Items of Interest to Catholic Readers in the Magazines.

Bismark's Defeat.

(From the Sacred Heart Review.)

Naturally the death of Bismark is followed by numerous notices of his career in the magazines. Mr. William R. Thayer contributes a paper on the ex-chancellor of Germany to the current Atlantic, and in it he makes special mention of the two great struggles which marked Bismark's public career, and of both of which he suffered defeat. One of these struggles, according to Mr. Thayer, was the deceased chancellor's combat with the German socialists, and in that combat not alone was Bismark beaten, says he, but the methods which he employed against the socialists were such that they actually added to the strength of his antagonists. The other memorable struggle of Bismark's official life was his effort to crush the Church in the fatherland, and of that contest Mr. Thayer says that it was a conflict with the Pope over the appointments of Catholic bishops and priests. "Bismark," continues he, "insisted that the Pope should submit his nominations to the King. Pius IX. maintained that in spiritual matters he could be bound by no temporal power. Bismark passed stern laws; he withheld the stipends paid to the Catholic clergy; he imprisoned some of them; he broke up the parishes of others. It was the medieval war of the investitures over again, and again the Pope won. Bismark discovered that against the intangible resistance of Rome his Krupp guns were powerless. After fifteen years of ineffectual battling, the chancellor surrendered." As far as it goes, this may pass for a passably correct account of the struggle which Mr. Thayer aims at describing. It was, of course, against the Church that Bismark waged war in the days of the Kulturkampf, and it was the Church which triumphed over and defeated him. But the conflict was fought in Germany, and the real conquerors of the Reichs-kaiser were the German Catholics, as the Review has previously stated; and to them the credit of the victory really belongs.

The Issues Involved.

Mr. Thayer thinks that the issues involved in the Kulturkampf conflict were the same as those which brought about the medieval war of the investitures. Probably those issues entered somewhat into the conflict. It is an admitted fact, however, that Bismark was induced to begin his memorable conflict with the Church by the assurance of Dollinger and the "Old" Catholics, who told him that if the state would aid them, and throw its powerful influence against the real Catholics, they would be able, with the advantage which they imagined the decreasing of papal infallibility gave them, to upset the Church in Germany and substitute in its place a state establishment. It is not necessary to enter here into any description of the complete failure of their plans. But it may be remarked that the crushing defeat which Bismark sustained in that conflict ought to put an end forever to the silly assertions which we often hear, that Catholics are a priest-ridden people, who are kept faithful to their Church and its requirements only by the constant dragging of the priests, and who would quickly assert their independence if they were freed from such priestly control. If there ever was a claim that secured a fair trial, that assertion certainly had it in the days of the German Kulturkampf. The German bishops and priests were then banished by the hundreds or sent into prisons where they could hold no communication with their flocks. The German Catholics were then left to their own devices, and nobody could say that they were then under priestly control or domination. Did the German Catholics, however, make that use of their position which certain Protestant writers assert all Catholic bodies would do in a like situation? Did they declare themselves glad to be emancipated from sacerdotal serfdom, and at once go to work to assert their freedom by abandoning their former faith and religion and adopting a new one? Not a bit of it! On the contrary, with no bishops and priests to lead them or tell them what to do, they at once began that marvelous lay organization which, in a comparatively brief time, brought Bismark to his knees, drove him to Canossa and compelled him to sue for peace. It was a magnificent lay victory, and not the least magnificent feature of it was the thunderous condemnation it gave to that centuries old calumny that Catholics are a priest-ridden people, who would gladly throw aside their shackles if an opportunity were only given them of doing so.

Into a Lunar Limbo.

Mr. John Clark Ridpath contributes to the current Arena quite a lengthy paper on "The Republic and the Empire." Mr. Ridpath is plainly not an American imperialist. In fact, he appears to entertain no very lofty ideas regarding the creditable character of our late war with Spain or the outcome thereof. There are a good many other Americans who are of his way of thinking these days, and not a few of such were ardent advocates of the Yankoo-Spanko war at the outset, but have become radically disillusioned since that contest began. Here is the rather amusing way in which Mr. Ridpath regards the outcome of the war and our present national predicament. "The thing is done," says he; "we can not to this extent reverse the process of history. The motive for which the war with Spain was undertaken has already been abandoned. The reasons given at the first had but little solid foundations in fact. The American invasion of Cuba has been a sad revelation of the truth respecting the prevailing condition of that degenerate island. The Cuban republic, where is it? The Cuban army, what is it? The Cuban cause, what has become of it? We are victors over the Spaniards, and the event has made us victors over the Cubans also. Our allies in the island have materialized in a form that will make necessary a revision of the itinerary. We shall have to say: 'From it, too, good Lord, deliver us!' The idea that we are in Cuba on a philanthropic and humanitarian mission has gone to join the other misplaced, absurd and hypocritical pretenses which history has flung with lavish hand into the limbo near the moon." That is not a very complimentary portrait of our present national position, but who can gainsay its correctness? Every day that passes now only serves to emphasize the truthfulness of Mr. Ridpath's description, and the worst of it all is that this country was told before she undertook her "humanitarian" efforts in behalf of Cuba that the Cuban "patriots" were a worthless lot, as they and their Philippine brethren are now almost universally admitted to be.

