WHAT BIG LEAGUE LEADERS SAY

By John K. Tener, National League President. The Federal League has tried unsuccessfully to disrupt and disorganize our league, and cannot be trusted. It is like one of those stage melodramas where the villain tries to throw the girl under the subway train in the first act, off the bridge in the second act and off an ocean liner in the third. After he fails in his attempt to get the girl out of the way, he says to her in the final act, "Can't you trust me?"

By Ban Johnson, American League President. Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—The American league will have absolutely nothing to do with the Federal League, the so-called war or plans of peace, and will never take back under any conditions any players who have jumped from any of its clubs. We have nothing to do with the so-called war or plans for peace. We don't consider the Federal League in a position to do anybody any harm, and therefore do not intend to meet any of them to talk over a settlement.

By James A. Gilmore, Federal League President. Kansas City, Nov. 27.—A number of reports have been sent out of Chicago, Pittsburg and Cleveland to the effect that Kansas City would lose its franchise, but I don't believe there will be a change made in our organization. Cleveland is especially eager to get a Federal League franchise. My visit here has convinced me that a large number of local business men are willing to support the club here and bring major league stars to Kansas City. We're in the fight to stick and don't want peace now.

JIM M'ALEER'S RECORD SHOWS THERE'S A FORTUNE IN BASEBALL

James R. McAleer of Youngstown, O., had $200,000 invested in the Boston club. Of this, $130,000 represented his savings. The remaining $70,000 was borrowed—without interest—from Charles Comiskey of Chicago, one of the wealthiest men in the American League.

McAleer tells close friends that for the past eight years his income as manager and scout has been $20,000 a season. He saved his money and when opportunity presented itself he purchased the Boston club.

With $130,000 in the bank, it was easy to secure the $70,000 balance from Comiskey, whose players have made him rich and who always regarded Jim as the game's greatest outfielder.

McAleer tells, with no small show of emotion, how he has kept out of the game a season.

One day, he says, Yerkes was going bad and he had been off his stride for two weeks. "Better lay him off, hadn't you, Jake?" I said to Stahl.

"Guess you'd better leave this to me," was Stahl's reply. "I'm not entirely bereft of ideas."

"And that was the end of it. Stahl was running the club and Stahl was responsible for the position in which we finish," says McAleer.

McAleer was the greatest center fielder that ever lived. He was born at Youngstown June 10, 1864, and began his professional career with the Charleston club, Southern League, in 1886. He went to Memphis, then to Milwaukee, and in 1889 signed with Cleveland, where he became the fielding wonder of the age.

M'ALEER'S MAKING A BUNCH OF MONEY OUT OF THE RED SOX.

McAleer, after a year's absence from the game, when the Cleveland team moved to St. Louis, joined the American League in 1909. While not rewarded with wonderful success as a manager, he has always been considered a capable and by some a great one. It was McAleer who saw in Jake Stahl the ideal man to round out the Boston infield and lead the red-hosed crew to a flag, and he was the one man who could induce Stahl to return to the game, which he had deserted for the banking business.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT THE BIG LEAGUERS

By announcing the signing of Robert Marshall, a catcher who was bought from the Denver club, of the Western League, John McGraw made it plain that the rebuilding of the Giants will begin behind the bat. Marshall is the sixth backstop under contract and the third youngster added since the decline of "Chief" Meyers was noted in the dreary days of the last pennant race.

"Larry" McLean, who is preparing to enter vaudeville with "Rube" Marquand, will be in the veteran corps at Marlin with Meyers. Marquand was with the Davenport pennant winning team in the "Three Eye" last season before being acquired by Denver. Marshall hit at better than a 400 salt. John B. Adams, erstwhile New Orleans catcher, who once had a trial with the Naps; Harry Smith, who showed brilliantly in the closing weeks of the big league race as a recruit, and Elmer Johnson will be the other "rookie" backstops. After one full season in Giant livery Johnson still belongs to this classification because of the few occasions he appeared in action. "Hickory" failed to display much polish as a receiver.

