Mr. Meyers in particular seemed to feel the thorn in the flesh the most, as he was thundering out his anathemas against The World and its proprietors and denouncing it as a rag, and that if they had the editor here that they would mob him. At the same time he was emphatically denying all knowledge of the affair further than that his name was placed on the committee for the purpose of organizing a joint stock compary to erect an opera house in Guelph; but it was well known both to him and to but it was well known both to him and to the rest of the parties concerned that they tried to silvertise the scheme in the Guelph Mercury, and that the Mercury refused to give it space, as Mr. Innes did not care to taffic with the law. Threats of libel suits against The World are hinted, but most of the parties implicated would much rather have the affair smothered up than to carry it to a bar of justice. The citizens of Guelph generally are quite in sympathy with The World in the matter, and give it credit for its cleverness in unearthing the swindle, as it is supposed that it was a plot on the part of the originators to make a big haul and it is

Had it not been for the action of The World and the courage of Mr. Fenton there would have been a perfect wave of lotteries sweeping the province about this time The success of the masonic one at London, and the apathy of the authorities from the head down, left the way open for their promotion. But a vigorous campaign on the roused the authorities and broke up the lottery business was the weakness of the local press. The London papers must have masonic swindle; the Guelph Herald openly defends the lottery floated in that city the other day; while the Mercury, a paper of some reputation, edited by a member of parliament, has nothing to say whatever. Its editor and proprietor, we are told, refused to advertise the swindle for fear of the law, but had no courage to expose it for fear of something that he knows best. But if the local papers were afraid of their duty so local papers while the mover and catchent was a leaded tone that the local bodies, and that the hound co the other day; while the Mercury, were the so-called leading journals of the province. The Globe and Mail have been apologists of Brunton and his co-swindlers. The Globe especially went out of its way to say that it did not think Brunton who secretly drew the $7500 prize, did so dishonestly. As yet it has not said a word of this Guelph swindle which is more disreputable than the London one-if that be possible. It was organized by Murphy, Chadwick and O'Connor as a fleecy game from the very first. There is nothing so seductive, so demoralizing as lotteries. They are things of the and on lotteries, would do a power of good. past. No states ever flourished where they were allowed. Yet when a perfect nest of them were being started in Canada the local papers of the towns interested, and the Globe and Mail, did not see their way to rebuke them, and actually bore testimony to the honesty of the schemers! But without their help The World has put a stopper on the lottery swindle for some time, at

A TEMPERANCE VICTORY IN OHIO.

It appears that in the state of Ohio, as well as in Canada, they have what is assertive; and his influence is more powerful called the Scott act. Like our own, it is directed against the too free sale of intoxicating liquors, but in quite a different way. It was passed only last winter, and very promptly the liquor dealers put it to the test in the courts. Ou Tuesday last the such licenses. This amendment was submitted to the popular vote, and was carried by 7000 majority. From that day to this the saloons of the state, at present some 14.000 in number, have paid no tax for selling liquor, and no tax of anyikind except the regular state or county tax on the property iu use, real and personal. All these years the fight for something better than this has been going on, sometimes with resort to actual violence, as during the women's crusade, when bands of determined women "cleaned out" many saloors without any one daring to molest them. Fifteen months ago what is called the Pond bill was passed, which levied a tax on the sale of liquors, on certain conditions. Being carried into the courts it was declared unconstitutional, on the ground that, while professing to impose a tax, it really granted a license, the latter being something absolutely and for ever prohibited in Ohio. Last winter the legislature passed the Scott bill which was drawn up on different lines. It provides for the imposition of a tax fine of $200 for selling whisky or other spirits, and of $100 for selling wine or malt liquors; this fine, or tax, to be levied on the first of May each year. The former penalties for selling without license, under which juries could not be got to return verdicts, have been repeal ed, in order to clean the way for certainty and despatch in securthe way for certainty and despatch in secur-ing convictions. so that if the tenant fails to pay the landlord must. Saloon keepers professing to sell wine and malt liquors only, and detected selling spirits also, are to be fined $250 extra. If a fine be not paid when due, 20 per cent is immediately added. Any person selling intoxicating liquors to drunkards, or to minors, is to be fined from $25 te $100, or imprisonmed from ten to thirty days, or both. The revenue collected goes, one-fourth to the county poor fund, and three-fourths equally between the local police and the municipal funds.