The Taping Revolt.

In the article on "The Vivisection of China," contributed by him to the September Atlantic Monthly, Eliseo Reclus virtually accuses the Protestant missionaries who then labored in the Celestial Empire of having fomented the Taping rebellion of half a century ago. The Frenchman, who will not be suspected of religious bias against the sect, declares that that revolt was the outcome of the propaganda of certain missionaries whom the Chinese but half understood, but whose influence rendered them rebellious against the constituted authorities. That the missionaries in question were Protestant ones is plain to be seen from the fact which M. Reclus states, that their Chinese converts recognized the Protestants of Europe and America as their brethren in the faith. These statements are corroborations of the often made assertion that the presence of Protestant foreign preachers in any country is generally subversive of law and order there and conducive to dissatisfaction and revolt. M. Reclus' declarations, moreover, give a certain confirmation in what Sydney Whitman says in the article, "The Turk at Home," which he has in the current number of Harper's Magazine. Mr. Whitman, who appears to agree with Marlon Crawford and F. Hopkinson Smith in his estimate of the Turkish people, contends that the late disturbances which occurred in Anatolia, the Armenian province of Turkey, were largely due to the influence of the Protestant missionaries in that land. Anatolia, he tells us, is literally honeycombed with Protestant missionary schools, and although the managers of these institutions, he adds, repudiate the idea that they attempt any proselytism, the facts are against them. He declares that the education which is given in these Protestant missionary schools is of a character calculated to make the pupils discontented with their lot. It makes them regard as essentially bad everything that Mohammedanism has any connection with; and the result is that the pupils of those schools, when they grow up, show themselves defiant and insubordinate to the laws of the land, and interminate in their criticisms of Turkish rule and methods. The natural result of such things is a conflict between the authorities and the graduates of the Protestant schools; and Mr. Whitman intimates very directly that these Protestant propagandists were principally instrumental in bringing about the late Armenian troubles. He is no the first person, of course, to make this assertion, but his declarations add weight to similar ones earlier made.

England and Turkey.

When he considers the charge brought against the Turks of being fanatics in religion and, therefore, opposed to the toleration of any form or institutions of Christianity, Mr. Whitman makes certain assertions which Englishmen will hardly relish. He contends that the Turk is far more liberal than Englishmen have repeatedly shown themselves, and much more humane in his dealings with those who differ from his religious views. The road from Trebizond to Erzeroum, he says, is lined on both sides with Christian monasteries and churches that have stood there, and, moreover, been protected by imperial firmans during ages when it was a capital offense in England for a Roman Catholic priest to say Mass, and during which Irish Protestants mercilessly slaughtered Catholics and spared neither age nor sex. These assertions are so true that they can not be denied; and they certainly do not reflect any credit upon England, which land, by the way, has always been one of the loudest in denouncing "the unspeakable Turk," though its government is really responsible for his presence in Europe. Nobody will undertake to deny the fact that during the recent Armenian troubles the Mohammedans showed fanatical traits. When national passions are raging and religious frenzy is added thereto, inhuman atrocities are certain to follow; but the fact remains that in the matter of toleration Turkey has a record which in many respects outshines that of some of the nations that have been loudest in condemning her. And Mr. Whitman's assertion regarding the part which the Protestant propagandists played in fomenting the American troubles will strengthen the conviction that the presence of such foreign propagandists in England is a most undesirable thing for its inhabitants.

Catholic Scenes in London.

(Rev. Thomas Hughes, S. J., in the Messenger of the Sacred Heart.)

It was on the last Sunday of June this year that after listening awhile to the preaching in Hyde Park, I directed my steps thence, at about half past three in the afternoon, to go down and be in time for the procession through Westminster in honour of St. Aloysius. The line was to start from the parochial schools of St. Mary's Horseferry Road, pass through various streets, and return in due time for Benediction in the church. To see and take part in a solemn Catholic procession, going through London streets, was too spicy an attraction to miss; so I hurried down, after hearing a few words from the Catholic lecturer in the park. I was hurrying through Ashley Place, when I saw His Eminence the Cardinal walking about all alone, himself waiting for the procession just beside his new cathedral. He was dressed in his Cardinal's cassock, with a black apron over it, just as if he were in the streets of a Catholic continental city. There, about twenty minutes later, the heat of the procession drew near on Victoria Street, which is one of the principal and greatest arteries in London, connecting Westminster Abbey and the House of Parliament with Balgravia. A crowd already lined the street, and a much larger one moved on with the procession. Police-men kept one-half of the roadway free for the line of march, while the usual throng of omnibuses rolled on the other side. There were few carriages out on a Sunday afternoon. Seeing the Cardinal, two or three ladies fell on their knees before him, and asked his blessing, which he kindly gave them. Then, passing through the crowd, he placed himself at the head, between the two priests who, in cassock and surplice, followed the band of music. They were the Rector of Wimbledon O'Hege and the Superior of the Jesuit Church, Farn Street. The band was playing the air of the hymn: "O Sacred Heart of Jesus we Thee adore, grant we may live Thee more and more." Behind the priests followed several lay gentlemen, and then the processional cross under an arch or canopy of flowers, flanked by acolytes. From thirteen to fifteen banners divided the procession into different sections. First, there came the girls of St. Mary's parochial schools, dressed in white and crowned with wreath; then the girls of St. Vincent's Orphanage on Curliel Place. After them followed the boys of the school; then the men of the parish, with their sodality badges hanging round their necks, and finally the women of the parish. Four girls carried the statue of the Sacred Heart, and four boys that of St. Aloysius. Two more priests in cassock and surplice walked at about the middle of the line, and two others at the end of the procession; the former were two well-known editors of the Month, the latter were the parish priest, Father Scullis, late provincial of the English Province of the Society of Jesus, and one of his assistants at St. Mary's. A couple of bands, in the middle and at the end, discoursed sweet hymns.

