CAPTAIN HENRY G. KENDALL CAPTAIN THOMAS ANDERSON

The fog shut her out, the red still showing. Then the Empress blew a signal of one whistle. We answered that signal and our engines were ordered slowed. We were not yet in fog.

Lord Mersey's Order. Before witnesses were called Lord Mersey asked who was to administer the oaths to the commission and many law books were looked up to find out the person qualified to act.

C. P. R. Side of Case. Mr. Aspinall then presented what he called a succinct summary of the case for the C. P. R.

The Storstad Case. The Storstad owners' case was then outlined by Mr. C. S. Hight, of New York as follows: "The Storstad was running on time charter. She was on her way to Montreal with 1800 tons of coal. She was abreast at Metis Point at 1.30 Sydney time or 2.30 by Montreal time. When abreast there at four miles off shore her course was laid west 1.4 sunt magnetic. The tide had been at low water at 10 o'clock and would have been at high at four in the morning. By the patent log we ran six knots; then ran west 12 south for five knots. Shortly after the log was taken in as not being necessary. Then course changed to west by south. Then the mast lights of the Empress were seen on the port bow. She was then six or seven knots off. About six or seven minutes after seeing her mast light we saw a colored light. It was green. Then we saw a change in her course. Her range lights came together and she showed red and green. Then the green faded and the red remained. After from 2 to 4 minutes quartermaster at the wheel, another standing by and a boy to carry messages on the bridge. Three only were saved. After running on the course I saw the Cook Point buoy. It was reported by the lookout in the crow's nest. There was a watch at stem head. I looked and saw the buoy. The weather was still clear and fine. Then I got one bell saying something was on our starboard bow. There were two masthead lights, then about six miles away. They were 3 or 4 points on my starboard bow. There was then no risk of collision. I still stood on until Father Point was ahead. Then ported the helm as usual there, altered course to north 73 magnetic, the right course for an outward bound vessel there.

OUT OF OFFICE, ROWELL TAKES UP MANDATE OF PEOPLE GIVEN IN 1902

Brantford Minister, Rev. T. E. Holling, Makes a Sorry Admission From Pulpit - Twelve Years For the Grits to Hear Voice of People.

In 1902, according to the Expositor report of the sermon of Rev. T. E. Holling in Colborne Street Church Sunday, the churches and temperance organizations of Ontario asked the Government to abolish the bar as the result of the plebiscite which had been taken.

Let's ask a few questions. How did Ontario in 1902 ask for the abolition of the bar? The people asked for it by a majority of 96,201. That is how they asked for it.

But, it is said, Mr. Rowell promises to go farther than the Whitney Government promises. To this the answer: N. W. Rowell of 1914 is the same N. W. Rowell of 1905 who supported Rossism in its worst iniquities, who spoke from a public platform the night before Ontario, enraged and ashamed of its predicament, swept Ross from power, and swept the province clean; it was Rowell who defended 20 years of the Liberal breach of faith with the temperance forces; the same Rowell aspires to ride into office now on a temperance catch-cry, despite the fact that only a few years ago he supported tooth and nail a party which thwarted temperance at every turn, and which when driven from office left only 27 municipalities in Ontario in the temperance column, as compared with 347 local option municipalities at present and 158 more where no licenses are issued.

Latest Dodge Of The Grits The latest dodge of some of the Ham canvassers is to make the pretence in certain quarters that Rowell's policy not only means that liquor shops will be kept open, but also that with regard to hotels only the bars will be removed—that any kind of drinks can be called for and served in hotel rooms. What's the next dodge?

A GRAND RALLY AT TUTELA PARK ON THURSDAY NIGHT

That the meeting in Tutela Park Thursday night in the interests of Mr. W. S. Brewster will be a hummer is assured on all sides. Conservatives, Liberals and their lady friends are invited to be present. The Dufferin Rifles band will be on hand, and a splendid program is being arranged. Mr. W. S. Brewster, the popular candidate in the cause of Good Government, who is putting up a winning fight at every point, will be supported by several prominent Conservative speakers. The natural hillside grandstand, which will accommodate thousands, affords splendid scope for a great rally. Line up with the forces of clean Government in this city and hear the exposure of Rowellism with the calcium turned on.

CAPTAIN KENDAL ON STAND AT ENQUIRY TODAY

gave two more, but I got no reply. I got three whistles from that ship. The third was about six points on my starboard bow.

"After blowing the second two I was looking out where the sound came from. I sighted his forward masthead and green and red side-light. He was about 100 feet away, he was bearing at right angles to my course and going fast, as foam at the bow of the ship shows. He must have put his helm hard aport.

The following examination of Capt. Kendal then took place by Mr. Aspinall.

Mr. Aspinall—You saw then that there was bound to be a collision?

Capt. Kendal—Yes.

"Did you give any order?"

"I shouted through a megaphone to the master of the Stordstad and asked him to go full speed ahead, while I ordered my own helm to be put hard aport, my idea being to save a collision if possible."

"Presuming that your orders could have been carried out what would have been the actual result?"

"It would have brought the vessels starboard to starboard and if we had to collide, minimize the blow's deadliness."

"Did you think at the time you gave the orders that they could be carried out?"

"I took a chance."

"How long a time did the engineers have to carry them out?"

"Only a few seconds."

"Did the Stordstad blow her whistle just before the collision?"

"Yes, she gave three short blasts, the third was just being blown when the boats came together."

"When did you give your three short blasts?"

"About five minutes before the collision."

"What part of the ship struck you?"

"The stem."

"Where was the Empress hit?"

"That part in a line between the two funnels."

"At what angle?"

"About seven points."

"Knowing what you do now, where did you think you were struck as regards bulkheads?"

"That would have the effect of making two bulkheads one."

"Yes."

"Did you give any orders to your officers immediately after you were struck or an order immediately before you were hit?"

"Just before I saw that a collision was inevitable, I sent Mr. Jones to get the boats ready, I called out 'Get the boats ready and all hands.'"

"Now, as to the efforts made to save life, what did you do next, Capt. Kendal?"

"I gave orders to the Stordstad to go full speed ahead through a megaphone. The vessels, however, separated."

"Why?"

"Because the Stordstad's engines were working full speed astern."

"The moment the collision came out of the hole what resulted?"

"The Empress keeled over immediately to starboard. I ordered the bulkhead doors to be closed."

Lord Mersey—"That would be after the ship had been struck?"

Capt. Kendal—Yes, I telegraphed it first and then shouted down to the engineers when I was told that the order was being carried out.

Mr. Aspinall—How were the bulkhead doors operated?

"Those down below by the engineers and those on the top decks by the stewards. I ran along the boat deck on the starboard side and threw off the grips on the boats myself."

