One in a Thousand, BUT TRUE TO THE LAST

CHAPTER X.
LOVE'S BEST FRIEND.

"Because I shall smash any of their heads who fall in love with you; and, really, how can they help it?"

"Oh, you foolish, old thing!" I say. "As if everybody else had as little taste as you have!"

"Sort of taste you like, though," says he, as I reach the door.

I do not give equal satisfaction to Theo, who is alone in the drawing room when we go in. She eyes me over, and would, I feel, if it were not for Adrian's presence, say something disagreeable. She has her opportunity after dinner, when we go up to her room to put on our wraps.

"How do you like my dress?" she says, surveying herself in the long glass, with no small amount of admiration in her eyes.

"I think it is lovely," I say, honestly; and so I do, for it is of white, profusely trimmed with lace and marabout feathers, and suits her admirably.

"It isn't too young, is it?"

"Young? Oh, no! Why, Theo you are only twenty! You can wear white for fifteen years yet."

"I have a horror of dressing unsuitably," she says, indifferently. "Now, I call your dress too old."

"Adrian likes it," I say, contentedly.

"Oh, I dare say! Probably he doesn't know the difference between one dress from another; and, after all, it is very absurd to dress to please your husband."

"Is it? I suppose you speak from experience, Theo? If Lasselles doesn't know one dress from another and doesn't care what you wear, why you are quite tight to please yourself; but, you see, Adrian does know and does care, and so I dress to please him."

"We had better go down; the carriage will be waiting," she says, ignoring what I say, altogether.

I wonder if she always speaks to Lasselles in that way? If so, it is a blessed thing for him that he is not so thin-skinned, mentally speaking as some of his neighbors.

The opera is "Faust," and, strange enough, I have never seen it before. I sit on the side nearest to the stage. Lasselles sits between Theo and me. Adrian prefers standing, just behind Theo. But we do not remain so long, for Lasselles, who is entirely unable to follow the passionate story, says he shall go outside for a smoke, and come back after a time. He invites Adrian to go, too, but without avail. Relieved from the tedium of my brother-in-law's conversation, I give my whole attention to the stage; but presently I hear, with infinite surprise, that the other two are talking. I am quite pleased, for I was afraid that Theo had taken a dislike to my husband; and, although she herself has changed so much and become so cold and sarcastic, I want every one of my family to admire and like the man of my choice.

So I turn resolutely to the stage, and for a time lose myself in Marguerite's happiness—perhaps a little more readily because Faust bears a slight resemblance to Adrian. I forget completely where I am, until, during a pause of the music, I hear what brings me with startling rapidity back to reality.

"I see you wear that ring yet?" "Oh, what is this crushing my brain and tearing at my heart? Was that Adrian, or was it part of the play? The whole house fades from my sight, the music dies away, the voices beside me grow indistinct, and everything becomes dark. Yet, he, one of those strange fatalities which sometimes happen, I do not faint. No; I am destined to hear the whole of their conversation; for, when I come to myself, I am still holding the opera glass to my eyes, and evidently they have neither of them noticed that there is anything unusual about me. I have missed a good deal, for Adrian is saying:

"I thought you fitted me."

"It" says Theo. "No, I went, and you were not there, and I waited and waited, and then they found me; and oh, the shame of it! Sometimes I think it will kill me!"

"Well? Ah, can that be Adrian speaking? Is that my husband usin that eager tone to another woman and that woman my sister?"

"Well, I married Lasselles—that I all—and you married Audrey," breaking off with a sob in her voice.

"And did it never occur to you why I did not come—why I failed to keep my appointment?"

"They said you had played a joke upon me—that, most probably, I was done for a wager."

"And you believed them?"

"What else could I do? You never came, and I had been all day alone, when they found me. I would have believed anything."

"My poor child," says Adrian, with intense pity in his voice. "I have every intention of coming to you when I awake that morning. As told you I should do, I went over to Eastwood by the last train after had seen you. I made every arrangement for your comfort and reception even to ordering a carriage to take you from the station to the hotel. Well, on the way to meet you, we came to grief, and in the general smash I got my head broken. I was picked up and taken to the hospital, close at hand; and, when I awoke, three days after, they would not let me stir. I made friends with the house surgeon, who went up to the station, but could hear nothing; then he went over and tried to find out if anything unusual had taken place at Mrs. — I forget the name of the schoolmistress—but without success. When I was well enough to travel, I found you had gone abroad with your father, and the next thing I heard was that you had married Lasselles."

"Yes?" questions Theo, softly. It is the old Theo speaking now.

"Till I heard that I had not given up hope of finding you; but I thought you had fitted me; and, oh, Heaven forgive me for it, how I did hate you!"

I feel a faint, chill sickness creeping over me; but I nerve myself to the end. I must—I will—hear it all!

"Well, I went abroad, and tried to find peace, and couldn't." Adrian's voice continues, "so I went back to the regiment, and gradually I got over it, though I hadn't much faith in woman, and then—"

"And then you married Audrey," says Theo, sadly. "Why did you?"

"I married her because she was so like you; but—"

Ah, an iron hand clutches at my heart, and I know no more!

CHAPTER XI. A CONSUMMATE ACTOR!

I lie on the sofa, on the morning following my visit to the opera, and try in vain to drink the tea Adrian pours out and brings me. It is useless; I cannot do it.

"Come, now, baby," he says, coaxingly, "do try to drink it, and eat a slice of toast. You know, you promised to go with Theo to see the Kensington Museum."

"I don't want any tea, thank you," say, with freezing politeness; "and you and Theo can do very well without me."

