The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public
Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives
publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

A Brief Retrospect of Her Majesty's Reign.

"Victoria, by the grace of God, Queen." The veriest skeptic as to the Divine right of rulers will hardly grudge the title to the noble lady who for fifty years has occupied the British throne, and who in the hearts of her many millions of subjects rules by love, endeared almost as personal friend to myriads who have never seen her but have learned to regard her with affectionate esteem from her unblemished life both as Queen and Woman. Her Majesty is the fourth British sovereign, and first Queen Regnant, who has completed her fiftieth year on the throne, the others being Henry III, Edward III and George III. She was born at Kensington Palace on May 24th, 1819, and is the only child of Edward, Duke of Kent, at one time Governor of Canada. The death of the Princess Charlotte rendered her heir presumptive to the throne from the hour of her birth, "the little May Flower," as the Duchess of Gotha styles her, being destined to great things unless a boy should be born to deprive her of them. Her father died within a year after her birth and the education of the Princess was carried on by her mother and the Duchess of Northumberland. Neither of these ladies ever lost sight of the important post their youthful charge was likely to be called on some day to fill, and no pains were spared to train her to discharge her duties properly, with what success her fifty years of rulership has proved.

The death of William IV, on the morning of the 20th of June, 1837, made the girl of eighteen Queen of the Jubilee Poetry.

On a Jubilee stile sat a Jubilee youth,
 With a Jubilee pipe in his Jubilee mouth ;
 On his Jubilee back was a Jubilee coat,
 And a Jubilee collar round his Jubilee throat.

With this Jubilee youth was a Jubilee dog,
 Hunting Jubilee frogs in a Jubilee bog ;
 On his Jubilee side sat a Jubilee girl,
 On whose Jubilee head lay a Jubilee curl.

In that Jubilee field was a Jubilee bull,
 Eating Jubilee turnips his hunger to lull ;
 When that Jubilee youth asked that Jubilee Miss
 From her Jubilee lips for a Jubilee kiss.

As that Jubilee bull raised his Jubilee head,
 Saw her Jubilee hair was a Jubilee red,
 Flashed his Jubilee eyes, raised his Jubilee tail ;
 Tossed the Jubilee lovers o'er the Jubilee rail.

On a Jubilee head sat a Jubilee hat,
 From a Jubilee stock, well bought for cash at that.
 I have Jubilee plumes also Jubilee flowers
 At Jubilee prices and for Jubilee bowers.

 For Jubilee bargains you cannot come too soon.

Empire on which the sun never sets. The news was conveyed to the young Princess and she was roused from her bed to receive it. In most the elevation to such a position would have raised feelings of exultation, but in Princess Victoria it inspired feelings of great responsibility, and her first act was a prayer to God to enable her to fulfil faithfully the duties He had imposed upon her. Up to this time the public knew little of the youthful sovereign. Even to court circles she was almost a stranger, her mother keeping her aloof as much as possible from a court not remarkable for its refinement.

With Princess Victoria's accession ended the union of the Crowns of England and Hanover, which from the time of George I had been under one sovereign. The latter passed to the next male heir, Ernest, Duke of Cumberland. On the 28th of June, 1838, Her Majesty's coronation took place in Westminster Abbey, the most imposing ceremony of the kind ever witnessed in England. On opening Parliament in 1840 the Queen announced her intention of marrying her cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and her marriage took place in February the same year. In November, 1840, the Princess Victoria, now Crown Princess of Germany, was born, and subsequently the Prince of Wales, in 1841, the Princess Alice in 1843, Prince Alfred in 1844, Princess Helena in 1846, Princess Louise in 1848, Prince Arthur in 1850, Prince Leopold in 1853, and Princess Beatrice in 1857.

For many years the private life of Her Majesty was one of unalloyed happiness, and such of her time as could be spared from State cares was given to her family, and the story of those years, as told by herself in "Our Life in the Highlands," forms as pretty a tale of domestic felicity as exists in the English language.

