

HYDRO CLIQUE HAS MADE SELECTIONS.

All Depends on T. J. Stewart—West Hamilton Member Makes Statement.

- FOR MAYOR: T. J. STEWART. FOR CONTROLLERS: W. G. BAILEY, ALD. COOPER, FRANK QUINN, ALD. WRIGHT.

That is the slate the Hydro-Electric supporters propose going to the people with, providing of course that they get Mr. Stewart's consent to oppose Mayor McLaren. They have not got it yet. They are not certain that they will. The committee waited on the member for West Hamilton when he arrived from Toronto on Saturday afternoon, and pleaded with him to carry their banner. To quote Mr. Stewart's own words, the delegation got no satisfaction. He refused to give a definite answer until after to-night's Council meeting. Ex-Ald. Bailey, who was snubbed under by Mayor McLaren last January, was later waited upon, and he too, refused to give a definite answer yet.

sooner. It would be a strong inducement for me to run. One of the Hydro lieutenants is authority for the statement that, although Mr. Stewart gave the deputation no definite answer, he is certain to be in the field and it is said that he has already made arrangements by which he can lick an organization into shape on a few days notice. There will be nothing doing before next Saturday, when Mr. Stewart returns from Ottawa. The general impression is that if Stewart refuses to run there will be no mayoralty contest. The committee which is looking for a candidate, however, refuses to admit this. "There is sure to be opposition," said one of the chief moguls this morning. "Bailey will be the choice if Stewart refuses."

James Nolan, for sixteen years a city ward foreman, has declared himself in the field as controller. His platform is "The Working Man."

Dr. Roberts, Medical Health Officer, who has been in the old country for the past four months, arrived home yesterday.

READY FOR THE BATTLE.

Brewery and Distillery Owner Manage the Campaign. And Help Hotel Men to Provide Sineus of War.

Big Increase in Amount of Water Pumped.

Opinion is divided in the City Hall as to the probability of the temperance people capturing the Council next year. The hotel men have been working so quietly that it was generally believed they had no organization and would be in poor shape for the whirlwind campaign the Citizens' Campaign Committee will inaugurate this week, when Rev. Sam Small begins addressing temperance meetings nightly in the different city churches. As a matter of fact, the liquor interests here were never better prepared for a fight, and the organization has not been left to the hotel proprietors, either. The people behind it are the brewery and distillery owners of the Province. The campaign is being managed from Toronto. There is said to be no lack of funds and vigorous opposition will be waged in every city, town and village where license reduction or local option is being voted on. The hotel men and shop license holders in Hamilton have been very active in a quiet way. They say they were caught napping last year. The temperance people are equally confident. Their organization, they say, is in far better shape than it was last year, and the campaign is being handled by experienced workers, who know how to get out the vote. The success of the committee last year in electing eight men to the Council the temperance agitators believe will do much to influence the vote in their favor next January.

About the only matter likely to provoke discussion at to-night's Council meeting is the question of the motors for the beach pump house. The Hydro supporters expect that this will give them an opportunity to turn loose some of their thunder in support of the campaign to be waged from now until election day and indications point to a gabfest, such as the Council has not been treated to this year.

In a letter to the City Engineer, in which he asks that his concern be given a chance to tender on the Hydro motors, W. A. Bueke, of the Canadian General Electric Company, points out that there has been a disposition on the city's part to place the business with the Westinghouse Company, no matter what the tenders are. If the city intends doing this again, he requests that his company be notified, so that it can avoid going to unnecessary expense. Mr. Bueke says he would be pleased if Toronto would take the same interest in local firms as Hamilton does.

City Engineer MacCallum received a telegram Saturday informing him that Engineer Southman, of the Hydro-Electric Commission, will be here at 3 o'clock this afternoon to confer with the Fire and Water Committee about the electric motors.

The City Solicitor has received a copy of the order from the Dominion Railway Commission, granting the city the right to carry the base line sewer under the Grand Trunk tracks.

C. H. Moore was granted a permit today for two frame houses on Burlington street between Mary and Catharine streets, to cost $1,500.

TWO RAIDS. Inspector and Police Seized a Lot of Liquor.

Inspector Sturdy yesterday morning visited a boathouse at the foot of Simcoe street, and found a number of young men enjoying a quiet drink. The beer was confiscated, and William Loan, said to be the owner of the boathouse, will appear in Police Court on Wednesday on a charge of a breach of the Liquor Act.

Saturday night another raid was made at Fred Bagalini's house, 178 Barron street west. Inspector Sturdy and a number of policemen found six foreigners in the place, who had just started to draw the corks.

The goods confiscated totaled about 63 quarts in bottles. Bagalini has been summoned to appear on Wednesday before Magistrate Jells.

MASHED HIM. London Young Lady Beat Him and Had Him Fined $10.

(Special Wire to the Times.) London, Ont., Dec. 13.—Bert Jackson, a would-be masher, went into a local store when no one was in but Miss Edna Hall, a pretty young woman, and proceeded to mash. Miss Hall procured a big club and mashed him, threw him out of the store, and in court this morning he was fined $10 for using insulting language to the girl.

A Smoker's Christmas Box. Good cigars, that you can depend on, are sold at peace's cigar store. He has them in small boxes for 50c, 60c, 70c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50. You can select a nice box of cigars at 107 King street east.

HIS HIGHNESS IS HIMSELF AGAIN KING LEOPOLD PASSING AWAY.

Belgium's King Dying—May Operate on Him in Effort to Save His Life—May Administer Extreme Unction.

Brussels, Dec. 13.—King Leopold was reported as dying today, but the report lacked confirmation. It is known that the condition of His Majesty has reached a critical stage, but death is not at hand. A consultation of attending physicians was held this morning when it was decided that if there was no change for the better by to-morrow an operation would be performed. Another consultation will be held to-night.

Following this morning's consultation the King summoned his lawyer and a notary, with whom he had a prolonged interview, presumably relative to his will. Subsequently he received the Papal Nuncio, who brought the benediction of the Holy Father, and the Spanish Minister. Leopold's courage and fortitude in the face of death is a matter of general comment. His mind remains clear, and he insists upon talking about the affairs of state. This afternoon he summoned his youngest daughter, the Princess Clementine.

King Leopold is suffering terribly. His physicians fear the result of an operation, and should they decide to operate the patient will first receive extreme unction, administered by Cardinal Mercier, Archbishop of Mechelin.

The Man In Overalls

Do your shopping to-morrow. I am beginning to lose patience with some of you folk. There would be more good sermons preached if you were to compliment your minister when he did do something worth while. I sometimes think it would hearten him up quite a bit if the deacons would allow us to applaud when we felt like it. Of course there is always the danger of the encore fiend to guard against, also the people who might want to hiss.

I wonder if we are to get another slice of that York Loan money by Christmas eve. Now if Constable Fuller had been some coy young thing who wanted to peer into the future so as to catch a glimpse of her future husband I shouldn't have thought anything of it.

The mountain people having had their assessments increased because of their being supplied with water, it is natural that they should kick when the supply is cut off.

The Times Christmas number will be perhaps the best ever issued from this office. It will be profusely illustrated, and in colors. Not only am I in favor of Home Rule for Ireland, but I favor Home Rule for both England and Scotland, and if Wales wants it she can have it also. I mean the kind of home rule Mr. Asquith means.

It is getting so near to Christmas now that I will soon be hustling out to do my own shopping. Still, after all, I think Mayor McLaren will fill the chair next year. I imagine the Cannon street people will kick, and kick hard, against running the transmission line along there. A touch means instant death. If a lady candidate does come out for School Trustee in my ward she will have my vote without going through the formality of asking for it.

If T. J. Stewart is as slick a duck as I think he is he will content himself with a seat at Ottawa. Joe Downey will have to show a few more arguments before he can convert me to the indeterminate variety of sentences.

Jim Miller, I see, wants to be a Controller. Not for its intrinsic value, but as an evidence that he has the good of the city at heart. So far Controller-candidate Wright has not declared himself on the proposed Grand River canal route. What trick is he up to now?

It was reported around the city this morning that one of the City Engineer's clerks was seen talking to a City Mail reporter not later than Saturday last. It is expected that he will be put through the third degree to-night.

I haven't heard of Inspector Sturdy giving out any more permits to people to work on Sunday. Has he closed down on the thing? Frazzil ice. I understand is good enough for cooking with, although it lacks the substance of the dealers' ice.

Highest Golf Course in Europe. The highest golf course in Europe is that at Maloja, in the Upper Engadine. The course of nine holes, varying from 170 to 350 yards, is between Maloja and the pass which leads from the Engadine to the Lake of Como and commands lovely views of the Silser See and the snow-capped peaks; the hazards are chiefly depressions between the hills. The altitude of these links is about 6,200 feet above sea level.

The small course at St. Moritz is about the same altitude, while that at Samaden, one of the finest links on the continent, is about 5,500 feet, the next highest being that of Montana, above the Rhone valley, about 5,000 feet.

Maloja is an ideal spot for those who wish to be quite off the tourist track, and in a country like Switzerland it is not easy nowadays to get away from the crowds of August. The nearest station is ten miles away, at St. Moritz. —The Queen.

HEALTH CLUB. Dr. McConnell's Class Organizes One Here.

Dr. McConnell, of Chicago, gave the last of his course of lectures on Human Electricity at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday night. At the close of the lecture, on motion of Mrs. Newton D. Galbreath, the class unanimously passed a resolution commending the system and endorsing Dr. McConnell. A Hamilton Health Club was subsequently formed with Mr. Geo. Black as president. The McConnell Health Club in Toronto has a membership of 740 and it is expected that the local one will become a strong organization.

HAD TO BE DESTROYED. A horse, the property of Henderson Craig, a carter, slipped and broke its leg last evening in a barn in the rear of 618 Barron street east. Inspector Berlinghoff was called and destroyed the animal.

Mr. Berlinghoff has received numerous complaints from prominent citizens in Dundas about the manner in which many horses there are being overworked. He conferred with Chief Twiss, who promised to attend to the matter.

DESPONDENT ABOUT HIS POOR SISTER.

John Hannon Cut His Throat and Had Been Dead Hours When Discovered.

Despondent and tired of life, John Hannon, who boarded at 285 York street, slashed his throat with a razor, inflicting wounds of such a nature that he died before his act was discovered. His throat was cut almost from ear to ear, and he had apparently died without a struggle. He had been worrying for some time about himself and his sister. No intimation had been given by him of his intention, and the inmates of the house were unaware of the fact that he had ended his life until this morning, when a chum went to the door to call him, and discovered him lying on the floor. He had apparently been dead for some hours then. The last time he was seen alive was yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Hannon was a cigarmaker, and a number of his fellow workmen boarded at the same place, but to none of them had he ever spoken of his troubles, except to a friend he had worked with for the past three years, and to him he confided that his sister was in destitute circumstances. The body was discovered by G. Wheatcroft, who was in the habit of stopping into Hannon's room each morning when he got up. This morning he did not get up until 8.45. As usual, he went to Hannon's room. When he endeavored to enter the door would not open very wide. He finally got in, and saw Hannon lying on the floor, with his throat cut, dead. He hurriedly notified the other people in the house, and notice was sent to the police, who soon appeared on the scene. Coroner Philip was also notified, and was not long in arriving. The body was lying just where it had fallen. He had apparently walked over to the mirror upon his dresser, picked up the razor, and done the deed which ended his career. After cutting his throat he must have turned around, taken two steps toward the door, and fallen with his head near his bed and in such a way as to be near the door. The razor which he had used fell on the dresser, and was about three parts open. It was covered with blood. The cover on the dresser was pushed back. The floor in front of the dresser was covered with blood, and his two steps were plainly marked by blood stains. His foot marks were about three feet apart, and he had apparently staggered. In the room were a number of bottles near the head of his bed. He had apparently been drinking. He was fully dressed, with the exception of his coat. In his trouser pockets was found a number of small straps, which were probably used in his work. For the past week his companions claim he had been feeling unusually despondent, but they did not think he was considering such a thing as suicide. They generally conceded him to be of a bright, jovial nature, and thought his despondency would soon wear off. Hannon had a number of years ago been on a journey up north, and while there had his feet frozen. He had them amputated and artificial ones put on. He did not seem to worry about that, though, as he could walk without showing the defect to any great extent. He was a native of Ireland, but had resided in this country for a number of years. Wheatcroft had known the deceased for three years, they having learned the cigarmaking trade at the same place. Since learning the trade they had worked together, but Hannon had always seemed bright and cheerful, except when he spoke of his sister and the destitute circumstances she was in. He was 34 years of age and unmarried. Coroner Philip gave it as his opinion that Hannon had been dead for a number of hours, and had probably done the deed last night, as rigor mortis had already set in. The parents of the young man live in Dublin, Ireland. Dr. Philip considered that an inquest was not necessary.

Looking for Others.

Eric, Pa., Dec. 13.—When the sun came up today every available craft of any size put out of the breakwater here to aid in the search for possible survivors of the ill-fated Marquette and Bessemer car ferry No. 2, which has probably foundered in the middle of Lake Erie. Nine of the crew of the vessel were brought here last night through to death in a small ten-man yawl, in tow of the State fisheries boat Commodore Perry. It is believed that further boats will be picked up within the next few hours. Capt. Dryscoll, commanding the Perry, said: "I expect to find other yawls with the members of the crew of the car ferry in them. I hope against hope that I may reach the yawls if there are any afloat in time to be of real service." Officers of the Car Ferry Company have spared no efforts to locate their missing ship and shipwrecked crew. It is reported that the burial of the nine bodies recovered yesterday will be paid for by the company, and the loss in some instances falls heavily upon the sailors' families. The bodies of the nine sailor men were shipped to Conneaut today, accompanied by over a hundred mourners.

KILLED HIM. Former Hamilton Man's Death Caused by Explosion.

The death of Mr. Harry Kime, of Glen Willow, Ohio, formerly of Hamilton, and son of the late Harry W. Kime, took place on Dec. 10. The cause of death was an explosion of a powder mill at that place, where he was employed. He leaves a widow and five children, Frank, Willie, Russell, Lizzie and Pearl, all at home; also two brothers, Adrian, of this city, and Charles, of Burlington Beach, and six sisters, Mrs. Frank Drake, city; Mrs. W. Rodwell, of Toronto; Mrs. J. Vealey, Mrs. L. Hughson and Misses Rosie and Fannie, all of Buffalo. The funeral will take place tomorrow from the residence of his brother, Adrian, 194 John street north. The family has the sincere sympathy of many friends, having suffered twelve deaths in a little over three years.

SAD STORY TOLD AGAIN.

Of Man's Neglect and Abuse of Woman of His Choice. Wm. Bradley's Name Put on Indian List by Magistrate. Edward Cusick, a Real Indian, in Trouble Again.

If the old court room at No. 3 police station could repeat the tales that have been told within its four walls, they would make a good-sized volume of some of the most pathetic incidents in history. Another was told this morning by Mrs. Minnie Bradley, who charged her husband with criminal non-support. It was all traceable to the same old course, drink.

She told how she had toiled early and late for herself and family of five, while her husband had been out drinking, and each night as the hour of midnight drew near she had listened, filled with fear, for the unsteady footsteps of the man who years ago had told of his love for her in words of passionate tenderness. The father's influence is having a tendency to lead another seventeen-year-old daughter in the wrong path, Mrs. Bradley declared.

