THE RESCUE OF GREELY.

COMMODORE SCHLEY'S OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE EXPEDITION.

The Remarkable Mental Vigor of the WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. - The report of Commodore Schley of the expedition for the relief of the Greely party has been submitted to the secretary of the navy. It contains a detailed account of the journey.

Sabine. When the steam cutter reached the vicinity of the camp, Sergeant Long was discovered reclining on the rocks. The location of his camp was learned from him, and Greely was informed of the coming of the relief party. Long was carried up the side of the steamer, and placed in the saloon. Schley, with the officers and crew of the Bear, went ashore and reached Greely's camp about 9 p.m. The tent covering the Greely party had blown down; it was partially raised and the survivora were given milk and beef extract. Doctors were left to administer stimulants to Greely, Sergeant Ellison, Sergt. Brainerd, Hospital Steward Beiederbick, Sergt. Fredericks and Private Connell, who were found alive in the wretched tent. The tent, burying ground and ice floe near by were photographed. The camp was located midway between Cocked Hat island and Caps Sabine. It was about seventy-five feet from the beach, on a slight elevation, protected by high mountains. All the survivors except Long were unable to walk, and were carried out upon stretchers. By 11 p m. the survivors were so far strengthened by stimulants that all were removed to the survivors were so far strengthened by stimulants that all were removed to the ships. A gale which had blown all day increased to a hurricane, during the night and work with boats was difficult and dangerous. The work of exhuming the dead bodies was promptly perfor Payer harbor at 4 o'clock on the morning of June 23. Schley describes as follows the impressions produced by the seene inside Greely's tent: Greely was found in his sleeping bag, his body inclined forward, his head resting upon his left hand. The book of common prayer. clined forward, his head resting upon his left hand. The book of common prayer was open and held in his right hand. He appeared to be reading prayers to Private Connell whose condition was critical. He was cold to the wais; all sensation of hunger was come and he was a speechless. it was with difficulty that he swallowed atimulants. His jaws had dropped, his heart was barely pulsating and the body temperature was very low. companions had shared their food with him. Ellison's feet were amputated in an endeavor to save his life, but he survived endeavor to save his life, but he survived the operation only three days.

Greely was physically the weakest, but mentally the most vigorous of the party. He had lain in a sleeping bag for weeks, and was unable to stand alone for any length of time, and was almost helpless except in a sitting posture. His appearance length of time, and was almost helpless except in a sitting posture. His appearance was wild, his hair was long and unkempt, his face and hands covered with sooty black dirt, his body scantily covered with worn out clothes, his form wasted, joints swollen and eyes sunken. His first inquiry was if the recruiting party were not Englishmen, but when told they were his own countrymen he paused for a moment and then men he paused for a moment and then said, "And I am glad to see you." The condition of the camp was in keeping with the scene inside the tent. The dead bodies the scene inside the tent. The dead bodies of their companions were stretched on an ice floe that remained. Wretched cooking utensils, which were improvised in their distress were scattered about, and worn out clothes and sleeping bags of the dead. Mr. Bourlier visited Minnedosa, at present the terminus of the Manitoba and Northwestern railway, (a line which runs from Portage la Prairie and which is being extended some eighty miles further). The farming lands between Portage la Prairie and Minnedosa are being well settled, and no wonder, as this district is conceded to be the garden of Manitoba. The farms along the line show every sign of prosperity, and strangers attending the agricultural fairs held at the different little towns would be amazed at the richness of the products from the soil, in the shape of wheat, oats, barley and all kinds of vegetables. The exports of grain will be large from this district. No less than 100 cars of wheat will be shipped this winter from Gladstone, one of the little towns on the Manitoba and Northwestern tailway.

Mr. Bourlier after visiting Brandon, Moose Jaw, Regina, Medicine Hat, Swift Current, etc., pushed on to Calgary, a very prettily situated town on the Bow river, and in sight of the Rockies. Calgary is said to possess a beautiful dry climate, and the Chinook winds which prevail at intervals during the winter bring about a mixed, pleasant atmosphere, which no doubt is of great service to the owners of the immense stock farms which are dotted all over the neighborhood.

