"Imitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery."

The best proof that
MINARD'S LINIMENT
has extraordinary merits, and is in good repute with the public, is that it is EXTENSIVELY Imitated. The imitations resemble the genuine article in appearance only. They lack the general excellence of the Genuine.

This notice is necessary, as injurious and dangerous imitations liable to produce chronic inflammation of the skin, are often substituted for MINARD'S LINIMENT by Dealers, because they pay a larger profit.

They all Sell on the Merits and advertising of MINARD'S.

One in particular claiming to be made by a former proprietor of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which simply is a lie.

The MacDonnells of Glengarry.

AN OLD STORY RE TOLD.
Mr. E. Bruce Low, M. A., contributes an interesting paper to the current monthly number of Chamber's Journal, under the title of "The Bravest Briton at Waterloo." The gallant soldier referred to was General Sir James MacDonnell, G. C. B., of the MacDonnells of Glengarry, whose distinguished bravery, according to the Duke of Wellington, helped to turn the wavering tide of battle in a case of success on that memorable occasion. The writer says:

All British and French writers agree that the defence of the chateau and farmhouse of Hougoumont was the key to Wellington's position at Waterloo. When Lord Uxbridge asked the Duke which was the material point of his operations in case any accident should overtake him, the reply was, "Keep Hougoumont." To hold this vital point in his line of battle Wellington chose the Coldstream Guards, under Lieutenant Colonel Sir James MacDonnell, a gigantic, broad-shouldered Highlander from Invergary; and to these same broad-shoulders and the perfidious ingenuity of the Sooty, which at the supreme moment of crisis of the assault refused to yield, Wellington after the battle accorded the laurels of victory. When appealed to, in awarding the prize of five hundred pounds bequeathed to "the bravest soldier in the British army at Waterloo," Wellington wrote: "The success of the battle of Waterloo, turned upon the closing of the gates of Hougoumont. These gates were closed in the most courageous manner at the nick of time by Sir James MacDonnell. I cannot help thinking, therefore, that Sir James is the man to whom you should give the five hundred pounds." Like a true Highland gentleman, MacDonnell handed over the money to the stalwart sergeant who, shoulder to shoulder with this colonel of the Guards, had forced back the door on its hinges in face of an overwhelming force of the enemy. The party who assisted at the defence of Hougoumont were men from the light companies of the Coldstream and the 8th or 9th Scots Guards. Among them were two brothers, Graham by name, also two sergeants of the Scots Guards—Bryce MacGregor, a native of Ayrshire, who enlisted at Glasgow in 1799, and remained in the service till 1822; and Sergeant Ralph Fraser, a veteran who had served with distinction in Egypt in 1801, and in Hanover and Copenhagen. After describing the incidents of the fight around Hougoumont, the writer proceeds: Following Wyndham into the courtyard came Esnaig Gooch (sergeant of the 8th) and Hervey; and as they approached the small tower and well in the centre of the farmyard they were joined by Sergeant John Graham of the light company of their regiment, who, as already described, had with his now wounded brother and Sergeants Fraser and MacGregor, been holding the enemy in check and preventing them from setting the stables and barns near the North Gate on fire.

The impetuous rush of the little party of officers no sooner burst in fury upon the Frenchmen near the gate than they turned tail and broke up into several parties, some taking refuge in the open cart-shed adjoining the gate, and others making for the barn, where many of the British wounded were lying, and through which there was a direct road to the front or French side of the position. The remainder stood their ground, waiting the arrival of the reinforcements now in sight. In less time than it takes to relate, MacDonnell and Sergeant Graham placed their broad shoulders against the open gates; and while their comrades engaged and overcame the daring spirits among the enemy who struggled to resist, the heavy doors were swung together, and Hougoumont was saved! In another instant the heavy cross bar which held the doors together was fixed by Graham, and the infuriated blows of the baton and bayonet beat unavailingly on the solid planks of which the gate was equipped. Long afterwards the imprint of bloody hands upon the gate post and timber told the tale of the frantic disappointment and passion of the assailants, which became fiercer as the piercing cries of the hunted Frenchmen still within the yard became gradually silenced in death. When the Duke of Wellington awarded the Norcross bequest of five hundred pounds to Colonel MacDonnell as "the bravest soldier at Waterloo," it was to Graham that he passed on the gift, with the remark, "I cannot claim all the merits due to the closing of the gates of Hougoumont; for Sergeant John Graham, who saw with me the importance of the step, rushed forward, and together we shut the gates."

The other brave fellows who had held the post at the lane and gate till succour arrived were not altogether forgotten; for it appears that Sergeant-Major MacGregor retired after twenty-two years' service with a considerable pension, and was selected as one of the Yeomen of the Guard, and was thus well provided for till his death on 27th November, 1846. Sergeant Major Ralph Fraser was, after his discharge, in 1818, appointed a Badesman in Westminster Abbey, where he continued till he was over eighty years of age.