Many of the details of the complainant's story were like the second chapter of Tom Hood's "Song of the Shirt," for she said she had sat up night in and night out, mending and sewing, to be compensated at the end of the week by a mere pittance; her sole object to earn the wherewithal for the sustenance of herself and child.

Reluctantly she confessed that her husband had so far forgotten himself as to accuse her of frequenting dens of iniquity. "What does he do with his money?" she was asked by the Magistrate. "Gives it to the saloon keepers," was the answer.

She is a slim little woman, and her good looks have not yet left her. She was once a handsome little brunette. William Bradley, big, strong, showing signs of dissipation, wished the court to know that his wife is one of the most abusive of women. Many unkind things he said about her, and sought corroboration from a weeping little daughter in the witness chair. P. C. Cameron was asked if he knew defendant to be a loiterer around saloons, and the officer said he did. His Worship put Bradley on the Indian list and gave him no understanding that if he is seen around hotels he will be arrested and punished, and a further injunction was made that he must stay away from his wife.

HAMBURG'S SMOKE. Not Kickers But Mill-Owners Settling the Problem.

Hamburg has an organization for the purpose of struggling with the problem of smoke prevention, which is on lines somewhat different from any similar body yet heard of. Instead of being a band of kickers as is usually the case, it is composed of plant owners who themselves were originally the offenders and who thoroughly recognized the importance of the matter to themselves, as a measure of economy and to the city at large.

The woman who marries a widower always feels like going to a spiritualist medium to get a few pointers from the first wife.

Saved From the Sea

In vain the stranger tried to protest against being further trouble to any one. The doctor laid his finger on her lips, bidding her, smiling, "be a good girl"; and his daughter, with sweet, girlish impulsiveness, stooped and kissed the broad, clear brow.

"You are no trouble at all; and, oh, I'm so glad you are stronger this morning and will soon be up." "As soon as the clothes are ready she may," said her father, moving to the door. "By the bye, may I know your name?—mine you have just heard; and it is awkward, isn't it, not to know a lady's name in speaking to her?"

"Yes—forgive me—I should have told you, Doctor Clifford—mine is Christine Errington—Mrs. Errington." "Thanks." He bowed and went away to his own room.

Twenty minutes later, his daughter and niece, Blanche Leroy, joined him at breakfast in the sitting room, for the doctor had taken a suite on that floor during his stay in Brighton, and the latter was all eagerness to hear all about the stranger. Mimie told her, and said that Blanche would soon see her, as she was going to dress directly.

"And, father," added the girl, "she asked for a leather travelling belt she had worn." "I've got it safe, my dear; you shall give it to her; it has money and valuables in it doubtless." "Yes, she said so; she was afraid it might have been lost. Ta! ta! I'm going to help her dress; she isn't very strong yet. Oh, Blanche, she is such a beautiful woman!"

"She is the most superbly handsome woman I have ever seen," said the doctor; "and a fine quiet out of the ordinary run." "You pique my curiosity amazingly, Uncle Roland," laughed his ward, ringing the bell for the removal of the breakfast things as Mimie left the room.

"I'm going out now for a blow and a cigar, my dear," said her uncle, amused; "but I won't be long. I'll try to get some news of the other shipwrecked crew; they were all housed somewhere." "Certainly great calamities bring out the best side of human nature, and prove the Creator has not left himself without witnesses on earth in the hearts of the created."

CHAPTER III. When Clifford came back again he found his patient—still pale and languid—enveloped in a huge easy chair by the fire—Mimie kneeling on the rug, and Blanche sitting opposite with some fancy work.

"That's right," said Dr. Clifford, sitting down beside Mrs. Errington, and taking her hand. "I see my girls have taken care of you." "Oh, you are all too kind," faltered Christine; "but I shall be able to go to London this afternoon." "Go to—fiddlesticks!" said the doctor, gruffly. "Your pulse is very low and weak still, and no wonder. You don't leave here till I think proper."

"But, Doctor Clifford, please listen. I must go; you have all done to much already for a perfect stranger of whom you know nothing—Nay, hear me!" "Oh, I'll hear you, if you're a veritable sea lawyer, but as to knowing nothing—hm!—you are proud, and have a will of your own—lightly touching the resolute but tender mouth—and so have I. Physicians are autocrats, and you don't go till I choose—that's flat!"

"Doctor Clifford," said Christine, desperately. "I feel under false pretences ill, you hear me. I was not a passenger aboard the Undine, but only her stewardess, shipped for the home trip." "Very good, my dear Mrs. Errington; and an honest, respectable berth, too," said the physician, composedly. "The ups and downs of life have no law but necessity; you are none the less a well-born, well-bred lady because Dame Fortune chose somehow to make a football of you and kick you out of your proper place into the berth of stewardess; and I'll be bound you did your duty as such, too. You stuck by your ship and skipper like a brick, too!"

"That was only my duty, as belonging to the ship," she said, quickly. "One more in the other boats would have perished there. Besides, every one else has friends or relatives to mourn and suffer by their loss, and I have none, as I told you." "I scarcely took that literally—quite so literally," said Clifford, huskily, glancing involuntarily at the wedding-ring. "You are so young."

Christine saw that glance, and her teeth set close for a moment; then she said: "I meant it literally. I am twenty-four, and I—I lost my husband years ago." "Years ago!" repeated both father and daughter in a breath, as if they could not have heard aright.

them back to New York, where I was to be paid up the greater part of salary due to me. When we arrived, the husband had faded utterly—and, in fact, they all disappeared. I tried to get something before my small funds were gone, but in vain; my last reference, too, was hit, and any other was across the Atlantic. At last I had not enough to pay my passage to England. One evening I heard that the stewardess of the Undine, Red Star liner, for London, had been run over in Broadway that day, her leg badly broken, and she had been taken to a hospital; also that the boat must sail next morning, and her captain had not been able yet to get a stewardess. I at once went down to the Undine and offered myself for the berth, telling Captain Sebright the exact truth which my boarding-house people could verify. How he laughed! but he had got a lot of lady-passengers and his own wife aboard, and was in a corner; so he shipped me, and I joined that night.

"Quite an adventure," said the doctor. "Dear me—and then to be shipwrecked, and lose everything—clothes and all!" "Not much, luckily," said the fair courtiere and ex-stewardess, smiling. "I never travel with a large wardrobe, and I had sent over here before I left Paris. All I save what was absolutely necessary for the run to New York and back. And I always wore that belt with whatever money or valuables I had in it. Besides, I shall be paid, of course, directly I get to town."

"I am glad, indeed, to hear that you are not so badly off," was the hearty reply. Mimie asked: "But how came a steamer to be so helpless—such a wreck? Was the captain in fault of it, Miss Clifford?" "Not a bit of it, Miss Clifford. But we had had a very rough passage, especially up Channel; and that gale of the last forty hours was about one of the heaviest I have ever been in. If we could have kept her engines going, all might have been well, strained though she was; but early last evening she took green seas on board, and one, that nearly pooped her, rushed down into the engine-room and swamped out the fires, besides carrying away the bimini and damaging the steering gear. The engine, of course, she wouldn't keep steering way, and became unmanageable, driving helplessly before the gale—on, on to this lee shore. Then our skipper fired two signals of distress, and got the boats ready—with little hope, though, he told me, of their living in such a sea."

"Oh, how terribly frightened you must have been!" the girl cried, with dilated eyes. "No," said the other, quietly. "I did not fear. I was unconscious of any feeling but a strange, calm self-possession. I suppose I had too much to do to think of fear and death sentimentally. You see, I was a sort of sea-captain," she added, with a slight smile, "and had my poor, frightened women-passengers and young children to encourage and control. Poor things! it was hard enough to keep some of them from shrieks and confusion, which bewildered the men, and too often loses all chance of rescue. But Captain Sebright was so cool, so splendid, that it inspired everybody to be brave!" she said, enthusiastically. "It was such an example!"

"So, I suspect, was somebody's else—quite as much," said the doctor, significantly. "Then you are out of work again, Mrs. Errington?" "Yes." Clifford got up, and began walking up and down slowly, with his hands behind him, and a puckered brow, cogitating over something. "But that moment a waiter entered, and said that a gentleman wished to see Dr. Clifford; he was in the next room (used for dinner by the Cliffords).

"Excuse me, then, ladies," said the physician; and went away into the other sitting-room, where he found a middle-aged man—unmistakably seafaring—awaiting him. "Sir," said he, warmly grasping the other's hand. "I believe I owe you double thanks; for I hear that you not only helped me and my gallant fellows ashore, but you took charge of me as stewardess—a grand creature, sir!" "Ah, you are, then, Captain Sebright!" exclaimed Dr. Clifford. "I am delighted to know you, for I have just been hearing about you from your stewardess. She says you inspired them all."

"Nonsense! I only did my duty," said the other, quickly. "But she—she's a splendid woman! She doesn't know what I mean, or her means. I believe she was invaluable all the voyage, and when the gale caught us, and that awful wreck came, she was just the right hand of us all, and saved me half my life and anxiety for the passengers. She inspired us, I think. She kept up the men by a word or look—as cool as a cucumber. She kept the women quiet, under control, so that we men could act unhampered. When the boats came alongside, she stood ready, and handed them on to us at the gangway, steadily—wouldn't let 'em hurry, push, scream, and would not leave the ship till the last of us. 'Give 'em the chance, cap'n,' she said, in that determined way of hers. 'They're friends; I've none. And if you lift me in by force, I will jump overboard.' She would, too, sir, I tell you. She's as brave as my best hand-some—that Mrs. Errington!"

"I am sure of that, Captain Sebright. I hope none of your people are hurt?" "Thank you, doctor—no. All getting on well. I've been looking round after them, and arranging for their going on to London. Everybody is so kind to us shipwrecked folks! How is Mrs. Errington? Could I see her? As the company's agent will be down soon."

"Certainly. I'll go and send her in to you. And when you have settled your business, she must bring you to be introduced to my girls."

"If the ladies will excuse my unbecomingly appearance, then," said the captain, glancing laughingly at his dress. "It's dry, and that's all, doctor." "All right, captain."

And away went Clifford to send in beautiful Christine Errington, and his girls, the captain of the "Undine" had said of her. "And it confirms you in some project that popped into your head, pap," said Mimie, slyly. "Don't deny it, Doctor Silybotts."

"Miss Sauce-box," said he, "you're right. But you won't know it for a few days, when, perhaps, I'll propound my project to our good friend! Here she comes with Captain Sebright."

One thing more connected with the disaster: All attempts entirely failed to discover who was the stranger who had aided the life-boat's crew, and then rescued the stewardess so desperately. He went as he came—unknown! (To be Continued.)

WOOD PULP. Difference of Opinion as to Retaliation on Canada. Washington, Dec. 13.—House Leader Payne and Chairman Mann, of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, are not as one on the subject of Mr. Mann's bill providing for a postponement for the time when the retaliatory wood pulp provision of the Payne tariff law relating to Canada shall go into effect.

On the other hand, Mr. Payne defends the law as it now stands, and will oppose strenuously any effort to amend or modify it. Necessarily, the bill was referred to the Ways and Means Committee, of which Mr. Payne is chairman, and for the present at least it is in Mr. Payne's hands. "It is safe to say," said Mr. Payne today, "that the bill will not be reported back before the holidays."

THE HAMILTON TIMES

MONDAY, DEC. 13, 1909.

MR. FOY'S DEFENCE.

Attorney-General Foy has submitted to the Dominion Government the Ontario Government's statement of its contention why the applications for disallowance of Whitney's outrageous Hydro-Electric legislation should not be acceded to.

Mr. Foy puts forward the allegations that legislation dealing with property and civil rights is relegated by the B. N. A. Act to the Provinces. He asserts that the acts in question do not concern the interests of the Dominion generally; denies that they injuriously affect the credit of the Dominion, and declares that the Province of Ontario will not submit to any check upon what its Government may do in the matters upon which it claims the right to legislate.

Mr. Foy does not present any convincing argument to uphold the righteousness of the acts in question. The torrent of verbiage which he pours forth is devoted entirely to contending that because the subject of property and civil rights is committed to provincial jurisdiction, the admitted power of the Dominion to disallow should not be exercised, no matter how villainous the legislation of the Province should be, nor how much wrong should be done to the private individual, or to the credit of the country at large.

Whitney would, by this doctrine, be made as absolute as Zelaya. With a strong Tory following behind him, he might legislate to confiscate the property and civil rights of every Liberal in the Province, and close the courts against them, and there would be no means of staying his hand. There is absolutely no provision in the Canadian constitution, the B. N. A. Act, whereby wrong of this kind can be prevented, unless it be by the exercise of disallowance. It has been hitherto unnecessary to invoke it in such matters, because the courts were open to adjudicate upon the question of right. Whitney has, however, gone a step further, and deprived the citizen of his right to appeal to the courts, and by so doing, has made himself, in these matters, as much of a dictator as Castro or Zelaya at their worst.

All through Mr. Foy's long statement he makes much of the term "provincial rights." The question which he does not wish to make prominent is the real issue, that of provincial wrongs—wrongs so odious that they are without precedent in British countries. In examining a document so full of falsehood and evasions, it is hardly worth while to single out a special feature. But it might interest Hamilton readers to note that Mr. Foy alleges that it was not the intention of the Legislature when municipal by-laws on the Hydro-Electric question were first submitted, that the people should have an opportunity again to vote on the question of a definite contract before being tied up to a 30-year monopoly. He says the courts took the view that the people should have had such an opportunity, although this, he says, was exactly the opposite of the Government's intention. Hamilton people who were so frequently and impressively assured by the Government agents and Hydro-Electric authorities that they would not be committed to a contract by that vote, but would be given an opportunity to pronounce upon any binding contract, will be able, in the light of Mr. Foy's words, to judge of the ethical nature of the Government's dealings with them. Mr. Foy not only admits that the people were to be thus inveigled into the Hydro net, but he observes that "any other course would have invited disaster" to the scheme.

Having been guilty of the grossest of bad faith toward the people interested in this Hydro scheme, and having aimed a blow at the credit of Canada in general, the Government of Mr. Foy is a member feared to face the courts of justice. It, therefore, closed the doors of the courts against those who might appeal to them for the righting of wrongs sustained. Had such a course been taken in Turkey or in Persia, it would have created no astonishment in the world. Liberty, justice, and respect for obligations are not highly regarded or scrupulously respected in those countries. In Ontario, however, piracy, whether conducted by the prowling thief of the slums, or by the Premier of a Province, is odious, and surely falls under the condemnation of the courts of justice. But when the wrongdoer has the power and lock the doors of the courts of justice in order that they may effect their infamous purposes, what is to be done? Professor Dicey, to whom the question was submitted, saw no constitutional remedy save the exercise of the indisputed power of disallowance.

