CHAPTER XLII.

Lady Cameron did not trouble the young bride with her presence, and the guests were not surprised when they heard that Lady Clanronald was resting after the excitement of the morning.

The wedding breakfast passed with the vague confusion of a dream to Diana. Her outward appearance must not reflect the desolation of her heart and hopes. She must smile, she must answer the questions addressed to her, or every one would guess her secret. It seemed as though the breakfast would never end; but at last there was a movement among the guests.

"Go to her, Thea," said Richard, who had perceived Diana's unhappiness, and was sorely grieved. "She has no mother or sister; go to her, and be kind to her."

"For your sake," answered Thea, "not for her own."

"Yes, for her own, dear; go, and be kind to her," and Thea went.

She took Lady Clanronald to her room, and helped Susanne to dress the bride in her traveling costume. When it was time to go, she held out her hand.

"Good-bye, Diana," she said coldly. "As you have sown, so you will reap."

Then womanly pity stirred her heart as she looked at the sad, beautiful face, and, bending her head, Thea kissed her. A faint flush spread over the pale cheeks.

"Do not be kind to me, Thea," she said. "Kindness would be the greatest cruelty to me now. Good-bye."

Once more she stood in the hall, with the brilliant crowd of guests surging round her, while good wishes and congratulations were lavished upon her. To Lady Cameron she had said "Good-bye" with a pleasant smile—no kiss, no clasp of the hands, but a pleasant, careless smile. She had bidden her father farewell, her eyes so blinded with tears that she could not see his beloved face. He had whispered to her that she must try to be happy—that she must remember always she had a loving father, and a home ever warm with his love for her. Then he had kissed her, and, after a fashion, she had passed out of his life. Richard, when his turn came, had few words, and those few he could hardly utter. Sir Royal's eyes were the last that looked into hers—Sir Royal's voice was the last she heard.

"Heaven bless you, Diana!" he said. "Remember that, if ever you need it, my life itself is at your service."

Then she was in the carriage, being whirled away to the railway station, her husband by her side. He had taken her hand, and was whispering effusively that she was his wife, his beautiful wife at last, and that he considered himself one of the most fortunate of men. Diana neither heard nor heeded him. Her perverse fancy would picture Sir Lisle in his place. Ah, Heaven, how different would have been her future had he been there!

Another hour passed, and she was seated by her husband's side in a railway carriage, on their way to Rinehill, the nearest railway station to Ronald's Court, where the carriage was to meet them.

Lord Clanronald had been most attentive to his young wife. He had excused her silence by reflecting that it was only natural after so much excitement, and on leaving home with all its old and happy associations. He had procured an ample supply of papers and magazines for her; and, as he placed her in the seat near the window, and arranged everything for her, he kissed her. She offered no resistance, and he sat down by her side.

"I am almost sorry that we are going to Ronald's Court," he said. "I am awfully afraid you will find it dull. I wish now that we had arranged to go to Paris."

It was a matter of perfect indifference to Diana—her misery would be undiminished, whatever her surroundings might be. He went on:

"I wonder whether you will like the Court? It is a fine old place; but I do not think it is equal to Ferness."

Presently Lord Clanronald opened a traveling bag that he had with him, and drew from it a flask of brandy. Diana looked at her husband in wonder as he filled a glass and swallowed the contents.

"I never travel without brandy," he said, anologically.

"Do you drink brandy without water?" she asked, wondering.

"Yes; I am accustomed to it," he replied; "and use it everything." He refilled the glass as he spoke, and then put away the flask.

"The smell is very disagreeable," said Diana; "it is so strong that it has ruined the delicate fragrance of my flowers."

"He laughed, as though it were an excellent joke.

Diana looked out of the window, her mind absorbed in the contemplation of the happy past, the miserable present, and the clouded future. They were passing through a beautiful sweep of country, and she was gazing at the abundance of hawthorn of country, and she was suddenly made aware that her husband was asleep. The champagne at the dejeuner and the brandy afterward had been too much for him.

To secure her revenge, to make her enemies suffer, she had given up Sir Lisle this debauchee, who slept until the journey was ended, and then woke up irritable and chilled. She could never think without the most painful emotions of that going home. By her express wish Lord Clanronald had written to the Court to say that, at present, there were to be no rejoicings; so, on alighting at Rinehill, they drove home quickly through the park. Home! The word went through her heart like a knife.

Lord Clanronald was more or less ill-tempered all the way. He had secured his prize: there was now no further need to keep up appearances. Nothing could separate them, and it was a relief to be able to speak his mind freely. He was cold; he had no idea that the sun set so early. He was certain that the champagne was not good; he never felt well after sweet champagne. He wondered that Mr. Cameron had allowed sweet wines on the table; they should all have been dry. There was nothing like dry wines. So he continued to grumble during the drive to the Court, which was reached just before dark.

