The public generally are cordially invited to call and examine my stock and prices. R. S. KING, Guelph, Aug. 8, 1873. dwim

The Reason Why. The reason why the magnificent Retail Grocery Establishments in the Alma Block and on Lower Wyndham Street, belonging to John A. Wood, are so very popular with the intelligent public—Because the Goods are all of the best quality. Because the Prices are invariably the lowest. Because the Clerks are courteous and obliging. Because the Stock is the largest to select from. Because the goods are always clean. Because the Weights and Measures are always correct.

Because, in fact, the proprietor understands his business, desires to please his customers, makes good use of his capital, and buys for cash in the best markets, and always deals liberally with those who honor his stores with their custom.—These and many other weighty reasons have contributed very largely to make the name of John A. Wood, as connected with the Grocery trade of Guelph, so well known, and his stores so very popular.

Mary Waters, cook at the Queen's Hotel, was charged on the information of the Chief Constable with disorderly conduct there on Saturday by cursing and swearing and creating a great noise and disturbance therein. It appeared, however, that she had not been formally discharged from her employment. She was set at liberty, after being locked up since Saturday.

DISMISSED. Wm. Crawford was charged by Police-man Dooley with being drunk on the Ernaosa Road. Case dismissed.

BY TELEGRAPH. Demonstration Prohibited. Carlists and Communists. Vote of Confidence. The British Iron Trade. Skirmish with Robbers.

London, Aug. 29.—The Times this morning has an editorial on the iron question, the burthen of which is that one of the finest markets England ever possessed, the trade in iron, is being gradually closed to her. Her disasters in this direction are not yet ended. The United States are competing successfully for the control of the iron traffic with Canada, South America and the West Indies. They have contended under immense natural disadvantages, but they have beaten England in spite of these.

Paris, August 29.—M. Beule, Minister of the Interior, has sent a circular to the Prefects of the Departments of France, directing them to prohibit demonstrations on the 4th of September, the anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic.

Madrid, August 29.—The Carthagena insurgents have liberated all the Carlist prisoners in that city. The Carlists in turn, liberate all Communist prisoners who happen to fall into their hands. Many of the Communists who have been implicated in recent excesses are fleeing to the Carlist lines and enlisting.

At a meeting of the majority of the Cortes to-day it was resolved to suspend the session of that body from the 1st of September till the 3rd of November. It was also decided to pass a vote of confidence in the Ministry before taking the recess.

Veroffin quelled the rebellion and destroyed Khiva. Khokand is quiet. The Russian exactions have been levied on 600 leaders of the late movement. It is reported that Yakof-Beg is dead.

St. Louis, Aug. 31.—A despatch from Clinton, Mo., says that on Thursday night last a skirmish took place near Norwag Spring, St. Clair Co., between an Iowa Sheriff's posse and the robbers who recently attacked a train near Des Moines, in which one of the Sheriff's party and one of the robbers were wounded. THE STORM.—The fruit crop of King's county, N. S., and adjoining counties suffered terribly in the late storm. Thousands of bushels of choice fruit are scattered over the ground, and the growers who anticipated having large and profitable crops will be heavy losers. It is reported that over 100 vessels have been driven ashore at the several harbours of Cape Breton.

A BABY CAUGHT IN FLY PAPER.—A paper family in Hamilton, anxious that the slumbers of his olive branch should not be disturbed by the flies, bought one of the sticky papers, and laid it on the pillow of the bed, whereon the infant was reposing. To his horror, however, in his absence from the room, the child had wrapped his head up in the paper like a parcel, and it took his maternal parent about four hours to unpeck him and get the flies clear of his hair, which had to be shorn pretty close in order to attain the desired end. Moral—don't try experiments with babies and fly papers.

