The Christmas Well.

BY FRANK R. STOCKTON. Early in my married life I bought a small county estate which my wife and I looked upon as a paradise. After enjoying its delights for a little more than a year our souls were saddened by the discovery that our Eden contained a serpent. This was an insufficient water supply.

It was quite natural that the scarcity of water for domestic purposes should effect my wife much more than it did me, and perceiving the discontent which was growing it her mind, the serpent came and whispered in her ear. Very soon afterwards she offer ed me an apple; I took it and ate thereof, and my eyes being thereby opened I determined to dig a well.

As this well was to be made entirely for the sake of my wife it should be called her well, it should really belong to her. Happy thought? I would make her a Christma present of it! It was true that it was then early in the autumn, and the gift would be ready to present some time before the holiday season, but I knew my wife would not object to that. It would be such a rare gift!
I did not believe that anybody ever before gave his wife a Christmas present of a well.

The very next day after I had eaten of the apple I began to look for a well digger. Such an individual was not easy to find. In about a week I found a well-digger. "And now then," said he, when we had had a little conversation about terms," the first thing to do is to find out where there is water. Have you a peach tree on the place? We walked to such a tree and he cut therefrom a forked twig.

"I thought," said I, "that divining rods were always of hazel wood." "A peach tree twig will do quite as well," said he, and I have since found that he was and with the point projecting in front of him, he slowly walked along over the grass in my little orchard. Presently the point of the twig seemed to bend itself downward towards the ground. "There," said he, stopping, "you will

"I do not want a well here" said I; "this is at the bottom of a hill and my barnyard is at the top; besides, it is too far from the "Very good," said he; " we will try somewhere else His rod turned at several other places, but I had objected to all of them. He stood up and looked at me. Well, sir." said he, "will you tell me where you would like to have a well?" "Yes," said I,. "I would like to have it over there in the corner of the hedge. It would be near enough to the house."

He took his divining rod and went to the spot I had indicated. "Is this the place?" he asked, wishing to be sure he understood me. "Yes," I replied, and he put his twig in position and in a few seconds it turned in the direction of the ground. Then he drove down a stick, marked out a circle and the xt day came with two men and a derrick and began to dig my well.

My neighbors were all rural people, and intelligent in regard to water supplies. One of them, Phineas Colwell by name, took a more lively interest in my operations than off my trees. And then," said he, "I have threshing out the oats and wheat, but I do not like to have my apples and pears shaken off my trees. And then," said he, "I have a late brood of chickens, and they cannot did any one else. He was a man of about walk, because every time they make a step Phineas walked along our lane at least they are jolted into the air about a foot, once a day, and whenever he saw me he told and again, we have had to give up having soup. We like soup, but we do not like to have it spout up like a fountain whenever

Go ahead, we can stand When Mrs Perch had time she sewed for the neighbors, and whether she had time or not she was always ready to supply them with news. From the moment she heard I was going to dig a well she took a vital innight work we would be very glad. Some terest in it. Her own water supply was unsatisfactory, as she depended upon a little spring which sometimes dried up in the summer, and should my well turn out to be her sending the children for pails of water

Country people are proverbially prudent, and pessimism is prudence.

She was a widow with about twelve child

But whatever else he may be, a pessimis is depressing, and it was, therefore, a great pleasure to me to have a friend who was an out and out optimist. In fact, he might be called a working optimist. He lived about six miles from my house, and had a hobby, which was natural phenomena. He was always on the lookout for that sort of thing. and when he found it he would study its na ture and effect. "I have the wildest desire," he said, " to know what is in the earth under our place, and if it should so happen in the course of getting out of the well. time that the limits of earthly existence should be reached by—I mean if the estate should come into my hands—I would go down, down, until I had found out all that could be discovered. To own a plug of earth four thousand sailes long and only know what is on the surface of the upper end of it is unmanly. We might as well be grazing

He was sorry I was digging only for water because water is a very commonplace thing, but he was quite sure I would find it. Having finished my well, I now set about getting the water into my residence nearby. I built a house over the well and put in a little engine, and by means of a system of pipes, like the arteries and veins of the human body, I proposed to distribute the water to the various desired points in my house. life, was very necessary to it.