The first order Lord Clanronald gave was—"Brandy and soda, and be quick about it!"

"Welcome home, Diana!" he said, when they stood in the entrance hall.

He kissed her, and called for Mrs. Halliburton, the house-keeper, who came and looked with kindly, womanly pity at the pale, beautiful face of her new mistress.

"Dinner is ordered for half-past eight, Diana," said Lord Clanronald. "You will therefore have plenty of time to make the necessary alteration in your toilet. Mrs. Halliburton will show you your rooms. Now, Towner, the brandy and soda quickly."

"I wonder," thought Diana, "whether he is always drinking brandy and soda-water? It really looks like it."

She went away to her rooms with Mrs. Halliburton, tired and depressed beyond words. What a home-coming!

"You look ill, my lady," said the housekeeper, whose heart went out in pity and sympathy to the lovely but sorrowful bride. "Has she found out about his lordship's weakness?" she wondered. "Ah, if I had known that she was so young and beautiful, I would have given her a warning before allowing her to ting her life away!"

She noticed the distressed look in the eyes of the bride, her want of interest in everything—for Diana never even cast a cursory glance round the rooms to see what they were like. She walked straight to the window, after speaking a few gentle words to Mrs. Halliburton, and stood there, silent and motionless, until Susanne told her she would be late for dinner unless she dressed at once.

When her young mistress's toilet was completed, Susanne cried out in admiration. Diana did not even look in the glass, but went down to dinner, her face white as the silk she wore, in the listless manner that she had evinced since her arrival at the Court.

Lord Clanronald had recovered from the effects of the champagne that he had drunk, and was now talkative and full of compliments. He praised his wife, praised her dress, her flowers. He persisted in drinking her health. Glass after glass of champagne was drunk in her honor, until Diana caught the butler's eyes fixed anxiously on her, and then she rose from the table.

"I will follow you," said Lord Clanronald, with a smile.

She was very beautiful, and very graceful, but he found it difficult to make himself agreeable to her.

"Bring me the brandy, Towner," he said to the butler, as soon as his wife had disappeared.

He thought to himself that a glass of cognac would inspire him, and that he would then be able to talk eloquently to his wife and make her look at him with bright wondering eyes. He took one, and did not feel quite so eloquent as he had expected; he took another, and then felt stupid; he took a third, and then remembered nothing more. Two hours afterwards, when the butler returned, he found his master sound asleep, and all efforts to awaken him were in vain.

"He will have to sleep off the brandy," said his valet. "He will not wake until to-morrow morning." Nor did he.

While Diana waited in the drawing-room, she tried to sing and to read, listening now and again with a beating heart for the footsteps that never came.

Long after midnight, when the moon was shedding her silvery beams over the fair grounds of Ronald's Court, Diana sat by her window brooding over the dead happy past and contemplating the black dreary future; while she did so, she fell asleep there; and it was not until the birds began to sing that Diana woke from her slumber.

CHAPTER XLIII.

"I should like to show you the house, Diana," said Lord Clanronald, when he met his wife in the morning.

He was very contrite, very much ashamed of himself. He had apologized to himself again and again, and declared that Towner, the butler, must have given him too much brandy, that he would take care such a thing never happened again.

So Diana went over the house with her husband. It was a grand and spacious mansion, but it was not equal to Ferness. The rooms were lofty, light, and handsomely furnished. The picture-gallery ran round the whole of the building, and was unique in its way; the ball-room was one of the largest in England; the suit of drawing-rooms, ending in a fine large conservatory, was spacious, and decorated with great taste; the large dining-room contained several paintings of mail-clad warriors and much-befriended ladies, the ancestors of the present owner of Ronald's Court; the smaller one was most comfortably arranged; the staircases were wide, the corridors large. But the gem of the whole place was her ladyship's boudoir—an octagon room with three large windows that looked over the deep still waters of a picturesque lake. It was luxuriously furnished in blue and white, the very colors, Lord Clanronald assured his wife, for a blonde. No more charming room could have been imagined. The few pictures, all by modern artists, were well chosen. There was a lovely face by Millais, a Roman scene by Alma Tadema, a landscape by Linnell. There was a statuette of pure marble—copies of the world's most prized art treasures—and a profusion of choice flowers. Diana uttered a faint cry of admiration when the door was opened, and Lord Clanronald was delighted.

LONDON, Nov. 12. The American Chamber of Commerce of London, in a report for October notes a gradual revival of British productions, especially of coal, and an increase of trade in British foreign markets, particularly as strike continues to cripple the American export trade.

