CHAPTER I.

The Old House by the Mill.

Mid the New England hills, and beneath the shadow of their dim old woods, is a running brook, whose deep waters were not always as merry and frolicsome as now; for years before our story opens, pent up and impeded in their course they dashed angrily against their prison walls, and turning the creaking wheel of an old saw mill, with a sullen, rebellious roar. The mill has gone to decay, and the sturdy men who fed it with the giant oaks of the forest, are sleeping quietly in the village graveyard. The waters of the mill-pond, too, relieved from their confinement, leap gaily over the ruined dam, tossing for a moment in wanton glee their locks of snow-white foam, and then, flowing on, half fearfully as it were, through the deep gorge overhung with the hemlock and the pine, where the shadows of twilight ever lie, and where the rocks from gloomily down upon the stream below, which, emerging from the darkness, loses itself in the waters of the gracefully winding Chicopee, and leaves far behind the moss-covered walls of what is familiarly known as the "Old house by the Mill."

'Tis a huge, old-fashioned building, distant nearly a mile from the public highway, and surrounded so thickly by forest trees that the bright sunlight, dancing merrily midst the rustling leaves above, falls but seldom on the time-stained walls of dark gray stone, where the damp and dews of more than a century have fallen, and where now the green moss clings with a loving grasp, as if 'twere its rightful resting-place. When the thunders of the Revolution shook the hills of the Bay State, and the royal banner floated in the evening breeze, the house was owned by an old Englishman, who, loyal to his king and country, denounced as rebels the followers of Washington. Against these however, he would not raise his hand; for among them were many long-armed friends, who had gathered with him round the festal board; so he chose the only remaining alternative, and went back to his native country, cherishing the hope that he should one day return to the home he loved so well, and listen again to the musical flow of the water-brook, which could be distinctly heard from the door of the mansion. But his wish was vain, for when at last America was free, and the British troops recalled, he slept beneath the sod of England, and the old house was for many years deserted. The Englishman had been greatly beloved, and his property was unmolested, while the weeds and grass grew tall and rank in the garden beds, and the birds of heaven built their nests beneath the projecting roof, or held a holiday in the gloomy, silent rooms.

As time passed on, however, and no one appeared to dispute their rights, different families occupied the house at intervals, until at last, when nearly fifty years had elapsed, news was one day received that Madam Conway, a granddaughter of the old Englishman, having met with reverses at home, had determined to emigrate to the New World, and, remembering the "House by the Mill," of which she had heard so much, she wished to know if peaceable possession of it would be allowed her, in case she decided upon removing thither, and making it her future home. To this plan no objection was made, for the aged people of Hillsdale still cherished the memory of the hospitable old man, whose locks were grey while they were yet but children, and the younger portion of the community hoped for a renewal of the gaieties which they had heard were once so common at the old stone house.

But in this they were disappointed for Madam Conway was a proud, unsocial woman, desiring no acquaintance whatever with her neighbors, who, after many ineffectual attempts at something like friendly intercourse concluded to leave her entirely alone, and contented themselves with watching the progress of matters at "Mill Farm," as she designated the place, which soon began to show visible marks of improvement. The Englishman is a man of taste, and Madam Conway's first work was an attempt to restore the grounds to something of their former beauty. The yard and garden were cleared of weeds; the walks and flower-beds laid out with care, and then the neighbors looked to see her cut away a few of the multitude of trees which had sprung up around her home. But this she had no intention of doing. "They shut her out," she said, "from the prying eyes of the vulgar, and she would rather it should be so." So the trees remained, throwing their long shadows upon the high, narrow windows, and into the large, square rooms, where the morning light and the rosy heat seldom found entrance, and which seemed like so many cold, silent caverns, with their old-fashioned massive furniture, their stately lady, who moved ever with the same measured tread, speaking always softly and low to the household servants, who, having been trained in her service, had followed her across the sea.

From these the neighbors learned that Madam Conway had in London a married daughter, Mrs. Miller; that old Hagar Warren, the strange-looking woman, who more than any one else, shared her mistress's confidence, had grown up in the family, receiving a very good education, and had nursed their young mistress, Miss Margaret, which, of course, entitled her to more than was usually bestowed upon menials like her; that Madam Conway was very aristocratic, very proud of her high English blood; that, though she lived alone, she attended strictly to all the formalities of high life, dressed each day with the utmost precision for her solitary dinner, dining from off a service of solid silver, and presiding with great dignity in her straight, high-backed chair. She was fond, too, of the ruby wine, and her cellar was stored with the choicest liquors, some of which she had brought with her from home, while others, it was said, had belonged to her grandfather, and for half a century had remained unseen and unmolested, while the cobwebs of time had woven around them a misty covering, making them still more valuable to the lady, who knew full well how age improved such things.

Regularly each day she rode in her ponderous carriage, sometimes alone, and sometimes accompanied by Hester, the daughter of old Hagar, a handsome, intelligent-looking girl, who, after two or three years of comparative idleness at Mill Farm, went to Meriden, Connecticut, as seamstress in a family which had advertised for such a person. With her departed the only life of the house, and during the following year there ensued a monotonous quiet, which was broken at last for Hagar by the announcement that her daughter's young mistress had died four months before, and the husband, a grey-haired, elderly man, had proved conclusively that he was in his dotage by talking of marriage to Hester, who, ere the letter reached her mother, would probably be the third bride of one whose reputed wealth was the only possible inducement to a girl like Hester Warren.