"Christy" Mathewson opened his mail in the offices of the Giants, and in addition to moving picture plots, manuscript and social invitations, "Matty" read letters urging him to send an old glove to an admiring youth who wants inspiration for diamond deeds, to serve as one of the judges at a barn dance, to address a boys' club in New Jersey, where "Matty" recently appeared as a political speaker, and send his autograph to four promoters of fairs. None of the perfunctory notes which proved such a nuisance to "Tilly" Shaffer and hastened that temperamental athlete's retirement were seen in "Matty's" mail.

Frank Bancroft, manager of the All-Nationals, wants "Matty" to reconsider and join the tourists for the games in the Hawaiian Islands. "Bill" James, the Braves' big heavy, does not want to take the ocean voyage, and "Matty" is sought to round out the Nationals' staff, but "Big Six" is eager for a winter away from baseball. A letter from "Ty" Cobb urging "Matty" to join the Georgian on a hunting trip was given serious consideration, as "Matty" has in mind, besides golf, quail hunting as a late autumn diversion. Cobb in a day of sport recently got two wild turkeys and a deer.

Presented With Wrist Watch About thirty of the employees of O. H. Warwick Co. Ltd., gathered at the home of Harry Warwick, Princess street, on Thursday evening, in honor of Roy A. Virtue, one of the travelers, who has enlisted with the foreign service contingent of the artillery, and leaves for Halifax in a few days. A pleasant evening was passed with songs and recitations, and Mr. Virtue was presented with a wrist watch engraved with his name and address by the firm and a smoking set by the employees. Mr. Virtue has two brothers who have resided in Bermuda, who are also going to the front.

OLYMPIC MEET IN 1916 UNLIKELY

New York, Nov. 27.—Conscription for war service has practically depleted the ranks of athletes in Austria and Germany, according to Al Copland, former trainer of the Princeton track team, who went to Vienna in April as the Austrian Olympic coach and returned yesterday on the Holland America liner Rotterdam. "Even these Austrian athletes who have not been drawn into the army have insisted upon going to the front," he said. "I have not heard of any of them being killed or injured, but if they escape injury the drain on their vitality from the hardships of the war campaign will be such that they will not be able to compete in sports for a year after they are discharged."

CHARLIE MITCHELL, ONCE A SCRAPPER, NOW AUTHOR

This is the fifty-third birthday of Charles Watson Mitchell, the well-known author. What is he doing on the sporting page? Well, this Charles Watson Mitchell we all are a-speak-ing of is no other than Charley Mitchell, the greatest heavyweight England has turned out in the last thirty years—perhaps the best fighting man who learned his trade in England since the days of Jem Macae. It is true that Ruby Robert was of English birth, but he debuted into the ring in New Zealand, and he has always been considered a pugilistic product of the antipodes.

CORRY LAW AGAIN

Champion Corry Law has again scored success in the dog world. Following his successes in New York in the spring, he has carried off winners in the Boston show. The entry was $35 besides competing against settlers from the Hismore Kennels he won over Champion Muskerry Jenn. This adds five points to his championship, making fourteen out of the fifteen required.

QUIET YESTERDAY AT VERA CRUZ

Washington, Nov. 27.—The situation at one p.m. yesterday in Vera Cruz was described thus: "Houses were opened for business. The sale of liquor was permitted except to drunkards. All kinds of paper and Mexican money, including a small proportion of American currency was being freely circulated."

SPANIARDS KILLED IN MEXICO CITY BY ZAPATA SOLDIERS

Washington, Nov. 27.—The Spanish Ambassador, Mr. Riano, received official despatches from Madrid today saying several Spaniards had been killed and their homes had been pillaged when the Zapata forces entered Mexico City. Mr. Riano had no original advices on the subject from Mexico City, and Secretary Bryan, upon whom he called for information had none. It was assumed that the Spanish minister in Mexico reported to the Madrid foreign office.

