Published by Authority

His Excellency the Governor has received the following telegram from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the same is published for the information of those concerned.

JOHN R. BENNETT, Colonial Secretary, Colonial Secretary's Department, 14th September, 1914.

Attention of H. M. Government has been called to the fact that difficulties have arisen between shippers and shipowners in consequence of wish of latter to insert in Bills of Lading a clause to cover obligations which they undertake in many voyages, to call at a port in the United Kingdom for information, instructions or advice before proceeding on the final stage of the voyage.

Following is text of such a clause: "If and so long as the ship is insured against war risks with a War Risk Insurance Association under or in connection with the War Risks Insurance scheme of H. M. Government, the ship (in addition to any liberties expressed or implied in this Bill of Lading) shall have the liberty to comply with any orders or directions as to the departure, arrival, routes, ports of call, stoppages or otherwise whatsoever given by H. M. Government or any Department thereof or any person acting or purporting to act with the authority of His Majesty or of H. M. Government or of any Department thereof or by any Committee or person having understanding of terms of the War Risks Insurance on the ship the right to give such orders or directions and nothing done or to be done by reason of any such orders or directions shall be deemed a deviation."

Shippers do not realize that this requirement is for security of cargo equally to the ship and that it is not to prejudice their interests. I should be much obliged if your Ministers could by public notice or otherwise, explain to shippers the reasons for the requirements in question, so that it will be understood that their interests are being safeguarded and not sacrificed. sep16.11 HARCOURT.

CHAPTER XVIII.

For a moment the two women clung to each other in awful silence, the one in feigned, the other in real terror; then Marie stooped and picked up the vase, and, holding it at arm's length regarded it keenly.

"Yes," she murmured, with a long breath; "it is Lord Merle's! I remember it—I could swear to it. He drew my attention particularly to this one."

Susie leaned against the table with her hand pressed to her heart, and panting, her eyes fixed on the vase as if it were some living, evil thing.

"I remember it—I could swear to it!" muttered Marie, as if to herself. "Susie, you and I have found out who is the thief."

"No, no, no!" almost screamed Susie. "It—it is all a mistake, Miss Marie! I don't believe it—I won't believe it! Master Harry steal that! Master Harry!"

Marie held the vase toward her. "How did it come here?" she asked, gliding to the door and shutting it, and pulling down the blind. "How did it come here, then, Susie, and why has he gone so suddenly? My poor girl, I'm very sorry for you, but your fine Master Harry is the thief who stole the marquis' plate, and he has got the rest of it with him at this moment."

Susie, pallid with terror, fell all of a heap to the floor, and Marie Verner stood over her, still holding the vase. "What is to be done?" she said, hurriedly. "And how did he know the secret? Why, Susie—Susie!" and she shrank back.

Susie raised her swollen eyes, and looked at her fearfully. "Oh, miss, what are you going to say?" she sobbed.

"It is not what I am going to say, it is what the marquis will say, what the judge will say, what the world will say!" she retorted, sternly. "Who told this Harry Herne the word that unlocked that plate closet? Who knew it? I and Miss Darracourt and—you!"

"Me!"

"Yes, you!" repeated Marie Verner, standing over her like an accusing angel threatening her with destruction. "You, and you only, excepting Miss Lucille and myself, knew the word. You told it to Harry Herne!"

Susie held up her trembling hand as if to ward off a blow.

Marie put the vase on the table, and looked down on her with a cruel smile of enjoyment curling her thin lips.

"Susie, I will be your friend on one condition. I like you, my poor girl, and I'm sorry for you. You must make a clean breast of it—you must tell the marquis that you did it, and perhaps he will have some pity for you and this wicked young fellow."

At last the frightened girl turned to bay.

"With a spring she stood and confronted her accuser.

"I make a clean breast of it! I, who never saw this thing till now—and never said a word! Confess that I helped Master Harry—betray Master Harry, who'd rather die inch by inch than touch a thing belonging to the marquis! No! You may not believe me, he may not believe me, all the world may think me as bad as you do, but I'll face 'em all! Ah, and if they send me to prison, I'll go, still crying that Master Harry's as innocent as I am!"

And, flushed and panting, she faced her tormentor.

Marie Verner saw that she had gone too far.

"It is very strange," she murmured, as if a glimmer of doubt had been produced by Susie's strenuous denial. "You swear you are innocent, Susie?"

"I will swear it; I do, miss. And I'll swear Master Harry is innocent, too."

Marie dropped into a chair.

"Then how do you account for this being here?"

Susie glanced at the vase and shuddered.

"I don't know. I'm only a simple girl, Miss Marie. How can I tell? I only know and feel that Master Harry didn't bring it here."

"It doesn't matter. Here it is! You and I found it. The police will know it directly. The fact of its being here and him being seen lurking round the plate-room, will be evidence before the judge to send him to prison for life—for life, Susie! Think of that!"

Susie burst into tears, and clung to the table, convulsed with sobs.

"Oh, poor Master Harry! Poor Master Harry!" she moaned.

"They will get him of a certainty, and they'll make you a witness against him," continued Marie Verner, pitilessly. "You will be the means of sending him to penal servitude."

"I—I! Oh, Miss Marie!"

"Yes; and do you think they'll believe you when you say that you did not tell him last night? Did any one see you here with him?"

Susie put her hand to her head. "Think! think! Did any one see you?"

"Yes," sobbed Susie; "Hope saw us. Hope walked home to the Court with me."

"Ah, another link!" exclaimed Marie Verner. "They will bring Hope up to prove that you were here alone with him. Susie, how could you come? Our good name—"

Susie's sobs drowned the words.

"And the robbery was committed soon afterwards! Everything is dead against him, you see." She paused to let Susie get her breath. "And you still think Harry Herne did not do it?"

"I know he did not!" panted the poor girl.

"Then what do you think? How did this vase get here?"

"I don't know—I can't tell; unless—" She stopped and raised her white face.

"Unless what?" demanded Marie. Susie caught at her breath.

"Unless the marquis put it there himself, and meant to accuse Master Harry of it," she whispered, huskily.

Marie started; a genuine start. The innocent, simple-minded girl had hit the truth—the identical truth.

For a moment she was nonplussed, and stood eyeing the ground; then a flash came into her eyes.

"You think so, do you, Susie?"

"Yes, yes!" assented Susie, fervently. "He would do it; I know him, Miss Marie. He wouldn't stop at anything. All the people know him, and that he'd go through fire to harm any one he didn't like, for all his cold, quiet ways."

"Oh!" muttered Marie, "you think the marquis put it here! It—I don't think it's likely, Susie—it's too childish; but it's impossible. And if he did, then Harry Herne is more nearly ruined than ever."

"Miss!"

"Yes, for the marquis has got him hand and foot. He will know of your being here, he will know of my telling you the secret."

"How?" gasped Susie.

"Because he will make us both witnesses, and when we are in court the lawyers will drag everything out of us. They'd drag the closest secret from the strongest man, and we are only two weak women. They'll make

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure.