"Utterly absurd!" he comments. "I cannot imagine anything more so entirely ridiculous than Theo and myself mooning about that place together."

"But I can," I retort, dryly; "that is, Theo and Lasselles in the same position."

Adrian looks astonished.

"Why, he is her husband," he begins, when I cut him short.

"And she hates him."

"Poor Theo!" he says, gently. "It is time for you to go," I say, dancing at the clock. "Come, don't be stubborn about it."

"Don't you think you could manage?" he says, doubtfully.

"I am perfectly certain I cannot," answer. "I shall very likely faint again if you persist in making me go; and, really, I don't see why you should be so anxious about it, for we are company, you know, and three is none."

"Yes; that's all very well, if it applied to you and me; but, with any other woman, it makes all the difference."

"But it isn't any other woman," I urge; "it is Theo."

"Well, little woman, you seem very anxious to get me out of the way, so I suppose you won't be satisfied unless I go," and, to my astonishment—although I have been pressing so strongly, I expect he will stay—he goes.

The door closes gently behind him, and I feel absolutely powerless to move. I put my hands up to my eyes, and realize that Adrian has gone away and left me alone—has gone to meet his old love—my sister! I lie quite still—I don't cry out, or write in this, the greatest agony I have ever endured—no; I lie quite still. This is the same sofa on which he lay yesterday morning and slept while I bathed his forehead; the room looks the same; there is the half-eaten breakfast, and there is the same sickly, March sunshine streaming in through the window. Yet, oh, how changed everything is. Yesterday it was Adrian who lay here, while I stayed beside him; to-day it is my turn, but Adrian has gone to meet Theo.

I try to think. Theo and "Arthur St. Clair" have met at last, and "Arthur St. Clair" is my husband—Adrian Charteris. I go over all the story—the story which was so inexplicable

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills up to hope of finding you; but I thought you had fitted me; and, oh, Heaven forgive me for it, how I did hate you!"

doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss Jessie Marsh, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

to Theo and me until last night. What a strange chain of events there has been in the last four years. I remember Theo's love story, and her words on that last night at Frampton: "I would die for him; and I shall cease to love him when I die."

She loves him yet; ah, the pang which wrings my heart as I acknowledge it! She loves him yet! How dare she love him—my husband! Then I shiver as I remember that she loved him first. Yes, it is she who has most right to him, and she knows it. Did I not hear him say last night "I married her because she was so like you, but—"

How would that sentence have ended—but she will never be to me what you would have been? I suppose that is it. I shall never be to him what Theo would have been! And yet, having once loved him, I would not, from sheer spite, have taken Lasselles; no, I would have been truer than that.

So Rose Lasselles' prophecy has come true, after all! I have married a soldier, with lots of money, who has the passion card between him and a near relative of mine. Rose was quite right. My unbelief could not prevent the cards from telling the truth. All my past life comes crowding into my brain as I lie back on my sofa. I think of what Lois said, "But when you don't love a person, every trifling action worries and annoys you; things which in a person you love, would only please you."

That is what Adrian has done; he has married a woman "he does not love—my smallest movements vexes him. How that little scene of yesterday comes back to my memory—"

"Audrey, I wish you would not tease me so!" If it had been Theo, he would not have said that.

While I am thinking over my troubles, a hand under the window strikes up "Auld Lang Syne," and the old, familiar tune brings the tears to my eyes. Oh, how, in the days gone by, he seemed to love me! Could it all be acting?

Presently a servant comes to clear the table, and, so long have the breakfast things remained, he lays the cloth for luncheon at the same time. I scan the two covers accurately. Adrian will lunch with Theo, of course. But, to my astonishment, he does nothing of the kind. As the clock chimes the half hour after one, he comes running upstairs, and takes me bodily up into his arms.

"You may be thankful you didn't go," he says, laughingly, "for Theo was as cross as two sticks."

"That's nothing unusual," I return, tartly, trying to free myself from his embrace.

Dear Sirs,—We have nothing but good to say of Mathieu's Syrup and can conscientiously describe it as the most popular and successful Cough Medicine we handle. Owing to the absence of any drug stores in this vicinity there is a great variety of proprietary medicine sold in the course of the year, and Mathieu's Syrup pre-eminently leads in its own class. Yours sincerely,
D. MARTIN.

MATHIEU'S NERVINE POWDERS are free from opium, chloral and other dangerous drugs and they are supreme against headache, sick headache, neuralgia, overwork. 25 cts. per box of 16 powders. Prepared by

The Game of Life.
 BY RUTH CAMERON.
 Once upon a time two girls who were clever, bright looking, jolly young persons, but not at all pretty, even in the eyes of their most devoted friends, became unwontedly confidential and fell to talking the situation over. One of the girls was distinctly bitter at nature's stinginess in their direction.
 "Sometimes after I've seen a particularly pretty girl," she said, "I can't sleep at night for envying her. It isn't just the pleasure of being admired without any effort, though goodness knows there are times when I'd gladly exchange my brains I have for that, but prettiness opens so many doors to you, and prejudices people in your favor right from the start. It's like an attractive show window that makes people want to come inside and see your wares."
 "The second girl was thoughtful. "It is a great advantage," she admitted, "but you know perfectly well that you are popular, and that you have succeeded in business without it."
 "Oh yes," said the rebellious one, "I suppose I have done pretty well, and you've done better, but I know we could both have done a lot more if we had only had prettiness as well as brains."
 The other girl's eyes shone with a

Be Patient.
 We all must have our evil days—that is the earthly plan; and when you're treading rocky ways, be patient as you can. For if, in brooding o'er your ills, you spend the dragging time, and if you count the weary hills you know you yet must climb, you're pretty sure to overlook the good things on your way; the meadow sweet with hay, you hear the raven's croak and squaw, as you pursue the trail; but if you listen, as you walk, you'll hear the nightingale. The brambles have your garments torn, and multiplied your woes; but if you look, near every thorn you'll doubtless find a rose. The clouds are banking in the West, you see the lightning's gleam; but there's an inn where pilgrims rest, beside the fire and dream. "The night is closing cold and damp, and I am lost," you moan; but in some window there's a lamp that burns for you alone. And if we're wise we all can sense the joy beyond the cure; there always is a recompense for every great we bear. So when a rough and rocky road and frowning sky we scan, let's stand up straight beneath our load—be patient as we can!