In 1858 Little Vicky, as her mother styled her, married the Crown Prince of Germany, "Unser Fritz,"—a truly love match according to the Queen's diary and the letters of the Prince Consort—and on the 10th March, 1863, the Prince of Wales married Alexandra, eldest daughter of the King of Denmark, who was received with open arms by the English people; and who has year after year become more firmly enthroned in the English heart. The Princess Louise, on March 21st, 1871, married the Marquis of Lorne—a notable event as being the first matrimonial alliance for many generations between a member of the Royal family and a subject and to accomplish which a special Act of Parliament was passed. The Marquis, it will be remembered, was Governor-General of Canada, and with his Royal wife became very popular here. In August, 1849, Her Majesty, in company with the Prince Consort, made a visit to Ireland and was enthusiastically received, and in honor of the occasion the historic Cove of Cork changed its name to Queenston. In the same year the Prince Consort, in conjunction with Mr. Edward Cole, projected the exhibition of 1851, the first world's fair ever held and which was the origin of International Exhibitions. The 14th September, 1853, saw the death of the "Duke," the "Saviour of Europe." The Queen was then in the Highlands, and no more feeling tribute to his memory as a statesman, patriot and soldier could have been penned than the short letter written by Her Majesty at the time. The Crimean war gave another opportunity to the public to see how the heart of their Sovereign was centered in them. "The Queen's letter" to her troops will never die in the memory of the army. In 1857 the Indian mutiny broke out, an event which, after its suppression, resulted in that grand dependency being transferred from the Honorable East India Company to the British Crown, and the creation of the Queen, "Empress of India," together with the establishment of the order of "The Star of India." In August, 1858, Her Majesty visited France, the guest of the Emperor, and was present at the opening of the Cherbourg docks. Her official naval escort was but small, but she was accompanied by 500 yachts, the property of private gentlemen. "Sam Slick" (the late Judge Haliburton) describes it as "an exhibition of England's naval strength in French waters." In 1860 the Prince of Wales visited Canada and laid the corner stone of the Parliament buildings here, and his reception throughout the Provinces evoked hearty expressions of gratification from the Queen. In the following year the American War of Secession broke out and the stoppage of cotton shipments from the revolting States produced great distress among the operatives of the cotton-mills in Lancashire. A subscription for their relief was organized to which Her Majesty contributed £5,000 as Duchess of Lancashire. In the same year death broke in on the happiness which had hitherto prevailed in the Royal Household. On March 16th the mother who had carefully and successfully trained her to the duties of her high position was called away, and on December 14th she was bereft of the choice of her early love, her faithful partner in life, her closest councillor and dearest friend. From end to end of the Empire, throughout the short period of his illness, there was intense anxiety, and on his death deep grief for "Albert the Good" and sorrow for his widowed Queen. In 1871 typhoid fever attacked the Prince of Wales at Sandringham, and for days his life was in the balance. His recovery was the cause of general rejoicing throughout the Empire, and his going to return thanks with his mother later on made London one of the grandest sights seen in this century. Since the death of the Prince Consort Her Majesty has lived in comparative retirement, but in this, her jubilee year, has shown herself more publicly among her people, and the enthusiasm with which her presence has everywhere been welcomed shows the deep-rooted affection felt for her. During her reign seven attempts have been made on her life—the first in 1840 by Edward Oxford, a pot-boy of 17; who fired at her without effect. He was found to be insane. The second by John Frances, who also fired at her on the spot where Oxford made his attempt. He was transported for life. This was in 1842. The third was by a hunch-back lad named Bean, who was frustrated in an attempt to fire at her. He was sent to Milbank prison for eighteen months. A fourth was by an Irish labourer named Hamilton, in May, 1849, at the place where Oxford fired. He was transported for seven years. In 1850 an ex-Lieutenant of Hussars, named Pate, struck Her Majesty in the face with a stick. He suffered seven years transportation. In February, 1872, a boy named O'Connor pointed an unloaded pistol at her. He was imprisoned for a year and whipped (not flogged). Finally in March, 1882, a lunatic, Rodrick McLean, fired at her and was ordered to be kept in confinement during the Crown's pleasure.

OTTAWA.

A Short Historical Sketch of the Capital.