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Malloux, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour rising and indigestion. At night I would often awaken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation."

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised. Nothing helped."

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite strong heart action, and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

"You druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarhazone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada."

us tell everything, and then turn it against us."

Susie uttered a moan.

"My poor girl! my poor girl! Think—prison for life, for both you and him!"

Susie threw herself upon her tormentor's arm.

"Oh, Miss Marie, we are innocent, both of us. Save us, Miss Marie, save us!"

"My poor Susie, so I would if I could, but how can I? How can I? Stop, let me think. Don't speak for a moment."

She put her hand to her brow, as if she were thinking hard, and paced the room; then she stopped in front of the trembling, shivering girl.

"I have thought of a plan, Susie," she said, solemnly. "Do you think you can carry it out?"

"I don't know, miss."

"To save yourself and Harry Herne?"

"To save him I'd do anything!" said Susie, huskily.

"That's right. Now, stop crying and listen to me, every word. There is not a moment to lose. The marquis will be going to the police directly, and they will come here and find you and his vase, and all will be lost. Now, Susie, they must not find you or the vase."

"No, miss, no, no!"

"I'll take the vase and hide it," continued Marie.

"Oh, miss, how good you are!"

"I'll do it for your sake, Susie. It's a dangerous thing, and if I were caught I should be treated as they'd treat you and Harry Herne."

"Oh, miss, miss!"

"That will get rid of the vase; and now about you. You must go at once, Susie."

"Yes, miss," assented the poor girl, and she looked at the door as if she were going to start that moment.

"Wait! You must not go like that. They would soon follow you and bring you back. That would never do. That is why I want you to listen carefully."

"Yes, yes, I will listen. I'll do whatever you tell me!" panted Susie.

"You must go quietly and secretly, without any one seeing you. Now, listen. You stay here, and I will go to the Court and bring you a dark dress and an old bonnet of Mrs. Dalton's; I will put a veil with it, and you must pull it over your face, and take care to remember that you are an old woman. You must walk like one and talk like one, if you can."

but you'd better say nothing to any one unless you are obliged."

Susie moaned.

"I will dress you myself, and see that you are quite disguised and unlike your real self. Then you must walk to Silverdale Station on the branch line. Not the station here—you understand?"

"Yes, yes, miss. Silverdale. I know it. Oh, how shall I ever do it?"

"Think of Harry Herne!" said Marie Verner, encouragingly. "Remember that his safety depends on you, pluck, Susie. Why, I'd do it myself if I thought him innocent, and I begin to think he is."

"Oh, thank you for those words, Miss Marie. I'll do it, however hard it is. Go on, miss; go on."

"At Silverdale you must take a ticket for London, and when you are there take a cab and go to this address. See, I will write it down for you," and on a piece of paper she snatched up from the table she wrote an address. "She is a very kind, nice woman, and will do anything I tell her. But, of course, you mustn't stay there, Susie. London is the worst place in the world to hide in; it is full of police and detectives, and they would find you directly."

Susie moaned.

"You must go abroad. To Australia."

"The poor girl uttered a cry."

"Oh, father, father!" She seemed crushed for a moment, then she looked up with quivering lips and streaming eyes. "Yes, miss, I'll do it—I'll do it! But Australia! Oh, poor father—poor father! I shall never see him again."

"Then Harry Herne is a lost man!" said Marie, shrugging her shoulders.

"Oh, don't say that, miss! I said I'd do it; I'll go to the other end of the world, I will, indeed!"

"That's a brave girl!" murmured Marie, encouragingly; "now I'll go and get the clothes. Leave all the rest to me. I'll write to my friend and make all the arrangements."

"Yes, miss," sighed Susie; "but about money?"

"I've thought of that—I mean," she corrected herself quickly, "I happen to have some money with me. Here it is in this purse. It is fifty pounds. How thankful we ought to be that I happen to have it, Susie!"

"Yes, miss, yes! How good you are to him and me! Heaven will bless you for this, miss, mark my words!"

Marie cast down her eyes, and a faint shiver ran through her.

"I do it because I think you are both innocent, and I want to save you, Susie," she said. "But now, listen. You may meet Harry Herne—"

Susie's face cleared for a brief second.

"If you should, you must not say a word, breathe a word of this!"

Susie looked bewildered.

"No, miss."

Arms of the Armies.

Of the rifles now in use by the warring nations the German Mauser in the last form issued to the Kaiser's troops is unquestionably superior to the shoulder arms of the allies.

The latest German Mauser has a muzzle velocity of just above 3,000 feet per second. The pointed bullets of its ammunition are jacketed with steel coated with copper. The core is of soft lead. The bullet weight is 154 grains.

The older model of this rifle with which a portion of the troops will be armed, has a muzzle velocity of about 2,500 feet. The normal allowance of ammunition per man carried on the person is 150 for the latest model and 120 for the older rifle.

The British Lee-Enfield is inferior to the German Mauser ballistically and otherwise. Its only advantage lies in the fact that its magazine carries ten cartridges instead of five. That would make the latter arm for close quarters. A considerable portion of the ammunition used by the British is said to be loaded with the round-nosed bullet.

France still has the Lebel rifle, the oldest of the magazine arms. They have made some ammunition changes of late, but their muzzle velocity is not above 2,500 feet. The last form of bullet which they employ is not only sharp pointed but boat-tailed and made solid, of copper, with a white metal alloy. Its weight is about 200 grains. Some of their older ammunition has a heavier bullet with a jacket and a lower muzzle velocity. The magazine which is forward in the stock carries eight cartridges. The method of loading in one-by-one instead of with the clip as is the case with the German and British rifles.

The Austrians have the Mannlicher, a rather indifferently good model of that arm with a muzzle velocity of 2,500 feet for a bullet weighing about 220 grains. The bullet is jacketed with sheet steel oil and has a hard lead core. The magazine carries five cartridges and there is a loader by which they may all be put in at once.

Russia has her own arm, called the Mosin-Nagant. The rifle is said to have been improved since the Japanese war. Whether they have generally adopted the sharp-pointed bullet is not known. Most of their ammunition is supposed to be round-nosed. The muzzle velocity is just under 2,500 feet. The bullet weighs about 200 grains, with a cupro-nickel jacket

The Four Belles.

There arrived by the Allan Line Carthaginian to-day the Evelyn Keen Troupe or who will be known on our local stages as the "Four Belles." The troupe, which consists of four ladies, are vaudeville artists of no mean ability. They were brought here by Mr. Jack Rossley and will be in evidence at the Rossley Theatre.

Furness and Allan Liners Reach Port.

S. S. Digby, Capt. Trinnock, reached port at 5 o'clock last evening from Liverpool after a passage of 7 days. During the latter part of the voyage the ship met considerable fog which retarded progress. The ship brought four hundred tons of cargo and these saloon passengers for here: J. S. Ayre, Marjorie Ayre, P. F. Fearn, J. C. Marshall, Thomas Peel, P. J. Rorke, Mrs. Rorke, M. Tucker, Mrs. Tucker and one second class. Thirty first-class and eight second are in transit for Halifax, for which port the ship sails this afternoon.