Had a Stroke of Paralysis
 And Found a Cure in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.
 It is always better to prevent serious diseases of the nerves. There are many warnings, such as sleeplessness, irritability, headaches and nervous indigestion.
 Prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia only come when the nervous system is greatly exhausted. Even though your ailments may not yet be very serious, there is a great satisfaction in knowing that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will cure paralysis in its earlier stages.
 Mrs. R. Bright, 215 Booth avenue, Toronto, writes: "Two years ago my husband had a stroke which left him in a weak, nervous condition. He started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills, and we were the good friends almost immediately. They have made a new man of my husband and we cannot speak too highly of them."

Nickel's Big Bill.
 Immense audiences attended the Nickel Theatre again last evening. The pictures were new and each was favorably spoken of. There were four reels in all. Mr. Myers repeated his successes of the previous evening "The White Squall" and "That's How I Need You." Each was warmly applauded. The programme will be repeated this evening. On Monday evening Mr. Myers will render "Son of the Desert an I," which will be followed by a lively Irish ballad.

The Regatta.
 Great enthusiasm is now evident for the forthcoming races.
 Three crews of amateurs are hard at practice and are well matched.
 The Brigade race promises to be of more than ordinary interest. The crews are in good condition.
 The new boat house for the C. C. C. is being rushed to completion.
 The labourers who are training in the Shamrock are an excellent lot and will have to be reckoned with.

Pleasing Presentation.
 President W. J. Ellis and the officers of the Total Abstinence Society last night proceeded to the residence of Mr. Michael Hickey, Dunbrack Street and presented him with an illuminated address as a reminder of the golden jubilee of his entry into the Society. The address was read by Mr. Ellis who also made a nice congratulatory speech. Mr. Hickey was affected by this mark of the respect and esteem of the Society and he thanked the deputation heartily for their kindness and the honour done him.

An Easy Win.
 The B. I. S. and Collegians competed in last evening's football match. The attendance was small and the exhibition poor. The rain showers made the ground wet and the ball greasy and consequently good play was difficult. It was a one sided game, the Collegians having matters their own way and scored at will. The result was: Collegians, 4 goals; B. I. S., 0.

Brigade Challenge Cup.
 It is likely that the City Club's Challenge Cup for the Brigade race will be up for competition this year, and it is certainly a trophy well worth working hard for. It was made in England and with Governor Davidson's Cup should spur the boys of the various Brigades to work hard to secure these excellent trophies.

Cured Diseases of the Kidneys
 Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ills arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago:
 Mrs. John Wright, 55 Argus Street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney troubles and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

Special Notice.
 We take pleasure in announcing the appointment of Mr. Richard C. Power as our Newfoundland Representative for the sale of one of the most attractive securities that we have marketed during the long period of forty years in which we have served the investing public.
 We refer to the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock of the Maritime Navigation Company, Limited, a prosperous corporation operating at St. John, N.B., with the largest output of any single mill of its kind in Canada.
 This issue is unusually well secured by assets appraised at $150 for every $100 share of Preferred Stock, exclusive of the amount covering the Bonds outstanding. The earnings record of the issuing Company is alike exceptionally strong and rapidly expanding under the present efficient management. Two other desirable features are the 50 per cent. Common Stock Bonus and the alternative plans of payment, cash or instalment.
 A fully descriptive circular has already been mailed to our many Newfoundland patrons. We advise these friends of ours and all other interested persons to immediately get in touch with Mr. Power, from whom additional copies of the circular and further particulars may be had. His office address is given below.

The Morris Debacle.

The Daily News takes issue with our statement that the thousands of fishermen, mainly from districts which elected Morris men took the extraordinary course of petitioning the Legislature for an election in the fall of 1913, in order that they might have a chance of turning out the Government. The Daily News, following the lead of Sir Edward Morris in the House of Assembly when the petitions were presented, characterizes them as "flagrant and gross impostures." It is of course true that the petitions were largely signed by fishermen who belonged to the F.P.U., but that fact does not make them "flagrant and gross impostures." It is true also that many of them came from settlements in districts which elected Morris men last time. That fact does not make them "flagrant and gross impostures." The number of petitions, numerous as they are, shows that a change of sentiment has come over the voters in these districts, and that was the position we were establishing. We have picked out from the Journal a number of names of the settlements from which the petitions were sent. Here are some: Indian Arm, Salvage Bay, Bonavista, Clarke's Beach, Freshwater, Catalina, Selby's Cove, Fox Harbor, New Melbourne, Newman's Cove, Musgrave Town, St. Brendan's, Brooklyn, Northern Arm, Newtown, Wesleyville, Safe Harbor, King's Cove, Heart's Ease, Champeys, English Harbor, Elliston, Bonaventure, Hatchett Cove, Trinity East, Long Beach, Snook's Harbor, Scilly Cove, Old Perleton, Valleyfield, Trinity, White Rock, Greenspond, Flat Islands. It will be observed from this we have confined our pick of names mainly to settlements in districts which elected Morris men in 1909. The separate petitions were signed numerously from the settlements named expressing sentiment inimical to the Government, and afford proof of an overwhelming change of sentiment in these districts in respect of the Morris Party.

