

WEEKLY MONITOR

The Weekly Monitor,
ISSUED ON WEDNESDAY,
At Bridgetown, Annapolis Co., N. S.
M. K. PIPER, Proprietor and Publisher Terms: $1.20 per year allowed at $1.00 if paid strictly in advance.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1903.
The Monitor will add to its staff, before its next issue, Mr. J. L. De-Vaney, who has become well and favorably known in provincial journalism through the Bear River Telephone, a modest, but well conducted sheet, which has been editor and proprietor for the past six years. The proprietary rights of the Telephone pass into the hands of the proprietor of the Monitor, and both papers will be published from the Monitor office under the management of Mr. DeVaney.

There will be no change in the policy and general conduct of the Monitor, its aim continuing to be the dissemination of such principles and tenets as will conduce to the welfare of the community, and the broadest and most independent presentation of such subjects as are of general and political interest, while not neglecting the chief mission of the country newspaper, the publication of all the local news of town and county.

As a criterion of what may be expected from the new management, by the patrons of the Monitor, we cannot do better than quote the opinion of the Halifax Chronicle, which says:—
"The Telephone," of Bear River, has been an important business investment, and one that will be made exceptionally well-written, thoughtful, honorable, public-spirited. It is a credit to Bear River, and richly deserves the practical support of its people."

The forest fires of the present season have instigated the "uses of advan-tices" in that they have been the means of calling the public attention in the most insistent and emphatic manner possible to the pressing problem of the care and preservation of our forests.

The present agitation demands not only a patrol system of protection from the ravages by fire, but means guards, called "forest rangers," also the replanting of lost wastes. It has taken years to convince people of the necessity of such measures for the preservation of this one of the most valuable of the country's assets, but they are now fully awakened to the disastrous consequences of continued neglect.

The Scientific American says: "The Bureau of Forestry has this year endertaken a thorough study of the forest fire problem in several different regions. It has selected two in forest districts to study fires while in the process of burning. Instead of waiting until the fire is over and relying for information on local reports, it has now being observed by the Bureau's agents and full data will be obtained as to how they were caused, how they burn, what conditions favor or hinder them, and just what damage they do to the trees and to tree growth. Each agent of the Bureau has been assigned to a district and is investigating all fires that occur within his territory. For example, one man studies a lumber tract, another a farming district, a third a turpentine orchard, etc.

In connection with this detailed study, the agents will observe the methods of fire protection practised by landed. The fire warden system of the States which have forest fire laws, and the patrol system in use on the various forest reserves will also be observed closely.

By such methods, the Bureau of Forestry hopes to replace with carefully gathered facts the vague general notions that now exist about forest fires. When the problem is solved for any particular region, the Bureau will have ready to recommend methods of fire prevention and control for the private land-owners, and suggest the legislation for the various States.

The investigation is now in progress in northern Florida and southern Alabama and Georgia under the direction of Ernest A. Sterling. H. J.
Tompkins, with a small corps of assistants, has begun the work in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Later in the season a study of forest fires will be made on the Pacific coast."