S. S. Carthaginian. The s.s. Carthaginian arrived here this morning from Liverpool. The run occupied 7 days, 18 hours. She brought 450 tons of cargo, 20 bags of mail and as passengers in saloon: J. Jackson, Miss M. Furlong, Miss Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, A. G. Powell, Miss J. Mchison, F. J. King, J. Murdoch, S. Thorpe, Miss J. Strang, Mrs. E. Seward, Master Thos. Seward and sixteen intermediates.

On Sunday morning last service was held on board the Carthaginian, conducted by Rev. Mr. Rusted. Last night an enjoyable concert took place. A feature of the affair was the delightful solos rendered by Miss Jean Strang. A collection was taken up for the orphans and the sum of £3 10s. realized.

DIGBY WON. Keen interest existed among the passengers on board the Digby and Carthaginian, as well as among the crew. Both ships left Liverpool yesterday week in the afternoon. The Digby got away from the Liverpool pier ten minutes before her opponent. The latter, however, caught up to the former before getting clear of the Mersey. The Carthaginian kept the lead all that night until the following day (Wednesday) when the Digby passed her and never sighted the Carthaginian afterwards, beating her by fifteen hours.

BRITAIN AND BELGIUM GREY PUT THE SAME QUESTION TO FRANCE AS HE PUT TO GERMANY—FRANCE AGREED TO RESPECT BELGIUM; GERMANY REFUSED—HOLLWEG REFUSED TO GIVE GUARANTEE IN 1914 THAT BISMARCK GAVE IN 1870.

LONDON, To-day. The Official Press Bureau announces that the following statement is issued with the authority of Sir Edward Grey, with regard to communications made by Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Imperial German Chancellor, to the Press. "Does anyone believe," asks the German Chancellor, "that England would have interfered to protect Belgian freedom against France? The answer is that she would unquestionably have done so. Sir Edward Grey as reported in the White Paper, asked the French Government whether it was prepared to engage to respect neutrality of Belgium so long as no other power violated it. The French Government replied that they were resolved to respect it. The assurance, it was added, had been given several times and had formed the subject of conversation between President Poincaré and the German Chancellor, who entirely ignores the fact that England took the same line about Belgium neutrality in 1870 that she has taken now. In 1870, Bismarck, when approached by England on the subject admitted and respected the treaty obligations in relation to Belgium. The British Government stands in 1914 as it stood in 1870. It is Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg who refused to meet us in 1914 as Prince Bismarck met us in 1870. The Imperial Chancellor finds it strange that Mr. Asquith, in his Guild Hall speech, did not mention the neutrality of Scandinavian countries, and suggests that a reason for omission was some sinister design on England's part. It is impossible for any public speaker to cover the whole ground in each speech. As to the German Chancellor's reference to Denmark, the Danes are not likely to have forgotten the part played by Prussia and England respectively in 1863 and 1864 when the Kingdom of Denmark was dismembered, and the integrity of Norway and Sweden was guaranteed by England and France in the treaty of Stockholm in 1855. The Imperial Chancellor refers to dealings of Britain with the Boer Republic and suggests that she has been false therein to the cause of freedom. Without going into controversies, now historic, we may recall that General Botha said in the South African Parliament a few days ago, when expressing his conviction of the righteousness of the British cause and explaining the firm resolve of the South African Union to aid her in every possible way. Great Britain had given them a constitution under which they could create a great nationality and had ever since regarded them as a free people and as a Sister State. Although there might be many who in the past had been hostile to the British flag, he could venture to say that they would ten times rather be under the British than the German flag. The German Chancellor is equally unfortunate in his reference to the Colonial Empire. So far from British policy having been recklessly egotistic, it has resulted in a great rally of affection and common interest by all the British Dominions, among which there is not one which is not aiding Great Britain by soldiers or other contributions, or both, in this war.

True Toasted Corn

Is as different from commonplace corn flakes, as succulent green sweet corn is different from the hard, flinty, yellow grain of the farmer's corn crib.

In spite of the numerous "corn flakes" marketed, few persons really know the rich sweetness of choice corn when skilfully cooked, flavoured and toasted. This true toasted corn—distinctive in its rich, rare flavour—is called

Post Toasties

A call for "corn flakes" often brings some one of the many brands of ordinary flakes. To avoid disappointment ask for, and insist upon Post Toasties. This food can be distinguished by the original yellow package; by the rich, true corn flavour imprisoned in the making; and by the size and tender crispness of the golden brown flakes.

Toasties are ready to serve hot or cold, with cream or good milk—also with fresh fruit in season. A further delicate flavour may be released by heating a few minutes in oven before serving. And it's a flavour worth knowing!

The Failure of German Diplomacy.

During the past few days we have commented on the failure of German tactics in carrying out the coup which their strategy devised to cripple France before Russia could mobilize enough to become formidable. The communication authorized for publication by Sir Edward Grey in answer to the German Chancellor Herman von Holwig, affords an opportunity to dwell a little on the failure of German diplomacy. The two failures are intimately connected. The failure of German diplomacy was the first step towards the failure of German strategy. German diplomacy edged on Austria to persevere in the Balkan war at a time Austria was showing a disposition to come to an understanding with Russia. Germany incited Austria to brave Russia. This inevitably brought in Russia, Germany and France. To insure the success of her strategical move on France it was necessary to make sure of the neutrality of Britain. Britain gave her the chance. She put up to France and to Germany the question of the neutrality of Belgium. France gave a favorable response. Germany did not do so; she began to bluster about England going to war for "a scrap of paper." That scrap of paper was the guarantee of Britain, France and Germany that the neutrality of Belgium should be observed. That scrap of paper was the touchstone of Germany's honor. If Germany would violate her signature signed, sealed and delivered on that scrap of matter, her word as to her intentions in regard to Belgium at the end of the war was worthless, and Britain could not possibly endure the menace of a German sea frontier threatening the Thames and the Straits of Dover. Germany broke her pledge and Britain declared war. Germany believed that England would not dare to become involved in a continental war. England believed Britain was paralyzed in Ireland. Now they find Redmond and Carson raising volunteers in Ireland to fight side by side against Germany. They believed Britain was paralyzed by politics and that the Labor Party was a peace at any price party. They have had their eyes opened, since by seeing Liberal, Labor and Unionist side by side in the same platform. Here is what John Hodge, Labor M.P., said at a recruiting meeting, reported in the Daily Citizen, a Labor organ:—

"Lord Kitchener would not have me if I presented myself," Mr. Hodge began. "It is not for lack of being measured." The audience glanced at the ample form of the member for the Gorton Division and saw the point. The next moment he had them gripped in passionate interest. "If I could halve my years he should have a recruit"—and volumes of cheering broke loose. Then, in low, deliberate tones he said: "If I had sons I would cry shame on them if they did not enlist. And if you young men do not answer the call our daughters will put you to shame."

