IRISH PICNIC SMASHED ALL RECORDS;
GIANT CROWD AT THE PORT YESTERDAYFine Weather, Great Sports Programme, Plenty of Music and Dancing Made It a Grand Success.Attendance Estimated at Between 8,000 and 12,000—'Twas the Event of the Season.

Yesterday belonged to the Irish, and when the weather man handed it over to them, he left the making of a splendid picnic in the hands of the Irish Benevolent Society. When he did that he gave President John Garvey and his merry crew the opportunity they have been waiting for some time, and as a result the Irish picnic was the greatest ever held by that society, and beyond a doubt the most splendid picnic ever held at London's lakeside home.

Thousands of people were there, guesses running from 8,000 to 12,000. Somewhere between the two extremes is the exact truth. Most people thought there was a bigger crowd at the Port yesterday than there was in 1905, when the Old Boys were home. There must have been many over 8,000, for Superintendent Gillula stated that the Pere Marquette carried between 6,000 and 7,000 from London and St. Thomas.

Everybody There.

And the farmers! They always have a good time at the Irish picnic. They came in droves. There seemed to be a mile of rigs, of all makes and descriptions, behind the Fraser Heights. The hotel stables were crowded full of horses, and all the fences in the village seemed to be a complete line of horses and rigs. Room was at a discount.

The beach presented a splendid sight. The hill, like a Grecian theater, was crowded with jovial Irishmen. Every cove of vantage was taken. The top of the hill was a part-colored line of humanity, stretching as far west as it was possible to see anything at all of the programme. The steps on the hill became two constant streams of humanity, going up and down. Down on the beach, when the races were being run off, the large crowd of judges and their assistants could not keep the crowd from encroaching on the track. It was an inspiring sight, and the Irishmen were pleased beyond measure. In addition to those on the hill, the lake itself had its devotees, and the boatmen and the bathing-houses did a great business.

Barrels of Fun.

And the fun they had. It is said that an Irishman invented fun. Be that as it may, it is beyond dispute that the Irish race has improved fun-making, until it is now a perfect art, its most perfect exponent being the Irish themselves. There was fun everywhere. "Is everybody happy?" could be heard on all sides, and the answer gave no contrary information. The people just simply went there for a good time, and everything possible was done to minister to that.

The programme was scintillating. New and laughable features were introduced every minute of the way, in the shape of boxing, boxing gloves, and the answer gave no contrary information. The people just simply went there for a good time, and everything possible was done to minister to that.

Chairman Harry Buttrey had splendid sports, and they were admirably handled. Perhaps the most interesting and laughable feature was the novelty boxing-bouts, for both boys and men. The boxers were placed in barrels and equipped with heavy boxing gloves. The contestant who failed to keep his barrel standing lost the bout. The crowd simply went wild over the affair.

Chairman Wm. Brophy had a splendid dancing programme, and the quality of dancing and the number of contestants and the number of other years, was admirably carried out.

The Baby Show.

And the baby show. There never was such a fine array of fine kiddies since picnics were invented. Seventeen Continued on Page Six.

VICE-PRES. M'GUIGAN
TO QUIT JIM HILL

St. Paul, Aug. 9.—E. H. McGuigan, first vice-president of the Great Northern Railroad, has resigned, the resignation to take effect on Sept. 1.

FOUND THE BODIES

Remains of Shirley Davidson and Miss Hingston at Last Located.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 9.—The bodies of Shirley Davidson and Miss Ellen Hingston, the victims of last Sunday's boating accident, near Varennes, a short distance from the summer residence of Lady Hingston, were found by the searchers today. Davidson's body was four miles down the river from the scene of the accident, and that of Miss Hingston eleven miles down. A large number of relatives and friends of the two bereaved families, as well as a good-sized party of rivermen, had been engaged in the search since Monday morning. The remains will be brought to Montreal for interment.

CANADIAN NURSE STRANDED.

London, Aug. 9.—Miss Jane Lawley, trained nurse from British Columbia, was found dead on the beach at Blackburn, apparently strangled while walking by a residence patient. Miss Lawley was formerly of the staff of the Blackburn Infirmary.

Secretary of the Irish Benevolent Society.

A Scarcity of Red Brick in London

There is a decided shortage of red pressed brick in this city, and several local jobs have been held up for a month or more awaiting the arrival of more brick.

It appears that the demand for the red product is so great the yards find it impossible to keep up, and local architects and builders are very much annoyed.

A new yard has been begun at Hamilton, and London men are living in hopes that many such places will spring up in the red clay belt.

There seems to be a scarcity of white bricks for building purposes in the city.

A Warm Load.

The bottom of a wagon loaded with bricks for a house on Ridout street was found burning when the contents were removed, as the brick had been taken directly from the kiln while still very hot.

This scarcity is said to be due to the great amount of building which went on last year. Very few bricks were left over with which to start this season.

The rainy and backward weather also prevented the bricks from being produced in as large numbers as usual.

According to reports from contractors, there is not quite as much building this year as last, but still all the bricklayers are fairly busy.

Prices remain the same as usual, however—$10 per 1,000 for select and $8 per 1,000 for the run of the kiln.

More Normal Assistants Are in Sight

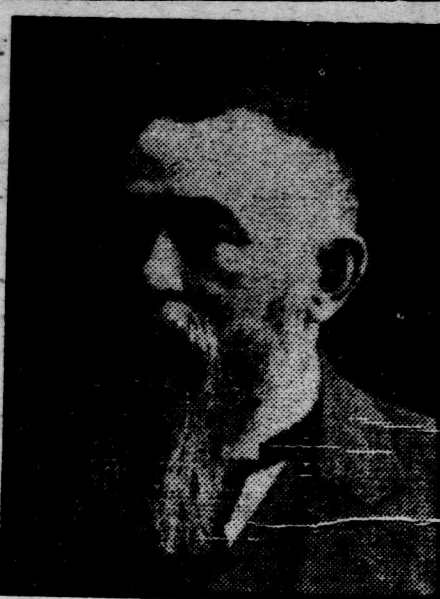

It has been definitely decided, it is understood, that Mr. J. F. Power, formerly Separate School Inspector for the western district of Ontario, who has been appointed to a vice-principalship in an Ontario Normal School, will go to Ottawa, where he will remain a year in the Normal School there, and will then, it is said, be appointed to the principalship of one of the new schools to be built by the Government.

It was stated by a local educationist that the Government, in another batch of principal appointments, will all be placed on the new schools.

It is understood to be the intention of the Government to have men appointed who are specialists in certain lines, and to use them to teach the students in what is considered a more thorough manner than the present small staffs of the different Normal Schools are able to do.

It is said to be as good as settled that Mr. S. J. Radcliffe, formerly principal of the local Collegiate Institute, will be appointed to the principalship of the new Normal School to be built at Stratford.

As already stated in The Advertiser, it is altogether likely that Mr. Jones, a well-known teacher of Matilda, will be appointed Separate School Inspector in place of Mr. J. W. Young.

MR. JOHN GARVEY,
President of the Irish Benevolent Society.

The Western Union Operators
Are on Strike at Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Since midnight when 200 operators struck rather than work with strikebreakers at Los Angeles, there has been little doing in the Chicago office of the Western Union Telegraph Company at Jackson Boulevard and Clark street, and in the branch offices scattered throughout the city.

Only six wire chiefs and four veteran telegraph operators were left in the main Chicago office when the union men, in answer to a whistle, rushed from the keys on the ninth and tenth floors and congregated in front of the building. The strike order, issued by the executive board of the Chicago local union to the night operators, applies also to day operators, thus affecting some 700 men employed in the main Chicago office during day hours.

New York, Aug. 9.—Col. Clowry, president and general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, today gave out this statement in relation to the strike at Los Angeles and Chicago: "On July 23 an operator at Los Angeles was charged with maliciously delaying traffic. As a careful investigation, which occupied several days, showed conclusively that he was guilty of deliberately obstructing traffic on important circuits he was discharged. A petition signed by other employees of the office, requesting his reinstatement, was thereupon presented to the local superintendent, and when the signers were advised that the company would not tolerate the malicious delaying of traffic, they immediately went on strike."

Helena, Montana, Aug. 9.—All the Western Union operators here are on strike.

THOMAS GUTHRIE
DIDN'T STEAL IT

Charge That He Took a Valise
From Louis Viscoe Fell Through.

A Hamilton paper contains the following in reference to the arrest of Mr. Thomas Guthrie, in this city, and his subsequent trial in Hamilton:

"Thomas Guthrie, London, was acquitted this morning without testifying on the charge of stealing a valise from Louis Viscoe."

"When Guthrie was asked to plead he said that he was technically guilty of stealing the valise, but that after he had used the valise to move some of his belongings, he put it back where he got it from, and left a note in it explaining why he had used it. It was here discovered that the complainant was not present, and Detective Miller said he could not find him."

"F. R. Martin, acting crown attorney, asked for a remand, but the magistrate demurred, and said, 'Suppose that the prisoner's story is right. It is, said Detective Miller, quietly, and he produced the valise to show the letter which was left in it. It was all done for spite, because I left him, interjected the prisoner. I guess it was; it certainly looks like it,' said his worship, as he honorably acquitted him."

GALA DAY AT CANTON

General Rejoicing Follows Closing of the Opium Dens.

Canton, China, Aug. 9.—In accordance with the imperial decree, recently issued, all the opium dens in Canton were closed today. The new departure caused general rejoicing throughout the city. The streets were decorated, and a number of processions, headed by bands of music, playing lively airs, marched through the main thoroughfares.

Aged Wm. Hyslop Struck by a Hamilton Road Trolley Yesterday

Was Knocked Unconscious and His Wagon Was Smashed to Flinders.

William Hyslop, an old man, 84 years of age, living in the country, about two miles from the city on the Hamilton road, was the victim of a serious accident yesterday afternoon. He was driving into the city on the Hamilton road, and when between Rectory street and Marmora streets, a Hamilton road car came along. He attempted to get across out of the way, but the rails were a considerable distance from the roadbed, and he had difficulty in getting over them. The car did not stop, although bystanders allege that the motorman had plenty of time to do so, and it crashed into the old gentleman's rig.

Mr. Hyslop was thrown out on the road on his head and shoulders, and his wagon was smashed into kindling-wood. He was knocked unconscious, and he was carried to a near-by house, and when he recovered consciousness he was taken to his home.

His shoulder was badly strained, and there was a bad contusion on the back of his head, but it is not thought that his skull is fractured. The horse escaped injury.

Veteran of 1837.

Mr. Hyslop is a remarkable old man. Although quite a bit over four score years old, he is as active as many a young man, and can do a good day's work yet. He came to Canada from Scotland many years ago, and can talk Gaelic. He is also a veteran of the rebellion of 1837. He is well known, and his friends are many. His wife is still living, although but two years younger than he.

Battery for Petawawa;
Local Gunners All Ready

Leave on Saturday Morning in Full Strength for Big Camp.

All is practically in readiness at the armories for the departure of the Sixth Field Battery to Petawawa tomorrow.

The battery has secured its full quota of men and now numbers 106 strong. All arrangements have been made for the services of 66 horses, and practically nothing remains to be done but the loading up of stores and guns. This will be done tomorrow morning.

All of the men and officers, who have been approached on the subject, express themselves as being delighted with the new arrangement, and predict a most successful encampment.

Entire Battery Going.

For two years the battery has sent to Petawawa a squad of sixteen men for target practice and examination, but this will be the first time that the entire battery has had an opportunity of visiting the great military camp north of Ottawa.

"The facilities for target practice at the Heights, where we have in former years held our encampment," said an officer this morning, "are nil. At the new camp we will have the advantage of actual service, and the four-mile ranges there will give our boys an opportunity of showing what they are made of. When we went to the Heights we were obliged to make our way to the Mills farm in order to get any practice worth of the name, and the facilities all around were very poor. At Petawawa the grounds are all piped with water and acetylene gas is used for lighting purposes."