"FIFTY MEN A DAY" Wanted for "Our Regiment"

From Mexico City came a report that the property of an American dairyman named Hill, on a ranch near the city, had been looted by soldiers. The State Department immediately cabled Mr. Silliman to request the proper authorities to arrest and punish the guilty parties and demand the return of the property.

DEAL BETWEEN BIG TELEGRAPH COMPANIES REPORTED

Rumored Great North-western will take over lines of Canadian Northern in Dominion.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Rumor which neither Canadian Northern nor Great Northwestern would deny connects the two telegraph services in which was stated to be one of the largest deals of the kind that ever took place in Canada. It is stated that the latter company has negotiated either a purchase or some other form of agreement whereby they will take over all Canadian Northern telegraph lines in Canada, while the Western Union is to handle the company's business in the United States.

Farm Notes Of Interest

THE FARMER'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY TO SAVE MONEY ON FERTILIZER

New Brunswick has been using some commercial fertilizer for a number of years, but within the past few years, its use has increased very rapidly. In 1912 this province used 44 per cent of the fertilizer imported to the Dominion. It has been estimated by the writer that between six and seven hundred thousand dollars were sent out of this province during the past season, for commercial fertilizers.

Several of our thrifty and thoughtful farmers some time ago began to make inquiries as to whether there was any possibility of getting these fertilizers at a less cost than they were paying.

Probably no person in the province has given more valuable time and attention to this subject than Mr. R. G. Murray, of St. John, who, while a practicing lawyer, is also an up-to-date farmer. Mr. Murray, as a member of the Kingston Agricultural Society, saw that society buying the simple fertilizers or materials and mixing them at home, thus saving a considerable amount and getting a more reliable fertilizer. Mr. Murray found upon investigation that the materials for the various "brands" of fertilizer upon the market, did not cost the mixers much more than half what they were charging the farmers for them mixed. This matter, he brought to the attention of the Agricultural Commission, which was sent out by the present Government in 1909, to learn how best the Department of Agriculture could serve the farmers of the province. He, with others, has talked "Home-mixing" at practically every important gathering of farmers since that time.

Talking has little effect on any class of people, least of all on the farmer. Nothing was done, in the way of practical demonstrations, to bring about the adoption of the scheme of buying the materials, and doing the mixing at home, until this season.

In the spring of 1912, the St. John's Agricultural Society, following the lead of the Kingston Society, took up the work of buying the fertilizer materials for its members. In the spring of 1913 the writer was successful in inducing two or three other societies to try the scheme in a small way.

It was quite evident, however, and quite right from their point of view, that the farmers must have undisputable evidence that the scheme was both practical and profitable, before they would give it a serious trial. To this end, the writer carried out the following demonstrations, during the past season.

Enough of the standard fertilizer materials were delivered to widely separated farmers, to make the equivalent of a half ton of the factory-mixed "brand" they were using. These materials were mixed on the farmer's barn-floor. A large number saw the mixing, and all agreed that the home-made mixture was then applied through the potato planter—there was no difficulty in getting it to go through to the same area of potato crop. The crops were given the same treatment during the season. The table below shows how the home-mixed fertilizer compares in cost and value with the factory-mixed.

Until within the past two or three years it was practically impossible to buy fertilizer materials outside of the concerns who also sold the mixed goods. These concerns naturally were not over desirous of selling the materials and as a consequence put their prices so high that there was little saved by buying the fertilizers unmixed. For instance, the Agricultural Society at Kingston paid at the rate of $38.00 per ton for the materials necessary for a 4-6-10 brand, f.o.b. at their nearest railway station. This, when all necessary expenses were paid, was very little less than they could have bought the ready-mixed for. Of course we are not now considering the greater agricultural value of the home-mixed goods.