There was at this moment only one party in the State. (Cheers) "I cannot fight," Mr. Hodge declared, "I will pay. I shall grudge as a non-combatant, no tax the Government places upon me to provide for those who are going to the front." (Applause.)

Germany find Labor Legions added to the army. They believed India was in a state of secession. They are now finding India setting an example to the whole Empire in tendering men and money.

They believed the Boer would turn on Britain. They now find Boer and Britain winning victories over them in South Africa; and General de Wet, the most elusive of the Boer Generals offering to command a force of scouts against the Germans in Europe. They believed the Dominions would assume an attitude of neutrality and would not recognize that they were at war with a European Power. Now they find the Dominion Parliaments providing men and money to fight the Germans.

The Empire is more pronouncedly united than it ever was. None are for a party; all are for the State. The first fruit of this unity has been the defeat of Germany's strategy. After overrunning about a dozen departments in northern France the Germans have been driven back into three or four departments near the Belgium, Luxembourg and Lorraine frontiers. The full fruit will be power to draw the fangs of German militarism and give Freedom and Liberty a chance throughout the world.

JOIN FORCES AFTER GREAT LOSSES. Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to the Express from Rome, states that the Austrian armies commanded by General Dankl and Offenberg, have joined forces at Rzesow, 13 miles northeast of Jarselan. In the course of this operation, the despatch says, they lost forty per cent. of their number.

ONE LINE OF RETREAT CUT OFF.

LONDON, To-day. Reuter's Paris correspondent says the relief of Fort Troyon is likely to have an important bearing on the fate of the German army. The Germans were investing Fort Troyon and the neighboring forts between Toul and Verdun with the object of opening the way of retreat on their left. The failure of this plan means the French are masters of the Valley from Toul to Verdun. Therefore the armies of Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duke of Wurtemberg are enabled to cross the Meuse, will have to go farther north and attempt to pass by Steeny Gap.

GERMAN PEOPLE STUPEFIED.

LONDON, To-day. A Bordeaux despatch says that according to a Berlin telegram, the newspapers there testify to the stupefaction of the German people on learning of the retreat of the armies which were believed to be under the walls of Paris. The papers endeavor to explain the retreat as strategic, adding that the final result must be awaited.

KAISER ON THE MOVE AGAIN.

PARIS, To-day. The Petit Journal prints a telegram from Berlin stating the German Emperor will proceed to East Prussia to assume chief command against the Russian side.

AUSTRIAN ARMY IN DIFFICULTIES.

LONDON, To-day. Telegraphing from Rome, the correspondent of the Daily Express says the surrender of the Austrian army led by General Dankl and von Affenberg is imminent. The heir to the Austrian throne, archduke Charles Francis, is with General Dankl's army, which his entirely cut off from communication. Five German army corps marching to the relief of the Austrians, have been checked at Grodek by the Russian corps. General Dankl's army is caught in the Morose west of River San. The last hope of the Austrians is to concentrate between the triangular fortress works of Frensyll Cracov and Jarselan. They can accomplish this, if at all, only by tremendous losses.

Later—2.30 P. M.

GERMANS MUST FIGHT TO GET OUT.

PARIS, To-day. The Matin discussing the withdrawal of the Germans, points out that in order to cover its retreat and avoid the blocking of roads open to it, the German army will have to make time and fight a second and perhaps a third battle. These battles will be fought under conditions according to the Matin, certainly most favourable to the French forces which thanks to their reinforcements and the rapidity of movements assured them by railways will be able to face all eventualities without anxiety.

FRENCH OFFICIAL NEWS. 3 P. M.

The following bulletins have been posted at St. Pierre:

At left wing yesterday the Germans resisted at north of Laine on a line from the Eagle Forest to De Gronne. At centre their line of resistance was transferred to north of Rheims and at Camp Dechalons, this to permit communication with town of Vienna. At west of the Argonne the enemy occupying the southern part of the Argonne accentuated their movement of retreat between the Argonne and the Meuse, holding late last night a front from Varennes to Consenvoye.

At our right the Germans are retreating on Etrain, Metz, Dolme and Chateau Salins. In the Vosges and Alsace the situation is unchanged. The Belgian army continues to harass the enemy in vicinity of Anvers and are in close touch with the enemy on the front from the heights of L'Ame to the west up to the North of Rheims and the centre of our advance continues between the Argonne and the Meuse. It is absolutely false that the army of the Kron Prince is besieged and bombarded Verdun, this town not having been entangled at all except for a short time. The fort of Troyon which is just the defence of the heights of the Meuse, and has been violently attacked but well defended and since yesterday is clear of the enemy.

On the right there is nothing of importance to mention. The concentrations of Garibaldi at Liont is now at an end. They form four battalions and are commanded by General Pappino Garibaldi. This movement has been the object of imposing French and Italian demonstrations. Herewith is a message from the Czar to President Poincare: "The news of French victories fill me with joy and

I transmit to you my most cordial congratulations. The value of your troops and the tact of their operations in this great action is great, and I have much pleasure in expressing the admiration with which I am inspired. The President replied: I thank your Majesty for the congratulations which will profoundly touch France and her army. The big victory won by Russian troops Galicia, has rejoiced all our French hearts. The Government of the Republic and we have not the slightest doubt that this will be followed by other brilliant successes in Germany.

600 Prisoners and 12 Guns Captured.

LONDON, Sept. 15. Governor, St. John's: The following is from the Press Bureau: The enemy still occupies a strong position north of the Aisne. Fighting is in progress along the whole line. The army of the Crown Prince has been driven further back and is now on the line of Varennes, Consenoye and Ornes. The allied troops have occupied Rheims. Six hundred prisoners and twelve guns were captured yesterday by the corps on the right of the British. Rain has made the roads heavy and increased the difficulties of the German army in their retreat.

The Irish Home Rule Bill.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Sept. 15. After the Unionists had made a formal protest and had left the Chamber, the House of Commons this afternoon passed through all its stages the bill introduced by Premier Asquith to suspend the operation of the Irish Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment Bills. In the House of Lords the motion for the second reading of the Home Rule Bill was adjourned on a vote of 93 to 29. Introducing his bill, Mr. Asquith strongly repudiated the assertion that the Government had violated any of its assurances not to proceed with legislation. To have postponed the passage of the Bills till after the termination of the war, he said, would have had a deplorable effect on the Irish race all over the world, and on Irish recruiting. The Premier promised that before the Home Rule Bill came into operation, the Government would introduce an entirely new Amending Bill. Mr. Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, during whose speech the Liberals left the Chamber, entered his protest against the Bill introduced by Mr. Asquith. Mr. Redmond, the Irish leader in the Commons, replied to Bonar Law in a speech supporting the Bill. He expressed the hope that during the intervening period, when Ulsterites and Nationalists were fighting shoulder to shoulder, a new spirit would arise all over Ireland, making a real settlement possible. The Welsh and Labor leaders expressed their satisfaction with the bill, and it passed through all its stages with cheers from Nationalists and Ministerialists. In the Lords during a debate on Lord Crewe's motion for the second reading of the Home Rule Bill, adjournment was taken by a vote of 93 to 29.

