be a most successful move to propagate the objects of the Association. During the same meeting the Association ordered the advertising of hatching eggs for sale from pure bred birds, and as a result a considerable number was sent to different parts of the Island. At the July meeting some of the Florists of the City attended and discussed the possibility of holding a Floral exhibit at the Annual Poultry Show, and it was decided by the Association to give them every facility for so doing. In October, in accordance with the decision of the Association in April respecting Propaganda, Messrs. A. J. Bayly, Geo. R. Williams and W. R. Butler visited Middle Eight (near Kelloggs) at the invitation of the Rev. Mr. Facey and gave some practical addresses on the rearing of Poultry, exhibiting thorough bred birds and comparing them with ordinary barn door fowl. Prizes were offered by the visiting gentlemen to the children at Middle Eight for the best written essay on Poultry. Fourteen essays were sent in. On November 18th, 19th, 17 and 18th the Bell Island Poultry Association held its annual exhibition which, notwithstanding stormy weather, was most successful. Our Association presented a silver cup to the Bell Island Association for competition at their show, which was duly acknowledged and appreciated.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

We have to thank Professor Landry of the Agricultural College, Turro, for the interest taken by him in our Association and for the lantern slides for use in displaying methods used in hatching and rearing of chickens. He has always been most generous in helping us and giving us counsel and facilitating our obtaining Judges for our shows. On November 30th the Annual Exhibition was held in the spacious Armoury of the C.L.B. Over 600 birds were shown and as quite a number came from outside St. John's there was some keen competition. Grand Falls and Bell Island taking quite a number of prizes. The Exhibition was opened by His Excellency the Governor and continued for three days, closing on December 2nd, when His Excellency kindly distributed the prizes, a large number of citizens being in attendance. Two special features marked this Exhibition; one was the exhibition of a Model Poultry House with a pen of pure bred Leghorns, which attracted much attention and was loaned for the benefit of the Association's funds and was won by Mr. J. Ryan. The other was the splendid exhibition of flowers by the Valley Nurseries, A. Brown, P. Burley and householders and which was a great attraction for lovers of flowers. Some vegetables were also exhibited by

DANGER OF JUST LETTING A COLD RUN ITS COURSE

Common Coughs and Colds That Hang on Persistently Are Apt to Lead to Serious Complications, Declare Authorities.

Public Warned to Beware of a Three Days' Cough and Break It Up Before It's Too Late, by Taking Asprolox, the New Scientific Discovery.

Money Refunded in Every Instance Where Asprolox Fails to Bring Relief.

Leading authorities are using every effort to arouse the public to the danger of letting common colds just run their course, for it is now definitely known that many serious lung complications such as pneumonia, grippe, etc., are the direct result of colds that hang on persistently.

Colds are curable and preventable and it is a duty everyone owes himself as well as his neighbors to break up any cold they may contract, before some serious disease gets him in its clutches. It is pointed out that a three days' cough is nature's warning and the time for immediate action has arrived.

Of all the cough and cold remedies, Asprolox, the new scientific treatment, which has been accomplishing such remarkable results all over the United States and Canada, probably provides the safest, surest and quickest, as well as the most practical treatment for colds yet discovered.

According to the statements of thousands who have used it, Asprolox is almost magical in its effect. The first dose usually stops the tendency to sneezing and coughing, and relieves the feeling of discomfort, and the second and third doses usually suffice to stop the progress of a cold altogether.

The wonderful efficiency of Asprolox in breaking up a cold is best shown by the fact that all druggists are instructed to refund money in any case where it fails to give satisfactory results after three doses have been taken.—Jan24,26,31.

members of the Association, which, although small in quantity, were fairly good. The Association are contemplating an egg laying contest if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

APPECIATES ASSISTANCE.

We record our great appreciation of the very valuable assistance we have had from the Hon. Dr. Campbell, the Minister of Agriculture and Mines. If it were not for the grant yearly contributed by the Government, it would not be possible to hold the Poultry Exhibition, which would be a disastrous blow to our work as the Exhibition is not only a spectacular demonstration, but a first class educational. The funds of the Association are in a satisfactory condition and show that the Treasurer has in hand a substantial balance with no outstanding liabilities. In closing this report we trust that the Association may in the future continue its efforts for the promotion of its propaganda and succeed in convincing the people of this Island home of ours of the great benefit that is to be derived from the rearing of good meat producers and the extra production of eggs.

RECOGNITION.

The care of the teeth is now recognized as a necessity. In fact the large hospitals all over the world examine the patients' teeth and where it is possible put them in good condition before attempting a surgical operation. Experience has shown that the patient has a better chance for recovery with a clean healthy mouth than without it. This ought to convince the most skeptical that care of the teeth is requisite to health.

One of the best known guides in Nova Scotia gives this testimonial of MINARD'S LINTMENT:

Have used Minard's Lintment in my home, hunting and lumber camps for years, and consider it the best white lintment on the market. I find that it gives quick relief to minor ailments, such as sprains, bruises and all kinds of wounds. Also it is a great remedy for coughs, colds, etc., which one is liable to catch when log driving and cruising during the winter and spring months. I would not be without MINARD'S LINTMENT and cannot recommend it too highly.

