DEVINE'S

Compound Pitch Lozenge.

An appeal to matter of fact, and common sense.

IT is that which has so long been sought for,
and is in full faith offered to the public as a CERTAIN CURE FOR

Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, Costiveness, Asthma,
and Consumption,

and will, in any case where lungs sufficient are left to sustain life, check the inflammation, and raise the patient to health. This is not an idle boast, nor is this remedy sent into the market without a thorough trial; but has proved beyond a doubt that what has been asserted can be done.

We do not ask you, reader, to take our word, but those who, but a few weeks ago had given up in despair and are now in the enjoyment of health, and without asking have given us their certificates
in favor of this great remedy.

Let all, then, who are afflicted, TRY IT, and if the assertions on each box do not, they try it, an impartial trial, the price will be returned: when the article is not perfectly satisfactory!

If the Lozenge on being exposed to the air in the weather should become soft, it is no objection, but rather goes to prove that they are in good condition.

S. D. Fuller & Co., Boston, Proprietors for Devine's Pitch Lozenge, Dr. Corvelli's Pain Expectorant and Macaronic, a sure cure for the Piles;
also, the Yankee Extract, an article warranted to take out all Grease, Oil, Paint, &c., without injury to the finest texture or showing any dust on the piece cleaned. All other popular Medicines sold wholesale at the lowest Cash prices.

Poetry.

YOUTH AND AGE.

The following beautiful lines originally appeared in the Edinburgh, a periodical started about twenty years ago, by the boys of Eaton College. For truth, tenderness and melody, they are incomparable.

I often think each tottering form,
That limps along in life's decline,
Once bore a heart as young as warm,
As full of life thoughts as mine!

And each has had its dream of glory,
As we have had our hopes of fame;
As our unequalled, pure romance;
Commencing when the blushing boy
First thrills at lovely woman's glance.

And each could tell his tale of youth—
Would think its scenes of love evince
More passion, more unearthly truth
Than any tale before or since.

Yes! they could tell of tender lays,
At midnight penned in classic shades,
Of days more bright than modern days,
And maidens more fair than modern maids.

Of whippers in a wiling car;
Of kisses on a blushing cheek;
Each kiss, each whisper far more dear
Our modern lips to give or speak.

Of passions slighted or betrayed;
Of kindred spirits early lost,
And buds that blossom but to fade:
Of beating eyes and tresses gray,
Of elastic form and noble brow,
Of forms that have all passed away,
And left them what we see them now!

As it is that our hearts are true,
So very light and frail a thing?
Our youth's lightest brightest visions move
Forever on time's restless wing!

Must all the eyes that still are bright,
And all the lips that talk of bliss,
And all the forms so fair to sight,
Hereafter only come to this?

Thou art the earth's best visions worth,
If at length we love them thus?
If all we value most on earth
Ere long must fade away from us?

L. V. Jour. Con.

The Case of Miss Cunningham.

From the London Times.

Intelligence has reached this country of yet another act of fanaticism, folly, and cruelty on the part of the Tuscan Government. The Grand Duke has, no doubt, calculated the measure of his own weakness before venturing upon such a step, for it is only on his own perfect dependence that he can rest his hopes of impunity.

Had the authorities of any country which counted for something in the councils of Europe ventured upon such a course, the intelligence of the outrage would have reached England long before it had been committed, and long before the immediate steps would have been taken to call the perpetrators to account. The more beg-garly and miserable a State, the greater would seem to be its readiness to outrage and insult those greater Powers which were only too ready to crush the slightest portion of their strength utterly to crush the offender, and to dictate to him whatever terms they may choose to impose. England stands alone in its forbearance. It was but the other day the diplomatic agents of the French Government exorted what concessions they chose from the Turkish Ministers. It was but the other day that the Emperor of Austria followed in the same course, when he thought that the just rights of his subjects were violated. At the present moment the Russian troops are in actual occupation of two provinces, simply because the Czar chose to consider that the members of his Church, not being his own subjects, did not participate in all the advantages which he desired to obtain for them. France, Austria, Russia, and the Great Powers—understand no trifling when their subjects are outraged and oppressed on account of their religion. England alone stands aloof. It is enough that any person should be an English subject and a Protestant, and it is competent to any of the little trumpet States who are dotted about the Continent of Europe to incarcerate and torture them at their pleasure. It may well become a question with our Executive Government how long these mockery Sovereigns shall be allowed to treat the port of Leghorn, their Grand Duke might reckon the duration of his power by days, even if he were left to the tender mercies of his own subjects. We know that the strength of England is—we know what the condition of the Italian Peninsula is—we know right well how complete is the weakness of the petty Sovereigns among whom it is divided;
and yet this is the moment—with the French in Rome and the Russians in the Danubian Provinces—that the Grand Duke has chosen for incarce-rating a young English lady upon so frivolous a pretext that we may well wonder how he could procure the assent of even a Tuscan Minister to so preposterous and monstrous a proceeding.