NEWSPAPER TROUBLE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. Increased advertising rates and reduction in the size of newspapers were urged to-day by Franklin D. Glass, of Birmingham, Ala., President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, at a special meeting here to consider the newspaper shortage. "Every newspaper," he said, "should agree to cut down its average number of pages, both week days and Sundays, and hold down its advertising volume to a fixed number of pages. This will probably necessitate an arbitrary reduction of at least 25 per cent. in volume of business. Radical advances should be made in advertising

NATIONALIZATION OF MINES.

LONDON, Nov. 12. A special Congress comprising representatives of all organized Labor, was called to-day to meet in London on December 9th to discuss the nationalization of the mines. It will consider what action might be taken to compel the Government to bring into effect the recommendation of the Sankey Commission that Nationalization be effected.

I. W. W. AGITATORS ARRESTED.

CENTRALIA, Washington, Nov. 12. Nineteen alleged Industrial Workers of the World are in jail here to-day. The men were rounded up yesterday and last night after the firing on the Armistice Day parade, which resulted in the death of four members of the American Legion and the lynching of an I. W. W. member. There was no disorder here this morning.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. Increased advertising rates and reduction in the size of newspapers were urged to-day by Franklin P. Glas, of Birmingham, Ala., President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, at a special meeting here to consider the newsprint shortage. "Every newspaper," he said, "should agree to cut down its average number of pages, both week days and Sundays, and hold down its advertising volume to a fixed number of pages. This will probably necessitate an arbitrary reduction of at least 95 per cent. in volume of business. Radical advances should be made in advertising rates as percentage of increase should be such that they will hold back the sluice of advertising that has poured into our offices and bids fair to continue during the next year."

UP AGAINST IT.

ROME, Nov. 12. As election approaches, the excitement throughout the country is growing, and acts of violence are threatening. The latest victim of violence is Adamo Boaris, the democratic candidate in Ferrara. He had driven in an automobile to the village of Marrocca to address the electors, and hardly begun to speak when socialists invaded the meeting and wounded him. The socialists seized the automobile for their own propaganda and kept Boris a prisoner. Soldiers were sent from Ferrara to rescue him.

GETTING FED UP.

PARIS, Nov. 12. The American delegation to the Peace Conference has informed the quicker than a disordered liver or waste-clogged bowels. Don't stay sick, bilious, headachy, constipated. Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, your breath bad and stomach sour. Why not spend a few cents for a box of Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest, laxative-cathartic you ever experienced? Cascarets never gripe, sicken or inconvenience one like Sels, Oil, Calomel or harsh pills. They work while you sleep.

Supreme Council of its intention to leave France during the first days of December, according to semi-official information from the French foreign office. The British peace delegation has also expressed the same desire, and the general impression in French conference circles is that the Conference will conclude its work by the end of this month.

FRENCH ELECTION RIOT.

PARIS, Nov. 12. An election riot with revolutionary features occurred to-day in the small industrial town of Dorton, Department of Ain, where extremists are numerous. Republicans were threatened with death and besieged in the Town Hall by turbulent elements. Red flags were carried and a revolution was proclaimed by the besiegers.

THE WINNER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. Lieut. Melvine Maynard, the flying parson, won the recent army transcontinental airplane race with the shortest elapsed time, 9 days, 4 hours, 26 minutes and 5 seconds, according to the official decision of the War Department, announced here to-night.

TO THE DUKE.

TORONTO, Nov. 12. The Duke of Devonshire was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon to-day. In replying to the toast to himself, His Excellency said, "I am not going into my family history or I might tell you of one bit of it how one of my ancestors had to choose between having his head cut off and being made a Duke" (Laughter). "The ancestor had chosen the dukedom." "Canada," said the Duke, "had made him an optimist. Much has happened since a year ago. It is with thankful hearts that we celebrate the anniversary of the coming of peace." The enthusiasm that Canada has shown in receiving the Prince of Wales has demonstrated the loyalty of Canadians to the Throne and to British institutions. It was not merely an enthusiasm for a fine and engaging personality. While the despotic thrones of Europe have been shattered, the British Throne stands to-day safer than it ever did. British institutions have stood the test and shock of time and change."

ROUMANIA'S REPLY UNSATISFACTORY.

PARIS, Nov. 12. The reply of Roumania to the Allied note recently presented, in which it was again demanded that Hungary be evacuated, is regarded in peace conference circles as wholly unsatisfactory. The note, which was taken up for consideration by the Supreme Council this morning, was characterized as extremely evasive. The Roumanians indicate a willingness to retire to the river Theiss, but they decline to respect the original armistice lines, and also decline to comply with the Allied request that they name a member of the inter-Allied commission to compile a value of the goods seized in Hungary by the Roumanians so that this amount could be deducted from the total of reparations due to Roumania. While the Roumanian note is worded in terms of extreme politeness it is held to indicate a continued defiance of the Supreme Council.