Besides receiving from Wellington the high honor of being credited with the "success won at Waterloo" through his stout defence, MacDonnell was recognized by the Prince Regent and by the Emperor of Austria, who made him a Knight of the Order of Maria Theresa. He afterwards became General Sir James MacDonnell, G. C. B., Colonel-in-Chief of the Highland Light Infantry. Of this officer, it is interesting to note that his family, the MacDonnells of Glengarry, Invernesshire, were of very ancient descent from the Lords of the Isles, and that Colonel Alexander, the eldest brother of Sir James, was the Fergus MacIvor of Sir Walter Scott's "Waverley." The family were much reduced and the estates heavily mortgaged in consequence of the prominent part taken by them in the Jacobite risings of 1715 and 1745, when as official documents show, they brought five hundred clansmen into the field. The result was that at the death of Colonel Alexander MacDonnell, in 1838, the whole of the estates were sold, and the chief's son and immediate followers emigrated to Australia. The hero of the Hougoumont survived till 15th May, 1869, and with him ended the direct male line.—The Oban Times.

Remarkable Letter to the Pope.

The correspondence that has recently passed between the University of Glasgow, (Scotland), and Pope Leo XIII. is surely a most strikingly noteworthy and significant fact. This year the university has been celebrating the 450th anniversary of its foundation, and though it is now and has been since the "Reformation" a Protestant institution, its president and governing body and its students are not such bigots as to ignore or be forgetful of the circumstances of its origin, and so one of the items of the anniversary programme was a letter addressed to the Holy Father by the Prefect or Rector and Vice-Chancellor inviting his Holiness to be a sharer in their joy and expressing their gratitude to the great Pontiff by whom, nearly five centuries ago, the university was founded. Following is the letter, or rather a translation of it, for it was written in Latin: "To the Sovereign Pontiff, The Most Holy, the Most Reverend, and the Most Lovable Man, Leo XIII.

The Entire University of Glasgow, the Chancellor, the Rector, the Professors, the Graduate, and the Students.

"(Sincere) Health,

"In our great joy (for soon we celebrate our centennial feast), this above all else we can remember with grateful minds, that this splendid University, which is today enriched with all wealth of talent and work, started from the Apostolic See itself, and that it commenced with the most loving patronage of the Supreme Pontiff, as we have learned from our forefathers.

"For that most learned Pontiff, Nicholas V., in the year of the Incarnation of Our Lord one thousand four hundred and fifty-one, displaying the greatest love for the Scottish people, being himself a man most illustrious for all the lights of talent and of the liberal arts, founded among us a University, and wished that our doctors, masters and students should enjoy and use all the liberties that have been granted to the University of his own city of Bologna.

"The which so great benefit, as like a loving daughter, we ascribe to the most dear mother from whom it came, we think leads us to hope that Your Holiness may become a sharer of our joy, as also to utter

Dyspepsia

From foreign words meaning bad food, has come rather to signify bad stomach; for the most common cause of the disease is a predisposing want of vigor and tone in that organ.

No disease makes life more miserable, it suffers certainly do not like to eat; they sometimes wonder if they should eat at all.

W. A. Stewart, Belleville, Ont., was greatly troubled with it for years; and Peter H. Geary, San Diego, Wis., who was so afflicted with it that he was nervous, sleepless, and actually sick most of the time, obtained relief from medicine professionally prescribed.

They were completely cured, as others have been, by

according to their own statements, regularly made. This great medicine purges the stomach and the whole digestive system. Be sure to get Hood's.

due thanks to the Holy See for so great a favor.

"We therefore pray that you may deign to increase this our happiness with your authority; and if on account of these wicked times it could not be that Your Beatitude should come to us in these feasts or such difficulties of sea and journeying, we hope at least you will express to us your feelings through some other person enjoying your favor, and that this our University, founded by the learned Nicholas, fostered by James, King of the Scots, cared for and defended by William, Bishop of Glasgow, and furthermore enhanced by many benefits from many of our Kings, you yourself, most scholarly and most elegant cultivator of Latin Literature, through your kindness may deign to honor still more, and to commend to yet new ages.

"We write, at Glasgow, on the 15th of May, 1861.

"The Prefect and the Vice-Chancellor."

This letter is certainly creditable to a high degree to the University of Glasgow and to the whole Scottish people. Of course the Holy Father replied to it in words characteristic of him. The cable despatch says that "he thanked the Rector and the students for the sending of this address, which he describes as a noble act, and recalls the memory of Pope Nicholas, who earned the undying esteem of the Scottish people, and that he prayed God to direct in the way of truth all the works of the members of the University, and to unite the latter to the Papacy in perfect love."—Exchange.