The Daily News declares the petitions to be "flagrant and gross impostures." This is but an echo of Sir Edward Morris's charge in the House of Assembly, at the time he was engaged at the reference in the petitions to "the possible danger ahead of our beloved country arising from his unparalleled reckless expenditure." He declared the people had been gulled and when they learned of it, they would "resent it in a way that will not be pleasant for those who are endeavoring to use them."

Well Sir Edward Morris and his organs had some eight or nine months to convince these people they had been gulled. They had eight or nine months to show up what the News calls a "flagrant and gross imposture." Representatives of the thousands of men who had signed the petitions met in Bonavista last December. Did they charge the President of the F.P.U. with deceiving them? No. Did they declare the petitions "gross and flagrant impostures"? No. Did they direct any resentment against the draftsmen of the petitions? No. Resentment was shown, but it was directed against Sir Edward Morris and his Government.

Appended is a copy of the Resolutions passed on December 14th, 1912, by the Supreme Council of the F.P.U. in session at Bonavista. This was about nine months after the attack on the petitions by Sir Edward Morris:

WHEREAS PETITIONS from many Local Councils of the Fishermen's Protective Union, the contents and form of which have been the sanction of this Supreme Council, were signed by thousands of our members, and presented to the House of Assembly with a view to transmission to the proper authorities, praying for a General Election in the Fall of 1913;

AND WHEREAS a representation was made in these petitions that there is at present a widespread feeling of alarm in this country as regards public expenditure;

AND WHEREAS the Prime Minister challenged the good faith of this and other representations contained in these petitions;

AND WHEREAS Sir Edward Morris, in his speech to which we have just referred, charged the President with writing hundreds of these petitions, putting in them incorrect statements, and with deceiving the people who signed them;

AND WHEREAS Sir Edward Morris, challenged the statement that there was no alarm in the country over public expenditure since he assumed reins of power, declaring that the only alarm was in the individuals who wrote these petitions, and charging the President with gulling those who signed the petitions, and with using them as tools;

AND WHEREAS the Government not only refused the respectful prayer of these petitions, but the Leader of the Government treated them with the contempt above referred to;

BE IT RESOLVED, THEREFORE:

FIRST, that the Supreme Council endorse the position it took last year in the matter of these petitions; corroborates the representation made as to the feeling of alarm at the public expenditure of the Government; and presents in the strongest way the derogatory aspersions cast by the Prime Minister on the President of the Fishermen's Protective Union in connection with these petitions;

SECOND, that the Supreme Council condemn roundly the unconstitutionality of the Government in allowing the House of Assembly to expire under the force of law, before appealing to the country; and by its decision to hold the General Election not before the Fall of 1913, creating the unprecedented situation of being unable to call a Parliament together, for five months, no matter what emergency may arise;

THIRD, that the Supreme Council calls upon all the members of the Union, all of its sympathizers, and dead upon all electors who value good government, sound administration, and economy in the expenditure of the public revenue to rally round the man who WILL FIGHT TO OUST THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT from power next Fall, and thereby prove that the statements contained in the F.P.U. Petitions presented to the House of Assembly at the last session were absolutely justifiable and rightly expressed the People's wishes.

Lloyd George on Tight Money.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-day. Lloyd George at the Mansion House banquet to city bankers last night analysed some of the causes, leading to the recent money stringency. We cannot give in full the speech, but we can strengthen our own forces, we can not weaken in the slightest degree the immunity we have against invasion, the danger of which is too terrible. Although there is a good deal to call for care and precaution, there is no cause for alarm. I have taken great care during the last few weeks to consult those in touch with Trade, Commerce and Industry, and they have all told me the same thing, there is no cause for apprehension. All this uneasiness which has been felt throughout markets for weeks and months has in itself, I won't say foretold, but has constrained those engaged in the business of finance to take precautions so as to be able to steady themselves against shocks when they come. They are husbanding their resources by putting themselves together to strengthen themselves against any possible eventuality, and I hear the same story from America, France, Germany and this country.

Labrador Fishery News.

To-day in an interview with Capt. Parsons, of the Kyle, a Telegram reporter gleaned from him that the codfish are striking in on the coast just as the ship was leaving. From Long Island to Spear Harbor boats secured 5, 10, 15 and 20 qts. in the first little spurt, and though it appears a little late, Capt. Parsons is optimistic. Same very warm days were recently experienced on the coast. From Dominio South, icebergs are very numerous and are a danger to navigation. The Straits fleet were met Thursday last and reported very little doing with fish in that locality.

Personal.

Mr. E. H. Crawford, son of Mr. Crawford, the purchasing agent of the Reid Mfg. Co., leaves here by the express this evening for Port-au-Prince for a time fishing.
Mr. Thomas Shearer, the inventor of the smoke consumer, will be leaving here by the express to-night for Montreal. He returns again in two weeks time.
Rev. Peter Bryce, of Barncourt, Toronto, accompanied by Mrs. Bryce and her baby boy, arrived by the S. S. City of Sydney, yesterday, on a visit to relatives in this city, and are the guests of the Hon. H. J. B. Woods, P.M.C., at Bemister Place. Mrs. Bryce's many friends in this city will have an opportunity of seeing her during her stay here.