Fourteen Days' Camp.

Tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock the battery will turn out for parade at the armories, after which the work of loading stores will begin immediately. The march to the C. P. R. depot will begin about 2 o'clock and at 3 the batteries will be on its way. It will remain in camp about fourteen days actual time.

The officers of the battery are: Maj. C. E. Mills; Capt. A. K. Cameron, Capt. A. V. Becher, Lieut. C. R. Hunt, Lieut. E. W. Leonard, and Capt. Wilson, V. O.

The complete enlistment roll is as follows:

H. Tatt, W. Scott, H. Percival, J. Bibbings, Ellwood Piewes, Wm. Henry A. Brammer, A. Jones, J. Jones, L. Orr, G. Dowdell, W. Charlton, G. Keland, J. Bear, H. Tozer, W. H. Yeal.

Irish Benevolent Society Holds
Brilliant Banquet at Tecumseh

Pithy Speeches Delivered by Members and Their Friends —Couple of Presentations.

After the completion of the programme of sports at the I. B. S. picnic yesterday, Superintendent Gillula and Passenger Agent Kearns of the Pere Marquette had a special car waiting for the members of the society and their guests, and the party returned to the city at 8:30 o'clock, and at 9:30 the party pulled into London.

They were met at the station by the Seventh Regiment Band, under the leadership of Bandmaster Slatter, and escorted to the Tecumseh House, where a splendid banquet was prepared by Miss Host O'Neil. About 100 Irishmen sat down, and they made merry until a late hour. Speeches and songs were given by the members and their guests, and a pleasant time was spent. The band played Irish airs during the dinner, and were heartily applauded for their fine music.

The King's Message.

President John Garvey was toastmaster. Secretary Fulton read telegrams from the following, who regretted their inability to be present: Rev. Canon Dunn, city; John W. Poole, Toronto; Hon. W. J. Hanna, Toronto; Hon. George P. Graham, Brockville; Mr. R. L. Borden, Ottawa; Rev. George Gilmore, Blenheim; Harry P. Sharpe, Toronto; E. T. Essery, of St. George's Society, and A. J. Nixon, superintendent of the Grand Trunk.

During the King's visit to Ireland President John Garvey, on behalf of the Irish Benevolent Society had sent a cablegram to the King and Queen congratulating them on their visit and thanking them for their interest in the Irish people. The King's private secretary cabled a reply, in which the King and Queen expressed their gratitude for the kindness of the Irish Benevolent Society and wished it prosper.

DEATH OF A WELL-KNOWN CIGAR MAN

Mr. Eli Presnall Died Last Night
Very Suddenly—Was Foreman of Tuckett's.

Mr. Eli Presnall, of 14 Stanley street, died at 8:15 o'clock last evening from heart failure. He had been troubled for some time with insomnia, and at noon yesterday took a small quantity of morphine to induce sleep.

His son Fred, a medical student of Queen's University, noticed that his father seemed unwell, and on examination found his pulse very irregular, and at once summoned Dr. Hogg, who had him conveyed to Victoria Hospital.

There Dr. McGillivuddy and others of the hospital staff joined with the son in using all means to resuscitate the unfortunate man, but without success.

Mr. Presnall never regained consciousness, being in a comatose state from the time he was discovered ill the end came.

The doctors attribute his death to congestion of the brain, caused by bad circulation, with which Mr. Presnall had been troubled for years.

Coroner MacLaren made a thorough investigation, but does not think an inquest necessary, as death was in no way due to the morphine taken, the amount being insufficient to cause death in an ordinary person.

Mr. Presnall was 52 years of age, and had lived in London ever since the Tuckett Company first established a branch here, having acted as foreman of that branch. He came from Hamilton, was a good businessman, and was well liked by all.

Besides the widow, a family of three children survive, to whom the sympathy of all will go out in their sad bereavement.

The children are: Fred, medical student of Queen's University, Kingston; Roy and Vera, at home. William Presnall, of Hamilton, and Richard Presnall, of Montreal, are brothers of the deceased.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning from the family residence to St. Mary's Church, where high mass will be celebrated. Interment will take place at Hamilton.

Lord's Day Alliance After Railways

Rev. D. S. Hamilton, pastor of the First Congregational Church, city, who is prominently identified with the Lord's Day Alliance, stated to The Advertiser today that the action of the Toronto and Grand Trunk Railway, for operating a train on the Sabbath, in contravention of the Lord's Day act, will have its effect in this city.

Mr. Hamilton informed the reporter that complaints have been made to the alliance that the railway companies are shunting in London fully as much on the Sabbath now as they did before the new act went into force, and that the matter will be taken up with the provincial organization at once.

It is said that employees of the different companies who object to working on Sundays have complained to the Lord's Day Alliance, but there is no confirmation of this assertion.

Bigger Engine for Ontario Limited

It was stated today that the Grand Trunk Railway Company will shortly place one of its large-size locomotives, known as the "1,000" class, on the Ontario Limited, running between London and Toronto.

This train has proven very popular, and has worked up such a tremendous business that it is understood to be practically impossible to keep the heavy train on its schedule with one of the smaller types of locomotives.

The management of the Grand Trunk Railway is credited with a desire to have the Ontario Limited hold a position at the very top of the Canadian express trains, and as speedily as possible the new locomotive will be placed on the run.

Such locomotives are now in use on the Flyer and the International Limited.

NOTORIOUS ROBBER, BILL MINER, ESCAPES FROM B. C. PENITENTIARY

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Vancouver, Aug. 9.—Bill Miner has escaped from Westminster penitentiary. He is the most notorious outlaw and train robber in America, and the only man who ever successfully held up a train in Canada. He is heading for the international boundary on the fastest horse he could steal. His pals Shorty Dunn, who is serving a life term, and Colquhoun, his Ontario confederate in the Kamloops train robbery last year, are still in custody but the guards with negligence.

SCENES OF HORROR
AT CASABLANCA

Troops and Natives Unite to Massacre Jews.

IN REVENGE FOR BOMBARDMENT

West Coast Tribesmen Attack Cape
Juby—MacLean No Longer
With Raisuli.

Paris, Aug. 9.—A message received here from Admiral Philibert off Casablanca Morocco, probably forwarded from his flagship by wireless telegraphy and stated at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, says: "Gen. Drued's camp outside Casablanca was attacked today by 5,000 to 6,000 horsemen, who were vigorously beaten off."

Tangier, Aug. 9.—Horrible details of the slaughter of Jews, the maltreatment of women, and the pillage and burning of shops at Casablanca are told by passengers who arrived here last night by steamer from that port. They say that after the bombardment at the place began, both the Moorish soldiers and the Arabs revenged themselves on the inhabitants, plundering, killing and burning on all sides. They sacked the custom house and burned a large part of the city, whose streets are so filled with decomposing bodies that an epidemic is threatened. Among the Jews killed was a man under the protection of the British consulate. His sister was assaulted and carried off by Moors. Many feats of heroism, both by French and Spanish sailors, are recounted.

Cape Juby Looted.

Tangier, Aug. 9.—The town of Cape Juby, on the west coast of Africa, has been attacked and raided by the Ait-Yussa and Ait-Jemal tribes. A number of the garrison were killed and the remainder were made prisoners. The governor escaped in a boat to the fort on Fuerteventura Island, opposite Cape Juby. The rebel tribesmen completely looted Cape Juby.

MacLean Free.

Tangier, Aug. 9.—The latest news from Rabata confirms previous reports and is most disquieting. The tribesmen, threatening to attack Rabata unless the French control of the customs is abolished, and all foreigners there are keeping strictly within their own quarters. No details of the bombardment of Mazagan have been received, but a steamer just in from there reports that the cruiser Duchayla's bombardment put an end to the massacre of Jews.

A Moorish official here has just received a letter from the governor of Tetuan, stating that Sir Harry MacLean is no longer in the custody of Raisuli, the chief of the Kmass tribe, having demanded and obtained permission that he be turned over to their custody.

If this be true there is little doubt Continued on Page Eight.

20,000 WORKERS NEEDED BY WEST

Saskatchewan and Northern Alberta Will Have a Great Harvest.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 8.—The crop reports throughout the West are much more encouraging than had been possible for the past few weeks, owing to the heavy fall of rain all over the country. Hail has been the chief factor with which farmers have had to deal recently. At Gainsboro, Southern Manitoba, a considerable distance north and south of the C.
P. R. track, was devastated by hail, which will result in the loss of forty per cent of the wheat crop, but the yield would have been light. At Carleplace also grain was completely destroyed by hail, and as a result, crops will only be about two-thirds as great as last year.

There has been more moisture in the north this season, according to current reports, than in Southern Manitoba and the Northern States across the line.

Crops in Good Shape.

All through the Saskatchewan Valley, in Edmonton district, and throughout Northern Alberta, crops are in good shape, and there will be a great harvest up there this year.
There are no indications of poor crops east of Calgary, and, if wheat is a little late this year, the present plentiful rains have more than made up for any drawback on that account.

Help Needed This Year.

Up to the present year farmers in Prince Albert district of Northern Saskatchewan have been able to harvest their crops alone or with the help of neighbors, but this year outside help will be required, which fact speaks for the increase of acreage.
Where farmers have not planted so extensively as in other years, virgin soil broken for the first time will make up the decrease.

Harvesting August 25th.

The warm, showery weather
throughout Southern Saskatchewan has very much improved matters along the Canadian Pacific main line through that Province. Some points in Western and Southern Manitoba expect harvest to begin about August 25, and place the average per acre for grain at fifteen bushels, against twenty last year. Oats and barley will be very light in many parts.

Rains Have Helped.

Around Winnipeg heavy rains have helped much to improve conditions, and despondent reports of a fortnight ago are giving way to much more hopeful prospects, consequently grain is picking up fast, and wheat will be a fair crop; coarse grains are not so good. The yield is not expected in the immediate vicinity of the city to run more than ten bushels to the acre.
Cutting will begin in a fortnight.

Implement Trade Dull.

The late harvest has made a great difference to the trade in agricultural implements, which are not selling briskly as is usually the case before harvest, but manufacturers look for a revival in trade as soon as crop prospects improve, and definite improvement is known about the yield of grain.
Arrangements are being made for a big supply of harvesters from Ontario and eastern points, and harvesting excursions begin in a few days. Quite twenty thousand men will be required to harvest the western crop this year.

BARNEY'S SKELETON FOUND

Steve Adams Is Said to Have Pointed Out His Grave.

Telluride, Col., Aug. 8.—What is said to be the skeleton of W. J. Barney, the timber man employed on the Smuggler Union Mine, who mysteriously disappeared in June, 1901, was exhumed yesterday, near the Alta mill, by General Bulkley Wells, manager of the Smuggler Union Mining Company, and others. The body was found in an improvised grave, and its location, it is said, was pointed out by Steve Adams, now in jail in Idaho, awaiting a second trial on the charge of murder, when he was here in June, 1906, in the custody of Wells.

After Adams made the alleged confession, which he afterward repudiated, and in which he is supposed to have acknowledged being the assassin of Arthur Collins, formerly general manager of the Smuggler Union Mine, and to be familiar with the places where the bodies of W. J. Barney and Wesley Smith, a shift boss of the Liberty Bell Mine, were buried, he was brought here by General Wells to point out the graves of the missing men.

SECRETARY TAFT AS A RE- PORTER.

Like Chief Justice Fuller, Secretary Wilson and other men high in the public service and confidence, Secretary Taft began his career as a newspaper man. The first money earned by him after being graduated from Yale was as court reporter on a Cincinnati paper, the old Commercial Gazette, then edited by Mural Halstead.
Mr. Taft started at $5 a week, and when he quit had worked up to "twenty per." All the time he was, thus engaged he was studying law at night under his father's direction. Necessity did not drive him to the work, as his father was a man of ample fortune, but the secretary chose it because it was the readiest entrance to active employment that brought him daily in contact with lawyers and court proceedings.