Russians One Day's March From Przemysl

Special to Evening Telegram. PETROGRAD, Sept. 15. The General Staff has issued an announcement as follows: The Russian troops are progressing along the lower stretches of the San River without meeting resistance from the defeated enemy, who continue to retreat. After having occupied Grodek, 16 miles west of Lemberg, and reached the Moesiska, 37 miles S.W. of Lemberg, the Russians find themselves within a single day's march of Przemysl. There was no fighting on Monday in Eastern Prussia.

Forced to Surrender.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Sept. 15. The correspondent of the Central News at Dieppe, under date Monday, Sept. 14, transmits the report that the Germans under General Von Kluck, have been forced to surrender. The correspondent says a report has reached Dieppe that the extreme left of the allies, after making an encircling movement by way of Roye and Ham, and joining forces from the Boulogne district, have compelled Von Kluck to surrender with, according to one statement 1,400 (? 14,000) men, and, according to another statement, with 25,000 men and a quantity of guns and war material.

Another Big Fight Promised Within a Week.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, this a.m.

The Battle on the Marne has about come to an end. Although the Allied Armies are keeping in touch with the retreating Germans, it is evident the latter are taking up positions to stay the northward advance of the French and British. General Von Kluck with his army has made a stand north of the River Aisne on a line marked by the forest of Laigle and Craonne, while the armies of Generals Von Buelow and Von Hausen, the Duke of Wurttemberg, and the Crown Prince are falling back to straighten out the front on which the next big battle will likely be fought. Although the Germans have been badly punished in their long retreat and have lost many guns and men, they maintain cohesion, and unless the French succeed in their attempt to get between the army of the Crown Prince and those operating west of him, they will present a solid front when the time comes for another clash which will be as big as the recent battle. The new position of the Germans, if they can gain it, offers better opportunities for defence than the ground they have passed over during the last ten days. Their right apparently extends as far west as St. Quentin through a country intersected by rivers and streams that will embarrass the attacking forces. The main German forces under Generals Von Buelow and Von Hausen, the Duke of Wurttemberg and the Crown Prince, stretch along the river Aisne to the hills behind Rheims and then north to Verdun, thus holding the roads and railways running north from Rethel to the Belgian frontier, and eastward to Luxemburg, Metz and Lorraine. Thus by bringing the army of the Crown Prince more in line, they will be covered by their own fortress at Metz. Some military experts are of opinion that the Germans will offer their next big resistance on the Meuse, and that another big battle of Sedan will be fought before many days. Much must pass before this takes place, however. The last reports from the allies were that they were keeping up a keen pursuit. With probably fresh troops, the French left wing, with large forces of cavalry, some of which are reported as far north as the Belgian frontier, continues to harass the German right, while the British and French forces which gained passages over the Aisne two days ago, and are now somewhere between that River and the River Oise, are trying to repeat their outflanking movement which they carried on at Ourcq last week. Rheims has been reoccupied by the Allies, but reports make no mention of the neighboring fortresses of La Fere and Laon, the recapture of which should not be difficult, as they are not constructed to resist attack. From north and south they are relatively weak. On the French right the Germans are falling back to Chateau Salins, just across the Lorraine border, which has been the scene of so many skirmishes since the beginning of the war. In the Vosges and Alsace the situation remains unchanged both sides reserving their strength for a more critical contest in the west.

MARSHALL BROTHERS.

Do You Understand?

By Robert Blatchford.
We have received many requests from readers to reprint Mr. Robert Blatchford's famous pamphlet on "Germany and England," the publication of which in "The Daily Mail" aroused so much discussion nearly five years ago. Mr. Blatchford is now preparing a new edition, completely revised. It will be ready for issue on Monday. The price will be one penny.

We publish below some extracts from the new chapter which Mr. Blatchford has just written. "The day" has come, Germany is making war with the utmost violence, and the destinies of five Great Powers are in the melting pot. At last the British people are obliged to own that the German menace was real, and that the "war scare" they laughed at was a danger and must now be met.

But do they yet understand how great the danger is and what it will cost to meet it?

A few days ago I was at Eastbourne and at Brighton, watching the holiday crowds in their innocent and placid enjoyment. Thousands of young men and women were walking on the promenade, thousands were lounging on the beach; children were laughing and paddling and building sand castles; the band was playing, the sea and sky were beautifully blue and serene. And this was more than a fortnight after after our Government had declared war with Germany.

Who could realize that these people were engaged in the greatest war of human history? Who could realize that a few hours' journey across that smooth band of sparkling water the troops of four nations were at death grips?

We are at war. We are committed to a war that will be desperate and terrible in its action, and in its results appalling. And here are young men flirting, laughing, riding, swimming—"feeling the hours away as men did in the golden age."

Every one of those merry, careless young men ought to have a rifle on his shoulder. Every one of those happy girls ought to be at work preparing for the hardest trial that ever came upon the British nation. This is no time for play. This is a time of war!

Do the British people understand it? Do they realise yet why we are at war and what war means to all of us?

Some of them understand the origins of this world war, some of them realise that the cost will be dreadful. Many perhaps have got so far as to suppose we are at war in fulfilment of the French entente or in defence of the neutrality of Belgium; but for most of them the situation is expressed by the John Bull contents bill: "To Hell with Serbia!"

To these puzzled, apathetic millions it cannot be too soon made plain that we are not fighting about Serbia. We are not fighting for Serbia, nor are we fighting solely or directly for Belgian neutrality, or for the honour and integrity of France.

No. This is a British war as much as it is a French war. We are fighting for our Empire and our Colonies, we are fighting for our independence and our honour, for our liberty, and for our bread and butter.

We are not fighting because we want to fight, we are fighting because we must. I say we must fight. It is not only the professional soldiers and sailors who must fight. We must fight or go under; more than that, we must win or go under.

This war did not originate in the murder of the Austrian Grand Duke. It arose out of the German desire to dominate the world. It is not a casual war, caused by some offence of yesterday.

look steadily at the fact and prepare at once to face it.

We must look for trials and losses, for suffering and travail. We are engaged in a life or death struggle. We must fight for our Empire or lose it, we must fight for our trade or lose it, we must fight for our liberty or lose it. We must fight to a finish against a nation armed and desperate. We must know that victory will cost us dear, and we must understand that defeat will mean ruin and a shame as bitter as slavery.

I hope those responsible to the nation in this war will have the great courage to tell the British people the truth. The safety of the Empire depends upon the immediate and unconditional response of the whole of the people of the Empire.

"Arm Every Man."
It is the duty of the Government to call up and to arm every man capable of bearing arms. It is the duty of the people, women as well as men, to submit cheerfully to any sacrifice. Should the struggle prove a long one and the supply of food run short, it is the duty of the Government to commandeer all food supplies and put the nation upon rations as would the commandant of a fort besieged.