A MEAN FELLOW.—On arrival of the Atlantic express train from the west at Clifton station, a poor man followed the conductor, Mr. John Watson, and handed him a portmanteau containing $450 in gold and about $100 in bills. Mr. Blake's Great Speech. The London Advertiser of Friday devotes eight columns to a report of Mr. Blake's great speech. We present a synopsis of the report:—

Mr. Blake on raising was greeted with tremendous cheering. After a few introductory observations he alluded to two measures dealt with by the House in 1872, namely, the Election Law and the Pacific Charter. The Government resisted the proposals of the party to which he belonged, and passed a law which facilitated the exercise of undue influence, and corruption, and rendered detection difficult. They also took a position on the Pacific Railway Charter, which involved an enormous extension of their power with reference to the most gigantic contract that had ever engaged the attention of Canada or of any other country. He believed that in taking this course the Government had the design of controlling the expression of the popular will at the then ensuing election. He complained that after the steel was stolen by the elections being lost the door was locked by the Government bringing in the bill which they had so vehemently opposed the preceding session. They had postponed its operation, however, till after the election in South Ontario, and it was passed so hurriedly that it would still bear amendment. He proceeded to allude to Mr. Huntington's bringing the charges against the Government, involving a gigantic job in the matter of the Pacific Railway contract. Mr. Huntington's first resolution was negatived without a word; but a resolution took place, and the next day the First Minister announced and afterwards moved a resolution of the charges against the Government. In this way he admitted that a Committee of the House was the correct tribunal to try the charges. He proceeded to trace the history of the Committee during the Parliamentary session at Montreal on the 2nd of July, and at Ottawa again on the 13th August, condemning each adjournment as unnecessary delay, and pointing out that no member of the House had assented to the proposal of the First Minister for a Royal Commission. He showed that the First Minister had correctly stated that this was really an impeachment; and the constitution, for which he (Sir John) was chiefly responsible, was defective in not providing for a court of impeachment. He condemned the proposal to make the proceedings of the Committee secret, as publicity was the great safeguard of judicial proceedings. He argued that it suited his purpose to have the House that the Committee should sit during the ordinary session of Parliament, and expressed the opinion that it was highly important that the members of Parliament, who were to be the final judges, should have the opportunity of hearing the evidence in its progress. He then referred to the appointment of a Commission, upon which he commented severely. He alluded to the Ceylon case, which the Premier had cited as a precedent, and that precedent was to be found in it for the present action of the Government. Referring to the position occupied by Mr. Dorian and himself on the Committee, he said that Mr. Dorian had determined to resign from the Committee, and left for England, but his friends elected him in his absence, and he consented to take his seat. As to himself he knew that he had announced that however the elections should turn out he would not serve his country and his party otherwise than in the ranks. That declaration was distorted during the election by the First Minister into an avowal that he had deserted the ranks of the Opposition, but now when he returned to the House, he was to be treated as a deserter. He said that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter.

He said that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter.

He alluded to the Ceylon case, which the Premier had cited as a precedent, and that precedent was to be found in it for the present action of the Government. Referring to the position occupied by Mr. Dorian and himself on the Committee, he said that Mr. Dorian had determined to resign from the Committee, and left for England, but his friends elected him in his absence, and he consented to take his seat. As to himself he knew that he had announced that however the elections should turn out he would not serve his country and his party otherwise than in the ranks. That declaration was distorted during the election by the First Minister into an avowal that he had deserted the ranks of the Opposition, but now when he returned to the House, he was to be treated as a deserter. He said that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter, and that he was not a deserter.

Mr. Blake's Speech

The London Advertiser in its issue containing Mr. Blake's speech, says: "That a crowded audience, a large proportion of which had to stand, packed closely, brought together on a summer evening, could be induced to listen patiently and intelligently to a three hours' in-door address, shows the spell of the orator, as it shows also the accordance of the public in the main with the views enunciated and the platform occupied. The sincerity and manliness of Mr. Blake's address last evening could not fail to impress his hearers. And we doubt if a stronger chain of unassailable argument has ever been put forth by a public speaker. His speech swept away like cobwebs the wretched quibbles and shameful sophistries of venal journalists and politicians. It included admirable elocution, a frequency of felicitous sentences, now and then a gleam of quiet humor, with a thread of sentiment in his allusions to Sir John Eliot's martyrdom in the cause of popular rights which appealed to every heart not hopelessly sordid and corrupt. The closing portions of the address fairly electrified the audience. Regarded merely as a piece of oratory, apart from the issues at stake, it is admitted by Conservatives and Reformers alike that a more effective political address has never been heard in Canada.

