CHAPTER XI. Lord Herdale.

Evva was not seriously hurt by her fall from the bridge; indeed, she was not so much affected by it as by the strange behaviour and words of Harry Lashmore. Few women are surprised when a man falls in love with them, for the youngest and most inexperienced girl is quick to see the premonitory symptoms, and Lashmore's eyes had often been eloquent. But she was amazed and wounded by his manner when she had fully recovered consciousness, by the sudden cessation of his avowal.

She tingled with shame as she recalled the expression of his face, his attitude, as he had stood tongue-tied, awkward and embarrassed, before her. To have said so much and yet to have refrained from saying more was almost an insult to her; and the shame which she felt was caused by the conviction that if he had continued to make love to her, instead of stopping suddenly and drawing back, she might have yielded. Yes; he had insulted her, and yet she could scarcely believe that he intended doing so, for he was a gentleman and appeared to be so frank and honest. His conduct was inexplicable, almost mysterious.

She was so fortunate as to reach her room unseen; but it was some minutes before she changed her wet things. Her fall had given her a bump on her head, but it was fortunately on the back of it, and was concealed by her hair. There would be no need to say anything to anyone of her accident. She remained in her room for some time, trying to solve the problem, trying to save her wounded pride; then she went downstairs, dressed for dinner.

"You look pale; are you tired?" said Sir Talbot, as he took his seat.

"No; I am all right," she replied. Did you get a good basket?"

"Fairly good; they weren't rising very well. Oh, by the way, Mr. Lashmore has left us. He was called to town suddenly. I am sorry. I shall miss him very much, for he is a very nice and pleasant young fellow."

Eva was not surprised, and she did not blush; she felt too acutely to change color.

"I'm afraid it was bad news," said Sir Talbot, "for he looked rather upset. He did not say what it was, and of course I did not ask him; though I must confess I should like to have done so, for he interests me very much."

Eva felt that she must say something. "I am afraid you will miss him, dear. You must take me fishing with you always."

"Yes," he said absently; then he looked up. "You will have another companion. Isn't it the day after tomorrow that Lord Herdale comes?"

"Yes," said Eva; she had almost forgotten him.

But she was almost glad that he was coming, for the preparations for his visit provided her with an occupation which distracted her thoughts. One of the best rooms was allotted to him, and she saw that it was in proper order, and with her own hands filled a huge bowl with roses, and supplied the writing-bureau with note-paper and the rest of it. The big barouche was sent to meet him, and she heard it return, and felt slightly curious about its occupant, as she dressed herself for dinner.

When she went down to the drawing-room she saw Lord Herdale standing by the window; the door had been open, he had not heard her enter, and she had a moment or two in which to observe him before he was aware of her presence. She saw that he was tall and slim, with a presence that might fairly be described as distinguished. He was very fair, and his hands, clasped loosely behind his back, were almost as small and white as a woman's; he was standing, looking out across the park with his head slightly bent, and she could just catch his profile, and could see that he was good-looking.

It was a clever face, so she thought, one appropriate to the struggling barrister he had been until quite recently; the eyes were gray and somewhat cold, the lips also had a touch of coldness, of the firmness and power of resolution which come to most men who have struggles with anything; and this firmness and resolution were also indicated by the clearly defined and rather square jaw.

She moved slightly, he heard the frou-frou of her dress, but he did not turn quickly, though Eva knew that he had become aware of her presence. He waited until she had taken a step or two toward him; then he turned and came to meet her, but without the conventional smile, and with a certain gravity, almost as if he were on guard, as if he did not choose to commit himself to even the usual smile until he was quite sure that it was appropriate. His eyes met hers openly enough, but with a kind of veiled scrutiny, so veiled that Eva was not sure that it was there.

"How do you do, Lord Herdale," she said. "I hope you have had a pleasant journey."

He took her hand and bent over it slightly, with something more than self-possession, and made a suitable response.

"It has been a very pleasant and a very interesting journey," he said; "The scenery is very fine all along the line. You live in a very beautiful place, Miss Lyndhurst."

Eva listened to his voice rather than to his words, as a woman will when meeting a man for the first time; and half-unconsciously she decided that it was a good voice, well modulated and pleasant; but that, like his eyes and his expression, it was rather cold and a trifle hard and keen.

"Of course, you've seen my father," she said.

"Yes; I have had an opportunity of thanking Sir Talbot for having me down here. It was very kind of him to ask me, and I was very glad to come. I have been working very hard lately, for of course there was a great deal to do—I mean in connection with the estate; and it was work with which I am necessarily quite unacquainted."

Eva thought that it was rather nice of him to refer so modestly to his sudden and unexpected accession to the title. Sir Talbot came into the room at the moment, and dinner was announced. The two men talked together during the earlier portion of the dinner, and Eva listened. It was only natural that she should mentally compare Lord Herdale with Mr. Lashmore. They were very different. There was a certain frankness both in manner and speech, a sort of boyishness in Lashmore, which were markedly absent in Lord Herdale, though they must have been about the same age. Lashmore expressed himself promptly and freely on any subject, all his attitudes and movements were free, as those of a man who has been born in the purple and has spent his short life in amusing himself.

On the other hand, Lord Herdale spoke with deliberation, with just a trifle of stiffness, almost as if he were keeping a watch on his words and his slightest movements; but he was absolutely self-possessed and seemed fully aware of his position, though he made no snobbish display of the fact that by a fortunate fluke he had slid into an earldom. At the same time, he spoke quite candidly of the great change in his life; and Eva listened as he replied deliberately but without hesitation to her father's question.

"The estate is by no means in good order," he said. "My uncle was, I should think, an easy-going man—I say I think, because I know very little of him. I had not seen him since I was a boy. And you may be aware, Sir Talbot, there was an estrangement between my father and him."

Sir Talbot nodded rather sadly. "The late Lord Herdale was rather eccentric," he said. "I fear that he quarrelled with most of his friends and relations." He glanced at Eva and changed the subject of the late Lord Herdale's idiosyncrasies. "You have a good steward, I hope?"

Eva thought that it was rather nice of him to refer so modestly to his sudden and unexpected accession to the title. Sir Talbot came into the room at the moment, and dinner was announced. The two men talked together during the earlier portion of the dinner, and Eva listened. It was only natural that she should mentally compare Lord Herdale with Mr. Lashmore. They were very different. There was a certain frankness both in manner and speech, a sort of boyishness in Lashmore, which were markedly absent in Lord Herdale, though they must have been about the same age. Lashmore expressed himself promptly and freely on any subject, all his attitudes and movements were free, as those of a man who has been born in the purple and has spent his short life in amusing himself.

On the other hand, Lord Herdale spoke with deliberation, with just a trifle of stiffness, almost as if he were keeping a watch on his words and his slightest movements; but he was absolutely self-possessed and seemed fully aware of his position, though he made no snobbish display of the fact that by a fortunate fluke he had slid into an earldom. At the same time, he spoke quite candidly of the great change in his life; and Eva listened as he replied deliberately but without hesitation to her father's question.