Germany will fight hard, and the victory over her must be decisive and final. This time the armed bully must be disarmed. This war must end the German menace for ever. This time Europe must put an end to the hope of kings or kaisers to buy by force of an armed nation of rober bullies the domination of the world.

There are no classes now, no parties; we are all Britons, united for a common cause and in a common danger. It is our duty to trust and help the Government; and it is the duty of the Government to trust us.

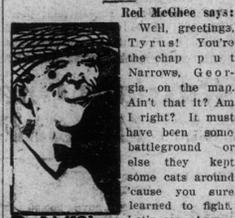

There ought not, in a month's time, to be in these islands a single young man or boy between the ages of sixteen and sixty without arms and some skill to use them.

For theatrical patriotism, flag-waving, and the singing of foolish songs we have no use. But unless we are the cowardly decadents the Germans think us; it were well we should unite in the great shout of the patriots of old France: "To arms, citizens, to arms."

For the foreign service army we may trust Lord Kitchener; but for any service which a sane and manly Briton may be called upon to do, the Government may trust the people.

Ty. Cobb.

Red McGhee says: Well, greetings, Ty Cobb! You're the chap put Narrows, Georgia, on the map. Ain't that it? Am I right? It must have been some battleground or else they kept 'cause you sure learned to fight. Let's see—August 19, nineteen-four—that settles your bush league score. One year—then big time stands. You hit Detroit in nineteen-five and made all 'em come alive 'n' bow with hats in hands.

No use to tell you, Ty, ol' boy, the million ways that you annoy those other seven teams. Your batin', throwin', rummin', slides an' all that other stuff besides is just 'like talkin' dreams. No use for me to tell you these—the baseball world is on its knees to worship at your shrine. An' anyway, you'd beat me out—you know, Ty, you're your own best tout at tellin' how you shine.

But Ty, ol' boy, with all your class, you sometimes pull some stuff that's crass. You know the stunts I mean. That stuff don't help the Tigers none. You give your temper too much fun. Ol' boy it's time to wane. The fans have slipped you cohn 'n' fame. They wanna see you in the game—to watch you hit 'n' steal. Suspensions, layoffs, all that junk appeals to fans us, pretty punk. They want a near square deal.

Says Corpses Choked Up the Meuse.

A French Writer Describes the Awful Slaughter of German Soldiers.
Paris, Sept. 10.—"It would be difficult to estimate the number of German killed last week. Whole regiments were annihilated at some points. They came out of the woods, section by section. One section, one shell—and everything was wiped out. At two or three places which I am forbidden to name corpses filled the Meuse until the river overflowed. This is no figure of speech. The river bed was literally choked by the mass of dead Germans. The effect of our artillery surprises, even our dreams. The Germans use our date grape which the Turks used in the Balkans. Its damages are so slight that one of our artillery regiments fought for a week using only eight killed and fourteen wounded."

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Wedding Bells.

McLACHLAN—MOORE.
On Sept. 2nd, at Waskada, Manitoba, a fair daughter of Terra Nova, in the person of Miss May Moore, was united in the sacred bonds of matrimony to Mr. W. R. McLachlan, of Brandon. The ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, Rev. W. B. Ambrose, and who for many years labored here in the Newfoundland Conference with much acceptance. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents, amounting to the value of several hundred dollars. The bride is the eldest daughter of our well known and popular citizen, Mr. Joseph Moore, merchant of St. Anthony. She was educated here in the city at the Methodist College, and finished her studies at one of the Western colleges. We feel sure that all her friends at home will extend both to Mrs. McLachlan and her good husband every good wish for their welfare in life's journey—and in this same wish the Telegram heartily joins.

YOUNGLOVE—HADDON.

A quiet wedding was celebrated in the Methodist Church on Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock, when Mr. Ralph R. Younglove was united in marriage to Miss Daisy M. Haddon, the pastor Rev. A. J. Bolton, officiating. The only decoration was an attractive arrangement of house plants which lent color to the scene. The bride looked charming indeed in a tailored suit of navy blue serge with hat to match. The couple were unattended. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Younglove received the congratulations of numerous friends who were present at the wedding. The young couple then motored to Mr. and Mrs. B. Joyce's where a supper was served to the immediate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Younglove. Those present were B. K. Younglove, Lawton, Iowa, Mrs. Goodspeed and son, Atlanta, Iowa, R. Younglove and Mr. and Mrs. Joyce, of Drinkwater. The couple will take up their residence immediately on Mr. Younglove's farm near here.

Mr. Younglove came to Drinkwater several years ago, when this district began first to receive attention as an agricultural community, and was for a few years one of the most prominent operators of a steam plowing and threshing outfit. Recently he has devoted his attention almost exclusively to farming and has been most successful. During his residence here he has won the sincere friendship of the entire community and all unite in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Younglove a very happy wedded life.—Drinkwater News, B.C.

The Miss Haddon referred to above is a daughter of the late Mr. John Haddon, of H.M.C. (this city.)

Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fuzetti

Women—the Burden Bearers

Marian's secret, intensified by the fear into which Calhoun's veiled threat had plunged her, shrieked for release. Much of the night she lay awake, brooded over by clouds of black misgivings.

She felt exhausted when she started for the dining room to have her breakfast. Her eyes burned. Her nerves were on edge. She conversed with a feverish animation with the McCarrrens, in an effort to clear her mind of the night's tangle of apprehensions.

After breakfast, Mr. McCarrrens and Johnny trotted out to the tennis courts with their rackets. Marian turned to Mrs. McCarrrens with a sudden irremissible impulse. "I'm nearly crazy!" she burst forth.

"Why, my dear, what's it all about?" demanded the older woman with sympathetic concern.

"It's that man Calhoun," replied Marian. "You know he left very abruptly yesterday. When I reached my room, I found this letter from him."

Marian thrust the letter into the other's hands, and began at once, in low, rapid sentences, to recount all the events precedent to Calhoun's departure. Mrs. McCarrrens listened in eager attention.

"Well, isn't that just like a man!" she exploded, when Marian had finished. "It's the most absurd and disgusting thing I ever heard of. It's such a pity that you should be subjected to anything like this."

"Did you ever hear of such nerve?" demanded Marian, feeling better already, now that she felt free to discuss the matter with the other.

"I have reached the conclusion," said Mrs. McCarrrens hopelessly, "that men are all just about alike. It's their old trick to blame everything that happens to them on some woman."

"But I hardly knew Mr. Calhoun," exclaimed Marian.

From a letter received in town this week we learn that there are now 22,000 troops in camp at Valcartier (Quebec and that of this number there are about 200 men in hospital, some having colds, rheumatism, and such like ailments. It is said that the Canadian contingent will not sail for at least two weeks more, and its destination is not yet decided on. The Rev. Anderson Wells, a native of Con-

The Issue.

Tremendous issues are at stake! A mighty tyrant, mad with lust, Would wrest from us what we most prize, Would humble us e'en to the dust!

The rights of freemen he denies, All unto him must bend the knee; His mailed fist must rule on land, His feet, unchallenged, sweep the sea!