who could afford to buy water, but it is very different with the widow and the orpha If I had not supposed you were going to have a real well, I would have my spring cleaned out and deepened. I could have had it done in the early summer, but it is of no use now, the spring has dried up." She told a neighbor that she believed the digging of my well had dried up her spring. Of course, I did not submit to defeat-a least, without a struggle. I had a well, and if anything could be done to make that well supply me with water I was going to do it. I concluded specialists, and, after careful consideration of the matter, they agreed that the very best thing I could do would be to try a driven well. As I had already excavated about sixty feet, that was so much gain to me, and if I should have a six-inch pipe put into my present well, and then driven down and down until it came to a place where there was plenty of water I would have all I wanted. My wife and I then considered the matter, and ultimately decided that we would have a well driven. Of course, we were both very sorry that the work must be begun again, but I was especially dissatisfied, for now it would be impossible for me to make the well a Christmas present to my wife. The weather was cold, there was already snow upon the ground, and I was told that work could not be carried on in winter weather. I lost no time, however, in making a contract with a well driver, who assured me that as soon as the season should open, which might be very early in the spring, he would come to my place and begin to drive my well. At last-it was early in the summer-he came with his derricks, a steam engine, trip hammer and a lot of men. They took off the roof of my house, removed the engine and set to work.

For many a long day, and I am sorry to say, for many a longer night, that trip-ham-mer hammered and banged. On the next day after the night work began one of my did that for. I told him they were anxious "Get through what," said he, "the earth? If they do that and your six-inch pipe comes He took an end of the twig in each band, out in a Chinaman's back yard he will sue you for damages."

When the pipe had been driven thro the soft stratum under the old well, and be-gan to reach firmer ground, the pounding and shaking of the earth became worse and worse. My wife was obliged to leave home with our child. "If he is to do without both water and And I agreed with her.

She departed for a pleasant summer resort where her married sister with her child was staying, and from week to week I received very pleasant letters from her, telling me of the charms of the place and dwelling par-ticularly upon the abundance of cool spring water with which the house was supplied. While this terrible pounding was going on I heard various reports of its effect upon my neighbors. One of them, an agriculturist, with whom I had always been on the best of terms, came with a clouded brow.

"When I first felt those shakes," he sai "I thought they were the effects of seismic disturbances and I did not mind, but when I found it was your well I thought I ought to come over to speak about it. I do not object to the shaking of my barn, because

She was shocked. "I never saw such a scene of wreckage," after a cyclone. I think the best thing you can do is to have this dreadful litter cleared up, the ground smoothed and raked, the wall mended and the roof put back on that little house, and then if we can make anybody believe it is an ice-house so much the

LIFE BECAME A BURDEN. THE WONDERFUL NARRATIVE OF A PATIENT

CULOUSLY RESTORED

Mrs. Sarah Cloutier, who resides at No 405 Montcalm Street, Montreal, has passed through an experience which is worthy of a widespread publication for the benefit it may prove to others. Up to four years ago, Mrs. Cloutier's health had been good, but at that time she was attacked by that dread scourge, la grippe. Every fall since, not withstan all her care to avoid it, she has been afflicted she said. "It looks like a western town with inflammation of the lungs, which would bring her to the very verge of death. This was followed by bronchia for the rest of the year. Her bronchial tubes were affected to uch an extent that it was with difficulty she could breathe, and a draught of outside air would make her cough in the most distressing manner. "There was," said Mrs. Cloutie I sent for a man to put the vicinity of the to the reporter, "a constant rattling sound in my throat, and in the state I was in death would have been a relief. I could not attend to my affairs nor to my house, and had it not been for my niece, on whom I relied, I cannot say what would have become of me. It was in vain that I tried the numerons remedies given me by various doctors. and when I think of all the money they co me I cannot but regret I have ever tried them. I had read frequently of the cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I felt that they must contain the truth, for if they were unfounded none would dare to give the names and addresses of the persons said to be cured in the public manner in which to try Pink Pills, and none but those who were acquainted with my former condition can understand the good I have derived from their use, which I continued until I felt that "Now," said he, after he had taken a few puffs, "I'll tell you where the trouble's been am cured I may tell you that on the first occasion of my going out after my recovery I walked for two miles on a up hill road without feeling the least fatigue or the leas pant for breath, and since that time I have enjoyed the best of health. The decision given last week by the judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, on the prohibition question, is just about what was expected. Three of these judges hold to the opinion that a prohibitory law must come from the dominion parliament, while the two remaining judges are of the opinion that the local legislatures have power to enact provincial prohibitory laws. As, however, the opinion of the majority is always taken as the decision of the court, it will be seen that so far as the Supreme Court of Canada can decide the question the dominion parliament is the body to be looked to for a prohibitory liquer law. But it was never expected that the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada can decide the question the dominion parliament is the body to be looked to for a prohibitory liquer law. But it was never expected that the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada can decide the question the dominion parliament is the body to be looked to for a manimous in their opinion, the case would have been taken a step higher and submitted to the Judicial Committee of the Province and an interview of the law of the province and an indulgent father.

