The QUEEN vs. JAS. FITZEERALD.—
The prisoner pleaded guilty to a charge of arson. He had been confined in the fire against the door but did not succeed

The militia roll for the County of Grey has been made out. There are of first-class service men, 2,472; second class, 5,185; 3rd class, 1,921; total, 9,578.

The subscription for the Bishop Strach an Memorial Church, in Cornwall, is so far advanced that tenders for the erection of the building are asked for. Three was struck, but would not swear that he had not indulged to the extent of half a dozen small glasses. The defence took something of the hard face off his evidence, and showed that he was not exactly so ill used a man as he had represented, that, in fact, he had provoked the quarrel in which he came off second best, and that no attempt was made to rob him.—The jury are in on the case. The Court opened soon after 10 o'clock, when a number of witnesses were called for the defence, the main object being to try if possible and impeach Lacroix's evidence. One French witness after another appeared in the stand to impeach the credibility of the man Lacroix, and in the boldest and most unequivocating terms pronounced that from their knowledge of his character and the estimation in which he was held in his own neighbourhood they would not believe him on oath; but when Mr. O'Reilly came to cross examine them, the result was really ludicrous. The reasons they gave for expressing their opinion of Lacroix's veracity were so puerile and so much at variance with their statements that there was no repressing the laughter and teeling of astonishment in Court. One Frenchman said he would not believe Lacroix because he did not pay him his board bill. Another confessed that Mr. O'Farrel, one of Whelan's Counsel, had given him $5$ the previous night to tell the truth! The attempt to destroy his credibility was beyond question as decided a collapse as was ever seen in a Court of Justice—such a one, indeed, as fairly threw a shade over the efforts of the defence, and really strengthened the prosecution far more than it damaged it. Later in the day, a more effective effort was made by the defence to throw discredit on some of the other witnesses for the Crown; but in the main our readers will perceive that up to this stage, at all events, with all the ingenuity and talent of the defence, they have been able to make out but a sorry case for the prisoner. What counsel for Whelan could do in the affair they have done for their client; but the general impression here is that he has been placed in a tighter place than ever.

Wm. Goldiere, clerk at Egleson's, was sworn, but his evidence was not of any importance, nor did it help the prisoner in any way.

John Lyons, an acquaintance of Whelan's, sworn, never heard him talk about the Montreal election; he was a man who did not attract my attention much, but I remember his OTTAWA, September 10.

Patrick Kelly, a fellow workman, also examined. Heard McGee's name mentioned by the prisoner; he said he was a smart man, a good orator, and a fine man; Whelan always said that; he was fond of reading; never heard him read McGee's speeches; when I heard him say that was during the sitting in the house; don't know whether he said it in November, December, January or February, but he did say it once; if he did speak of McGee at all he spoke favourably.

Mrs. Duggan, wife of former witness, swore she never saw Whelan before. She contradicted herself several times during her examination.

John Downs, Mrs. Rogers, W. Whyte, Susan Wheatley and James Kinsella were sworn, but their evidence did not tend to weaken the testimony for the prosecution. Kinsella said Whelan had always denied to him any connection with the murder of McGee.

Did not say "is he gone at last?" with regard to McGee or Cartier. Atrocities of the Kuklux Klan.

REIGN OF TERROR IN KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

TENNESSEE.

The murderous rebels of the Ku-Klux are more active, defiant, and aggressive in Kentucky than ever. In many cases they have ceased to threaten and entered upon the work of murder outright, boldly entering the houses of citizens who were Union men during the war, and who are suspected of entertaining Republican feelings now, and murdering them in cold blood. On Saturday night they surrounded Glasgow Williams's house, and as he would not obey their summons they forced an entrance and killed him in presence of his wife, while she was on her knees, begging them to spare his life. Mr Williams was a Union soldier during the war, and had proclaimed his intention to vote for his old commander. After the disguised outlaws had murdered him, still thirsting for Union blood, they went to the cabin of an inoffensive negro who had also served in the Union army, and taking him out, hanged him under a tree until he was dead. On Friday night the same miscreants made an attack upon a settlement of Shakers, and wreaked their vengeance by burning to the ground their large mill and woollen factory. These until he was dead. On Friday night the same miscreants made an attack upon a settlement of Shakers, and wreaked their vengeance by burning to the ground their large mill and woollen factory. These Shakers, it need not be added, are an inoffensive community, who have always been loyal to the Government. The rebel Democracy have resolved, if possible, to expel them from Kentucky soil. Their loss by this diabolical incendiarism is over $250,000. The Kuklux Klan have warned citizens in all parts of Kentucky who were in the Union army that they must quit the State, the penalty of remaining until the day of election being death.