"Did you at or about this time make any effort to get the Empress around towards the shore?"

"Yes when she keeled over I ordered full speed ahead and shouted to the engine room to give her all they could as I was trying to beach the ship. I was told the steam had gone."

"In what direction was the bow of the Empress pointed at this time?"

"To the south."

"What caused her to face towards the land?"

Threw Empress Round.

"The blow from the Stordstad. It had a tendency to throw her round because she was struck in the middle line and would go to starboard. I could have beached her in a short time if the steam had held out."

"What other signals did you give at this time?"

"I blew my siren."

"What was this for?"

"It was the signal on the Empress to abandon the ship."

"Was this signal known to your men?"

"Yes, it was posted up all over the ship. After this I ordered the wireless operator to send out the 'S.O.S.' signal and was informed this had been done."

"Did you see any boats lowered?"

"Yes, about three. I was on the port side of the bridge, but saw these four boats were lowered, but probably the captain did not see them. Did you see any passengers on deck?"

"Yes, the boat deck was swarming with people."

"What happened after that?"

Capt. Kendal paused at this point and seemed to waver a bit as he recalled the tragic events of the next few moments. Pulling himself together however, he said: "The Empress then keeled over further, and finally with a jerk went right over on her starboard side, both funnels hitting the water together. I was thrown in the water and when I came up, grasped a piece of grating. I was saved by some of my own men in a similar position. Both were pulling together to rescue, I loaded the boat down to the waterline, and placed people on the ropes around the boat telling the men to hold them. We went then to the Stordstad and disembarked the passengers. I called for volunteers to go back to the scene of the wreck and all of the ten men in the boat volunteered. I took six. We found no more alive and the dead we saw all had life belts around their waists. I saw two Stordstad boats, one had a survivor lying across the thwart and the other had three in a similar position. Both were pulling in survivors. We made our way to the Lady Evelyn, who said they had no survivors on board. I then boarded the Stordstad and went up to the bridge when I met her Captain and said to him:

Mr. Aspinall—Wait a moment. I don't know whether the court wants to hear the details of the controversy which followed.

Capt. Kendal I wish to give an accurate account of it.

Lord Mersey: "That may be; but it may not be relevant. Mr. Ducloux, have the Stordstad owners any objections to this matter being submitted now?"

Mr. Ducloux: "None at all."

Capt. Kendal, with a vigor that showed that he still felt some of the anger that moved him when he boarded the Stordstad, and met her captain, told her he had said to him:

"You have sunk my ship. You were going full speed."

Capt. Kendal said Captain Anderson said the Empress was going full speed. The dispute evidently swayed strength, because he collapsed and remembered no more of the events of the morning.

THE THREE-FIFTHS CLAUSE.

Referring to the above matter, the Brantford Expositor says, "Mr Brewster and Mr. Westbrook are both opponents for this unfair handicap upon the realization of the popular will."

The Courier does not wish to drag any religion, as such, into this political fight, although some ministers do not seem to be adverse to doing so themselves, at the same time it is not unfair to remark that as a Methodist, the editor of the Expositor very well knows that in relation to any important constitutional change the church requires much more than a majority vote.

That is because it is desired to ensure stability, and in recognition of the fact that something more than a mere majority is necessary for effective enforcement.

Will our editors now claim that this is an "unfair handicap"? If not, how does it possess the audacity to make such an assertion with reference to the more than majority provision in connection with local option?

The Government adopted the three-fifths principle because high authorities on this question have taken the ground that a prohibitory measure, to be effective and lasting, must be backed by a public sentiment that is stronger than a simple majority would seem to indicate.

Some returners—Chancellor Burwash, the late Rev. Dr. Warden and the late Rev. Dr. Potts—have maintained that a two-thirds vote should be required as the preliminary to the carrying into force of a prohibitory law. The two-thirds requirement has been adopted in Queensland and Cape Colony, but three-fifths requirements have been accepted as sufficient in other portions of the Empire, and Ontario has agreed to that provision.

The test of the three-fifths provision is to be found in the results achieved by it. The results cannot be viewed as unfavorable. Municipalities to the number of 347 are now under local option, compared with 27 previous to 1906. So that under the three-fifths system, nearly four times as many municipalities have been brought under local option as in all preceding years.

Hon. Mr. Hanna, in explaining the three-fifths provision, during the session of 1908, declared that the Government wish to give it a fair trial. He added: "If, after a fair trial, it proved to be unsuccessful the Government would be as ready to repeal the clause as it was to adopt it."

The act has been most successful, and will therefore remain as part of the Whittey program on behalf of true temperance, after the Government has been retained in office by a handsome majority on June 29th.

POLITICS AND PULPITS. (Ottawa Journal).

A good deal of discussion has been going on in Ontario papers as to the propriety of pastors or religious bodies calling upon voters to make a moral issue of the "Abolish the Bar" platform. A resolution to that effect was introduced in the London Methodist conference this week. It was adopted after a warm discussion against the protest of a number of members. A number of Hamilton ministers on Sunday last preached sermons in support of Mr. Rowell's programme. These ministers were attacked sharply by the Hamilton Spectator, and we don't suppose the row did religion any good. Other altercations of a similar nature have been going on. In Ottawa we have had some of the ministers publishing views on one side, and some on the other.

Is a moral or religious conviction always a good reason to cause a minister to publicly proclaim that his flock or denomination should vote one way or another? If so, every protestant minister should call upon his people to vote against Catholics, and every Catholic priest should instruct his people to vote against Protestants. No one would defend that sort of thing. Where, then is the line drawn in any moral or religious issue beyond which a clergyman should take political sides? The answer is not easy; but we confess we do not think the line needs to be stepped over in a case where a political platform of "Abolish the bar" is offered as the catch-cry of an Opposition in a province every municipality in which already has four different ways by law to abolish the bar where a majority of the people choose.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Both Brants! Brewster wins! Westbrook wins! Whitney wins!

Don't urge you to bet, but if you do, that's a safe one.

Twenty years of broken temperance promises under the Liberals! Do you want to return to it?

A vote for Brewster and a vote for Westbrook means that you endorse the workmen's compensation act.

A vote for Brewster or a vote for Westbrook means that you believe in a clean running of municipal affairs.

A vote for Brewster means that you relish having had your electric light bill cut in half, with further reductions to follow.

It has often been said that ministers of the gospel are only human. This seems particularly true in the political arena.

A Government that has made the best portion of this province dry and kept it dry, is a hard one to attack on the temperance issue.

A pertinent question might be asked in this fight, is how many Rowell candidates are there who don't subscribe to his Abolish the Bar policy?