Curious Privileges of English Lords.

St. James Gazette mentions some rather curious privileges of English peers. For instance, if any member of the House of Lords ever should find himself at the foot of the scaffold he may demand to be hanged with a silken cord. Lord Ferrers was the last peer to avail himself of this last privilege of all. He was hanged at Tyburn in 1760 for the atrocious murder of his steward, and his execution was one of the most remarkable judicial ceremonies ever witnessed in England. He was a man of great conceit, even with the brand of Cain upon him, and was conveyed to the gallows, wearing his wedding clothes, in a landau drawn by six horses, escorted by parties of horse and foot. Behind, came a hearse and six horses, for the purpose of taking the corpse from the place of execution to Surgeons' Hall, where it was dissected.

Lord Ferrers' death agony was prolonged, to please his own vanity, for nearly three hours. That was the length of time occupied by the procession to the gallows, in the afternoon of the 17th of June, 1760. Lord Ferrers was right in supposing that the people would never see the execution of another lord. He was the last of the peerage to die on the gallows. But he was not by any means the first. Two centuries before, Lord Stourton had been hanged for the murder of a man and his son under very aggravated circumstances. He was hanged in a silken halter at Salisbury. Lord Sarsaparilla was another peer to suffer the law's last penalty. He murdered a fencing master who in a fencing contest had gouted out the peer's eye. "Does the man still live?" asked Henry IV. of France, when Lord Sarsaparilla related the incident to him, and the question so impressed his Lordship that he straightway went back to London and planned the murder of the fencer. He claimed the right of being tried by his peers, but was refused the distinction on the ground that he was only a lord in Scotland, and did not possess any English barony. He had one last privilege, however; he died in Palace Yard at Westminster on a gibbet erected for the purpose.—Exchange.

Commenting on the discussion by the Colorado State Medical Association of the advisability of putting imbecile children to death, the Catholic World says: "The deliberate discussion of a practice that Christian civilization has universally condemned among the Chinese, is very strong evidence that the whole of our race is losing their hold on the minds of non-Catholics. It is the legitimate outcome of the establishment of religion from the educational life of the country. Fifty years ago, when the system of religious schools was inaugurated, there was a large infusion of the religious spirit among the people. But two generations have now been educated without any knowledge of God and the supernatural life, and the second generation is beginning to show a decided lack of a knowledge of Christian principles. The church and the home are no longer the auxiliaries to religious education they formerly were. The lack of positive doctrine on the great fundamental truths, the obscuration of the teaching concerning the rewards and punishments of the next life, which are the sanctions of the moral law—these have broken down the barriers against crime and vice. Suicide was never so common as it is now. Respect for the life of the soul is being supplanted by a care for the body, and the custom of the medical profession of administering anodynes on approaching death is becoming very prevalent; all these are but signs of a growing unchristian spirit. We must get back to Christian standards again. It is not less religion, but more, that we want; we must begin with the children by instilling into their hearts the great fundamental truths without which there can be nothing but paganism."

Subscribers Attention!

We beg to call the attention of our subscribers to a matter of much importance to them, and especially to ourselves. Heretofore it has been the custom to allow the subscriptions to run to the end of the calendar year and then to attempt to collect them in a short time. This manner of doing business has been most unsatisfactory and in its results has been almost disastrous to us. It is simply impossible to collect our subscriptions in the fall of the year; it is impossible to collect half of them. The time is too short, and the weather is usually inclement at that season of the year and the roads are in a bad condition. All these circumstances render it very difficult to make collections to any extent. It would be all right and proper to accomplish our end, if the people would send their subscriptions promptly; but this, we have learned by experience, a majority of our subscribers are not disposed to do. As it is impossible, for the reasons given, to have a collector visit in a few weeks those who do not remit, the result is that from year to year hundreds upon hundreds of subscriptions are not paid. We do not here speak of those who seem unwilling to pay under any circumstances; with these we will have to deal in a special manner. Now "business is business," as our friend Mr. Tarte would say, and the proper and only satisfactory way of conducting the business of newspaper subscription is by paying in advance. To this manner of doing our business we hope to come a little later on. In the mean time, we ask all those who will owe us a dollar or more in December next, to be so kind as to begin to pay now, instead of leaving it till the fall of the year. By doing this you will greatly facilitate the conduct of our subscription business, and the rush and unsatisfactory condition of affairs arising from an attempt to accomplish the business of a year in a few weeks will be avoided. We ask you, kind friends, to do this for another reason. We have long contemplated enlarging and otherwise improving the HERALD, but have been prevented from so doing, simply for want of money. This is something, we feel sure, all subscribers would be pleased with, as it would be more to their advantage than to ours. Now, kind friends and subscribers, the matter lies in your hands. If all pay now or within a short time we will be able to realize our hopes and give you a paper still more worthy of your appreciation. In view of all the facts we have here placed before you, we hope to hear from one and all without delay. Pay up now, do not leave to a later date what you can accomplish at present; for, as you know, delays are dangerous. Wipe out all arrears, so that you may begin the new year with a clean sheet. In this way and in this way only will you strengthen our hands and enable us to bring about that consummation so devoutly to be wished; to make the HERALD of 1902 an enlarged and in every principle of a supernatural religion way worthy of your increased and losing their hold on the minds of non-Catholics.