With an immense degree of satisfaction Hagar read the letter through, exulting that fortune had favored her at last. Possessed of many sterling qualities, Hagar Warren had one glaring fault which had embittered her whole life. Why others were rich while she was poor she could not understand, and her heart rebelled at the fate which had made her what she was. But Hester would be wealthy—nay, would one day rival the haughty Mrs. Miller across the water, who had been her playmate; there was comfort in that, and she wrote to her daughter expressing her entire approbation, and hinting vaguely of the possibility that she herself might some time cease to be a servant, and help to do the honors of Mr. Hamilton's house! To this there came no reply, and Hagar was thinking seriously of making a visit to Meriden when one rainy autumnal night, nearly a year after Hester's marriage, there came another letter sealed with black. With a sad foreboding Hagar opened it, and read that Mr. Hamilton had failed; that his house and farm were sold, and that he, overwhelmed with mortification both at his failure and the opposition of his friends to his last marriage, had died suddenly, leaving Hester with no home in the wide world unless Madam Conway received her again into her family.

"Just my luck!" was Hagar's mental comment, as she finished reading the letter, and carried it to her mistress, who had always liked Hester, and who readily consented to give her a home, provided she put on no airs from having been for a time the wife of a reputed wealthy man.

"Mustn't put on airs!" muttered Hagar, as she left the room. "Just as if airs wasn't for anybody but high goods!" And with the canker worm of envy at her heart, she wrote to Hester, who came immediately; and Hagar, when she heard her tell the story of her wrongs—how her husband's sister, indignant at his marriage with a sewing girl, had removed from him the children, one a step-child and one his own; and how of all his vast fortune there was not left for her a penny—experienced again the old bitterness of feeling, and murmured that fate should thus deal with her and hers.

With the next day's mail there came to Madam Conway a letter, bearing a foreign postmark, and bringing the sad news that her son-in-law had been lost in a storm, while crossing the English Channel, and that her daughter Margaret, utterly crushed and heart-broken, would sail immediately for America, where she wished only to lay her weary head upon her mother's bosom and die.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

That it is not only what one has to wear, but how it is worn, not only what furniture there is in a house, but how the house is kept, that makes a person or a house look attractive or unattractive, is a truism. And yet how often we seem to forget this fact. We had been calling at a lovely new home the other day. The happy bride had proudly shown us all over it. She is decidedly well to do, and the furniture was beautiful. Dull, rich mahogany in the fine old lines, marvelously grained Circassian walnut, brass beds of exquisite dull finish and chastest of design, fragile gold and white china, heavy silver in the severe antique pattern, beautiful pictures and wonderful oriental rugs—indeed, everything that the heart of man, or rather of woman, could desire, seemed to be in that house.

As we walked towards home my companion sighed enviously. "Wasn't it lovely? Oh, it just makes me sick to go into my house after that." A vision of her home came before my eyes. The furnishings are good, though not expensive. The house is pleasant and has fine possibilities, and yet it is a distinctly unattractive home—far more unattractive than it has any reason for being. For the mistress of the house ignores the truism that it is not only what is in a home but how it is kept that makes it pleasing or not. Take her bedroom, for instance. With its pretty white beds, its well built oak dresser, its dainty cretonne hangings and comfortable wicker chairs, it would be a very pleasant room if it were kept perfectly clean and in good order.

But when I last saw it, the hangings were awry, the dresser was littered and one drawer pulled a little way out, the covers on the wicker chairs were soiled, the beds were carelessly made and one of them was marred by a long scratch which might have been easily remedied by a bit of enamel. Naturally the effect was not pleasing. She evidently attributes the unattractive aspect to the lack of fine furniture. But if she had the finest furniture, the most expensive mahogany or Circassian walnut, and kept the room so carelessly, and was so neglectful of details as she now is, I maintain that the effect would still be far from pleasing.

A certain young married woman envies her girl friends their pretty clothes and sometimes feels aggrieved because she cannot have two suits a year and all the other dainty costumes and accessories that they buy for themselves. Apparently she is very ambitious to look well. And yet she often goes about the house without a collar or belt, and with a gown which has been simply thrown on. The finest clothes worn in this way would be unattractive. The cheapest machine made housegown, if it is of a becoming make and color, and carefully and neatly put on, would look better.

We may not all have beautiful furnishings or expensive clothes. But we may all wear our clothes and keep our homes in a way that shall give us their full value in attractiveness. Mahogany, dirty, scratched and in disorder, is not so attractive as oak kept neat and orderly and unmarred. A silk gown carelessly put on, and worn without belt or collar, is far less effective than a gingham dress in proper condition.

The woman who not only acknowledges these truisms, but lives them, is practically sure of an attractive person and a pleasing home.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong,
Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and it is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

Borax water will restore the gloss to sauteen in washing.

Use warm water to sprinkle starched clothes and the effect will be twice as satisfactory.

To make glassware clear and sparkling add a bit of bluing to the soapsuds when washing.

A painter's brush may be used to dislodge dust from cracks and crevices about the house.

Try removing mildew by soaking in a weak solution of chloride of lime, then rinsing in cold water.