A vote for Westbrook in the rural portions of North Brant means that the farmers there appreciate the location of a permanent District Representative in Paris.

With four different methods of wiping out the bar in this province, Rowell as Premier, seems to be a superfluous as an additional means.

It is the same Rowell who supported Ross in 1905, after 20 years of broken promises by the Liberals to the temperance forces.

When the people of Ontario voted 66,291 majority in 1904 for prohibition, why didn't Ross abolish the bar? Mr. Rowell was then one of his chief supporters too.

Temperance became a moral issue only when the Liberals got out of power in Ontario. Keep a moral issue by keeping the same party out of office.

"Work, Work, Work!" is the despairing cry of the Expositor. No go, old chap. You'll have crepe on your door as usual on the night of Monday, June 29th, and your stall-fed rooster will still remain in the barn.

A glance at the map of Ontario showing the territory made dry and kept dry in eight years past should convince the most ardent temperance worker that he has something to be grateful for from the Whittey Government.

"Abolish the Bar," is an election catch cry, pure and simple, adopted by the Grits to get back into office. As a subject for pulpit oratory, it seems an act against the decorum, which should pervade such an atmosphere.

Some Brantford ministers, forgetting temperance progress in Ontario in the past eight years, have spoken. It will be surprising if the open charge is not made that partisanship has not displayed itself in the pulpit.

"It needs no Daniel to interpret the handwriting on the wall to Mr. Brewster,"—Expositor.

Certainly not. It reads "Kept in his seat by a large majority." Meanwhile our cotem. is following a quite commendable course in seeking information.

The Courier presents its compliments to the "Brantford Ladies' Liberal Association" and begs to assure them that there are also quite a few Tory dames in this good burgh. By the way, the afore-said ladies presented Brother Ham with a bouquet of roses. Nothing like making sure of a tribute before the returns come in.

Ministers And The Campaign

Certain Brantford ministers took occasion on Sunday to use some pretty heated language in urging their congregations to support Mr. Ham in South Brant.

The Courier has no quarrel with them personally, nor with their private views, nor with how they vote, because that is their own business, just as it is with all of us—but it does consider that the pulpit ought not to be turned into a hustings.

It may be argued that a great moral issue is at stake, and that clerical utterances are justified. That admitted, the circumstance does not warrant a minister in such regard seeking to swing his congregation to the support of one man who is, after all, above everything else, seeking by every possible means to win a seat politically on behalf of a political party.

There can be no doubt at all about that, for it is indisputable that some canvassers on behalf of the local Rowellite candidate when they deem it necessary, are pointing out that even if Rowell wins their chance to obtain liquor will not be stopped.

Rev. Mr. Lavelle, of the Brant Avenue Church in this city, took the proper stand at the Hamilton Conference, when, to use his own language, he thus acted with regard to one clause of a resolution "This called upon ministers to support in their pulpits certain candidates. I stated to the conference that I thought this unwise and that I could not vote for it. The whole conference agreed with my objection, and the clause was eliminated."

The indisputable fact is, and the figures show it, that there has been more genuine and lasting temperance reform, with better enforcement, under the Whittey Government than took place during many years of Liberal rule.

They made promises to temperance adherents and grossly fooled them. They talked against hotelmen and levied on them for campaign funds, sometimes with threats of loss of license if they failed to wobble up. They made a farce of administering the law and all places reported after-hum and Sunday selling. And Mr. Rowell was through it all an ardent supporter of a Government or, more properly speaking, his Government, under which such things happened.

Now he proposes to abolish the bars and to leave the shops.

The Whittey Government, on the other hand, by means of Local Option and under the Canada Temperance Act, sees to it that just as soon as the temperance sentiment in any community warrants it, both bars and shops are closed.

Which is the truer temperance plan? Which makes for the better stability? There can only be one answer.

It's office that Rowell is after also equally true that maintenance of power is what the Whittey Government is after, but the latter in office have demonstrated themselves to be true friends of temperance, something which Mr. Rowell and his associates, when they had the power, never did.

And don't forget that at the attempt to centre the whole campaign upon this one subject is merely a party bid.

Rowell is an ardent advocate of Reciprocity—that move which would take the bread out of the mouths of Canadian workmen—and if elected would use all his efforts to help in carrying that dangerous fad.

He never showed himself an ardent friend and fighter for Hydro-Electric when the Whittey Government was building up that great project.

He supported a Government which maintained a school book monopoly which took hundreds of thousands of dollars from the pockets of the people.

He supported a Government which maintained prison labor in competition with free labor.

He supported a Government which never even made one move to introduce such a splendid provision as the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Ministers might as well realize the fact that the "abolish the bar" cry, with shops left open, is simply one strand in the tail of the political kite which Rowell is flying.

The plural voting bill got its third reading for the second time in the British House of Commons.

A tale of remarkable bravery on the part of the crew of a British oil tanker was unfolded at Philadelphia.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

For ten minutes or more they kept up their monotonous chant and steps, and then suddenly and in perfect unison they turned toward their victim with upraised bludgeons and emitting fearful howls, the while they contorted their features into the most diabolical expressions, they rushed upon him.

At the same instant a female figure dashed into the midst of the blood-thirsty horde, and, with a bludgeon similar to their own, except that it was bound from gold, beat back the advancing men.

After a moment or two the girl drew a knife from her girdle and, leaning over Tarzan, cut the bonds from his legs. Then as the men stopped their dance and approached she motioned to him to rise. Placing the rope that had bound his legs around his neck, she led him across the courtyard, the men following in twos.

Through winding corridors she led, farther and farther into the remotest precincts of the temple until they came to a great chamber in the center of which stood an altar. Then it was that Tarzan translated the strange ceremony that had preceded his introduction into this holy of holies.

He had fallen into the hands of devotees of the ancient sun worshippers. His seeming rescue by a votress of the high priestess of the sun had been but a part of the mimicry of their heathen ceremony—the sun looking down upon him through the opening at the top of the court had claimed him as his own, and the priestess had come from the inner temple to save him from the polluting hands of workmen—to save him as a human offering to their blinding deity.

And he had needed further assurance as to the correctness of his theory he had only to cast his eyes upon the brownish red stains that eaked the stone altar and covered the floor in its immediate vicinity or to the human skulls which grinned from countless niches in the lowering walls.

The priestess led the victim to the altar steps. Again the galleries above allied with watchers, while from an arched doorway at the east end of the chamber a procession of females filed slowly into the room. They wore, like the men, only skins of wild animals caught about their waists with narrow belts of chains of gold, but the black masses of their hair were furcated with golden beadgear composed of many circular and oval pieces of gold ingeniously held together to form a metal cap from which depended at each side of the head long strings of coral beads hanging to the waist.