The Vice-Regal Visit.

The reception tendered their Excellencies, the Governor-General and the Countess of Minto, on the occasion of their visit to this Province, on Saturday last, was hearty and enthusiastic, just such as his Majesty's representative might expect from our loyal citizens. Weather conditions in New Brunswick caused an unavoidable delay, and the steamer Minto conveying their Excellencies did not reach here until after two o'clock on Saturday afternoon. This created some uncertainty as to the prearranged plans, but nevertheless every part of the programme was carried out. A salute from Fort Edward greeted the arrival of their Excellencies; the steamer was then boarded by his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, his worship the Mayor, Hon. Mr. Peters, acting Premier, and Major Stewart. Shortly afterwards, the Vice-Regal party landed at Pownal wharf. Here they were received by his Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mr. McIntyre, acting Premier Peters, Mayor Warburton, the Judges of the Supreme Court, Senator and Mrs. Ferguson, the members of the City Council and a large concourse of citizens. An address of welcome was read by Mayor Warburton, to which his Excellency suitably replied. The Vice-Regal party were then driven to the Provincial Building, where an immense throng of people awaited them. Here the address of the Provincial Government was read and presented by acting Premier Peters. The party then proceeded to the athletic grounds, where the Scottish games were in progress. After inspecting and complimenting the Boys' Highland Brigade, the address of the Caledonian Club was read and presented by Major Stewart, President. His Excellency made a suitable reply to the address, and after viewing the games for a short while, the party returned to the city. A reception was held at Government House, and afterwards their Excellencies enjoyed an afternoon tea at the tennis grounds. An excursion on board the Jacques Cartier, on the East and West Rivers, concluded the programme. The steamer was gaily decorated with bunting and appropriately fitted up for the occasion. A luncheon was served on board and an orchestra was in attendance discoursing sweet music. About 9 o'clock the Jacques Cartier hauled up alongside the Minto and the Vice-Regal party boarded their own steamer, and his Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. McIntyre and the other guests landed at Pownal wharf. Early on Sunday morning the Minto steamed away to Pictou.

The Late James Byrne.

We deeply regret to record the death of Mr. James Byrne, which took place at his home on Dorchester Street yesterday morning. Mr. Byrne's illness began about a year and a half ago, when symptoms of fatty degeneration of the heart manifested themselves. Since then he had suffered from pneumonia, complicated with other troubles; but he rallied at intervals, and it was thought he might completely recover. Latterly he suffered very much, but throughout his protracted illness he manifested the greatest patience and maintained his usual serenity of mind and temper. Deceased was the son of the late Nicholas Byrne, and was born in the city of Philadelphia and came to this city when a child, where he remained till his death. He was 52 years of age. He was for some years a city councillor, and at all times took a deep interest in public questions and whatever tended to promote the welfare and advancement of the City and Province. He was a great reader, and possessed a well-balanced judgment and discriminating mind in literary matters. In his occasional contributions to the press he exhibited talents of a high order and excellent taste. He possessed the gift of oratory in a remarkable degree; but he was of a retiring and unassuming disposition and seldom could be prevailed upon to speak in public. Had he embraced any of the liberal professions or entered public life, his talents would undoubtedly have placed him at the top. Mr. Byrne was an honorable, broad-minded, public-spirited citizen; a warm-hearted and faithful friend, and his death is lamented by everyone that enjoyed his acquaintance. He leaves to mourn a widow and five children—three daughters and two sons. To these, as well as to his brothers and sister, and other friends, we extend our heart-felt sympathy in their sore bereavement.

Dedication of St. Malachi's.