The question is not one of Provincial rights. No Province has, or should have, the "right" to do a moral wrong and deprive the citizen of his recourse to the courts of justice. Mr. Foy tries to make much of the declarations of Liberal statesmen in favor of the widest provincial latitude within constitutional limits. The Liberals have always been the party of provincial rights; but it does not follow that they should uphold a Provincial Government in doing a grave wrong, not only to its own citizens, but to Canada at large. Sir John A. Macdonald and his ablest colleagues took strong ground for the right of the Federal Government to invoke the power of disallowance to a much larger extent than was approved of by the Liberals. When, however, great and far-reaching wrongs are perpetrated, as in this case—wrongs which rob private citizens of their constitutional rights, and close against them the courts of justice—the reputation and credit of Canada is attacked and action by the Federal Government is called for in the public interest. Whitney should be given an opportunity to amend his Hydro-Electric legislation, omitting therefrom the criminal abuse which have been complained of. Should he accept such a suggestion, the matter might be allowed to drop, and, in this way, complications brought about by his unjust and immoral course might be avoided. But, should he refuse, the acts should be promptly disallowed, leaving him to retract them, if he will, omitting the vicious and un-British features complained against.

BUDGET TO-MORROW.

To-morrow will be Budget day in the Canadian House of Commons, and it is expected that the figures presented by Hon. Mr. Fielding will be eloquent of the recovery of Canadian trade during the year of which it treats. Having regard to ordinary expenditure, it is expected that the year's accounts will show a surplus of something like twenty million dollars, which large amount has been invested in the National Transcontinental Railway and other great public works which are charged to capital expenditure. Mr. Fielding last March estimated a revenue of about ninety millions. That has been exceeded by nearly ten millions, while the wise policy of the Government in contracting expenditure has resulted in a very large reduction in the outgo. It is not believed that there will be any important changes announced in the tariff. Mr. Fielding will have a story of steady advancement in Canadian trade, settlement and development to tell Parliament. The outlook for the current year is encouraging for Canadians as a people and for the Government.

CAN THE LORDS WIN?

The British election campaign now opened by the speeches and manifestos of the rival leaders bids fair to be an epoch-maker. Out of this struggle will probably be evolved something definite in the direction of fixing the status of the Lords as a branch of the legislature of the United Kingdom and giving fuller recognition to the right of the people, through their elected representatives, to deal unhampered with all matters of taxation and finance. The House of Lords as a revisory chamber has duties in the direction of fixing the status of which it may perform with advantage to the country. What it actually does is to set itself up to obstruct and render futile all efforts made by Liberal Governments to enact great measures of benefit to the people.

In the last four years, to go back no further, the Lords have done much to earn the hostility of the Commons and the condemnation of the liberty-loving people of the United Kingdom. In 1906 they destroyed the Education bill passed by the Commons by 371 to 179, and the bill to abolish plural voting, which was approved by the Commons by 335 to 106. In 1907 measures of importance to Ireland and Scotland, the Scottish Small Landholders' bill, the Scottish Land Values bill and the Irish Evicted Tenants' bill, all of which passed the Commons with large majorities, were rejected or mutilated.

In 1908 the aforementioned two Scottish measures and the Licensing bill were similarly disposed of. In the present year the Irish Land bill was mutilated, and the right of the Commons to deal with taxation and finance was challenged by the rejection of the budget.

Grant the usefulness which the House of Lords might have, no student of recent political history can avoid the conclusion that of late years its principal object has been to frustrate the efforts of a Liberal Commons to improve the legislation of the country. None will marvel at the determination of the Liberals to be freed from the odious partisan tyranny.

The present House of 670 consists of 374 Liberals, 45 Laborites, 1 Socialist, 84 Nationalists and 166 Unionists. Of those 465 are from England, 103 from Ireland, 72 from Scotland, and 30 from Wales. Of the 205 members from Scotland, Ireland and Wales, the Unionists have only 35. They can hardly hope to increase that number. It may be depressed. They must look for their gains to England, which returns 465 members. At present the Liberal majority over all parties in the House is 78. The Liberals and their allies have a majority over the Unionists of 338.

How are the Unionists to pull that down and change it into a minority? Analyze the figures: Assuming, as is generally admitted, that they will make no gains in the 205 constituencies outside of England, it follows that to succeed, the adverse majority of 338 must be offset by gains in England.

Now the parties in England stand: Liberals, 280; Unionists, 145; Laborites, 40—a Liberal-Labor majority of 175. Obviously, to overcome that majority of 338 and have only 3 of a majority the Unionists would have to win 403 seats in England, leaving only 62 to the Liberals and Laborites, who now hold 320. In other words, the Liberals and Laborites can afford to lose 100 seats to the Unionists and still have a combination majority of 138 in the House. But a loss of 30 seats would leave them with only 28 majority over a combination of all parties against the Liberals alone.

In this struggle it promises to be the Unionists against all parties in defence of the ancient privileges and modern assumptions of the Lords. The right of the people to rule is involved; and now ever it is attempted to obscure the issue the champions of free government have faith in the intelligent electorate. The British constitution is not in danger; it is only being subjected to the crucible test. It will be the better for the refining fire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If, as appears to be indicated, the British Liberals and Laborites have made a compact to avoid triangular contests, the prospects for the Unionists look pretty blue.

"Canadian Machinery" devotes two pages to Hamilton Technical School with one page of illustrations. It regards the school as likely to furnish apprentices for many of Hamilton's great manufacturing industries.

"What a Newspaper Man Saw in Britain," is the title of a pamphlet just issued, containing four contributions of the editor, Mr. J. A. Macdonald, on his impressions of the old land while a delegate to the Imperial Press Conference. It can be had on application to the Globe office, Toronto; price 25 cents.

Mr. Marshall, M. P., East Elgin, is sending out a circular letter to his constituents with the object of inducing them to oppose the Canadian policy of forming the nucleus of a fleet, and, instead, supporting the idea of voting a money contribution. The Opposition would apparently like to make the defence question a party issue, even in the face of its action of last session.

Those people who have affected to regard the National Transcontinental Railway as an improvident venture and who have scouted the idea of all-rail wheat shipments to the Atlantic coast would do well to note that last season the Canadian Pacific Railway shipped 6,700,000 bushels of wheat over its line from the Northwest to St. John, N. B. There is an enormous traffic in grain awaiting the completion of the N. T. R.

There is a great indisposition now on the part of the French people to submit to the exactions of militarism. And these objections appear to grow with the years. In 1898 there were 1,904 desertions and 4,678 refusals of conscripts to join the ranks. In 1904 the numbers were 2,216 and 4,747, respectively. In 1907 they had risen to 3,487, and 10,630. The military system is yearly growing more unpopular.

All hope of the car ferry Bessemer No. 2 seems to have been given up with the finding of the lifeboat, containing the bodies of nine of its unfortunate crew, who had died of exposure. It is feared that some of her other boats may still be drifting about the lake, but there is little chance of any survivors being rescued. This week's toll of death on Lakes Erie and Superior is 59, only four below that of all the rest of the season on the great lakes.

The New York Herald, in an editorial arguing against Canada taking any part in naval defence, makes the assertion that at this moment Canada is paying passage money for immigrants to labor in her industries, some of whom, like many of her citizens, will have to be shunted into unproductive work afloat. This statement is not in accordance with the facts. The New York Herald would do well to inform itself on these questions before setting out to lecture Canadians.

We think that Lord Charles Bessford rather overshoot the mark when he said that a Liberal victory at the election will mean the destruction of the British Empire.—Victoria Colonist (Tory).

Lord Charles Bessford's statement is just one of the class of partisan assertions which go to show the insincerity and intemperance of the British Opposition speakers. And Lord Charles Bessford had many friends among the Liberals who are sorry to see him make such an exhibition of himself.

The exhibition game of Rugby played in New York by the Tigers and the Ottawa Rough Riders appears to have been very much to the satisfaction of the football experts who witnessed it. A few seemed to take the view that it was not rough enough to suit United States crowds. That many of them did not understand it is shown by their remarks as to it not being scientific enough. All agree that it is less dangerous to life and limb than the United States game. The Tigers made an excellent showing in the score, playing a game which, at Toronto, would have left them final competitors for the championship.

Of one thing Canadians are assured. The success of the Unionists in Great Britain means the taxation of Canadian products, including wheat and foodstuffs generally. Of course, we are told that this tax will not be as high as upon foreign products. But it is a tax upon the foods which Canada exports. To that extent it will handicap Canadian trade. If the amount of the tax comes out of our farmers they will lose that much; if it does not, it will make the bread of the British masses so much dearer and be a tax upon them. We cannot benefit by the scheme, unless they suffer; and the tariff reform speakers assure the people of the old country that it will not tax them. The amount of the duty must come from somewhere. Who will pay it?

It has just about gotten so in this country that a family man cannot keep up with his running expenses without an automobile.—Dallas News.

CANADIAN TUFT-HUNTERS. (London Advertiser.) The Toronto Star says that "a man who calls himself a Tory in Canada would perhaps be a Radical in England." He could scarcely be otherwise if his human sympathies were keen. But too many Canadians in England get the "so-ciety" bee in their bonnets. CIVIC HOLIDAY. (Brantford Expositor.) The Hamilton Board of Trade is seeking the assistance of other Boards of Trade in an effort to get all the cities and towns in the province to hold their Civic Holiday on the same date. The main argument in favor of having a day that commercial travellers are inconvenienced by the workings of the present system, but a powerful objection to it is that the railway corporations could not provide car accommodation if all the holidays came at once. In this connection, it may be asked, is there any good reason why the custom of having a Civic Holiday should be retained, seeing that Labor Day now comes at the same season of the year?

CANADA AND NAVAL DEFENCE. (Vancouver Sun.) The arguments against a direct contribution are based upon both constitutional grounds and those of expediency, while those against the establishment of a Canadian navy are advanced almost entirely from the standpoint of the latter. Joseph Martin, K. C., describes it as a tin-pot navy, while Sir Charles Tupper, in an open letter addressed to the Hon. R. L. Borden, warns the nation to adhere to the compact entered at the Imperial Defence Conference and he says that all that is necessary for the Canadian Parliament to do is to implement its own resolution on the subject and to proceed with the building of the navy. Sir Charles thus gives a hearty endorsement with that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

TRIPPING UP "SPEC." Rebuking a Course Inspired by Prejudice. (Goderich Signal.) The Spectator may say, why are we to imagine that the British authorities would employ Canadian money or Canadian ships in a cause that Canada could not endorse? Our reply is, why should the Spectator or anyone else imagine that the Canadian authorities, controlling the Canadian fleet, would ever refuse to place that fleet when required at the disposal of the Imperial authorities?

The trouble with the Spectator is that it cannot get rid of a notion that while there is a Liberal Government at Ottawa Canada is in danger, somehow or other, of being committed to some "disloyal" course. This is a notion for which there is no reason, but prejudices are not built upon reason, have no relation to reason, thrive best, in fact, when they have no contact with reason. It is of no use to remind the Spectator and its kind of the vast growth of Imperial sentiment in Canada under the Liberal Government, and of the palpable manifestation of this sentiment in the tariff preference to Britain and in the assistance given to the British cause in the Boer war—actions without precedent in the history of Canada. The creation of a Canadian navy is really another step in the same direction. The Government's course is dictated by Imperial considerations, not by a narrow Canadianism. Canada does not need a navy for herself; she is embarking upon the new policy from a sense of obligation to help in bearing the burden of empire.

VICE-PROVOST OF TRINITY.

Dr. Lloyd Spoke Strongly Against Gambling. Preached in Christ's Church Cathedral in Morning. Addressed Men's Meeting in Red Mill in Afternoon.

Yesterday Rev. J. P. D. Liwyd, D. D., provost of Trinity College, Toronto, addressed two large gatherings of interested people and had messages which he endeavored to impress upon his listeners.

In the morning he spoke at Christ Church Cathedral and selected for his text, "Peter's Obedience." He said, looking back to the years of long ago, it meant considerable for a man to follow Christ, but Peter had done so. They were among the years of discovery. It seemed as if the conditions surrounding Peter at the time referred to, were carefully studied and applied to the present. It was a departure in Peter's experiences. Not only were Peter and the young church of Christ strengthened by his decision, but the civilization, the hinge of progress turned on it. It rested with him to answer the question whether modern civilization should be Christian or pagan. The strategic hour was when the decision was made and the word of Christ was planted among the people of the world. Ever since that time there has been a forward movement until the present day, when a similar question remained to be answered by the Christians. The Church confronted the crucial question. To answer such a question would need that God be asked for guidance.

In the afternoon Mr. Liwyd addressed a large gathering of men in the Red Mill Theatre, under the auspices of the brotherhood of St. Andrew. He spoke more of personal experiences, and held out the warning for the young man to avoid anything which might tend to lead him to a lower level, especially emphasizing the drinking and gambling evils. He said love was a strong factor in everyday life, as it should be exercised not only in the home but on every available occasion. Love was the founder of the Divine life, of which the human life was the reflex, and not only that, but the motive power. In a literary way love was usually the main theme upon which the story was hinged, and because of that such works were more read than any other. It was merely a form of showing human affection. If a Christian loved his fellow-men it would necessitate that he give consideration to the claims of others upon him. Love was exercised in a good many ways. When the sinner fell other hearts also dropped—pulled down by their thoughts of him. Life was more like the trees in the forest. If one fell it would drag others down too, so it was with human beings. The gambling spirit should not be entertained as it disrupted and took away the love from the home. In Alaska, even preachers had been seen to lure the young men to the bar table, and in so doing drag them down. The drink habit should not be formed by the young man. If he started drinking, his mother, who thought so much of him, would be pulled down to her grave with him, as well as many others who loved him. In closing he advised all to turn away from the demon sin and exercise the spirit of love toward one another.

Bishop DuMoulin, who acted as chairman, said the church was not opposed to the workingman, but his friend, and was always ready to assist him in every way possible.

PROF. JACOBS. Former Associate of D. L. Moody Spoke Here Yesterday. Professor Frederick Jacobs, the famous gospel singer of New York, and who for fifteen years was singing evangelist with D. L. Moody, preached a stirring and impressive sermon in Gospel Tabernacle yesterday in the presence of a congregation which filled every seat which could be placed in the sacred edifice. Even then all who wished to attend the service could not be accommodated, many remaining standing and others being turned away at the doors. Professor Jacobs selected at his text Paul's words in the fourteenth verse of the last chapter of Galatians: "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." The address was brief and indicated the evangelical tendency of the mind of the speaker. Paul, he said, was a great man in his day, and his mind had been turned toward statesmanship or other secular things he would have excelled by far in power and mind the great men of the past century. But luckily for the world to-day Paul became a faithful follower of Jesus Christ. Three themes were dealt with in the discussion of the text, first, the shame of the cross; second, the accomplishment of the cross, and, third, the victory of the cross.

In the afternoon Professor Jacobs delivered a similar address to the members of the P. S. A. Brotherhood in First Congregational Church, and made a heartfelt appeal for the better life. On both occasions he sang many sacred solos, which added interest to the sermon.

When a Scotsman answers a question he settles the matter in dispute one for all. On a certain occasion the question was asked: "Why was Mary Queen of Scots born at Linlithgow?" Sandy Kerr promptly answered: "Because her mither was staying there."—Human Life.

Citizens' Campaign Committee Receives Some Good Reports. Rev. Dr. J. V. Smith was the special speaker at a meeting of the temperance workers of the city, held in the Citizens' Campaign Committee's rooms, 39 James street south, on Saturday evening. The whole success of the campaign, he thought, depended upon the calibre of the men who were in the field, and if they had the right men they had the strongest foundation that could be laid. In a brief manner he gave the history of the temperance movement during the past twenty-five years, and predicted that the time had come when something definite was going to be done. The attitude of large corporations towards the liquor traffic was a great advantage. There were very few, he said, who would employ a man who used intoxicants. Scientific instruction on the evil of intoxicating drink was also an advantage and a safeguard to the children. The custom of having liquor at public functions was dying out, and its abolition was being ordered by some of the leading men and women of the world. The speaker doubted that prohibition could be secured by one stride, but he believed that with the right men in the council it could be done, step by step.