Another great stumbling block in the way of getting cheap fertilizers, either mixed or unmixed, is the unfortunate system of long credits. If the fertilizer dealer must act as banker, as well as sell fertilizer, he must necessarily get his pay for so doing. It is really too bad that our farmers cannot be brought to see the great waste of money in buying farm machinery fertilizers, etc. on long-time credits. Realizing all the difficulty that must be overcome, I am still inclined to believe, that if the farmers could be brought to adopt the "thirty days cash" system followed by all other business men, they would never go back to the old system where they have to pay two or three times the value of a thing in order to have two or three years in which to pay for it.

A glance at the table will show what may be saved by paying cash for fertilizers. The concerns who are in and are later collected for a second survey, when all out of type specimens may be discarded. What should be looked for is a sound, large, well-developed, though by no means overgrown root, true to type and possessing a neat crown, smooth surface, full rounded crown, freedom from prongs. Certain varieties, especially among the swedes, are naturally somewhat prongy. In that case the breeder must aim to select specimens having the prongs confined as much as possible to the bottom of the root.

It should be remembered that the main seed stalk grows out the following year from the heart, as it is called. On this account one must be sure not to injure this point when topping the seed roots. The top may either be carefully twisted off, or still better, it can be cut off one to two inches above the heart.

Storing
Seed roots spoil very easily, like most other good things, and should therefore be handled carefully. The sooner they can be stored, after pulling, in a cool, not too dry place, the better. Where a good root cellar is at hand it is advisable to store them there, if possible in standing position and surrounded with peat soil or moist sawdust to preserve their moisture. If they are to be stored in an outside pit on well-drained ground, the pit is made about 6 feet wide, and the roots are piled up 3 feet high, with slats or spacers between them in an outside pit on well-drained ground. The pit is made about 6 feet wide, and the roots are piled up 3 feet high, with slats or spacers between them in an outside pit on well-drained ground. caused in the field. For this purpose the seed-stalks are tied in loose sheaves and left in open stocks until such time as they may be dry enough for hauling to the barn. Here they should be thrashed as soon as possible. The seed is cleaned on the fanning mill and with the aid of hand sieves, and is spread out in thin layers which should be shuffled daily until quite dry. Then it may safely be put in bags and stored away.

At Macdonald College and on trial plots in different counties we have grown seed from mangels, swede turnips and carrots during the last years with excellent results as far as quality is concerned and with quite satisfactory, though somewhat varying yields. I have spoken to several farmers in our Province who have been successful with seed growing, especially from swedes. Mr. Lavallee, St. Guillaume, Yamaska, C., among others, is quite content to have raised his own swede seed for the last few years. In our neighboring province to the West, the O. A. College at Guelph and the Ontario Seed Co., Waterloo, have produced the first class root seed for a number of years; and in 1913 the Dominion Sugar Company, Berlin, Ont., planted over 45 acres with sugar beets on land well known in the Maritime provinces, especially in Yarmouth Co., N. S. where one man has made a success of it or not less than seventeen years. There is thus sufficient evidence that root-seed can be grown in Canada, and the sooner our farmers give it a good trial, the better for their own economy and for the commercial balance of the Dominion.

CAUSES HUSBAND'S ARREST.

MRS. LAURA MAY
While in Savannah, Ga., to see his wife, Mrs. Laura May, and eight-year-old daughter, C. H. May, a travelling salesman, of Seneca, N. Y., was arrested as a result of an action for alimony and custody of the child, filed in the Superior Court. Mrs. May expressed the belief that he would leave the jurisdiction of the court unless restrained. The judge fixed his bond at $1,000, which Mr. May gave.