The solemn dedication of the new St. Malachi's Church, Kinkora, took place on Sunday last, his Lordship Bishop McDonald officiating. The Solemn Pontifical Mass and dedication ceremonies were attended by an immense throng of people, one of the largest congregations ever assembled at Kinkora. His Lordship was assisted in the ceremonies by Rev. Donald McDonald, Tignish, as arch-priest, Rev. James Eneas McDonald, of St. Ann's, Hope River, and Rev. S. T. Phelan of Georgetown, as deacons of honor, Rev. J. C. McLean of Summerside, as deacon of office, Rev. J. T. Murphy, as sub-deacon of office and Rev. Dr. Monaghan as Master of Ceremonies. The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Doyle, of Vernon River, a former pastor of St. Malachi's. The discourse was eloquent and practical. The Rev. preacher first complimented the pastor and people of Kinkora on the magnificent new church they had built. Next he pointed out that the church is a house built for the worship of God, where He dwells in a special manner by His presence in the Holy Sacrament of the Altar.

THE SCOTTISH GATHERING

The Scottish Gathering on Saturday, under the patronage of their Excellencies, Lord and Lady Minto, was very largely attended, the grand stand being filled to its utmost capacity. A stand was erected near the grand stand for the vice-regal party, who arrived shortly after 3.30, when they were received with an address from President Stewart to which his Excellency made a brief and fitting reply. Lady Minto was then presented with a bouquet on behalf of the Caledonian Club by Master C. McMillan, son of Chief McMillan. The Boys' Highland Brigade next came in for inspection, and his Excellency expressed himself as highly pleased with their appearance. On account of their late arrival their Excellencies were enabled to see only a small portion of the athletic games and on their leaving the grounds they were honored by three hearty cheers and a "tiger," by the large crowd assembled. The games although somewhat slow in being carried through, were well contested and brought out a large number of new competitors. Two marvellous records were broken in the one and three mile bicycle races. The competitors in these races were J. J. McKinnon, M. J. Gillis and J. McNeill, P. E. Llanegyr, who have been living in Boston for several years. The way those men started out in the three mile with a strong wind blowing down the track opened the eyes of many spectators, who have grown accustomed to seeing too much "loafing" among our home men of late. Another man, who showed up to advantage in the games was B. F. Stewart, also of Boston, formerly of Montague, which last named place is famous for the men of brawn and muscle which it has produced. He is a middle-aged man and took first place in putting the stone, running high jump, the 100 yards dash, the hop, step and jump and the bicycle race. Wm. Hoyle, a youth of Charlottetown, also showed that he is a coming man in athletics. The half-mile amateur run was a splendid race and was won by Donahoe, who defeated Teed and Duffy, the latter having to start from the scratch line. Donald Clarke, as usual, distinguished himself in throwing the hammer. Following is the summary:—

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

THE KING'S CORONATION.

The Montreal Star's special cable from London says: Much interest has been aroused by the statement that the gathering at the time of the coronation may have important results for the empire. It is practically certain that the precedent of the jubilee demonstration will be followed to the extent that representatives of all the colonial governments will be asked to take part in the procession, and the prime ministers of the different colonial states are likely to be invited. There will probably be a conference on a number of questions of general interest, especially concerning commercial relations between Great Britain and her various dependencies.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

A Montreal despatch says: The Catholic authorities in Manila say they have no intention of withdrawing the Friars from the Philippine Islands and reiterate their belief that the Friars will be welcomed by the masses of the Filipino people as their spiritual advisers when the people are thoroughly assured the Friars will no longer exercise temporal authority.

LIPTON IS SATISFIED.

Sir Thomas Lipton, speaking to a representative of the Associated Press, said the result of the trials between the two Shamrocks in the Fifth of Clyde had given him every confidence in the challenger, and had undoubtedly stamped on that side of the water. Sir Thomas said he thought the Shamrock II was able to beat Shamrock I by eight minutes in a 30 mile course, and he therefore considered she had a good prospect of success against the American competitor. Mr. Watson said the challenger had done all he had expected of her.

FINEST TROTTER RECORD.

A Detroit, Michigan, despatch of the 19th says: The stallion Creceus owned and driven by George H. Ketchum, of Toledo, won the free-for-all trot on Detroit Driving Club's track at Gosport yesterday, and trotted the fastest heat and won the fastest race record ever made. Charlie Herr, a brown stallion owned by David Cahill, Lexington, Ky., was the only opponent in this race, and was a slow second. Creceus won the first heat by five lengths in 2:08.1, breaking the racing record for this year on any track, and in the second heat he led by anywhere from five to seven lengths and finished easily in 2:05.5, breaking the world's record. This announcement by starting Judge Barnard was received with tumultuous hurrahs.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR DEWEY.

A Washington despatch says: The suggestion is made by a Rear Admiral in high standing that Admiral Dewey should be given command of a large squadron comprising the best of our ships, to be present at the coronation of King Edward VII. Suggestion meets with general approval among high naval officials. It is expected that the naval pageant at the time of the coronation will bring together some of the finest ships possessed by European countries; and for that reason it is urged that the United States should be represented by some of her best ships.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

An explosion of petroleum on board the American schooner Louise Adelaide, Capt. Orr, Philip, in the harbor at Stockholm, Sweden, yesterday, resulted in the death of Capt. Orr and ten members of the crew, four Swedish Customs officers and the Brazilian Consul. Two of the Louise Adelaide's crew were saved. The explosion was the schooner's stove, and the blazing petroleum enveloped the vessel and those on board.