To remove stains of blood soak them in cold water, then wash in warm soapy water and finish by boiling.

When apples have to be cored, but served whole, it is advisable to core before peeling them, as they are then less liable to break.

By slipping stiff collars into a glass tumbler after they are ironed and allowing them to thoroughly dry they can be made to keep their shape.

Purchase two and one-quarter yards of oilcloth; tack it on the screen door, and you have an excellent storm door.

When your thread persists in knotting unthread your needle and thread it from the other end. It will cease to trouble you.

Stale macarons, which can be bought cheap at the baker's, make the tastiest addition to puddings and custards if pulverized and sprinkled over the top.

To remove medicine stains from silver, rub them with a piece of flannel rag, that has been dipped in sulphuric acid, and then wash the acid off with soapsuds.

Before washing any piece of willow furniture, brush it thoroughly, so as to remove every particle of dust. Otherwise no amount of washing will get the furniture clean.

Should you spill hot fat on the floor or a wooden table, pour cold water upon it at once. It can then be more easily scraped off, not having had time to sink into the wood.

Elasticity is restored to rubber by soaking it in one part ammonia and two parts clear water until the desired results are obtained. This is specially true in the case of rings of other articles that have become stiff and brittle.

There are many ways of getting rid of mice; but try this: When mice trouble you, hunt out their entrances to pantry or cupboard and plaster them with a mixture of melted (just soft) laundry soap and red pepper. They will not come again.

Take old fruit jar rubbers, break 'em into bits and hold over a hot fire on a shovel until it "blubbers"; then, with a broad bladed knife, spread quickly over the leak. Wet your finger and rub till smooth. I have needed hot-water bottles the same way.

An old teapot is one of the best things to use for putting paraffine on 'ellies or preserves. Place the teapot into which you have put the paraffine on the stove, and when melted pour over the jelly. Stand the teapot away and it is ready for future use.

To clean hair brushes use soda dissolved in cold water, as hot water and soap very often soften the bristles and rubbing completes their destruction. Avoid setting the brushes near the fire or in the hot sun to dry, as this causes the bristles to lose their straightness; shake them well and dry in the fresh air.

An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to house-keeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

9167—A COSTUME IN GOOD TASTE AND STYLE.

Costume for Misses and Small Women.

(With or Without Tuckers.)

Blue silk voile was used for this model with bands of embroidery for decoration. It is equally effective in brown cashmere with pipings of green satin. The waist shows the new deep armcye, and is finished with a kimono sleeve, and worn with or without the long sleeve tucker. A round yoke piece skirt has plaits at the side seams. The costume may be finished in high or normal waistline. The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 1 1/2 yards of 27 inch material for the tucker, and 5 yards of 36 inch material for the dress for a 16 year size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Suitable materials for any of these patterns can be procured from AYKIE & SONS, Ltd. Samples on request. Mention pattern number. Mail orders promptly attended to.

9170—A Dainty GARMENT FOR THE HOUR OF REST.

Ladies' Dressing or House Sack.

White cotton crepe with bandings of blue and white embroidery was used for this design. The design is finished with closing and deep shoulder plaits. The sleeve is cut in one with the body portions. The fulness at the waistline may be held in place by a belt or ribbon, if the shirring is not desired. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 4 1/4 yards of 36 inch material for the 38 inch size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

BOVRIL IS ALL BEEF.

Questions we are often asked.

Q.—What is the sediment at the bottom of a cup of Bovril?

A.—That is a valuable portion of the nourishment, and should never be left.

Q.—Are you serious when you say that Bovril is more nourishing than ordinary Meat Extract or Home-made Beef Tea?

A.—Certainly! and we have for years offered large rewards to anyone who can prove the contrary.

Q.—But can you prove your statement!

A.—Yes—from the pen of Baron Liebig himself, who told the world that the man who managed to get the nourishing, as well as the stimulating properties of Beef in a liquid form, would produce something far better than Liebig's Extract, and would be a public benefactor.

Q.—And you have done this?

A.—Yes. By a special process, the entire nutritious constituents of prime ox beef are separately treated, pulverized and added to specially-prepared Meat Extract, and that is Bovril.

Don't experiment with artificial imitations of dubious quality, which are cheap at any price when such a tried and proven nutritious food-beverage "made in England" is within your reach.

Sir Courtney Ilbert's Letter.

Yesterday the Government papers were in great fetter. They were apparently under the impression that they had caught a great black whale. It now turns out to be an absurdly small sprat. We expressed satisfaction that they had been able to extract a crumb of comfort from the letter of Sir Courtney P. Ilbert. It must, however, have been a very small measure of satisfaction. But the ridiculous outcome of it on the part of the protagonists of the Reid gifts, was the inquiry: Where is Bond now? We assume that Sir Robert is where he has been all the time, viz., on a strong and unshakable foundation in opposing the acceptance of these gifts. If anything could be more ridiculous, it is the suggestion that Sir Robert should withdraw his opposition and express regret for the fight that he put up against the acceptance of them. We take it that he will not comply with these modest requests. First, because his stand was taken in the interest of the country; second, because the country is well satisfied with the stand he took; and third, there is no reason advanced or suggestion made in the letter under consideration why he should do so. On the contrary, Sir Courtney shows that it was perfectly proper for Sir Robert to oppose the acceptance, should he deem it in the public interest to do so. He lays down: "Where such gifts have to be maintained at the public expense, the propriety of receiving them can be discussed on the vote for the purpose. But, so far as I remember, the propriety, on constitutional grounds, of accepting such gifts without the previous consent of Parliament has never been suggested. The expediency, in any particular case, of laying the state or the government of the time under an obligation to a particular person or body of persons is not a constitutional but a political question."