Root-Seed Production

It is advisable that Canadian farmers should grow their own root seed. From a general point of view there are several reasons why a man would be justified in answering this question in the affirmative. As a matter of fact, under the present terrible conditions in Europe whence we obtain the greater part of our imported root seed, it may even become a necessity on the Canadian market is not always the very best either in regard to truthness of type or to percentage and vitality of germination. It is further, false economy to import practically all the seed needed for a twenty million dollars crop, if this seed can be raised within the country. And we will finally in all likelihood, as hinted above have to face a scarcity in the root-seed supply which simply must be covered through home production.

We have not yet had a very experience in root-seed growing here in Canada, but judging from obtainable records and reports, it is both possible and profitable to produce seed in different parts of the Dominion, at least for home consumption. Of those who have tried it, all agree that they obtained seed of higher germination value, produced more roots of better quality than the average market seed.

Choice of Kind
The first problem for the future seed grower is choice of kind. Shall he grow mangels, swede, or carrot seed? The answer depends largely on locality and personal inclination. The grower who prefers mangels will very likely get better results with seed produced from this kind, provided his farm is so situated as not to suffer from early spring or fall frosts. Young mangels shoot for two and two rows, root injury in the spring than swedes.

Selecting
Before selecting the seed roots the grower must have a clear conception of the type he intends to breed. For convenient inspection the roots may be lined up with the tops laid together for two and two rows. The selected roots are turned about, with tops out,

Planting
Being naturally cross-fertilized, roots of different varieties, belonging to the same kind, should not be planted close to one another. Two mangel varieties may be sown if separated 100 to 250 yards, especially if the fields are divided by a wood lot, or by a field of tall growing corn. Swedes and turnips, again, require even wider separation. They are not only cross with varieties of their own kind, but also intercross, i. e. a swede may cross with a turnip and vice versa. In dis- tinctly when the "first rape" (Brassic campestris) is prevalent pains should be taken to exterminate this weed, as it is a danger in this respect for both swede and turnip seed production. Carrot root sets cross with each other and with the wild carrot. Where this weed is common it is simply impossible to grow first class carrot seed.

Land intended for seed growing should above all be rich, well drained and, if possible, sheltered from heavy winds. Liquid manure, is a splendid fertilizer for seed roots. On moist soils it is advisable to supplement the liquid manure with 300 to 400 lbs. of Acid Phosphate per acre. Where a general mixture of commercial fertilizer is used it is better to supply the nitrogen with Sulphate of Ammonia than with Nitrate of Soda, as the latter tends to rush the growth of the young seed stalks too much, making them weak and less resistant to wind pressure.

After the land has been properly worked it should be well packed with a roller and marked before planting. Common distances are 24 inches by 24 inches for small roots and 35 inches by 35 inches for large roots. Three men, when used to the work, can plant about an acre in a day. One man lays out the roots in their places, another digs the holes and the third man puts in the roots. The root in the first hole is covered with the soil from the second and so on. Where the soil is deep enough the roots should be planted firmly straight up and down, and should be set so deep that the crown barely reaches the surface. With con-shaped varieties, and on shallow soils it may be advisable to tilt the root, always remembering to plant them as deep as the soil will permit with the crown reaching the surface. If the plow is used the roots are placed against the land side in the opened furrow. It is a good plan to cover them partly with drawing loose earth with one stroke of the foot to the bottom of each root so that they may keep in position when the furrow is thrown back. Unless, however, the workers are familiar with this method, it gives scarcely as satisfactory results as the spade planting method which causes a firmer and more regular stand. The root-seed land should be kept cultivated as long as possible in order to preserve the moisture. On smaller areas it pays well to use the hand cultivator between the rows, when the length of the seed-stalks prevents the use of the horse cultivator.