FASTING AND PRAYER.

A St. Louis, Mo., despatch of the 21st says: On this, the day designated by Governor Dockey for fasting and prayer to God that the present drought might be broken in Missouri, all records for hot weather in St. Louis were broken. The weather thermometer on the custom house registered 109 degrees. On the street and at exposed places the mercury went many degrees higher. The Governor's proclamation was very generally heeded. This is the second proclamation of the character ever made in the history of Missouri. In 1875, during a term of drought and grasshopper pest, Governor Herdon called upon the people to pray for relief. This call was also generally observed.

In South Africa.

Lord Kitchener, commanding British forces in South Africa, reports to the war office as follows:—

ELANDERSBURG, July 18.—Capt. Charles Botha, son of Philip Botha, and Field Cornets Humann and Oliver have been killed in the Orange River Colony.

LONDON, July 18.—The war office issued late tonight a despatch from Lord Kitchener giving the correspondence between Mr. Reitz and Mr. Steyn that was captured with the latter's baggage near Lindley July 1.

Mr. Reitz, under date of May 10, wrote Mr. Steyn that a meeting of the Transvaal government had been held, attended by Gen. Botha, Gen. Viljoen and Mr. Smuts; to consider the national situation. He went on to catalogue the difficulties—the numerous surrenders of burghers entailing a heavy responsibility on the government, the rapidly decreasing supply of ammunition, the disintegration of the government and the lack of any definite assurance of European intervention.

"In view of these facts," he said: "the government has decided to address a message to President Kruger pointing out the terrible conditions. The time has passed for us to let matters drift as at present. We must take a final step."

Mr. Steyn, replying May 15, upbraided Mr. Reitz with weak heartedness saying: "There is still sufficient ammu-

Our Nova Scotia crop may be safely estimated at seventy per cent. of good apples, and if packed strictly in accordance with the fruit market act now in force we may reasonably expect the highest price paid for apples during the past ten years."

His coat was lying inside of his tent, which was unoccupied at the time. A young lad who had been seen prowling around the camps was suspected, and on investigation later the watch was found in his pocket, but all that remained of the seven dollars was twelve cents. He had spent the remainder in buying himself new boots and other articles of apparel, and in treating his chums to hot weather delicacies. He told his parents and the other boys that he had earned the money washing dishes at the camp. He was let off with a strong lecture by his parents having come to an understanding with the peer of the money.

FIVE suicides, eight persons drowned and eight rescued from watery graves, was the record in New York city on Monday, as the result of the intense heat.

THERE was a heavy thunderstorm early on Monday morning. Mr. William Webster, of Maria, lost a large barn and several other outbuildings by being struck by lightning. The dwelling had a narrow escape. Considerable damage was done in other sections of the Province.

A SYDNEY despatch says: An extensive deposit of iron ore and fire clay has been discovered at Gabarus, and experts are looking over the property. One of these, Mr. Gould, states, that both are of such quality and quantity as will warrant 600 yards range only scoring 220 to the Mother Country's 245. In the other two ranges Canada was only six behind.

The steamer Milwaukee arrived at Sydney, on Friday from Durban, and has received orders to proceed to New Orleans and load one thousand horses for Cape Town. She will take four thousand tons of bunker at Sydney and sails the latter part of the week. The Milwaukee is the steamer that took the second contingent from Halifax to South Africa, and later Cronje and his men to St. Helena.

The remains of a man were found on Sunday last on the shore of Percival River, Lot 10, by two men who were walking near the water's edge. The body was clothed in heavy clothing, showing that the man must have been drowned some time in the water. From memoranda found on the clothing it is thought the body was that of Sylvan Casey, of Egmont Bay, who was last seen in April near the Percival River.

In competition with students from all parts of the world, Father Sinnott headed the list. We congratulate Rev. Dr. Sinnott, as well as his family, on his eminent and brilliant success. Father Sinnott may soon be expected home.

SIR WALTER SCOTT declared in his "Lay of the Last Minstrel" that those who desired to "view fair Melrose aught" should so time their visit as to "view it by the pale moonlight." But Sir Walter never visited this Province, nor feasted his imagination on our beautiful scenery. The truth of this is emphasized by the invitation extended to every one to visit "Grosbeak" and view its natural and artistic attractions "in the broad daylight," on the occasion of "The Great Eastern Tea Party," Tuesday, August 13th. Full particulars regarding this event may be learned by referring to the advertisement thereon, in this day's HERALD.