After nearly half an hour's march on the great Victoria Street, the procession turned into Curliel Place, where the Archbishop's house stands. Meanwhile, the crowd had become denser, showing the greatest respect, and the whole length of Curliel Place, especially about the Cardinal's residence, was alive with spots of red. These were chiefly Catholic; but soon the balconies and windows of the elegant mansions began to fill up, as the approaching music was heard; and it was noticeable that there seemed to be little chatting or talking, but rather an evident religious act of Catholic devotion. On reaching the step of his house, the Cardinal mounted them and stood there till the whole line had passed, the men saluting him with affection and pride as they went by. It was quite clear that the spirits of the faithful, whether they were marching, or were moving along among the spectators, were high with an excited sense of religious gratification. So the procession wound away out of sight, to reach St. Mary's through another round of streets. This was only one of several similar demonstrations during the season. But the others were in the suburbs, this in the heart of the metropolis. It has now been going on here, though on a less ample scale, during more than a quarter of a century.

The Hyde Park preaching is a noteworthy manifestation of the religious sentiment, which is so deep in the heart of the English people. On any Sunday in the year, one may find some afternoon services going on near the Marble Arch; but in the summer months the development they receive is quite extraordinary to a stranger. I have counted as many as fifteen preachers at a time, round the bend of the ample sidewalk and in the meadows adjoining. And, from about 3 p. m. to six o'clock, a place as soon as vacated by one preacher is promptly taken up by another speaker and another concourse. Some of the speakers devote their attention and that of their hearers only to social or socialistic matters, anti-Catholic or infidel. But the greater number speak of religion, a little of it being dogmatic, the rest of it a vapoury morality. There are Salvationists here and there; a couple of Hebrew preachers with standards corresponding; and I saw the peculiar case of a German Hebrew delivering, as it were, by inspiration (or from memory) a biblical flow of Pains in the Foot and Limb—A Complete Cure Accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For a number of years I was afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left side and all the way down my limb into my foot. I live five blocks from my work and had to stop and rest several times in going and coming. I could get no relief from my trouble and was on the point of giving up my job when I happened to hear of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle of this medicine and a trial of Hood's Pills and began taking them. Before I had half finished them I was relieved and I had not long before I was completely cured. I never had an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for my cure meant a great deal to me, as I have a family and must always be at my post." WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1898

THE general election in New South Wales has greatly strengthened the protectionist and federal parties in the Legislature. Mr. Reid the premier of the free trade Government, has had his majority of 40 cut down to three, and it is a question whether the protectionists will not prove to be in the ascendant when the Assembly meets. The result is favorable to the federalist movement, as the difference between the free trade tariff of New South Wales and the protectionist tariffs of the other colonies has been one of the main difficulties in the way of a settlement.

THE Moncton Times says: That bloated democrat, Sir Louis Davies, who a year or two ago made it a point to travel in second class cars and smoke his clay pipe with the heavy handed nonchalant air, like that other "up to the hilt" democrat, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has had his views considerably modified since his accession to office. He no longer has any use for second class cars—one of Mr. Blair's luxurious Wagons is not even good enough for him or his family; nothing but a private car suits the taste of this quondam democrat.

Maladministration in the Yukon

EVIDENCE is accumulating from day to day of the rascally conduct of the officials appointed by the Dominion Government to administer the laws and regulations in the Yukon district. More than this, the Government have shown and continue to show that they are not desirous of initiating any investigation into the charges made against their officials, in this matter. No other conclusion can be arrived at than that they desire to leave Mr. Sifton, Minister of the Interior, free to manipulate and mismanage affairs in this district, through his lieutenants, as to him and them may seem best, as regards their personal interest. So shockingly glaring has become the maladministration in the Yukon district that several Liberal papers have manifested sufficient independence to break away from the morose management of the Government and are subservient, and have made the public acquainted with something of what has been going on in these regions for some time.

son City letter in the St. John Globe, is a case in point: "The administration here is rotten to the core. Every official is looking out for his own interests only, and if a minor without influence wants to find out anything he has to grease somebody's dirty paw. One cannot even see the mining records to find out what claims are or are not recorded without bribery and corruption. This is the greatest dissatisfaction shown on all sides about the way things are run."

