Look. Read. Realize!

We cater to the men's trade, and no other. If you were sick you wouldn't call to see a Tailor, or a Blacksmith, about the condition of your health. Of course not; you would call to see a Doctor.

If you wanted a Suit or an Overcoat would you go to see a Doctor, or a Shoemaker? Not at all. You would go to see a First Class Tailor.

WELL, there's where we shine!!!
We study the business. We know what suits a young man we know what suits a middle-aged man, and we know what suits the old gentleman—both in goods and in style. It does not make any difference whether you want your clothes Ready-to-Wear, or Made-to-Order. We are equally in a position to suit you. We do not let a suit or overcoat leave our establishment until it suits and fits the man who is buying. Our prices are always right when you take the quality into consideration.

Do not forget that we are sole agents for the famous W H Leishman & Co., Wholesale Custom Tailors. We have an elegant stock of Overcoats to show you at the present time.

Overcoats, Made-to-Order-from... $30.00 to $45.00

Overcoats, Ready-to-Wear..... $15.00 to $36.00

Success Is a Habit

Our habits make us. We are creatures of habit. Whether we are a success or a failure is a question of how we do things without thinking. To Save is the only way to success.

Historic Room Of The Last Supper

Of all the many places made sacred by the life of Our Lord and by the various events in which He was the central figure, perhaps, unless it be that of the Crucifixion itself, has a much greater claim in the interest of the faithful than the Cenacle, the room in which the Last Supper took place.

The Last Supper, the historic repast held by Christ and His Disciples on the Eve of His Passion, at which He instituted the Holy Eucharist, made this room one of the most sacred of places. The Pilot. A security of information concerning some of the important details of interest in connection with the room forbids a full and complete history that would thoroughly satisfy the curiosity of the faithful with regard to the house, but the main features of the history of the room in the time following the Supper form an important part of Christian annals.

The owner of the house in which was located the famous Upper Room of the Last Supper is not mentioned in Scripture. It is believed, however, that it must have been one of the disciples.

Various opinions have been advanced as to who it was. Some have said that it was Nicodemus, while the belief has also been held that it was Joseph of Arimathea or the mother of John Mark.

The information which has come down to us as to the place of the great event is enough to fill in an interesting outline picture of the room. The hall, it appears, was large, and was furnished as a dining room. In this place itself Christ showed Himself after His Resurrection.

The place was also the scene of other great events. It was there that the election of Matthias to the Apostolate took place, and also the sending of the Holy Ghost. It was there, too, that the first Christians gathered for the "breaking of the bread." Peter and John went there when they had given testimony after the cure of the man born lame. Peter came there also after his liberation from the prison, while it is thought likely that the Council of the Apostles was likewise held there.

As a church the room stands out in history. It was for some time the only church in Jerusalem, mother of all churches, known as the Church of the Apostles of Zion.

Misfortune came to the famous place later on. In the eleventh century it was destroyed by the Saracens. Later it was rebuilt and placed in the care of the Augustinians, and after another destruction, it was restored and put in charge of the Franciscans. They were driven out in 1561. For some time of late it has been a Mohammedan mosque.

position close to the famous Cloth Hall, the splendid building which suffered so sadly from the horrors of the war. The architectural group which these structures formed has attracted much attention from admiring beholders.

The Church of St. Martin was cruciform in plan, and was a striking combination of a number of periods of architectural style. It was built on the site of a church which was founded in about the year 1078. This edifice was removed in the 18th century to make room for one which should be commensurate with the importance and prosperity of the town.

The first parts of the building to be undertaken were the choir and the transept. These were begun in 1221, by Hugues, Provost of the Collegiate Church of St. Martin. The first stone of the nave of the edifice was laid in 1254. It was finished some 12 years later, and in 1270 the solemn consecration of the church occurred.

Notable alterations were later made in the building. The tower occupied some 20 years in building, and even into modern times remained in an unfinished state.

It has been said that the choir of St. Martin's at Ypres was one of the best examples of the pointed Gothic style of architecture as used in the western part of Flanders during the first half of the 13th century.

Conservation of
Siena Cathedral
The 750th anniversary of the consecration of the Cathedral at Siena, Italy, occurs in the present year. The cathedral is among the most interesting and historic edifices of the world.