It will be noted that Sir Courtney, in reference to the constitutional aspects, is speaking from memory. He says, "so far as I remember." Now the memory of the best of men at times is treacherous, and especially that of old men like Sir Courtney Ilbert. If he had refreshed his memory by a reference to authorities, he would have found that objections had been taken not alone on grounds of policy but also on constitutional grounds, and not alone to gifts for the maintenance of armed force but to gifts of every kind. Moreover, these objections were in the mind of Sir Robert Bond who quoted them on February 29th. Here are the references used. This is what Richard Brinsley Sheridan said in the House of Commons:—

"There can be no true sanctity for public liberty except on the ground that the Crown can neither take nor use property to any public purpose without the vote of Parliament. It was not the boasted liberty of Englishmen merely that property was secured to them, but that no property, however it might come into the hands of the Crown, could be applied to any possible purpose, except such as had been previously authorized by Parliament; and that people cannot by any act of indiscreet benevolence present their gifts to the Crown except through the channel of Parliament. Would the House see the great and strong fence of all their liberties, the power of the purse, invaded in the slightest manner; and would they say that we had any sensible, practicable security for any one privilege, if the Crown had resources independent of the people."

It will be observed that Mr. Sheridan objects on broad constitutional grounds to gifts to the Crown, irrespective of the purpose to which they are to be applied.

Now take the objections of the great Commoner, Charles Fox. They are based on constitutional grounds and directed against every gift.

"The great British Statesman Fox said: 'I look upon every gift as an injury to the Constitution.' 'Suppose,' he added, 'that the House of Lords were to offer out of their private pockets to contribute to the exigencies of His Majesty's Government, would you not spurn the proposal as an encroachment upon your rights?'

And it will not be unenlightening to borrow light from the legal luminary, Lord Coke, viz.:—

"Contributions never can be voluntary, some give through pride, others through fear, and some for expectation of titles or other personal interest."

Now there are some well established guiding principles in reference to constitutional conventions, as in regard to other rules and understandings, viz., that when the reason for a convention has ceased, the rule itself falls, and that Parliament like other authorities will not bother about trifles. It is true that gifts of the nature alluded to by Sir Courtney Ilbert have been accepted, so long as they were comparatively trifling compared with the greatness of the State which received them and were not a menace to the liberty of the subject or prejudicial to the State. The long list of statutes against benevolence, the great fights that were put up to preserve the rights of Parliament to be the exclusive channel of gifts to the Crown show how strenuously these matters were fought out, and that the rule has only been relaxed so long as the menace is absent. The modern instances cited by Sir Courtney are by no means analogous to the case of the local gifts we are considering. None of the donors stand to Great Britain in the relation that the Reid Newfoundland stand to Newfoundland.

It is absolutely impossible to find a parallel. The best that is possible is to imagine one. Let us for a moment suppose all the railways in the British Isles state owned and leased to a gigantic trust, who also controlled most of the coastal steam service. With such a mighty industrial Czarism, overshadowing in stature the State itself, with intimate contractual relations to it, which demanded that the Czarism be kept at arm's length and watched with alertness, and which wielded an immense influence throughout the length and breadth of the land, is it possible that any People's Government would accept a gift from such a mighty Colossus, which placed it under obligation, and which would have a tendency to tie its hands in looking after the Czarism in the people's interests? Can it be imagined that an Asquith Government would stoop so low? Can it be imagined that the High Court of Parliament would so forget its dignity and traditions, or would not the spirit which animated it in Hampden's time spring to life against it and brook no such infringement of its rights?

Just as there was a reason for the stand taken of old against benevolences in England, so to-day a reason exists for the non-acceptance of gifts from the Railway Contractors. The acceptance of gifts in the old days in England was a menace to the people's rights, so to-day in Newfoundland the acceptance of gifts from the Railway Contractors by the Government is a menace to public interests. The interests of the people demand that the Government shall not place themselves under obligation to the Railway Contractors, who are lessees of interests over which the Government is the People's Trustee, and whose duty it is to be ever ready to look after the people's rights in these interests.

Therefore it is that we declare that the sting of Sir Courtney's letter is in its tail, for it implies clearly that Sir Robert Bond was within his province in making a big issue of the receiving of gifts in a particular case, from particular persons, and thus creating an obligation which cannot exist in the true interest of the people.

of the "receipt by the Crown, without the previous consent of Parliament, of gifts for artistic, scientific or philanthropic purposes, or for purposes of general utility."

His comment on this matter is as follows:—

"Where such gifts have to be maintained at the public expense, the propriety of receiving them can be discussed on the vote for the purpose. But, so far as I remember, the propriety, on constitutional grounds, of accepting such gifts without the previous consent of Parliament has never been suggested. The expediency, in any particular case, of laying the state or the government of the time under an obligation to a particular person or body of persons is not a constitutional but a political question."