"The estate is by no means in good order," he said. "My uncle was, I should think, an easy-going man—I say I think, because I know very little of him. I had not seen him since I was a boy. And you may be aware, Sir Talbot, there was an estrangement between my father and him."

Sir Talbot nodded rather sadly. "The late Lord Herdale was rather eccentric," he said. "I fear that he quarrelled with most of his friends and relations." He glanced at Eva and changed the subject of the late Lord Herdale's idiosyncrasies. "You have a good steward, I hope?"

ing out across the park with his head slightly bent, and she could just catch his profile, and could see that he was good-looking.

It was a clever face, so she thought, one appropriate to the struggling barrister he had been until quite recently; the eyes were gray and somewhat cold, the lips also had a touch of coldness, of the firmness and power of resolution which come to most men who have struggles with anything; and this firmness and resolution were also indicated by the clearly defined and rather square jaw.

She moved slightly, he heard the frou-frou of her dress, but he did not turn quickly, though Eva knew that he had become aware of her presence. He waited until she had taken a step or two toward him; then he turned and came to meet her, but without the conventional smile, and with a certain gravity, almost as if he were on guard, as if he did not choose to commit himself to even the usual smile until he was quite sure that it was appropriate. His eyes met hers openly enough, but with a kind of veiled scrutiny, so veiled that Eva was not sure that it was there.

"How do you do, Lord Herdale," she said. "I hope you have had a pleasant journey."

He took her hand and bent over it slightly, with something more than self-possession, and made a suitable response.

"It has been a very pleasant and a very interesting journey," he said; "The scenery is very fine all along the line. You live in a very beautiful place, Miss Lyndhurst."

Eva listened to his voice rather than to his words, as a woman will when meeting a man for the first time; and half-unconsciously she decided that it was a good voice, well modulated and pleasant; but that, like his eyes and his expression, it was rather cold and a trifle hard and keen.

"Of course, you've seen my father," she said.

"Yes; I have had an opportunity of thanking Sir Talbot for having me down here. It was very kind of him to ask me, and I was very glad to come. I have been working very hard lately, for of course there was a great deal to do—I mean in connection with the estate; and it was work with which I am necessarily quite unacquainted."

"YOUR SHIP HAS COME IN"

Delivery of bulk gasoline and kerosene by tank steamship to this port is of interest to you because it has resulted directly in a price reduction of the highest grades of petroleum products and has done away with the loss by leakage of oils and fuels shipped from a distance in wood casks.

Our modern plant on the South Side can fill your order immediately in either steel barrels or wood casks as you prefer. We recommend the use of steel barrels for handling kerosene. No leakage—you use every drop you pay for, and on the return of the steel barrel its full purchase price is refunded, which makes a saving of over 2c. on the net cost per gallon.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(L. C. M.)

It is not often that a pauper receives an obituary notice, but as there seems to be a diversity of opinion about the person and identity of the late Richard McGee, it may not be out of place to say a word about him, as he was so long a well known figure in the city.

It was in the year 1872 that I first met Richard McGee, and his condition then was of the most abject and pitiable nature. It was in the early hours of a cold November morning, and just as the dawn was clearing. He impressed me then as being about twenty or twenty-one years of age. Since that time he has been a wanderer in our midst, and never had a shelter that he could claim as his home. He had some friends who helped him, and among the best were our city firemen and policemen, who did what they could for him.

McGee was not a lazy man, but somehow his labour seemed of no benefit to him. For years he worked at the fisheries at some of our near by places, but whatever way things were managed he came back in the fall penniless, and was left to wander the streets. It would seem that some people were in the habit of taking his labour for his support during the fishery season and then sending him adrift upon the charity of the city for the balance of the year. However, McGee was always a wanderer; but in all his poverty he was strictly honest and also strictly sober and in-offensive.

The cause of McGee's trouble was not of his own making, but rather was the result of an accident by which he lost his mentality. He came to Newfoundland as one of the crew of the English brig "David", and while on the voyage to the port of St. John's he fell from the topsail yard, and was very seriously injured, having a leg and an arm broken, and was taken to the hospital where he lay for some months. His ship in the meantime sailed for market, and the semi-demented sailor had nowhere to go, nor anyone to look to.

At that time the regulations in this direction were not as strict as at present, and it was quite a common thing for irresponsible persons to be left on the parish. McGee was one of these, hence his career in our midst for nearly half a century. He was a native of Gravesend, England, and had made it a choice to follow the sea, but the accident of falling from the top-sail yard unfitted him for any further service, and it left him a stanger and a wanderer in a strange land; and it seemed impossible to get him out of the rut into which he had lapsed—somehow he seemed fated for what he became.

His first experiences in the city in the seventies were very unpleasant, and the boys of that time seemed to have made an onslaught on him and regularly pelted him with stones, and insulted him, with nick-names. There seemed to be an idea that he was a sort of public target, and as a result he paid the penalty of persecution.

Some three years ago he was admitted to the Poor Asylum where he finished his wanderings on Thursday, 5th inst., and from which place he was buried on Good Friday. The mistake in McGee's case seemed to be, that such a man was allowed to wander homeless so long in our midst; he should have been taken in charge by the proper authorities long ago, for by so doing a harmless life would have been saved from suffering.

Though the deceased was semi-demented he displayed excellent powers of language and intelligence, both of which went to prove that before he met the accident he must have been a very interesting young man. He always had a youthful appearance, and even in death he held the same expression.

Whether McGee's parents, who were living when he left Gravesend, ever heard of his condition I never could find out, although I questioned him very often about them, but could not get sufficient data to write them, as I had often done for strangers; but they, no doubt, wondered what had become of their son, and perhaps had given him up as dead, long ago. If the record of all the wanderers and deserters, who have made their homes in Newfoundland during the last half century, were compiled, there would be sufficient for a story both weird and fascinating. I have met enough myself to write many a tale, and tales of such a character as would prove that in reality fact is stranger than fiction.

In birth and baptism McGee was of the Protestant faith, but his case was never considered by any of the churches—he was simply left to wander; but he did a member of the Roman Catholic Church and has found his last resting place north the end of Mount Carmel Cemetery.

Through all his wanderings he always found a few friends who helped him, and though he was weak in mind, and poor in pocket, and had no where to lay his head, he has no doubt found a place in that Kingdom which is greater than churches, and in that mercy which fully forgives. He rests in a pauper's grave. He had none to mourn him, none to follow him, hence no one dropped a tear for him, but he is one of the redeemed all the same, and in the final restoration of all things will find immortality and light.

Would Almost Faint From Severe Pain in Back—Doctors Could Not Get the Kidneys Set Right.

Benton, N. B., April 14th.—A great many people suffer the results of deranged kidneys and do not understand the cause of trouble or the way to obtain cure. The writer of this letter suffered excruciating pains in the back and in vain his physician tried to cure him. For some reason or other his medicines did not have the desired effect.