Bulgarians Routed.

Special to Evening Telegram.
ATHENS, To-day.
 General Ivanoff's army, together with three divisions of the 1st force, aggregating 112 battalions, made its last stand in a strongly entrenched position near Demirhisar, on the left bank of the River Struma, and on adjacent heights at Intrina, which were well defended with siege artillery. Heavy guns effectually delayed the advance of the Greek infantry and as the Greek artillery was outranged, the battle was indecisive for a considerable time. Under cover of darkness, however, the attack was renewed and in a brilliant charge the Greeks dislodged the Bulgarians from the heights above and drove them across the Struma. In their retreat the Bulgarians destroyed the railway for some distance, again checking the Greek advance. The Greeks then directed their march along the right bank of the river, supported by mountain batteries and compelled the Bulgarians hurriedly to abandon the position, leaving behind four heavy guns and a quantity of ammunition. While this battle was in progress the Greeks attacked and dispersed the Bulgarian forces from Islip, advancing towards Petrich by way of Strumitza, capturing twenty guns. By these two victories the Greeks are considered to have vanquished finally General Ivanoff's forces whose rout is complete. The Greeks occupied Demirhisar on Tuesday when the Bulgarians evacuated the town.

 Rt. Hon. Redmond Barry, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, died last night. Born in 1866, he was Solicitor General of Ireland from 1905 to 1909, Attorney General, 1909-1911, represented from 1907 to 1911, the Commons in the House of Commons. He was distinguished for being the only Irish Liberal in the House.

Regatta Committee.

The weekly meeting of the Regatta Committee held last night was of an enthusiastic order. There were present:—
 President Hiscock, Treasurer Ellis, Secretary Noonan, F. W. Hayward, Dr. Scully, R. W. Jeans, E. Taylor, T. D. Carey, J. L. Slattery, P. J. Hanley, R. Doyden, C. E. Hunt, N. Andrews, L. G. Chafe, J. W. Morris, J. Day, T. J. Moran.

The collectors reported a most satisfactory receipt by the public and a most successful and enjoyable Derby is assured.

The matter of the Governor's splendid trophy, the cup so kindly presented by him for the Brigade Race was referred to, and as it is by far the best prize put up for years past, Mr. Hiscock stated that Brigade members had suggested that it be contested for more than once. There was general discussion on the subject and a motion by Mr. J. L. Slattery seconded by Mr. P. J. Hanley it was decided that the prize should be won three times before becoming the absolute property of any Brigade.

The committee will lunch this year with the C. L. B. in their tent.

The City Band offered to perform for the day for the sum of $60. Referred to the Band Committee.

Mr. Jonas Barter, for the Truckmen's Union, suggested medals for that race. If the crews collectively desire this their wish will be acceded to.

The question of races in which only two boats may enter, then came up for discussion owing to the fact that it was reported that only two boats were likely to run in the Press Race. The Committee thought not desiring to interfere with any race feel like cancelling any event wherein only two boats enter, though where it is known that three or more boats have been at practice and through some unforeseen cause two drop out then such a race with two boats will be allowed. It was decided not to allow mixed crews to run in the Press Race, they all must come from the same office.

After dealing with other matters of routine the meeting adjourned at 9.30 p.m.

An Enthusiast Of Man.

Some Remarkable Appreciations of Canon Barnett, the Founder of Toynbee Hall.

Canon Barnett was an enthusiast of men, and he had the gift of sending them out gladly to try to realize the ideals which had been kindled in his own mind. It was a great gift, and is emphasized by many of those who knew him well.

Thus one of his colleagues, writing in the Times, says:
 "To that little room."
 "From the vicarage of St. Jude's, Whitechapel, beside the crowded highway of Commercial Street, and from his little study in the Warden's Lodge looking out across the peaceful quadrangle of Toynbee Hall, there went forth copiously a quiet stream of helpful thought and guidance, touching the lives of men where most they needed it, transforming with a divine alchemy their lead to gold.

"To that little room of his came young men fresh from college to talk over their dreams with them, and to help them to turn something of the stuff of dreams into reality; here came, too, older men from the world without, men of most diverse views and creeds, grappling with difficult problems, or in need of counsel and suggestion. There they found sympathy, a keen, welcome for new ideas, the friendly constructive criticism of a wisdom strong in wide and rich experience, and the penetrating vision of a great teacher of men, who had the prophet's instinct for reading the signs of the times. With all his deep sympathy Canon Barnett had that rarer gift of making this felt, and yet being able to speak the unwelcome, necessary truth. Sometimes in some brief suggestive phrase, or a question interjected as if by chance, he would put the other side, gently revealing the weak place of some well-intentioned but mistaken plan; or, where the thing lay deeper, he knew, like a skilled surgeon of the soul, how to touch with some short, clear word the hidden fault, which must lead to failure.

An Enthusiast for New Ideas.

"He had a very different side for the man who came to him discouraged, feeling his impotence or conscious of his wrong-doing. Such a man might go out again with new hopes, with a sense that there was work to be done which he might do, work which needed him.

"Canon Barnett had, to an unusual degree, the power of putting himself alongside of others, sharing their thoughts and aspirations and making them feel that he did so. To the very close of his life he retained a young man's buoyant enthusiasm for new ideas, new forms of social or individual effort; institutions were for him only the changing form of the life-giving idea behind them; he was always prepared to lay aside existing machinery, even though he himself might have devised it, in order to adopt a different and more perfect one. It was this attitude of mind which made his intercourse with younger men so refreshing. They found in him one whose wisdom was always willing to learn. There was something which touched the heart of youth in this humility of spirit which made him eager to share a young man's thoughts and hopes, to talk and plan with him side by side in the true spirit of comradeship."