The outrages which have been perpetrated in many counties of Middle and West Tennessee during the past summer have been so numerous, and of such an aggravated character, as almost to baffle investigation. In these counties a reign of terror exists, which is so absolute that the best of citizens are unable or unwilling to give free expression, to their opinions. The terror inspired by the secret organization known as the Kuklux Klan is so great that the officers of the law are powerless to execute its provisions, to discharge their duties, or to bring the guilty perpetrators of these outrages to the punishment they deserve. Their stealthy movements are generally made under cover of the night, and under masks of disguise, which render their identification difficult, if not impossible. Added to the secrecy which envelopes their operations, is the fact that no information of their murderous acts can be obtained without the greatest difficulty and danger in the localities where they are committed. No one dares inform upon them or take any measures to bring them to punishment, because no one can tell but he may be the next victim of their animosity. The members of this organization, with their numerous friends, aiders, and abettors, take exercise their verse it with their numerous friends, aiders, and abettors, take next victim of their animosity. The members of this organization, with their numerous friends, aiders, and abettors, take The moving principle by which they are actuated appears to be hostility to the State and National authorities.

During the past six months the mur ders in Tennessee, to say nothing of othe outrages, would average one per day one for every 24 hours; that in the gr majority of cases they have been perpetrated by the Klan referred to, and few if any, have been brought to punishmen A number of counties in the State are en tirely at the mercy of this organization, and roving bands of marauders nightly bid defiance to the civil authorities, and threaten to drive out every man, white or and perpetrate acts of violence from per-sonal or pecuniary motives, under the plea of political necessity. Coloured la-borers have been driven from their homes by dishonest land owners, in order to de-prive them of their share of the crops they cultivated and the wages they have justly earned by their labor. Other outrages of similar character are daily committed, and the officers of the law are unable or unwilling to prevent or redress them.

The Effect of Strikes.

In Philadelphia, during the last eight months, the whole number of new buildings erected was 3,634; the altered buildings numbered 1,004—making altogether 4,638. Putting each new building at the exceedingly moderate cost of $6,000 as an average, and the altered structures at $800 each, we have an aggregate of $22,607,200 spent on buildings in that city during the space of eight months. That the cost of the new buildings is placed at a very low figure will be readily city during the space of eight months. That the cost of the new buildings is placed at a very low figure will be readily inferred from the fact that a large number of them are factories, churches, public halls, and the largest class of stores and dwellings. In Philadelphia there have been no strikes of any consequence, during the period referred to, amongst the workmen. In New York, however, a city which is a third more populous than Philadelphia, strikes have prevailed among one class of workmen or another, during the whole of the last eight months, and the consequence is, that building has been nearly at a stand-still, not one-fourth as many buidings having been erected as in Philadeldhia. No fact couldbe adduced which would so clearly and tangibly establish the vast injury which strikes inflict upon the community, as that which is presented the above contrast between the condition of things in the two cities of Philadelphia and New York, one of which has been free rom strikes while the other has suffered so severely from theirmalign influence.

A Newfoundland paper says: "From the Westward most cheering accounts have been received—some of the old planters having stated that such an abundant supply of fine fish had not been seen for thirty years! It is much to be regretted, however, that all the fishermen cannot engage in the fishery, not having the necessary outfit; and it is said that one-third of the fishermen are absolutely wasting their precious time, because they have neither boats, hooks, lines, nor food to prosecute the voyage."

to prosecute the voyage."

Mr Horace Tucker, of Franklin township, Indiana, has a cow six or seven years old, the mother of a calf a year old, March last, which will weigh at the present time one thousand pounds. In February last she had three calves, which will weigh at this time thirteen hundred pounds each. The three calves are all males, and precisely of the same colour, and they will not vary in weight ten pounds.