Mr. Olt's brother was a merchant selling, among other medicines, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and he heard his customers telling about how they were cured of kidney derangements by their use. This led to Mr. Olt's putting them to the test, with the splendid results reported in this letter.

Mr. E. O. Olt, Benton, Carleton County, N.B., writes: "I am glad to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I suffered from my kidneys, which at one time were so bad I could not lift a stick of wood without getting on my knees, and then would almost faint from the pain in my back. I consulted a doctor about it, and he gave me some medicine, but it did not help me. My brother, who is a merchant, and carries all your medicines, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I got one box, and they helped me, so I got another one, and kept on until I had taken five boxes, which cured me. I have had no trouble with my back since, and am never without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house. Last summer I also suffered from piles. I used three boxes of your ointment, and it cured them. I can certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Pills and Ointment."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills one Pill a dose, 25c. a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WITH THE ADVENTISTS.—Service on Sunday at 8.30 p.m. Subject: "Finishing of the Mystery." All are welcome.

This woman's experience will help you with your breadmaking

She writes: "My grocer told me to get Cream of the West flour for bread—he could recommend it. It makes bread white and light, so now I won't have any other." A flour so satisfactory that it deserves such praise from those who actually use it is well worth trying. Women everywhere who use it, recommend

Cream of the West Flour
the hard wheat flour that is guaranteed for bread

Give it a trial. See for yourself how splendidly it makes bread that rises right up out of the pans. Cream of the West flour is rich in gluten. This highly nutritious substance has such wonderful elasticity or power of expansion that it imprisons the gas developed by the yeast, thus enabling your bread to rise properly.

If you want fine big, bulging loaves, with delicious flavor, even crumb and all the wholesome nutritious quality of Western hard wheat, you decidedly ought to try Cream of the West flour for your next batch. If your bread proves unsatisfactory, return the unused flour to your dealer; also bring this advertisement which is our guarantee. He will return your money and we will repay him.

Our Domestic Science Experts solve your problems

SATURDAY, April 14th, 1917.

The Plains of Douai.

We have heard the best news since the Battle of the Marne. That was the victory which saw a red

France from defeat and Europe and the world from spiritual, if not physical, bondage; this, which may be known to history as the Battle of Arras, is the definite beginning of the defeat of Germany.

The great struggle on the Somme was a six-month victory of which the end was foreseen long before it came, and which left other struggles in doubt; this is a sudden, overwhelming triumph of the British army which shows Germany exterminated and, inevitably in the end, utterly vanquished.

The since continued progress of our troops, the number of prisoners and the very great quantity of artillery captured and destroyed tell the dreadful havoc of the attack and the completeness of its success.

Two days ago there remained a lingering chance that Vimy might be wrested again from us; to-day our forces have surged beyond it and to the north are in clear view of Lens.

When the message speaks of the plains of Douai it almost speaks of the end of the war. To have won the heights that dominate all this low-lying country was a fine achievement; to its value is added the nature of that country, with its rich coal and iron mines, which are important of all, the German line is threatened in a manner which we are convinced will from now on keep it in continuous movement and that movement everywhere retrograde.

As we write, a short message from Stewart Lyon's pen comes over the wires, containing a most expressive phrase. He calls the victory a change in the balance of the war in the field, and nothing could describe it better.

The balance has been steadily against the Allies, and their efforts for the past seven months have been an heroic endeavour to upset it. They have upset it. The words of the Canadian officer are the literal truth—they are the top dogs. They look down upon and no longer up at their enemy. By the combined victories of the Somme and Arras they have broken the German line at its strongest point. They have not pierced it, probably they never will—but the guns they have taken are evidence of the inelastic nature of the trench system, the fatal corollary of its great strength.

The Germans are on the run and they will keep on the run. We shall soon see what virtue there is in the lubricious warnings of the croakers about Germany's extra million men. As if, forsooth, the Allies had called up their last man and stood still while she recruited them! Let her use them now. Let her throw them into the conflict where she likes: she will not stop the British and the French. We have heard of terrible things that she is going to do to Russia. Wait another month and see what they are.

If by mid-June Brusilov's legions are not treading the plains of Hungary we shall recant and be humble. If Germany had half the renewed strength that some claim for her she would never have surrendered Vimy; we should never have heard, until that strength was exhausted, of the Hindenburg line, already broken at some points and pressed at others.

Was on Torpedoed Troopship.

Included in the number of Royal Naval Reservists who returned yesterday, is Reservist John Abbott, of Holdsworth Street, who for over two years has been on active service, but is now discharged as medically unfit.

On reaching the Old Country he was placed on a trawler doing patrol duty and mine sweeping in the North Sea. After several months at this hazardous work he received a transfer to H. M. troopship Yorrala, which fell a victim to a Hun sub. on New Year's Day of this year.

She had on board about 30 of whom with 27 of the ship's crew, were drowned. All the boats available were launched and also rudely constructed rafts to which the shipwrecked soldiers and sailors clung till rescued by trawlers about four hours afterwards.

Abbott and a number of the ship's crew were the last to leave the ship, he being the only Newfoundland on board, and as all the boats and rafts were overcrowded they were compelled to swim across to the trawlers.

In the meantime they suffered terribly from the icy cold water, from the effects of which Reservist Abbott contracted a severe cold, leaving his constitution so weakened that it will be a considerable time before he is again restored to his former health.

William Abbott, a brother of his, enlisted about the same time, and when last heard from was doing patrol duty in the North Sea.

Report of Recruiting Trip.

S. S. FIONA, ON THE BURIN PENINSULA.

To W. W. Blackall, Esq., Organiser Recruiting Committee.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward you a short report of our cruise on the "Fiona".

Our party left St. John's on Wednesday, March 14th, and left Placentia on Friday, the 16th. Anchored at Burin that night.

Saturday, 17th.—Held a meeting at Lories. We divided our party, one portion proceeded to Point Crevo, another to High Beach, where one recruit was obtained.

As it was late in the day on leaving there the Captain decided to proceed to St. Pierre, where we lay until Monday, the 19th.

Monday, 19th.—Rised to land at Grand Bank. Found it too rough and proceeded to St. Jacques.

Wednesday, 21st.—Landed Sergeant Soutres, Corporal Smith, and R. R. Crew, with Inspector O'Reilly, at Grand Bank, and tried for Garnish with the steamer but could not land.

Anchored at Harbour Breton. Tried again on Thursday but forced to anchor again at St. Jacques, where we lay with two anchors out till Saturday.

On the 23rd we returned to Grand Bank. Found they had succeeded in obtaining six recruits from Fortune and had been very kindly treated by the people of Grand Bank and Fortune.

Went to St. Lawrence for the night.

Saturday, 25th.—Held a meeting at St. Lawrence. Got a splendid reception and a very enthusiastic meeting. Obtained three recruits. We were assured by the pastor, the Rev. Father Maher, and people that although St. Lawrence has contributed over eighty in various ways to the cause, as many more would be forthcoming if necessary.

Sunday, 26th.—Held a meeting at Allan's Island in the afternoon and one at Lamaline in the night. No result.