Each priestess bore two golden cups, and as they formed in line on either side of the altar the men formed opposite them, advancing and taking each a cup from the female opposite. Then the chant began once more, and presently from a dark passageway beyond the hole beyond the altar, a woman in a black mass of her hair wreathed with golden beadgear composed of many circular and oval pieces of gold ingeniously held together to form a metal cap from which depended at each side of the head long strings of coral beads hanging to the waist.

The high priestess, thought Tarzan. She was a young woman with a rather intelligent and shapely face. Her ornaments were similar to those worn by her votaries, but much more elaborate, many being set with diamonds. In the circle she carried a long, jeweled knife, and in her hand a slender wand in lieu of a bludgeon.

As she advanced to the opposite side of the altar she halted and the chanting ceased. The priests and priestesses knelt before her, while with wand extended above them she recited a long and tiresome prayer.

When she finished her prayer she let her eyes rest for the first time upon Tarzan. With every indication of considerable curiosity she examined him from head to foot. Then she addressed him in a slow, guttural voice, as though she expected a reply.

"I do not understand your language," said Tarzan. "Possibly we may speak together in another tongue?" But she could not understand him, though he tried French, English, Arabic, Waziri and, as a last resort, the mougn's tongue of the West Coast.

For ten minutes or more they kept up their monotonous chant and steps, and then suddenly and in perfect unison they turned toward their victim with upraised bludgeons and emitting fearful howls, the while they contorted their features into the most diabolical expressions, they rushed upon him.

At the same instant a female figure dashed into the midst of the blood-thirsty horde, and, with a bludgeon similar to their own, except that it was bound from gold, beat back the advancing men.

After a moment or two the girl drew a knife from her girdle and, leaning over Tarzan, cut the bonds from his legs. Then as the men stopped their dance and approached she motioned to him to rise. Placing the rope that had bound his legs around his neck, she led him across the courtyard, the men following in twos.

Through winding corridors she led, farther and farther into the remotest precincts of the temple until they came to a great chamber in the center of which stood an altar. Then it was that Tarzan translated the strange ceremony that had preceded his introduction into this holy of holies.

He had fallen into the hands of devotees of the ancient sun worshippers. His seeming rescue by a votress of the high priestess of the sun had been but a part of the mimicry of their heathen ceremony—the sun looking down upon him through the opening at the top of the court had claimed him as his own, and the priestess had come from the inner temple to save him from the polluting hands of workmen—to save him as a human offering to their blinding deity.

And he had needed further assurance as to the correctness of his theory he had only to cast his eyes upon the brownish red stains that eaked the stone altar and covered the floor in its immediate vicinity or to the human skulls which grinned from countless niches in the lowering walls.

The priestess led the victim to the altar steps. Again the galleries above allied with watchers, while from an arched doorway at the east end of the chamber a procession of females filed slowly into the room. They wore, like the men, only skins of wild animals caught about their waists with narrow belts of chains of gold, but the black masses of their hair were furcated with golden beadgear composed of many circular and oval pieces of gold ingeniously held together to form a metal cap from which depended at each side of the head long strings of coral beads hanging to the waist.

Each priestess bore two golden cups, and as they formed in line on either side of the altar the men formed opposite them, advancing and taking each a cup from the female opposite. Then the chant began once more, and presently from a dark passageway beyond the hole beyond the altar, a woman in a black mass of her hair wreathed with golden beadgear composed of many circular and oval pieces of gold ingeniously held together to form a metal cap from which depended at each side of the head long strings of coral beads hanging to the waist.

The high priestess, thought Tarzan. She was a young woman with a rather intelligent and shapely face. Her ornaments were similar to those worn by her votaries, but much more elaborate, many being set with diamonds. In the circle she carried a long, jeweled knife, and in her hand a slender wand in lieu of a bludgeon.

As she advanced to the opposite side of the altar she halted and the chanting ceased. The priests and priestesses knelt before her, while with wand extended above them she recited a long and tiresome prayer.

When she finished her prayer she let her eyes rest for the first time upon Tarzan. With every indication of considerable curiosity she examined him from head to foot. Then she addressed him in a slow, guttural voice, as though she expected a reply.

"I do not understand your language," said Tarzan. "Possibly we may speak together in another tongue?" But she could not understand him, though he tried French, English, Arabic, Waziri and, as a last resort, the mougn's tongue of the West Coast.

CHAPTER XXII. La, the Priestess.

At her signal the priests rushed upon the "ape-man" and, lifting him bodily, laid him upon his back against the altar, his head hanging over one edge, his legs over the opposite. Then they and the priestesses formed in two lines, with their little golden cups in readiness to capture a share of the victim's life blood after the sacrificial knife had accomplished its work.

In the line of priests an altercation arose as to who should have first place. A hairy brute with all the refined intelligence of a gorilla stamped upon his bestial face was attempting to push a smaller man to second place, but the smaller one appealed to the high priestess, who in a cold, peremptory voice sent the larger to the extreme end of the line. Tarzan could hear him growling and grumbling as he went slowly to the interior station.

Then the priestess, standing above him, began reciting what Tarzan took to be an invocation, the while she slowly raised her thin, sharp knife.

Hamilton—John Wilson, Hamilton, Belleville—Jas. G. Nelson, Belleville.

Chatham—E. E. Morrison, St. Thomas—Wm. Britten, Lindsay—John T. Palmer, Galt—Jas. F. Mellor, Montreal—Watson J. Rogers.

After the opening ceremonies had been performed, the roll call showed the presence of the following delegates, while others are expected to arrive on the later trains.

Proceeding the consideration of the annual business of Grand Lodges, as outlined in the reports of the grand officers, the Purple degree, the highest obtainable by the membership of this order, was duly conferred on some thirty delegates, who thereby became entitled to take part in the deliberations of Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master then presented a report to the Grand Lodge, in which he reviewed the work of the past year, and set forth the duty and privilege of all loyal Canadians to become associated with a purely Canadian institution, which as one of the objects of the fraternal societies is to adopt the government rates for insurance, offers protection in the form of fraternal insurance and sick benefits on a safe basis. The address referred to the fact that only fifty deaths had occurred during the year, and that the sum of $37,892 had been paid from the insurance fund.

The sessions will be continued tomorrow, and will include the adoption of the financial reports and the election of officers for the next year.

This evening the delegates will be entertained by the local lodge in the exhibition of some of the work of the various degrees, with the assistance of the special degree team from

CIVIC BUSINESS WAS VERY LIGHT

Council Adjourned for Four Weeks—Bandmen Get Union Wages.