He was immediately succeeded by Sir Francis Bond Head, author of various works, of which perhaps the best known are The Emigrant and A Journey Across the Pampas. To judge from a nickname applied to Sir Francis, his mental capabilities were not held in exceptionally high esteem. The Sir Bond Head was transformed into sepone head (phonetically suppawn). Sepone, we may add, is a soft pultaceous food common amongst early settlers. The village of Bond Head was so called by the uncle of His Honor Lieut.

The Tax Exemption Association. On Tuesday a meeting in favor of the abolition of exemption from taxation passed a resolution forming an association, the objects of which are "by proper and legitimate means to bring about the abolition of all exemptions from taxation." To-day the provisional executive committee of that association meets to adopt a constitution and bylaws.

We cannot impress too strongly upon the members of this committee the responsibility that lies upon their shoulders: to this executive committee the pulic looks to initiate and carry out vigorous measures for the attainment of the laudal object they have in view. Concerted action they will expect and they will obtain; but they themselves must be the fly-wheel without which the whole machinery would work unsteadily and ineffectually. Last year's efforts in this direction failed, partly through the opposition of the legislature and partly through the apathy, or at all the part of the committee. To-day we good men, energetic men, influential men to look to: let them remember that the public and the press will heartily endorse their efforts in this direction.

Wholesome food, a comfortable house, and a certain amount of leisure are the prime necessities of civilized life. These are necessary to existence properly so called: that is, to existence which is progressive; any style of existence that is not a hindrance and a drag upon the rest of the community, and that community should see that nothing of this kind im pedes its onward movement.

In an interesting column in the Chicago News we read that there are in the northwestern portion of that city alone over a thousand able-bodied men out of employment. The cause of this is traced to the enormous influx into Chicago of Poles, Bohemians, Italians and others whose margin of subsistence is narrow in the extreme; who can live (but nothing more) on the merest pittance, and to whom comfort, cleanliness, healthy houses, wholesome food and other requisites of what we have called progressive existence are utterly unknown. What is the result? Not only do these foreigners by their own stagnant condition retard the march of civilization to a very appreciable extent, but they also crowd out those to whom such amenities of life every class in a community are entitled to.

To this evil Canada will be soon obnox ious, if she is not already so. We could, the Chinaman, the Pole, the to our moral, social and political advancement? This is a question that will at no very distant day clamor for an answer, and standpoint and be prepared to give it an unhesitating answer.

A Wonderful Steamer. The Cunard liner Umbria made an experimental cruise a few days ago. Trans-Atlantic voyages are nowadays unique in point of comfort and speed. Some years ago the vessels on the overland route to India were perhaps unexgreat competition between the P. & O. companies, the French, and Green's lines: them; and the large amount of passenger and freight traffic allowed of luxurious details. Now, however, no ocean voyages can compare with those between Great Britain and America.

Of this the Umbria is a salient example. She has attained a speed of 24 statute miles an hour; her gross tonnage is 8000 tons; ten water-tight compartments divide her bulk; and she is fitted with numerous water-tight and fireproof doors. Her masts are of steel, and she is equipped with the large number of twelve lifeboats.

Nor has attention been paid to safety alone; she has five decks beautifully furnished; is lighted by electric light and is upholstered internally in the most luxurious

A Bogus Emigration Society.

Let us give what prominence we can to the following, which we find in the London correspondence of the Montreal Gazette: "We welcome the exposure o another bogus emigration society. This time the scene of operations was Edinburg; and, working under the style of the "British employment, emigration and aid society," a man named Walter Hamilton succeeded in defrauding several persons of sums varying from one to ten pounds. The course adopted was that so general in such cases. The depositors are assured of permanent employment in the colonies, with passages prepaid, only after paying the fees to learn that the society has an existence only on beyond recovery. Happily in the present instance the fraud has been detected early in the day, and the sentence of five years' penal servitude and three years' police supervision will, it is to be hoped, suffice to deter other so-called emiworking "on his own hook," and without authority to act for any government, or oany, can rake in money from persons anxious to emigrate, what may not be done by bona fide agents, duly authorized and unimpeachable? There seems to be money in the emigration business for somebody, and we fancy that the biggest share of it goes to the steamship companies and their agents in the old country.