The facts of the case we will here recapitulate,
lest they may have escaped your recollection.

There was a Scotch lady—Mrs. Cunningham—staying, with her two daughters, at the Baths of Lucca. When they were about to take their departure, Mrs. Cunningham, accompanied by one of her daughters, went to the law offices to have their passports revisé, as their personal appearance had been required. The local police agent inquired why Miss Margaret Cunningham had not presented herself. The answer was, that she was unwell and confined to her bed. This, however, would not suffice,—the police agent had a communication to make to the young lady of the highest importance, and come she must. There was, of course, no remedy. Miss Cunningham attended in due time at the police office, and no sooner had arrived than the police agent informed her that she was a prisoner. Her crime was, that she had given to some Tuscan peasants an Italian Bible and an Italian translation of the Pilgrim's Progress. Witnesses had been summoned to Lucca to prove the crime, and, in obedience to "higher orders," the police agent had no option but to remove her from the Baths under armed escort to that town.

The gendarmes were called out in great force—
no doubt the young lady should engage in hostilities with Tuscan; and, in company with Mr. Wm.
Millar, she was removed to the Penitentiary at Lucca. As the report runs, the young lady took the matter coolly enough, fortified, no doubt, by that feeling of intense contempt for the comité
who had her in their power, which any rational being would have felt under like circumstances.

The mother, however, was half-distracted.—The spectacle of oppression is harder of endurance than oppression itself. While all this was going on Sir William Millar had given himself the unnecessary trouble of going to the half-witted fanatic by whose order the outrage was committed, judging, as any reasonable man might, that the whole affair was a mistake—a mere blunder of the most injure and Hot Corn; or Life, in the City.

CHAPTER I.

"Hot corn! Here's your nice hot corn, smoking hot, smoking hot, just from the pot! Hour after hour, last evening, as we sat over the desk, this cry came up in a soft, plaintive voice over our window, which told us of one of the ways of the poor to eke out the means of subsistence in this overburdened, ill-fed and wretched city, where they are exposed to the daily chance of death from some sudden out-breaking epidemic like that now desolating the same kind of streets in New Orleans, and swallowing up its thousands of victims from the same class of poverty-stricken, uncomfortably provided-for human beings, who know not how, or have not the power to flee to the healthy hills and green fields of the country. Here they live, barely live, in holes almost as hot as the hot corn, the cry of which rung in our ears from dark until midnight.

"Hot corn! hot corn! here's your nice hot corn," rose up in a faint, child-like voice, which seemed to have been aroused by the sound of our step as we were about entering the Park, while the City Hall clock told the hour when ghosts go forth upon their midnight rambles. We started, as though a spirit had given us a rap, for the sound seemed to come out of one of the iron posts which stand as sentinels over the main entrance.

Looking over the post, we discovered the owner of the hot corn cry, in the person of an emaciated little girl about twelve years old, whose dirty frock was nearly the color of the rusty iron, and whose face, hands and feet, naturally white and delicate, were grimed with dirt until nearly of the same color. There were two white streaks running down from the soft blue eyes, that told of the hot, scalding tears that were coursing their way over a naturally beautiful face.

"Some corn, sir," lisped the little sufferer, as she saw we had stopped to look at her, hardly daring to speak to one who did not address her in rough tones of command, such as, "Give me some corn, you little wolf's whelp," or a name still more opprobrious to herself and mother. Seeing we had no look of contempt for her, she said, piteously, "please buy some corn, sir."