The City Council last night got through with a very light session and adjourned for four weeks instead of the usual two weeks as the aldermen did not want to meet for business on the night of Monday, June 29. It was the desire of all to be in the celebration two weeks hence and civic business being of light proportions anyway, the adjournment was made for four weeks.

There were no committee reports and the chief item of business was the adoption of two by-laws, one a lengthy local improvement affair and another to issue debentures to pay for the new Brantford road roller.

Before Council adjourned the contract for the summer band concerts in city parks was let to the Brant Dragoons and Lufferin Rifles bands. At a previous session of the council the same price as last year, $1 per man, for 30 men, was offered, but this was reported to be below the union scale. Accordingly on motion of Alderman Pitcher the pay was made $1.25 to each man and the bands will carry out the programme as arranged. There was no discussion on Ald. Pitcher's resolution.

Early Closing.
City Solicitor Henderson was present at the proceedings and stated that in the framing of a by-law to enable the merchants in different lines to close their places of business early, the greatest care would have to be exercised. A special committee was appointed including Ald. Hollinrake, Calbeck and Robinson to carefully examine petitions for early closing and see that they are properly signed. Mr. Henderson explained that an early closing by-law was surrounded with technicalities and had to be framed exactly in accordance with the Municipal Act. It is likely that it will be brought in at the next meeting of the City Council.

Same Old Complaint.
Ald. English said he did not want to be accused of introducing chestnuts in the council but he desired to call attention to the condition of affairs at the Market St. crossing of the Grand Trunk. A remedy had to come sooner or later and Ald. English declared that it should come right away. Workingmen were being held up daily and forced to lose time and in the days that meant something. If the loss of business accruing from time wasted at that crossing could be estimated in dollars and cents, it would be astounding. Laboring men had to take their dimmers to work because they were not sure of getting over the G. T. R. in decent time. The time lost on trains was five minutes, but it was hard to enforce.

Ald. Robinson asked what the police were doing but Ald. English replied that the police were of little use.

On the suggestion of the Mayor, Ald. Chaunter's railway committee will take the matter up. The council then adjourned.

Notes of Meeting.
A photograph of Six Nations Chiefs 1871 was offered to the City Council. The City Solicitor reported that those not having names on assessment roll were required to pay the transient traders' license fee.

A meeting with a representative of the Peace Centenary committee and city representatives was asked for July 2. Brantford is one of 100 places where an observance will be held.

A letter of appreciation was read from the Salvation Army Corps held in Brantford and others petitioned for resolution of sympathy passed by the council in connection with the Emperors of Ireland disaster.

The quorum present was as follows: Mayor Spence, Ald. Calbeck, Bragg, Sutch, Broadbent, Sigman, H. L. Wood, English, Quinlan, Robinson, S. P. Pitcher, Ward and Woolmans.

Coal Inspector McAuley reported weighing ten loads of coal none of which were underweight.

A complaint was received from Carl B. Smith Brant Avenue against the methods of street watering in his locality.

City Solicitor Henderson reported on the city cases before the Dominion Railway Board in connection with the L. E. and N. Railway. Decisions were reserved in all applications.

The Royal Templars asked for permission to erect an electric sign three stories up on the Heyd Block.

The secretary of the Dragoon band wrote stating that the rules of the Musicians' union would not permit them to play for $1 per man for city concerts. The band members want $1.50.

F. J. Bullock and Co. have twenty acres of property suitable for a small hospital and near the city which they offer for $7,000.

City Clerk Leonard was again absent.

THREE FIRE ALARMS

They Always Come in Threes—No Damage Done to Amount to Anything

Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock the central hall firemen received a telephone stating that a grass fire was burning in a rear lot on Terrace Hill street. Three men with chemicals were dispatched in the rig, and while the grass was burning quite fiercely when they arrived they soon had it out by the chemicals.

Yesterday afternoon an alarm from box 124 took the central and East end fire brigades to the factory of the Westmain Paving Co., Bruce street, where the roof had caught fire, in all probability from a spark from a passing locomotive. The firemen made a quick run, and though the fire had got well started in two sections of the roof, it was extinguished by the immediate use of the chemicals. A line of hose was laid but it was not needed. Had the fire got through the roof into the tar vats and other inflammable material below, the results might have been disastrous.

Alarm This Morning
A telephone alarm brought the firemen to 6 Ann street at 9:45 this morning, where the roof of a frame house owned by David Katz, grocer, at Pearl street, and occupied by foreigners had caught fire from an overheated chimney. The blaze was quickly extinguished by the use of the chemicals. The loss will not be more than $15.

BELGIAN STORM
BRUSSELS, June 16.—A great storm did immense damage throughout Belgium last night. In Brussels five persons were seriously injured by lightning. Near Ghent a railway employe was killed. At Renais two trains collided, the signals having been disarranged by the storm, and many persons were injured. Hundreds of cattle have been drowned or killed by lightning.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinoous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salt; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with soda, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delicious effervescent little water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. For this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and back-ache.

BRANTFORD TEAM AGAIN GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT ON ROAD

Toronto Scores a 5-1 Victory Over the Red Sox

TORONTO, June 16—The Beavers
of Brantford who are fighting it out in seventh position in the Canadian league met in the first of three game at the Island yesterday which the locals getting the decision by a score of one score. The weather was windy and fly balls were hard to judge and the crowd as usual was slim.
Bobby Auld was on the firing line
for the Beavers and pitched excellent ball. Only Killilea's fumble of Asher's rounder in the eighth prevented him
from being credited with a shut out.
He only allowed four hits and struck out six men. Asher on the other hand was touched up for eleven safeties and was wild at times. McPartlin and "Buck" Freeman, two old League heroes efficiated behind the bat and on bases respectively and their work was good.
For five innings neither team had a chance to score both pitchers allowing but two hits each. In the sixth, however, the Beavers got down to work, and before the session was over three men had crossed the plate.
The rally started with two down Auld and Trout both having whiffed the air three times 4 Burrill singled, second,
second, a usual occurrence for him,
and came home on Ort's double to left. Killilea hit to right the ball bouncing into the bleachers for a home.
Brantford secured their lone tally in the eighth. Asher was safe at first on Killilea's fumble of his grounder,
and he came home when Burns tripled to right. The Beavers returned the compliment in their half of the eighth by scoring two. Ort walked, advanced to second on Schultz's hit to right,
and came home when Isaac's singled through short. Schultz attempted to make third on the play, but was sought Burns to Roth. Loud smacked
the ball to centre for his third hit, and Isaac's scored. The bases were filled when Harkins singled, and Auld was passed but Trout bounded to Roth. The score:

First Inning
Brantford—Burns popped to short,
Wagner bounded to third. Deneau bounced to centre. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors.
Toronto—Trout fouled to catcher,
Burrill grounded to third. Ort walked

Notes of the Games

Pitcher Worfel is still on the suspended list.
Inhelder Barney did not report at Toronto yesterday.