It will be noted that Sir Courtney, in reference to the constitutional aspects, is speaking from memory. He says, "so far as I remember." Now the memory of the best of men at times is treacherous, and especially that of old men like Sir Courtney Ilbert. If he had refreshed his memory by a reference to authorities, he would have found that objections had been taken not alone on grounds of policy but also on constitutional grounds, and not alone to gifts for the maintenance of armed force but to gifts of every kind. Moreover, these objections were in the mind of Sir Robert Bond who quoted them on February 29th. Here are the references used. This is what Richard Brinsley Sheridan said in the House of Commons:—

"There can be no true sanctity for public liberty except on the ground that the Crown can neither take nor use property to any public purpose without the vote of Parliament. Would the House see the great and strong fence of all their liberties, the power of the purse, invaded in the slightest manner; and would they say that we had any sensible, practicable security for any one privilege, if the Crown had resources independent of the people."

It will be observed that Mr. Sheridan objects on broad constitutional grounds to gifts to the Crown, irrespective of the purpose to which they are to be applied.

Another M GONE TO BO

The Schooner C the Ice. Crew Bonaventure Yesterday.

The sealer Bonaventure brought report yesterday afternoon Capt. S. Clair and the following men—the crew of the schr. Corona:—John Neilson, mate; T. Mullowney, cooks, and James Walsh, Wm. Brown and C. Taylor.

On arrival the Telegram interviewed Mate Neilson and received the following particulars of the loss of the ship. The Corona left Barbadoes on February 6th for St. John's in ballast and had fine weather with the trade winds up to the time the Gulf Stream was encountered, about the 1st of March, when the vessel experienced E. winds and variable weather, a high sea being an embarrassing feature. This weather lasted for 6 days, and only a forefall and mainsail could be carried. After this a period of fair weather prevailed, and making in for the land the vessel met the heavy Arctic Ice 45 miles N. E. by N. of Cape Race on the 13th March. The ship drove through it for about an hour, and as there was no water visible the captain deemed it prudent to make his way out, and as the ice was loose he succeeded in doing so, and the Corona was headed west through open water, sailing in that direction for a day and night with a fresh breeze. Then the vessel, which had met some more loose ice, hove to and reached back and forth to await the clearing of the coast to get along. She was then sailing between Cape Pine and St. Mary's, when the wind veered to the N. W., the coast cleared and the ship stood in for Cape Race at 3 p.m. on the 20th, and passed that point with a stiff breeze blowing from the south. The ship made good time down the shore and was 20 miles of Cape Spear when a gale sprung from the S. E., the ship had to work off the land, and just before daylight the wind chopped off from the N. W. and the ship drove to the S. E. A night the wind blew with hurricane force and a tremendous sea which ran often played over the vessel, which was wallowed and strained in it to such an extent that it was feared she would founder. About 3 a.m. on the 21st of March one very heavy wave struck the Corona under the quarter and took the rudder completely out of the pintles, which were bent up as if they were made of wire instead of stout iron. The ship was then completely at the mercy of the waves, became unmanageable and had to be hove to.

SHIPS DISCHARGING.—Both the Bellaventure and Bonaventure commenced discharging their seals at Job's Southside premises to-day and will finish discharging this evening.

70-NIGHTS LECTURE.—"Compensations of Outport Life" is the subject of the lecture to be delivered in the B. I. S. Rooms to-night by Mr. P. K. Devine. As the speaker is well familiar with his subject, a pleasant evening is in store.

AWAITING CHAINS.—The S. S. Southfield is now ready for sea but is awaiting to get new anchors and chains to replace those she lost on the Grand Banks. The steamer will first proceed to Louisburg for bunker coal.

Worshippers at the R. C. Cathedral took possession of the pews in the new galleries, erected in the transepts, at last night's service. There are 48 pews in the galleries and it was thought at first that this would satisfy all applicants for seats, but there were over 400 people looking for pews.

Don't miss the Nid. Highlanders "At Home" in the British Hall, on April 12th, at 8 p.m. Tickets can be had from S. H. Parsons' Studio; Jas. Baird Ltd.; Marshall Bros. West End Store, and Non. Com. Officers, Gen's. $1.00; Lady's, 50c. Sit. 25c.

A SPLENDID STORE.—Mr. Joseph Roper recently had his Jewellery store beautifully painted and decorated. It has been fitted with new metallic ceilings of a very artistic pattern, and new lights, and is one of the brightest and neatest stores of its kind along Water Street.

Mr. James Moriarty, a resident of the foot of Windsor Lake, and a well known and respected farmer, died at his residence there this morning after a lengthy illness. Mr. Moriarty was upwards of 80 years of age, and leaves one daughter, Mrs. Buckle, to mourn him.

Another Merchantman GONE TO BOTTOM OF SEA

The Schooner Corona Crushed in the Ice. Crew Taken Off by the Bonaventure and Landed Here Yesterday.

The sealer Bonaventure brought to port yesterday afternoon, Capt. St. Clair and the following men—the crew of the schr. Corona—John Neilson, mate; T. Mullahey, cook; and James Walsh, Wm. Brown and C. Taylor.