the claim on its behalf, that while imposing a tax on saloon-keepers or other sellers of liquor, it does not grant them a license, This seems rather a fine point, but after the case having been thoroughly argued, the court has decided that the Scott act stands good. Some temperance men are very much dissatisfied because the tax figures was not put up to $1000 at once, as in Illinois. But as the Chicago Tribune remarks amendments raising the tax may be passed in future years, if sustained by public opinion and a majority of votes in the legislature. Meantime any county or municipality has the power to prohibit altogether the sale of liquor within its borders, if only a majority of the people decide that they will have it so. The Illinois high license law and the vindication of the Scott act in Ohio are the great temperance events of the year so far in the

It is one thing to make good laws; it is another and more important matter to enforce them. Too much attention is given to making laws; not enough to carrying out those that we have. Take the law against lotteries: it is a good law, but the county crown attorneys with one single exception have not enforced it. As a consequence, lotteries were started and cerried on in London and Guelph. It is a matter of common remark that the crown officer in these places stood in with the swindle moted them. This being the case, it is the duty of the attorney-general to revise his roll of county attorneys and find out who are and who are not efficient, who have and who have not the courage to enforce the

THE WORKING CLASSES VS. THE

CHURCHES. To the Editor of The World. SIR: That a majority of the working classes are not regular church-goers, have in fact no church home, is alas too true. This may arise from a variety of causes. The old complaint of the Grecians against the Hebrews in the apostolic church has doubtless a good deal to do with it. Pride manifests itself in two ways. When riches increase their possessor is apt to become more selfin shaping the policy and general style of the church life. When poverty comes on apace the sufferers as naturally shrinks from participation in church work; the finances cannot stand the strain and pride forbids accepting a lower place. Retirement is followed by neglect, and very often by an supreme court of Ohio decided that it was constitutional, and it will after this be vigorously enforced.

With regard to llquor laws Ohio occupies a remarkable position. By an amendment to the state constitution, adopted in 1850, it was declared that the legislature was for ever prohibited from granting to anybody licenses to sell liquor, or authority to issue such licenses. This amendment was subsuited by neglect, and very often by an embittered feening against not enly churches but church teachings.

To complete the seperation and widen the gulf, strong drink, the most powerful agency in debasing and ruining the working class, steps in and from this combination we have the "lapsed masses" from whom the dangerous and criminal classes spring. What is the cure and who is to supply it? "Ye are the salt of the earth" said our Saviour to his disciples. Upon the christian church therefore without distinction of name or creed does this pathy is not accepted as genuine; but hy christian men and women who are "moved" to this work by a desire to follow Him who went about continually doing good. The church—as an organization—must also take a more decided and determined stand a more decided and determined stand against the liquor traffic in all its forms. That the most poverty-stricken districts are at the same time the places where taverns and liquor groceries do most abound is a blot and disgrace on our so-called christian civilization. Space forbids further enlargement. enlargement.

CONSOLIDATING THE BOARD OF TRADE AND CORN EXCHANGE. New Members Elected—The Basis of Amal gamation—" What's in a Name "—The Heagre Pumping Power under Con-

A special meeting of the Toronto board of trade was held in their rooms Wednesday afternoon. Mr. H. W. Darling, president, occupied the chair. There were present Wm. T. Keiley, T. O. Anderson, Hugh Blain, G. A. Chapman, Barlow Cumberland, R. W. Elliott, J. D. Laidlaw, Wm. Ince, A. M. Smith, Wm. Thompson, R. B. Ellis, Geo.

Goulding and F. Wyld.

The following new members were elected: G. W. Lillie (Lyman Bros. & Co.), Jas. Mason (the Loan association), Geo. W. Gillespie (Gillespie, Ansley & Martin), S. Sylvester (Sylvester & Hickman), J. L. Brodie (Standard bank), D. Coulson (bank of Toronto), W. Grindley (bank B. N. A.), W. Cooke, T. E. P. Trew (Merchants' bank), S. Nordheimer, H. S. Strathy (Federal bank), Nordheimer, H. S. Strathy (Federal bank), notions by people whose concealed and evil object is to do what harm they can, and this centralizing idea is one of them—direct from the seat of communism—from France, Anderson, J. C. Kemp (bank of Commerce). The president congratulated the board on procuring the co-operation of so many bankers, who had expressed a desire to further its interests.

The special business for which the meeting was called was the consideration of a basis of agreement between the board of trade and the corn exchange. The president reviewed the history of the board of trade, and said that their interests were identical and amalgamation would be beneficial alike to both sides. The present membership of the board of trade was 150, membership of the corn exchange 73. The eration of the joint committee.