Ottawa City, Capital of the Dominion of Canada, has according to its last municipal census a population of 36,000. This is without the population of its suburbs and the City of Hull, which bears the same relation to it as Brooklyn does to New York, and would swell its population to fully 14,000 more. It occupies an area of 1,820 acres, including the village of New Edinburgh—the Vice-Regal seat—which was made a ward of the city during the past year. The Ottawa, or Grand River, from which the city takes its name is on one side its Provincial as well as civic boundary and is the stream over which a vast bulk of one of Canada's greatest sources of wealth finds its way to market. It is a tributary of the St. Lawrence and has a course of over 400 miles draining an area of more than 80,000 square miles and collecting the waters of more than 20 streams with courses of 200 miles each. That Ottawa should become the headquarters of one of the chief factors in the maintenance of the British Empire is not astonishing. In its midst lies one of the grandest practicable water powers of the world; its valleys teem with mineral wealth of untold extent, which each exploration only increases in value; its forest wealth is incalculable. Year after year fire has swept "the lords of the forest" away and still the lumberman can survive the loss on his limits, and supply to the world the material wanted from first to last in our existence. This is called the "iron age" but that sweet songstress, Eliza Cook, speaks truth when she says "From our cradle cot to our coffin boards we're in debt to the forest trees." The natural centre of such a valuable territory, Ottawa must sooner or later have risen to a place of importance, but its advancement has been hastened by other causes. The union of the two old Canada's—now Ontario and Quebec—caused a jealousy as to which should have the seat of government, and after much wrangling in the Legislature the question was finally submitted to Her Majesty with a request that she would exercise the royal prerogative and select the capital. Her Majesty decided on Ottawa which had been indicated years before by her earliest friend and adviser whose death she always mourned—"The Saviour of Europe," "The Duke." The construction of the government buildings was begun without delay and in 1860 the corner stone of the centre block was laid by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales—the first time such a ceremony had ever been performed in a dependency by the heir apparent to the throne. The buildings and the site on which they stand are not to be surpassed by any other place on this continent, the fact having been acknowledged by the leading intellectual bodies who have visited the city.

The war of 1812 caused the British Government to wish for an internal route to connect Montreal with the great lakes so as to avoid the exposed frontier route along the St. Lawrence. Col. By, an officer of Engineers, suggested a canal to connect the points by using the Ottawa River to the foot of the present city and completing the route by a canal to Kingston. His plan for the canal was a novel one at the time, the principle being to deepen small streams instead of cutting channels.

The construction of this work created a small collection of houses for the use of the labourers, mostly Irish, on the site now occupied by the Messrs. Bate, which was called "Corkstown." This was in 1827 and the population gradually increased. The place was incorporated as a city in 1854 with a population of 10,000, in 1861 the population had risen to nearly 15,000, and in 1871 to 21,545, in 1880 to 25,000. The slowness of its early growth may be accounted for by its isolated position. Slow steamers enabled residents to visit Montreal if they could spare three days to do so. The construction of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Railway made a very slight improvement in matters, but a great change took place when what the Hon. R. W. Scott termed "the golden link" was opened between here and Carleton Place. Still further improvement in facilities for reaching the city from east and west have sprung up since the main line of the Canadian Pacific was located to run to it and the Canada Atlantic built, and it is now the acknowledged railway centre of a vast, valuable and but partially developed territory. In its scenic surroundings it offers many attractions to the tourist. The grand panorama which meets the eye from the bluffs on which it stands equals in beauty and grandeur that of Quebec and far surpasses the boasted palaces of the Hudson both in scope and variety. The graceful curtain of the Rideau, the wild waters of the Big Kettle are both full of beauty though different in kind. In its industries Ottawa is in many respects in its infancy. Lumber is still its grand staple, but great changes have occurred in that trade since the first trees were cut. Square timber to be rafted was all the lum-

In the past five years I have adjusted a large number of trusses (my own manufacture) by special request for leading members of the medical faculty in the Dominion of Canada, never failing in any case to give satisfaction, which is sufficient proof that the reducing of hernia, fitting and adjusting trusses to retain large scrotal and other unmanageable ruptures of long standing

Acquired only by constant practice and a thorough knowledge of the various kinds of rupture.

Therefore the old method of going to your druggist and buying an improper truss, is the cause of so many deaths resulting from strangulated hernia, much suffering and so many large scrotal ruptures, at least 80 per cent. of which could have been cured if properly treated.