"Canon Barnett did more for the universities than for Whitechapel," says the Nation.

"It gave boys with some power of imagination the chance of getting knowledge of the most tremendous of social facts—the way in which the poor live in contrast with the way in which the rich live, the unequal measure in which light, air, pleasure, leisure, health, knowledge, house-room, and money are dealt out between them, and the results, moral and political, of this misdirection of the national store."

"All kinds of intellects and characters were attracted to Toynbee Hall; and very different results came out of its crucible—statesmen of all types, administrators, County Councilors, economists, social investigators, workers, enthusiasts, even a poet or two. None, I think, were quite unimproved in their lives."

and habits of thought; some, the most generous and susceptible, were deeply and permanently affected."

A Reform Leader.
 "To innumerable men and women in all parts of the world there comes this week a great sorrow, the death of Canon Barnett," says the New Statesman. "His influence, both on his contemporaries and on the younger generations that have grown up in his forty years of service, is one long and overwhelming testimony to the power of spiritual genius, even in our present materialist world. Small in stature and unpretensions in manner, with no great oratorical gift or literary talent—without even any outstanding capacity for the organization of men and the administration of things—Canon Barnett has been the virtual leader, more often than not the unrecognized leader of the social reform movement."

"He entered his active service with one's supreme good fortune—a marriage which was a perfect partnership. To Canon Barnett (and in thinking of him we always think of him and his wife as one-personality) belongs the merit of linking up the individualist works of yesterday with the Collectivist faith of to-day. Half a century ago, the men and women of the propertied class who honestly desired to benefit the poor, started soup kitchens or distributed out doles to those whose misery directly appealed to them.

From Individualism to Collectivism.

"Canon Barnett was the greatest of the little group of pioneers who tried to add the power of thought to the impulse of personal helpfulness, and it was in this endeavor that he became one of the inspirers of the Charity Organization Society. But he could not linger long within the narrow fold of mere charity organization. His day by day work in an East End parish, his experience as a guardian of the poor, and of fifty other forms of charitable assistance, his intimate companionship with the Co-operators, Trade Unionists, and Socialists, who congregated at Toynbee Hall—all this varied experience of life played upon by intellectual insight and broad emotional sympathy, transformed his fervent individualism into a broad-minded Collectivism.

"For the last twenty years he has been teaching that personal service of the poor, however wisely and considerately it is manifested, must be supplemented by an organized and sustained attempt to alter the environment in which the whole class of manual workers is condemned to live."

Toynbee Hall.

"Toynbee Hall was named after a brilliant young university man named Arnold Toynbee, who went to the Whitechapel Vicarage in 1875, and the thrilling story is well known," says the Westminster, "of the manner in which he threw himself into the work, and expended all too quickly his brilliant gifts and his limited reserve of health and strength. He passed away on March 10th, 1883, but his spirit was resurrected in Toynbee Hall.

"Canon Barnett, on resigning his charge at Toynbee, summed up the effect of Toynbee Hall as follows:—
 'I think,' he said, 'it has enabled the rich and the poor to know and to understand each other better, and that in this way it has made for peace and goodwill. And I think it has probably done something to raise the standard of public life.'"

THROUGH LOVE TO LIGHT.

Through Love to Light! Oh, wonderful the way That leads from darkness To the perfect day! From darkness and from sorrow of the night To morning that comes singing o'er the sea. Through Love to Light! Through Light, O God, to thee, Who art the Love of Love, The eternal Light of Light. —R. W. Gilder.

GREAT SUBJECTS.

To dally much with subjects mean and low Proves that the mind is weak, or makes it so. Neglected talents rust into decay, And every effort ends in pain-ful play. The man that means success, should soar above A soldier's feather, or a lady's glove. Else summoning the Muse to such a theme, The fruit of all her labour is whipp'd cream. As if an eagle flew aloft, and then stoop'd from its highest perch to pounce a wren. As if the poet, purposing to wed, Should carve himself a wife in ginger-bread. Ages elapsed ere Homer's lamp appeared. And ages ere the Mantuan swan was heard. To carry nature lengths unknown before, To give a Milton birth, ask'd ages more. Thus Genus rose and set at order'd times, And shot a day-dream into distant climes. Ennobling every region that he chose; He sank in Greece, in Italy he rose; And, tedious years of Gothic darkness pass'd, Emerg'd all splendour in our isle at last. Thus lovely halcyons dive into the main, Then show far off their shining plumes again. —From "Table Talk" by Cowper.

TRUE GAIETY.

Whom call we gay? that honour has been long The boast of mere pretenders to the name. The innocent are gay—the lark is gay, That drives his feathers, saturate with dew, Beneath the rosy cloud, while yet the beams Of day-spring overshoot his humble nest. The peasant, too, a witness of his song, Himself a songster, is as gay as he.

But save me from the gaiety of those, Whose headaches pall them to a noon-day nod. And save me too from theirs, whose haggard eyes Flash desperation, and betray their pang. For property strip'd off by cruel chance; From gaiety, that fills the bones with pain. The mouth with blasphemy, the heart with woe. —From "The Tank" by Cowper.

EDINBURGH ON A SUMMER NIGHT.