"A number of indignation meetings have been held, but they have not amounted to anything. The officials also use their knowledge illegally in staking claims on the richest creeks. I myself know of one case in which an official sent a man to stake a claim for him on Dominion creek, and when the claim turned out to be no good refused to pay the $100 promised for the job. Later on the same official got the same man to stake another claim on El Dorado, a bench claim promising him $115 for doing it. The man staked the claim, but when the official told him to go and get his money for it, the man made excuses and is still holding the claim. So he got even. Of course the claim was first made out in the man's name, and was to be made over to the official. This claim may prove to be a very good one, as it is in a good locality."

Certainly the indictment above recorded is pretty severe, yet it is but a sample of the evidence accumulated from various points of the gross mismanagement in the officials of the Yukon. Here is another specimen from another Liberal paper, published in the west. It is in the form of an interview accorded Samuel Taylor, of Middleburgh, who describes himself as a staunch Liberal. "Dawson is dead," says Mr. Taylor. "What is the cause?" he was asked. "Maladministration and the royalty," he replied. "The miners cannot stand the 10 per cent. imposition on the gross output and the government plan of reservation of claims is very unsatisfactory. The commission had the power to remit the royalty—where it worked too much hardship, but the whole thing was a mistake. The water front lease to Macdonald and Morrison is a matter which gave very general dissatisfaction. This firm was to give $1 to the government for every foot rented, and they charged in turn from $8 to $12 per foot. The whole thing was an outrage. A miner could not land a boat in front of Dawson City without paying dearly for it. Mr. Taylor knew of several persons who were anxious to bid for the privilege owned by Macdonald and Morrison and he thinks if tenders were called for at all, that the notice must have been very short. But certain newspapers say that the Americans are doing all the grumbling." "Nothing of the kind," replied Mr. Taylor indignantly. "The complaints are chiefly made by Canadians and British miners from Australia and South Africa, are loud in their denunciation of the regulations and the administration of the country."

Mr. Taylor proceeded to describe the difficulties experienced in recording claims. He instanced the case of a man who had recently come from Dawson with $15,000 or $20,000. This man put down a whole in a side hill claim, and struck it rich. He did not go to register his claim right away, and while he was working some one got wind of his discovery and went and recorded the claim in his own name; so when the discoverer came to record he told the claim was already recorded. After enumerating many other instances of gross mismanagement Mr. Taylor says there seemed to be a "side-door" for nearly everything in Dawson City, and the man who was prepared to pay a few dollars always had an advantage at the government offices, over the individual who simply stood on his rights. There was a "side-door" at the gold commissioner's office and another at the post office. For the payment of $5 to a clerk a man could get an advantage over others who had stood in line for hours.

Mr. Wade recently returned to Winnipeg from Dawson City, and undertook to make a defence of his conduct. To this defence the Winnipeg Tribune, edited by Mr. Richardson, a parliamentary supporter of Mr. Laurier's made moderate but powerful reply. In the course of his article, Mr. Richardson says: "Mr. Wade, in an interview, has asserted that all stories of malfeasance or mismanagement on his part are 'slanders.'" This assertion, of the capacious intellect of the local machine organ, is conclusive proof that the complaints which have come from all quarters are simply the fabrications of an unsuccessful and disgraced adventurer. We have reason to believe that the organ knows a great deal more than it affects to, about the real condition of matters in the Yukon, but of course that would make no difference in what it publishes as its business is not so much to publish facts as to promote the supposed interests of its masters, upon which we fear it operates in a most boomerang fashion. However, the Tribune is prepared to possess its own patience till events force a disclosure of the real situation in the Yukon. And it will not be compelled to wait long. The fact is, however, that the mission would be a practical advance in the cause of genuine prohibition. The mission on the whole was without any doubt a most gratifying success. Let us hope and pray that all who have been so highly privileged as to assist at the exercises of the mission and to partake of the spiritual benefits attached thereto, may have grace to persevere in the good resolutions they have taken.