On arrival the Telegram interviewed Mate Neilson and received the following particulars of the loss of the ship. The Corona left Barbadoes on February 6th for St. John's in ballast and had fine weather with the trade winds up to the time the Gulf Stream was encountered, about the 1st of March, when the vessel experienced E winds and variable weather, a high sea being an embarrassing feature. This weather lasted for 6 days, and only a foresail and mainsail could be carried. After this a period of fair weather prevailed, and making in for the land the vessel met the heavy Arctic ice 45 miles N. E. by N. of Cape Race on the 13th March. The ship drove through it for about an hour, and as there was no water visible the captain deemed it prudent to make his way out, and as the ice was loose he succeeded in doing so, and the Corona was headed west through open water, sailing in that direction for a day and night with a fresh breeze. Then the vessel, which had met some more loose ice, hove to and reached back and forth to await the clearing of the coast to get along. She was then sailing between Cape Pine and St. Mary's, when the wind veered to the N. W., the coast cleared and the ship stood in for Cape Race at 3 a.m. on the 20th, and passed that point with a stiff breeze blowing from the south. The ship made good time down the shore and was 30 miles off Cape Spear when a gale sprung up from the S. E., the ship had to work off the land, and just before daylight the wind chopped off from the N. W., and the ship drove to the S. E. At night the wind blew with hurricane force and a tremendous sea which ran often played over the vessel, which wallowed and strained in it to such an extent that it was feared she would founder. About 3 a.m. on the 21st of March one very heavy wave struck the Corona under the quarter and took the rudder completely out of the pintles, which were bent up as if they were made of wire instead of stout iron. The ship was then completely at the mercy of the waves, became unmanageable and had to hove to up the distress signals "N. C.," which translated means "Ship in distress, requires help." An answering signal came from the steamer, which was a long distance away, and to slew around she had to steam out to the loose ice. Her lights were seen approaching Saturday night, and at 11 o'clock she ranged up about 3 miles away from the Corona and remained until daylight Sunday last, when two of the crew came on board and were informed by Capt. St. Clair of the predicament of his vessel and that he and his crew wished to abandon her and be taken home to St. John's. The men had all their clothing and effects on deck and quickly made the transfer to the Bonaventure, where they were shown every kindness and attention by Capt. Parsons and his crew of sealers. They were only about twenty minutes on board when the ice went aboard and the Corona sunk into the depths, going down stern first. The men could not but thank Providence for their timely rescue by the Bonaventure, for had not that ship so opportunely arrived on the scene there was nothing for them but to take to the ice with their boats, with very little food and no fuel, and with the prospect before them of days and nights of misery, exposure and starvation and possibly death amidst the Arctic fices. All the crew are well and are glad to be once more ashore with their friends at home.

Cascarets for Sick, Sour Stomach.

Gently but thoroughly cleanse and regulate your Stomach, Liver and Bowels while you sleep.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gasses; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended forever. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10 cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Rifle Club Annual

At the Board of Trade rooms last evening the annual meeting of the Rifle Association was held. Following the presentation and adoption of the customary reports, the various trophies won during the past season were distributed. The election of officers took place and resulted in the old Executive being returned to office, viz.: Captain, J. W. Morris; Vice-Capt. T. McNeil; Secretary, W. H. Rennie; Treasurer, W. J. Higgins; Committee—J. F. Murphy, L. C. Mews, E. S. Ayre, E. M. MacNab, R. G. Winter and N. Rice. The range will likely be ready for shooting next month, and an enjoyable season is anticipated. A feature of this year's programme will be figure shooting, now so popular throughout the Colonies. Empire Day shoot, which was formerly contested at 200, 500 and 600 yards, will this year be competed under the new arrangement of figure shooting. The presentation of the police medal, which has been won four years in succession by Const. P. O'Neill, also took place.

The Days of Snobbery.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—In reading the half column of nonsense contributed to the pages of the Chronicle by one "Machinist," I could not help noting the compliment paid to your correspondent wherein he would "remind Sir Robert that the day of snobbery is dead in this country."

I do not know if "Machinist" is aware of the fact that to my humble self belongs the honor of choking off the last attempt of snobbery ever tried in this country. I think he may be able to recall to memory the satisfaction I had to administer to Mr. P. T. McGrath in the early part of the winter. If "Machinist" does not remember he may ask the first man he meets on the street, and I think he may hear the story. Mr. McGrath will be the very last of the race of snobs to have been seen in this town. I am pleased to know that "Machinist" has remarked the demise of snobbery. I do not know if Sir Robert will be at all surprised by your message, "Machinist," for I believe he is a careful reader of the papers.

Thanking you for anticipated space, Mr. Editor.

I remain, yours truly,
ARTHUR ENGLISH.

During the fierce gale of wind that raged on Saturday night the schooner Louisa Grace, owned by Mr. John Butt, dragged her anchors and drifted out the harbor near the "bar" where she held ground and is now waiting to be towed in.

At Montreal, on March 1st, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Giles Kennedy, of Harbor Grace.

Still another case of scarlet fever was reported by the doctor on Saturday and the house was placarded at once.

Mr. Dugald Munn returned from St. John's on Saturday night to spend Sunday with his family.

Mr. L. Williams, Supt. U. Towns Electric Co., who was in town last week on business, returned to his home at Carboner by Saturday night's train.

Mrs. George Winsor, of Carboner, died at that town on Friday last. Her funeral took place on Sunday from the residence of Mr. John C. Foote.