"No, my dear, we do not wish any; it is not very healthy in such warm weather as this, and especially so late at night."

"O dear, then what shall I do?"

"Why, go home. It is past midnight, and such little girls as you ought not to be in the streets of this bad city at this time of night."

"I can't go home—and I am so tired and sleepy. O dear!"

"Cannot go home? Why not?"

"O, sir, my mother will whip me if I go home without selling all my corn. O, sir, do buy one ear, and then I shall have only two left, and I am sure she might let little sis and me eat them, for I have not had anything to eat since morning, only one apple the man gave me, and one part of one he threw away. I could have sold a turnip at the grocery when I went to get—get something in the pitcher for mother, but I dare not. I did use to steal, but Mr. Pease says it is naughty, indeed I don't; and I don't want to be a bad girl, like Lizzy Smith, and she is only two years older than me, if she does dress fine; cause Mr. Pease says she will be just like old drunken Kate, one of these days. O, dear, now there goes a man, and I did not cry hot corn; what shall I do?"

"Do!" There, that is what you shall do, as we dashed the corn in the gutter. "Go home; tell your mother you have sold it all, and here is the money."

"Won't that be a lie, sir? Mr. Pease says we must not tell lies."

"No, my dear, that won't be a lie, because I have bought it, and thrown it away instead of eating it."

"But, sir, may I eat it, then, if you don't want it?"

"No, it is not good for you; good bread is better, and here is sixpence to buy a loaf, and here is another to buy some nice cakes for you and sis. Now that is your money; don't give it to your mother, and don't stay out so late again. Go home earlier, and tell your mother you cannot keep awake, and if she is a good mother, she won't whip you."

A new that exhausted nature slept—that a tender house plant was exposed to the chilling influence of a night of rain—that an innocent little girl had the curb-stone for a bed, and an iron post for a pillow—that by and by she would awaken, not invigorated with refreshing slumber, but poisoned with the sleep-inhaled miasma of the filth-reeking gutter at her feet, which may be breathed with impunity awake, but, like the malaria of our southern coast, is death to the sleeper.

It was past midnight when she awoke, and found herself with a desperate effort just able to reach the bottom of the rickety stairs which led to her home. We shall not go up near her in the city poor.

Tired, worn with the daily toil—for such is the work of an editor who caters for the appetites of his morning readers—we were not present the next night to note the absence of that cry from its accustomed spot; but the next, and next, and still on, we listened in vain—that voice was not there. True, the same hot corn cry came floating upon the evening breeze across the Park, or wormed its way from some cracked fiddle voice down the street, up and around the corner; or out of some dark alley, with a broken English accent, that sounded almost as much like "lager beer" as it did like the commodity the immigrant, struggling to eke out his precarious existence, wished to sell. All over this great, poverty-burdened and wicked-waste, extravagant city, at this season, that cry goes up nightly, proclaiming one of the habits of this late-supper-eating people.

Yes, we missed that cry. "Hot corn" was no longer like the music of a stringed instrument to a weary man, for the treble string was broken, and, to us, the harmony spoiled.

What was that voice to us? It was but one of the ten thousand, just as miserable, which may be daily heard where human misery has its abode. That voice, as some others have, did not haunt us, but its absence, in spite of all reasoning, made us feel uneasy.

It was this feeling that prompted us, as we left our desk one evening, to go down among the abodes of the poor. We followed in the route we had seen that little one go before—it was our only cue—we knew no name, had no number, nor knew any one that knew her whom we were going to find. Yes, we knew that good missionary, and she had told us of the good words which he had spoken, but would he know her from the hundred just like her? Perhaps. It will cost nothing to inquire. We went down Centre street with a light heart; we turned into Cross street with a step buoyed by hope; we stood at the corner of Little Water street, for the sound of prayer, followed by a sweet hymn of praise to God, went up from the site of the Old Brewery, in which we joined, thankful that that was no longer the abode of all the worst crimes ever concentrated under one roof.