As previously announced, Father Elliott commenced in the Church on Sunday evening last, a series of four lectures intended for the special benefit of non-Catholics. Of course Catholics attend, and attend in large numbers, at these lectures; but the members of the non-Catholic community are specially invited, and the Catholics are expected to give way, in the matter of seats, for the accommodation of their outside friends. At the door of the Church there is a question box, and into this all who have any questions to ask drop slips of paper with their questions written thereon. Before the lecture, or after the lecture, Father Elliott takes up these slips of paper, and answers them. It is quite unnecessary to state that he answers them well and to the point. The questions as a rule, are the same as one usually hears objected to certain doctrines of the Catholic Church. The lectures contain nothing controversial; nothing that hurts any one's feelings. They are able and lucid expositions of Catholic doctrine bearing on the subjects treated, and clear explanations of the points regarding which non-Catholics seem to have difficulties. The exercises commence each evening with some music by the choir. The Rev. lecturer then usually answers the questions that have been put in the box. Next he proceeds with his lecture, which generally lasts about an hour. After this, while the choir sing a hymn, leaflets are distributed to those present and then the exercises conclude with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The attendance at these lectures has been very large, indeed the church has been thronged each night. The subject of Father Elliott's lecture on Sunday evening was "The Pope, his power, its origin and its limitations." He went on to show that the Catholic doctrine regarding the Pope as an infallible teacher is. He pointed out that the great mass of mankind had to be taught; they are so constituted by God. Moreover all religious denominations employ religious teachers. It was the object of our Saviour to impart wisdom and love for all time, and with His own authority. A book alone could not do that; hence he appointed an infallible teacher. This teacher was St. Peter, and Peter speaks through his successors, the Popes. The Rev. lecturer then proved from different texts of Scripture that our Lord made Peter the head and infallible teacher of His church. On Monday night the lecture was on Confession. After explaining what confession, or the Sacrament of Penance is, as every Catholic understands it, he proved from the scriptures that our Lord gave to His Apostles the power of forgiving sins, and showed that this power has been transmitted from the Apostles to the priests of the Catholic Church. The Scriptures, the Fathers and history and tradition were appealed to, and all these unmistakably showed that Confession existed in the Church from its earliest foundation. Last night the subject was "The Real Presence in the Eucharist," and the learned and Rev. lecturer treated this subject with the same ability as his former lectures. He explained what "Communion" means, and then proved from the Scriptures that our Lord gave to His Apostles the power of changing bread and wine into His body and blood. This power was transmitted from the Apostles to their successors and thus every priest has this power, and exercises it every time he says Mass. To night the lecture will be on the subject, "On we commune with the dead." These lectures are masterly expositions of Catholic doctrine and should go a long way to blunting the edge of controversy and should be a great source of light to those who are sincerely desirous of knowing the truth.

The Paulist Mission in the Cathedral.

THE mission for the men of the congregation closed in St. Dunstan's Cathedral at half-past three on Sunday afternoon last. The attendance was large, and the closing exercises were very solemn. The sermon on the occasion was preached by the Rev. Father Hughes, and was on perseverance. A baptismal font, appropriately decorated with lights and flowers, was erected in the sanctuary, and at the conclusion of the sermon all present rose to their feet, held up their right hands and solemnly renewed their baptismal vows. The Papal benediction was then given; this was followed by a grand Te Deum, and the services were brought to a close by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. During the men's mission about one thousand six hundred and fifty approached the Sacraments of Penance and the Eucharist. This number added to the two thousand women, places the number who approached the Sacraments during the two weeks' mission at about three thousand six hundred and fifty, or about all the communicants of the congregation. During the two weeks of the mission the Church was crowded at all the services, beginning at five o'clock in the morning. The excellent instructions and sermons of the Fathers were listened to with the greatest attention, and all the exercises of the mission were attended to with scrupulous exactitude. The Sacraments were approached after careful preparation, and apparently with the most profound devotion. With the grace of perseverance, which can estimate the lasting benefits that must result from such a mission!

One result of the mission was the signing of the total abstinence pledge by nearly two thousand members of the congregation—over one thousand women and about eight hundred and fifty men. Father Clark preached a powerful temperance sermon to the men; but it must not be imagined that these pledges were signed in a moment of excitement immediately consequent upon a strong appeal to the feelings against the evils of intemperance. They were signed after due deliberation. The cards were distributed to the people's evening service in the Church to take home with them, and twenty four hours afterwards they were taken up. It will thus be seen that each one who signed this pledge had ample time to consider. Should all those who signed this total abstinence pledge have the grace to persevere in the good resolutions that a giant stride forward shall have been made in the abstinence cause. Such a consummation would be a practical advance in the cause of genuine prohibition.

As the Montreal Gazette points out, having raised by taxation last year nearly two million dollars more than the Conservative government did in 1895-96, the Laurier ministry has what it calls a surplus of a million and a half. The economy of the process cannot be said to just stick out for public observation. Adding to the taxes does not make a people rich.

A CUBANER dispatch of Monday says: The Spanish steamer Carthagenas, from Aviles for Barcelona, proceeded after being in collision on Sept. 22nd, off Cape Villano with the British steamer Rhodania, from Hong Kong, for London. The latter vessel was sunk and her crew with the exception of one seaman and the captain were drowned.

ADVICE from Sakkim, Egypt, say that the only organized remnant of the Khalifa's army was defeated and its last strong hold, Gadaraff, captured on September 22nd, after three hours hard fighting when an Egyptian force numbering 1,300, under Commander Colonel Parsons, routed 3,000 dervishes of whom 500 were killed. Three Egyptian officers were wounded, 37 Egyptian soldiers killed and 69 wounded.

The Montreal Star of Friday last reports: "There was little that was new in the butter and cheese market this morning. Cheese sold up to 9 1/2c at Brookville yesterday, which would mean 9 1/2c laid down here, but buyers were not willing to concede this figure. A good deal of the business in spot is in the hands of the Montreal firm, which will not go above 9 1/2c. Eastern cheese is firmly held and 8 1/2c is quotable for colored. Butter holds steady, and for fresh creamery in boxes 20 1/2 to 21c is the range. Held goods will scarcely go above 20 1/2c, and eastern dairy ranges from 18 to 17 1/2c, while western has sold from 16c to 15 1/2c."