Alderman Thomas Morris, George H. Lees, J. M. Peregrine and G. H. Mills gave brief addresses, expressing confidence in the workingman, but his friend, and was always ready to assist him in every way possible.

BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT.

First Meeting Held in Hamilton on Saturday.

Major Campbell, of Toronto, Explained the Work.

Daughters of Empire Will Organize a Local Council.

The Boy Scout movement is rapidly taking hold in Hamilton, as was evidenced by the large meeting in the Board of Trade rooms on Saturday afternoon called by the Daughters of the Empire to hear Major Campbell, of Toronto, who has been actively associated with the movement in Canada, and at present has charge of the Toronto corps, which has been doing such good work along the lines suggested in Baden-Powell's book on scouting. As a result of the major's talk it is likely the city will soon have a scout council for the purpose of starting a corps. A motion was passed at Saturday's meeting leaving the matter of electing a council in the hands of the Daughters of the Empire. As soon as it is started it will take the responsibility of organizing corps and looking after them after they are organized. Already a corps has been started in a small way, and has had four practices.

Mr. Campbell said the Boy Scout movement was started in England in 1907, and the part it would take in building up the Empire. Baden-Powell, in starting the movement, did not do so hurriedly, but after careful consideration and study, so that when he wrote his book it contained all that appeared to him to be the best of the possibilities in it, and the part it would take in building up the Empire. the intention of helping along the work by forming a corps so that the movement has a strong footing in Hamilton.

MISSION IN ST. MARY'S.

Brought to a Successful Close Last Evening.

Fine Address on Perseverance by Father Caton.

Brilliant Scene and Large Crowd at Cathedral.

Myriad soft glowing incandescent lights bathed the sanctuary of St. Mary's Cathedral last night in a flood of brilliance, glittering on the golden vestments of the clergy, and throwing into striking relief the wealth of floral splendor that adorned the high altar. It was an impressive and inspiring scene for a congregation that filled the big edifice to overflowing. The occasion bore double significance. It marked the ending of the Dominican mission and the close of the forty hours' devotion.

All day the Host remained enthroned on the tabernacle for adoration, and throughout the afternoon members of the Catholic societies, sanctuary boys, and members of the congregation went there to worship. In the evening the Blessed Sacrament was carried in procession around the Church by His Lordship Bishop Dowling. The Papal benediction was bestowed by Rev. Father O'Connell, one of the Dominican missionaries, and the closing sermon was preached by Rev. Father Caton.

"Perseverance" was the theme of an eloquent and impressive discourse, in which the missionary exhorted those who made the mission to remain steadfast in their resolution to retain the grace of God, that they might merit the glorious crown of immortality. There were five messages of persevering, he said. The negative means were to avoid human respect and avoid the occasions of sin. The positive means were prayer, devotion to the Blessed Sacrament and devotion to the mother of God. It was a sad declaration that the virtuous should try to hide in the presence of vice. He rebuked weak Catholics, who, through fear of human respect, shrank from virtue to turn to vice. "You belong to the church militant," he said, "a fighting church, the greatest organization in the world, not only as a spiritual organization, but as a human institution, a church which for two thousand years has been the bulwark of society, and which commands respect."

Catholic theology, he said, taught that one must not only avoid sin, but the danger that led to sin. The uncertainty of life and the length of eternity were two points specially emphasized. If men would only grasp the thought that when they die they would be judged eternally, and that before plunging into sin. Some of the new altar adornments, including the metallic bouquets imported from Paris, were used for the first time.

FATAL BAPTISM.

Toronto, Ky., Dec. 12.—One man is dead and six others are under arrest, as a result of a fight at the house of Michael Markle, during a Polish christening celebration late yesterday. Geo. Korpa, 29 years old and recently married, was stabbed through the heart.

BAND AT ASYLUM.

A most successful concert was given at the Asylum for Insane by the band of the 91st Regiment on Friday evening. The features of the concert were Master Gordon Flett—Highland dances, Miss Pauline McPherson, elocutionist, and Mr. John Glebe, cornet soloist. The band deserve much praise for their work. After the concert refreshments were served and a dance indulged in by the employees and bandmen, music being furnished by the Asylum Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. W. Erchaka.

WOMAN'S ART PLANS.

The Woman's Art Association met in the Board of Trade rooms on Saturday. Mrs. Calder, president, in the chair. Plans were discussed for securing a permanent studio, to be open to all artists. The society has a special fund in the hands of trustees to furnish and equip an art gallery, where artists can work, exhibitions be held, lectures given, etc. It has long been Mrs. Calder's wish to see an art gallery in Hamilton and this plan is to lead to that end.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. D. C. Hossack Preached There Yesterday.

Educational Day in All the Baptist Churches.

Sunday School Anniversary in Centenary Church.

The fifth anniversary of the induction of Rev. J. A. Wilson as pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the third anniversary of the new church, was fittingly celebrated yesterday at both services. The preacher for the day was the Rev. D. C. Hossack, M. A., L. B., of Toronto, formerly pastor of Deer Park Presbyterian Church, that city.

Inspiring addresses were given at both services. In the morning the speaker took his text from the Acts 2, 47, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." He first emphasized the might of the early church growth as a result of its energies. He said that important planks in their platform were: The law of infection, that is, members coming in contact with one another; sincerity of the members of the church; willingness to help others, and the unobtrusive nature of their work, coupled with the resourcefulness of the methods employed. He said in those days they were not tied down by any particular system. If they found that a method did not suit them, they soon adopted another. Mr. Hossack explained that no church could succeed without the grace of God working their work, coupled with the resourcefulness of the methods employed. Mr. Hossack explained that no church could succeed without the grace of God working their work, coupled with the resourcefulness of the methods employed.

In the evening the text was "And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elishus the prophet and none of them was cleansed saving Naaman, the Syrian." From that text a fine sermon was preached.

EDUCATIONAL DAY.

Prof. A. L. McTrimmion, LL.D., of McMaster University, spoke yesterday morning in James Street Baptist Church and in the evening in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on "Educational Work of Our Denomination," and was greeted by good congregations at both services.

To have any influence in the country, he said, it was necessary to be educated, and therefore it was important that education should be all. With education a broader view of all things was taken, not only of this life but of that which was to come. The study of science was the study of the wondrous works of God. Christian education was not mere secular knowledge, but was the lasting power of God in the hearts of men, which compelled them to take an interest in their fellow men. In referring to the educational work of the denomination the speaker said that it was necessary to have educated ministers if the people were going to be educated and it was a very difficult thing to procure men who were efficient. The Baptists were rather fortunate, as they had a large number of theologians and ministers, who were impressed on them that not only should the minister be educated, but also those who occupied the pews and who bore the responsibilities of the church. One was as essential as the other, if the world was to be evangelized. Christian education also called for Christian teachers, who by their influence and example would show to the children the path in which they ought to tread. All missionary and social work depended on the educational activity and if that was not attended to it would weaken all mission work, which was the most important question of all. It was necessary, he said, to have a strong appeal to all to help financial institutions that were doing such important work among the students.

Yesterday morning Wentworth Street Baptist Church was crowded with an attentive audience to hear Prof. Matthews, who had been elected, as a result of a strong appeal to all to help financial institutions that were doing such important work among the students. He outlined the work that had been accomplished and the intentions for the future. He said that while the work in the past has been successful they were re-adjusting it so that it would be more advantageous. He spoke of the work of Moulton and Woodstock Colleges was especially noticeable, but the work that had been accomplished at McMaster University could not be overlooked.

Mr. Matthews delivered a similar address at Herkimer Street Baptist Church last night and the church was well filled to hear him.

CENTENARY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It was quite in harmony with the fitness of things that the Sunday school executive should invite Rev. E. B. Lancelotti, pastor of First Church, to preach to the people of Centenary on Sunday morning. He made fitting reference to the time of his boyhood days spent in that Sunday school. He said the influence thrown around his young life started him in his Christian career, and turned his feet in the path of duty in the Christian ministry. Mr. Lancelotti took no text, but gave an address full of wit, wisdom and originality. He first called the attention of the children to Santa Claus at Xmas time, and gradually led their young minds up to the great Father, the Giver of every good. The preacher spoke of the supreme value of the common things of life—of air, light, love, etc. He told a good story of a circumstance or dream in the life of the great Lincoln. As the great liberator passed, someone remarked that a common looking creature he was. "Lined with the Giver of every good, looking for common looking people, for he has made so many of them." The preacher then facetiously remarked, "What a comfort this is to some of us." Mr. Lancelotti then referred to the beautiful flowers present, and asked the children to name the flowers of the field. The roses in the majority in the choice. The preacher said his choice was the common dandelion, and gave many good reasons for that choice. He asked the children to give a reason why if two sparrows were sold for one farthing, five were sold for two farthings. One little fellow said, "One was grown in to make the bargain." Here the preacher made a strong, practical point to show that the weaker may become the stronger, and the reflector become the greatest good when consecrated to the service of God. The address was most timely and much appreciated by the people of Centenary Church.

A man sometimes fails because he isn't quite up to things when they are up to him.

ESTATE CASE.

Grimby Townships Suit at the St. Catharines High Court.

(Special Despatch to the Times.)

Grimby, Dec. 13.—In the High Court opening at St. Catharines to-day the North Grimby Township case of Gibson v. VanDyke came before Chief Justice Falconbridge. Elizabeth VanDyke, who in her lifetime was the wife of Delos V. VanDyke, late of Grimby, was some time prior to her death in 1896, and at the time of her death, entitled in fee simple, subject to the life estate of the said Delos VanDyke, to 190 acres of land in North Grimby Township. Mrs. VanDyke was survived by her husband and two daughters, Ethel Gibson and Joan VanDyke. Mrs. Gibson, the plaintiff, states that in 1905 the defendant, Arthur Edward VanDyke, her uncle, came to her and said her father desired to obtain some money on his life lease of the property, and that he (the defendant) would get her father some money to do so, but he could not let his brother have the money unless the plaintiff transferred her interest to defendant, stating that she could trust him, and that to raise the money he would require her to transfer her interest to him. The property is worth at least $3,000.

The next day both she and her sister, she says, transferred their property to defendant, not being aware that it was an absolute assignment of their rights, but believing that this would allow their father $500 on his life interest. Their father received $500 from defendant, and also gave defendant an insurance policy to the amount of $1,000 in the C. O. F. In 1907 the plaintiff's father died intestate. Defendant collected the insurance and took charge of all the property without accounting to the plaintiff and her sister, the plaintiff says, in her claim.

The plaintiff desires to recover possession of the property, to establish her title to an undivided one-half interest in the said property, and to recover the rents thereon; also that the defendant account for the proceeds of insurance money and shares of stocks he has converted to his own use.

The defendant states he has conveyed the property to the plaintiff and her sister, and denies that he has converted any moneys to his own use. Gibson, Osborne, O'Reilly & Levy for plaintiff; Crear & Crear for defendant.

THE STEEL FIGHT

Iron and Steel Workers Confer With Gompers.

Federation of Labor May Help in Fight Against Co-operation.

Pittsburg, Dec. 13.—"We are desirous of helping the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers in this contest with the United States Steel Corporation, and will do all in our power to that end." That was about as far as Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who is here for the conference to-day on the situation of the strike of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers against the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., a subsidiary of the Steel Corporation, would say when asked for a statement relative to what he was prepared to do. There are about 150 delegates here, and Mr. Gompers said that it would not be right for him to discuss the plans unless they had been presented to the conference.

The conference at the Monongahela Hotel was called to order by President Gompers. Among the early arrivals were James McConne of Washington, D. C., President of the International Order of Machinists; W. D. Mahon, of Detroit, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees; Wm. Byrnes, of New York, President of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers.

Made for life and air,
Now to lie where no man's lore
Can restore,
You that were, and are no more!

As devoured my brain

Ere a bride,
You so young and morning-eyed,
You so young —Walter Headlam.

REVISION OF THE BANK ACT.

External Examination.
In connection with the approaching revision of the Bank Act, the important question of the necessity for external examination of banks is discussed in a pamphlet issued by H. C. Copies of the pamphlet will be supplied free by any of the Branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Amusements

The audience that assembled in the ornate hall of the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon for the third open recital of the season given by the pupils was enthusiastic and demonstrative, although in numbers was not so large as at the previous recital given two weeks ago. MOVING PICTURES.

There was a great line of moving pictures last Saturday in Association Hall, which proved a strong attraction to lovers of this form of amusement. The pictures were of a fine color, and well put on, and told thrilling tales of adventure and travel, some most pathetic, others ridiculously funny, carrying the audience again and again from the sublime to the ridiculous; from tears to laughter. Besides intensely interesting and instructive pictures, there was a program of thoroughly enjoyed songs, which was thoroughly enjoyed. The management will have an entirely different programme next Saturday afternoon and evening.

THE ARRIVAL OF KITTY.

"The Arrival of Kitty," the musical farce, will be the attraction at the Grand next Friday night, seats for which go on sale Wednesday evening. The company presenting this clever comedy is said to be an unusually good one, and the performance far surpassing any previous productions of the madcap farce.

GRAUSTARK.

Owing to the engagement of Graustark at the Grand next Saturday being so close to Christmas, the management has arranged for a reduction in the scale of prices. This is the big production of the popular play, which goes into Toronto for Christmas week. It is the dramatized version of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel and tells a thrilling story of love and romance. Seats will be on sale Thursday.

A COMEDY, WITH MUSIC.

"The Time, the Place and the Girl," which comes to the Grand next Monday, is designated as "comedy with music," not a "musical comedy." The classification implies that it has a plot and characters of its own, and a degree of excellent acting, found even in straight plays. Of course, there is a pretty love story and several very novel characters. The sale of seats opens Friday morning.

AT BENNETT'S.

One of the most attractive features booked for the Bennett house this season is the "Models of the Jardin de Paris," which will be seen heading the bill this week. It is one of Billie Burke's big acts, a miniature musical comedy, built on original lines and elaborately staged with special scenic and electrical effects. A company of ten clever people, featuring Carroll Henry, the well-known comedian, present it. The press notices from papers in the large American cities credit it with being one of the best top liners in vaudeville this season. The bill will also include El Coto, the xylophone expert; the Brennan-Dowling Company, in an amusing little farce; Ethel Whiteside and her pickaninnies; Jean Robb and Company, the Canadian entertainers, presenting Cute Character Courtships; Hanley and Jarvis, conversational comedians and the three Ernests, in a great comedy horizontal farce. The Brennan-Dowling sketch will be one of the principal contributions. It is said to abound in sparkling dialogue and laugh provoking complications. Much interest will centre in the re-appearance of Miss Robb, the Canadian girl, in her cleverly arranged and elaborately staged singing and dancing sketch, which has been revised and improved since seen here earlier in the season. New and interesting motion pictures will be shown.

NO CHANGES OF TARIFF,

But Mr. Fielding Will Have Large Surplus.

Trade With the United States Shows an Increase.