FATAL AIR ACCIDENT.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12. E. H. Dohin, an aviator, who has been doing victory loan stunts in Ottawa and the Ottawa Valley, and a passenger, James F. Murro, a leading citizen of Pembroke, were killed when the airplane in which they were flying crashed to earth four miles from Egansville this afternoon.

THE PRINCE AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. The Prince of Wales started the second day of his stay in Washington with a visit to the National Headquarters of the American Red Cross, where National and District leaders were presented to him. Afterwards he inspected the Lincoln Memorial, and visited the Walter Reed hospital where he met a number of soldiers who were wounded overseas. The ### Divers' Chances.

There is a great and increasing demand for divers in order to rescue from the sea the millions of pounds' worth of treasure that has been sunk by the Hun during the war. The actual amount of gold alone that is buried beneath the ocean in torpedoed and mine-sunk ships runs into millions, and there are many millions more in preserved foods and other goods which do not easily perish and which are worth rescuing. Anyone in search of good, healthy employment could not do better than become a deep sea diver. Of course, the work is hard, but from a purely physical culture point of view it is probably the best and most effective way of expanding the lungs and broadening the chest, because deep, regular breathing becomes a necessity. Taken as a class divers are extremely healthy. Consumption, indigestion and similar complaints are practically unknown among them.

Shipping Notes.

The S.S. J. A. McKee arrived in port yesterday with a general cargo from Montreal, which she is discharging at the Furness Withy pier. After discharging, it is likely that the S.S. War Witch will be sent to Sydney for another load of coal. The schr. Falcon has cleared from Fortuue with 1,255 qts. codfish for Halifax, shipped by Lake and Lake. The Francis W. Smith has entered at G. M. Barr's to load fish for the West Indies. The schr. Isford will load codfish for Barbados. The schr. Over the Top has entered at Bishop and Sons, Ltd., to load codfish for Barbados. The S.S. Lake Obhart is due to Harvey & Co. to-day with a general cargo from Montreal. The Danish schr. Eva left here yesterday for Fogo, where she will load fish for the European market. The S.S. Buchanan, with a cargo of anthracite coal is now due to A. Harvey & Co.

Household Notes.

Use brown sugar to sweeten cereals; it makes them taste richer. Milk will cloud glass so that its original brilliancy cannot be restored. To the modern housewife the long-handled dustpan is a great help. A glass of grape juice at breakfast is a welcome change from orange juice.

THE NEWSPAPERS PAID. LONDON, Nov. 12. Four members of the Cabinet, Austen Chamberlain, Sir Eric Geddes, Sir Auckland Geddes and Walter Hume Long took the witness stand in the Lord Chief Justice's Court to-day, and publicly denied the statements printed in the Daily News with reference to their holding shares in various public companies, in consequence of which they brought libel suits against newspapers. After their testimony an announcement was made that the suits had been settled on, and terms arranged outside court. The proprietors of the Daily News agreed to pay to each of the plaintiffs 250 guineas and also costs.

They refused to recognise the court and each was sentenced to two months imprisonment.

STRIKE SETTLEMENT EFFORTS. WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 12. The apparent unwillingness of all Union Coal Miners to return to work at the old pay scale caused Government officials to put forth every effort to-day to bring about an immediate negotiation of a new wage agreement. Secty. Wilson, without waiting for formal acceptance of his offer to mediate the differences, began smoothing the way for the joint conference of the miners and operators he has called to a meeting at Washington on Friday.

FIRST LADY MAYOR. LONDON, Nov. 12. Sixteen Labor Mayors were elected throughout England and Wales yesterday. The first Lady Mayor was elected at Stalybridge, Councillor Ada Summers. Conservative mayors number 148, liberals 112, Councillor Vaughan was elected Mayor of Bethnal Green, amid some opposition, on the ground that he was a conscientious objector. At Liverpool the labor nationalist members refused to participate in the mayoralty elections stating their voice would be ineffectual in the selections.

TOO ROUGH TO LAND. BREAST, Nov. 12. King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, who arrived on the transport George Washington from the United States yesterday afternoon, were not able to land from the steamer until this morning.

RENOWN AT NEW YORK. NEW YORK, Nov. 12. The British cruiser Renown which is to carry the Prince of Wales home to England after his visit to the United States, arrived here to-day from Port of Spain, Trinidad. The Prince will live on the Renown while in New York.