A CAIRO dispatch of the 25th says: General Kitchener, commanding the Anglo-Egyptian expedition, has returned to Omdurman, having established posts at Fashoda and on the Sobat River. The troops did not fight except with a dervish steamer on the way south, which was captured. The London Daily Telegraph's Cairo correspondent telegraphing on Monday, says Kitchener found the French at Fashoda. He notified Marchand that he had express instructions that the territory was British and that the French must retire and offered them passage to Cairo. Marchand declined to retire until ordered by his government; no fighting occurred. Marchand was given to understand that the British insisted upon their claims and the rest has been left to settle diplomatically between the respective governments. Kitchener hoisted the Union Jack and the Egyptian ensign, and left a garrison to protect the British flag.

The steamer Lake Winnipeg, of the Beaver Line Steamship Company, of Montreal, arrived at this port on Thursday afternoon last, and left for Liverpool on Saturday morning. She first made fast to Connelly's wharf, but in order to buy greater depth of water she moved to Peake's wharf Thursday night. The work of loading freight commenced Thursday night and all day Friday. The Lake Winnipeg is 255 feet, 2 inches long; 40 feet 2 inches beam, and 31 feet 2 inches deep. Her gross tonnage is 3329 and her net tonnage 2124. She has three decks and five holds, the lower one being the cold storage compartment. She is fitted up with powerful engines and in every way completely equipped as a first-class freight steamer. Her ordinary speed is about 14 knots. She was built in 1879 at Clyde Bank, Dumbarton, Scotland, by J. & F. Thompson of Glasgow. Her cargo on hand here included 4000 boxes cheese shipped by Dillon, Biffin, H. Haspard and Carvell Bros; 500 packages butter, B. Heavis, 9000 cases eggs, Anil Bros, and R. J. J. 800 sheep, E. Whately and E. Henderson; 75 cattle and 10 horses, E. Wheatly; 1000 sacks oats, Nelson Battenbury; 100 tons hay, Carvell Bros, and E. McKenna; 20 bbls apples, John Newson, Benj. Heavis and Charles Curtis.

BANARO Star Pointer, the two fastest harness horses in the world, Joe Patchen and John R. Gentry had a match race at the Roadville, Mass., track on Thursday last, and the Mark's horse won in two straight heats. A stiff wind blew down the stretch and kept the horses back, so the time was slow, the first heat being in 2:06 1/2, and the second in 2:04 1/2. The first heat Patchen, who was driven by his owner, C. W. Marks, of Chicago, had the pole, and at once went ahead, being a length in the lead at the quarter. The horses kept the same relative position until well by the half mile post; when Gentry began to close up and almost nailed Patchen at the three-quarter pole. From there to the finish the crowd saw a grand race, for Mr. Marks drove in the best style and managed to keep Gentry at his wheel until just as the finish, when the big bay almost caught him, the two horses going under the wire with only Patchen's black nose in front. The next heat, up to the half mile, was practically a repetition of the first, for Patchen went immediately to the front, and not only kept the lead, but was three lengths at the three-quarter pole. Again Gentry made a great start in the stretch, but was not fast enough for Patchen, and the latter won the heat and the race by a good length. Time—first heat, 2:06 1/2; second heat, 2:04 1/2.

BY R. A. SHARR.

Above the dim horizon line The sun darts up its latest beams; We linger till the vesper star In azure spaces gently gleams.

The roses that of dying day With softest glooms of evening blends We know not when the night draws on We know not when the daylight ends.

A peace, exceeding nature's calm, O'er all the lovely landscape broods The chapel walls dissolve in mists: We kneel in sylvan solitudes!

The altar, with its hidden Guest, The sole reality remains; A Heaven on earth, where God Himself— "The Word made flesh"—serenely reigns.

It is Just as Important

That you enrich and purify your blood in the Fall as in the Spring. At this time, owing to decaying vegetation, a low water level, and other causes, there are disease germs all about us, and a weak and debilitated system yields to attacks of malaria, fevers, etc. By purifying and enriching your blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla, you may build up your system to resist these dangers, as well as coughs, colds, pneumonia and the grip, which comes with colder weather. To be on the safe side, take Hood's Sarsaparilla now, and always be sure it is Hood's and not something else represented to be "just as good."

text, which another Hebrew, who spoke English imperfectly, translated as it fell from the master's lips. There is a colored preacher, of old standing; his roven hair is as black as his face, longer far than conventionally admits, though not out of keeping with the pitch of his voice, and the spasmodic explosion of his lungs. A smooth, oily, smiling talker of St. James' West End Mission comes with a splendid standard, escorted by a party of devout ladies, who bring their voices and their smiles to help him, while the orchestra which has marched with him to the Marble Arch will take the strains there again to march the conquering hero back in triumph, when his smiles shall have melted hard hearts, and his oily eloquence flowed with his honey. It may be interesting to note that the site of the old Tyburn, with its recollections of the hanging and quartering of old Catholic heroes, is just there, outside of the gate, hard by the scene of all these religious demonstrations.—Then there is the anti-Catholic zealot, who is being nagged and badgered by some innocent-looking young questioners; and I have a strong suspicion that they are Catholics and Irishmen to boot—a suspicion which becomes a certainty, on my finding one of them subsequently setting up the speaking stand for Mr. Moore and the Guild of Ransom. There is the talker about things in general, the funny man at the far end of the line, who can joke and blaspheme like Ingersoll, and has always a large crowd; but I observed, on one occasion at least, that he was having a hard time of it, from I could not see whom; only I did see that the Park policeman came to the rescue. Particularly striking is the Protestant monk of the John Street community, close by Park Street; he is dressed in cloak, cowl, scapular, triple cord round his waist, and a dark habit. The head of the community is the son of Abernethy, Lord Norton. Not to mention others there, we have our own preacher, a layman of the Guild of Ransom. It is Mr. Lister Drummond or Mr. Moore, who take the stand on alternate Sundays.