Tuesday, 27th.—Landed at Lord's Cove. Held a meeting in the school-room and were assured that two men would be along in a few days. Went to the beach, where we had a meeting at night. Mr. Benning had arrangements made and two more promised to come in soon.

Wednesday, 28th.—Held a meeting in the Roman Catholic Hall, and on Thursday in the Royal Orange Association Hall. A great many people from the surrounding settlements attended these meetings and one recruit with the assurance of more in short.

Friday, 30th.—R.N.R. crews and myself, with the "Fiona", returned to Grand Bank, leaving the remainder of our party to do Great Burin and Port aux Bras.

At both of these places they attended those meetings and one recruit with the assurance of more in short.

Monday, 31st.—Joined the ship at Marytown and found arrangements for a meeting. At this meeting we obtained two recruits and were assured that several others would come along. Found our party had called at Fox Cove on the way from Burin. No result.

Monday, April 2nd.—Held a meeting at Creston. Well attended but no volunteers. Here we found the captain was forced to proceed to Placentia, as he had a sick seaman in hospital. We were sorry that this prevented us from calling at Flat Islands. In all we accounted for some twenty recruits, some of whom preceded us, and others are to follow.

I would beg leave to mention that while at St. Lawrence, Burin, Grand Bank, Lark and Marytown, the leading citizens and officials appeared to be very much alive to their obligations; in other places we did not find the same enthusiasm, with particular reference to the assistance and kind treatment received from Rev. Father Maher, of St. Lawrence, Mr. Benning, J.P. and Messrs. LeFevre, Bartlett, O'Brien, Winter and others of Burin, Messrs. J. E. Long, J.P., and John Walsh of Marytown. Sergeant Squires also reports that the Magistrate and people of Grand Bank received them very kindly.

I wish to call your attention to the very valuable assistance rendered by Sergeant Squires and Corporal Small. They are both very pleasing speakers and enthusiastic workers, and I am sure would be of great assistance in any future work the Committee would require of them.

I also wish to testify to the unflinching courtesy and kindness of Capt. English who did all in his power to assist us in our work.

Trusting you will find this report of our cruise to the satisfaction of yourself and the Committee, I have the honor to be, Yours respectfully, (Sgd.) SEROT. M. J. NUGENT, No. 428.

Germans Capture Ship that Aided Disabled U-Boat.

Hum Gratitude Shown Toward Norwegian Steamer Nanna.

Copenhagen, Via London, April 5.—The Tidens Tegn's Trondheim, Norway, correspondent sends a story of the capture by the Germans and taking into port of the Norwegian steamer Nanna, after the Nanna had endeavoured to tow a helpless German submarine in the North Sea to a German port.

The steamer was taken to Hamburg by German torpedo boats and is being held there.

According to the story the Nanna agreed to tow the helpless submarine, but the tow line broke when the boats were off the west coast of Jutland.

The submarine thereupon signalled for assistance, and eight German torpedo boats appeared. The crew of the Nanna was ordered below and the torpedoed boat was towed to the German port.

Together with the submarine, to Cuxhaven.

The Germans, so the story goes, refused the request of the Norwegian to be plotted back through the mine field. Instead, the Nanna was taken to Hamburg, where she is still detained, despite persistent efforts by the Norwegian authorities to secure her release.

"Tiz" Eases Tired, Sore, Swollen Feet.

Instant relief for aching, puffed-up, calloused feet and corns.

"Happy! Happy! Use 'Tiz'!"

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet, so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot torture.

Gr. Grace Notes.

The s.s. Bloodhound finished discharging yesterday. She turned out 10,155 seals, and her crew shared $42.80. They were paid off last night.

The s.s. Njord is still in port unable to leave owing to ice.

The moving picture shows in St. Paul's Hall, under the management of Mr. Forsey, have been well attended during the week. The subjects of the pictures are good, but the manager will need some readjusting to make them clear and satisfactory to the Harbor Grace critic. The idea that anything is good enough for Hr. Grace is already a back number. Mr. Forsey has promised better results next week.

Owing to the heavy downpour of rain lately, with the melting of the snow on the higher levels, a great rush of water is now running down the hill-side, but the concrete sewers built a few years ago are doing their work well and consequently there is no break up in the roads as was customary under similar conditions previous to the building of the concrete drains.

Mr. John Watts, H.M.C., St. John's, has been in town during the week on a business trip.

Mr. Norman French, of this town, spent the past few months with his sister at Western Bay, return to town last week, and after spending a few days here he left for Sydney, where he will endeavor to join the Navy. He failed to pass the examination at St. John's through some slight cause. Should he fail at Sydney, he will proceed to Montreal where he has been employed for several years.

Mr. W. Butt, Principal of the Presbyterian College, St. John's, spent a few days in town this week, visiting relatives and friends. All were pleased to see him.

Mr. Max Parsons, of the Bank of Nova Scotia, St. John's, spent a few days in town last week, returning to the city on Saturday.

Another of our Hr. Grace boys, W. J. Kelly, son of Mr. P. Kelly, of Riverhead, has volunteered and been accepted in the army. Pte. Kelly was an operator with the Red Nid. Co. for the past three years. —COR. Hr. Grace, April 12, 1917.

Recruits are Wanted for the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserve.

The attention of all young men of 18 years and over is called to the advantages of the Reserve.

Directly on joining, pay commences at the rate of 18 English Money, or 40 cents in Newfoundland Currency, per day, and in addition there is a War Retainer Allowance of 16 cents a day, which is saved up for each recruit. An entirely free kit of clothes is provided—the Food is of first-class quality and the allowance is a good and full one.

If a man allots 5/0, or $1.21 a week to his Father or Mother, or to any Relative or even to a friend, a similar sum of 5/0 is added to this amount as Separation Allowance from the Admiralty. If he allots 6/0, or $1.46 a week, the Separation Allowance is similarly $1.46, but this is the highest for a Single man.

The wife, in the case of Married men who allot not less than 5/0 a week, receives 6/0 Separation Allowance, and where there are children the following scale of Separation Allowance is paid:—

Wife and 1 child—12/0 a week, or $2.82

Wife and 2 children—16/6 a week, or $4.01

Wife and 3 children—20/0 a week, or $4.86

Wife and 4 children—22/0 a week, or $5.34

2/0 each for every additional child.

This is in addition to the 5/0 or more per week allotted by the husband.

In the case of a Motherless child an allowance of 5/0 per week, or $1.21, is made to the Guardian, and in the event of a Mother dying while her husband is serving, this allowance becomes payable for each child.

The Woman, the Child and the Fairy Tale.

Paper Read to the Ladies' Reading Club by Mrs. Hector McNeil.

(Concluded.)

The early Victorian type of woman would have been a pitiful sight in Great Britain to-day. If it had not been for the progress that women have made within these later years, Great Britain's cause in this world war would have been lost. From Kitchener down eminent men have declared that to be a fact. And this Great War is the fairy-tale, or, if you will, the allegory of St. George and the Dragon over again. For fairy-tales are not only founded on fact—but like children crossing a stream on stepping-stones—they spring from the fact of yesterday to the truth of to-day in their progress. That is how the fairy-tale lives.