The Payne Tariff the Only Unknown.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—No tariff changes, and a record surplus will probably be the features of Hon. Mr. Fielding's budget statement in the Commons on Tuesday next. It is understood that the Government, pursuant to the policy of tariff stability, which has been followed since 1896, and in view of the fact that there is no very serious demand for any change in the tariff this session, has decided to let well enough alone, and for this year at least there will be no change in the tariff beyond that consequent upon the coming into force of the new Franco-Canadian trade convention.

It is, moreover, deemed inadvisable to touch the tariff at present pending the outcome of the present uncertain fiscal situation in the United States, and the possible, though very improbable, application of the maximum schedules of the Payne-Aldrich tariff against Canada next spring in case any phase of the Dominion's fiscal policy should be held to be "undue discrimination against the United States."

It may be added, however, that in Government circles here it is believed that mature consideration of the trade relations of the two countries and the general desire of the business interests on both sides of the border to prevent any serious dislocation of the present conditions of international trade will operate to preserve the present fairly satisfactory situation. It may be noted that the actual working out of the Payne tariff in respect to its effect on Canadian trade shows for the first two months of its operation an increase of about eleven millions in imports from the States to Canada, and an increase of about two and three-quarter millions in exports from Canada to the States, as compared with the corresponding two months, August and September, of last year, under the Dingley tariff. These increases are practically proportional to the general increases in imports and exports due to the recovery from the commercial depression of last year. So far as can be gauged by the trade figures of the first two months of the Payne tariff, therefore, there is apparently little change in the trade relations of the two countries consequent upon tariff revision across the border.

This bears out the opinion expressed by those who studied the new tariff when it was before Congress—namely, that apart from the maximum tariff proviso there was no very noteworthy reason why Canada should be either elated or depressed over the changes in the American tariff wall.

In respect to the financial aspect of the budget, the Finance Minister will be able to present a splendid statement. Revenue has increased at a much more rapid rate than Mr. Fielding dared hope for when he made his budget speech last March. He estimated then a probable revenue for the current fiscal year of about ninety millions. Present indications point to a revenue of close to a hundred millions, or an increase of something over one million per month. Expenditure for the year, on the other hand, will show a very large decrease, the estimates passed last session providing for a reduction of about nine millions on consolidated fund account, and about thirteen millions on capital account. The net result of the Government's financial administration for the year should show, therefore, a net settlement of something over thirty millions in the balance between total revenue and total expenditure as compared with 1908-09. The surplus of revenue over ordinary expenditure should run up to considerably over twenty millions, leaving only part of the expenditure on the National Transcontinental Railway to be met out of capital account.

The debate on the budget will probably last until the Christmas adjournment on Friday next, leaving the naval bill to be the first matter to be dealt with when Parliament re-assembles on January 12.

IN A SOAP BOX. Enquiry Results From Improper Interment of Illegitimate Child. Port Hope, Dec. 12.—An arrest may follow the burial of an infant daughter born to Florence Paden, aged 20 years, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Paden, Sullivan street. The young woman was unmarried. The infant was born on the 6th inst. and the birth registered by Dr. A. G. Aldrich. Tuesday, the mother says, the baby died from convulsions when the grandmother placed the remains in a small soap box and a boarder, Albert Ginsburg, aged 22 years old, took the box and buried the body in a yard to the rear of Blacklock's grocery. Ginsburg denies being the father of the child. To death certificate was asked for, and upon the autopsy to-morrow will depend much in regard to the actual cause of death. Recently there occurred the death and proper burial of an infant child, only five days old, of Mrs. James Paden, mother of Florence, in contrast to the alleged ignorance of a burial law displayed by Florence Paden and young Ginsburg.

Some Advice About COLDS

Take warning from the first sneeze and check a cold before the lungs are affected. An effective remedy for coughs and colds is made by mixing a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine with two ounces of Glycerine and eight ounces of pure Whiskey. These ingredients can be bought in any first-class drug store and easily mixed together in a large bottle. It is claimed that teaspoonful of the mixture four times a day will break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable. This formula is highly recommended by the Leach Chemical Co., of Windsor, Ont., in whose laboratories the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine is prepared.

NINE BODIES IN A YAWL.

Picked Up by Commodore Perry on Lake Erie

From Missing Car Ferry Bessemer No. 2.

Terrible Harvest of Death on Lakes During the Season.

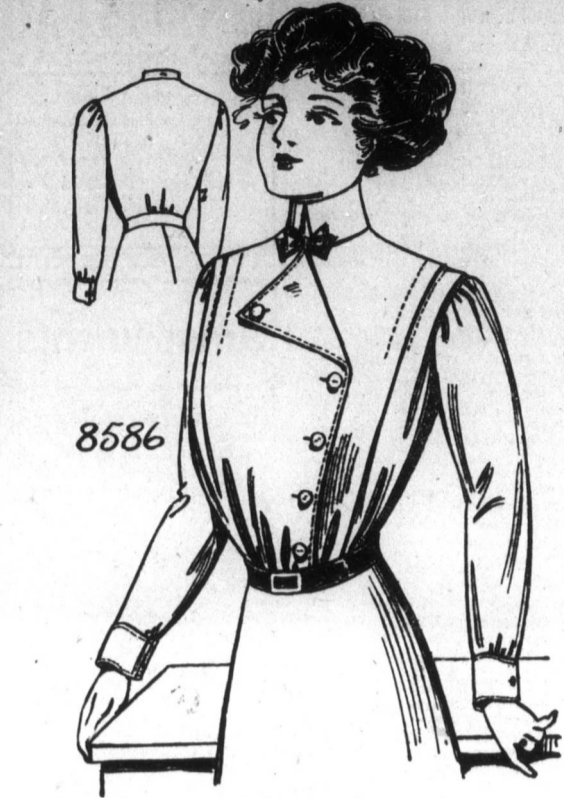

Windsor, Dec. 12.—With the recovery to-day of ice-encrusted corpses of nine members of the crew of the ill-fated car ferry Bessemer No. 2, all hope was abandoned that the vessel had weathered the storm and was in shelter. To-night officials of the Marquette & Bessemer Dock and Navigation Co. gave out a statement saying that the vessel and its crew of thirty-two had undoubtedly been engulfed in the waters of Lake Erie during the storm of last Tuesday. The bodies of the nine sailors recovered to-day were picked up in one of the Bessemer's lifeboats at a point midway between Erie and Long Point. All were frozen stark and stiff, and had apparently been dead for several days. Other lifeboats are believed to be drifting about the lake, and the search for them is still being continued assiduously with tugs in hope that some more bodies may be found. Officials of the company incline to the belief that the direct cause of the Bessemer's foundering was the breaking of the key which supports the loaded freight cars to the deck, thus allowing the entire deck load of heavily-loaded cars to rush to the vessel's stern and founder her keel.

The bodies, which were taken to Erie by the State fisheries boat, Commodore Perry, which found them, were identified as follows: G. R. Smith, steward; Conneaut; F. Steele, fireman; Conneaut; J. Shank, fireman; Conneaut; J. Hart, oiler; Conneaut; H. Thomas, second cook; Port Stanley; J. W. Sonars, waiter; Conneaut; Chas. Allen, coal passer; Conneaut; William Ray, coal passer; Conneaut; Sharp, seaman; Romoau. When news of the recovery of the bodies reached Conneaut this afternoon solemn public services were held in several churches. For three days and nights the wives, mothers, daughters and sweethearts of the members of the ill-fated crew had haunted the docks, pining little heed to the bitter winds which swept across the lake, and eagerly drinking in every little piece of intelligence from searching parties. When the dreadful knowledge that the vessel was undoubtedly lost with all its crew finally forced itself upon them, the scenes were simply heart-rending. The whole town of Conneaut is in mourning to-night. The officers and crew of the ferry were young men, and the fourteen who resided at Conneaut were highly esteemed. The Canadian shore is being patrolled to-night in the expectation that some bodies may be washed up, but this is all that is hoped for. The bodies of nine unfortunate men, said to-night of the finding of the yawl: "There was a heavy sea running at the time we sighted the yawl, and we had some difficulty in reaching it. As we made her out without glasses, eight of the men were sitting up in the boat, their life-preservers strapped about their shoulders. The ninth man lay at the bottom of the boat frozen to the silt flooring. The faces of the men were bloated. Their clothes were heavy with frozen water. We did not attempt to take the dead men on board, as we feared the tiny yawl would capsize if my men boarded it. The yawl was therefore taken to town to this place."

Thomas, the cook, was the only man who had worn an overcoat. The eight bodies were dressed in overalls and jumpers, indicating that the departure from the car ferry had been hurried. In the bow end of the boat was found complete clothing for one man, and it is the belief that the yawl originally contained ten men and that one, becoming crazed, had discarded his clothing and jumped into the icy waters of Lake Erie. Of this city, Treasurer of the Keystone Fish Co. and the Bay State Iron Works, was a passenger on the ill-fated boat. His relatives and friends had not yet given up hope until the yawl containing the nine men was towed into the port. As yet his body has not been found. The officers of the car ferry company give up all hope.

Detroit, Dec. 12.—A special from Ash-tabula Harbor, Ohio, to-night says: The big Canadian Pacific Railway ferry Ash-tabula, which runs between Port Burwell, Ont., and this port, went hard aground this afternoon just outside her Canadian dock. The vessel carries a full complement of load cars, and in the event of a storm coming up her position is extremely hazardous, owing to the possibility of the deck load shifting. The Ash-tabula lies squarely across the mouth of the harbor and about five hundred feet from the shore. Superintendent Buchanan, of the Canadian Pacific fleet at Owen Sound, has been notified, and ordered several powerful wrecking

FIFTY-THREE LIVES LOST. Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 12.—The terrific storm which passed over Lake Erie Wednesday and Thursday reaped a harvest of human lives and more than $1,000,000 worth of shipping property. Late reports show that fifty-three lives were lost, that twenty sailors were rescued, that four boats were destroyed, and that one is aground and badly damaged.

The summary shows: Steamer Clarion burned, fifteen lives lost, six saved; steamer W. C. Richardson, sunk, five drowned, fourteen saved; car ferry Bessemer No. 2 wrecked, thirty-two lives lost; steamer Johiah G. Munro aground, attempting to rescue sailors from the Clarion; two barges sunk, no lives lost; sailor from the Richardson, crazed by exposure, committed suicide.

There is now practically no chance that any of the thirteen members of the crew of the Clarion have survived. Two of the crew are known to have perished.

THE SEASON'S HARVEST OF DEATH. Detroit, Dec. 12.—With the certainty that the men of the steamer Clarion and the Marquette & Bessemer car ferry No. 2 have gone to their doom the toll of death taken by wind and wave since the official close of navigation on the great lakes one week ago falls but four short of the official season's total. Sixty-three men were the count a fortnight ago. This week's death list—33 on Lake Erie and six on Lake Superior—already is 59.

This total of 122 lives lost in 1909 is far from four times the total of last year, when 33 men found watery graves as the result of storm and stress.

BARGE CRUSHED BY ICE. Detroit, Dec. 11.—A special the The Free Press from Sandusky, Ohio, says: After a terrific battle with the ice, the steamer Huron City arrived at Huron to-night, bearing the crew of the barge Charles Spademan, of Marine City, which went down in thirty feet of water about a half mile southwest of the South Bass Island light last night. The rescued were Captain James Bond, of Marine City; Mate Frank Robinson, of Port Huron; Charles Richardson, a seaman, of Marine City; Miss Gertrude Struebeling, stewardess, of Marine City.

With the Spademan in tow, the Huron City left Huron harbor Friday afternoon. Both vessels had cargoes of coal, and were bound for Marine City. Near Put-in-Bay they encountered ice, which stove a hole in the Spademan. In ten minutes there were four feet of water in the barge's hold. The Huron City was quickly put about in the storm and lashed to the sinking schooner. Lines were put down, up which Miss Struebeling and the three men climbed to safety.

The Spademan went down ten minutes after the crew left her, and this morning all that could be seen of her was her spars. The Spademan is owned by M. Sieken, of Marine City.

William Stevenson, an employee of the M. C. R. shops, at St. Thomas, was run over by an engine in the yard there on Saturday night, and one leg was so badly crushed that amputation was necessary.

William Hartwich, of Hershel Township, was crushed to death while working at a portable sawmill. He was held in a big log in position when his foot slipped and the log rolled over on him, crushing him so that he died in a few hours.

MAN SUICIDES. Daniel Campbell, Delirious, Plunges Into River at London. London, Ont., Dec. 12.—Just back to his home city, after three years in the west, Daniel Campbell, aged 30, lost his life in the Thames, near Adelaide street bridge, Saturday afternoon. His outer clothing was found on the river bank, his watch on the ice and the indications point to suicide while delirious. Campbell had been ill for some time. High Constable Hughes and other county constables recovered the body with grappling irons at 10 o'clock this morning. Campbell has relatives in this city and was on his way from the depot, after returning from British Columbia. Plans are now being laid for a nonster four days' celebration to be held about the third week of June on the occasion of the semi-centenary of the Queen's Own Rifles. The desire is to have the co-operation of the 15,000 ex-members of the regiment, who have largely made it what it is, as well as the presence of the 1,000 members who now fill its ranks.

KILLED BY A DOG. New York Clerk Torn by Bull Terrier While in a Fit. New York, Dec. 12.—When Mrs. Emma Scheurman returned to her flat in Harlem to-day she found her pet bull terrier, Buster, covered with blood and whining under a table. Passing to an adjoining room she was horrified to find her brother, Carl Limper, a clerk, 43 years old, stretched out dead on the floor, his face horribly mutilated by the dog's teeth. It is believed that Limper, who was subject to apoplexy, fell unconscious and was attacked by the animal. A kindness done to the good is never lost.—Plautus.

Young Grand Trunk Fireman Struck by Train at Bradford. Bradford, Dec. 11.—Mason Drury, a young man firing on the Grand Trunk, running out of Allandale, was accidentally killed here last night. It is thought he stood too close to the main line, and was struck by the steps of the train. He died in about fifteen minutes, before medical aid could reach him. The body was taken by a special train to Allandale, and will go from there to his home in Grimsby. He had been firing only about two months, and was previously employed at Allandale as telegraph operator and ticket clerk. A matrimonial agency is Cupid's mail order house.

ONTARIO POWER ACT DEFENDED BY FOY.

Justification For Hydro-Electric Legislation—Many Authorities For Whitney's Position.

Toronto, Dec. 13.—"The people of Ontario take their position on the positive and unshaken foundation formed by the British North America Act and the decisions which have been indicated, and in agreement with the principle laid down by the present Minister of Justice, and respectfully submit that for upwards of two hundred years the Lords and Commons of Great Britain have legislated without fear of the royal veto, although its existence has been undoubted, and, therefore, in full accord with the spirit and genius of British institutions, the people of the Province entitled to all the rights of British subjects elsewhere, as free, as has been practically pointed out by the Minister of Justice, to legislate within their jurisdiction as the Lords and Commons of Great Britain are free to legislate, cannot submit to any check upon the right of the Legislature to legislate with reference to subjects within its well-defined jurisdiction, although a technical right to disallow may exist. Any other view would mean that there are different grades of British subjects in the Empire; that the people of the several Provinces of the Dominion have not and are not entitled to the full and free enjoyment of those civil rights and liberties which are enjoyed by British subjects in the mother country, a condition of things which would be intolerable."