This Guild of Ransom, like the Catholic evidence lectures in the town hall, is under the general management of Mr. Vaughan, whom the Cardinal has commissioned with the charge of this apostleship. The Guild had some three sets of lectures going on in the parks, to wit, Hyde Park, Regent's and Victoria. The subject, which the lawyer, Mr. Drummond treated, was the Bible as a Rule of Faith; and he handled it extremely well, talking as laymen to laymen, and drawing copious illustrations from his profession of law. He talked with great deliberation and courtesy. Mr. Moore, whose profession I do not know, was treating, while I heard him, the popular fallacies about the Catholic Church; and the vivacity, point and vigor, with which he disposes of such ideas as persecution by the Church, the condemnation of every one outside of her pale, etc., were marred to my mind by only one drawback, that he spoke with such rapidity as scarcely to allow his excellent points time enough to come quite home. Both lecturers announced at the beginning, or when occasion required it, at plenty of time should be allowed for questions or objections at the end. Still, either of them might stop a moment to notice an intrusive remark from some irrepressible intellect, and that with perfect self-possession. Someone interrupted Mr. Moore, who answered with a word. The other rejoined that he could not stand there and listen to such a thing. "Then go elsewhere," resumed the lecturer, quietly taking up the broken thread of his discourse, as if no interruption had occurred. These two speakers and the cultured Protestant monk were totally spartan in style of language and thought, from the ordinary run of talkers round about them. It was a positive pleasure to listen to them. The monk spoke of faith on Sunday, of hope on another, and so forth. I was told he had fallen into this ministry by accident. He and another happened to be passing by, when one of the preachers attacked them. They stood and listened awhile, then one of them replied; the crowd gathered round; he continued speaking; the first talker tried to reclaim his auditory; but they would not come, and the monk started a course. It takes but a small looking crowd of men, standing shoulder to shoulder, to make a company of three hundred listeners. Certainly, at any given time on a Sunday afternoon, there must be several thousand listeners, massed in a dense line round the speaker. From the moment when the young man planted the little stand, inscribed "The Guild of Ransom," for Mr. Moore to mount, there formed a solid company of hearers, six feet deep, within thirty seconds; and in another minute or two they were nine deep. While I stood there I heard someone speaking behind me. I looked round, and saw the monk addressing a crowd fully as deep as our own. It was no longer the same speaker as on former Sundays; another of his community had taken his place. While the park is all alive with people taking their Sunday walk, various feelings, no doubt, bring individuals within the circle of the preachers. But I believe the religious sentiment, for or against the speaker, is the predominant motive, and that it is not merely a barren curiosity. When our lecturer made some statement about the means of salvation being within the Church, and not outside, a man behind me exclaimed in a subdued voice of great indignation: "Just hear him! Did you ever hear the like?" As I walked away with a young American, who had lately been received into the Church, I asked him whether he thought in America a man could stand up in a street, and gather at once a throng to hear about religion. He thought there was only one person who could do so, the Anarchist in Chicago, and his subject would not be religion; nor would his auditory be any respectable part of the populace. I will add only one more item. When I was passing rapidly by the open square in front of Great George's Hall in Liverpool, on a Wednesday night, I saw as many as three crowds round as many speakers, but I could not certify myself whether their subject was religion.