Woman has widened her 'sphere' but has not stepped out of it. She is engaged in pre-eminently womanly work. Like her sister of bygone times, she polishes her knight's armour and hands him his lance—that it should be in a munitions factory is merely an accident of evolution. She weaves his garments, and gathers the sick and wounded into her own care. She is working early and late in the fields that the National Mess of Pottage shall be plentiful—and she goes into the factory to see that it is prepared swiftly, and well: with scientific knowledge of what should go into it. The steam of it is wafted out to us across the waters—every newspaper containing articles on practical cookery: economical, nourishing and savoury. Is it a phase? Is she seeking notoriety? If that were so she would be doing the unique. There is the drudgery of the commonplace in washing, dusting, cooking, nursing, and women who never did an honest day's work before in their lives are turning out of bed at daybreak, toiling all day, and throwing themselves exhausted on their beds at night, doing the housekeeping of the Nation.

With all this, woman has not neglected the nursery. Instead, she has accomplished the miracle of stretching its walls until it includes the children of the slums. Never was so much done for infant welfare. The newspapers—smaller in size, crammed with articles of vital importance on many other subjects—find much to say concerning this one branch of mothercraft alone.

And while we see woman—with enlarged heart and brain—working on forbidden ground, we find the nursery invaded by the male sex! A case of the wise men again bringing gifts and laying them at the feet of babes, recognising their responsibilities where the child is concerned.

Prof. Dewar J. Swinburne, F.R.S., and others, have been giving wonderful lectures to young children on various scientific subjects. The short accounts of them in the newspapers are sufficient to show us how comprehensive they are. According to a critic, these lectures on astronomy, chemistry, natural history, etc., are positively fascinating, and, as far as possible, brought within the scope of the understanding of the youngest child by means of toys, playful illustrations, experiments and pictures.

One of these lectures included the blowing of bubbles, coloured and black; also the lecturer's own discovery, permanent bubbles. There seems to have been only one protest raised against these lectures, and that was when, in a "Physical Science Lecture", a tiny boy lifted up his voice and wailed, "scared at the sight thrown on the screen of his corpuscles enlarged to the size of ships' biscuits. A clear case of mental indigestion, brought on by the mere thought of his little body apparently filled to the skin with imaginary corpuscle doughnuts. It was only on being assured that if they really were that size he would be an enormous giant that he was content to allow the lecturer to proceed.

The account of a lecture by James Swinburne, F.R.S., on "Science and Toys" makes one wish that one could have heard it. The critique on this lecture (and in war time, mind you,) ran to almost a whole column of the London Times. The lecturer was on "Why a top stands upright when it spins, and how does a church organ make so many different kinds of sounds."

Just one quotation to illustrate the delightful way in which the young idea of the future will be encouraged in its sprouting. "More fun still was caused by his 'vox humana' pipe. He said when the organ-builders invented it they must have first put a hat pin into a goat and listened to its cry, then added the wobble of an incompetent slinger. As he played it, the description was perfectly demonstrated." Yet we hear no complaints against these men for having invaded woman's sphere with their games and fairy-tales. Nor are they being pelted with bad eggs and other strong arguments.

While considering our National nursery, the fairy-tales must not be overlooked. Fairy means fancy, but to live, the fancy must, as we said before, have a basis of truth. The great and well-known fairy-tales of this war will have a tremendous bearing on the thought of the future. Great minds will need to step into our nursery and read them to us, but not a few will be completely lost.

One of those minor miracles—like a blue-bell growing on a rock—was found in a bald account in the Times concerning a committee meeting on poor relief. It related to that wayward, irresponsible child of the Nation—the vagrant, and gave statistics which showed that his numbers had decreased by some thousands since the outbreak of the war.

What had become of the vagrant? He had gone to the war; he is dressed in khaki; he is submitting himself to the authority of another; and of that class, between which and his own has always existed mutual dislike and mistrust; instead of being washed only twice in the course of his existence, first on coming into the world, and then on going out, he is washing himself every day.

What has transformed the vagrant? If he wished to end his existence, there was the comparatively easier choice of the Thames. If he looked for notoriety of any sort, what would be his chance amongst millions?

It might be well illustrated by a little legend of the children of the Holy Family.

One day with His little playmates, when modelling wet clay into different shapes, the Christ-child formed a dove. At His finishing touch it grew snow-white and flew into the air. That is the miracle of the vagrant. The clay has been touched by the Master-hand.

That is a legend of the slums. You will say that the imagination which has seized upon the vagrant and impelled him to the trenches has only momentarily inspired the women of the Nation; that after the war she will settle back into her own "sphere" again.

Will she? Should she? Emerson says: "Beware when the great God lets loose a thinker upon this planet."

Motherhood, hovering over that holocaust of Nations in the Old World—the centre of civilization, the birthplace of Christianity—shudders and thinks.

Fatherhood has been paramount in the councils of state management for hundreds of years. Motherhood shudders and thinks.

It is a comfort to reflect on the fact that woman has unutterable patience and persistency. She may be stifled to-day, turned back to-morrow, almost converted the next, but, once having heard the call, seen the need, she will rise after every defeat stronger than before; and, at last, she "will arrive."

We call necessity the mother of invention; it is much truer to say that necessity is the mother of reform, and the movement for the greater freedom of woman is coming about because it is a psychological necessity, if the welfare of the children of the future is to be safeguarded.

As one of our present-day writers puts it: "Our duty, to those we see, to our kinsfolk, our fellow citizens, is an ever-present stimulus to an honest man. But these unseen myriads who beckon to us out of the future, touch us with a more pathetic pleading; so helpless are they, so utterly passive in our hands. To the extent a man is spiritually educated will he respond with all his nature to that unvoiced prayer. He will strive, not only for the present, but also for this other time that waits. A mighty imperative is upon us all to secure that, as the result of our being and doing, "Sweeter shall the roses blow"

In those fear years, those happier years: And children weep when we lie low—Far fewer tears, far softer tears."

It seems, too, that the nations have their own distinctive imaginations, and it would be interesting to sum them up. We shall take just a few: France, for instance, is more inspirational and metaphysical than England. The strength of her courage and her inspiration are greater than her physical strength. The Maid of Orleans is the prototype of France in this great world war.

It looks as though France might have a renaissance of Art, Music, the Drama, and be the mother of some of the greatest thinkers and prophets of the future.

The imagination of England is typically masculine—founded on experience and logic—working deliberately from a given hypothesis, as it were. That ponderous Aquithian sense of duty was hampering her in the rapid movement of events. She was obsessed by theories. So she took a visionary Celtic head, as she would take a crystal ball, and her outlook changed. That crystal ball represents woman's more instinctive imagination.

As for Germany, we are constantly told that she has an imagination. As during her later years her envy and hatred of other nations increased, and her brutal physical force became as a religion to her, she oppressed and held in less and less esteem her women.