STATEMENT SENT TO OTTAWA. He writes Hon. J. J. Foy, the Attorney-General, speaking for the Government of Ontario, in submitting the defence of the Province to the application made to the Federal authority for a disallowance of Ontario's Hydro-Electric power legislation. The statement is dated Dec. 7, and was forwarded by the Lieutenant-Governor to the Secretary of State last week.

WITNESSES TO PROVINCIAL RIGHTS. The document is gauged broadly along the lines of the inviolability of provincial right, and in support of its contentions the Attorney-General has summoned the evidence of Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. Edward Blake, Sir John Thompson, Hon. David Mills, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, and Hon. A. B. Aylesworth. He has cited the judicial declaration of the Privy Council that the Ontario Legislature had "exclusive authority to make laws for the Province," and that, within the limits of legislation for provincial purposes under section 92 of the British North America Act, "the Local Legislature is supreme, and has the same authority as the Imperial Parliament, or the Parliament of the Dominion."

HISTORY OF POWER POLICY. From the broad constitutional aspect of the case the Attorney-General passes to a detailed analysis of the legislation called in question. He gives a resume of the evolution of the Government's power policy. He recites the genesis of the movement among the municipalities, the history of its development and expansion, and its adoption as a provincial undertaking by Sir James Whitney and the Government. He has cited the investigations of Hon. Adam Beck and his initial fellow-commissioners. The Government, Mr. Foy states, took action because "the investigation of this commission made it clear that power could be produced and sold at a much lower rate than was being charged by the companies," and the permanent Provincial Commission was appointed at the solicitation of the municipalities themselves. He directs attention to the fact that "the commission is not competing in any sense with the companies." Under the provision of the statutes it is acting merely as the agent of the municipalities in producing for them cheap power and transmitting it to them.

Hon. Mr. Foy attaches significance to the fact that opposition to the Government procedure developed after the Electrical Development Company failed to secure the Provincial contract. He relates that tenders were called for and the lowest accepted, after opportunity had been given the objection. "The Attorney-General states," "was at any time made by the action of the Government until after the lower tender of the Ontario Power Co. had been received and accepted."

TO AVOID DISASTER. Touching the legislation confirming by-laws and contracts, the Minister points out that it was not the intention of the Legislature in decreeing the initial legislation that another vote should be necessary in the municipalities. This, however, was not understood by the municipalities, and following a judgment "exactly the opposite of the expressed intention and desire of the Legislature," the municipalities affected petitioned the Government to correct the defect created by the judgment. "The circumstances were exceptional," observes Hon. Mr. Foy, "and any other course would have invited disaster. Such legislation is not unusual under the circumstances. "No vested right or right of or to property of any kind is in any way affected by the act in question," is the declaration of the Attorney-General. Had the actions in question gone on, he points out, and the plaintiffs succeeded, they could only have delayed the municipalities and perhaps gained costs. As to the question of payment of compensation by the commission for easements, Mr. Foy intimates that if there is any doubt—which he disputes—it can be made clear by the Legislature at its next session by a declaratory act.

QUOTES BRITISH PRECEDENT. Dealing generally with enactments precluding appeal to the courts, the Minister points out that in the legislation submitted by the British Government to the House of Commons during the current session there are no less than thirty-four instances of constructive substantive legislation, in each of which it is provided that there shall be no appeal to the courts in matters directly affecting rights of property, whereas the power commission amendment act, 1909, was incidental legislation and was passed at the request of municipalities affected by the judgment referred to, and in order to make clear and carry out the intention of the legislature in passing the act of 1907 and 1908. "There is nothing unusual in such legislation," is Mr. Foy's comment. The Attorney-General scores the allegation of some of the persons asking for disallowance, that the financial credit of the Dominion will be affected by the legislation in question. "The claim is unfounded and contrary to fact," is his brief comment, in support of which he quotes Mr. Byron E. Walker, President of the Bank of Commerce; Mr. William Mackenzie and Mr. E. B. Osler, M. P. The three financiers in question are cited as declaring that Canadian and Ontario credit in England was never higher.

Much regarding the history of the power project and the data and conditions which precipitated the legislation under challenge, the Attorney-General admits, is germane to the question of disallowance, but he deems it well to refer to some of the occurrences leading up to the present situation, "having regard to the great volume of misrepresentation given to the public by those selfishly interested themselves in the attack upon the power of the Provincial Legislature."

Hon. Mr. Foy, in summing up the case, refers significantly to the disallowance asked for as possible "interference" with Provincial rights, a condition of things which, he declares, would be intolerable. In concluding he emphasizes the fact that he has penned the document with "an appreciation of the very grave and serious consequences which must inevitably follow" such interference.

THE PROVINCIAL POSITION. That the Provincial legislation under challenge is wholly legal and constitutional, that it does not clash with the legislation of the Dominion Parliament, nor does it affect the interests of the Dominion generally, are the premises upon which the Attorney-General bases his claim that it cannot be interfered with. The act, he states, "deals with property and civil rights in the Province or Ontario—matters which are by the British North America Act, section 92, clause 13, given to the Legislature exclusively to make laws in relation thereto."

The language of Sir Oliver Mowat, when Premier and Attorney-General of Ontario, upon the question of the disallowance of a Provincial Act, is quoted. "I repudiate the notion," said Sir Oliver, "that it is the office of the Dominion Government to sit in judgment on the right and justice of an Act of the Ontario Legislature. Likewise Hon. Edward Blake, when Minister of Justice, in reporting a petition for similar disallowance, said: "The undersigned does not conceive that he is called upon to express an opinion upon the allegations of the petition as to the injustice alleged to be effected by the Act. This is a matter for the Local Legislature." Sir John Thompson, when appealed to, took like ground, that action was "within the undoubted legislative authority of the Legislature of the Province."

FINDINGS OF THE COURTS. Reference is also made to concurring judgments by the courts. Decisions by Mr. Justice Osler and Judge Casault are cited to show that veto can only be pronounced when the law asserted encroaches upon the prerogatives of the Sovereign or of the Imperial or Federal Parliament. Sir Barnes Peacock, delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Hodge vs. The Queen, 9 app. cas., page 132, is cited as declaring: "When the British North America Act enacted that there should be a Legislature for Ontario, and that the Legislature of Ontario should have exclusive authority to make laws for the Province and for the Provincial purposes in relation to the matters enumerated in section 92, it conferred powers not in any sense to be exercised by delegation from or as agents of the Imperial Parliament, but authority as plenary and as ample within the limits prescribed by section 92 as the Imperial Parliament in the plenitude of its power possessed and exercised. Within these limits of subjects and area the Local Legislature is supreme, and has the same authority as the Imperial Parliament or the Parliament of the Dominion."

Lord Herschell, delivering the Privy Council judgment in the case of the Attorney-General of Canada vs. Attorney-General of Ontario et al., 1898, A. C. page 713, went even farther. "The suggestion," he found, "that the power might be abused so as to amount to a practical confiscation of property does not warrant the imposition by the courts of any limit upon the absolute power by legislation conferred. The supreme legislative power in relation to any subject matter is always capable of abuse, but it is not to be assumed that it will be improperly used; if it is the only remedy is an appeal to those by whom the Legislature is elected."

THREE MINISTERS OF JUSTICE. Reference is also made to the decisions of three Canadian Ministers of Justice in such cases. Hon. David Mills, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick and Hon. A. B. Aylesworth. In 1901 Hon. David Mills declared that he was not concerned with the policy of the Provincial measure in question. "It is no doubt intra vires of the Legislature," he found, "and if it be unfair or unjust, or contrary to the principles which ought to govern in dealing with private rights, the constitutionality of the measure is not affected by the Acts of the Legislature may be ultimately judged by the people." A year later, reporting upon British Columbia legislation, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick said that the Federal Government could give no relief without affirming a policy which required it to "put itself to a large extent in the place of the Legislature" and "cede the propriety of its Acts relating to matters committed by the constitution to the exclusive legislative authority of the Province."

HON. MR. AYLESWORTH'S VIEW. Concluding his quotations, Hon. Mr. Foy cites Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, the present Minister of Justice, who, on the application to disallow two Ontario statutes on March 1 last declared: "These are considerations entirely for the Provincial Legislature. It represents the people of the Province; its members are elected by the same electors who send us to this House, and I certainly seek to put every Provincial Legislature, within the scope of its jurisdiction, as laid down in the B. N. A. act, upon an absolutely level footing with the Parliament of Canada itself so far as legislation is concerned." Proceeding, Mr. Aylesworth said: "My view 'was and is that any measure of this sort is one in regard to which the only appeal from the Provincial Legislature ought to be to the people who elect that Legislature, and who, if they please, may depose the Government of the day and deprive it of power."

MEETING SPECIFIC COMPLAINTS.

Dealing with the specific complaints of the petitioners, the Attorney-General points out that the Legislature validates irregular by-laws nearly every session, and that this power is undoubtedly acknowledged to be beneficial. Replying to the reference to the use of the waters of the Niagara River as being under the control of the Dominion, he contends that by section 109 of the B. N. A. act the soil of the river to the international boundary line and one chain reservation along the river bank is the property of the Province. The rights of the Dominion over the river are only so far as it is navigable, its non-navigability at the points in question being apparent and notorious. The question of the right of the Ontario Power Co. or any other power company to take water from the river without leave of the Dominion, Mr. Foy submits, a matter between the companies and the Dominion, and not in any way affected by the legislation sought to be disallowed.

If, as is also alleged, the manner in which the towers and wires are constructed and will be operated constitute a crime—an allegation Mr. Foy declares to be erroneous—he points out that it can be properly dealt with by the criminal law, the Hydro-Electric Commission being no more exempt from its provisions than other corporations.

ORATORY FOR TEMPERANCE.

Young Men Speak at Sunday Night Mass Meeting.

Large Gathering at Erskine Church to Hear Them.

Ward 4 Temperance Candidates Were Present.

A mass meeting was held last night in Erskine Presbyterian Church school room, after the evening service, under the auspices of the Citizens' Campaign Committee. The speakers were Robert J. Menary, Frank A. Parlington and Walter W. Lee, three young men from the Hamilton School of Oratory.

Mr. William Brown was chairman, and introduced the speakers. The object of the meeting was to advance the cause of the Citizens' Campaign Committee, in securing the election to the City Council of those candidates in each ward, the committee has been nominated on the temperance ticket.

"A Fallacy of the Twentieth Century," was Mr. Menary's subject. He said the liquor traffic was one of the exhibitions of the colossal stupidity. It has had a bad character through the centuries and medical men and broad-minded politicians have each and all declared liquor to be detrimental to the community in every respect. The speaker then hurled verbal missiles at the liquor business by arraigning facts and figures to show what a disturber of the peace it is, and how it eats away the vitals of society. In conclusion he said the revenue acquired from the traffic was largely eaten up by the cost of administering justice, through the trouble the traffic caused. "It is a disgrace to Hamilton and we should not allow money to go into the city treasury that has been the damnation of so many," said the speaker.

Frank A. Parlington spoke on "License Reduction." He also had many strong things to say about the traffic. The reduction of licenses, he said, would be the reduction of drunkards. The first step to better local accommodation would be to reduce the bars. He urged that party differences be put aside on January 3, and vote for the temperance candidates. He deplored the fact that there were three times as many bar rooms in Hamilton as in Toronto in proportion to the population.

Walter W. Lee's subject was "The Appeal of the Rising Generation." He said the means of removing the curse of the liquor traffic was in the hands of the present generation. They alone could give the rising generation the chance they ought to have. He said there are 15 hotels that are a nuisance to the city. By reducing the temptation the consumption would be reduced. He drew a long, harassing word picture of drunkards and attendant crime. Mr. Lee said the removal of slums was up to the voters of to-day. They can reduce them by sending them to the City Council who will be opposed to drink in every way. If the evil is not removed it will become a burden on the community. Mr. Brown said the Citizens' Campaign Committee had got three men in the field for controllers, namely, Aldermen Cooper, Lees and Peregrine. Mr. J. Williamson and Dr. Davey, Citizens' candidates for Ward 4, were also on the platform.

CHILDREN BURNED.

Joseph Brazier's House Near Eganville Destroyed.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—The three infant children of Joseph Brazier, a Renfrew county farmer, living near Dere, between Renfrew and Eganville, were burned to death this morning in a fire which destroyed the house. Mr. Brazier had gone to a neighbor's farm, and his wife was in the barn milking, when the house took fire, presumably through the children playing with coals at the kitchen stove. When the fire was discovered the flames had such a hold on the house that the horror-stricken father and mother were unable to effect an entrance. The eldest child was a boy of five years of age and the other two children were respectively three years and one month old.

THE BRITISH CAMPAIGN.

Austen Chamberlain Criticises the Premier.

The Suffragettes Will Fight For Votes For Women.

Tory Candidate Chased From Meeting at Denbigh.

London, Dec. 12.—A majority of the Woman Suffrage Societies have issued plans of campaign. The National Union, comprising 105 affiliated societies, will support only candidates who declare in favor of woman suffrage in their election addresses. These will be supported regardless of party.

The Unionist Women's Association, on the other hand, will put Unionism first to this extent, that they will not oppose any Unionist, but will not work for any who does not favor woman suffrage.

The militant Suffragists cast aside all considerations except votes for women. The retiring members of the Cabinet will be opposed "because they have had the opportunity to do justice and have refused to use it." All known anti-Suffragists will be opposed regardless of party.

Where both candidates favor the women, the militants will support or oppose neither, but will conduct a militant campaign of protest against any Government being elected without the consent of women.

Neither Prime Minister Asquith's speech nor Mr. Balfour's manifesto can be said to have much advanced the political situation or to have markedly stimulated interest therein. Both men expect in the House of Commons itself, but neither possesses to any conspicuous degree the gift of stirring to the depths popular enthusiasm outside. Mr. Asquith, of course, had a magnificent reception by his great and unanimous audience, but the top note of enthusiasm was only struck twice during the evening, once when Mr. Lloyd-George entered the hall, and again when he arose to propose a vote of thanks to the Prime Minister.

Judging from Friday night, the Radical enthusiasts look upon him as the real leader, not the Prime Minister. It is difficult, even impossible, to confine the issue of a general election to one question, but Mr. Asquith's speech made it evident that the Liberal party will endeavor to keep the attack on the House of Lords to the forefront. Other interests must be considered and the usual promises to any conspicuous degree not dwelt upon. The most pronounced of Mr. Asquith's speech was contained in the words: "The will of the people as delicately expressed by their elected representatives must, within the limits of the lifetime of a single Parliament, be made effective."

While saying he favored a second Chamber, Mr. Asquith, beyond the words just quoted and his declaration that "the absolute vote must go," gave no indication of how his party proposed to reform the present second Chamber. Opposition critics say that the Radical party amounts to a single Chamber, while Mr. Asquith's supporters, in the words of the Daily News, declare that "Campbell-Bannerman's classic resolution outlines the only practicable manner in which the problem can be solved." This means what at the time was described as the "young, going, good method," to submit the bill to the House of Lords, and then for the House of Commons to make it a law despite the Lords' rejection.