Had it a step approaches. It were a curious question to ask a stranger, in such a strange place, particularly one like him, haggard with over-much care, toil or mental labor. Prematurely old, his days shortened by over-work in young years, as his furrowed face and almost frenzied eye hurriedly indicate, as we see the flash of the lamp upon his dark visage, as he approaches with that peculiar American step which impels the body forward at railroad speed. Shall we get out of his way before he walks over us? What if he is a crazy man? No, it is that good missionary—that man who has done more to reform that den of crime, the Five Points of New York, than all the municipal authorities of this police-hunting and prison-punishing city, where misfortune is deemed a crime, or the unfortunate driven to it, by the way they are treated, instead of being reformed, or strengthened in their resolution to reform, by hard words rather than prison bars.

"Sir," said Mr. Pease, "what brings you here at this time of night, for I know there is an object; can I aid you?"

"Perhaps. I don't know—a foolish whim—a little child—one of the miserable, with a drunken mother."

"Come with me, then. There are many such. I am just going to visit one who will die before morning—a sweet little girl, born in better days, and dying now—but you shall see, and then we will talk about the one you would seek to save."

We were soon threading a narrow alley, where pestilence walketh in darkness, and crime, wretched poverty and filthy misery go hand in hand to destruction.

"Behold," said our friend, "the fruits of our city excise. Here is the profit of money spent for license to kill the body and damn the soul." Proved by the awful curses and loud blows of a drunken husband upon a wife, once an ornament of society, and exemplary member of a Christian church, that came up out of one of the low cellars that human beings call by the name of home.

The fetid odor of this filthy lane had been made more fetid by the late and almost scalding hot rains, until it seemed to us that such an air was only fit for a charnel-house. With the thermometer at 86 at midnight, how could men live in such a place, below the surface of the earth? Has rum rendered them proof against the effect of carbonic acid gas?

We groped our way along to the foot of an outside staircase, where our conductor paused for a moment, calling our attention to the spot. "Here," said Mr. Pease, "the little sufferer we are going to see, fainted a few nights ago, and lay all night exposed to the rain, where she was found and beaten in the morning by her miserable mother, because she had not sold all her corn."

"Be careful," said he, "the stairs are very old and slippery."

"That voice. We could not be mistaken. We could not enter. Let us wait a moment in the open air, for there is a choking sensation coming over us."

"Come in," said our friend. "Will he come?"

Two hands were stretched out imploringly toward the Missionary, as the sound of his voice was recognized.

"She is much weaker to-night," said her mother, in quite a lady-like manner, for the sense of her drunken wrong to her dying child had kept her sober, ever since she had been sick, "but she is quite delicious, and all the time talking about some man that spoke kindly to her one night, and gave her money to buy bread."

"Will he come?"

"Yes, yes, through the guidance of the good spirit that guides the world, and leads us by unseen paths, through dark places, he has come."

The little emaciated form stared up in bed, and a pair of beautiful soft blue eyes glanced around the room, piercing the semi-darkness, as if in search of something heard but unseen.

"Katy, darling," said the mother, "what is the matter?"

"Where is he, mother? He is here! I heard him speak!"

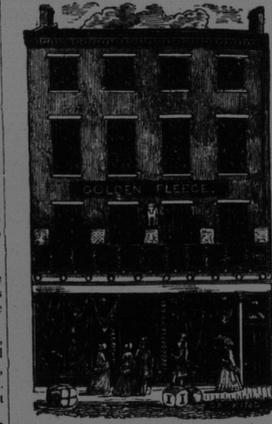

"Yes, yes, sweet little innocent, he is here, kneeling by your bedside. There, lay down, you are very sick."

"Only once, just once, let me put my arms around your neck, and kiss you just as I used to kiss papa. I had a papa once, when we lived in the big house—there, there—Oh, I did want to see you to thank you for the bread and the cakes; I was very hungry, and it did taste so good—and little Sis, she waked up, and she eat and eat, and after a while she went to sleep; hasn't I been asleep a good while? I thought I was asleep in the Park, and somebody stole all my corn, and my mother whipt me for it, but I could not help it. Oh, dear, I feel sleepy now. I can't talk any more. I am very tired. I cannot see; the candle has gone out. I think I am going to die. I thank you; I wanted to thank you for the bread—I thought you would not come. Good bye—Sissee, good bye, Sissee—you will come—mother—don't drink—any more—Mother—good bye—"

"This is the last of earth," said the good man at our side—"let us pray."