As France is the heroine, and England the hero of the war, Germany springs upon the scene as the madman. France will return to her fireside a saint. England will return to hers more like a Roman matron, calling her children of both sexes her jewels; but where the mind of a lunatic leads, it is impossible to conjecture.

Surely the mother-mind is needed in the national nursery also. We have discussed a threefold nursery: the inner, the civic, and the national, with a few thoughts on the children and the fairy-tales of each; and now we find Ruskin saying that "we must own ourselves forever children, gathering pebbles on a boundless shore."

Another writer asks: "Is there anything which so differentiates us from the brutes as the faculty of wonder?" As we remarked before, the faculty of wonder is the basis of religion. Robert Browning asks, "... How could I praise, if such as I might understand ..."

If we had nothing at which we could wonder, we should have nothing to which we could pray; for while the spirit within is always calling to the spirit without, the fairy-tales of childhood resolve themselves at last into the eternal mysteries of the Universe, and the Madonna and Child in Art become for us the epitome of Humanity cherished in the lap of the ages.

Pain in the back is one of the most common symptoms of Kidney trouble. Every movement becomes a torture, and if neglected, the disorder finally confines the sufferer to bed.

Newfoundlander in Action.

Glowing Tribute to Captain Phil Jensen.

At the monthly social of the Canadian Club of New York, held at the Biltmore Hotel, on Tuesday evening, March 13th, 1917, the members were treated to a very interesting and instructive series of lectures on the great war for democracy now raging in Europe. The speakers of the evening consisted of Frederick Couder, the United States international law expert; Ralph O'Connor, the famous author, now Major Gordon of the 43rd Highlanders; Mr. Houston, publisher of "The World's Work"; and business partner of Ambassador Page, now representing the United States Government at the Court of St. James, at London; Private Phil Jensen, returned from the front wounded, and well known to all Newfoundlanders at home or abroad; also Lord Aberdeen, former Governor-General of Canada.

There were present over 600 members. The speakers were all very interesting and the fact of the immediate connection with the great war of the principal speakers made the evening a very instructive and impressive one.

When Private Phil Jensen took the floor he brought the audience to its feet, and it is on this portion of the entertainment which the writer wishes to dwell specially in this communication.

When Mr. Jensen got into action the program, already drawn out, was somewhat extended. The supper which was scheduled to be served at 10:30 p.m. was also delayed. At the commencement of his remarks Mr.

Jensen made apologies that he was rather limited for time, but as soon as he began to relate his experiences the cries of members all over the room were to be heard: "Go on Jensen"—"Go to it." The audience went into raptures over the graphic and thrilling account of the several battles in which he had participated, and it was the first time that New Yorkers had the opportunity of learning from the lips of a British soldier the terrible sacrifices which the British Empire has made and is making in order that civilization shall be saved from the mailed fist of German aggression and barbarism.

Mr. Jensen occupied the platform for over an hour and a half and your correspondent can assure you that the members of the Canadian Club of New York, and especially the Newfoundlanders, who also form a part of this great organization, had good reason to be proud of this son of the grand old empire, whose flag, to use Mr. Jensen's words, is dyed in blood but crowned with honor.

One thing particularly noticeable in his lecture was his modesty in reference to himself, and not until the hostmaster had related a few instances of Mr. Jensen's own personal sacrifices which he has made for his fellowmen and for the children yet unborn, did the audience learn of them.

Mr. Jensen said he was proud to be a Newfoundland and that Newfoundlanders had a special distinction to be proud of, that not another portion of the Empire could boast of, in the fact that Newfoundland was the oldest British Colony. When he referred to this fact Lord Aberdeen could not stand it any longer and he had to stand up and call for three cheers for Newfoundland which was given very heartily.

Mr. Jensen felt quite at home among this notable gathering, the audience constituting some of the most prominent business and professional men of the city. It was the first time he had spoken on a platform without being in khaki, but he was equally at home in a dress suit, which was the prevailing dress of the evening.

Mr. Jensen's lecture from an international standpoint was one of the greatest diplomatic victories of the hour; it brought home to citizens of the United States who were present the realization of the awful responsibility now resting upon all liberty-loving people in this hour of turmoil, and has been helpful in making them see their duty clearer than ever they did before. Newfoundland, I am sure, feels proud of Phil Jensen, as it does of its other brave sons, who have fought and died for the vital issues at stake, and I am quite sure when I say that all Americans with good red blood in their veins and of Anglo-Saxon descent, who had the pleasure of hearing him, notwithstanding the fact that they belong to a nation outside of the British Empire, are proud of this brave self-sacrificing youth and sincerely welcome him to their country and will do all in their power to make his stay a pleasant one.

When Mr. Jensen concluded his address hundreds of the audience rushed to grasp his hand and extend to him their support, and if I am not mistaken the good work of the furtherance of the British Red Cross in the U. S. A. will be very adequately rewarded by the clear cold facts and the wonderful personality of this intrepid Newfoundland.

Frederick Couder referred to here-in has visited the Western front several times during the war and spoke with the knowledge of a man who had been there. A fact worthy of mention, and commendation by all Britishers is that Mr. Couder has the distinction of capturing a British ship from the German Government single-handed, he having won the recent Appam case for the British Government in the U. S. States' Supreme Court, which ship was adjudicated an illegal prize, and was ordered returned to her British owners.

Mr. Couder personally congratulated Mr. Jensen and remarked that his lecture was the best he had heard on the great war.

Ralph Connor, the guest of honor, called for "three cheers for Jensen" and three times three were given.

Mr. Jensen has many invitations to lecture during his stay in New York, but he has been advised by his attending physician to go easy on the speech making for a month or so. He has, however, agreed to speak at Trinity Church for the Rev. Dr. Manning, Trinity Church, being one of the foremost Episcopal churches in this country.

The singing of Rule Britannia, God Save the King, My Country 'Tis of Thee, and The Star Spangled Banner brought to a close one of the finest evenings the Canadian Club of New York ever had in its history.

The Turk and Jerusalem.

Boston Transcript:—Give the devil his due; the wardenship of the Turks in Jerusalem has not been essentially unworthy. Probably it has been better than that which any single one of the Christian sects would have supplied, at least in the times that have passed. The Turkish soldier on his pedestal in the Christian church, keeping with bayonet and with ball cartridge his guard over the warring Christian sects each ready at any moment to strangle the other, is typical of the situation in all the Holy Land. Greeks, Latins, Armenians, Copts, and representatives of the rest of the forty-three Christian sects who are

GIVEN A BIG RECEPTION.