The shipments since Oct.
amounted to 10,662 gallons of kerosene from four large St. John's oil companies and there are indications of an increase in the United States, depending on the return of spring, when it is expected to revive industries in which cod oil is used. The Newfoundland stocks are getting bare and there is a possibility of five months before oil is ready in quantities.

There is very little of the depressed Codfish Oil prevailing now for more than 1922 is so far not encouraging. Norway again turn in a big crop on the world markets this spring, the situation as Newfoundland Manufacturers is a party with that of last year, generally it did not pay to export. The local stocks practically cleaned up. None
exported for a long time.

That crop experts in the United States are expecting a bumper crop in 1922 is likely to rule
the market. The growing crop last week showed an increase of 76 per cent. as normal 90 per cent. for the week of New Year. The quality of the crop is also improved. The local stocks practically cleaned up. None
exported for a long time.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

LOVING BUT NOT LIKING.

"I suppose I love her. I know I should feel awfully if anything happened to her. But I just don't seem to like her very well. She rubs me the wrong way and I think I have that same effect on her. Do you think it is terribly wicked for two sisters to feel that way?"

This friend of mine said to me the other day in speaking of her sister.
And my answer was, "Too bad, but not exactly wicked."

Or else there are an awful lot of wicked people in the world.

What is it gives that old witticism
"God gave us our relatives, but thank God, we can choose our friends." It's eternal popularity! Simply the fact that so many people just don't happen to like their relatives, and this saying gives much needed expression to a sentiment they have always felt they ought to repress.

Blood Versus Water.

Blood is thicker than water. That love which will make one resent criticism from outsiders of a relative even when one does not think of him oneself,—which will make a family rally to the support of any member who is in trouble, and which will cause an irretrievable sense of loss in case of death, is something we seem to feel instinctively for our close blood relatives.

But blood cannot be substituted for water, and you can't make that love take the place of a liking which is founded on congeniality and an enjoyment of each other's personalities and a general approval of each other's qualities.

The Elf's Reward.

A FAIRY STORY FOR CHILDREN.

The Fairy Queen and all her subjects were very sad because she had lost the beautiful diamond which had glittered upon the tip of her wand.
Until she found it she could work no more magic.

The leaves which her magic would have freshened and beautified looked sere and yellow. The flowers drooped for want of the drink which she had made for them. The grass lost its brightness, and the trees missed the dew which they had watched each night in the glade.

At last the Queen sent out a proclamation that he or she who could recover the diamond for her should be exalted to the highest rank in the kingdom. Of course, all the fairies were anxious to win such an honor.

When they had all set out, a little elf crept from one of the woodland flowers and followed them. Thinking the diamond must have been dropped, he began to search over the ground.

THE NEW ERA.

Two ladies by the western shot up two geese
so they died;
and when I heard
I said, "Aw, chee,
they'll be acquitted, for they are smooth as dames can be, so fair of face and starry-eyed." For I grew up in ancient days when men thought women free from guile; and if they murdered vagrant jays, 'twas just their harmless, giddy style; as jurymen we met their gaze and wilted in their genial smile. No man could hope to make a hit who'd put a lady in distress; we always voted to acquit, even though her crime she might confess; we were such knights, you must admit, as used to ride in sheet iron dress. Alas, the world has changed since then, our attitude no more survives; the women go and vote like men, men are but equal with their wives; and these two males in the pen must spend the balance of their lives. And they are not old shrewed cronies, all out of hair and down at heel, and hanks of hair and rags and bones, but of an age to dance a reel; and yet in fierce and ardent tones the jurors sprang their "Guilty" spiel. The jurors all were weary guys to whom the suffrage stuff was new; they thought, "We've seen our wives arise, demanding everything in view; there bound to have their share of pie, and they must take the soupbones too."

AVIATORS FLY OVER ST. JOHN'S.

On Sunday, Major F. S. Cotton and Capt. V. S. Bennett made several flights over the city and suburbs. They took up three press representatives, Messrs. Walsh of the News, J. R.
Smallwood of the Advocate, and A. B.
Fleming of the Telegram, during the morning. In the afternoon, Misses Marguerite Bennett and Edith Alderdice were taken up for a short flight.
They were the first of their sex to fly in Newfoundland. The Martinside plane, which is the same size as that used by Mr. P. E. Raynham in his attempt to fly the Atlantic, received a thorough overhauling during the past week. The various stays were examined and attended to, and the skids were shod with brass. The machine was wheeled out of the hangar at 11 a.m., and after the engine had been warmed up, the wheels were replaced by skids. By 12.30 p.m., when large numbers of people had assembled on the pond, and it was impossible to control them, and keep them clear of the machine. After coming down from the test flight, Major Cotton took up the three press representatives. In the afternoon, two flights were made.
The aeroplane was then brought back to the hangar. The day was an ideal one for flying, although in the afternoon it began to snow. Major Cotton and Capt. Bennett will return shortly to their headquarters at Betwood.
They may return later in the Westland machine, which is a six passenger, and has a Napier engine.