Reader, Christian reader, little Katy is in her grave. Prayers for her are unavailing. There are in this city a thousand just such cases. Prayers for them are unavailing. Faith without works won't work reform. A faithful, prayerful resolution, to work out that reform which will save you from reading the recital of such scenes—such fruits of the rum trade as this before you, will work together for your own and other's good. Go forth and listen. If you hear a little voice crying hot corn, think of poor Katy, and of the hosts of innocents slain by that remorseless tyrant, rum. Go forth and seek a better spirit to rule over us. Cry aloud, "will he come," and the answer will be, "yes, yes, he is here."

Mutual Responsibility of Pastor and People. Pastor and people! Let us beware of supposing that the end designed by the appointment of this connection is attained by its mere establishment, however gratifying it may be to either or both parties. They are not brought together by the providence of God for mere personal gratification, for the comfort and honor of the ministry, nor for the weekly entertainment of his hearers. It is highly possible that in this respect both might find all that they could desire, while the true ends of the relation were neither sought nor found, and the investigations of a final judgment to the confusion and condemnation of all. Ministers and people unitedly stand under solemn responsibilities to God for the accomplishment of his design in appointing such a mode of intercourse. Nor can there be a more awful awakening than in eternity of a pastor and people mutually pleasing and interested, to find that the grand work given them to do remains undone, and that the course of God has rested on all their pleasing things. Such an association is part of the gospel machinery for promoting God's glory and man's salvation. The sole value of machinery lies in its ability to do the work for which it was made. The beauty and finish of its parts may be delightful to contemplate. So far as they promote ease and efficiency of action, they are highly desirable. But its great criterion is the amount of work which it can do. Ministers and people have work to do for God. This is the sole reason why they are thus joined together. The final judgment on their association will be in accordance with the work which has been done. And in that judgment every soul must render its own particular account, and receive for itself the eternal consequences of its fidelity or neglect. All have work to do. Let it be distinctly understood that the obligation is universal, resting on every man, woman and child in a congregation. It is a very common mistake to regard all the labor and responsibility of success as resting on the minister alone. He is the husbandman; therefore he is held responsible for the fruitfulness of the vineyard. This view takes in only one side. His hearers also have active responsibilities. They likewise are called to labor for God under his direction. And he may have cleared his skirts by fidelity, while they fall condemned for neglect. Little can a minister accomplish where his people are not helpers of his labor. Much can be done by a congregation themselves zealous and laborious for Christ, even though there be supineness on the part of their pastor. The cause of Christ would not so languish, the growth of his Church be so slow, the standard of piety so inferior, nor ministers themselves so few and inefficient, were there a due sense of responsibility, and corresponding activity, in the congregations to which they preach. The responsibility is not more on the minister than on his hearers. Their work may differ in kind, their spheres in extent, but every soul in a congregation, even down to the least, is responsible to the full measure of his eternal happiness for the faithful service of Christ in that department essential to the general prosperity to which he has been called. Let us all feel this deeply; and those girded for a work the issues of which will be felt through eternity, breathe forth from this hour the daily, fervent, humble prayer, "O Lord, I beseech thee, send now prosperity!"—Parish Visitor.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

A MOST MIRACULOUS CURE OF BAD LEGS, AFTER 43 YEARS SUFFERING.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. William Galpin, of 70, St. Mary's Street, Weymouth, dated May 15th, 1851. To Professor HOLLOWAY. SIR—At the age of 27 my wife (who is now 61) caught a violent cold, which settled in her legs, and ever since that time they have been more or less sore, and greatly inflamed. Her agonies were distracting, and for months together she was deprived entirely of rest and sleep. Every remedy that medical men advised was tried, but without effect; her health suffered severely, and the state of her legs was terrible. I had often read your Advertisement, and advised her to try your Pills and Ointment; and, as a last resource, after every other remedy had proved ineffectual, she consented to do so. She commenced six weeks ago, and strange to relate, is now in good health. Her legs are painless, without seam or scars, and her sleep sound and undisturbed. Could you have witnessed the sufferings of my wife during the last 43 years, and contrast them with her present enjoyment of health, you would indeed feel delighted in having been the means of so greatly alleviating the sufferings of a fellow creature. (Signed) WILLIAM GALPIN.