The secretary likes to discuss newspaper work with reporters. He uses the shop familiarly with a familiarity denoting his former experience in the business, and understands how to outline a "story" for the "boys" better than any member of the administration, barring only the man in the White House.—Washington Herald.

Experience teaches us how to make other kinds of mistakes.

LIGHTNING KILLS 800 PER YEAR

But it's 99,000 to One That You Won't Die in This Hasty Fashion.

Washington, August 8.—An average of 800 people are killed in the United States each year by lightning, according to data collected by the weather bureau. This means that about one in each 100,000 of population is killed in that manner.

The belt of most numerous visitations includes all of Florida except the southernmost tip, the lower edge of Georgia and the southwestern corner of Alabama. In that belt an average of forty-five thunderstorms a year is experienced.

The zone of next greatest frequency includes the more northern parts of Georgia and Alabama, and its annual average is forty storms.

Where Deaths Are Fewer.

Thirty-five a year are experienced in a somewhat irregular belt north of this, and including still more northern parts of the States last named, as well as the whole of Mississippi and Louisiana, nearly all of Tennessee, the adjacent corners of Illinois and Kentucky, the southeastern part of Arkansas, and the eastern central part of Texas.

Another belt of equal intensity extends throughout Central Illinois and adjacent sections of Indiana, Iowa, and Missouri.

The region from the Virginia Capes to Connecticut escapes with an average of twenty-five annual storms, while Boston is visited by only twenty. The frequency diminishes until the Rockies are reached, and on the Pacific slope there are practically no such storms.

Region of Greatest Danger.

The region of greatest danger from lightning stroke does not coincide with the zone of greatest thunderstorm frequency, but includes Southern Vermont, the whole of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut,
New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania,
Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Eastern Illinois, Virginia, and the greater part of Maryland. In this zone more than five deaths to each 10,000 square miles a year are caused by lightning. Three to five deaths in 10,000 is the rule in a region including Chicago, St. Paul, Des Moines, St. Louis, Memphis, Atlanta and Norfolk.

Between one and three fatalities per 10,000 is the rule in a third zone, including Eastport, Montreal, Duluth, Bismarck, Huron, North Platte, Galveston, New Orleans, and Jacksonville. In the country westward less than one death to 10,000 occurs.

Four times more persons of outdoor pursuits than of indoor occupations are struck. Men, like animals, are more apt to be struck when collected in groups than when alone.
Out of every three persons struck, one survives, and probably more than half would recover if means were employed to induce artificial respiration, as in cases of drowning. More than half the persons killed by lightning are struck while standing under trees.

DEER IN A CHINA SHOP

Woodland Visitor Creates Great Excitement in Moncton.

Moncton, N. B., Aug. 7.—A large deer, with a good spread of horns, dashed through Moncton streets this morning, making a startling appearance and a dramatic picture on Main street. Three men were standing on Main street curb when the deer dashed through the former city square, and, falling on the wet pavement, was thrown between the wheels, abruptly terminating the conversation.
Quickly arising, the animal dashed into the East India Store, which was heavily stocked with china, glass and crockery-ware, and running the length of the store, leaped over the high desk and dashed through a window at the rear. The proprietor, who had been standing outside, rushed in, expecting to find that the deer had created havoc among the glassware, but discovered that the animal had broken only one cuspidor in its hasty journey through the premises. The deer was slightly cut by the window glass, but ran through backyards, over high fences and down to the wharf, disappearing in the direction of Albert County. A good deal of excitement was caused by the incident.
Game has been very plentiful in this section, and the sight of moose and deer within the city limits is not infrequent.
A moose running through the I. C. R. yards early Sunday morning was slightly hurt by being struck by a train. It lay on the marsh on Sunday morning, and attracted large crowds of people.

ONE SHIP, ONE NAME

Use of Same Name by Many Craft Is Barred.

New York, Aug. 8.—An edict just issued by the English Board of Trade bids fair to cause confusion temporarily among British shipping. The board, which speaks with authority on the subject, has decreed that hereafter no two British vessels shall be registered under the same or similar names.

There are few ports in the world where the change will be more noticeable than in New York, where craft of British registry predominate, and "best guesses" as to the future name of two out of three Virginians, eleven Vestas, six Normans, four Oceanics, two Cedries, six Majesties, five Maltas, two Mallards, two Malagas, eleven Rescues, six Resolute, three St. Lawrence, two St. Olives, etc., are in order. As yet plans are not completely formulated, but vessels of the heaviest tonnage will be permitted to retain their present designation.

In London's new criminal court, on the Old Bailey site, prisoners will climb up white marble stairs to reach the dock.

HUNTING FOR MORE EVIDENCE

Prosecutors of Standard Oil
Make Mysterious Trip to St. Louis.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Reports today that District Attorney Sims and his special assistant, James H. Wilkerson, had gone to Indianapolis, added mystery to the unexplained mission on which the district attorney left Chicago Monday evening.

Judge Landis is in Indianapolis, having gone there to hold court in the absence of United States District Judge A. B. Anderson. Acting United States Attorney Robert W. Childs refused to disclose the whereabouts of Mr. Sims, but did not deny that he was in the Indiana capital.
That Mr. Sims and Mr. Wilkerson have gone to Indiana to search personally for evidence to be used in the further prosecutions of the Standard Oil Company and the railroads that are declared to have been granting the company illegal concessions is believed to be probable.

May Cause an Inquiry.

One of the indictments against the Standard Oil Company that is still pending relates to shipments of oil
over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad to Evansville, Ind., by way of Dillon Junction, Ill. That transactions between the oil company and the Chicago and Illinois road may be the subject of inquiry by the Government lawyers in Indiana is considered possible. When Mr. Wilkerson and Mr. Sims left their offices together Monday evening, and a friend asked them where they were going,
Mr. Wilkerson is said to have replied:
"We are bound for Indianapolis."

Special Assistant Attorney-General
O. E. Pugin and Attorney Childs held another conference today. It was said that Mr. Pugin would leave for Washington tomorrow. He would not discuss his mission in Chicago.

Moritz Rosenthal, associate counsel for the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana, in the cases that resulted in Judge Landis' record-breaking fine, returned last evening from New York,
and, when questioned today concerning the plans of the defense, said that he did not know, as he had not consulted with his associates.

SCHOOL CHILDREN DRIVEN TOO HARD

Nation That Does This Is a Nation Full of Cruelty, Say Experts.

London, Aug. 8.—An international congress of high importance has opened here. One dealing with matters of the broadest social moment—that concerning school hygiene—it was attended by between 2,000 and 3,000 delegates, representing the entire world. Overstudy will be the main topic of this congress. The most prominent delegate is Professor Griesbach, originator of the first congress on school hygiene, held in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1904. Closely associated with him in his war on overstudy are Sir Lauder Brunton, of England, Dr.
Mathieu, of France, Professor Burger-stein, of Austria, and Professor Johannesen, of Norway.

These experts declare that the school children of the world are driven too hard, with the result that the human race is breaking down physically, mentally and morally. Professor Griesbach says:

"Fine school buildings, beautifully lit and ventilated, and with every known sanitary facility, are not enough. These things are unquestion-ably good, but their value is brought to naught if we overwhelm boys and girls under 14 with excessive intellectual anxiety and strain. Any nation that makes its children labor nine hours a day with the brain is a nation full of cruelty."

In Germany and France, for example, the little ones are harder driven than the adults. They are expected to do more work with their brains

WAS "LADY GOULD" King of Siam Spends $3,000,000 in Berlin

FROM MONTREAL

Monte Carlo Trunk Mystery May Implicate a Former Canadian.

Monte Carlo Aug. 8.—The finding of the dismembered body of a woman at Marseilles Aug. 6 in the baggage of two travelers; who were first referred to as Mr. and Mrs. Gold, but who have been identified as persons who were known here as "Sir Vere and Lady Gould," has created a sensation here, where the parties were regarded as persons of leisure and respectability. The police say the investigation indicates that the woman, whose name has now been definitely established as Emma Levin, was murdered by the Goulds. Jewels believed to have belonged to the victim were found in the female prisoner's hand satchel. A commission has been dispatched to England to investigate the antecedents of the Goulds. The male prisoner named an Irish baronet of Montreal, where his wife, who was a Miss Grodin, earned her living as a dressmaker, some twenty-five years ago.

London, Aug. 8.—Vere and Violet Gould are the names given according to the dispatches received in London by the couple arrested at Marseilles in connection with the trunk murder. They were married at a Roman Catholic Church in London in 1901, and in the marriage certificate the groom's full name is given as "Vere St. Leger Gould, son of George Ignatius Gould," and the bride is described as "Violet Wilkinson, a widow, daughter of Hippolyte Grodin."

The couple seem to have assumed the title of Sir Vere and Lady Gould while living at Monte Carlo, but no Sir Vere Gould appears on the books of reference. There is an Irish baronet Sir James Stephen Gould, living in Australia, who has a brother, Vere Thomas St. Leger, who married Violet daughter of Hippolyte Grodin, of Chateau La Sone, department of Isere, France, and whose address is given in Debrett's peerage as 56 Drummond street, Montreal, Canada. Vere Thomas St. Leger Gould was formerly secretary to the municipal boundaries commission of Dublin.

As she walked along with Detective Ditch, who had her in charge, she kept her head bowed, and held a black parasol so that it shaded her face. She refused to talk to anybody, even the detective, except to ask him once as they neared headquarters what time it was.

She was the woman who was at one time known to some folks of social prestige here as Mrs. Eva Fox-Strangways, a member of the family of the Earl of Chester, and at another time to the police as Louise St. Clair.

Arraigned before Magistrate House, in the Jefferson Market police court, Miss Strangways was held in $1,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Which were brought here from Paris, London and elsewhere by dealers expecting to sell most of the wares and who were rewarded for their enterprise, as the king took about half of all that was offered to him.

The king has shown unusual interest in the dispatches in the newspapers referring to the delimitation of the frontier of Siam and Cambodia, and received with extreme consideration the newspaper representative who brought him intelligence on the subject and who arranged for a news service from the Siamese capital during the king's sojourn in Germany.

Passed a Bad Check.

Detective Ditch brought her from Toronto, Canada, last night, on the charge that under her "society" name she passed a bad check on Susan B. Clarke, a dressmaker, at 20 East Thirty-fourth street. The check was for $289, it is alleged, and in return she got several goods and $100 in change. That is the specific charge against her, but it is also said that several hotels in New York and Philadelphia remember her as a guest who was not a profitable one, and that several persons who thought that they were being nice to the member of a noble house found that they had been entertaining the daughter of a member of the English coastguards.

Will Fight the Charges.

The woman was taken from headquarters later to be arraigned in the Tombs court on the charges preferred by the dressmaker. She said, on the way from Toronto yesterday, that she would fight the charges against her, and prove that the title which she used was hers by right.

Held in $1,000 Bail.

Arraigned before Magistrate House, in the Jefferson Market police court, Miss Strangways was held in $1,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Business College staff, London, is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. D. M. Sutherland.

Miss Mae Cody is spending a couple of weeks with Elgin friends.

Rev. and Mrs. Langford are off for a two weeks' holiday with Birr and Union friends.

Miss Jennie Mathewson is visiting her sister, Mrs. Bellack, in London.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobbs and child, of Chicago, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Stewart.

Miss Mattie Ross, of Toronto, is visiting her mother and sisters here.

Miss Annie Rutherford, of London, is spending her holidays at her home here.

The Union picnic, of the Methodist and Congregational Sunday Schools, was held at Beachville Tuesday. The day was an ideal one, and a large crowd of children and grown-up people accepted the invitation to attend, and have a good time, which all say they had. Gaily-decorated conveyances were at the Congregational Church at 9 a.m., and proceeded to Beachville, and spent the day in all sorts of amusements. All returned home safe and in good time, well pleased with their day's outing.