Twenty witnesses were examined for the defence yesterday. The attempts to

Some 3000 was all they could muster in defence of the union of Church and State. Such demonstrations will neither inspire with hope nor fill with dismay. The unholy alliance must be dissolved. Spurgeon puts the case strongly, but truthfully when he says. "All protestants are agreed that the Romish Church is the mother of harlots;" but who are the harlots of whom she is the mother? This is shown by the boldness with which he has been willing to stand by the principle he has laid When it is asked, Why should not the English Church be disestablished if there were sufficient opposition to it? he has been quite ready to admit that if the English Church should ever become the Church of a minority, it must be surrendered if the majority demanded it, as they demand it in Ireland. And, indeed, there is growing evidence that the English Church is being brought into hot water very fast. The Ritualistic movement on one hand, and the Colenso controversy on the other, have so torn it that the real old Church people have begun to feel t heir weakness, and have thought of reinforcing themselves by an absorp- Medical Dispensary tion of the Methodists. The distinguished Methodist minister Thomas Jackson has written a letter, which has been widely commented on by the daily press, declaring that the English Church must purge itself of its doubefore the Methodists could think of COUGH SYRUP ble disease of Popery and skepticism an alliance. This sentiment has been echoed by the Conference. The Evan gelical and the High Church parties have to a certain extent sunk their differences lately in order to make a final and tremendous effort to rid served to the served to t themselves of Colenso, and they have induced the Duke of Buckingham to permit a new Bishop for Natal to be consecrated in England, notwithstanding the many separate decisions of the highest courts that Bishop Colenso holds that title, with all its powers unimpaired, just as he received it from the Crown. This announcement has been responded to with a growl from the British lion such as has been rarely heard, and it is doubtful whether the plan will be consummated without such modifications and explanations as will make the new Bishop the mere ghost and simalacoum of a Bishop. Yet all these things are telling seriously upon the Church of England, and it seems likely that by the time the Irish Church is disestablished the constitution of its sister will be in such a weakened condition that a few blasts from Exeter and Free Trade Halls may end it sooner than is generally anticipated-or sooner, certainly, than most Radicals think it wise, at pre-

Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

'I should like to get my boar brought up here,' proceeded the little King naively; 'and I should like to have Abbot Thomas here; but I suppose he was one of those who de-ceived me, for he told me that I was the King and the master of the land. But he was wrong there, was he not 2-for it is you, Cou-sin Angus, and my mother, who are the mas-ters.

sin Angus, and my mother, who are the masters.

'Nay, sire, we are only the first of your Majesty's subjects.'

Angus bit his lip slightly as he made answer to the next question.

'Then, as subjects, you owe me obedience—the cousin?'

We would be rebellious subjects it we refused.'

'We will see about that,' thought the King; and then simply— Well, cousin, I have been gambling with Master Elliot here, and I have lost. When a gentleman loses he ought to pay, and I am a gentleman, Cousin, and I not.'

'Ellibert understood the King now.'

'Well, cousin,' proceeded the boy, as if distressed, 'I have lost and I am not able to pay Master Elliot.'

'There was not not amongst the Gentlemen of the Guard who did not cast a slent blessing upon the cunning little King. Gilbert barely refrained from uttering it aloud.'

'It affects the life of a man; and it is mecessary that that man should live or the King will not have paid his debt.'

There was not one amongst the Gentlemen of the Guard who did not cast a slent blessing upon the cunning little King. Gilbert barely refrained from uttering it aloud.'

'It affects the life of some State prisoner, then,' said Angus quiety,' tell me his name and the Regent will not refuse my plea to pay your Majesty's debt.

'I am sure of that. His name is Walter Spers of Halstane.'

'A man guity of high treason; of an attempt upon your Majesty's life, and one who betrayed the late King; you don't surely wish him to live?' said Barras.

'I don't know what he has been guilty of and I dont care,' cried the King impatiently,' and I did not speak to you sir. Grace is accorded—is it not, Cousin?'

'No sire,' replied Angus firmly.'

No, 'ejaculated the King, half crying with vexation.

Gilbert's head sunk upon his breast, 'It pains me deeply,' said the Earl in measured accents,' to refuse any request of your Majesty but for your own safety it is necessary that we should be firm in this matter.'

His Majesty looked boldy into the face of Douglas as he spoke slowly—''Oousin, there are people who have