"John" on the Rampage.

We rather like the tone of the Toronto Mail. There is "no nonsense about it." Its editor is outspoken. From top to bottom, he is a thorough John Bull. You hear the magnificent and deep-chested British growl every time he gives utterance to his sentiments. You cannot help respecting him. When you listen to him, you fancy yourself in the presence of a being clothed in a blue broad-cloth coat, buff-vest, leather breeches, low-crowned, broad-brimmed hat, Belcher tie and yellow-topped boots, and carrying a knob-stick; owning a rotund corporation, blowing deeply red cheeks, and full of beef, beer, and strong expletives. Brass buttons glisten all over him. His huge silver watch is no sham. His pocket handkerchief is pure India silk. His bulldog is thorough bred. He knows a hawk from a handsaw. He has seen Epsom, and Doncaster, and Lord's, and Melton Mowbray, and Smithfield. He can talk horse, and cricket, and hunting, and turnips from morning to night. He calls a spade a spade. He sings "Rule Britannia" in a rich bass voice, and sleeps regularly after his dinner and bottle of old port. He has a genuine hatred of Reform. He believes that things are best as they are. He worships the Government. He warmly asserts that the King can do no wrong. He doubts the superiority of railways to horseflesh, and firmly believes that if old Osbaldistone attempted it, he could have outridden the Mail Express from Liverpool to London. He hates new fangled notions, new men, new fashions, new places, new times, new ale, new anything—always excepting new Canadian Knights and baronets. In short, he is a chip of the old block, an exact picture of his father, his grandfather and his great grandfather; prides himself upon his close resemblance to the traditional Fine Old English Gentleman, all of the olden time; and wouldn't change places with any other living man, excepting the Prime Minister or Governor General, on any terms whatever. How he found his way to Canada is a mystery, and how he remains here is the eighth wonder of the world. Here, however, he is in the midst of us, and we reverently lift our hat to his rusty old phiz. Just now John is on the rampage. The recent meetings in London and elsewhere have stirred him up, and he speaks out with more than ordinary force and vim. We can hear his foot coming down with a vigorous stamp as he exclaims, in his issue of Friday last, "The recent proceedings of the Radicals of Canada, east and west, are essentially revolutionary." We can imagine the flush of honest indignation irradiating his jolly old nose, as he writes: "A mass meeting in a populous and Democratic city was held before the memorable 13th of August; and, referring to its doings and sayings, the Grit organ announces 'THE PEOPLE HAVE SPOKEN.' What an outrage on political morality and common justice!" We can picture the tremor of rage which overcomes him as he adds "The arguments of Party orators and the vociferations of an uneducated multitude 'the voice of the people.'" How the "pishes" and "pshaws," and even more solid and time-honored strong words, roll from his tongue as he thinks of the impudence of "the uneducated multitude," who venture to condemn the aristocracy and titled ones of Canada. But his eyes glisten through his spectacles—he wears spectacles now, and gold-rimmed ones, too—as he tells how "those who are most impatient of restraint in matters of so great importance and delicacy most need restraint, and it is well for us that we have a Government capable of curbing, and who dare take the risk of arresting, the turbulent anarchists." And a chuckle of satisfaction chases away the clouds from his brow as he adds: "They must be arrested in their mad career, and they will be." All this makes us, in spite of ourselves, feel a warm affection for the old fellow. He is so charmingly positive, so plainly outspoken, so independent of mere facts, that Radical as we are, we admire him. He is not afraid of venturing his antipathies. Radical editors and orators and the uneducated Radical multitude don't please him, and he makes no bones about telling them a bit of his mind. Radical and even some Conservative members of Parliament don't act as he wishes, and he has no scruples about dubbing them "Banditti." There is no beating about the bush, no finesse, no circumlocutions with our Canadian John Bull. He blurt out his "D—m me, who's afraid?" in true old orthodox style, breathes defiance, and prepares for war. With horns down, he is ready to hoist the whole Radical pack into the air. He is a firm believer in knock-down arguments. He wants no mealy-mouthedness. A word and a blow is his style. He detests "rebels," is firmly convinced that Hezelrub was the first Reformer and thinks that nothing good can come from Edward Blake and Alexander Mackenzie. He may be behind the times, may belong to a past generation, may be looked upon as a relic of the era of pack-horses and sixpence a day for the working man, but we feel proud of him, and hope that he will long continue in our midst, to stand as a monument of the peculiarities and prejudices of the good old times to which he so clearly belongs. He needs a word of caution, however. If he is to last, he must draw it a little milder. Ebullitions of rage are exhausting, and half a dozen such exhibitions as that of Friday last, at his time of life, would tell seriously upon the strongest constitution, and prove fatal to a less appolectic subject. We love him, and therefore advise him to keep cool. The Radical press won't stop, the Radical mouth won't close, and the uneducated Radical mob won't cease to condemn until a great wrong is undone, despite curbs, arrests, locks, bars, and prisons; and we fear that even John can't check them.