Though it is generally believed the Unionists will keep the question of the House of Lords in the background as far as possible, Mr. Balfour gives it first place in his manifesto, but admits that "the House is capable of improvement. The rest of the manifesto shows the Unionist campaign will follow the lines suggested by the posters which are already appearing upon the hoardings all over the country, attributing the poverty, non-employment and the despatch of provisions to the Liberal Government and free trade.

The chief effect of the impending fight felt in London thus far is the rustication of the Christmas season. Hostesses cannot get the right people together, the theatres are suffering, and until Christmas is over politics is regarded as somewhat of a nuisance. CHASED TORY CANDIDATE. London, Dec. 12.—The feature of the Conservative meetings during the past week has been the number of Peers who have come forward to support the candidates, and the storms of interruptions and generally good-natured chaff to which they have been subjected. But a more serious incident occurred at Denbigh last evening, when the audience broke up a Conservative meeting, chased the candidate out of the building, and kicked the Conservative agent unconscious. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, the ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer, up to the present has been the only Conservative leader actively in the field.

TO BEAT UNIONISTS.

Liberals and Labor to Avoid Triangular Contests.

London, Dec. 12.—One of the most important facts in connection with the election campaign is the tacit compact between the Government and the Laborites to avoid triangular contests where a Unionist might be beaten. Both parties deny that such an arrangement has been made, but its

AT EBENEZER.

Fine Gospel Address by Young Convert Last Evening.

Ebenezer Hall was well filled again last evening with an attentive congregation, and those who were present were amply repaid for their journey through the storm, for the speaker, Wm. Donnelly, a young man still in his teens, gave a stirring address, his subject being "Can God Save All Men?" "Billy," as he is familiarly called by "the boys" of Ebenezer, was really the beginning of the revival which swept through East Hamilton in the fall of 1907. He was not, of course, the beginner of the service. Next Thursday evening Wm. Kerr will speak on "Prayer," and it is expected that Wm. Crook, another convert of the '07 revival, will speak on "God's Great Whosever" next Sunday evening.

The young preacher showed from Scripture that God not only could, but would, save all men, and it is man's own fault if he is not saved, as Christ Himself expressed, when He said, "Ye will not come unto me, that ye might have life"; and again, "Oh, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that stonest the prophets, and killest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thee together, even as a hen gathereth her brood under her wing, but ye would not." There were three baptisms at the conclusion of the service. Next Thursday evening Wm. Kerr will speak on "Prayer," and it is expected that Wm. Crook, another convert of the '07 revival, will speak on "God's Great Whosever" next Sunday evening.

Five deaths resulted from the inauguration of the ice skating season on Saturday in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Four of the victims were boys who had ventured on thin ice. The fifth was Charles Bell, of Camden, N. J., who was skating with his twelve-year-old son at Forest Lake Park. Three men died of suffocation and twenty-one others were overcome late last night as a result of a peculiar accident at a mine of the Shoemaker mining Company, fifteen miles northeast of Johnstown, Pa. All are foreigners.

THE GAME CREATE GREAT ENTHUSIASM

THE CANADIAN GAME MADE GOOD IMPRESSION.

The Jungle Kings Defeated Their Eastern Rivals by a Score of 11-6—An Army of Experts Were Present.

"It is not brutal enough for the American public," was the verdict of one of the experts, after witnessing the exhibition of Canadian Rugby given by the Tigers and Ottawas at Van Cortlandt Park, New York, on Saturday. This opinion was held by several of the followers of the American game, but all admitted that certain rules and plays would be adopted, to the advantage of the American game.

While there is little probability of Canadian Rugby being adopted as a game by the Americans, next season is sure to see a number of the most important points of the Canadian game used by the Yankees. It is a difficult matter to revolutionize the ideas of football fans, as well as other people, and to even get the American critics to admit that the Canadian game is full of possibilities is accomplishing more than was expected.

While the main object of the game was to convince the Americans of the superiority of Canadian Rugby, the interest locally was more in the outcome of the contest. Although the Rough Riders won the championship of the Inter-Provincial, the majority of the local fans were unconvinced that the better team did not come out on top, and Saturday's contest proved this opinion right. The score of 11-6 is not a correct indication of the play. The Jungle Kings were at least twenty points better than their eastern opponents, and had they, like Varsity, been supported by a crowd of about two thousand rooters a big score would undoubtedly have been run up.

As a natural result of the lateness of the season and the fact that the players of both teams broke training three weeks ago, the men were not in the best of condition, and consequently did not play as strenuously as they generally do. With no championship or other stake to win or lose, it was not to be expected that the boys would play with their usual zeal and energy, but even without this incentive Saturday's game was as interesting, from the spectator's standpoint, as any seen in the "Big Four" this season. Both teams took big chances on long passes and trick plays that it is doubtful if they would attempt in a championship game, and from the first until the final whistle the contest was as open as could be desired.

One feature which appealed to the Americans was the punting. Especially were they impressed with Simpson's kicks from close up to the scrimmage. They could not understand how a man could punt so close to his own line, and the schoolmaster came in for considerable praise. The passing and dodging were other features that were received favorably. Along the touchlines when Awrey would make a pretty, long pass or Art Moore make one of his famous zig-zag runs, expressions of "Look at that pass!" and "Whatcha know about that dodging?" and "Look at that fellow run!" was heard on all sides.

The crowd assumed the "show me" attitude when the teams trotted on the field, but as soon as the game got well under way they grew enthusiastic and showed their appreciation of each good play by applauding. Especially pleased were they in the third quarter when the half backs of both teams warmed up and pulled off some startling passing and running plays. In this quarter the crowd began to root, and from then until the end of the game one fact was very clear—the Canadian game made a hit with the spectators, notwithstanding the half doubtful opinion of the American experts.

It is a difficult matter to work up enthusiasm in a crowd that has no personal interest in the result, and it stands to reason that only the merits of the game and the individual brilliancy of the players could accomplish this.

Considering the time of the year, the weather conditions were remarkable. The sun shone brightly, the field was in good condition, not too hard, and it was not cold enough to interfere with the players or detract from the interest. It was estimated that between twelve and thirteen thousand persons saw the game, and a fair percentage of them were Canadians, as small Canadian flags worn by several of the spectators gave evidence.

Van Cortlandt Park is about seven miles from the King Edward Hotel, which the Tigers made their lair while in Gotham, and the players were driven to the scene of the game in yellow and black taxicabs, while the vehicles used by the Rough Riders were black and red.

In the evening the players were the guests of the New York Herald at the Hippodrome, after which they were tendered a banquet at Keen's English Chop House. Short addresses were made by Dr. Nagle, Dr. W. G. Thompson, Adam Zimmerman, King Clancy, W. H. Ward-roppe, K. C. and Mr. James Evans, a prominent American football referee. Mr. Evans referred to the fact that there was not a single ambulance call during the game and at no time was some battered and bruised young man hauled out of a pile of humanity, placed on a stretcher and taken where an arm or leg or a few ribs could be put back in place. For this very reason, he said, the game may not have appeared so exciting as some of the games played on the American side of the border during the last season, but the persons present saw snappy playing, and the ball was in motion and in sight so much of the time that they knew at all times the progress of the contest.

The Tigers took about twenty players to Gotham, and the majority of the spares were given a chance to play. One of the most effective men on the field was Don Lyon. He gave a remarkable exhibition, and outshone Bert Stronach, the famous Ottawa outside wing, by an appreciable margin. He was under the ball at all stages of the game, and tackled unerringly. Time and again he brought down the Ottawa backs before they could get away, and his following up and sure tackling gained a lot of ground for the Jungle Kings.

"Punk" Thompson, the fast intermediate, was given his first opportunity to show what he could do in senior company, and did not prove a disappointment. He got down the field as fast as Lyon, and was almost as deadly in his tackling. Every man on the team played a good game, and few fumbles or mistakes were made. Stronach was closely watched by Turner and Bramer, and was not as conspicuous as usual. This method of marking the big Scot was used by Varsity, and proved to be most effective.

Ben Simpson's booting leg was in the best of form, and not once during the game did he kick into touch. In the punting duels Williams lost ground. Ottawa was on the defensive during the greater part of the game, and the Ottawas were really fortunate that a larger score was not run up on them. On one occasion "Dutch" Burton got the ball about twenty yards out from the Ottawa line on a long pass, and with practically a clear field before him had almost gone over when the quarter time whistle blew. On another occasion when Williams dropped the ball when tackled, Bramer gathered it in and went over for a try. However, as the Ottawa captain yelled "held" as soon as he was tackled the score was not allowed. Jack Grey bucked through the line in the last quarter for a gain of twenty yards, and would possibly have crossed the line had not some fan hollered that the umpire's whistle blew.

On Ottawa despatch says: Considerable interest was manifested locally in the Ottawa-Tiger exhibition at New York, but while the majority looked for another Ottawa win, their defeat did not come as a surprise. The team made only feeble efforts to get into shape, although some of the men worked hard, and apparently the Inter-Provincial champions did not enter into the match with as much seriousness as they would have cared had anything been hinging on the result.

Local interest seemed to be centred more around what the American critics would think of it than the result itself. And while the majority of the United States catches express approval of some parts of the game, ridiculing the suggestion that the C. R. F. U. rules be substituted for those of the American Football Union, it is quite evident that they have been forced, despite their natural prejudice against the Canadian game, to admit that there are many features in Canadian Rugby from which they can get pointers. Few expected Stagg, Walter Camp or any of the others to endorse Canadian football in its entirety, because that would probably spell disaster for them. However, the exhibition seems to have been a fairly good one, and undoubtedly the clean lines of the play will wield a powerful influence over the United States rule makers when they convene in December.

Many in Ottawa believe that an exhibition between the Varsity and Queen's teams would have been more beneficial from a spectacular standpoint. The Varsity team demonstrated when it played in Ottawa that it was a combination of speed, strength and brains. Varsity are the only real opponents of modern Canadian football, and the Queen's team, it is said, are not far behind them. Few here believe that the Canadian game will ever step in and oust that of the republic to the south, yet they contend that the American rules should be modified. Many are also of the opinion that the statements of the American coaches that there are "too many idle men on the field in the Canadian game" will carry weight, and that the Inter-Provincial and Inter-Collegiate Unions will, in the near future, reduce the teams to ten or twelve, and make the play even more spectacular than it is at present.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE NEWSPAPER EXPERTS.

American Authorities Are Divided on the Advisability of the Adoption of Canadian Rules in the American Game.

The New York Herald, commenting on Saturday's demonstration, says:

"From every standpoint yesterday's game of Canadian football, played on Van Cortlandt Park field, under the auspices of The Herald, was an unqualified success. To the more than twenty thousand persons who witnessed it, most of them strangers to the game as played across the border, it was interesting. To the most representative group of American football experts ever gathered together at one game it suggested possible reforms in the American rules.

"It was a success also in demonstrating that the open style of play appeals to an American crowd. Without pride of locality or any personal interest in either team the crowd, cold at the start, was 'rooting' wildly once it began to appreciate the fine points of play. "That the effect of yesterday's game will be felt when the Rules Committee meets is the consensus of opinion of the experts, most of whom had never seen the Canadian game at its best."

When the two teams, of fourteen men each, appeared on the field, there was no enthusiasm on the part of the spectators. One reason for this was that the personal element, which accounts for a large part of the enthusiasm in the United States games, was entirely lacking. The members of the teams were strangers to practically all the large crowd, which was at that time in a Missouri-like attitude and wanted to be shown.

What the crowd did see was two teams of clean cut, well set up young men who would have been a credit to any college,

American and Canadian Teams May Give an Exhibition.

It is not only possible but probable that Canada's champion Rugby team will journey to Syracuse next season to meet the University of Cornell team in an exhibition game, one half of which will be played under Canadian and the other under American rules.

At the banquet held on Saturday night at the English Chop House, Mr. J. A. Evans, one of America's most competent football officials, and Mr. W. Seymour, President of the Inter-Provincial League, had a discussion on the possibility of bringing American and Canadian teams together in an exhibition game so as to test the prowess of the teams, and give the critics a better chance to compare the two styles of play.

Mr. Evans was of the opinion that such a game could be arranged, and said that he had information to the effect that Cornell would be willing to take on one of the Canadian teams in an exhibition game.

The possibilities of the scheme were discussed by Mr. Evans and Mr. Seymour expressed the intention of wasting no time in arranging such a game for next year.

Mr. Walter Camp, Yale's athletic adviser and member of the Football Rules Committee, as played by the Hamilton-Ottawa teams, football is much less dangerous than that played in the United States. Of course, you cannot tell how dangerous the game would be if played by Americans. In both games there is possibility of injury. The openness of the play by the Canadian teams makes serious injuries less likely to occur than would be the case under American rules between two American teams, and on the whole I believe that there is much to be learned from a close study of the Rugby game. There is no doubt in the minds of football men as to the inadvisability of retaining some of the present rules. There have been too many serious accidents, and the rules must be changed. I feel that a more open game should be adopted. There are many things about the Rugby game which I admire. One of these is the freedom in punting. The rule which allows a man a free kick is a good one, and tends to make the game more open. Many of the recent amendments in our rules have been made to procure this result. In the matter of tackling

THE AMERICAN EXPERTS GIVE THEIR OPINIONS.

Messrs. Walter Camp, A. A. Stagg and Others See Points in Canadian Rugby Game Desirable For Adoption.

Expert opinion given by veteran football players was unanimous in commendation of Saturday's exhibition of the Rugby game as a sport less dangerous to life and limb than the game in the United States. The open character of the play, with its punting and running passes, made a distinct impression upon the critical spectators, and it was the general opinion that the exhibition would lead to many reforms in the rules governing the game in the United States.

While the comment was not altogether favorable to the substitution of the Canadian Rugby game for that now played in the United States, it was said that the exhibition of the Canadian game would go a long way toward saving football from being expurgated from the lists of sports and that the substitution of some of the rules of the Rugby game would greatly reduce the percentage of injuries and fatalities.

Mr. Walter Camp, Yale's athletic adviser and member of the Football Rules Committee, as played by the Hamilton-Ottawa teams, football is much less dangerous than that played in the United States. Of course, you cannot tell how dangerous the game would be if played by Americans. In both games there is possibility of injury. The openness of the play by the Canadian teams makes serious injuries less likely to occur than would be the case under American rules between two American teams, and on the whole I believe that there is much to be learned from a close study of the Rugby game. There is no doubt in the minds of football men as to the inadvisability of retaining some of the present rules. There have been too many serious accidents, and the rules must be changed. I feel that a more open game should be adopted. There are many things about the Rugby game which I admire. One of these is the freedom in punting. The rule which allows a man a free kick is a good one, and tends to make the game more open. Many of the recent amendments in our rules have been made to procure this result. In the matter of tackling

I cannot see much difference between the games. We throw our men harder, but the rules governing the tackle are the same. Most of the injuries are caused by tackling, and the substitution of the Rugby game would not be of much benefit in this respect. The increased punting which the Rugby game permits would make hard tackles less frequent and thus lessen the likelihood of injury to the players. If the English style of playing was adopted in this country it would be less spectacular and therefore less interesting. It would not be so popular as the present game, and I do not believe that the game as a whole will ever be adopted, although some of its features, especially the kicking part, may be adopted. The running passes, which were a feature, have been tried in the United States and have proved successful where they were used by a strong team against a weak opponent. Yale has used the play, and I believe it will be worked up next year, so that it will be one of the features in championship games. As a whole the exhibition has been a most interesting and instructive one. The interest of the spectators throughout the whole play shows that Canadian Rugby football has its fascination.