By the express which reached town yesterday afternoon twenty-one returned soldiers, whose names we published a few days ago, and the following twenty-five Royal Naval Reservists returned on furlough:—

John Barlett, Brigus; Peter Quick, Lawn; Thomas March, Dildo; Israel Brown, Fair Islands, B.B.; Arthur Carter, Wesleyville; John Hutchings, Spanish's Bay; Kenneth Peddie, Hodge's Cove, T. B.; Stewart Smith, Island Cove, T. B.; Albert Parsons, Crane's Brook Bay Roberts; Adam Freake, Seal Cove, Fogo; Ralph King, Baulne, C. B.; John Fowlow, Trinity; Edgar Button, Greenspond; Garland Samson, Flat Islands, B.B.; Benjamin Green, Burn; Albert Malden, Hant's Harbour, T.B.; William Skinner, St. Jacques; Amos Wheeler, Jamestown, B.B.; Norman Matthews, Gosse Bay, B.B.; Arthur Rose, Flower's Cove; D. C. Rowe, Green's Harbour, T.B.; W. E. Pike, John Abbott and Fred Rogers, St. John's.

With the exception of Reservists Rowe, Abbott and Rogers, who are discharged as medically unfit, the others are on furlough.

The Ladies' Reception Committee, the Acting Premier, squads from the H. M. S. Briton and Volunteers in charge of Master of Arms Hutchingson and Lieut. J. Giff, respectively, were included in the large gathering of citizens who assembled to welcome the returned heroes. The men were lined up in front of the station and before being addressed by the Acting Premier three cheers were called for by a Petty Officer of H. M. S. Briton, which were warmly given. At the conclusion of Mr. Bennett's address, Sergeant Pippy who was in charge of the returning soldiers called for three cheers for the Ladies' Reception Committee, whereupon the sailors and soldiers made the hills re-echo with their lusty voices. The war veterans were then placed in cabs and driven down Water Street. The Reservists went to Government House and received a right royal welcome from His Excellency and Lady Davidson. The returned soldiers were driven to their homes and this morning reported at Headquarters from where they were driven to Government House at 11 o'clock.

Citizens' Committee.

Chairman A. Soper presided at last night's meeting of the Citizens' Committee. The Plumbing Regulations were again discussed and the Committee recommended that they be referred to the proposed Commission on Building Regulations. It was also decided that the Board of Examiners for plumbers should consist of the Supt. of Water Service, the Plumbing Inspector and two practical plumbers.

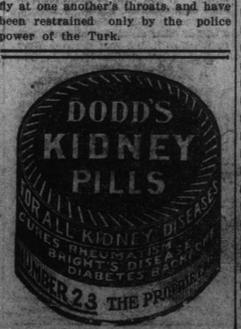

Section 363, wherein it is stated that no building shall be hereafter erected unless there is a city water supply accessible thereto, nor unless there is a public sewer in such street, was amended by adding the words: "That the Council be given power to grant permission to build in places where water and sewerage are in reasonable prospect."

Section 383—"Any building which has been damaged by fire to the extent of fifty per cent. of its value shall be considered a new building and be subject to the regulations governing the same." The Committee decided to change that to 75 per cent. of value.

Section 384 in the minds of the majority of the Committee is too drastic, as it prevents the owner of a dwelling of which the roof is covered with shingles from repairing the same with like material, as in all cases metal, slate, tile, felt wall covered with gravel or other unflammable material must be used. The section was deferred till the next night of meeting.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the very smartest suit skirts are narrow and short. The fashionable outline of the present is absolutely straight. Belts are much worn and are never utilitarian, but ornamental. Brown and neutral-toned boots will be worn with the spring frock. Simple afternoon dresses of wash silks are made up in sporty styles. The simplest of street suits are trimmed either with stitching or braid. Chinese tassels are frequently used as a neck finish on an odd dress. Even black patent leather belts have bright-colored ornaments on them. A charming girde is made of wood-beads ending with a silk tassel. A separate skirt with a Russian Mandarin blouse is extremely fashionable. Some dresses have about half of their surface covered with soutache braiding. Garden hats of the picturesque type will be worn with the stuffy summer dresses. The sports idea is reflected to a certain extent in nearly all of the spring fashions.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.
LONDON, April 13.
On a twelve-mile front from north of the River Scarpe to south of Loos the British troops to-day pressed back the Germans all along the line and captured six villages. Field Marshal Haig's men, the official from the British headquarters in France to-night adds, also have gained a footing in German trenches northeast of Lens. Prisoners and guns also were taken. In the advance southeast of Arras, the statement adds the British also made progress and are now astride of the Hindenburg line as far as a point seven miles southeast of Arras. The villages seized by the British are all east and north of Vimy Ridge. They are, Baillieu, Willerval, Vimy-Petit, Vimy, Givenchy-en-Cobelle and Farbus. Southeast of Arras we have also made further gains on the high ground east of Le Verquier and Harincourt Wood, northwest of St. Quentin. Much useful work was done by our airplanes yesterday, although the weather continued unfavorable for flying. One hostile formation encountered was severely handled by one of our patrols which drove down four enemy machines out of control. One other hostile airplane was destroyed by us during the day. Three of our machines are missing. The number of prisoners taken since the commencement of our operations, now exceed 13,000, including 285 officers. We have also captured 166 guns, including eight 8-inch howitzers, 28 5.9 inch howitzers, 84 trench mortars, 250 machine guns, in addition to a considerable number of guns which were demolished or buried by shell fire, which cannot be enumerated. Many of the captured guns have been turned over to the enemy by us with good effect.

PROGRESS MAINTAINED.
From a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press, with the British Armies in France, April 13.—From the Vimy Ridge late to-day's news could be seen burning in the German lines. Canadian patrols had advanced beyond the outskirts of Givenchy. An exploration of Vimy Ridge shows the British artillery virtually blew the top off it and the German stronghold which had resisted all efforts of the French and British during more than two years, was finally forced into such a position by high explosives, that it could not resist the infantry charges. These charges, of course, were backed up by continuous gun fire, accompanied by all the terrible machines and devices of modern war. Walking over the top of the ridge is virtually impossible. It is just one continuous climb from one shell crater to another. Two surrounding knobs known only on military maps as numbered hills, had attracted the fire of the heaviest British guns, and had been shattered to unrecognizable butts on landscape. It is little wonder the Germans made such desperate efforts to hold Vimy Ridge and retake certain portions of it by counter attacks which failed miserably. The ridge which stood as a natural barrier between the Germans and their opponents has a great protective chain of hills shielding invaluable coal, iron and other minerals which Germany wrested from France in the first onrush of the war of 1914. The city of Lens now within sight of the British lines is a great mining centre. It is generally believed before yielding the mines which have been such help to the Germans, the latter will undoubtedly try to wreck them by any means, but even if France doesn't regain immediate use of them, the shutting off of Germany from their precious products will mean an important step toward ultimate Allied victory. From the top of Vimy Ridge the British now look down on the plain of Douai toward the great industrial sections of France, which so long have been in enemy hands. We are top dogs at last, said a Canadian officer to the Associated Press correspondent to-day. We have the Germans on the down-hill, and once they are started you may be sure they will go back fast. In the continuous hail of shells which is going over and upon the Germans, many are their own, thrown from their own abandoned field pieces, they are tasting what the British Tommy calls "the joys of some of their own devilish explosives." The Germans also are getting a bitter pelting from hundreds of their own machine guns.