It is very important that the seed be harvested in right time. Very often the field does not ripen quite uniformly, and all the seed on one and the same plant never matures simultaneously. The first formed seed on the lower parts of the seed stalks ripens earlier than the rest, and as this seed is stronger and consequently more valuable than the later formed seed the grower should endeavor to secure it before it falls off. Mangel seed is ready when the true seed inside the brownish cluster shows a mealy surface when cut with a knife. It is time to harvest swede seed when the bottom silicles or pods are getting brown on the outside and the upper ones have attained a yellowish color. Where seed is grown in small quantities it is of course possible to dry the seed stalks by hanging them up in a well-aired place in the house or in the barn. In this case a sheet or a tarpaulin should be spread out on the floor so that no seed may be lost. On a large acreage the stalks must be

Mr. Victor Higgs, Windham Hill, Cumberland county, N.S., writes:—"My case was a peculiar one. It was one of those strange nervous diseases which are so difficult to describe. The doctor said that my nervous system was all run down. I experienced that uncertainty in walking which is locomotor ataxia, and I now realize that I am greatly indebted to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the great good it has done me."

"I could not work, read or write, or do anything requiring energy or the concentration of mind. Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I could not get an hour's sleep at all night. A PAIR OF BOOTS

Just after the war broke out a Canadian bootmaking firm got an order from the Canadian Government to make 40,000 pairs of boots for the army. The manager of the company, making a speech to the employees, gave some good advice to show what every worker might do to make sure that every boot that went on a Canadian soldier's foot in Europe was as good as any other part of his equipment. He showed that a poorly filled sole, a rotten counter in the heel, a badly-sewn seam or a defective arch might spoil a soldier's efficiency in the field. In view of the fact that the war is teaching us all to be soldiers one way or another, suppose we apply a little of this bootmaking philosophy to the boots we wear in everyday life. A man is known by the boots he wears. Looking over the honor roll of your boots past and present—probably made in Canada—how do they compare for efficiency with the things you have bought from other countries?

The writer of this article has been looking over his. He has reviewed a few rotten boots, some middling, and some absolutely unimpeachable. At this moment he has a pair on which he bought eleven months ago and has worn every day since—except a few Sundays and the day he took them to the cobbler to get new lifts on the wadded-off heels. In those boots of honor there is not a break in the sole, nor a ripped seam, nor a crack in the leather, nor a counter gone down in the heel. That pair of boots couldn't have been better value for the money if they had been made under oath in a time of war for a Canadian soldier to wear maintaining the honor of his country abroad. The man who made them had the honor of his firm on his conscience. When he put them on the market he charged a good price because he knew they were worth it.

Those boots were made in Canada, from Canadian leather, by Canadian workmen, paid in Canadian money by a firm financed on Canadian capital. What is true of boots is equally true of the thousand and one other articles that Canadians buy. In the small proportion of cases where it is not true, it can be made true. And those few manufacturers may well take a leaf from the book of the manager who made the speech on good bootmaking to his employees. Now that Canadian manufacturers are going out to increase the consumption of goods made in Canada, they will see to it that no man has a shred of argument to show why he should not spend his money for Canadian-made goods.

Trampled To Death

Suppose you were to read in the paper some morning that a disastrous fire had wiped the town of Amherst, or Galt or Lethbridge completely off the map. That would be a hard knock to Canada wouldn't it?

Yet, figuratively and literally, Canadians are ruthlessly trampling a town that size under their feet every year,—actually obliterating it.

Every year we Canadians import $4,000,000 worth of boots and shoes from the United States. On them we pay over $1,000,000 duty.

That $5,000,000, if spent for Canadian-made boots, would keep six big shoe factories busy the year round—employing altogether about 2,400 hands, paying out $1,500,000 in wages, supporting in all about 10,000 people.

Concentrate all these people in one place and you add to the map of Canada a good live town like Amherst or Galt or Lethbridge. Rather startling, isn't it?

When out of pure thoughtlessness, you buy an imported boot you crunch under your heel the opportunity to build up such a town.

In buying Canadian-made shoes you are paying for quality, not duty. Dollar for dollar they give you a value that is equal to, if not better than any others.

Next time be patriotic enough to refuse the pair the dealer offers you that is not