Again the despatches read "Asher was pounded hard."
Gero and Taylor is the only dependables on the pitching staff.

Peterboro will visit Brantford on Thursday for a three-game set-to.
Johnny Nelson did not arrive yesterday, although he was expected.

Brantford has never yet in three years made a successful trip to Ottawa.
The Brantford club has plenty of time to strengthen up. It is up to Deneau.

Burns and Dolan can't hit. Ivers can hit but can't field. The outfield doesn't look like a pennant combination.
Smoky Joe Wood has recovered form for Boston, and this club will do a lot of damage in the league
before the season is over.

Forgue and Wagner can't hit, and the latter is slow in the field. Roth and Deneau are good enough, but the infield is not strong enough.

The club having lost four straight games on the road, the weak spots
can be picked out even from a distance without the aid of field glasses.
The truth of the matter is, the league is faster than ever this year,
and while the Brantford team is improved, it hasn't been strengthened in comparison with other contenders.

Rube Deneau has received word from President Navin of Detroit that the Detroit club is unable at present to turn over any of its pitchers to Brantford. Deneau had been after one of Jennings' crew.

President Nelson remarked last night that apparently some of the players on the club thought their jobs were cinched. From the tenor of the remarks of the President some body is in for a surprise.

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic In The World.

HAGERSTOWN, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.
I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general tonic and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim."

Results of Canadian League Games Yesterday—London Won.

ST. THOMAS, June 16.—The Senators went down to defeat here yesterday by a 7 to 4 score. The game was featured by the heavy hitting of Kading, McNellis and Nill. Gillespie got into the game for the first time, but did not appear extra well.
The Saints played rather loose ball, having four errors. Kane started for Ottawa, but retired in the third with two bingles. Hughie pitched good ball after the first. Score: Ottawa, 4; St. Thomas, 7.

WHITEWASHED HAMILTON

The Athletics could not hit Belting
in the Pinches
HAMILTON, June 16—Peterboro,
the cellar team the Canadian League race, appears to have the edge on the Hamilton team. Not content with taking two out of three from Yates' crew at Peterboro last week,
the team stepped on the diamond
here today and shut out the locals by a score of 4 to 0. The Athletics could not hit Belting in the pinches.
The visitors first two runs were the result of loose play, but clouting ended the other two. Dougherty pitched good ball for Hamilton but was not given the support that Belting was.

ERIE, June 16—Lorain won the second game of the series with Eric today by the score of 10 to 5. London's scores came largely as the result of Eric's errors, followed by hits on the part of the visitors. Only two did London waste hits, every other bingle scoring at least one run.
Reising would have been beaten had Eric given Dorbeck proper support.
With the game in hand, the London manager withdrew in the sixth and sent Beebe to the hill.

JOHNSON-MORAN
FIGHT LOOKS GOOD

Little Evidence of Any Prize
Fighters—Will Divide
Receipts.

PARIS, June 16—I am able to present as a result of a careful investigation certain facts concerning the "prize fight" between Jack Johnson and Frank Moran, advertised to take place at the Velodrome d'Ivry on June 2, which should make American bettors cautious in placing their money.
Although the encounter is supposed to be for the heavyweight championship of the world, everything relating to the Johnson-Moran fight that might be classified as sport has been relegated to the background by financial considerations.
Evidence of the existence of any real prize money is wanting, although there was a great ado over the fight agreement some months ago,
with the moving pictures of Johnson and Moran seated behind rows of champagne bottles in a swagger restaurant, Bois de Boulogne affixing their sin-
gatures to the articles.
Your correspondent witnessed the signing of an agreement, also the face of photographing the cheque for 175, 000 francs, drawn to the order of Johnson, which the articles declared was to be paid to him or his wife, the afternoon of the fight. The cheque which was on the American-Express Co., was signed by Charles McCarthy, the old Coney Island showman, who admitted that he did not possess that much money of his own, and said he was acting for "rich Americans."
When pressed to say who the owners of the money were, both Johnson and Moran mentioned the name of William Astor Chanler, who was then and still is, a patient in the American hospital at Neuilly. That Mr. Chanler did not advance McCarthy sufficient money to draw such a cheque was made clear by Charles Chanler.
Still more ceremony followed the signing of the articles by having the cheque deposited in the vaults of the Credit Lyonnais, concerning which an international American bar humorist declared, "They don't charge much storage for cheques there unless sent in by the ton."
The articles also provided that the bout was to be staged by the French fight impresarios, M. Maitrot and M.
Roth; also that the referee should be named thirty days before the fight. As a matter of fact, the real busy boy of the programme has been Dan McKenrick, who came to Europe as the manager of Moran, and has since carried out considerable conversation in the name of Johnson, and who a few weeks ago succeeded in having Mai-rot and Roth eliminated in favor of Theo Vienne, the well known Paris promoter, who is now staging the bout.
Dan McKenrick admitted privately
that at the time Vienne took the management of the fight it was definitely off, and that the leading sporting papers declined to advertise it because Maitrot and Roth failed to come up with the financial guarantees; also that several well known Paris sporting men to whom the management was offered flatly declined to have anything to do with it.
Although the fight date is now only three weeks away, no referees has yet been chosen, and it is now a matter of common acceptance in the Paris sporting world that the only real money will be the gate receipts,
of which a large percentage is to go to Johnson, win, lose or draw; also the moving picture percentage. The moving pictures are the crux of the situation.
Johnson, who is lazy, with poor wind, is in spasmodic training at Luna Park, the Paris Coney Island resort, where he deigns to appear every few days and spar half a dozen rounds with several slow third raters. The New York Times correspondent made several journeys to the park when Johnson did not show up. And when he finally saw him the major part of the program consisted in Johnson making attempts at humor concerning his "consumptive condition," which prodigious thoughts were all repeated entire by the corps of attendant negro sycophants, followed by their own side-splitting laughter.
Moran is supposed to be training in the country at Pere Goujon, on the River Oise, where it is advertised that Willie Lewis, the American boxer, is working with him.