SPARED THE BURGLARS

Fearing He Might Kill Them Grocer Russell Let 'Em Escape.

Detroit, Aug. 8.—Although burglars had emptied his cash registers twice in the last month, Frank H. Russell, grocer, at 282 Fifth street, did not shoot at a gang of thieves whom he caught trying to force an entrance through a rear window of his store late Monday night, for fear of killing some of them. He ordered them to stop, and fired one shot in the air. "I wished," he declared.

Burglars entered the residence of John A. Beall, 65 E. Erie street, getting $75 in cash and about $50 worth of jewelry, while the family was away.

Mrs. Stella Wisniewski's residence, 1380 Dubois street, was also burglarized, and $10 stolen from a trunk. Henry Czarnecki, a border, was arrested later by Detectives Repp and Redmond, on suspicion.

FRANCE'S GRAVE PROBLEM

Paris Press on the Serious Situation in Morocco.

Paris, Aug. 8.—The French newspapers are fully alive today to the heavy task that confronts France and Spain in Morocco, and all the possibilities of its becoming greater.

The Petit Republicain says: "The people of Europe face the dilemma of either quitting Morocco or making themselves respected by their methods. This is what France and Spain are doing in the name of the rest of Europe for it is inadmissible that Morocco should remain the only closed country in the world."

The Journal calls attention to the magnitude of the operations which may have to be undertaken. This is the fighting of all the big Moroccan tribes who long ago threw off the yoke of the Government and lapsed into barbarism.

Mr. Pichon, the foreign minister, has given up his vacation and will remain in the capital during the Moroccan crisis.

Mr. Hugh McDonald, of Toronto, is spending a few days with his mother Mrs. H. McDonald.

Mrs. Alexander and daughter, of Stratford, are the guests of Miss C. Murray.

Misses Lucy and Mattie Walsh are spending a couple of weeks with Mr. Bradford friends. Mr. Wallace Sutherland, of Toronto, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Sutherland.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis and children, of London, were over Sunday guests of Miss Kate Sutherland, John street.

Mr. Emerson Abernethy gave his choir of the Congregational Church and a few friends an enjoyable outing to Fairmount Park on Thursday last.

LONDON, FRIDAY, AUG. 3.

ANOTHER FLAG INCIDENT.

The American press has been hoaxed into a mild state of excitement by the story that Lieut. Young, of Fort William, Ont., hoisted the British flag over Isle Royale, Lake Superior, in token of British sovereignty. In imagination, some American patriots have seen a long, low, rakish craft stealing out of the Canadian harbor, and swooping down upon Uncle Sam's lonely and unprotected little island, with a crew of marauding redcoats, flaunting the blood-red banner of an ancient foe. There have been long and solemn newspaper articles to prove that Uncle Sam's title to Isle Royale is unassailable, despite its monarchical appellation. It lies in the northern portion of Lake Superior, opposite the point at which the boundary line separates Minnesota and Ontario. Says an American contemporary:

"It is politically comprised within the territory of the State of Michigan, being part of the county of Houghton. It has been so regarded by both the United States and England ever since the treaty of Ghent was signed in 1842. According to the accepted maps it lies wholly south of the 49th parallel, which forms the boundary from the Lake of the Woods, at the north-western corner of Minnesota, to the Strait of Georgia, opposite Vancouver Island.

"Isle Royale is not of any particular importance. It is somewhat richly mineralized, and mines have been operated there for a long time, but without much success. The population is sparse and the agricultural possibilities are not promising. The inclusion of this territory within the American jurisdiction followed the rule of international law that it is better to avoid the division of a small island between two countries, than to run an international line across it. It had to go to one or the other of the contestants then adjusting their differences, and it finally went to the United States."

The only basis of the story is that Lieut. Young and a party of pleasure-seekers put in at Isle Royale for a few hours, while on a yachting tour. Perhaps they carried their flag ashore; there is no definite information on that point. But even if they did hoist the Union Jack, why such a fuss? If any American is indignant at the notion, let him take a trip through Muskoka, the Georgian Bay, Lake Temagami, or any large summer resort in Ontario, and he will find the Stars and Stripes floating securely over not one but scores of islands. These islands are not near the boundary line, either, but hundreds of miles within Canadian borders. The average American who buys a Canadian island, or pitches a tent on one, runs his flag up as if he were in his own country. The fact that Canadians tolerate this state of affairs, while they would not be allowed a similar privilege across the border, should make our neighbors reflect.

BRITISH NAVAL PLANS.

Recent events furnish additional evidence that it is on her naval rather than her military power that Great Britain relies for the protection of her home interests; that she can for that purpose now draw more freely than ever on her fleet. Had she decided to organize a home guard strong enough in numbers and efficient enough in training to cope with the army of one of the great continental powers, Britain would have been forced to resort to conscription.

Concentration is the aim of the new British naval programme, by which the nation's sea power in the West Indies is reduced to three small cruisers and the China squadron is limited to four armored cruisers and two protected cruisers. The effect of this is to permit the assembling in home waters of a powerful fleet consisting of fourteen battleships, including the Dreadnought, twelve armored cruisers, thirteen protected cruisers, and a flotilla of upwards of a hundred torpedo-boat destroyers and submarines, which formed the "Walls of Steel" between which His Majesty passed on the occasion of the recent naval review. This demonstration was such as no other nation can make. There was not an old ship or an old gun in the fleet, which was manned by 35,000 splendidly-trained and thoroughly-disciplined men. Yet this is but the reserve of the British navy, the Channel, Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets remaining intact.

Discussing in the North American Review Britain's policy of naval concentration, Archibald S. Hurd contends that force of circumstances has compelled the British authorities to adapt that British naval power can no longer be world-wide, as in the days when Britain held absolute supremacy in commerce. "Competition in naval armaments in local waters," the writer says, "with the United States on the one hand, and with Japan on the other, was admitted to be not only hopeless, but unnecessary, and even dangerous to the mutual interests of these countries." Britain's compact with Japan has relieved a powerful British fleet from patrol duty in the China Sea, and it may be taken for granted that when the United States Atlantic battleship's fleet rounds the Horn presently on its voyage to the Pacific the journey will be undertaken on the strength of the Anglo-American understanding, unwritten though it is, but none the less binding.

The impression evidently prevails in Germany that this plan of concentration is directed against that country, and this seems to be the opinion of Mr. Hurd, who in the article already quoted says:

"In view of the entente cordiale with France, the burden of naval responsibility has shifted from the English Channel to the North Sea, and consequently the head and front of the Home fleet is stationed at the North. It consists of six battleships, including the Dreadnought, and six armored cruisers forming the Fifth Cruiser Squadron. It is intended that eventually this latter force shall consist of swift ships of the new battleship cruiser type, with an advantage of six knots in speed over the swiftest German battleship and a considerable superiority of gun fire at modern ranges."

A more rational view, however, and one which finds voice in so careful a student of current events as the New York Sun, is that Great Britain has availed herself of the alliance with Japan and the understanding with the United States to make herself impregnable against attack at home by raising her bulwark of sea power to its maximum strength. In this plan alarmists who have contended that England is to be safe against invasion by continental armies the country must be turned into a great drill camp, and their answer.

STAMPING OUT ADULTERATION.

As mentioned some time ago, the Western Dairymen's Association, in order to take some means of stamping out the growing tendency to skim or water milk sent to cheese factories, appointed a special officer to deal with these cases, when evidence of adulteration or tampering with milk was found by the regular staff of inspectors. Quite a number of offenders have been brought to justice and fines imposed. No private settlements have been allowed, all cases having been taken before a police magistrate when possible.

Every case in which sufficient evidence of tampering is found will be dealt with at once, as the dairymen of Western Ontario are bound to stamp out this most unfair and unlawful method of gain by patrons who should know better. It is to be hoped that any police or other magistrate before whom any of these cases may be brought will impose the maximum penalty, more particularly if it be a second offense. Heavy fines and publicity appear to be the only remedies, for repeated warnings, and appeals to the moral side of the question, have apparently done little toward discouraging the practice. Unless it can be put down the great dairy industry of this Province will become discredited in the British market. The sufferers are not alone the consumers of adulterated products, but the honest dairymen and patrons. The Western Dairymen's Association should have the hearty co-operation of everyone in the trade.

The Mayor is rebuked in some quarters for referring to filtered river water as filtered sewage. If there is any plan of safeguarding the river above London from sewage, it has not been made known.

That $22,000,000 fine of the Standard Oil Company has tickled the megalo-mania of our neighbors, and probably it will not hurt the big corporation. It has a genius for evading the courts.

Antiquarians have discovered that the late Rameses II. of Egypt, was a rank imposter, having carved his name on temples and statues which were erected thousands of years before his time. Yet Rameses deserves credit for being the original advertiser. He would not have been heard of 2,000 years after his death if he had not been keenly alive to the advantages of publicity.

The city of Seattle, like the city of Vancouver, is considering a proposal for a high-pressure system of fire protection. The plan originated with the Chamber of Commerce, and is endorsed by the board of fire underwriters. Ocean water would be used and the pressure would be supplied by a fireboat. The expense is to be assessed against the property protected by it. The high-pressure system is coming into general favor, and it will not be long before any city without it will be distinctly handicapped. It would be folly for London to throw away the present opportunity of installing it.

The women of England are encouraged to believe that they are about to receive important legislation in their favor. A bill making women eligible as senators and borough councillors, aldermen, and mayors, has just passed the House of Lords by a vote of about three to one. As the House of Commons some time ago passed a similar measure by a still larger majority, and as the Archbishop of Canterbury strongly favors the bill, it is probable that the hopes of the women for a wider franchise are about to be realized. Women already serve on the parish, urban and rural district councils, as well as boards of law guardians. In New Zealand women have just been made eligible for parliament. The political equality of the sexes in all democratic countries seems to be only a matter of time.

A QUESTION OF TASTE.

(Washington Star.)

"I am afraid," said Mr. Cumroy, "that the large sum spent on my daughter's musical education are wasted."
"But she sings and plays well."
"Yes, but every now and then she seems to like the same kind of music that I do."

OPPRESSIVE WORK.

(London Times, House of Commons Report.)
Sir C. Dilke dealt exhaustively with the question of lead poisoning in the Potteries, deploring the increase in fatal cases among adults and the mortality among the infants of mothers engaged in trades where lead was used. Some Government departments, he regretted to say, no longer insisted in their contracts that leadless glass articles should be supplied. The right honorable baronet also drew attention to the long hours of work under exemption in the jam-making and fish-curing industries and in London florists' shops, where women at times worked for fifteen hours a day and on Sundays. This was accounted for, he believed by the large number of belated orders given by ladies on the eve of court balls and social functions.

KEIR HARDIE AND SOCIALISM.

(Goldwin Smith.)

In the person of Mr. Keir Hardie, British Socialism sent us its foremost champion. It might have been too much to expect that as a passing guest he should go into the main question and tell us precisely what Socialists mean to do, and how they mean to do it. What is the form of government which they desire? How do they propose to set it up, and with what powers will they invest it? What measure of private liberty would they leave? How far would they respect the rights of private property? On all these points most of us are still much in the dark. Mr. Keir Hardie tells us that when Socialism reigns every child shall have a square meal a day. Are the children of the improvident to be fed at the cost of the provident? If they are, will not the improvident be apt to increase? Will those who have the largest fund hold out? Will those whose earnings and savings have been expropriated go to work again, like bees whose hive has been taken, to furnish funds for a second expropriation? A clear, exact statement of the Socialistic policy, stamped by such an authority as that of Mr. Keir Hardie, would be very welcome. Personally, Mr. Keir Hardie made a very favorable impression. Unhappily, while it is in the hands of such men that revolutions may begin, it is not in the hands of such men that revolutions end.