When this is done solid ground will be reached and both our dominion and provincial parliaments will then know just how far they can go in dealing with this question. Until such a decision is obtained it would be very unwise on the part of any of our parliaments to attempt further legislation in the direction of prohibition, as all such legislation would stand a fair chance of being upset or declared ultra vires by the decision of the Privy Council. The friends of temperance throughout the dominion must therefore wait in patience for the final decision of the case, which, without doubt, will be pushed to its termination at as early a day as possible.

The fact that the Canadian court was divided, the Chief Justice and one other judge believing that the provinces have power to prohibit, leaves much room for doubt as to what the verdict of the Privy Council will be. Should the opinion of the Chief Justice be upheld it will throw upon our provincial parliaments the onus of dealing with this question which is such a trouble-some one to our politicians. A good many of our farmers have this year tried the experiment of shipping to the English market at their own risk, instead of selling to speculators, and in most cause the results have been one statisfactory. This practice, we think, is commendable, as the grower who ships his own fruit will, from the very nature of the case, take care that none but the best are sent, however carcless he might be about the quality and the packing of those he puts up to sell at home. This should not be the case of course, but unfortunately too frequently it is.

Considering the enormous crop of the past season, the prices and general results have been exceedingly satisfactory. One fact must have been brought home to our fruit growers with more force than ever before, the necessity of raising only the best varieties. With the apple as with everything else in the world it is related and an advent on the remains were followed to their last resting place by a large number of mourners.

-Late events have shown that the Japaese are pretty good fighters. And later lopments demonstrate that the nation will never be extinguished because of any superabundance of modesty. In the negotiations for peace between China and Japanit is announced that, in addition to a generous war indemnity, the conditions demanded by the victorious children of the land of the rising sun include the independence of Corea, the cession of certain islands now owned by China, the razing of the forts at Token, the dismantling of Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei, the demolition of all fortifications on the route from Corea into China, and the regulation by Japan of the future number and type of Chinese warships. A few more victories and the Japanese will be satisfied with nothing short of the earth.

Thus far these parliaments have authorized plebiscites with the expectation that the responsibility of dealing with the popular request made known in this way rested wholly with the authorities to Ottawa. Wedding Anniversary.

The temperance people of Maine, headed by that veteran prohibitionist, Gen. Neal Dow, are seeking to obtain from the legislature of that state important amendments to the famous prohibitory liquor law which has long been in force in Maine. They want a law which will impose upon sellers a fine of $500 and imprisonment for six months for the first offence; the same fine and a year's imprison railway employes unloading packages of liquor, and various other excessively severe penalties inflicted upon those who violate the prohibitory law.

These things clearly indicate that an ordinary prohibitory law, such as has been in force in that state for many years, is by no means.

The Missionary Anniversary Services.

The Missionary Anniversary services in connection with the Methodist church of Canada was held on Sabbath last at Port George, Brooklyn and Lawrencetown. The Rev. Joseph Gaetz, an old pastor, was the deputation and gladened and stirred the hearts of his many old friends by his eloquent sermons and address. A very creditable advance of last year will mark the Missionary receipts of this year.