Behold, the awful hour is struck! Remembering those that gave you birth, Come, Britons, lay the tyrant low! Smite him from off the face of earth!

Those men who fight for Liberty— Who give for it their final breath, Achieve a glorious victory, As they, in dying, conquer Death!

Who rules with rods must be overthrown, And those in bondage be set free; So men of every creed and clime, May sing thy praise, O Liberty!

"Nothing But the Best."

The programme advertised by the popular "Crescent Picture Palace" today is one in keeping with the Crescent's motto: "Nothing but the best."

The feature picture: "The End of the Road" is one of those absorbing dramas that hold the attention all through; the hero, a tourist, loses his way and finally brings up at a tavern, the tavern keeper and a pal plot to rob him; Doris, the inn keeper's daughter, overhears the plot and warns Dick who has to make a big fight for his liberty. "The Plaything" a society drama, in which Gertrude Robinson plays the role of the adventuress, is intensely interesting. "Buddy's Bandit" is a western comedy acted by the Frontier Photo Play Co. and is full of life and very amusing. Miss Alice Clark, prima donna, sings "Take Me Back," the latest waltz ballad by Irving Berlin, composer of "When I Lost You." "Take Me Back" is enjoying a greater success in New York to-day than any of Berlin's former successes.

Minard's Lintment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last May and after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINTMENT I was perfectly cured, so that I could start on the road.

Dashing Naval Exploit.

British Submarine in Kiel Canal.

A report of a British naval exploit, which in its daring far surpasses the raid on Heligoland, has reached us, says the Glasgow Herald.

It is stated that about the middle of last week a British submarine succeeded in entering the Kiel Canal. Without its presence being detected, it approached within a few hundred yards of a German Dreadnought, at which it discharged two torpedoes. Both shots appear to have missed or to have been stayed off by the torpedo nets of the German vessel.

In order to escape attack the submarine was then obliged to sink. For a time its position was one of extreme peril, and five of the crew were suffocated. A bold dash out was attempted with success, and the submarine, it is stated, is now back in the British lines.

This exploit may explain the opening phrase "according to information derived from a trustworthy source" in the British official report as to the seven damaged German destroyers which arrived at Kiel, and of the others which "have sunk in the vicinity of the Canal."

The information was perhaps obtained from British submarines which had penetrated well into German waters, and had probably attacked several of the enemy's ships.—Liverpool Express, Sept. 8.

Something to Tell About.

"It is ever so nice of you to take me. It was a lovely ride and it will give me something to write home about."

"So my neighbor's visitor, whom I had the pleasure of entertaining one afternoon, thanked me, and I smiled inwardly at her nicely frank phrasing of a feeling which enters so largely into most of our pleasures. For though few of us are so frank about it, even to ourselves, the thought that this is something that we can write or tell others about gives us a large part of our enjoyment of various pleasures."

If people were permitted to go to Europe only on the condition that they should not write a single post card or letter during the whole trip, should never mention it afterwards, never say "When I was in Europe," I think that half of the tourists who now make the grand tour would stay right at home.

Not write post cards indeed! It is unthinkable. The souvenir post card has been the most delightful outlet ever invented for this age-old feeling. When souvenir cards first crept into existence and were comparatively rare, we hunted up the picture of some famous spot which we had seen and sent it to envious friends with the impressive information, "Saw this today. Wish you were here." Then souvenir cards became more common and we had the still greater pleasure of sending a picture of ourself to the stay-at-homes with our room marked with an X. And when the finished-while-you-wait picture post cards of oneself with some famous spot—Plymouth Rock or the Barney Stone—for a background, proving beyond controversion that we had actually "been there," came into being, that was the last refinement. The future may hold something better than this but it is hard to imagine what it may be.

The thought of telling one's friends about it afterwards will give zest not only to the pleasant but even to the disagreeable experience, provided only it can be made to sound alluring in the telling.

Once upon a time a party of tourists left the beautiful southern seaport at which they were stopping and spent a day travelling inward to see a big cocoa plantation. They chose an unusually hot day and came back hot, dusty, dishevelled and tired with the utter exhaustion that such a trio breeds.

"Did you have a good time?" asked the hotel clerk as they stopped for their keys.

They expressed their disgruntlement.

"Never mind," said the hotel clerk, who was something of a human nature student, "never mind, when you go home and someone serves you a cup of cocoa you can say, 'I've been where the beans that make this stuff grow and picked them off the trees.'"

Which was after all just the reason most of those people had taken that excursion.

If one were ever tempted to envy Adam and Eve their Eden one should recall one terrible drawback—there was no one to whom they could either write or tell what a good time they were having! And what would Eden be without that privilege?

Red Comm.

Belgium.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

Belgium, which has lately surprised the world by holding Germany with all the fury of a 111-pound quarter tackling a Percheron fullback, is an enlarged wheatfield into which 7,000,000 people have been stuffed by industry and an entire lack of race suicide.

Belgium is no bigger than a congressional district in Kansas and an energetic automobile can cross it in two hours. But it is one of the busiest spots on the globe. It exports $200,000,000 worth of goods each year and raises almost enough produce on its corner-lot farms and pocket gardens to feed its population. Every one works in Belgium. Even the dogs have to draw milk carts, though when a Belgian farmer has a valuable dog, he does not risk it in hot weather. He makes his wife draw the cart.

Belgium produces coal, lace, porcelain, sugar, steel and old masters in immense quantities with tourists, Antwerp and Brussels are fine cities, full of rare old paintings, pavements and smells, and no American is satisfied until he has gazed upon the works of Rubens and Van Dyke. Both of these great painters hailed from Antwerp and the city is prouder of this than it is of the fact that it is the second greatest seaport in the world.

peculiar and terrifying Dutch language the latter revolted and became a separate nation.

Belgium also produces the famous Belgian hare, which seems to be the only citizen of the country who knows how to run.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company.
Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

WAR.

Oh, some body poisoned the emperor's dog, yes, gave it of arsenic more than a pound; at dawn it was lying out in the fog, its legs in the air and its tail on the ground. The emperor muttered.

"This insult, by Jing, most certainly calls for an ocean of blood; and now I shall climb on the frame of the king who handed my bow-wow a poisonous spud." The emperor summoned his three million men, and told them to scrap white the scrapping was fine; the king, much offended, emerged from his den, and called for his soldiers, and got them in line. Ah, then, there was war, and the sickening feud, and there was a soul searching chorus of groans; and travellers waded through rivers of blood, or twisted their ankles on hillocks of bones. The homes of the people made excellent fires, and women were widowed without their consent; and children were waiting in vain for the stews whose blood for a bow-wow was foolishly spent. And when it was over, and legions were slain, a horse doctor looked at the emperor's Spitz. "The best wasn't poisoned," he muttered; "that's plain—the confounded dog was a victim of fits."

Torbay En Fete.