If thou wouldst view Grosbeak aught, Come visit it in the broad day-light.

The Great Eastern Tea Party!

Blandine of Betharram.

BY J. M. CAVE. (American Messenger of the Sacred Heart.) (Continued)

She is truly penitent I can assure you, and nothing in this world would give her greater happiness than to undo the wrong she caused, at any cost.

"Then you really do forgive her?" "There is little, if anything at all, to forgive! She may have had a presentiment of the evil there was in me, or the good God may have suffered her little fault to mar my youth, to save others from the consequences of my evil nature."

"No!" cried the nun, indignantly; "my Margaret, you are wrong! Humanity and patience are admirable virtues, both; but you are wrong! Her deliberate sin, for it was that, wrecked two lives, separated two hearts for long years."

"There was no truth, and no honesty nor uprightness to God in my years of exile."

"Granted, but you were a child. She, a middle-aged woman."

"Dear Sister Christmas, let us speak no more of this. I could not blame her if I would. My own sins take from me all power to blame others."

"You are too good, Sister Margaret. You really must become a little spiteful or revengeful, else there will be no merit in Dame Dacre's repentance. You must try to be spiteful and revengeful for a little while, at least, to keep her humble, or she'll rule you as she ruled us all."

"It is little likely that we shall ever meet in this world," said Margaret, quietly, "and I wish her only good."

has never known a cloud, save that of separation; but there, ah yes! there is a heart to be healed! A heart too easily tried. God grant that reparation come not too late!

Margaret feels that something unusual is passing around her, that there is silence for her sake. She turns her face towards the door, whence come the muffled sounds.

Who shall tell what passes through Antony Dacre's heart as he beholds that face! The face he last saw in all the beauty of its sweet seventeen years of innocent artless life!

He reaches out his arms to her, he will, he must take her to his breast, be the consequences what they may!

"Who has come?" she falters. "Two strong arms receive her, or she would have fallen full length. She divided all. When the question had hardly fallen from her lips, the whole truth broke upon her mind."

"Margaret!" "Antony!" The swan is over. She is herself once more. The past and present are one.

"Ever long a group gathers around one figure. Margaret is indeed holding a grand court to day. It was a moment never to be forgotten by Sister Noella at least, when that stately silver haired lady stood before the blind woman. One look at the sweet forgiving face, one sight of the hands stretched out to greet her, and the aged dame would have cast herself at the feet of her whose life she had blighted."

"But Dame Dacre would not be thus easily consoled. 'Never,' she protested, 'never shall I feel myself absolved by God, nor forgiven by myself, till I see you, Margaret, installed in the place he has kept vacant for you these fifteen years!'"

"To him and to me, my dear, you will never be anything but young and beautiful! Indeed, you are fit to be a queen to-day," cried the old lady with sincere admiration, as she gazed upon Margaret. "Who could believe that those orbs do not behold my tears," she cried, as she clasped her to her heart and kissed the dark eyes over and over again.

"No, no," she added, after an effort to compose herself, "no! I shall try to live, weak as I am, and fatigued by this long journey; I shall try to live, my dear, till I see you installed in your rightful place, the place I have long usurped. Your rightful place," she repeated, looking at Antony, who thanked her with his eyes. "But here is one who will help me to plead! Francis, my son, you come most opportunely; I need your help."

"If his looks belied not, Father Francis Dacre was well disposed to take his mother's part. He came forward as his mother named him. Margaret sank upon her knees and bowed her head low. Father Francis laid his consecrated hands upon the head bowed so humbly, and helped her to rise, as kindly and gently as Antony could have done, saying, in a voice very like Antony's own, 'That will be a joyful day for us all, and one we have been praying for these many years.'"

Margaret was weeping. Her heart was indeed overflowing with gratitude. Gratitude was the only feeling she could disentangle from the tumult of her thoughts. "How good they are! How kind they are! How pleasant their voices and their words!" And now, as in the early years, her heart went up to heaven. At last she realized that from heaven alone can come such blessings as were now falling upon her. "God is good!" it is all she could say. "You are all too good—too kind!"

Blandine, who had been pulling discreetly at Sister Noella's gown for some minutes, now softly whispered, in a half audible tone, "The Angelus," and that moment the Angelus Bell rang out. It was one of Blandine's duties to warn the Sister Superior five minutes before the hour, that she might have time to join the Community if possible. But for five minutes her signals were unheeded today. When the last rather strong pull aroused the Sister's attention she spoke: "The Angelus will sound in five minutes." "It is sounding," said Father Francis, "and it is most opportune. Let this be our first act of family worship." They all knelt and joined in the beautiful prayers of the Angelical Salutation. For Margaret it was the first time in many years, and the familiar, yet long neglected words, subdued her spirits completely; made her feel, and desire to feel, once more like a child at the feet of its mother.