The Rev. A. W. Lewis, formerly of St. Andrew's Church here, and now of Millinocket, Maine, U. S. A., writing to a friend, says the family are all well and he and Mrs. Lewis are pleased with their work there. The many friends of the rev. gentleman here and elsewhere will be pleased to hear from him.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Brien intend leaving next week for their new home in Vancouver, British Columbia. They will take with them the best wishes of their many friends for a quick passage and much success in that rich country.

A small schooner owned by a man named Moores, of the North Shore, and anchored here this winter, capsized during Saturday night's high wind and filled with water opposite Noad Street.

Mrs. James D. Munn, of Woodbine Cottage, is receiving the congratulations of her many friends to-day on having reached another milestone along life's journey. We add our best wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Latest Sealing News. THE BELL and BON HOME. Second and Third Arrival From the Front—The Worst Reports for Many Years.

After an interval of four days the second arrival from the sealfishery was witnessed yesterday afternoon when the S. S. Bonaventure, Capt. J. Parsons, steamed round the heads. As the ship entered the Narrows hundreds of people thronged the various waterfront premises and nearest viewpoints eager to catch a glimpse of her and hear her report.
The Bonaventure hails for 5,000 seals, all of which are young harps. She left here March 14th in company with the rest of the steel fleet and taking an inside cut struck the first patch of 100 whitecoats northwest of the Gros Islands the day following. After that the 'Bon' headed to the eastward. The Florizel and Bellaventure which were with her taking a southerly cruise. When about 60 miles to the eastward of Cape Freels a small patch of whitecoats were struck. This was early on the 16th. The crew were quickly on the ice—began the slaughter and 1,200 seals were stowed below. The ship then steamed towards the Funk Islands and remained in that vicinity for several days picking up scattered seals and scoured the ocean but could not succeed in finding the main patch. On March 24th while butting through the floe the Bonaventure lost a blade of her propeller by coming in contact with a 'growler.' The same day the Bellaventure met with a similar mishap, losing two blades, and the 'Bon' had to remain with her the whole spring fearing assistance. On Friday last when about 200 miles to the eastward of St. John's the ship bore up for home. The ice was then loosening and breaking up and the weather, the captain reports, very bad. On Sunday, homeward bound, the ship was delayed by dense fog and on that evening 200 miles off this port the schooner Corona was sighted in a disabled condition and about to be abandoned. The Bonaventure bore down on her in answer to the distress signals of the vessel, took off the crew of six men, and a half hour after the Corona sunk. There is little doubt but that it was fortunate for the Corona's crew the Bonaventure came along else another tale of the sea would have to be told.
The Bonaventure brought the following reports:—
Florizel 5,000
Adventure 18,000
Beothic 32,000
Nascope 12,000
Stephano 10,000
Ranger 15,000
Newfoundland 6,000
Diana 5,000
Erik 4,000
Algierne 5,000
Sagona 1,000
Eagle 9,000
Bellaventure 2,000
S. S. BELLAVENTURE.
The s.s. Bellaventure, Capt. J. Kneel, with only 2,500 seals, entered port at 1 o'clock this morning. Her report is practically the same as the Bonaventure's. After leaving here with the others the Bellaventure got down off the Funks where a few scattered whitecoats were taken. Not striking the main body of whitecoats, the ship steamed over the ocean in every direction to find them, but was unsuccessful. On March 24th, as already reported, the ship had two blades broken off her propeller, and after the accident was able to make but slow progress in water, if any at all in ice. Almost every day the ship picked up from 100 to 400 seals. Saturday, when 275 miles E.S.E. of St. John's, she spoke to the Bonaventure, and next day decided to bear up for home. Capt. Kneel reports terrific weather, all the ice is broken up and the chances for the ships now out of getting more seals are anything but favorable. He also says that this spring was a hard one on propellers owing to the "growlers" or half sunken ice. As already mentioned her report of the other ships is the same as the Bonaventure brought except that she spoke to the Stephano off Baccalleu yesterday and that she then had 15,000 seals.

Death of a Newfoundlander.

Some 25 years ago a number of young men, mostly coopers, after working for some time in Montreal went out to Omaha, and when he there 18 or 20 years ago Councillor Mullaly who returned from another visit to the western city, Saturday, found all alive and well. When Mr. Mullaly went there this time he found that all those men had died in the interval. They mostly were natives of St. John's, one amongst them was Mr. Henry Buckley, an old-time resident of Bannerman Street, and a brother of Mr. James Buckley, cooper. He died about 2 years ago, and his brother here was not aware of the fact until Mr. Mullaly's return. The news of his brother's death greatly affected Jim, and many other old-time coopers were sorry to learn of Harry's death.