SUCCESSION DUTIES.

(St. John Telegraph.)

Announcement is made in the Toronto papers that the final payment has been made of succession duties on the estate of the late George T. Fulford, of Hamilton, at the time of his death a member of the Senate of Canada. This last check was for $105,000, and with previous payments brings up the contribution from this estate to the treasury of the Province of Ontario to $355,000. The late Mr. Fulford's estate brings it up to $575,000, all of which was made by Mr. Fulford in his own lifetime, largely the result of judicious and careful advertising of a patent medicine. Large as this contribution is to the public treasury of Ontario, it is not as large as that derived from the estate of the late George Gooderham, of Toronto, which, in a previous year, yielded to the provincial revenue $125,000. The impression is that Ontario will in the current fiscal year derive a revenue of $1,000,000 from the succession duties.

HER NERVE.

(Philadelphia Press.)

"I told that poor young widow," began Mrs. Nuritch, "that you'd give her boy 'work if—"
"Well, I won't," interrupted Nuritch, "she sent him today with a note that said: 'I must find employment for my son, even if he works for a mere pittance.' The nerve o' her callin' me a 'mere pittance!'"

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

"Look out!" exclaimed the man who had been another bravely rescued from the water. "Handle that fellow carefully, or he might revive."

"Brute!" ejaculated the rescuers.
"Brute nothing," rejoined the first speaker. "I noticed him rocking the boat."

ABSENCE OF MIND.

(Oakley Herald.)

M. A. P. tells a story of Lord and Lady Minto and one of their entertainments at Ottawa, which attracted no guests. The tale, whether apocryphal or not, is good, and well worth cherishing. It appears that Lady Minto had arranged to give a garden party at Government House. The day arrived and everything seemed in order for the event—the gardens looked their best, and host and hostess waited to receive their guests. But not a soul appeared upon the scene. Time passed and at length it dawned upon an absent-minded A. D. O. that he had written the invitation cards—but had entirely forgotten to have them posted. History does not relate how his countenance was received by the Governor-General and Lady Minto.

NEW YORK'S CRIME WAVE.

(New York Tribune.)

While men, women and children are being merely snatched, strangled, assaulted, blackmailed and slaughtered, that part of the public which can look away from the anarchy for a moment is being treated to a warlike but harmless spectacle on the city streets. The police commissioner cries that the city magistrates are to blame for the crime wave, in that they are, excessively lenient toward prisoners arraigned before them. The accused magistrates parry the thrust with a blunt denial, saying that they always hold defendants on the most serious charge possible under the evidence. Then some other officials, backed up by a host of private citizens, declare that the police themselves are guilty of being lenient toward men and women who are sinned with sin and craft. And so the lively tittle of recrimination keeps up to the ragged end of the tournament; everybody seems possessed with the fixed idea that there is one and only one guilty man or department. The amusing circle of New's famous cartoon, "Twas He" appears again.

LORD STRATHCONA AND THE SIMPLE LIFE.

(London Daily Mail.)

Lord Strathcona, the aged high commissioner for Canada, is a champion of the simple life, and a devoted exponent of the two meals a day theory. He arrived at his office in Victoria, at 9:30 yesterday morning, having eaten his house in Grosvenor Square the following simple meal:

Porridge and milk,
Toast and marmalade,
Tea with hot water added.
From the moment of his arrival the high commissioner was busy with correspondence and callers. At 1 o'clock his secretaries slipped out to lunch, but Lord Strathcona went on with the work of the Dominion.
At 7 o'clock the high commissioner, having eaten nothing since his frugal breakfast, having smoked no larger-abating cigar, and having drunk no stimulating liquor, went home to Grosvenor Square, where in an hour he sat down to his simple meal:

Soup. Powl.
Fish. Table-water.
Sir Thomas Barlow has described Lord Strathcona as "an ideal dietist." Nothing will tempt him from his simple nourishing diet. In his 77th year, he keeps his active body and mind working in harmony on two meals a day.

IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

(Francis Beaumont.)

Mortality, behold and fear!
What a change of flesh is here!
Think how many royal bones
Sleep beneath this heap of stones!
Here they lie had realms and lands,
Who now want strength to stir their hands.
Here from their pulpits speak with dust
They preach, "In greatness is no trust."
Here is an acre sown indeed
With the richest royalist seed
That the earth did ever seek in.
Since the first man drew his sin,
Here the bones of birth have lain for sin.
"Though gods they were, as men they died."

Here are sands, ignoble things,
Drept from the ruined walls of kings.
Here's a world of pomp and state,
Buried in dust, once dead by fate.

FOUR TO FOUR AT BUFFALO

Kelley's Maple Leafs and the Bisons Play a Tie Game.

Buffalo, Aug. 3. — Toronto and Buffalo put up a rare fight for today's game, but they will have to scrap again for it, as it ended in a ten-inning tie for four runs each. Buffalo looked to be the winner, but Toronto came back like true champions, and went home, after Umpire Owens called the game, on even terms with the Bisons. Hesterer gave way to Applegate, but Kissinger furnished the lead in the fifth and looked like the sure winners, until Toronto set to work after a few runs in the ninth. The fielding was sensational. (Special to The Advertiser.)

Ipserwash Beach, Aug. 2. — Ipserwash Beach was at its liveliest on Civic Holiday, when many Londoners arrived for the fishing, which is far-famed. Perch and bass form the main catch. One fisherman, Mr. Lackie, of London, reported 75 in one day.

What is a Backache?

IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO WOMEN

Causes of Women's Organs Cured and Consequent Pain Stopped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It seems as though my back would break." Women utter these words over and over again, but continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, "bearing-down" pains, nervousness and no ambition for any task.

Mrs. Albert Mann

They do not realize that the back is the mainspring of woman's organism, and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the female organs or kidneys, and that the aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been for many years the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily cures female organs and kidney disorders and restores the female organs to a healthy condition.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
I suffered a long time with female trouble, having intense pains in the back and abdomen and very sick headaches every month. I was tired and nervous all the time and life looked very dreary to me and I had no desire to live until I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to get some relief. My recovery was slow but it was sure, and I never regretted the money spent for the Compound as it brought me back to good health.

"It seems to be a medicine especially adapted to the ills of our sex and I am glad to say a good word for it."—Mrs. Albert Mann, 154 Gore Vale Ave., Toronto, Ont.

No other person can give such helpful advice to women who are sick as can Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice free.

My Lady Cinderella

By Mrs. G. N. Williamson
Author of "My Friend the Chauffeur," "Lady Betty Across the Water," Etc., Etc.

"When he went I ran after, and told him he'd be a bad man if he took that eskortore, 'cause it was yours, and not ma's to sell. But he shrugged up his fat shoulders, and said that was ma's business, not his or mine, and little boys should be seen and not heard. What an old stupid not to know that's for girls, not boys! Anyhow, he had the desk fetched away, though I made a row, and got sent to bed without my supper. I tell you, I cried 'cause it was the first time I could ever remember when you hadn't let me say my prayers by your knee, and tucked me in afterwards, and kissed me good night. But ma never knew that I so much as sniveled."

"Dear old loyal Jim!" I exclaimed. "Thank you for telling me all this; for now the only thing I have to do is to go to Moss's and buy back the eskortore. I'm sure the lady I'm visiting will do that for me; and, as the man only bought it to please your mother, he can't charge so very much."

"I bet that was a 'tarradiddle,' too! But you haven't heard all my story yet, Con; the queer part's to come. It began next morning. I was wheeling baby in the pram up and down in front of the door, while ma did some of the work that used to be yours (and I pretty sick she was about it, too), when an old gentleman drove up in a hansom. He didn't seem quite sure of the house at first, but looked all round, and when he saw me he asked if I knew a young lady named Bland. I said I did, that you were my cousin, though my mother didn't like you, and that you'd gone away the night before. Where had you gone? I didn't know, said I, and put the shillin' in my pocket. Then he inquired if my mother was in. He wouldn't give any name, but said he had 'portant business, and I took him in the parlour. Ma dressed herself before she came down, so I talked to the man, and he asked me a lot of questions, mostly about you. When ma opened the door, I made as if I was going out, but while she said 'How do you do?' and the table—the one with the long red cloth—and I heard everything."

"What was the gentleman like?" I inquired.
"Pretty old, with nice clothes, and a tall, shiny hat, and gold watch chain. Oh, he'd got spectacles with gold rims, too!—dark sort of spectacles, that wouldn't let you see his eyes very well. And side whiskers, gray like his hair."

"Mr. Wynnstay!" I muttered below my breath.
And my interest in Jimmy's narrative increased.
"What's a solicitor?" suddenly queried the little boy. "Oh, only a lawyer! Well, that's what the old gentleman was. He told me, and said that he was looking for some one named Bland, because there might be something to her 'vantage.' Ma pricked up her ears at that, and began to talk about how much she'd done for you ever since your mother died; and if there was any money coming to you, she ought to have some of it. The old gentleman was very polite, and said he thought so, too. It all depended on whether you had papers to prove what 'branch of the family' you came down from, or something like that—only families don't grow on branches, do they?"

"He asked ma if you had a lot of old letters and family papers, and she shook her head; she was sure you hadn't anything of the kind, or she'd have known about it long ago. Your mother, when she was alive, was always hinting about great things that might be coming to you in the future; but ma hadn't believed a word of it. Your mother never had a penny to bless herself with after she came back from Australia, or America, or somewhere, a widow with one little girl, and her nice looks and her health all gone."

"Perhaps ma was mistaken, the old gentleman said, so pleasant and so. Maybe you'd had papers put away in some box or piece of furniture. Wasn't there anything of that kind you'd taken with you or left behind at our house? There was a eskortore, ma told him; but she'd searched every drawer when you'd gone, and there was nothing except a few silly letters from a girl you knew called Bryden."

"The old gentleman kept playing with his hat; I could see him from under the tablecloth, but once in a while he'd look up through his glasses at you. He looked up like that when you spoke about the eskortore. He asked if ma'd let him see it, because, he said, there might be some crest (whatever that is), or other sort of mark, which would tell him whether you belonged to the right family, and might come in for a little money himself."

"Ma hummed and hawed, feeling pretty queer to think she'd sold your desk, I bet; but she wouldn't tell what she'd done. It was yours, she said, and she didn't know if she ought to show it without your consent. But didn't she just jump when he cried out he'd give five pounds for only a look at the thing. That old lamp she'd got couldn't have cost more'n a pound when 'twas new, so it served her jolly right! I wondered whatever she would be up to next; but she sat still, thinking; and then, says she, if he'd wait a few minutes, she'd try and arrange for him to see the eskortore."

"Then I knew what she meant to do; she was going round to Moss's to buy the desk back. She went out of the room, and bimeby I heard the front door shut, awful sly. The man might have seen ma slip past if he'd looked out of the window, but he didn't. He just walked up and down, with his hands behind his back, and once in a while he said something to himself that I couldn't hear, only just the word 'luck.'"

"Ma was gone a long time, and I got thinking to myself, maybe Moss wouldn't let her have the desk back, and she'd be ashamed to tell she'd said it, and then the old gentleman couldn't find out what he wanted; so you'd never get the money he said might be coming to you if you was the right branch. That made me wild, so I thinks I to myself, 'Better take the last chance you've had before ma comes back; and out I crawls from under the table.'

"The man looked kind of queer at first, and scowled through his big spectacles, but when he heard what I had to say he was glad, and thanked me. Before I'd speak out I made him promise he wouldn't let ma know I'd been under the table or told him anything; and he hardly finished when I spied her comin' in the gate as I peeped through the window. With that I scouted into the passage before she could get to the door."

"Her face was cross enough to stop a clock, but she didn't speak a word to me, and I didn't know what she'd told the old gentleman. But I was just going to know, so I went out into the street and hung round where nobody could spy me from the house, though I could see anyone who passed through the gate."