The Cathedral of Siena was consecrated by Pope Alexander III in 1171, according to accounts. It has special features which mark it out as notably interesting for students of art, architecture and antiquities. In the outstanding features of the fabric are the marble facade, the campanile, the variety of sculptures and paintings of different periods, the attempt at amalgamation of Gothic with Romanesque styles, and a wonderful pulpit.

The Cathedral is rich in history. The first notice of a church on the site occurs in the year 1000, and the first list of artists engaged in restoring or decorating the original Duomo covers the period from 1229 to 1236. During this period the building was lengthened. In 1262 work was undertaken on a new cupola, or on the completion of one which had been started early.

The attempt at amalgamation between the Gothic and Romanesque in this church gives the Siena Duomo a special significance and importance in the history of Italian architecture. The splendid pulpit which has attracted so much attention was the work of Nicolo Pisano.

Catholics At Oxford
(By N. C. W. C. News Service.)
The early return of the Dominicans to Oxford is foreshadowed in the announcement that the Order has purchased a property in the city, within the precincts of the University. The building acquired stands in the historic street of St. Giles, and in close proximity to the house of studies erected by the Augustines in memory of Dr. Pusey, and named after him. The house is to be Milner's Liniment for sale every where.

A Slow, Sluggish, Torpid Liver

RESPONSIBLE FOR MANY ILLS.

Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills stimulate the sluggish liver so that it will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and thus clear away all the waste and poisonous matter that is responsible for constipation, biliousness, sick headaches, heartburn, jaundice, etc.

Mrs. Alice McMillan, Nanaimo, Ont., writes: "I was very badly run down and had a torpid liver for over four months. I tried several remedies, but got no relief. One day my husband brought me home a box of Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills, and soon I had used half the box and I was much better. I only used two boxes, and I am a different person to-day. I can do my usual work, and I feel like a new woman. I can do any work I wish to do."

Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills are 25c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

taken over during the summer, and when the University opens up for the academic year in the autumn it is expected that the new Dominican Hall will be ready to receive students.

The event is of more than passing interest in the history of Catholic higher education in that country, since it means that the four great orders of the Church will once more be represented at Oxford.

The Jesuits have their House of Studies, Campion Hall, which is in St. Giles; the Benedictines are housed at St. Benet's Hall, while the Franciscans are housed at Grosseteste House, so named after one of the most illustrious prelates and scholars of the Catholic Church in England in pre-Reformation days. With the coming of the Dominicans the four great Orders will be represented in the academic life of the University, and a flavor of medieval days will once more be restored as in the old days when the Friars practically dominated the world of learning at Oxford.

The inflow of Catholics into the academic life at Oxford does not end, however, with the presence in the university city of four great orders. Salesian House, which is at Cowley, is a house of study for the Salesians, while the secular clergy who are reading for their degrees at Oxford are housed in St. Charles House, a house of studies opened under the auspices of the Archbishop of Birmingham in 1913.

A SENSIBLE MERCHANT.
Milburn's Sterling Headache Powders give women prompt relief from monthly pains, and have no bad after effects whatever. Be sure you get Milburn's. Price 25 cents a box.

W. H. O. Wilkinson, Streetford says: "It affords me much pleasure to say that I experienced great relief from Muscular Rheumatism by using two boxes of Milburn's Rheumatic Pills. Price 25 cents a box."

Hearing a crash of glassware one morning, Mrs. Blank called to her maid in the adjoining room. "Nurah, what on earth are you doing?" "I'm doing nothin', mum," replied Nurah; "it's done."

Terrible Sufferer From Her Kidneys.

"When the kidneys get out of order the back is sure to become affected, all dull pains, sharp pains, quick twinges all point to the fact that the kidneys need attention."
Painful and ineffectual may relieve a short time, but to get rid of these you must get right at the seat of the trouble. You can do this by using Doan's Kidney Pills and thus obtain permanent relief.

Mrs. John Stephenson, 115 Stephen St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I certainly don't praise your Doan's Kidney Pills, would have severe pains in my back and awful headaches. I became very weak, and just felt as if I were being dragged down. I tried one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and to my surprise I felt better. I could work hard all day, and my back would not pain me at all. I can't praise them too much."