The president drew the attention of the poard to the serious state of affairs existing in connection with the city's pumping ca-pacity. The nominal capacity of the two engines at the pumping house was 12,000, 000 gallons per day, although really there should be 10 per cent. deducted from this. The daily consumption of the city was 7,500,000 gallons. In case of accident to the larger engine the city would be left in a very undesirable position, more especially if a large fire were to break out. He cited the cities of Philadelphia Toledo Milway.

a large fire were to break out. He clies the cities of Philadelphia, Toledo, Milwankee, Chicago, Detroit, Montreal, Ottaws, etc., which had a pumping capacity of over double the quantity required.

The meeting unanimously admitted the graveness of the situation. Mr. W. B. Lee and Mr. Hugh Blain moved that this board having had under consideration the very serious condition of the water supply of this city are of opinion that immediate steps should be taken by the city council to provide additional pumping

THE BEASON OF PROVINCIAL GOV. RRNMENTS.

To the Editor of The World. SIR: It is said "we are too much governed; do away with the locals." It should be considered, I think, that though not populated our provinces are some of them as large as certain important empires. They are not over supplied with legislatures if these do the work there is to do. In the most especial duty of government we have in past years been far too little governed. That duty is the apportionment and giving out the lands, minerals, water powers, etc., and adding measures to make them pay those who get them. The forest should in parts, such as heights of land, never have been allowed to be matic purposes. So should vast areas of poor land, which will never pay well in farm but would in forest land. The great forests, too, our pine reserves, should have been kept as far as negable from loss by: cleared, but retained in forest for clibeen kept as far as possible from loss by fire, which has taken ten times as much as that taken by the hunbermen. Though not a perty man, let me say that I am glad to hear the Ontario government is taking valuable steps in this direction.

In fine, if our great territory were seen after and placed in the hands of settler. tarmers where arable, graziers where not, foresters where woods are needed—there would be ample work for our local governments. There is now ample work for them in getting such a pepulation on these lands. Neither can it be said they are expensive. They are cheap; the salaries they give would be thought most contemptable in Britain, and many of their officials are be called parsimonious. I am independent on politics myself; but it is fair to say him that he is, in many of those measure him that he is, in many of those measure he introduces—to help draining, tree planting, butter making, forestry, and so onmoving in the paternal direction, that is going on properly to do what a local government can. There are very many things they can do for the large extent of territory they govern, which are far too local for the dominion government to many the local for the local for the dominion government to many the local for the local for the local for the dominion government to many the local for the local f age, yet impossible for a county counci Much can be done, and as I said, I approv E. STRACHAN COX. Much can be done, and as I said, I approved to the commencement made by our Ontario local, and irrespective of party, I wish to see it given uninterrupted chance to work its full term. There are many stiff-necked fools in both grit and tory ranks. Mr. Mowat and, generally speaking, his lieutenants, are not so. His own character has much of the guick appreciation for the has much of the quick appreciation for the practical which Sir John Macdonald possesses. He is slower than the latter, but infinitely more honest. What he says he will do; what John A. says he may do And now I come to what is perhaps the main point of this, I am sensible, very dry communication. We should not interfere with the powers of the locals. If the dominion act be indefinite, the benefit of the nion act be indefinite, the benefit of the doubt should be given to them. There are membership of the board of trade was 150, and that of the corn exchange 73. The receipts and expenditures of both associations were about the same. The president concluded by saying that they had everything to gain and nothing to lose by the consolidation.

It was moved by Mr. Wm. Ince and Mr. Robt. W Elliott. That the board heartily could be well if cities could governments. It would be well if cities could governments. It would be well if cities could governments. It would be well if cities could governments should be supported, and all means taken to resist the appartent of their powers. For many reasons, if we watch them, they are our best governments should be supported, and all means taken to resist the appartent of the control of the contr consolidation.

It was moved by Mr. Wm. Ince and Mr. Robt. W. Elliott, That the board heartily approves of the steps that have been taken with a view to a union with the corn exchange, and that the report presented by the council upon this subject be adopted; that the president and Messrs. R. W. Elliott, W. B. Hamilton and H. Blain be appointed a committee to act along with a service of the well influence of dense populations forbid. It would be well if counties solves, but they are too small, and the agricultural mind is apt to be in government injuriously penurious. The local government gives the just medium—city, town and rural districts united—where little can be done without the persons affected being aware, and where pressure can at once be appointed a committee to act along with a

WOMANLY PSYCHOLOGY. To the Editor of the World.