"I hadn't been many minutes when the man came out. He'd sent away his cab when he heard ma was in, and while he was waiting slowly along I said, 'Hello, sir!' and made him jump. 'Oh, I was lookin' for you, little chap,' says he. 'I'll give yer another bob if you'll take me round to that shop where the desk was sold.' 'Right you are!' says I. And I asked him if ma'd told about sellin' it. 'No, she hadn't,' said he."

"She made up a story about 'con-sultin' a friend of hers, and they'd both come to the 'clusion she hadn't ought to show your property to a stranger without writin' to you. So now he wanted to see the furniture man. I was pretty sure then something was wrong, though I didn't know what. But we found out in a minute at Moss's. Whatever do you think had happened, Con?"

CAUTION—Be careful to inclose above illustration and send size of pattern wanted. When the pattern is bust measure you need only mark 32, 34, or whatever it may be. When in waist measure, 22, 24, 26, or whatever it may be. If a skirt, give waist and length measure. When 'misses' or child's pattern, write only the figure, representing the age. It is not necessary to write 'inches' or 'yards.' Patterns cannot reach you in less than one week from the date of order. The price of each pattern is 10 cents in cash or in postage stamps.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT, LONDON ADVERTISER.

"The eskortore was broken, or burned, or—"
"No. Somebody'd been in already and bought it, only 'bout two hours before. That was why ma'd had to make up her 'tarradiddle, to save herself from lookin' a fool. My goodness, you'd ought to have seen the old gentleman's face! He got quite white, and when he began to ask questions he stammered and stuttered before he could speak straight. 'Was it a dealer bought the desk?' he wanted to know. 'No, 'twas a private gent,' said Sam Moss—somebody he'd never seen before."

"A 'gent'—that's what Moss called it—came sauntering along, looked in the shop window, asked the price on some things, and then set eyes on the eskortore. 'How much was that?' says he. 'Twenty pounds,' says Moss. (Oh, my, aunt, mustn't ma have been sick if he let out that to her!) And like a shot the gent paid the money. Moss would have sent the desk, he told us, but the gent got a growler and took it away with him. That's everything Moss knew."

"My old man thought for a while, and calmed down a bit; then gave Moss some money, quite a lot it looked, and told him to advertise for the cabman who drove the gent and the eskortore. 'Here's my card,' says he, 'and if you hear you can let me know. But the job's for you to work. I want the desk, but I'm a busy man, and I haven't time to bother, nor I don't care to appear. It's better for a man of business, if you can get that eskortore back for me, as I've taken such a fancy to have it, you can pay up to a hundred and fifty pounds, and I'll give you thirty more for yourself.'"

"Moss promised to do what he could, and said he'd leave 'no stone unturned,' or something like that. Then my old gentleman was gone, away, and the bob was to have if I hadn't reminded him. I don't believe he was very glad to see me again, but he gave me the money and jumped into a cab that was passin' slowly by. That's all the story, Con, but I thought you'd like to know. And so, you see, it's no good sendin' Carter Patson to our house."

"No, it's no good," I echoed loudly. "Thank you, Jimmy, a hundred times, for looking after my interests so well. You're a dear boy, and some time, maybe, I can do something for you to make up."

"If you ever get a house of your own, praps you'll have me to visit you," he suggested.
"Indeed I will. I should like to have you to stop all the time, for you and I have been good pals, haven't we, Jimmy? If I wrote to you once in a while, I wonder if your mother would let you have the letters?"

"Not she. She'd make curl papers of 'em for her front hair, like as not. Anyhow, I shouldn't see 'em. But if I wanted to let you know anything I could nick a stamp and some paper, and I could print you a letter, though I can't write so very well yet. You just tell me where you live, and I'll say it over and over to myself till I know it by heart and can't forget."

I told him the street and the number, gave him money to ride home in a tram—our pastry cook was not far from the street honored by Happyholme Villa—and five minutes later I was rolling smoothly away in the brougham toward Park Lane.

My brain buzzed with conflicting thoughts. I deeply regretted having lost the eskortore, but my distress was well-nigh overshadowed by the amazement I felt at the curious train of circumstances which complicated my loss.

"I am the girl about whom Lady Dunbar was speaking that night," I exclaimed half aloud. "It must be so. The coincidence would be too extraordinary, otherwise, as everything has turned out. And it was Mr. Wynnstay who was with her behind the curtain. I don't wonder so much that I didn't recognise his voice, for he spoke in such a low, bass grumble, as if he could not quite depend upon her assurance about the locked door. But I did think, even then, that the voice sounded familiar. Let me see—if I can—how does it all work together? What does it all mean?"

Trifles Make Perfection But Perfection Is No Trifle

It is by the most careful attention to every trifling detail in the milling of "FIVE ROSES" FLOUR that we have been able to bring this brand up to its present state of perfection, and are able to maintain it.

Every single bushel of grain which enters our mills, every single bag and barrel of flour which leaves them is tested and re-tested at every stage of the milling, in order to insure the absolute purity and uniformity for which "FIVE ROSES" FLOUR is noted the world over.

This attention to trifles is costly, but it enables us to maintain a reputation for perfection, which is no trifle, and users of "FIVE ROSES" can rely upon getting the "flour of perfect quality" for all household use.

FATE OF TEMPLE AT PHILAE.

Lord Cromer's dispatch to Sir Edward Grey on the increased water supply needed by Egypt, published by the Foreign office, recommends the raising of the great Assouan dam by 23 feet, at a cost of about $1,500,000.

While the raising of the Assouan dam as proposed is the only satisfactory solution, it means, "unfortunately," Lord Cromer says, "the almost complete submergence during a portion of the year of the Temple of Philae." While deeply regretting this consequence, Lord Cromer declares it would not be justifiable to sacrifice the present and future interests of the people of Egypt in order to save the submergence of the temples.

Sir William Garstin states that the Government has consolidated the foundations of these buildings by underpinning them, carrying the masonry everywhere down to the solid rock. "There is consequently no fear of their being structurally injured by the raised water levels." And during the period between July and October the monuments will be annually uncovered—London Daily Mail.

The Old Time Umpire And How He Worked

Men Who Ran the Games in the Days of the Tumsehs.

Fans will be fans. They always have been and always will be. There are fans right in this city who have records of ball games played practically before Noah put the ark on the dry and sandy. Ald. Thomas Gillean is no exception to the rule. The popular city father has memos and data of all description about his house, and even around his place of business. In fact, he has so much material of that nature stored away that he can't locate his of it. However, yesterday he was able to place his hands on a little black booklet dated 1878, with a preface which states that "This book belongs to Tom Gillean, London, Ont.," and which contains the complete record of games played by the Tumsehs team during the baseball season of that year. In this quaint book is also a host of clippings which tell stories of base-champion McClarys. However, in 31 games Hall, center fielder, made only four errors, had 27 hits and scored 26 runs. But few of the clippings led off with any kind of an introduction, and showing possibly that in those days the people cared more about the actual result of the games than they did about a string of write-ups. A clipping from a Cleveland paper says: "The team from London, Ont., played here yesterday. The score was, etc."

Another clipping, source unmarked, states that "The Forest Citys were badly beaten at Cleveland, Ohio, by the Tumsehs because the visitors took hold of Salisbury's pitching."

A Utica, N. Y., paper said: "On Aug. 19 our team appeared in London, and won a championship game with the Tumsehs. Next day they crossed bats again and added another victory."

A dispatch from Rochester, and presumably published in a local sheet, read as follows: "Hornung and Burke were left at the bridge and did not play. Two local players took their places. The ground was very rough. The fol-ball, cricket, rowing and swimming matches of days long gone by. In one place we read of where "The Tumsehs" badly punished the Live Oaks by 14 to 9, while in another we are informed that "Goldsmith, pitcher, had a grand total of 34 strikes called on him."

The records show that nearly all of the championship games of that period played in London were umpired by Mr. Gillean and were scored by Mr. Chas. Moorhead and Col. Gartschore.

The opinion popularly obtains today that the baseball of the olden days was not what it is today in the matter of science. And yet we find instances in the reference book which shows that shutouts were no uncommon thing in those days. In the month of May alone the Tumsehs took part in eight shutouts, six of these being in succession, from the 13th to 18th inclusive. The teams and the scores for the six games were as follows:

Tumsehs 6, Lowell 0.
Tumsehs 2, Manchester 0.

ALD. THOMAS GILLEAN.

Manchester 2, Tumsehs 0.
Tumsehs 14, Live Oaks 0.
Live Oaks 3, Tumsehs 0.
Tumsehs 5, New Haven 0.

The pitchers twined three games apiece, Goldsmith pitching the first two and Bradley the latter.

Among the peculiarities noticed in the methods of scoring at that time was the custom of mentioning the men who struck out without giving the names of the pitchers making the strikeouts. Again, the number of strikes a pitcher registered were given. In some few instances the scores merely consisted of outs and runs made by each player.

Games Were Long.

Some of the games lasted as long as two hours and forty minutes, although there were several which were finished inside of two hours. Perfect fielding averages were a rare thing in that year at least. In 18 games Quinlan made 19 errors, while Powers, catcher, had 73 errors in 48 games. However, a great many of these misplays were caused by misjudging batters, which, if caught, constituted a putout.

Caught on the Bound.

There are many comparatively young men about the city who can remember when that rule was in vogue. Among these is Jimmy Hall, captain of the

lowing is the score"

Fancy one of the modern day editors receiving a sporting dispatch like that. There would be something doing every minute afterwards for about an hour. And imagine if you can, a baseball crank of today, who wants to know the why and wherefore of every play of all the big games, digesting a morsel like the one cited.

The lineup of the Tumsehs at the beginning of the season of '78 was as follows: Hornung, 1.f.; Hall, c.f.; Barnes, 2.b.; Burke, s.s.; Goldsmith, p.; Powers, c.; Bradley, 1.b. and p.; Doersch, 3.b.; Smith, r.f. Toward the finish of the season Smith dropped out and was replaced by Quinlan, who played right field and acted as backstop alternately.

Among the various umpires noted were Thomas Gillean, T. Brunton, E. M. Moore, Max Albrecht, Mandeville, O. Porter, G. F. White, Wright, J. Tufts, M. O'Neill, H. J. Dehman, C. W. Andrus, H. Heur, A. E. Matthews, H. D. Mik, Joe Cameron, C. W. Nichols, James Ross, Mr. Porter, J. H. Mattson, Mr. Devlin and E. D. Cushman.

SCRAPPY TIGERS WIN THE SECOND

Big George Mullin-Pitches
Great Ball and Is Well Supported.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8.—Before a crowd of 14,000 fans the Tigers again added to their lead in the fight for the pennant today, knocking their once feared rival, Eddie Plank, out of the box by a mighty batting bout, much on the same order as the one they enjoyed against him in that last series at Bennett Park.

The score was five to three, but George Mullin really deserved a shut-out. A wild heave by Coughlin in the ninth inning left in two runs. There were two down, but the Athletics began to hit Mullin, who was weakened by the terrible heat from which the city has been suffering for days. It looked for a while as though the game ones, after eight innings of the most brilliant play of the year, were going to lose out after all. But Connie Mack's men were not there when they did have good luck falling all over them. They lost their chance to win by one of the finest exhibitions of bone headed baseball ever played in the league.

Mullin was the Mullin of spring time. He was their master inning after inning. Up to that nerve-racking ninth they got but five scattered hits off him. As for Plank, the Tigers got to him early but they could not place them safely until the third. Then Mullin showed them the way. Big George doubled into the crowd in left field. Jones singled, Coughlin singled, Crawford doubled, and Cobb brought it to a climax by tripling, four runs being scored.