However investigation elucidated the information that Lewis is still in the town. Also certain definite reports concerning Moran's life lead to the natural supposition that he is not training for a championship fight. So the natural question asked is: How many rounds did the moving picture concern insist the fight should go before matters should get serious?
Definite rumor says ten rounds will satisfy the movies, after which nobody seems seriously to consider the chances of Moran.
Moran's Manager, McKenrick, occupies an office in Rue Blanche. In the same room is a desk for Johnson's representative, so sporting men feel there is plenty of opportunity for arrangements being perfected.
Another rumor says McKenrick
quarreled with Moran over the latter's choice of training quarters after having been offered a large sum by the Magic City, another Coney Island resort, which wanted Moran as a rival attraction to Johnson at Luna Park.
From the same McKenrick-Johnson headquarters in the Rue Blanche also came an astonishing ultimatum to the newspapers, particularly to America bureau, which is that if the American public is sufficiently interested to witness the fight, the French government, which controls the telegraph service, asked the American bureau the regular fee for stringing
the wires and providing operators.

'Babe' Adams Bested 'Rube' Marquard in Pitchers' Battle.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The New York Nationals raised their 1913 pennant yesterday but could not celebrate the event with a victory as Pittsburgh took the first game of the series by a score of 3 to 2. The game was a pitchers' battle between Adams and Marquard. Pittsburgh scoring their winning run in the eighth innings on Mowrey's single, Kelly's sacrifice, Fletcher's fumble on Wagner and Koy-etichy's sacrifice fly. New York scored two runs in the first innings, when Kelly misjudged a hit from Robertson, a Giant youngster, and it went for a three-base hit. A fluff by Bescher enabled Pittsburgh to tie it up in the fifth. Score:
Pittsburgh.....000 020 010—3 8 1
New York.....200 000 000—2 6 3
Adams and Gibson; Marquard and Meyers.
Brantford fans should find some consolation in the mighty slump
taken by the Pittsburgh team.

NO DECISION ON THE SHAM FIGHT
HAS AS YET BEEN ANNOUNCED

No decision as to the result of the sham fight on Thursday has been given by the umpires, but it was apparent that the enveloping attack of the 4th Infantry Brigade was repulsed, though it was able support by guns in the vicinity. The 4th Infantry Brigade however, took full advantage of the good cover the ground afforded and pushed home an attack on the enemy's left, and if operations had continued would probably have penetrated that portion of the White's defence though in doing so they would have suffered enormous casualties.
The result of the battle would probably have been decided by the fighting qualities of the opposing forces.
The Whites, or defence force, under Col Hill, had taken up their position in the vicinity of Power Glen,
with outposts protecting their lines to the east. In the morning the Browns continued their attack on the White forces which they had begun the previous day, and after some minor cavalry operations came into contact with the advanced White troops, who were covering their entrenched position at Twelvetwelve Creek. The cavalry of both forces closed to the flanks, leaving the front for the infantry.
Colonel Cohoe, commanding the 5th Infantry Brigade, immediately forwarded the 17th regiment, supported by the 44th to develop the situation, and ascertain the enemy's exact position. He was heavily repulsed but gained his object and enabled the divisional staff to form a definite plan. Colonel Cohoe was ordered to hold his forces back while the 4th Infantry Brigade was to advance a mile to the south and deliver a converging attack on the enemy's right flank. Col. Cohoe's brigade was to continue the advance as soon as it was known that the outflanking move had been successful.

The White forces were occupying
a very strong position at Twelvetwelve Creek, which they had entrenched
during the night. Of the six battalions under Colonel Hill, three were probably allotted to defend the position,
the other three being held in reserve
to attack the Browns as soon as opportunity offered. Unfortunately for the White force this reserve was observed, and Colonel Pellat directed the Q. O. R. and the 10th Regiment to open an attack on it. The remaining two battalions of the brigade, the 1st Highlanders and the 8th Regiment directed their attack on the enemy's right and right centre, and at the same time Col. Cohoe's brigade on his right and right centre.
The whole exercises were carried out over very difficult and intricate ground.
From thirty to thirty-five hours were spent in the tactics, from the time the troops left camp Wednesday morning until the "cease fire"
was sounded at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

CONFESSIONS OF A GUN RUNNER

All Country Side Conspired on Rainy Night to Consumate it—Historic Ride After Red Light Through the Mist.

A private writer describes his experiences during the recent gun-running episode in Ulster as follows: BELFAST—It was on a night in the last of April that I was asked by a man who must be nameless (we are not mentioning names much in this business) to see that my tires were right; and to bring a trustworthy friend, and food for 12 hours. He was uncertain about the job, but he hoped that it would be gun-running. I got Jack, and at half past five we left the garage and went up to the top of the Horseshoe Hill, just at the back of the Cave Hill.

I found there were repair cars planned in among us, and found one chap who fixed up my burst tire, and who cheerfully ordered me to perdition when I asked him his charge. And men came around with petrol tins, filling us to overflowing, and leaving us an extra tin for luck. One of the young autoocrats sorted out North and South Tyrone, and Antrim and Armagh cars, and drew us up in line, and we lit our lamps, and some one hollered, "All South Tyrone cars go," and off we went, I behind a big, heavy Rolls-Royce, with a flaring red light, which I had reason to be thankful for, because we had hardly gone a mile when my headlights, with new burners, especially cleaned and tested for the occasion, went hopelessly out, and I had to plunge on in the dark, in the cold, obscuring rain, desperately sticking to the big red light in front, through the long winding lane which runs through Ballyclare.

Then we began to go off in sections of 12 cars, and then disappeared around a corner, and I would steer desperately to where the corner might be, until I saw its welcome face again. For the rain made my glasses hopeless, and I could not see without them, and we were all going "hell for leather," at 30 miles an hour, around the corners, and I daren't lose the big red light. By the grace of God I clung to it, though after every corner I heard Jack heave a sigh of relief. Once we hit a pile of stones on the side, and I thought we were over; most we scraped the ditch, but we got through. Through Cheering Ballyclare Ballyclare was up and out, cheering along the streets, and volunteers began to appear, lining the roads and clustering in groups at the corners. Says Williams: We were ordered to keep 25 paces behind, but who could do it? For we were all thirsting to get there, lest we should miss our load; so we went over the moors to Larne, and came to a halt in a jumble of cars all along the high road that drops down into Larne.

There came along autoocratic young men with a train of country fellows, each man with an envelope containing a card with mysterious symbols. A countryman was put into each car. We were told when we got a load, we were to take him home by a route which would be given us. Our fate was "William," from Annaghue, in Tyrone, "away beyond Dungannon." He was young and thin and cold-looking with a red nose. We called him "William," for he looked like a William, and he had to get "six packages." Their selection leader came up and told us we were to go to Ballygawley, South Tyrone, and we were to follow such and such a car.