SIR : Unless Psyche's soul entirely re volts from logic she cannot but descry a strong proof of mentrl equality in the sexes, from the fact that neither herself, nor some of her critics, are able to distinguish in a letter the sex of its writer. Possibly there may be other farme of work in which results would be equally indis-

in which results would be equally indis-tinguishable. Evidently the psychical serenity of Psyche had been a little rufil d as she penned her concluding paragraph, which dirdains any reply other than attempted depreciation; and as she herself says "log-icians tell us that when an opponent be-formes argry it proves defeat:" logic com-nels us to apply the axion. pels us to apply the axion.

However painful it may be to the higher instincts of Payche, it is none the less true that there are quite a number of men in this city, and elsewhere, who still persist, from love for justice, in seeking the political entranchisement of women—aye, even of women who do not yet realize their need of it. Bye and bye these same "womanly women," as they become thereby more truly 'womanly," will recognize the wisdom of such action by its fruits. It will respective to turn us aside from a course whose issues we have well considered.

No don't 'brevity is the soul of wit,' when the "brevity" is not the sole "wit" displayed; but it is a gorgeous joke, on Psyche's part, to commend "brevity" to others at the close of her two letters, each J. L. F. early a column in length.

"Lounger," who was in New Orleans when Sullivan fught Ryas, is responsible for the statement that the former is Greek scholar. On the day of the fight, he says, Sullivan was on the beach. "I saw his face soften. "What are you thinking of," I said re him. "I was thinking how admirably old Homer expressed it when he spoke et Foluphlois' bos thalatta (I hope my Greek is correct), the loud sounding sea, he answered. "When I read Homer the words greatly impressed me. "Why, where did you read Homer? I seked in seme amasement. 'Oh at the Boston high school,' he said. Just then he was called, and in ten minutes Ryan was the worst whipped man who ever stood up in a twenty-four foot ring. But I will never forget how, with resonant voice, the gladiator repeated in faultiess measure from the original Greek one of the finest passages the blind old bard ever thought or wrote in the world that made him immortal. I do not know how much Sullivan may have changed or become demoralised by contact with Boston culture, but in the forthight I knew him he always had the air and manner of a well-bred man of the world."

Sir Joseph Fayrer tell's us that they often object to killing cobras which may have taken up their quarters in

"Should fear, and perhaps the death of some in-timate by accident, prove stronger than superstition, the cobra may be caught, tenderly handled, and deported to some field, where it is released and allowed to depart in peace." The mongoose is the natural enemy of the snake, and although it seems to be as tamable as the cat, its depre-dations on the poultry yard will always prevent it taking the place of the cat in the Indian's household. Doctor Wall mentions a fact relative to the mode of attack of the mongoose on poisonous snakes which we do not remember seeing stated before, the scale of animal intelligence: "One of the Indian snake's chief ene mies, the mongoose, has no fear whatever of the poison, as anyone will confess who has seen with what complete ease he seizes the snake and crushes out first one and then the other of the poison-fangs with his long incisors, and then devours the cobra — thus rendered helpless — at his leisure. That the mongoose is perfectly aware of the existence of the poison-fang there can be no doubt, for he only seizes the cobra by the fang; and should he miss his aim, he retires at once out of reach to to make a fresh attack."

The gland in which the poison is secreted is analogous to the parotid gland in other animals, and its secretion has probably some similar use to the saliva in the economy of similar use to the saliva in the economy of the snake's digestion, and its action, even as a poison, may be due to some essential principle which may act in a similar man-ner to ptyalin, pepsin, or pancreatin, and only in a secondary way becomes an instru-ment of offence or defence.

It would be an interesting and a useful sphice of energy for these pages and an subject of enquiry for those persons who have the opportunity of making it, whether snakes have, as the ancients asserted, strong antipathies to certain substances. Aristotle tells us that serpents may be driven away from a house by the smell of rue. Pliny says that the root of the holm oak is an says that the root of the holm oak is an enemy to scorpians and that of the ash to serpents, which, moreover, will not retire under fern. Serpents may be driven away by the burning of hair or stag's horn, or the sawdust of the cedar, or a few drops of galbanum, green invo or inniner and those galbanum, green ivy or juniper, and those who are rubbed with juniper seeds are perfectly secure from hurt by serpents. It is probable that such substances as carbolic acid would be found useful for driving snakes away, as two or three drops placed