"I did try to make you hear in time, dear Superior," said Blandine, when all had arisen from their knees, "and I did pull your robe for five minutes."

"I know you did, dear child. But my thoughts were elsewhere," Sister Noella drew her toward Margaret, and very soon Blandine was encircled by the little group.

"Yes," said Margaret, in answer to a whispered question by Antony, "thanks to heaven, and dear Sister Christmas this Pyrenean blossom is now my own. It remains only for me to prepare a suitable ground for the sweet flower."

Which of the two faces, that of Margaret or her adopted child, wore the sweetest expression at that moment, it would be hard to say. "They are evidently worthy of each other," was the thought of Father Francis.

And now mother and daughter, as we have henceforth call Margaret and Blandine, are alone together. The travellers have gone to kneel at the altar of our Lady of Betharram. In such a moment, to arrive at such a halting place in life's journey, was an immense grace. To find here, under the shadow of such wings, the long lost one was immense joy. A joy, it is true, that was constantly checked and subdued by Margaret's self-accusing spirit. How often, in the course of their meeting, had she not referred to the subject uppermost in her mind. Naturally a reticent to an extraordinary degree, on this point she could not keep silent. "Her loss," "her ill spent," "her wasted years," was the sharp pain that would force the cry from her lips. True, indeed, they had been all she declared them, but nothing was so bad that sincere repentance could not obliterate it, even to the faintest trace. She was free, she had not bound herself by other ties, good or bad.

"She is free," was the one thought uppermost in the heart of Anthony Dacre. To him she was still beautiful, and more touchingly beautiful in her helplessness, than in the flash and pride of her youth. He longed for the right to shield her from the world, to stone to her, by a life of tender devotion, for all the past, and to make her forget, if possible, her present helplessness. And he was not alone in the wish for atone ment and reparation. The hearts of all his people were in unison with his own on this point. The humility of the wronged woman was intensifying this wish ten-fold. Her "mea culpa," pronounced in tones of sublime self-forgetfulness and humility, made her dear, beyond words, to each one of these Christian hearts.

Although Margaret, in all sincerity, persists in this plea, accusing herself, excusing others, insisting with a noble sense of uprightness in striving loyally to make others see what was worthy in her, lays before them the fatal weakness that permitted her, a convent-bred girl, to minister to, and pamper, the depraved tastes of a woman of the world, and that woman a stranger, without moral claims on her devotion; how, even after the real or apparent influence of this stranger had set her free, she continued to defy God's laws, and to shut her heart to His voice. Over and over again, at every attempt to draw from her a promise to become his wife, would Antony meet her with the same plea: "No, Antony! My wasted years must make me forever unworthy of so noble a destiny." He pleaded in vain. Sister Noella pleaded in vain, though she strove with all her power to make Margaret see her faults and sins in their true light, the Christian light; that is, the light the Master taught her to judge by. To all their pleading the answer was: "I am unworthy. It would be a crime for me to link my life with any one, much less one so noble and so true."

Father Francis was deeply impressed by this heroic self-abasement. "But it must be overcome," he said to himself. "I cannot see my brother go back to his solitude, and my mother to her self-accusations, while I go far away to do the Lord's work." When he found a favorable moment, and he soon found one, he spoke of his hopes, his desires to follow in the footsteps of his patron, "the Moses of that Land of Promise," to whom it had been given only to die within sight of its shores. The harvest was still great there, the laborers few. He longed to join his missionary brothers in China or Japan—and he was pleading with her for the permission to do this with a free heart. "If," said he, "my mother and brother must return without you, Margaret, to Dacre Hall, I must give up my career as missionary. Since it was for my sake Antony was wronged, I cannot abandon him again to soil tude."

"Remember my sins," pleaded Margaret. "You are a minister of Christ! Surely you would not wish to see your noble brother wedded to one so faithless, and now so helpless! So evidently suffering the just punishment of her infidelity to God!" (To be continued.)

NINE BOILS. FOUR RUNNING SORES.

The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Some time ago my blood got out of order and nine large boils appeared on my neck, besides numerous small ones on my shoulders and arms. Four running sores appeared on my foot, leg and I was in a terrible state. A friend advised Burdock Blood Bitters, so I procured three bottles. After finishing the first bottle the boils started to disappear and the sores to heal up. After taking the third bottle there was not a boil or sore to be seen. Besides this, the headaches from which I suffered left me and I improved so much that I am now strong and robust again.

Yours truly, Miss MAGGIE WORTHINGTON, Galesia, Ont. Feb. 3rd, 1901.

A Sustaining Diet.

These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the wayside as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the full robust of our readers, that the less effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of adding this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.