There are Venison in the original package comes high, each stag standing him in the sum of about $250, besides probably two or three times as much for incidentals. The correspondent adds concerning the large pro prietors in Lord Kenmore's vicinity that "good and easy as they generally are the tenants are miserably poor." As it is precisely one of these "good and easy souls" who obtains from these "miserably poor" the pretty trifle of nearly $300,000 a year, the reader may draw his own conclusions as to which is the cause and which progressive should not be tolerated, it is the effect, for it is also stated that poor as these people are the country is inadequately populated.

The Ottawa Citizen runs a column of notes under the heading of "semi-editorial." Its editor must be a half-and-half sort of cuss. The generic premise-11 we may use the phrase-upon which all species of argunents on behalf of exemption from taxation are based appears to be this: that a certain part of the community should not be taxed for the possession of something that benefits the whole community. If this rule were carried out in its entirety nothing would be taxed. Every valuable possession conduces directly or indirectly to the benefit of the whole community from a dollar bill to The World newspaper. The benefit conferred by that other religious bodies to the impudent atpossession is a matter of degree. But as tacks which Dr. Lynch makes upon them the generic premise does not take account in St. Michael's church on Sunday evenof gradations or degrees of benefit it ings. I wish further to ask are they con-doubtless, with great ease add to the mere unmerical proportions of our population by an influential crowd of followers, who, if an influential crowd of followers, who is an unable to clamor openly on his behalf, will Bohemian, the Italian, the low caste Russian and others to settle amongst us, but should we be adding to our wealth, to our capabilities of progress, to our hopes of a proud and patriotic independence, in short Whally, Dr. Kenealy and Guildford Onslow. These are now no more; and although the British mob at heart looks up to an aristocrat and will not see injustice it would be well to examine it from every done him, yet by this time the idea that the claimant is a baronet chiselled out of rights has evaporated.

There was a quiet energy about the meeting brought together for the purpose of advocating the abolition of exemption from taxation on Tuesday evening that augurs well for its tuture success. Not many arguments were educed; not many strongly-felt sentiments were uttered; and celled in both these respects. There was the speeches were by no means blatant or rabid. There was about the whole proceedings an air of conscious power, a a very good class of people traveled upon power that was gathering itself together for great and decisive action. Exemptions must go.

An excellent move on the part of the exemption of taxation association is that of obtaining the co-operation of the trade and labor council. To the workingman, who by constant unaided toil earns enough to purchase a house and lot, it must ever be an enigma why upon that house and lot he should pay taxes while the clergyman, who probably has risen to the position he holds by state endowed colleges, lives untaxed in a handsome parsonage or

To the Editor of The World. SIR: To hear the temperance people talk one would be led to believe that the whole country was going to destruction through drink. Why do they exaggerate to such an extent? Why do they make statements that cannot be relied upon? And where do paper, and that their deposits are gone they obtain the information they thunder forth to their gullible audiences? I venture to assert that there is very little truth in anything they say, and that most of their the erection of a building which shall enspecches are manufactured to catch the able the institution more successfully to ears and votes of the unwary. and then kick them into the streets!

These and many other such statements are so astonishing that I have takan some trouble to make enquiries and research and I find that most of them are either wholly untrue or have a very slender foundation in fact.

The town I live in contains about six thousand inhabitants, and after spending months in enquiry I cannot find sixty drunkards (one per cent). Another town seven miles distant, with about the same population, is similarly situated, and from all that I can learn of license and revenue inspectors and others Large Estates in Ireland.

The prosperity of the people of western Ireland, and their free development into self-governing thrift, must be greatly hampered by the large estates. A correspondent of the London Times speaks of Lord Kenmore's rent-roll as having been divided by the large would be applied to the whole western population. apply to the whole province of Ontario. Yet I have met clergymen who said that 75 per cent. of the community were going to destruction through drink!

If the former portion of the previous sentence is really true, what is to be gained by resorting to a law that is of comparatively little use beyond dosing the saloons and hotels? closing the saloons and hotels?