A PERSON 70 YEARS OF AGE CURED OF A BAD LEG, OF THIRTY YEARS STANDING. Extract of a Letter from Mr. William Abso, Builder of G. Ovens, of Rushford, near Huddersfield, dated May 31st, 1851. To Professor HOLLOWAY. SIR—I suffered for a period of thirty years from a bad leg, the result of two or three different attacks of Gout, which accompanied by scabrous eruptions. I had recourse to a variety of medical advice, without deriving any benefit, and was even told that the leg must be amputated, yet, in opposition to that opinion, your Pills and Ointment have effected a complete cure in so short a time, that few who had not witnessed it would credit the fact. (Signed) WILLIAM ABSO.

The truth of this statement can be verified by Mr. W. P. England, Chemist, 13 Market Street, Huddersfield. A DREADFUL BAD BRUISE CURED IN ONE MONTH. Extract of a Letter from Mr. Frederick Turner, of Penarth, Kent, dated Dec. 13th, 1850. To Professor HOLLOWAY. DEAR SIR—My wife had suffered from Bad Bruise, for more than six months, and during the whole period had the best medical attendance, but all to no use. Having before had an awful wound in my own leg by your universal medicine, I determined again to use your Pills and Ointment, and therefore gave them a trial in her case, and fortunate it was I did so, for in less than a month a perfect cure was effected, and the benefit that various other benefactors of my family have done me, I have not time to mention. I now strongly recommend them to all my friends. (Signed) FREDERICK TURNER.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF A DANGEROUS SWELLING OF THE LEG. Copy of a Letter from John Foster, an Agriculturist, residing at Newborough, near Hexham, May 15, 1850. To Professor HOLLOWAY. SIR—For more than twenty years a swelling on each side of the leg, rather above the knee, for nearly two years, which increased to a great size. I had the advice of three eminent surgeons here, and was an inmate of the General Infirmary for four weeks. After various modes of treatment had been tried, I was discharged as incurable. Having heard so much of your Pills and Ointment, I bought a box, and in less than a month I was completely cured. What is more remarkable I was engaged twelve hours a day in the hay harvest, and although I have had no return of my complaint, I have had no day whatever of my complaint. (Signed) JOHN FOSTER.

AN INFLAMMATION IN THE SIDE PERFECTLY CURED. Copy of a Letter from Mr. Francis Arnot, of Bretherton, Louthian Road, Edinburgh, dated April 25th, 1851. To Professor HOLLOWAY. SIR—For more than twenty years my wife has been subject, from time to time to attacks of inflammation in the side, for which she was bled and blistered to a great extent, still the pain could not be removed. About four years ago she saw, in the papers, the wonderful cures effected by your Pills and Ointment, and thought she would give them a trial. To her great astonishment, she felt a relief from their use, and after persevering for three weeks, the pain in her side was completely cured, and she has enjoyed the best of health for the last twelve months. (Signed) FRANCIS ARNOT.

The Pills should be used conjointly with the Ointment in most of the following cases: Bad Legs, Cheek-foot, Skin disease, Burns, Chapped hands, Scour, Corns (soft), Sore heads, Itch of Moa, Cancer, Ulcers, Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Wounds, Fistulas, Gout, Glandular Swellings, Lambeigo, Piles, Hings, Rheumatism, Scalds, Sore Nipples, Coco-bay, Elephantiasis, Yaws.

Sold by the Proprietor, 244, Strand, (near Temple Bar), London; and by S. L. TILLEY, Provincial Agent, No. 15, King-street, St. John, N. B. A. Coy & Son, Fredericton; W. T. Baird, Woodstock; Alex. Lockhart, Quebec; James Beck, Bend of Pettaquidiac; O. K. Sayre, Dorchester; John Bell, Shediac; John Lewis, Hillsborough; John Barry, Canning; and James G. White, Bellefleur. —In Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 6d. and 7s. each. There is a very considerable saving in taking the larger sizes.