Connie jerked Plank out too late. He put in Dygert and the young man with the spit ball stood the Tigers on their heads. They were only able to get one run in. This came in the ninth when Cobb walked and went anxious to take a spill out of the Smiths, but are not doing any undue boasting about their ability to do so. Doc Slipp would give up all his future chances of roasting the umpire if his team would only throw the harpoon into the big gang from the tin works; but he, like the lanky captains of the Biscuit shooters, is strictly mum. At the conclusion of the game there may be a howl coming from some corner or another, but whether it will be one of gladness or one of joy can only be imagined.

For Detroit, aside from Mullin, Cobb, Crawford and Jones were the stars. Cobb made two triples and a double. His base running was—well, everybody knows.

Twice he robbed the Athletics of extra base hits by his remarkable fielding, holding them at first. While Crawford's game was less spectacular it was equally good. Sam seemed to have every batter judged so perfectly that they could not get the ball anywhere in center field. As finished ball player, few can beat the man from Wahoo.

Jones saved the game in the ninth, by a perfect throw to the plate that killed a run and retired the side. He not only fielded well but like the rest, hit timely.

Despite his error, Coughlin played one of those master games of his at third, while Charley O'Leary again won the plaudits of even the Philadelphia fans by his great shortstopping.

For eight long innings the Athletics left their bench to take the field scoreless. When the ninth opened there was little life in any of them. Davis started with a single. It might have gone for more, but Cobb turned him back. Murphy and Collins fled. Then Oldring hit an easy roller to Coughlin. Bill says he got hold of a "spitter," anyway, he threw the ball into the bleachers, and both Davis and Oldring scored. Powers singled, and Lord sent to bat for Dygert, likewise got a base hit. Hartzel walked, filling the bench.

It was up to Nichols. He singled to left. Jones taking the ball on the second bound. Powers had scored and Lord had a beautiful chance. But he dallied at second waiting to see where the ball went to. When he did start he made third. Then there was more bone-headed play. Harry Davis coaching sent him home. He started and Jones made a waiting throw to the plate. Payne waiting with the ball. That retired the side. A little brain work and the Tigers might not now be leading the league, despite the fact that on straight baseball they should have won easily, anyway.

SNAPSHOT AT VARIOUS SPORTS

Roy Nopper, the demon backdrop of the R. J. Young team, is fast rounding into shape, and will give a great account of himself shortly.

Tomorrow the Satellites and the Bakers lock horns in the first fracas at Tecumseh, after which the rejuvenated Rockets and the league leaders will try conclusions in an eight-round bout. After what that pick-up team did to St. Thomas, it appears worse than foolish to attempt to pick the winners. The Bakers are dead all the way to take a spill out of the Smiths, but are not doing any undue boasting about their ability to do so. Doc Slipp would give up all his future chances of roasting the umpire if his team would only throw the harpoon into the big gang from the tin works; but he, like the lanky captains of the Biscuit shooters, is strictly mum. At the conclusion of the game there may be a howl coming from some corner or another, but whether it will be one of gladness or one of joy can only be imagined.

That was rather a peculiar deal the St. Thomas bunch handed the McClarys in reference to that promised exhibition game. However, the result of Wednesday's little affair probably had something to do with the Saints changing their minds.

Kid Elberfeld is so popular that everybody falls over himself to steer clear of him, says the New York Mail. It will be remembered that the Kid was recently suspended by Griffith for sulking, and there was no pay attached to the lay-off, either.

There's a whole lot of us who have been ringing the town bells and cutting loose the big noise about a tree is led to believe that there's only one shortstop in the gashett, and that, a kid.

But a cold analysis of his work doesn't assay more than a small pair, away below openers.

The cow that gives up milk with both feet in the pail isn't as grateful a member of the family as the one that hands out the garden variety in shape for the table.

Elberfeld will make a stop that has all the wings of the impossible, and then throw it into the bleachers, letting in the runs. This is almost a habit with him.

He'll get up a scrap with the ump, and kick himself out of the game when he is most needed.

He's as steady and reliable as a dose of billiard balls on a table set aboard a coasting schooner in a gale off Hatteras.

His disposition is so sweet and lovable that the players on the other teams often think how nice it would be to buy flowers for his grave—an anchor piece, for instance, something that would hold.

The Brantford Courier takes occasion to remark that the City League there is in dire need of four good third basemen. An advertisement in a London paper should supply them with a surplus of good material—maybe.

The saintly ones are still in a daze over the day before yesterday's occurrence in a baseball way. For a pick-up (note the phrase) team to splutter white wash all over the best that the burg by the water tank can put forth is something "orful."

What the regular teams of this city will do to the kalsomined saints in future contests is a matter for the corner to figure out.

Everybody in Toronto seems afflicted with the C. L. A. agitation mix-up. The Star solemnly declares that it is time the president of the Canadian Lacrosse Union sits up and take notice, while another sheet asks what it is all about. The News contents itself with publishing statements from the presidential headquarters, while the other sheets take ally digs at his excellency when they run shy of other dope. The lacrosse people themselves, however, are greatly stirred up over the affair, and are making almost as much fuss as did the hockey crowd last winter when they all made a mad rush for the railroad station to see the real things, the Thistles, pass through the city of howls and howlers. The chief source of all the trouble seems to be that President Cameron, of the C. L. A., allowed several players to jump from one club to another without giving even notice of their intentions. However, among the other things cooked up for his special edification by the Star are that he allowed players to sign with more than one club, chose his executive in a rather questionable manner, ruled that certain members of the C. L. A. Executive might discuss matters of protest, but not vote on them, gave the casting vote for the reinstatement of Bert Green, who played professional lacrosse this season, and consented to the suspension of Martin, who played as a professional five years ago.

Sonoma Girl, winner of the M. and M., was trained in California, where the conditions are very nearly like those of the south, and Judge Wilson, winner of the 2.15 pace, was trained in Missouri, where the conditions differ from both those in the south and in the north. Judging from the Detroit results, the northern-trained horses have much the best of the argument, but it is possible that this showing may be reversed at Cleveland. The best comparison to get at the real facts will be to group the season's winners next fall. Such a grouping would be more conclusive, and more worthy of consideration—Horse World.

Maybe they are not troubled with a case of sour grapes in Washington, D.C. Notwithstanding the fact that it has been several days since the Detroit Tigers walloped the prizes of the capital city, the scribes of that place are still whining and throwing bouquets (?) at the city across the river. A sample bouquet:

"Out in Detroit the baseball 'fans' have gone daft over the showing of the Tigers on the present trip, and they will be giving a warm welcome on their return. Jennings clubs are being organized, and the papers are getting out extras with scare heads, and it looks as though the Detroit people have already decided upon a champion of the American League for this season. They should not lose sight of the fact that the Tigers were in the lead at this time last year, and have been in the lead several times in the past two years, but when the final test came they went off in their play, and dropped to the rear. Jennings has really done nothing wonderful with the Detroiters, as they had the same record the past two years, and it remains to be seen whether he can make them hold fast in the last month of play. If he can do that, then too much praise cannot be given him for his leadership. A point that should not be lost sight of is that Jennings has had a first-class team from the beginning of the season. Another little thing the Tigers want to mark up in their hats, and that is they must beat the White Sox. If they can head off Fielder Jones, Donohue, Isbell and Sullivan, the flag is theirs to a moral certainty."

The crucial test of a race horse is the capacity to retain racing form week after week. The horse that will get into form to win a sensational race one week, and then be out of winning form for three or four weeks, is not a profitable campaigner, nor a real race horse in the truest sense of the word. It will be found, on looking up the careers of the great money winners in the grand circuit, that all of them were of the consistent racing kind, which enabled them to show high racing form about every time they started. One such a horse is worth three which may be faster and just as game on infrequent occasions, for he will win more than the three and at one-third the campaigning expense. That kind, however, come few and far between, and are practically worth more than the average horseman cares to pay, although they are the cheapest in every way.

Wild and woolly "Bill" Donovan leads the American slab artists at the present time, and has lost but two bouts this season. BRITT AND GANS MEET ON SEPT. 9

Los Angeles All Agog Over
Another Pugilistic Scandal.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 9.—Representatives of Jimmy Britt and Joe Gans last night signed articles for the appearance of the two before John Gleason's Occidental Club, at the ball grounds, here, on Sept. 9. Manager Gleason signed on behalf of the club. He agrees to give 75 per cent of the receipts, with a guarantee of $25,000.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 9.—Los Angeles is agog over another pugilistic scandal, rivaling the O'Brien and Burns fiasco of some months ago. It is in connection with the practical calling off yesterday of the 20-round go between Joe Gans, light-weight champion, and Jimmy Burns, scheduled to take place at the Pacific A. C., on Aug. 15. Prominent San Francisco sporting men and representatives of the "fighting trust" are in league and are accused of having offered large sums of money to break up the match. The reason for this was that it interfered with various ways with the Brit-Gans match, scheduled to take place in San Francisco early in September.

DURNELL GOING TO RACE ABROAD

Owner of Nealon Gives That as Reason for Selling Stable.

Saratoga, Aug. 8.—"Boots" Durnell is going to follow the racing game in England and France.

This announcement was made today by Durnell himself as the reason for selling his stable, and is causing more comment than the over-estimated question of raising the Saratoga lid.

Many see in the horseman's sudden decision to leave America the crafty hand of John W. Gates, who is now in Europe. It was through information furnished by Durnell that Gates was able to recoup his $200,000 loss of last season in two months' racing about New York. He called for the German for which he had his son Charlie recently purchased, nearly even with the racing game.

It is not unlikely that he sees a racing opening abroad, and has persuaded Durnell to follow him. It would surprise no one if the brown and white colors which the little owner has made so prominent this year would soon be seen on French tracks. He is an excellent judge of horses and with his own money and Gates' backing he should be able to pick up a profitable stable.

Among the horses which will be sold on the 15th is Nealon, who jumped into fame by winning the suburban race for him. Other Durnell horses which will go are Joe Nealon, a crack 2-year-old, and Jacobite, for which "Boots" paid $42,000 at the dissolution of the Paget stable a few weeks ago.

Theoretically 34 feet is the limit to which the pressure of the atmosphere can push water up a tube with a vacuum above the water. No pump can exhaust the air above the water perfectly, hence no pump can get water 34 feet above the level of the water bed. The pump lifts the air out of the water in the pipe; the air outside the pipe pushes on the water in the well and pushes it up into the partial vacuum in the pipe below the valve of the pump.

Air that has been inhaled has a higher electrical conductivity than normal air.

CONFESSES TO CRUELTY TO HORSE

Livery Animal Badly Abused
by Seventeen-Year-Old John Johnston.

"Guilty," pleaded John Johnston, residence unknown, when brought up before Police Magistrate Love this morning on a charge of cruelty to animals, preferred by Mr. Poole, the Talbot street liveryman. Johnston, as stated in yesterday's Advertiser, on Wednesday morning rented a rig from Mr. Poole, saying he would return it by 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon. When the horse was not returned at the hour mentioned nor during the night, the liveryman became alarmed, and notified the police, with the result that Johnston was apprehended at Springfield. Mr. Poole testified that the horse looked as though it had been driven constantly during the 24 or more hours it had been out, and it had been so abused and starved that he would not be able to make use of it for at least ten days or two weeks. A Springfield police official substantiated this evidence, and added that the animal's body was covered with ridges from whip blows.

When hiring the rig Johnston gave a fictitious address, in this city. This morning he said he was 17 years of age, and lived with his mother in the north end of the city. Johnston was remanded until Tuesday next for sentence.

James Harris, Frank Cahill and Jas. Harris faced his honor on a charge of drunkenness. "I think I will give you fellows another chance," remarked the magistrate. Whereat the countenances of the trio brightened 100 per cent. "However, on second consideration I recall that you compelled the arresting officer to run several blocks, so I will levy a fine of $2 apiece upon you and confiscate the three bottles of liquor which were found on your persons."