The whole parish of Torbay gave itself up to rejoicing on yesterday, Sunday. The occasion was an historic one—the first time in the annals of the Parish that Torbay had a priest of its own at the Altar in Torbay Church. The celebrant was the Rev. John F. Kerivan, a newly-ordained priest, who officiated at the invitation of the Rt. Rev. Monsignor St. John, P.P., D.P.

The first mass was celebrated at 8.30 and the solemn mass was sung at 10.30. A large congregation was present at each mass. The singing at the Missa Cantata was excellent—the choir being that of the Presentation Convent School under the direction of Rev. Mother De Sales. The rendering of the sacred music reflected great credit on the musical talent of Torbay and on the great work done by the good nuns.

The sermon was drawn from the Epistle of the Day—"Bear ye one another's burden and so ye shall fulfill the law of Christ"—Ep. St. Paul to Galatians. The large congregation was visibly touched by the words of the preacher as he unfolded to them the spirit of the sacred text, and outlined the duties of those who aspire to follow the Divine Master's example. At the conclusion he gave all present the young priest's blessing.

Later in the day a deputation from the parishioners waited upon Father Kerivan at the Presbytery and presented him with an address (which we print below), and a purse of gold. The address was read by Mr. John White, and the presentation was made by Mr. Denis Coady. Fr. Kerivan was taken by surprise, and expressed his delight to be back again amongst his own people, and fittingly referred to the warm expressions of appreciation he had just heard, and to the gift by which they were accompanied.

ADDRESS.

Dear Father Kerivan,—
We, the friends of your youth, assemble here to-day to welcome you and to give utterance to the joy that fills our hearts at seeing you a consecrated Priest, offering the Holy Sacrifice in the Church of Torbay, your native place.

We feel proud of the fact of your being the first of Torbay's sons raised to the dignity of the Priesthood and we wish you many long and happy years to work for God in the sacred ministry.

May God's blessing ever accompany you in your future career and may health, success and happiness be your daily reward.

We beg you to accept this small gift as a token of our regard for you with the request that you may sometimes remember us at the Holy Altar.

Hr. Grace Notes

At a meeting of the Conception Bay British Society, on Monday night, it was unanimously decided that any member joining the Volunteers and going to the front would be kept in good standing and receive all the advantages of the Society during his absence.

The ladies of Harbor Grace formed themselves into a committee as a branch of the St. John's Patriotic Association. The collectors appointed to solicit subscriptions in the different parts of the town, brought in their report on Friday last, which was very satisfactory. The officers are:—President—Mrs. W. A. Oke; 1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. Ward; 2nd Vice-President—Mrs. E. E. Parsons; Treas.—Mrs. J. Casey; Secretary—Mrs. D. Munn.

Mrs. Brown, widow of Mr. Geo. Brown, who has been ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Heath, passed away at 11 o'clock last night, aged 76 years.

The garden party and dance held by the K. E. B., on Wednesday afternoon and night was very enjoyable, and the proceeds satisfactory.

Sergt. William Quinn, of the K. E. Brigade, and Miss Winnie Snooks, were married on Friday morning at the Methodist Parsonage, the Rev. A. A. Holmes officiating. The bride, who was neatly dressed, looked very pretty and was attended by Miss Susie Parsons, and the groom was supported by Mr. Ambrose Parsons. Quite a number of well-wishers were present to witness the ceremony. May all happiness be theirs.

The partridge berry picking season commenced on Saturday, and a large number of people were in the country. The berries are very plentiful, and the law to protect them is a good one, and very few, if any, were picked contrary to the law.

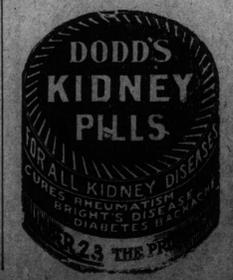

At Nuptial Mass at the Cathedral on Tuesday morning Miss Margaret Louise Goff, youngest daughter of the late Peter Goff, and Mr. J. Gillis, who keeps a fox ranch at Crabbe's Station, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Walker in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride wore a very becoming suit of white silk crepe de chine with green hat and was much admired. She was attended by Miss Annie Croak. The groom was assisted by Mr. Wm. Madigan. The presents were many and costly, that from the groom to the bride being a substantial cheque, and to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, the groom's present being a valuable watch pendant. On leaving the church the wedding march was played in perfect style by Miss Mary Hanrahan. The wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Sullivan. The bride who left here some ten years ago resided with her brother, Mr. L. E. Goff, at Port Saunders, for a couple of years. Then going to New York she secured a position as governess, where her services were highly appreciated, so much so that nothing short of matrimony would secure the approval of her employer to the separation. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for their home, taking with them the best wishes of all their many friends for a long and happy marriage life.

We regret to record the sudden death at Victoria, B.C., of Mrs. John Fred Noel, Mrs. Noel who was a Miss Emily Sparks of this town, has resided with her husband at British Columbia for a number of years. She retired to bed on August 26th in apparently good health. Hearing her cough shortly after her husband spoke to her, but getting no answer he turned on the light and was horrified to find her dead. Mrs. Noel was about 64 years of age. The sorrowing family has the sympathy of their many friends and acquaintances here.

A visitor countrywards a few days ago was pleased to be able to count 54 sheep in one flock. There is pasture about here for thousands and the dogs are now not much to be feared. Quite a large number of sheep are now being kept about here. There is money in them.

SCARCITY OF BAIT.—From the Southern Shore we learn that there are no squid at any of the places where these fishes were found in abundance at this season in recent years. The old jiggling ledges have practically failed, and as a consequence the shore fishermen cannot get enough to have a trial on the local grounds. The same scarcity of bait was reported all over the island yesterday, but it is the opinion of the old time fishermen that the squid will again strike the land within a few days.

The Collision Case.

The Regatta Committee last evening held an investigation into the collision that occurred in the Society Race on Regatta Day. The object of the meeting in the main was to consider allegations made regarding a certain coxswain also to deal with a charge against an oarsman for throwing an oar out of the Shamrock boat. Both these men were notified to be present but they failed to put in an appearance. A communication was received from the one who threw the oar admitting the charge. He gave as his reason that he thought the Shamrock was run down by the Cadet. Two coxswains interested in the race referred to were present to give evidence but refused to do so in the absence of the Shamrock's coxswain. Another coxswain, who was called in as an independent witness, did not make any statement. Mr. Monroe, who was the judge for the race, stated that he did not see what happened after the four boats left the stakes, owing to the thick fog. Nothing definite was arrived at. The meeting adjourned shortly before midnight until Thursday evening of next week to give the Shamrock's coxswain another opportunity to be present.

TRAPNELL The Eyesight Specialist

Examines the eyes without DRUGS, DROPS or DANGER. He not only finds the trouble, but with his perfect optical machinery he can grind the correct lenses to suit the most complicated cases, and do it quickly.

There was a time when all compound lenses had to be sent out of the country for, involving a delay of three or four weeks, but that day has passed; an hour or two is sufficient to produce any lens that may be called for.

Prescriptions filled or broken lenses replaced if you have the pieces.