Doan's Kidney Pills 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Proceedings in the House of Commons for the week ending, March 12th, were not of a very exciting nature. The splendid majority with which the Government emerged from the debate on the address has so tempered the ardour of the Leader of the Opposition, and his friends, that they have become exceedingly mild in their attitude towards the administration. No Government measure of importance occupied the attention of the House during this week, but several quite important and interesting debates took place on motions by private members, who introduced resolutions of one kind or another that afforded much interest and supplied no inconsiderable information to the House. These debates, of course, being of a private nature were discussed according to the personal convictions of members without regard to party affiliations, and members on both sides united or differed according to such convictions. Very often in matters of this kind, after the debate has spent itself and the object of the motion—eliciting information—being served, the resolution is withdrawn by the mover. However, one of these resolutions, introduced by Mr. MacMaster, was allowed to go to a vote, and passed out rather disastrously for the mover. Mr. MacMaster is a loud-voiced member who loves to introduce something of a novel character, which he himself, no doubt, considers something marvellous, but which is generally regarded by the majority of the members of the House of very little consequence, and not infrequently looked upon as very foolish. On this occasion Mr. MacMaster introduced a resolution that members of the Federal Cabinet should be obliged, before accepting office, to resign as directors in any private corporations with which they might be affiliated. It is generally thought that the object of introducing the resolution was to strike at Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who, as well as Mr. MacMaster, resides in Montreal. Before entering the Government Mr. Ballantyne held important positions as director of banks and other great corporations. Of course, in becoming a Minister, he has taken no active part at all in these institutions, but it would seem rather a cruel proceeding that he should be obliged to sacrifice very great interests in matters which had been his life work. The same would apply to any other Minister. The debate was discussed very fully by members of both sides of the House, and it developed that Mr. MacMaster's own friends, members of the Opposition, were not unanimous in their disposition to support him. Several of them had spoken against it, among them the Chief Liberal Whip, who thought that the carrying of such a resolution would have a very bad effect. Mr. MacMaster was asked by the Leader of the Opposition to withdraw his motion, after the debate had spent itself, but he would not consent to this. Finally, when the question was put by Mr. Speaker, the yeas and nays from the members indicated without any doubt that the motion would not carry. Mr. MacMaster would be quite satisfied to let it go at that, but members on the Government side thought it was better to have a record vote taken. As a consequence, a sufficient number of them stood up to have the Speaker "call in the members." When the division was taken they found that the official Opposition were divided, several of them voting against it, and the Agrarian group were split in two; at least half of them voted against the motion, and all the members of the Government side were against it. The consequence was that the Government had, on this motion a majority of 51. It will thus be seen that, on the divisions that have so far been taken, the Government is surely quite safe.

Another debate was precipitated by the motion of Mr. Wm. Smith of South Ontario, who introduced a resolution to the effect that the embargo imposed by Great Britain on Canadian cattle should remain, and that Canadian interests would be well served by a continuation of the same. Mr. Smith is a supporter of the Government, and is a large stock raiser, one of the very foremost in Canada. He produces and puts on the market probably as fine cattle as are found in any part of the Dominion; but certainly the wording of his resolution on the face of it is directly in opposition to the attitude that all Governments of Canada have assumed regarding this cattle embargo for some thirty years. The debate was very interesting in character, and elicited no small information relative to the cattle business, and to the attitude assumed by the Imperial Government on this matter. Just a short time before this debate a by-election was contested in one of the constituencies in England, where the Minister of Agriculture, who had just been appointed and had gone back to his constituents for approval, was defeated, and it was considered that it was largely in consequence of this cattle embargo. Lord Beaverbrook, who is a Canadian, took a very active part against the election of this Minister, and made this very question of the embargo on Canadian cattle one of the features of the campaign. It is not in evidence that Lord Beaverbrook himself took part in the election fight, but it is said that a newspaper which he controls made this matter the chief battle cry against the new Minister of Agriculture. In any case, the Minister was defeated by a small majority. In the course of the debate on Mr. Smith's resolution, it was plainly pointed out that Canadians' desire for the last thirty years had been that this embargo might be removed, and it was shown pretty plainly that no particular cause existed now, so far as Canada is concerned, that the embargo should be continued. Over thirty years ago Sir Charles Tupper took up this matter when he was Canadian High Commissioner in London, and fought it bitterly on behalf of Canada. The ostensible reason for placing the embargo in the first place was that some of the cattle imported from Canada had pluro-pneumonia, and consequently the conclusion was adopted that they should be slaughtered immediately after being landed. It will readily be understood that this was a great disadvantage to the Canadian exporters of cattle, because after a long voyage the cattle would be in very poor shape, and a few weeks' delay, in which they could be fed and finished for slaughter, would make a great difference. But Sir Charles had several of the animals slaughtered, and there was none of this disease found in them, and it has not been proven from that day to this that any such defects prevail among the Canadian cattle exported to England. However, there are no doubt private reasons which induced the Imperial Government to continue the embargo. After the debate had been fairly well talked out, an amendment was moved setting forth that the course pursued by the present Dominion Government, as well as by preceding Governments, regarding this matter of the cattle embargo, was commendable, and should be supported. This amendment was carried unanimously, and thus disposed of the resolution.