My prices are very reasonable considering nature of appliance and trouble I take to ensure perfect satisfaction in every case, viz., $5 to $15.

berman would touch and the first proposals to erect a saw mill at the Chaudiere were ridiculed. Even when the sawed lumber trade had assumed gigantic proportions the waste of material was enormous and a bulk of 100,000 logs in the shape of material now utilized was thrown yearly into the river. A vast army of workmen are now employed in this industry, and the mills are among the finest in the world. Though not within the city proper a reference may be here made to the works of Mr. E. B. Eddy whose enterprise gives employment to some 1,500 souls. The money invested in his concern may be reckoned by the million. He supplies a great portion of the continent with matches and his wooden ware of all kinds is to be found in every section of the country. The other chief mills at the Chaudiere are those of Bronson & Weston, John R. Booth, Perley & Pattee, G. A. Grier & Co. Other large mills near the city are those of James McLaren & Co. and Gilmour & Co.

In municipal progress Ottawa ranks high. Its waterworks are second to none either for efficiency or cheapness of maintenance, and in reality have not cost the city one cent, the saving effected to the rate-payers by the change of insurance rates consequent on their construction being considerably more than what would meet interest and sinking fund. In connection with them was established a paid fire brigade and electric fire alarm. Ottawa can also claim to be the first city on the continent thoroughly lighted by electric light. As to its moral standing the smallness of its police force, only thirty-two men of all ranks, with one hundred miles of streets to control, and the fact that no serious crime out of those occasionally committed has gone unearthed, tells its own tale. Among its Public Buildings the most noticeable are the Governmental ones (well executed wood cuts of these buildings will be found in another part of the book) standing on a bold bluff on the south side of the Ottawa, 150 feet above the river. They consist of three blocks, the centre is used for the meetings of the Legislature, and the others for the Departmental Offices. They are admitted, taken in conjunction with their site, to form a group of unrivalled magnificence. They stand in a space of 27 acres which has been tastefully laid out in lawns and flower plots. Built to answer the wants of Old Canada, (Ontario and Quebec) they were insufficient to meet the wants of business under Confederation and have been at various times enlarged, and now another block is nearly completed. They all contain many objects of historic interest, including national pictures. The library is a magnificent chamber and well worth a visit. The cost of the three blocks was about $5,500,000. In the same enclosure is the Supreme Court building, in which is also the National Gallery which contains a fine collection of pictures. On O'Connor street will be found the Fisheries Exhibit, which at the Fishery display in England carried everything before it, and on Sussex street the Geological Museum, an unrivalled collection got together at the cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars. These are open to the public free of any charge. The city public buildings, including the City Hall, Registry Office and Public and Separate schools, are all handsome and substantial structures. The cost of the City Hall was $90,000. Outside of these are other Educational Institutions. The Normal and Model schools, erected and maintained by the Ontario Government ; the Collegiate Institute, maintained principally by a special city fund. The College of Ottawa, in charge of the Catholic Clergy, occupies a vast pile of buildings on Theodore street. It numbers its resident students by hundreds, and is a favorite resort of American pupils. It is heated throughout with steam and lighted entirely by incandescent light. There is no occasion to kindle a match for any purpose in any part of the building. The County buildings on Nicholas street comprise the Court House, County Hall, Jail and Registry Office, all handsome limestone buildings. "The Ladies College," on Albert street, is another handsome place. The churches of the city are twenty-six in number, many of them costly and imposing structures. They include Baptist, Congregational, German Lutheran, five Episcopal, five Methodist, five Presbyterian and seven Roman Catholic. Of these the Basilica, on Sussex street ; Christ Church (Anglican), St. Georges (Anglican) the Dominion Methodist, the Baptist Tabernacle, St. Andrews (Presbyterian) are all very handsome structures. The scenic points of interest about the city are chiefly the Rideau and Chaudiere falls, both of which are easily reached by the street railway. Lansdowne Park, where the races and athletic sports in connection with the Jubilee celebration will be held, is city property, a short distance outside the municipal limits and accessible by water along the canal or by buss lines on Elgin or Bank streets.