SCENE AT LAST IRISH PARLIAMENT AND PRINCIPALS IN PRESENT FIGHT OVER THE IRISH HOME RULE BILL

THE LAST IRISH PARLIAMENT OF 1790. (With the passage of the Irish Home Rule Bill by Commons, an armed clash with Ulster is looked for in London. The measure, bitterly opposed by Sir Edward Carson and other Unionist members, passed, 351 to 274. The end of the struggle came quite suddenly, the unionists refusing to debate the bill without further information as to the government's intentions in regard to the proposed amending measure. Premier Asquith lifted a corner of the veil, but Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the opposition, declared Asquith had not told them anything. To discuss the third reading under the circumstances would, he said, be futile and ridiculous.)

they were loaded. Then some one came along shouting, "South Tyrone can go," and we moved off, needing, just as we reached Larne street, a man who jumped on the car, and called, "South Tyrone," and added, "Go quickly, don't waste time; come back along this road," and off we went through Larne streets into the grounds, past his house, through his gardens, and out by his entrance gates and into Larne streets again, and down to the quay, where there was a big boat with two cranes going in the glare of light, lading out big hand-fuls of sacks, and beside it two smaller boats with their cranes going, trans-shipping away from the big boat. Later I learned that one of these was for Bangor and one for Donaghadee, where cars were waiting for them and that in these places the post-offices were seized, the wires were cut, and the police barracks and coast guard stations surrounded, lest word should go to the authorities in Dublin and complications occur. Most Disgraceful Proceedin'. Also, I learned that the customs officer got through and protested against this violation of the law, which, as you know, prohibits at present any importation of arms into Ulster. He was politely escorted away, and went to the head constable, who cordially agreed with him that it was "a most disgraceful proceeding."

When I reached the loading place I found a giant of a man, with sweat pouring from him, tossing the packages, each as heavy as a heavy man, to a number of fellows, who looked at William's ticket, and pitched six sacks into us. Some one bawled, "Go off quickly," and off we went, tearing through Larne streets by another route, through crowds of cheering people, who kept the way open; back to the high road, and there one of our side lamps came out and scattered along the road, and we had to bid our section go, on while we went back to look for it. We found it at another section came up, also South Tyrone, and joined on to them, behind a big car, with blazing headlights, that lit our way for us through the rain and the mist which had now come on again worse than ever. Groups Cheer Them. Then by the shores of Lough Neagh to Crumlin, on through Ballinderry to Moira where daylight met us, for our way was punctured by stops, owing to the single tube tires of another car which insisted on bursting. From Moira we went on through Lurgan and Portadown, all the road lined with volunteers, and the people out of houses, yelling encouragement at us, and wishing us "safe journey." The groups cheered and we waved back. We felt we were as one people, in union with our kind. If there were any in Ulster of a different opinion, they kept behind closed doors that night. We went through Portadown, out by Verner's Bridge, to Dungannon. There we were stopped, about 100 of us together all the South Tyrone contingent, and checked and sent off on our different ways. We went by a windy, stony road (it was now a pleasant and smiling spring morning) to Annahugh, which lies by the village of Ballygawley, which lies at the end of Gally's Speed.

Get Breakfast. There we found a certain Mr. — and his wife, and his several children, and governess, and a squad of County Tyrone farmers and laborers who cheered and shouted and shook our hands, and looked on us as great heroes, who had brought them the rifles that made them feel secure. Mr. — gave us breakfast, four cars of us in all. It had been allowed to leak out that an attempt would be made to land a boat called the Fanny openly in Belfast, and that the volunteers would be called out to protect it; so, on that night, 600 of them were rushed suddenly down to the quay and stood at attention. And while we were loading at Larne a boat came into Belfast, hung around uncertainly for hours, with the police and volunteers looking on at it, and at each other, both mystified and both expectant. The customs officers were held off, and argued with, and finally allowed on board — (to find an innocent cargo) of coal! The mouth of the Lough, and the whole coast were watched by gunboats for the Fanny; but she had trans-shipped her cargo in open sea to another boat, whose captain, a bit of a wit rechristened her "The Mount Joy" (the name of the boat that broke the boom at the siege of Derry), which sailed into the Lough with her lights out, and reached Larne safely. CUT OFF THE BRIM OF YOUR SUMMER HAT

CHICAGO, June 16.—Cut off the brim of your hat, says James Henry Ashley's message in an appeal at the Open Forum for good citizenship. Mr. Ashley is a former president of the Prairie club and an advocate of the return to nature. "People seldom see the sky in Chicago," said Mr. Ashley. "The brims of their hats interrupt their angles of vision, and they are too busy looking at the sidewalks to keep from being run down. Their horizons are broken by houses of brick and stone. So they neither look upward nor sidewise. They lose their contract with the heat out of doors and become bad citizens. Cut the brims off your hats, or, better still, wear no hats at all and restore the connection with nature."

I USE "TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET

"TIZ" for puffed-up, Aching, sweaty, calloused feet and corns. "TIZ" makes my feet smaller. Good-bye sore feet, burning feet, swollen feet, sweaty feet, smelling feet, tired feet. Good-bye corns, caluses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain, or drawing up your face in agony. We had only to run our load, and what struck me most was the willingness, the eager co-operation, and the enthusiasm of everybody. What I admired was the steady silent patience of the men who lined the roads, all the damp and weary night to protect us from the Nationalists, who would have paved the road with broken bottles, or stretched wire across it at the level of our heads, as they had done before when they have suspected there would be gun-running, or the attempt of the police to hold up the main body or the divided sections. I was struck, too, at the hopelessness of attempting to foist home rule on us, against this steady determination not to have it, even if by force of the military and the navy, neither of who are keen for the job. They could break down our organization and defeat our men. It would come up again and again, and every one would co-operate. You cannot go against a whole united community, and we are united."

BLIND MAN ON PHONE EXCHANGE

MCCURTAIN, Okla., has a general private telephone exchange in the eastern part of Oklahoma, operated by blind men, who do the work as rapidly and unerringly as those with perfect vision. McCurtain exchange and all of the outside work of the exchange. He is relief and instructor of the system. He has books, using the New York system, which he learned in Little Rock where he spent eight years of his boyhood. In addition to keeping the exchange and acting as telephone operator, Warrell installs his own wiring, strings the wires, clears the lines and instruments and does the work ordinarily done by those with perfect vision. In operating the switchboard, Warrell can answer and connect calls as quickly as though he were not blind. He clears the switchboard by first testing and locating the wires as nearly as possible, and then follows the wires with his fingers, until the lines are found and connected. If the lines are crossed, Warrell can answer and connect calls as quickly as though he were not blind. He clears the switchboard by first testing and locating the wires as nearly as possible, and then follows the wires with his fingers, until the lines are found and connected. The blind man has less than twenty men who can see to operate the switchboard have. He is prompt, accurate and has a natural head for work, and he has never asked for favors because of his affliction. Tired Mothers.