Still another resolution that had been some time on the order paper was introduced towards the end of the week and brought forth a lively debate. There were a number of circumstances connected with this resolution that rendered it of unusual interest. In the first place, the resolution was introduced by Sir Sam Hughes, and its purport was that the present Civil Service arrangements relative to appointments to the public service be abolished and that patronage be restored. There is no doubt a very strong feeling in the minds of a great number of members of parliament supporting the Government, at any rate, that it would be better, so far at least as the outside service is concerned, that we should go back to the old patronage system. All know that Sir Sam Hughes has been a very prominent character in the parliamentary and public life of Canada, in the last 25 years or so, and all are equally aware that he had rendered splendid service to Canada at the beginning of the war. Sir Sam was in his day, not infrequently, a strong centre in the House of Commons. When he had anything to say, he enforced it in most emphatic fashion. He did not believe in compromise to any great extent. He was a fighter in every sense of the word. He was a warrior in Parliament as well as in the field, but to-day he is not the Sir Sam of old. He is broken in health, bowed down, and does not occupy his seat in the Commons for any great length of time on any day. He had not, during the present session, up to this day, spoken a word; but he desired to have his views placed on record on this question. Perhaps it may be the last resolution he will ever introduce in the House of Commons. Every courtesy was shown to the old warrior. He was invited by Mr. Speaker to take a seat in the most convenient place in front of the Government side, so that he could be heard by the greatest possible number. He was received with most generous applause; but all could see when he started to support his motion that the old fire had almost burned down to a few sparks now and then; his voice was little above a whisper, and he was unable to reach the heights of former days or to emphasize with his usual force the opinions he expressed. All the same, he was listened to with the greatest possible attention, and most generously applauded when he concluded his brief speech. He then was obliged to leave the chamber, as he had said at the beginning of his remarks that he was undertaking this matter contrary to the advice of his physician. The old warrior, however, left his contentious resolution with the House, and it was debated thoroughly; very lively and interestingly from both sides during the whole afternoon and into the evening sitting, when on the advice of Sir Sam the resolution was withdrawn. Whether or not, some changes in the present Civil Service operations may be introduced before the end of the session is not at present quite clear, but it is possible that the Government may make some changes. It is not likely, however, that any very serious amendments will be made to the law, especially as regards the inside service.

Some regulations may be introduced that will in some sense modify the branches of the Service outside of the city of Ottawa. The trend of what this may be, of course, no one can tell until the Government brings in the measure, if they will bring in such a measure.

Death has again intruded itself into the Federal Parliament and taken away, at a comparatively early age, one of its useful members. This time it is the Senate, not the Commons, that has suffered. Senator Crosby of Halifax, who has been ill for a brief period, died on Thursday, the 10th of March. Senator Crosby was about 62 years of age. He had been an important figure in the commercial and civic life of Halifax for some years, and was elected to the House of Commons in 1908, as a colleague of Sir Robert Borden. He failed of election in 1911, and in 1917 was appointed to the Senate. The deceased Senator was an amiable, energetic gentleman, who took a very considerable part in all important debates in the Senate, and in every way was a useful public man, as well as a very worthy citizen. He was indeed rather an aggressive and useful parliamentary representative, and always ready to stand up for his country, and enforce his ideas in vigorous fashion. He leaves a widow and two sons. His remains left Ottawa for Halifax on Saturday afternoon, the 12th. The funeral took place in St. Mary's Cathedral, Halifax on Tuesday, the 15th.

The weather at Ottawa just now is surely remarkably mild for the season of the year. It is, to all intents and purposes, spring, as the greater part of the snow has disappeared, and Parliament Hill and the great campus in front of the Parliament Buildings are all bare, and are assuming somewhat slowly their wonted summer green. The ice on the river and canal is breaking up, and appearances generally indicate spring is returning. It is possible that we may have a little touch of snow yet; but, in any event, the probabilities are that a winter-like weather that may come will be of brief duration. Should present conditions continue, in a week's time we shall have green grass all around Parliament Hill, and on the lawns and campus in the vicinity.