Mr. Alonzo A. Stagg, coach of the University of Chicago football team: There is no doubt that the Canadian Rugby game is more open than our game, but it is a question in my mind as to whether this openness is an advantage. The play seems to be loose and the element of chance enters into it very strongly. Take, for instance, the case of a fumble. In our game, a fumble is, nine times out of ten, a very costly blunder, but in the Canadian game it is very disadvantageous to the team that muffs the ball. There does not seem to be enough stress laid on the importance of accurate and scientific play. In other words, the game does not seem to be so well developed as is ours, but I hesitate to give any unqualified opinion because I do not understand the game thoroughly. One point which I like is the many long and accurate passes and I think that this might be developed in our own game to advantage. Another good point is the punting. This has been developed to a remarkable degree, and the way punts are got off from directly behind the line of scrimmage is simply great. When it comes to the lack of interference for the runner I think that is very bad. Perhaps it eliminates some of the possibilities of injury, but it does away with one of the salient features of the game as played in our colleges and keeps a number of men out of each play. On the whole, I do not think the Canadian game an adequate substitute for the American game, but I do believe we could take a few lessons from them as well as profit by some of their errors. Their tackling is ragged and very inaccurate, but that could be remedied by constant practice. What few mass plays were executed this afternoon were every bit as dangerous as ours.

Mr. G. J. Geer, a former tackle at Princeton: As a kicking game, Rugby far surpasses the American article, and I suppose many people will say that it is superior to the first idea of the sport that ours. The Ottawa Hamilton teams have shown us that there are other phases to the sport than at present understood by the American public. I believe Rugby would be a good game for smaller colleges and high schools, where those participating are frequently raw recruits. It is among these players that the most accidents occur. The open play and frequent kicking furnish suggestions for the elimination of some objectionable features of our game, and I believe that a change in the rules governing football here embodying these features would be a long step in the direction of lessening accidents.

Lieutenant H. M. Nelly, U. S. A., coach at West Point: The best points I can see in the Canadian game are the numerous long passes and the great amount of punting which has been developed to a high degree of efficiency. It is wonderful the way those men get off punts almost from the centre of a scrimmage. That, it seems to me, is an element of danger, for the punter kicks directly in the face of the men who are trying to block or to tackle him. The way the men are permitted to hold their opponents with their arms is bad and would never do in our game. The worst feature of the game is the inactivity of the forwards; at times there are only about six men on the field who are in play. This, I think, is mostly due to the ban on interference for the runner with the ball. I firmly believe that the passing and accurate kicking of the ball while on the run will some day be the solution of American football.

Mr. H. Manly, President of the New York Soccer Association: The Canadian game seems to me far superior to our own. It is more open, more understandable and less dangerous.

Mr. Richard Sheldon, formerly guard at Yale: I like Canadian Rugby, but it cannot compare with straight football as we play it here. Everybody wants to see football players play for all that they are worth, and a smashing scrimmage, long runs and wicked tackles are the things which have made football what it is to-day in America. If you substitute Rugby for our present exhibition there will be no need for rules governing the game, because it will die of inanition. There is no doubt that Rugby is the safer game, and the exhibition was very interesting, but it lacked the thrill of a Yale-Harvard contest. The fight for the supremacy of one man over another was absent.

New York University football team, with several members of the Faculty Committee on Athletics, attended the Rugby game at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday. Comment made by these experts is appended:

Mr. J. E. Woodman, member of the Committee on Student Organizations: The chief points in which the game exceeded our own were the splendid punting, the quick start and the speed of the runners and the long passing. The last was not attempted so often as it might have been, but when successful it must have opened the eyes of American players to the possibilities for our own game in that connection. Altogether the exhibition was well worthy of the country from which the teams came and of the great paper that has generously given us an opportunity to study a foreign game. The Canadian game has a number of features that might well be seriously considered in changing our present rules and style of play.

Mr. T. H. Conn, instructor and director of athletics: "Enjoyed the game very much. The play was open, fast and the ball changed hands frequently, with scarcely any delay. The rules seemed to provide plenty of vigorous effort and individual as well as concentrated play. I believe we can adopt their ideas with advantage."

Mr. James Wheeler, captain Varsity eleven: "The Canadian game as far as one can tell from the exhibition has many points which might well be adopted by the Rules Committee. The absence of interference seems strange to the American spectator, but undoubtedly does away, with many of the dangers of our game."

Mr. Waldron Du Mond, president of Athletic Association: "The game showed many good features which could well be adapted to the American game. Interference, which causes most of the injuries in our game, was noticeably lacking. The rule permitting only three men to engage in a scrimmage is excellent, as it is a guard against injury to the man carrying the ball. While the game as a whole is hardly superior to ours, it has many valuable points of which the rules committee should take advantage."

One to be Proud Of. A happily married woman, who had enjoyed thirty-three years of wedlock, and who was the grandmother of four beautiful little children, had an amusing old colored woman for a cook. One day when a box of especially beautiful flowers was left for the mistress, the cook happened to be present, and said: "Yo' husband send you all the pretty flowers you gits, Missy?" "Certainly, my husband, Mammy," proudly answered the lady. "Glory!" exclaimed the cook, "he suttely am holdin' out well." —Ladies' Home Journal.

GREENSPAN IN TROUBLE.

Arrested in Buffalo This Morning For Wife Desertion.

He Will Be Taken to Indianapolis To Stand Trial.

Somewhat Funny Adventures of Hamilton Man in Buffalo.

(Special Wire to the Times.)

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Morris Greenspan, the Hamilton, Ont., tailor who claimed to have been robbed here of $100 several days ago, was sincere in his story to the court that he was heart-broken, especially because the loss of the hundred would keep him from spending the holidays in the same city as his wife—Indianapolis. His heart was partly, at least, repaired this morning when he saw Detective Samuels, of Indianapolis, walk into the police headquarters and announce that he had come to Buffalo to take Greenspan to Indianapolis. Greenspan had one Clara Smith arrested on the charge of robbing him. He said he had dallied in Buffalo on his way west from Hamilton, and had made Clara's acquaintance on the street, and that the next morning he awoke minus his money. The judge discharged Clara for insufficiency of evidence. Greenspan was at once arrested for disorderly conduct. His tale about his wife in Indianapolis and his being booked in Buffalo touched the judge's heart, and Greenspan was also let go. Greenspan had dallied since then in this city. Meanwhile the Indianapolis police read of his case and arrested the Buffalo police that Indiana's wife wanted to see him as much as he wanted to see Indianapolis. Detectives located the Hamilton tailor, and he was looked up this morning. The Indianapolis police arrived with a warrant for Greenspan's arrest on a charge of abduction. He assured Greenspan that his having gone broke here would not prevent his moving out to the city where his wife is living.

The annual meeting of the Hamilton Veterans' Association of 1866 was held at the City Hall on Friday evening.

The report of the Secretary was read, reviewing the proceedings for the year, showing that the interests of the Veterans was still kept up in the Association.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, the result being the re-election of all the officers, as follows:

McDonald, Second Vice-President, delegate from this association, reported on the visit of the delegation to Ottawa on the 3rd inst., and the pleasing interview the committee of that delegation had with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier, Sir F. Borden, Minister of Militia, and other members of the Cabinet.

The assurances given by the Premier and Cabinet were such as to greatly strengthen the hopes of the delegation.

A committee has been formed of members of Parliament from the different constituencies to have the matter introduced into the Parliament as early a date as possible.

BRIGHTSIDE.

Mrs. Barber Entertained Literary Club of Caxton Chapter.

Brightside, the handsome residence of Mrs. Frank Barber, was bright indeed on Saturday afternoon when she entertained the Literary Club of Caxton Chapter, I.O.D.E. A brief business meeting was held first, when several new members were voted in. Mrs. Sutherland, regent, who presided, reported that Dr. Langrill wants only magazines and paper-covered books, which will be destroyed after they are used.

Mrs. Barber's home is admirably adapted for large gatherings, for the drawing room, music room and dining room all open with wide arches into the square reception hall, a good sized room itself, and from the library, at the head of the stairs one could hear the programme easily.

Mrs. Barber is always a charming hostess and Miss Barber is an able assistant to her mother, and as Mrs. A. Elmore Richards is a most popular entertainer, it goes without saying the attendance was large—it was a record breaker for numbers. The musical programme, really a high-class concert, consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Blatherwick, Mrs. (Dr.) Parry, Miss Alma Ellis, accompanists, Mrs. F. D. Petrie and Miss Bessie Leckie. Mrs. Richards gave three capital selections, a Scotch monologue, "Sanders McGlashan's Courtship," a pathetic poem, "Little Boy Blue," by Eugene Field, and a musical selection, "The Story of a Fairy," which Mrs. Richards interpreted with grace and skill, cleverly accompanied on the piano by Miss Bessie Leckie.

Mrs. Barber invited the ladies to the tea room where dainty refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the residence of Mrs. Elmore Richards, 88 Wentworth street south, Saturday, Jan. 15.

Fred G. Flood will sail from New York on Wednesday, December 15, for Bristol.

Fred Inman, Presport avenue, fell from where he was working at the steel plant to the ground, a distance of 15 feet, last night. He sustained a broken ankle. He was taken to the City Hospital.

Canon Sutherland's lecture on "Lady Macbeth" in the Waldorf parlors to-morrow night will be a great treat. There will be a good musical programme. Mr. Adam Brown will be chairman.

Two breaks in the trolley wire were the cause of the delay of the Barton street car service this morning. The wires broke at 8.30 a. m., but it was not until 10 o'clock that both were repaired.

In answer to a call at 10.58 this morning from the corner of King street and Sanford avenue, Fireman Atchison, driver at Victoria avenue station, was thrown from his seat while turning a corner. He was uninjured, and was able to proceed to the fire.

Mrs. Walkobie, 174 Barton street, came near losing her life early Sunday morning, by being asphyxiated by gas, which escaped in her bedroom. She was in a serious condition when taken to the City Hospital, but is almost well today.

In connection with the recent discussion about teachers resigning in the middle of a term, Trustee C. G. Booker points out there is a mistaken idea about the contracts. The contract which every teacher signs is for one year from September 1st, and there is no provision for resigning on giving a month's notice. Mr. Booker thinks that when a teacher signs a contract with the Board of Education both parties are in honor bound to live up to it.

SAD STORY TOLD AGAIN.

The daughter's wages amounting to $3 that Bradley had taken. He was made to give them up.

A favorite pastime on Saturday nights of Edward Cusack, a redskin, seems to be to endeavor to scalp Constable Stevens at the Terminal Station. On Saturday, after Edward had flooded his interior with fire-water, he met the aforesaid officer and straightway proceeded to accomplish his purpose, but Robert Walker, assistant station constable, intervened, with the result that the redskin this morning faced charges of drunk, disorderly and assault.

P. C. Cuck also gave a hand to taking Mr. Cusack to the post station. He was fined $20 and costs for one month.

William Arnold, 28 Clark avenue, a 16-year-old youth, seemed to think that Mr. Copeman's head was a good target for three pieces of chalk and coal at Mr. Copeman is proprietor of a Barton street east pool room.

Arnold was charged with being disorderly. He paid $5 with orders to keep out of the pool room in future.

CANNING MERGER.

Another movement is on foot to bring together the Canadian canneries with a view to forming a merger of the industry. A number of the eastern independent canners attended a meeting held in the Waldorf Hotel, this city, on Friday and Saturday. As a result of the conference a committee was appointed to prepare a report on the matter, to be presented at a meeting to be held in Toronto this week.

FOR GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

Three strong sermons in the interest of good citizenship were preached in this city last evening by local pastors. In First Methodist Church Rev. E. B. Lancelotti spoke about the sort of men who should be elected to public offices. In St. John Presbyterian Church Rev. John Young dealt with temperance from a Biblical standpoint, and in St. Giles' Church Rev. J. B. Paulin dealt with the question of gambling.

TO FINISH THIS YEAR.

Lighting Arbitration Again Ad-journed, This Time Till 31st.

The street lighting arbitration which was adjourned a week ago for the purpose of allowing Mr. Hawkins, of the Cataract Company, time in which to prepare a statement of the cost of operating the plant, in order to compare it with the estimate of Engineer Gabey, was resumed this morning. Mr. Hawkins statement showed the cost of operation, less the interest and loss of power in transmission, to be $189,071. On the former occasion Mr. Hawkins had estimated that the cost was about $178,000.

When his attention was drawn to the difference by H. C. Rose, solicitor for the city, he explained that on the previous occasion he had given a rough estimate, but he had since gone into the question definitely.

Mr. Rose asked the witness if he could explain the reason the cost of power had gone up since 1899, and he explained it to be the intricacy of the present day system.

Mr. Rose questioned the witness as to how many more consumers the Power Company had at the present time more than in 1899, but he could not answer definitely.

Mr. Rose asked what the "customers' cost" contained in Mr. Hawkins' estimate meant, and was told it was the cost of building the lines to the consumers' places. If the cost was $4 per horse power the company considered that the outlay was too great for the returns, and would not supply it.

When asked as to the capacity of the plant beyond the amount of consumption, the witness said he could not answer, but the plant being a water one, had to be beyond the actual output. He could not say the quantity of power consumed in Hamilton, as other places received power over the same transmission line and there was no possible way of telling.

In reply to a question by Mr. Staunton, the witness said the actual capacity of the plant was 16,000 kilowatts. Of the 2,000 acres of land owned by the company, 500 were used as a lake.

An adjournment was made until Friday, December 31st, at 10 o'clock, in order to finish the matter before the New Year.

TO OLD HOME.

Lyons' Employees Honor F. C. Bellamy Before Leaving.

A very pleasant affair took place in the office of the Lyons Tailoring Co., when Mr. F. C. Bellamy, who has been in the company's employ as cutter for the past four years, and is leaving for his native home in Devonport, England, was called into the office and presented with a very beautiful umbrella by his fellow-employees. Mr. J. B. Lewis made the presentation. Mr. Bellamy, though taken completely by surprise, was not lost for words to express his appreciation not merely of the present, but of the spirit which prompted it, and to know that those whom he came in daily contact with felt so kindly to show him. The spirit of good will, firm to parcel by the greatly appreciated. A pleasant journey and speedy return were the wish of all the company.

The wind at the time the vessel went on was northeast, but changed during the night, and it is now from the southeast. ON GAMBLING.

Rev. J. B. Paulin Preached Good Sermon Last Night.

Rev. J. B. Paulin preached a vigorous sermon last evening in St. Giles' Church upon "The Evils of Gambling." In the course of his remarks he quoted Herbert Spencer's definition of a gambler and the part he played in the great drama of life. Referring to horse racing, he was liberal minded enough to grant any one the pleasure he might have in seeing the racing of horses, as in any other pastime, but it was the betting and the bookmaker that were the cause of the downfall of many a young man. He had followed the debate recently in the House of Commons, where the argument had been advanced that if there was no betting there would be no horse racing, and if no horse racing there would be no competitive field for the breeding of good horses. Surely the great human race was of more importance than the breeding and improvement of horse flesh. He spoke of legitimate stock investment on the stock exchange, when men were over anxious to get rich quickly, it was generally the case of the spider and the fly, and the public were deceived.