A law so silly that it cannot be enforced, so tyrranical that the middest person would not tamely submit to its provisions, so unjust that moderate law abiding citizens object to its enactments, and so doubtful as to its constitutionality that in many counties where it has been carried the authorities are afraid to enforce its penal clauses. I have no doubt myself that the law is

I have no doubt my unconstitutional.

Magna charta, that great bulwark of English liberty, provides that henceforward no man shall be deprived of his property without compensation. Having this great charter in view, the imperial government did not try to emancipate the slaves ment did not try to emancipate the slave of the West Indies without first remune rating their owners at a cost of $100,000,

I apprehend if the Scott act was tested on the same grounds it would not stand; but that phase of the question has never yet been tried. If the temperance element wish to succeed they must consent to a clause being inserted in the act indemni-fying manufacturers and others for their fying manufacturers and others for their losses; not until then will opposition cease. They may carry the act in every county, but that will not produce total abstinence, neither will it prevent a wholesale violation of it, but only a temporary triumph over a few tavern keepers, for the general public will have it as usual.

"I'd like to take that, yer honor," said George, as he jumped into the dog-cart and a low, sweet voice, that seemed to come from under the animal.

"Ha! is that yourself, Jack," said George, as he jumped into the dog-cart and gathered up the reins. "Do you think the mare cannot do it? You ought to know her better! She brought us down this morning in eighty-five minutes, and the whip never left the socket."

"Then she'll not go back in three hours this night, barrin's he goes by rail," said the man, rising from the stooping posture and standing back as he looked at the beast's near foreleg.

He was a lithe boy of some 20 years, dcressed in a ragged scarlet coat and an old black hunting cap, the cast-off suit of some whipper-in. Under a shock of brown hair a broad beaming face defied delineation, for the katures were constantly on the move. A mouth vigorous, large, full of gleaming teeth, seemed shrewd and vaisachievous, over which two blue eyes, ander long, black brows, were like timped wells of good nature and fun.

Leaped to the driver's seat, and I sprang up beside him.

"Whew!" He uttered a low whistle, and the horse, with a snort and a plunge, went forward like a rocket. "Hould fast, now," cried the lad, as the animal went at headlong gallop down the lane, leaving George with the lamp in his hand. His pale face was the last thing I remember. For four or five miles we flew, swung around corners with the off wheel in the air, speechless and almost breathless, guided by the light of the single lamp. We passed the gates of a park, at which a group of people were standing, some on

"Could I hire a horse from one of the farmers in the neighborhood who lives near this place?"

"I have no idea," replied my companion so dejectedly that I had not the heart to exhibit my despair. Darkness was increasing, and the first drops of rain began to patter on the leaves above us.

"I do not know where we are, or what to do. I am fairly at my wit's end."

The hidge that topped the bank skirting the road was divided above our heads, and a dark form bounded across the ditch, and Cantering Jack alighted beside us.

The Smuggling Case.

Before entering into an investigation into the charges of defrauding the government against Capt. John Emmons at the police court yesterday, counsel for the prosecution explained that Emmons was captain of the schooner Mary Grover, that sailed from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., at daylight on Oct. 26, 1883, having on board a cargo consisting of hay, cattle, coal and sundry articles valued at about $3000. Instead of making the usual entry at the nearest regular port, which was Sault Ste. Marie, on the Canadian side, he went to Michipicoten, where he unloaded, and then proceeded to Port Arthur and made a false entry as to his cargo. A question was entry as to his cargo. A question was raised as to his worship's jurisdiction and it was decided that after taking the evidence to adjourn the case for a few days.

Wouldn't Wear Dude Pants "My lawyer isn't here," exclaimed the defendant in the suit of Taylor v. Mannel at the western division court yesterday. The lawyer soon put in an appearance, however, and the case was proceeded with. Taylor & Kennedy, tailors in the Rossin house block, sue a butcher named Mannel for $27, the price of a suit of clothes. Mannel claims that the clothes did not fit, Mannel claims that the clothes did not fit, and consequently he would not pay for them. When put in the witness box he said that he had distinctly told Mr. Taylor that he "didn't want dude pants," and "he wouldn't wear those horrid tight pantaloons." Witnesses swore that the pants and vest did not fit, even after they had been altered. Judgment for defendant.