"We sat down at the window of a Princes Street hotel. What in all the journey was there to equal the magic sight that lay before us? Beyond a Gulf of blackness the old town of Edinburgh rose with its thousand points of fire into the clear sky of a summer night. The tall houses, with their eight or nine stories, had their indistinguishable windows ablaze; and the points of orange light shone in the still blue shadow until they seemed to form part of some splendid enchanted palace built on the slopes of a lofty hill. And then beyond that we could see the great crags of the castle looming dark in the starlight, and we knew, rather than saw, that there were walls and towers up there, cold and distant, looking down on the yellow glare of the city beneath. The lights of the distant houses went out one by one. The streets became silent, even the stars grew paler, but why was that? A faint light, golden and soft, began to steal along the castle-hill; and the slow mild radiance touched the sharp slopes of the trees, and the grey walls above, which were under the stars." —William Black.

ON REVISING THE WYE.

These beautiful forms, Through a long absence, have not been to me As is a landscape to a blind man's eye; But oft in lonely rooms and mid the din of joyous throngs, I have owned to thee, O towns and cities, I have owed to them, In hours of weariness, sensations sweet, Felt in the blood and felt along the heart; And passing even into my pure mind, With transient restoration—feelings, Of unremembered pleasure: such, As have no slight or trivial influence On that best portion of a good man's life, His little, nameless, unremembered acts, Of kindness and of love. Nor less, I trust.

To them I may have owed another gift. Of aspect more sublime; that blessed mood, In which the burthen of the mystery, On which the heavy-laden, weary weight Of all that falls on us, is lightened— that serene and blessed mood, In which the affections gently lead us on, Until, the breath of this corporeal frame, And even the motion of our human blood, Almost suspended, we are laid asleep In body, and become a living soul; While with an eye made quiet by the power Of harmony, and the deep power of joy, We see into the life of things. If this Be but a vain belief, yet, oh! how oft— In darkness, and amid the many shapes Of joyless daylight; when the funeral dirge Untroubled, and the fever of the world, Have hung upon the beatings of my heart; How oft, in spirit, have I turned to thee, O Sylvan Wye! Thou wanderer through the woods, How often has my spirit turned to thee! —From "Tintern Abbey"—Wordsworth.

STORY OF MRS. PARTINGTON.

"I do not mean to be disrespectful, but the attempt of the Lords to stop the progress of reform reminds me very forcibly of the great storm of Sidmouth, and of the conduct of the excellent Mrs. Partington on that occasion. In the winter of 1824 there set in a great flood upon that town, and the tide rose to an incredible height—the waves rushed in upon the houses—and everything was threatened with destruction. In the midst of this sublime storm, Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house with mop and pail, trundling her mop, and squeezing out the sea-water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused, Mrs. Partington's spirit was up, and I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a shop or a public, but she should not have meddled with a tempest." —Sydney Smith (1777-1845).

Stories Of Mythology.

THE STORY OF ECHO.

Echo was a beautiful nymph, fond of the woods and hills, where she devoted herself to woodland sports. She was a favorite of Diana, and attended her in the woods. One day Echo had fallen in love with Narcissus, a youth, as he pursued the chase upon the mountains. She loved him and followed his footsteps. O how she longed to address him in the softest accents, and win him to converse! but it was not in her power. She waited with impatience for him to speak first, and had her answer ready one day the youth, being separated far from his court, shouted aloud, "Who's here?" Echo replied, "Here." Narcissus looked around, but seeing no one, called out, "Come." Echo answered, "Come." As no one came, Narcissus called again, "Why do you shun me?" Echo replied the same question. Let us hear Narcissus answer. Let us hear the goddess till the nymph made their escape. When Narcissus discovered it, he passed sentence upon Echo in these words: "You shall forever be debarred that tongue with which you have cheated me, except for that one purpose you are so fond of—reply. You shall still have the last word, but no power to speak first."

Neave's Food FOR INFANTS.

Will Keep Your Baby Safely Through the First Year. We put our mixture on Neave's Food when he was one week old, and he never tested anything else until his first birthday. Hundreds of people have stopped me on the streets and in the stores to ask how old he was and what he was fed on. He has never had a day's illness and is one of the healthiest boys I have ever seen. Mrs. J. W. PATEMAN, 4 Harriet St., Toronto. Neave's Food is sold in 1 lb. tins and 4 lb. tins all over Canada. BUCHAREST, July 11. Roumanian troops to-day occupied the Bulgarian city of Silistria, on the right bank of the Danube. They were not opposed by the Bulgarians.

LIVERPOOL, N.S., July 11. The Dominion Government cutter Petrel, seized to-day the Gloucester fishing schooner Rex, Capt. Baker, for violating the Customs regulations at Canso, on June 16th, by bringing to report at the Customs House, and landing men without proper permission.

WELLINGTON, July 11. A large quantity of dynamite, with a burning fuse attached, was discovered yesterday under Christchurch barracks, just in time to prevent the destruction of the building. The attempt is ascribed to some fanatics connected with the anti-militarist faction. All boys between 14 and 21 are required to attend drill at the barracks. It is feared that another attempt may be made to destroy the building.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 11. A distinctly hopeful view is expressed today by the Russian press also in official circles, as to the Balkan situation. Peace is regarded generally as imminent, on account of the crippling of the Bulgarian armies and the severe losses sustained by Servia. The Russian Red Cross Society has decided not to send doctors, nurses and ambulance men to the front. A telegram from Constantinople says that Midia, on the Black Sea, which was to form the eastern end of the future frontier line between Bulgaria and Turkey, is in flames.

ROME, July 11. A terrific storm is raging throughout Italy and many places in the country have been devastated and crops destroyed. The storm is accompanied by remarkably cold weather for the time of the year, the temperature at Rome at noon to-day falling below 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Such weather has not been recorded in Italy since 1813, when the superstitious people attributed it to the reputation of the number 13. Owing to a strong cold wind from the north, accompanied by hurricanes, the temperature to-day was not far from freezing point, and snow is reported to have fallen in the Alps.