The Reason Why

The Daily News informs the public this morning that it is not Mr. James Murphy of the Board of Works office who is "compiling extracts from the Fishermen's Advocate" for the News. The information is hardly necessary—not for such as Mr. Murphy is a soft job of this kind. The compiler is one of the "educated" friends of Sir Edward Morris who alone of the elect are entitled to such soft snags. No doubt a comfortable salary attaches to this arduous duty for some lazy rascal and another means is found of flitting away the taxpayers money. Men like Murphy rowed the long boat for the Picnic Party when the "educated" friends of Sir Edward who are entitled to the soft jobs were under cover. The voters, however, will soon make their pronouncement on this kind of subsidized expenditure. It will not be a favourable one either for the Tory Government.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, April 2, 1912.
Many people suffer during the Spring with what are commonly known as "liverish," due to the amount of effete matters in the blood which have accumulated during the winter. Well, Gault's Digestive Syrup is not only a first-class liver starter, but an unequalled stomach medicine and appetite creator. If your stomach, liver, or bowels need correction, you ought to procure a bottle. A few doses will convince you of its value—because you will begin to feel better. Price 50c. a bottle.
"Cantharidine Hair Tonic" is well established as a preparation which will accomplish something, which will stimulate the growth of the hair and put the scalp in good condition. In this it is greatly helped by McMurdo's Shampoo Powders. Price 25c. a bottle; large bottles, 50c.; Shampoo Powders, 5c. each.

Cooking With Gas.

The old-fashioned coal-fired cooking range is rapidly approaching the museum stage—its place being taken of course by the Gas Cooker. It is scarcely necessary to say anything about Gas-Cookers, as they are so well-known millions of them being in use the Wide World over. The best, and the most economical method of cooking is a phrase which possesses a double significance. In addition to being interest to everybody personally, it concerns them from a business point of view. The Gas Cooker places at the disposal of the housewife, professional cook, or bachelor, the best and most economical means of cooking. Grilling, boiling, roasting, baking, and all other cooking operations may be performed with a Gas Cooker. The heat is perfectly under control and may be regulated to any desired temperature to suit requirements. Gas Cookers are especially adapted to the latest innovation of "Paper-Bag" cooking, and give the best results.—mar23.25.30.ap1

Birthday Party.

Last evening the officers and teachers of George St. Sunday School held a very pleasant reunion at the home of Mr. Ernest White, the Secretary of the School, in honor of his birthday. Although taken by surprise a very cordial welcome was extended and everyone felt very much at home. Games and singing was a part of the programme and Mrs. Cocheran and Mr. W. Piggott delighted the company with their solos. Before dispersing refreshments were served after which Mrs. J. W. Bartlett, wife of the popular pastor of George Street Church, in very choice language spoke of Mr. White's work in connection with the school and hoped he would fill the office of Secretary for many years to come. She wished him many returns of the day and on behalf of the school presented him with a beautiful clock. Mr. White was very much touched at this appreciation of his services and thanked all present for their good wishes. Miss Ella Pike and Mr. Harry Wyatt also made very pleasing speeches which added greatly to the enjoyment. The success of the evening was due in a great measure to Mr. Wyatt, the Treasurer of the School, who is recognized not only as a faithful officer, but also as a very jovial friend. All present hoped it would not be very long before another such gathering would take place.

His Three Nephews Drowned

When the Bonaventure reached port yesterday a member of the crew named John Snelgrove was informed by a friend from the city of the death of his three nephews, who lost their lives by drowning at Lower Island Cove. Mr. Snelgrove fainted with shock and had to be brought to his bunk and has not been able to get out since.

Why Not be Well and Strong

When weak and run down DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD will help you back to health.
This letter tells of two women who have proven this.
Mrs. D. Stott, Cobourg, Ont., writes: "After recovering from typhoid fever I was left in a very low state of health. I was weak, nervous and not fit to do any work. A friend of mine, Mrs. G. M. Brown, had used DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD and told me that it benefited her wonderfully. I took courage and began the use of the medicine. After taking the first box I began to feel an improvement in health and now after using four boxes I am completely cured. I now feel like myself once more and believe that I can attribute the cure to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."
Life is too short to spend weeks or months dragging out a miserable existence of weakness and suffering. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures by forming new rich blood and building up the system. You can depend on it to benefit you. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edman's, Batace & Co., Toronto.

The baseball season soon will open and 'gropin' will be our own once more; the good old game will soothe each of us. When we assemble on the bleachers, creatures who fuss in politics; forget schemes and plots that they've disclosed. The grand old game must be suspended and while it's off the map, we'll get the air with language gusty, and star salaries gain our attention, pipe dream are in a trance, we think to better some politician to pump and circumvent hooting when once we hear the umpire then grief and worry are forgotten, and care must jump its job. It's best share with patriotic creatures a big win to win a pennant than to elect a braggart tenant for Washington's White House.

Literary Men Who Have Found Their Mates by Their Books.
A few days since at a dinner given by the Authors' Club in London, the editor of The Cornhill told how a story, which appeared in the magazine was instrumental in bringing about a marriage.
The story in question, the work of a contributor from whom more than one tale had been previously accepted, not being up to the required standard, was returned by the editor to its author, from whom soon afterwards came a letter wherein the writer stated that he and his fiancée, having quarrelled were not on speaking terms—a state of affairs which he had trusted to put right by the publication of the rejected story, which contained matter 'the perusal of which would, he was sure, have softened the

"I suffered from Kidney trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper without alcohol is excellent for the kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken almost four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humors, increase in weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me!"

HISTORY.

BY H. L. RANN.

There are so few people present who have a clear recollection of what happened. This kind of history is always written by some author with a keen and retentive memory, and who was either an eye-witness or secured his facts from immediate relatives of the deceased.

History is a collection of cold-blooded facts relating to somebody who is not able to defend himself on account of being dead. There are two kinds of history - ancient and modern. Ancient history is the more popular of the two, as there are so few people present who have a clear recollection of what happened.