CHAPTER XXXVII.
BARNARD HAYES AND DICK MATTOCKS IN SE-CRET CONFERENCE, AS THEY SUPPER.
"The gnatcatcher of Woodman's Lane, sir," repeated Jim Potts, reflecting very faithfully Philip's look of horror.
"Yes," whispered the latter, with vehementence. "I saw the man's face that night, and have never forgot it. Come forward and look through the curtain." They moved silently to the door of communication, and, lifting a very little of different corners of the curtain, gazed together into the front shop.
Dick Mattocks was standing close to the lamp reading his letter, which by this time he had opened. The postmaster was on the other side of the counter, looking hurried and uneasy, and casting furtive glances at the door behind which Philip and Jim stood.
"Don't you recognise him, Jim?" said the youth, with unabated excitement.
"Well you see, sir, I hadn't a right chance of seeing him that night—his face, I mean—but it's the very size and make of the man I saw, and that physiognomy of his is willanous enough for anything wot's bad."
"It's him sure enough," continued Philip. "And, Good God, to think that Annabel has been and is in that man's power. Ha! he's leaving. He must be stopped and given into the hands of the police."
Philip was about to burst forth for the purpose he had named, but Jim drew him back, and desired him to proceed with caution. In this he would have failed, so terrible was Philip's excitement but at this moment, Dick having left, the postmaster reentered the room and encountered him in the doorway.
"He must not be allowed to go; he is a robber—a murderer," cried the youth, in absolute frenzy.
"What, sir?" said the official, turning white with alarm and astonishment.
"A desperate criminal. I know him. I recognise him as a man whom I caught at a work of robbery in Liverpool."
"Good gracious. But don't rush after him like that, sir."
"Why not? I shall not return to where Annabel is confined—I tell you she shall not."
"Then if you go after him now and let him know the discovery which has been made, it would be the very way to send him there. And who knows what in his rage he might do to the young lady? Take my advice, sir, go quietly to work, and you will succeed. He is not going back to Dugden just now. The letter he has got has informed him that Mr Kidd is on his way to Portley. He will go here to night, and he wishes to wait at the Blue Boar to see him."
"Ha. How know you that?"
"He said as much, and seemed hugely satisfied by the intelligence. Now, I tell you what you should do. Seek a private interview with the landlord, tell him how the thing is, and he is the very man to help you to what you wish."
"I shall, I shall. Barnard Hayes to be here to-night! Oh, I shall strangle him in my rage."
"Master Philip," spoke up Jim, "I hope, sir, as how you'll forgive me for being so bold. But I can't help saying, sir, that this wot I do. You'll bring ruin on Miss Annabel, sir, sure as anything, if you don't keep cool and like yourself—you will indeed. And wouldn't that be a terrible business, and all the worse when we have such a rare good chance of saving her." These judicious words were spoken at right moment, and had a wonderful effect. Instantly Philip grew outwardly calm and his usual self-possession and self-reliance returned to him.
"Thank you, Jim," he said, pressing the hand of his faithful friend. "I was wrong, foolish, headstrong. Now I see the supreme importance of cautious and wary procedure. I will take your advice, sir," he added addressing the postmaster.
I will follow your counsel, and consult the keeper."
"That's right, sir. And it might be as well to send for him here."
"I'll go for him," said Jim, and was gone in an instant.

