Mr. Blake in Chatham.

A Gigantic Collapse.

NO ENTHUSIASM, NO CHEERS.

A CRIT WATERLOO BY THEIR OWN ARMS.

About six o'clock or thereabouts

the Chatham Branch came trundling in, wheels shrieking, old crazy timbers squeaking, the distinguished visitor, Hon. Edward Blake on board. The party was there in almost full strength, about sixty in number, and was headed by Mr. J. B. Snowball -who it will be remembered prefers his deals to his constituents. The crowd took off their caps, and bellowed and cheered out of time, and out of tune, lustily as they could; and then a negro, probably the same African who was brought here from St. John "to run the whole thing" went out, being primed to so by one of the Grits, and offered "three cheers for Hon. Peter Mitchell.' There was no cheer given and the imported African grinned audibly. The Grits were crowded closely around the steps of the old car, and looked for Mr. Blake to come forth. as the circus goer looks for the appearance of the mammoth elephant. Mr Hayes must have been mistaken. When he did come they soon knew The critics of the Langevin recephim, for he bent upon them a look which showed the struggle it cost such a blunder as this! him to be polite. Mr. Blake is a man who has a sovereign contempt crowds who hang around to pay pises and with all his arts, and all could, from a colored pocket handhim adulation, he most heartily desthe strength of will, he is unable to conceal the sneer which he intends to be a smile when exchanging salutations. It is only those whom Mr Dutch, Chinese, -and Mormon. They readers. Blake fears, he respects—the rest he hung these around the town at leadtolerates, and hardly that. The poor little creatures who made themselves conspicuous here yesterday thrusting their unappreciated services upon him, he would not reture.

However it is a queer place a man cannot put in a few days. If Robinson Crusoe could live years on the island of Juan Fernandez, Mr. Blake ought to be able with all his contempt for Mr. Snowball and his party to spend four or five days in Chatham.