Harry Holtenbach admitted that he had accumulated a rather large jag yesterday at Port Stanley, and was taxed $2 for the privilege. "I did not see the policeman," replied John Copp, who asked why he had ridden his wheel on the sidewalk yesterday.

"That is a good excuse," replied the magistrate. "I'll fine you $1 for not making a better one, though." Two minor cases were held over for a week and one first-time offender was turned loose.

SCENES OF HORROR AT CASABLANCA

that the captive soon will be liberated.

Paris, Aug. 9.—The official reports received here from Casablanca, on the west coast of Morocco, practically confirm the statements made in the press dispatches regarding the bombardment of the town and its vicinity, and the scenes which followed, but according to the latest advices quiet has been restored. A large portion of the town is in ruins, and it is feared that the events at Casablanca will produce an outburst of fanaticism throughout Morocco, though the Government's representatives say that no undue effervescence has thus far occurred at Fez or other places in the interior. In addition to the French squadron, commanded by Admiral Philibert, and the Spanish warships which are off Casablanca, the squadron commanded by Admiral Jaureguiberry, consisting of the armored cruisers, Leon Gambetta, Dupetit, Thouray and Admiral Aube, is being temporarily held off Cape Spartel, in order to meet any emergency.

How About Filtration? There is a dead cow in the Thames River just below the Cove bridge. The body is half exposed, and in these hot days the odor is none too pleasant. It is especially disagreeable to oarsmen, and as a result many have cut out all trips down the river until the animal is removed.

Lost the Monogram. Mr. Philip Pocock, an ex-president of the Irish Benevolent Society, lost the gold monogram of his past president's badge at Port Stanley yesterday. A large portion of the monogram is in ruins, and it is feared that the events at Casablanca will produce an outburst of fanaticism throughout Morocco, though the Government's representatives say that no undue effervescence has thus far occurred at Fez or other places in the interior.

A GOOD APPLE CROP

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 9.—After listening to the report of the executive committee, which stated that a good apple crop is in prospect, the International Apple Shippers' Association has adjourned to meet next year in Niagara Falls. The report said: "Our best crops extend from Ohio and Michigan eastward through New York and New England, and up through Canada, showing considerable excess over the crop of a year ago. The Ben Davis district and as far west as Colorado shows a heavy decline from the crop of last year. Much satisfaction is expressed with this rosy outlook, as it was reported earlier in the season that the frosts had done much more damage than has been found have actually resulted. While many trees suffered the quality of the fruit has been improved. William L. Wagner, Chicago, was elected president."

KICK CAUSES DEATH OF FRANCIS CHEFF

Ribs Broken and Lung Pierced —Victim Bled From Internal Wounds.

Chatham, Aug. 8.—With several ribs broken and a lung pierced by fragments of bone, Francis Cheff, an employee of E. Goodreau, corner of con. 5 and the Winter line, Dover, died during last night.

While he was attending to some duties in his employer's stable about 11 o'clock, a horse suddenly viciously kicked him in the right side, immediately below the arm, from the effects of which he died at 6 o'clock this morning after a physician was summoned, had done all in the power of science to stave off the inevitable.

Details of the fatality are not numerous. It is assumed, however, that when the unfortunate victim of the accident went into the stable, the vicious animal suddenly let fly, with the above recorded disastrous result. No one witnessed the accident.

When those living on the farm discovered the condition of Mr. Cheff, they immediately telephoned for a Chatham physician, who soon arrived. However, the resources of medicine were powerless, as the man had been so severely injured internally. After seven hours of intense suffering he bled to death from his internal wounds.

The victim was married and had a family. The widow and children are said to be living in Chatham, though the name does not appear in the city directory.

The Goodreau farm is situated about eight miles from Chatham.

The body has been prepared for interment, which will take place on Saturday from the Pain Court Church to the parish cemetery.

GAMBLE AWAY FORTUNE COUPLE TRY SUICIDE

Ronie, Aug. 9.—The identity of the couple who attempted suicide at Castellamare, the woman dying and the man surviving, has now been established. The man, John Buckingham, who is now in a hospital at Naples, is an Englishman, an engineer. His wife was Miss Jennie Ensign, a native of Massachusetts, and lately of New York, whence she brought a considerable fortune. This fortune was entirely lost in gambling at Monte Carlo. The couple drank a mixture of laudanum and arsenic leaving a letter saying they wished to die together.

Hamburg, Conn., Aug. 9.—Leaurence Gilkinson, of New York, and Miss Rena Rivers, an actress, of Boston, both summer boarders here, were drowned last night in Hamburg Cove while bathing on Eight-Mile River, a branch of the Connecticut. They were in a small row boat. Gilkinson's hat went overboard, and Miss Rivers in reaching for it, lost her balance and fell into the water. Gilkinson attempted her rescue, but both went down in 30 feet of water.

LEAVES WRECK TO FATE

Captain, With One Small Boat of Teutonia, Reports Loss.

London, Aug. 8.—Lloyds today announced that it had been ascertained from Muscat that the crew of the wrecked German steamer, Teutonia, from Bussorah, Asiatic Turkey, for Hamburg, which was wrecked July 20 on the southeast coast of Arabia, abandoned the vessel in four boats.

The captain and six men arrived at Muscat after touching at Masirah Island, where they were well treated by the natives. The captain reported that two of the boats became separated from the boat in which he reached Muscat. Their fate is unknown.

The fourth boat remained at Masirah Island, and the captain hoped she would start for Muscat when the prevailing monsoon has abated.

Four boys from Stratford went sailing on the lake on Wednesday. When they got far out, the lake became rough, and they made for the shore. But the fun was too great to be resisted, and donning their bathing suits they again launched the craft, to the now stormy waters. Hardly had they reached the end of the dock, when a huge breaker caught the boat on the side and turned it upside down. All were able to swim, but the waves were strong. After a little excitement they were able to get on terra firma again.

ITEMS FROM PORT STANLEY

Musical Evening, Bonfire and Popcorn Roast on the Beach.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Port Stanley, Aug. 8.—On Wednesday evening Mr. John A. Croden gave a musical evening, bonfire, marshmallow and popcorn roast at his Unedared Cottage, New Orchard Beach. His very large and exceedingly pretty lawn and numerous flowerbeds presented a fairytale appearance, being decorated with flags, bunting and Chinese lanterns. For the usual bonfire, Mr. Croden introduced a novelty on the beach, having a very large hoop-iron basket made, which holds about a quarter of a cord of wood, thus making a most beautiful fire for such purposes.

The party was opened by a grand march to music. During the evening Rev. Mr. Livingston gave two selections from Shakespeare. The pleasant proceedings were brought to a close by all present, about 75, joining hands and singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and "Auld Lang Syne." It was conceded on all sides that the most pleasant evenings ever spent in Port Stanley, and Mr. Croden is to be congratulated upon the capital way in which he managed the whole affair.

The special hop at Hill Crest tonight in honor of the Irishmen was one of the most successful of the season. Haney and Miller sank their first crib in front of Mrs. Hamilton's cottage on New Orchard Beach today. The occasion drew a large crowd of beachers to the scene.

Mr. Teddy Banks, of London, who has been spending the last two weeks with Mr. Alfred Pulver, has returned to his home.

Mrs. Wm. Turnbull, of The Raymond Cottage, Fraser Heights, is spending the day in London.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW TARIFF

Schedules Announced Show a Preference of 5 to 11½ Per Cent.

London, Aug. 8.—A Sydney dispatch says the new budget expounded by Sir William Lyne is regarded by protectionists as a triumph for preference, while free traders call it a sham preference. At present a close analysis of the tariff is impossible, but there is approximately an average of five per cent in favor of Britain. Premier Deakin was absent from the House through illness.

Mr. Cook, the Opposition leader, analyzed the preference lengthily. He said: "It is a tariff set up against Britain as well as against the foreigner. There is no trace in this highly-prohibitory tariff of that sacrifice which Mr. Chamberlain said is the basis of empire."

The tariff raises the duties on all the principal Australian manufactures. It embraces an elaborate scheme of duties on iron, which are subject to the passage of an iron bonus bill. Britain receives a preference of 25 per cent. There is no preference on the larger agricultural machinery, but on hundreds of machine parts Britain receives special consideration.

The new duties are estimated to produce £200,000 annually. Ellis extending protection to the consumer are promised later.

The Melbourne Age (protectionist) says many doubt the wisdom of a preference, seeing that the British Government unequivocally and even contemptuously rejected the principle at the Imperial Conference. "It is doubtful," it says, "whether it consists with our dignity or with prudence to offer a gift which the recipient treats with levity."

Another estimate of the British preference makes it average 11½ per cent, an annual value of £1,200,000.

CANDY CURE FOR LIQUOR HABIT

Health Chief Feeds Children Sweets to Avoid Future Whiskey Drinking.

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—According to Dr. A. C. Abbott, chief of the bureau of health, appetites for candy and for alcohol are kindred, and the taste for sweets precludes a craving for liquor.

In pursuit of his theory he makes a daily regular allowance of candies to his children to fortify them against the dangers of the other craving later on.

In a dissertation upon Dr. Abbott's belief Dr. J. Chalmers de Costa, the surgeon, advances the theory that twin appetites are a matter of temperament. The blonde will hanker for candy and the brunette for alcohol. This, he says, is because the brunette is more vital.

It is also asserted that with increasing freedom women are buying less candy and more liquor and that men are using more candy.

"It is only my personal theory," said Dr. Abbott, "not indorsed by any medical authority, that the appetite for candy and the appetite for alcohol are fundamentally the same, the choice of one or the other being determined by the temperamental qualities of the individual. Both sugar and alcohol are carbohydrates, with the same organic molecule, differing only in arrangement, and it is to me most probable that they both administer to the same organic craving."

"The appetite for sweets, developed, therefore, will take the place of the appetite for rum."

"The demand for candy is increasing and this is a hopeful sign. Statistics show it has increased more than 500 per cent in the last three years."

This demand for candy on the part of such a restless, nervous people as Americans is to my mind easily explainable. A person of nervous temperament necessarily expends a great amount of animal force, which is more readily supplied by such a readily oxidized carbohydrate as sugar or alcohol. For that reason I consider the child's appetite for sweets thoroughly normal. All young animals like sweet things."

A PRINCE AMONG THE DEAD

Several Aristocrats Perish in Train Wreck in Germany.

Berlin, Aug. 8.—A passenger train was derailed last night between Posen and Thorn. The two engines were overturned and three cars were demolished. The official report says that eleven persons were killed and ten were injured. Among the dead are Prince Alexander Bogotoff, two sons of Count Tryeslering, of Mittau, Russia, and a Russian captain who was accompanying them.

According to official information late tonight, the casualties are confined to Russians, Poles and Germans. The number of dead and wounded has not been increased. Several survivors who have come into Berlin declare the overturned cars caught fire and that terrible scenes ensued. Many of the passengers escaped with difficulty.

MILITARY MISHAP

Troops Hurt by Exploding Mine Near Camberley.

London, Aug. 8.—A number of troops near Camberley on Monday received their baptism of fire, being bombed by a hurricane of stones and bits of earth, thrown out by an exploding mine. Ten men of the South Staffordshire Regiment were hurt, though not dangerously.

About a thousand troops at Frith Hill had been paraded to witness the Royal Engineers of the brigade demolish a portion of a field work by undermining and blowing up. Brigadier-General Campbell, the officer in command, had the work explained to the men, who were drawn up about 1,000 yards off, which was considered a safe distance.

To everyone's amazement, the force of the explosion, instead of being upwards or downwards, as was expected, was expended in a lateral direction, scattering stones and pieces of iron and earth among the troops. Many of the soldiers were hit by the flying missiles.

The men were at once ordered to lie down, and the troops instantly obeyed. Just as a second mine was sprung. This time the shower of stones passed harmlessly over their heads.