EXCITEMENT IN SENATE. WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. Summary action to choke down debate on the Peace Treaty were decided on by the treaty's friends in the Senate to-day to meet developments, regarded by many Senators as the beginning of a filibuster against ratification. To petitions to invoke the Senate closure, rules, which never heretofore have been used, were prepared for submission to-morrow should it become apparent that dilatory tactics have been adopted by the group of in-reconcilables who are opposed to the treaty.

RECTORSHIP FOR POINCARÉ. LONDON, Nov. 12. President and Madame Poincaré of France concluded their visit here to-day, leaving for Scotland, where the President is to receive a Rectorship in Glasgow University. King George and Queen Mary and other members of the Royal Family accompanied the President and Madame Poincaré to the station.

TO COMMEMORATE PRINCE'S VISIT. OTTAWA, Nov. 12. To commemorate the placing of the corner stone in the Peace Tower by the Prince of Wales, and as a small token of the country's appreciation of the Royal visit, a marble bust and pedestal of the Prince will be erected in the new Parliament building.

SEEKING IN OPPOSITION. LONDON, Nov. 12. Major General C. F. Seely, whose resignation as head of the Air Ministry was announced yesterday took his seat in the Opposition bench in the House of Commons to-day. General Seely explained that he had resigned his post because of dissatisfaction over the dual control of the Air Force, which he declared, involved waste and inefficiency. No personal question, he said, had arisen.

JELICOE'S OPINION. VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 12. "To my mind the British Navy should not be kept short of overseas squadrons. I believe that the Empire, as a whole, realizes the imperative necessity of maintaining ships of war, not only in home waters, but in close proximity to the most distant Dominions. We must see to it that our Overseas Naval forces are never again permitted to be as they were prior to the war." This declaration was made last night, before the Canadian Club, by Viscount Jellicoe, who summed up the lesson, which the great Admiral believed, had been taught the British Commonwealth by experiences of war.

Old Comrades Meet.

The Old Comrades of the C.L.E. met at headquarters, C.L.E. Armoury, at eight o'clock last evening, when considerable important business was handled. It was decided to hold a dance in the Armoury on the night of the twenty-sixth in aid of their funds. Seeing that the last dance was a big success, it is probable that this be a good duplicate of it. There are now about eighty members of the Old Comrades, and it is the ambition of the members to add as many to their ranks as possible. They are endeavouring, also, to keep pace with the strides of progress being made by the membership, the Church Ladies' Brigade. Last evening's meeting was a very successful one, lasting until about ten thirty, and every unit left the hall with the firm determination to do everything in his power to forward the cause with which he is allied. With such a spirit permeating the Old Boys there can be no such thing as fall. Several of them are returned soldiers.

SUPPOSED TO BE SCHE ARNISH. The tug John Green went out early this morning, followed by the S. S. Cabot, to make search for the overturned vessel reported off Cape Spear yesterday. The search proved successful and the John Green was reported as having the vessel in tow, finding her about 12 miles south of Cape Spear. It is thought that the vessel is the Arnish, owned by Flett & Co. The vessel it will be remembered grounded at St. George's wharf being launched, and was later got off by Capt. H. Carter. Strikes and the Stage.

This may be the first time members of the "Profession" have formed a Trade Union, but the weapon of the strike has often been used by actors to enforce demands.

In 1907 a dispute between the artists and proprietors of some London Music Halls resulted in the former going on strike and even acting as pickets; but in the days when workmen were timidly dreaming of organization, actors were actively standing up for their rights against managers and proprietors.

In 1879 Drury Lane Theatre had to shut up through the actors suddenly going on strike. In the early forties of last century, the manager at His Majesty's Theatre replaced the singer Tamburini by Coletti from Milan. The other artists organized a demonstration against the intruder, who could not make himself heard above the uproar which greeted his appearance. Finally he was chased from the stage, and Tamburini was recalled.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WARDING OFF THE BLUES.

A friend of mine called me over into her garden one day last fall to show me a new dahlia. It was a beautiful dark red dahlia, one of those wonderful new varieties that have all the brilliant color and gloss of the dahlia combined with the grace of the chrysanthemum.

"I suppose you think I'm terribly foolish about my garden, making such an event of a new flower," she said wistfully.

"Foolish," said I, "I think you're one of the wisest women I know." And I meant it.

How She Keeps Herself Cheerful and Pleasant.

She is a woman between forty-four and fifty who lives alone. She has a small income which, with some sewing, keeps her in moderate comfort but is not enough to solace her loneliness by expensive pleasures. And I know nothing finer than the way she fills up her life with small pleasures such as her garden, her reading, her preserves, her weekly visit to the moving pictures—and thereby, keeps herself cheerful and pleasant.

Nothing in the world will keep off unhappiness better than the habit of finding pleasure in small things. If the blossoming of a new flower brings sunshine into your life you can be sure of having some sunshine, to matter what misfortunes come to you.