The Shooting Affray at Chippawa.
From the Welland Tribune we learn some further particulars of the shooting case at Chippawa on Tuesday 26th August. A large number of those who attended the Reform Demonstration from Welland went in a barge fitted up for the occasion. The party arrived at Chippawa too late for the first train, and were compelled to wait there about an hour and a half for a special. Amongst the Company was a Mrs Erasmus W.
Shultis, of Welland. It was generally noticed that soon after arriving Mrs Shultis and another woman and the captain of the tug went away into the village. The "other woman" soon returned, but Mrs. S. and the captain remained absent. Shultis, missing his wife, and no doubt doubting her fidelity, proceeded to the picnic grounds, thinking she might have gone there. Finding neither her nor the captain there, he returned, after a vigorous search, to the Chippawa R.R. station, where, about 6 o'clock, he saw the objects of his search.
The captain immediately went on his boat leaving the woman at the station.
Shultis approached her, and being armed with a six-shooter fired three or four shots at her in rapid succession, wounding her in the arm, hand and side. She appears to have had her hand up to her side; the same ball that hit her in the side first passed through her hand. She was taken into the station and put on a chair, and afterwards conveyed to Schu-macher's tavern. Shultis then went for the captain, and fired at him twice, when a clench took place. In the melee Shultis placed the revolver close to his opponent's side and pulled the trigger and the weapon's missing fire only saved him from taking life.

The row was then stopped, though Shultis was not immediately taken into custody, as it appears he jumped into the water with suicidal intent. He was fished out, however, and gave himself up to constable Gilchrist, who had charge of the barge, and who brought him to Welland, where he was lodged in goal upon the arrival of the boat. It is thought that he was slightly under the influence of liquor. A telegram from Chippawa says the woman is getting better, and we believe there is little or no danger of her dying, though undoubtedly she is seriously wounded. Shultis—or rather Shelters, as sometimes spelled—is a labourer, and he and his wife are middle aged.
She is considerably older than him, and is consequently not possessed of that personal attractiveness which might be expected to be the case. Diffin is also a married man. Shultis did not go with down afterwards. He says he bought down afterwards. He says he bought Public sympathy is with him, as it is believed his wife's misconduct goaded him to the desperate attempt.

Iron in the Blood

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Proteced Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damage, and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of its non-dangerous success in this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhea, Bolls, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERU-VIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

REMOVAL.
W. D. Hepburn & Comp'y

Have removed their Boot and Shoe Store to the very extensive premises on the Corner of Wyndham-st. and St. George's Square.

Their old store being too small on account of the continual increase in the Wholesale Manufacturing, as well as in the Retail Departments, they have now fitted up the new and much larger place in first-class style, and would invite to their very numerous customers and the public generally that, having increased the facilities for manufacturing they are now able to offer to the public first-rate goods in all branches, at lower prices than ever before.

Custom Work in all its Branches made TO ORDER.
Repairing done neatly and cheap as heretofore.
The public are cordially invited to visit the new store, and examine our Goods.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Sore-ness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