GERMAN POSITIONS SECURED.
LONDON, April 13.
German positions on a wide front have been secured by the British after severe fighting, the war office announces. The front attacked extended from Poiny, north of Harincourt, to the village of Metzou Conture. This sector is on the new front between Arras and St. Quentin, where the Germans took up positions after their retreat.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.
PARIS, April 13 (Official).
The French made an attack this morning on the new front south of St. Quentin. The Germans resisted desperately, but the French captured several lines of trenches, taking prisoners and a considerable number of machine guns. The French also made further gains east of Coucy La Ville, taking prisoners and booty.

AIRMAN SHOT DOWN.
LONDON, April 13.
Lieut. Wm. Lefle Robinson, according to a German official received here was shot down April 5 by a German battle airplane. The London Evening News of April 10 announced that Lt. Robinson was missing. Lt. Robinson became popular here in England early last fall by shooting down a Zeppelin which was taking part in an attack on London. He was the first aviator to bring down a Zeppelin and was awarded the Victoria Cross.

SPAIN AND THE ALLIES.
NEW YORK, April 13.
A News Agency despatch from London says the British press comment to-day voiced optimism over the prospect of Spain joining with the Allies in view of the sinking of the Spanish steamer San Fulgencio, by a German U-boat. Information received here was that the Spanish note of protest to Berlin over this act was couched in extremely sharp terms.

A demand for indemnity for the sinking of the Spanish steamer San Fulgencio has been made on Germany by the Spanish Council of Ministers at Madrid, the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. cables.

AGREEMENT WITH SPAIN.
LONDON, April 13.
A new convention between Spain and Britain has been concluded. Among its stipulations is the agreement that Britain shall supply 150,000 tons of coal monthly to Spain, and in return Spain will export to England as much ore as required. The Spanish Government also agrees to permit the chartering of Spanish ships by the British Government.

SERBS REBEL.
LONDON, April 13.
An uprising of Serbians against the Bulgarians who are now occupying their country is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Athens. As a result of pressure exerted by the Bulgarians, the Serbian population revolted and took to the hilly country. The insurgents are divided into battalions and companies and are engaged in destroying bridges, railways and other means of communication. The Bulgarian Government despatched troops to Nish to suppress the disorders which are said to have reached grave proportions.

GERMAN CRITICS.
AMSTERDAM, April 13.
Capt. Persius, writing in the Berlin Taebblatt, criticizes those who treat America's entry into the war lightly. It would be a mistake, he says, to regard America's economic strength as the only important factor, for an enemy of the military strength of the United States is not to be met with a shrug of the shoulders, otherwise we shall make the same mistakes as we did about the military strength of Britain. Otto Hoetsch, a prominent political writer, reviewing the German-American clash in the Kreuz Zeitung contends that Germany has a perfect right to make her own international law as far as submarines are concerned, and also in regard to neutrals for whose future interests he says Germany is fighting. Herr Hoetsch charges that America was never neutral from the beginning of the war, which, he says, should have been over long ago if the United States had not abetted the Entente. He continues, Germany in always trying to avoid a conflict, played into the hands of her opponents. The German Embassy in Washington should be blamed for this, it was the weakest spot in the whole diplomatic service. Apart from its glaring mistakes the Embassy lacked understanding of American psychology; the best proof of this being the failure of the Kaiser's lasting merit that he made every effort to hold America's friendship. We cannot blame him because America is against us but we do blame the German-Americans who must realize that the fatherland is deeply disappointed in them.

COMMEMORATION SERVICE.
LONDON, April 13.
King George and Queen Mary will attend service to be held at St. Paul's Cathedral in commemoration of the entrance of the United States into the war. The time for this service has been fixed for 11.30 a.m. on April 20, and it is understood the King and Queen expressed a special desire to be present.

BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP TORPEDOED.
LONDON, April 13.
The British hospital ship Gloucester Castle, was torpedoed without warning in the English Channel on March 30, but all the wounded on board were saved.

AN EXCUSE.
AMSTERDAM, April 13.
The Dusseldorf General Anzeiger in an article explains to the hard-working population of the Rhineland of Westphalia that hard necessity has driven the country to new food rationing. This will begin April 15th and will include a reduction of 25 per cent in the bread ration. The newspaper says the old crop must serve for four months, but that there are only supplies for one month. No peace, the newspaper adds, even if it came to-morrow, would alter the situation. Even after peace it will be a long time before the food situation will again be brought to normal. The newspaper concludes by saying the Rumanian wheat crop must be rushed up now that the Danube is free from ice and that the people must hold out. It says there is no alternative.

MORESHIPS SUNK.
NEW YORK, April 13.
(By Associated Press.)—Reports of the torpedoing and sinking of the Danish steamer Daisy and the British schooner Greenwood by German submarines in the Mediterranean, were brought here to-day by survivors of the two vessels, who were passengers on a Spanish steamer. Acting under orders they said the survivors declined to relate any details of the sinkings. The survivors of the Greenwood said they were on their way from Newfoundland to an Italian port.

LABOR REPRESENTATIVES.
WASHINGTON, April 13.
In response to a cablegram from Samuel Gompers, President of American Federation of Labor, asking that representatives of British labor be sent to the United States with the Commission coming to Washington for the war conference, Premier Lloyd George to-day replied, "delighted to comply with your request." Two labor leaders, representatives of the welfare department and the ministry of munitions will leave for America as soon as possible.

ARGENTINE SHIP SUNK.
BUENOS AIRES, April 13.
The Argentine sailing ship Monte Protegido has been sunk off the European coast, according to an official statement made here to-day. The Government ordered a complete enquiry into the sinking of the ship. The news created a great sensation in Buenos Aires. According to the newspapers the ship was sunk by a German submarine.

She Could Not Work and Was Discouraged
BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER RHEUMATISM.
Mde. Lachapelle Tells How All Her Other Ills Also Vanished When She Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.
St. Henri de Mascouche, Que., Apr. 13th. (Special.)—Completely cured of rheumatism, from which she had suffered for five years, Madame Joseph Lachapelle, a well-known lady living here, is recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to everyone who suffers from any form of kidney disease. "I could not work and I had almost given up hope," Made Lachapelle states, "but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. Not only did I suffer from rheumatism, but I was a victim of neuralgia, lumbago, backache and headache and headache and I also had an attack of eczema. "I took several other remedies but without much relief. Then I decided that my kidneys were the root of all my troubles and I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. It took just eight boxes to cure me. "If any women wish to write to me about my cure, it will give me pleasure to answer them." Madame Lachapelle's ill all came from bad kidneys. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. They cure only sick kidneys. Ask your neighbours about them.

STIRRED BY GOVERNOR'S APPEAL.
GRAND FALLS, To-Day.
Grand Falls is all ablaze. A big conflagration of patriotism has again started here, due to the Governor's appeal, and about fifty young men are leaving by Sunday's express and another lot leaving by Wednesday's. It is also rumored that a large crowd of lumbermen from Badger and Millertown are going to St. John's to enlist in the Forestry Battalion.