A Little Treat Perks Her Up.

This same woman bought a toy ice cream freezer last summer, and on days when she feels the need of some little treat to perk her up, makes a pint of ice cream and perhaps calls in some neighbor to share it.

A man I know who, though he is in a position to have large pleasures, believes in the cult of the small pleasure too, and often sends for little things which he sees advertised in the newspapers and magazines now

PUMPKIN PIE.

Let all the world run riot in the aftermath of war. Let kings come trembling from their thrones and princes be no more. What matters it to me to-day that times are out of joint? There still exists one golden bliss to which I proudly point; The world is sick with madness now, I hear the grumblers sigh— But thank the Lord I still can get a wedge of pumpkin pie!

The murmurs of men's discontent are heard throughout the land, The strikers mob the factory doors and tollers idle stand; No man can tell what lies ahead nor what the storm shall bring. The world is topsy-turvy now, but still I smile and sing. For spite of change and sudden shock and anger's rage and cry, I still can sit and eat my fill of golden pumpkin pie.

Let little men still rave and rant and cavil as they will Let pessimists with tongues of gloom say all the world is ill, I'll keep my courage to the last; behind my humble door I'll greet my children with a kiss and romp upon the floor. And I'll forget the storm outside and let the brickbats fly And be content within a world that serves me pumpkin pie.

When Britain Ran Lotteries.

The recent decision of the House of Commons not to permit Government lotteries recalls the fact that lotteries were common in ancient Rome, and during the Middle Ages lotteries were utilised by the Italian merchants for the disposal of their goods. Some of the Italian States then adopted the lottery as a means of raising revenue, and the institution of State lotteries afterwards became very common and very popular throughout Europe. The earliest English State lottery of which there is any record was in 1569, when 40,000 chances were sold at ten shillings each, the drawing taking place at the west door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The prizes consisted of articles of plate, and the profits were employed for the repair of certain harbours. Early in the reign of Queen Anne private lotteries were suppressed "as public nuisances," but Government lotteries were still maintained, and from 1709 to 1824 considerable sums were annually raised in lotteries authorised by Act of Parliament. The average yearly profit to the Government from 1783 to 1824 was over £340,000. But on the ground of injury to public morals, lotteries of all kinds were abolished in England in 1826. Ireland is exempted from the ban.

Cause for Sorrow.

The young Shah of Persia is fond of telling the following story concerning his grandfather, the famous Nasr-ed-Din.

In his old age this ruler lost his good looks—a fact which troubled him greatly.

One day he studied his features in a glass attentively for some time and then dismayed by his ugliness, began to weep.

At once the Court Fool began weeping also, and even when, after lamenting for two whole hours, the Shah dried his tears the Fool continued weeping more violently than ever.

Nasr-ed-Din looked at him in astonishment and asked him the cause of his sorrow.

"I wept with reason," he said, "at beholding my ugliness—I, the Lord of so many lands, the master of countless slaves. But I do not understand why you should thus despair."

"If you, my lord," replied the Fool, "wept for two hours after seeing yourself in the mirror for but an instant, it is not natural that I, who see you all day long, should weep longer than you!"

Its Meaning Made Clear.

Wife: "What is meant, John, by the phrase, 'carrying coals to Newcastle?'"
Husband: "It is a metaphor, my dear, showing the doing of something that is unnecessary."
Wife: "I don't exactly understand. Give me an illustration—a familiar one."
Husband: "Well, if I were to bring you home a book entitled 'How to Talk,' that would be 'carrying coals to Newcastle!'"

Disobeying Orders.

The immortal Nelson was guilty of disobedience to orders at the Battle of Copenhagen fought by an English fleet against the combined land forts and navy of Denmark in 1801, and by his act of disobedience a glorious victory was won, for which he received the praise of Parliament and people, being created a Viscount therefor. What would have happened had his refusal to adhere to the instructions of his superior in command, culminated in defeat, can only be imagined, but doubtless Nelson would have been court-martialed and shot, and there would have been no Trafalgar, and possibly the successful invasion of England by the armies of Napoleon.

Capt. W. T. Turner, of the ill-fated Lusitania, disobeyed orders, in 1915, with the result that the very danger—against which every precaution had apparently been taken—occurred and torpedoes from a German submarine sent the giant steamer to bottom carrying with it, eleven hundred and thirty-four valuable lives, a total greater than the losses of Nelson's command at Copenhagen. The safety of the people on board the Lusitania on that fateful 7th of May, depended upon the absolute obedience of the master of the ship to the instructions wireless by the Admiralty, and the written orders which were in possession of the captain. The latter, however, thought otherwise, and the result of his departure from orders astounded and affrighted the whole civilized world.