LONDON, July 11. Two persons in the Strangers' Gallery fired a toy pistol and hurled a quantity of suffragette literature among the members. They were promptly hustled from the gallery and detained pending investigation. In the pamphlets were small mouse traps. Squads of suffragettes smashed windows with pickers along the route taken by King George when visiting the city. They were rounded up, and order was restored before the King's arrival. Mrs. Mackworth, for setting fire to a mail box on June 26, was fined $50 or a month in jail.

Great Events From Little Causes Spring.

London, July 4.—The untimely laying of an egg in a crate caused a strike at the London and North-western railway station here yesterday. A porter, in moving a crate of five hens, noticed that one of the fowls had laid an egg. Slipping his hand through the bars of the crate, he took the egg out and placed it on his barrow for safety. A railway detective immediately arrested the porter and took him and the egg to the railway police station. Within a few minutes all the railway staff on duty ceased work until the district superintendent was informed of the accident and ordered the man's release. The staff then returned to work, but the officials are still considering the fate of the egg, which for the present remains in the superintendent's office.

Last return from Bowring Park, 9.15.

At the City Hall.

At yesterday's session of the Council Board, the Sanitary Supervisor reported that two of his workmen, who had smallpox at their homes, were quarantined and prevented from working. The matter of giving the men their usual wages was discussed and left stand over to be dealt with at a special meeting.

According to letter received from the Secretary of Public Works, there is a defect in the sewer connected with the General Post Office. Being attended to.

A retaining wall, reported by Bowring Brook, to be in a bad state, is being repaired.

A communication from Winter & Winter asked if the Council intended to open up a street on the north side of Winter Avenue. If such was the case they would give a width of 50 feet through their property. The Council's decision in such matters was made last year—that until houses are built no roads will be made.

A pipe in Alexander Street, complained of by J. Shea, will be attended to.

Residents of LeMarchant Road petitioned against the re-naming of that street, as it will cause trouble to insurance policy and lease holders.

Sergt. Corbett, Tessler Place, was refused permission to install water and sewerage in his house on the ground that Tessler Place was never a recognized locality.

J. J. Keen, Mary Sheehan and Jessie Ellis were given leave to repair their houses.

On the recommendation of the Public Health Officer, McDonald Bros. can erect a stable in Central Street.

J. R. Johnston can make alterations to store recently occupied on Water Street by F. Laracy.

Osmond & Co. asked for permission to build a forge on Temperance St. Referred to Engineer.

Special S.A. Service

The services at the S. A. Citadel tomorrow, will be of a very interesting character. At the 11 o'clock meeting, English Miller, of Musgrave-town, will be the speaker. Captain Wells, of Musgrave Hill, will have charge of the 3 o'clock service, and at night Captain and Mrs. Gilbert Best, who were recently married at Toronto and are spending a short vacation at their old home, will be in charge.

Baseball.

A baseball match between the D. J. S. and the tourists on board the S. S. Stephano took place, last evening. Owing to the rain shower that prevailed the game had to be stopped. The exhibition while it lasted was good though the visitors proved to be adepts at the art as they had six runs to their credit against their opponents one.

Man And Wife Arrested.

Yesterday a woman was arrested under warrant at the instance of another woman for the larceny of a mat, valued at $3. Later the woman who made the complaint was approached by the husband of the accused. Threats were made and in a short time the man was taken into custody and brought to the police station to keep his wife company. The woman's case was heard in court yesterday and she was released on paying costs.

Conan Doyle's Game

Famous Author Leads Boy Scouts In A Quest for Gold.

Sir A Conan Doyle the novelist, tested the scouting qualities of the Crowborough (Sussex) boy scouts on Easter Monday last by sending them on a quest which might have baffled even Chingachgook, the Delaware of Fenimore Cooper's leather-stocking tales.

In this case, however, the object was not a Huron's scalp, but pieces of gold. Conan Doyle addressed the troop on his lawn at Windlesham, and gave them the first clue.

"A wooden-legged man," he said, "hid the first sign. The mark of his wooden leg will be found within fifty yards of the garden gate. It is like the mark of a stick. The beginning of his trail is marked by two walnuts in the ground. Follow his trail and it will lead you to the mark of a great reptile's foot on a stone. About thirty feet north of that point you will get the first sign."

Only a few minutes elapsed before the boys had found the walnuts and the spoor of the wooden-legged man, and a compass was utilized for finding their bearings. After a great search a slip of paper was discovered in the thatch of a shed on the edge of a quarry. Sir Arthur read its contents:

Southwestwards you will go,
 To where the streamlet's waters flow,
 Between the waters and the wood,
 An ancient birch tree long has stood,
 Where the birch's roots entwine
 You will find the second sign.

Another prowl among the gorse and the bracken brought them to the old birch, where they found the following instructions:

Go half a mile or so south and west to the sweet Hanz Corner. There you will see a pleasant-looking gentleman with a big nose, and nearby a small white dog among the furze. A Scout will lead the dog home. Twelve feet before the dog's nose is found the fourth indication. The final slip of paper was found "beneath an ancient fossil tree many many thousands of years old." It contained the secret, the directions being that the rubber dog which was found among the furze was to be cut open. This Sir Arthur did, and handed the golden sovereigns which were found inside to the scoutmaster.

Scout Barham, who is ten years old, showed keen powers of observation, and was congratulated by Sir Arthur. He discovered the sign by waterfall and traced the paper trail to the fifth sign.