The post of living in Great Britain dropped 10 points in February, it was announced on the 17th.

Germany's worst offence was her breach of international good faith. Disarmament, therefore, is not so easily brought about.

The Belgians have occupied Hambrun. The British Tommies would not be long picking a nickname for that town.

The latest discovery in New York is a marble trust, which upsets the theory that profiteering may be evaded by dying.

Toronto citizens are annoyed by license inspectors on frequent visits to their cellars. Besides, some of them might be burglars in disguise.

Speaking of that cattle embargo perhaps Henry Ford has told the British Government of a scheme to get beef as well as milk without cows.

Lord Lee's naval estimates are a challenge to both United States and Japan to follow the path of peace and turn from the goal of militarism.

Several silk warehouses, containing over half of the amount of silk available for export in the city of Shanghai, were burned there on the 11th, the loss being estimated at $8,000,000.

The British Government on the 17th gave formal approval to the appointment of Colonel George B. M. Harvey as United States Ambassador to Great Britain to succeed John A. Davis, who resigned.

The Canadian Government steel steamship Canadian Skirmisher, 8350 tons, was launched at North Vancouver, B. C., on the 17th. She was close to actual completion when she slid down the ways.

Mrs. Nina Larowe, who was in the party with Mark Twain on the tour in which he based "Innocence Abroad," died at Portland, Oregon, on the 16th, after an illness of four weeks. She had been on the stage in New York and New England as Miss Helen Temple. As a girl she crossed the plains with an emigrant train.

One hundred years ago Sarah Maxwell, of Richmond Hill, Ont., was "sweet sixteen." The dear old lady has just celebrated her one hundred and sixteenth birthday, and is probably Canada's oldest inhabitant. Her memory is good and carries her back to many beautiful pictures and thoughts of girlhood days more than a century ago.

Great Britain has no desire to allow the United States to cancel the Anglo-American war debt, according to Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, M. P., Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in Great Britain during the war, who is in Chicago to give a series of lectures at Northwestern University. "Great Britain is able to pay her debts," he said. "Mutual respect does not come from begging favors."

Two hundred and seven children have been sold, three abandoned and one killed by famine-stricken parents in the province of Chi-Li, northern China, according to a despatch received in New York on the 12th by the American Committee for the China Famine Fund. The figures, the report said, were the result of a famine survey made in 77 villages of the province, where more than 10,000 persons were found destitute.

Coal production in Canada showed a gratifying increase last year. The total output of all kinds of coal was 16,968,568 tons. This represented an increase of 21.9 per cent. over the previous year and a record in the history of the Canadian industry. More extensive working of the lignite mines in Alberta was mostly responsible for the increase. Alberta produced 41 per cent. of the total output. There has been no steady increase in production over the last ten years, however. In 1910 it was 13,216,515 tons for the Dominion and the yearly output since then has sometimes been below and sometimes above that figure.

Sudden appearance of James Sullivan, outside of the big steel cage in the United States marshal's office, Boston, in which he had been locked and bolted while awaiting a hearing on a charge of stealing from the mails, threw Federal agents into a quandary on March 11th. Pictou Train Derailed Pictou, March 19.—John L. Ferguson, engine driver, of Pictou, was killed and several members of the train crew were injured when the short line express No. 34 from Oxford Junction to Pictou ran into an open switch at Urguhart's Siding, about two miles from Tatamagouche, last night. The engine turned completely over, crushing the driver in his seat and hurling the fireman from the tender into a swamp by the side of the track. Conductor Anthony Calder, Clifford Campbell, Ross McPherson, James Rogers, Jas. McKinnon, John Chisholm, Benjamin Hunsphrey, L. E. Doon and Alex McLellan received injuries.

The two cars next the engine left the rails and went over at an angle of forty-five degrees. The first and second class cars held the track, and none of the passengers were injured. Railwaymen say the circumstances are such as to argue a deliberate attempt to wreck the express.

Lucy Dunstan's Conquest

Lucy Dunstan had a very tender heart. She could not bear to see any one suffer, and her pity extended to every kind of living being. When she first learned that meat was made from the cows and sheep she had seen grazing in the field, she refused to eat any for a long time afterwards. Indeed, it was only when after a violent attack of measles, the doctor insisted upon her eating broiled steak and chicken that she would consent to take them.