There is a vast difference, however, between the disobedience of Nelson and that of Turner. In the case of the former a decisive victory meant the overthrow of vast forces arrayed against England, and until that victory was attained Nelson refused to accept orders from his superior. In his case daring and courage turned a possible defeat, or at least an inglorious withdrawal—into splendid victory. With Turner, the lives of nearly two thousand people hung on his adherence to instructions, but with that stubbornness which shipmasters sometimes possess, and relying more on his own judgment—if indeed his action could have been said to have been based on any judgment at all—he chose to ignore orders for certain trivial reasons, forgetting the great responsibility placed upon his shoulders, which made him the custodian of every bit of humanity on his ship. There was no glory for him to job at instructions. His orders were to do certain things, in order that all on board might be landed safely at their destination. Whatever honour might have accrued to him would have been gained by obedience, but he deliberately ignored both the spirit and the letter of his instructions and was therefore in a great measure primarily responsible for that which subsequently happened.

In the inside story of the sinking of the Lusitania, published on Tuesday, the evidence, hitherto kept secret, was given out, and in that evidence, which was principally the captain's own, he advanced several very trivial reasons as to why he deemed it expedient to disobey the Admiralty instructions, chiefly relating to the rate of speed he was ordered to maintain after entering the danger zone. In the light of the great disaster it is obvious that those reasons were extremely puerile and selfish. Had he maintained full speed, his evidence declared, he would have arrived on Liverpool bar at low tide, and the ship could not have crossed. Thus, according to Captain Turner, it was more important that the Lusitania should reach port at a time when there was sufficient water on the bar to float the ship over, than it was to follow instructions and safeguard the lives of passengers, officers and crew. Had this statement of Capt. Turner's been published immediately following the enquiry, and while public indignation rode high, it is doubtful if the gallant (?) mariner would have escaped the wrath of the populace.

Whilst not in any way offering any criticism of the navigation of the ship, it must be borne in mind that Captain Turner was relying entirely on his own judgment (?) in approaching the headlands contrary to his prescribed instructions, his plea for so doing being that he required to fix his position, and that, had he remained farther off, foggy weather might have set in and rendered him in worse case. This was merely, on the face of it, a lame excuse for a competent shipmaster to put forward. Fogs and such like are being constantly met with by transatlantic shipping, and no mariner would make use of such a subterfuge to excuse himself for not obeying orders. Therefore it must be assumed that Capt. Turner constituted himself as being above orders, and his stubbornness in refusing to obey them actually resulted in the torpedoing of the big Cunarder with the resultant loss of life.

The evidence developing at this enquiry showed that Capt. Turner had been instructed to keep in mid-channel, to steam at full speed, and to avoid headlands, because enemy submarines were known to be operating off the most prominent points. He did not do so, and consequently by his non-regard for instructions furnished by experts, the Lusitania met her fate through the disobedience of wireless orders. No person can envy Capt. Turner. By his own action, based upon nothing but his own ideas of the time of making port to suit his own convenience, the Lusitania horror has passed into the pages of history as the greatest of all marine disasters, brought about by disobeying orders.

New Telephone System.

So many complaints have been heard and registered, regarding the present totally inadequate telephone service in this city, that it is at once refreshing and informative to know that a new order of things telephonic will shortly be in vogue, and that a long-felt want will be supplied by the advent of the new telephone company, popularly known as the Avalon. The success of this telephonic adventure is assured, not only because it is filling an immediate need, but because of the assured and constantly repeated demand for a more improved modern and efficient service than the city is at present receiving.

A long-distance service will be one of the chief features of the new company's plans, and construction work has already been started on the line to go around Conception Bay, which will be extended from St. John's to points in Ferryland District later on. It is planned to begin the building of the St. John's plant early next Spring, upon the completion of which the entire service will be linked up and inaugurated.

The Avalon Company plan to install a thoroughly modern system, similar to that in use in the larger American and Canadian cities. The central building will be fireproof, and the adoption of lead-covered cables will give all metallic circuits, different altogether from those now in use, thereby eliminating all the present vexatious "cross talk" and rendering the service absolutely private.

It is the main desire of the company to have the public become interested in this enterprise, to the extent that investment will be made in its stock, the purpose of which will be to strengthen the sympathy and co-operation of subscribers. To this end an attractive offer is being made by the issue of a seven per cent. preferred stock, which has the additional advantage of participating with the common stock in the excess profits of the company over and above the guaranteed seven per cent. on preferred.