The report stated that last year $242,955,40 was contributed by the Methodist church for home and foreign missions. This ant. is exclusive of some $36,000 raised by the Woman's Missionary Society of the same church. Both at Port George, Brooklyn and Lawrencetown a very creditable advance in subscriptions was made, notwithstanding the loss of old subscribers by death and other causes.

Ottawa's Carnival week, from January 21st to 26th next, bids fair to eclipse all Winter Carnivals. It was universally agreed that Quebec carried off the admittedly outlift the latter. It was universally agreed that Quebec carried off the palm. The carnival fever is evidently contageous like influenza, and now Ottawa is enjoying a carnival, which bids fair to outdo both the quaint old city of Quebec, and beat both the quaint old city of Quebec, and beat the best that Montreal has done.

Dr. Longstaff, of England, last year, put forth a voluminous work on "Statistics: Solial, Political and Medicine," and he seems to have clothed what is generally considered the driest of themes with a garment of light; for one discriminating writer says: "It should have been named "Statistics made in-

Some have thought that shallow wells and springs, that have contracted infection from uncleanly soil, may be to blame; but

It seems that there are a number of diseases of the throat, and irritations of the mucous nembrane, that afflict animals, especially cows, sheep, pigs and poultry; and among these last, notably, pigeons. A disease that may not be diphtheria itself may easily pave lodgment in a throat that has the slightest advocated that there is too much exposure One very thorough American pathologist says that wherever there is inbacteria capable of setting up an inflammation on any other mucous membrane to when "resting" the land a year or two, by may be a condition of the system in the second instance that will bring forth a far severer case than in the first. The foreign peasantry live on very intimate terms with their animals, and there are clearly authenticated cases where an epidemic among the latter has been followed by cases of fatal throat diseases among the former. As is well known, the parasite of diptheria multiplies with an unequalled system once it has entered through some farmer patients to avoid too great familiarity with those animals liable to it. A slightly sore throat should never be neglected, and people cannot be too careful to avoid this formidable malady, so often fatal, but which often leaves the system so weakened that the sequels are almost worse than the disease. ### Agricultural.

The management of the soil is at the present day a subject of importance to the man agement of stock, and as the soil can gain or lose in fertility according to its tre the value of a farm depends upon the man-ner in which the soil has been cultivated. And not only does cultivation affect the soil, but the kind of crop grown influences it also, and changes its equality and texture to a brought to a high degree of fertility with the aid of but a limited amount of manure, by growing certain crops, which not only cover the soil and protect it, but which also derive nitrogen from the air and add it to the plant food already existing in the soil. It is not only in the gain of fertility that the farm is the showing of Dr. Longstaff's figures does not support that theory, and he catches a glimpse of a new and unsuspected source.

It seems that there are a number of diseases of the throat, and irritations of the mucous enriched, but also in the prevention of loss certain conditions against losing that which was gained earlier in the season of growth.

It is an advantage to plow some soils late in the fall, but scientists are not unanimou for, as all pathologists known, it will find in their opinions regarding this subject. It of the soil, by which large portions of soluble matter are lost. Nature covers the soil almation of a mucous membrane there are | ways and never leaves it exposed. Under the fallow system, practiced in former years, omitting crops, the soil gained in fertility, report of the Maine Street Board the following case in point is given:

A young lady came home sick with diphtheria in a mild form. Her brothers and to protect it against loss as well as to add to

WEEDS MAY BE BENEFICAL Weeds are claimed to be Nature's recuperative crops, which repair the losses made by man. Weeds compel the indolent farmer to cultivate to soil with heavy growth as soon as the farmer ceases to have crop on land. If the crop of the farmer does not cover the soil so as to afford complete protection, the weeds European physicians are warning their when the crop is neavy and dense the weeds are kept down. Different soils may be covered by different weeds, even the poorest soils having weeds that will thrive on them, are allowed to produce seed they become crop, but if plowed under they add to the soil. The question then arises as to cover