The Catholic evidence lectures were held after Easter in the town hall of West Kensington, every Wednesday night. Earlier courses had been held during the year in other quarters of the metropolis. After Easter the season rapidly became very warm; yet that did not seem to interfere with the attendance. At the very beginning there was something uncomfortably warm, that came in the shape of Protestant alliance, bigotry and obstruction. That, however, cooled down much before the season was over. The hall was hired at the expense of the Catholic management, and I fear the casual collection held each evening on the stairs did not relieve much the drain upon the management's resources. Everyone was free to attend. A large body of sympathizing Catholics were always on hand. They were more than sympathizing; they were proud of what was going on, and the regulation promulgated from time to time in the earlier part of the course, that no one should give expression to his sentiments by applause, proved quite ineffectual. An element of excitement was experienced in the solid body of Protestant Alliance men, who correspond to our American Protective Association, but with much more of the Bible and religion about them. They could hardly be kept in order; and I do not think the general chairmanship of Mr. J. S. Vaughan, or the refined habits of the different lecturers, had ever undergone the training to cope with such an element. In defiance of law and regulation they interrupted, and they unbecomingly themselves, in no measured style, of the Bible which fermented in their breasts, until, about the second or third evening, one old man who stood by the door, and could not repress the spirit that was bursting within him, nor could be repressed by all the orders or moral authority of the chairman, was summarily shoved out of the door by a more personal physical agency, and, for all I know, was kicked down the stairs outside. This was done with more active fiberian vigor than discretion. And it may have been the same avenging hero who moved across the hall where the solid phalanx of Protestant Alliance men sat, and suddenly made one of them spring to his feet in angry protest, crying to the Chair, "He is threatening me with a stick!" This may have been only a pretext for another interruption. But the evening was stormy, and I feared that, if any scuff took place, the quiet, moderate and inquiring Protestants might be frightened away altogether. One venerable-looking clergyman, by name Stirling, who had been very obstreperous on a previous evening, kept perfectly quiet this night, though evidently in touch with the Protestant Alliance men. When the lecture and questions were nearly over, he came forward and asked permission to say some words from the platform. His request was declined. He insisted, and something like an altercation was beginning between him and the Chair, when we observed that the finger of the clock pointed to the hour of closure, half-past ten, and we rose. On the next Wednesday evening, the chairman began by announcing that, whereas, the Rev. Mr. Stirling had in defiance of authority and regulation mounted the platform on the previous evening, and had spoken from there, he was henceforth excluded from the hall during the course. The Protestant Alliance appeared no more in a body. They continued to distribute their libelous leaflets at the door of the town hall on our evenings. And they started in the same place a series of "Reply Lectures," to which our speakers scarcely condescended even to allude.

Meanwhile the conferences proceeded well. Some eight hundred or a thousand persons, I should judge, were present at eight p. m. each evening when the lecture began, and this number was generally enlarged by several hundreds more before 10:30 p. m. The expository address, delivered by one speaker after another on successive nights, took an hour more or less. This was followed by the written questions, handed in there and then upon the subject treated, and afterwards, if any time remained, the oral questions were in order. But, except on one night in my experience, there never was time for viva voce questions; and then, when there was, none were presented, and we adjourned a few minutes before the time. The answering of many questions by the priests on the platform naturally consumed much time. They tried to be as succinct as possible, and to escape the inconvenience which they absolutely prohibited on the part of persons in the auditory, that of taking occasion to deliver little subsidiary lectures. The impression I received from the whole enterprise was most favorable; and, in justice to be said, not the least so to the deep religious sentiment which evidently stirs the English mind and heart. The Catholic body seems to be much gratified; and now there is more reason than ever for a sense of gratification, when the whole Anglican Establishment is seen to be hanging on with its ritualistic tendencies and feigns to the minute forms and ceremonies of the Catholic liturgy; when a parliament of laymen is trying to rise to the occasion, and exercise its lofty papal powers of spiritual jurisdiction over what its infallibility declares to be the lawless of a Church of Rome; and when even the lowest churchman, as in Dr. Ryle, bishop of Liverpool, cannot offer to stir against this invasion of Romanism. In fact, only two alternatives stare all parties in the face. They must either let clergy and lay have their way with mimic Mass, adoration of the Cross, vestments, lights, incense, etc.; or else they must stand by and witness a wholesale exodus from the Anglican Establishment of the flower of both laity and clergy. The Catholic Church, says Cardinal Vaughan, never stood so high in England, as she does today.

Queen Victoria has approved of the grant of a good service pension to Father R. Brindle, senior chaplain to the forces, and at present serving with the expedition to Khartoum. Many years have passed since any similar reward was conferred upon a chaplain; but perhaps few have ever been more worthily bestowed upon either combatant or non-combatant officer. Indeed, Father Brindle can hardly be described as a non-combatant, having a record of war service in the official army list of which many a general officer would be proud, and the present commander-in-chief has described him as the finest soldier-beaver he ever knew. He has the British medal and the Khedive's bronze star for services with the Egyptian expeditionary force of 1882, and clasps for the later battles of El Teb and Tamai, in the Eastern Sudan, and was mentioned in despatches for his zeal and devotion in connection with these events. He was also with Lord Wolseley's Nile expedition of 1884-85, with the frontier field force at the battle of Ginnis a year later, and with Sir Herbert Kitchener's expedition to Dongola in 1896, being mentioned in despatches in each case, as well as receiving other honors. Last year he again accompanied General Kitchener's force, and received special mention in despatches after the battle of the Atbara.

A lover's youth had quarreled with his ladylove, and with bitter, angry words they parted, and he decided that life was no longer worth living. Abruptly turning into a barber's, he sat in a vacant chair and calmly requested the barber to cut his throat.
The barber acquiesced, and, tucking the cloth around his neck, fixed the head rest so that the customer's chin was well elevated. Then drawing a cut-throat razor from the counter, he waited and holding it firmly between his finger and thumb, he drew the pin quickly across the neck of the man.
Immediately, with a scream worthy of a red Indian, the apparition leaped from the chair, shouting, "Sparely, surely you have not done it?" "Oh, no, sir," said the barber "Sit down again, sir. I've only marked it out!"