The present effort is the first real one attempted to give St. John's, Conception Bay and Ferryland Districts an adequate and satisfactory telephone service, and this being the case it is to the interest of all who expect to benefit by the establishment of such a service to give the company hearty and tangible support. As an investment we believe that the Avalon Telephone Company's preferred stock is ideal, and we further venture to express the hope that the company will experience no difficulty in raising all the capital needed, locally. St. John's needs to be telephonically connected with the most important centres of business on the Peninsula of Avalon, and in initiating this project the Avalon Telephone Company is deserving of the success which popular support will ensure.

Fortune Bay Returns Warren.

The election returns from Fortune were given out last night. Starting in the afternoon the various counts showed the Opposition candidate in the lead from the beginning, a lead which was increased as the count proceeded, the final figures being:

Warren . . . . . 1782
Elliot . . . . . 450

The vote cast was far in excess of 1913, when the late C. H. Emerson polled exactly one thousand, beating his opponent R. M. Fudge, by a majority of 335. Mr. Warren's total is the largest single district vote on record, as also is his majority. The standing of the parties now is:

Schooner Missing.

WAS THERE BEEN ANOTHER MARINE TRAGEDY?

Three vessels left Seldom-Come-Bay on Friday morning last, 7th inst., for Conception Bay. Ungava, Joseph Roche, master; Ruby, Isaac Dawe, master, and another (name unknown) with Capt. Abraham Parsons in charge. The Ungava and Ruby are owned by MacRae, of Hr. Grace, the latter having on board four fishing crews belonging to Coley's Point, who embarked at Black Island. On the following morning (Saturday) the crew of the Ungava saw the Ruby which they supposed was being reefed or else had been carried away in the gale which was blowing. Nothing more was seen of the Ruby. Since then the Ungava has arrived at Hr. Grace and Capt. Parsons' vessel has returned to Seldom-Come-Bay, but there is nothing whatever of the Ruby, no word of her whereabouts having been ascertained, although the relatives of the people on board have telegraphed all offices along the coast for information. It is quite possible that the craft managed to make a port somewhere out of reach of a telegraph office, and will doubtless turn up safely. For the sake of those on board and their anxious relatives and friends in Coley's Point, we trust that news will soon be heard of the missing vessel.

Still More Damage by the Storm.

Particulars of the ravages of the recent ocean storm are slowly but persistently coming in, and the latest are contained in a message received yesterday afternoon by the Marine Dept., which said:

Inter-Collegiate Football

The Methodists met the Feildians yesterday to play the second match of the season. During the first half there was no scoring, the Feildians keeping up a gallant defence. In the beginning of the second half the Methodists scored the first goal and then the scoring began in earnest for the Methodists. The Methodists won, the score being 6 to 0. Capt. Perlin and his team played well, but lost. Better luck next time, Albert.

Bianca Was Abandoned.

Bowring Bros. received word yesterday that their schooner Bianca, (which was at one time during the war shelled by a German submarine) had been abandoned in mid-ocean, the crew being taken into Charleston, U. S. A. by an American steamer. The men will be here within a few days.

New Steam Service.

According to a statement made by Sir Edgar Bowring, who has just returned to London, a line of fast steamers will shortly begin service between Liverpool, St. John's, Halifax and New York. The steamers will make fortnightly trips.

Evading Detection.

A story of how one Irish potheen maker, as they call moonshiners in Ireland managed for a long time to escape detection is so good that it is being told all over the country. The English revenue officers had detected so many stills by the smoke arising from the fires that the man in question, who occupied a house adjoining, connected his flue with the chimney of the barracks of the Royal Irish Constabulary and his distillery remained undetected until someone betrayed him.

Cabot and John Green Made Search.

UNDETECTED FOR KEEL-UP SCHOONER WITHOUT SUCCESS.

As soon as the report of the captain of the Sablo Island, to the effect that he had seen an over-ferried schooner about six miles South East of Cape Spear on his way in yesterday, just before one o'clock, was received, Messrs. Cabot and John Green were dispatched to the scene for the purpose of making search for the derelict. Both went, although not together, to the place mentioned by the Sablo's captain, and, seeing no signs there proceeded on to about ten miles S.S.E. of the Cape. However, not a sign of the schooner was seen, and both Messrs. Cabot and John Green were after eight o'clock last night. The schooner was rather choppy, and a side ran at a speed of about 6 knots. It is thought, therefore, that the derelict was carried down the shore and so away from the vicinity in which the Sablo I. had seen her. The schooner was described as being, apparently, of about a hundred and fifty tons, painted white and with a very clean, smooth bottom, as if she were practically new. No wreckage, with the exception of a couple of spars which were probably attached to her by the rigging, was to be seen, and some fifty feet of keel was showing. The sea was too rough to enable the Sablo I. to attempt a rescue.

Rivalled Crusoe.

ON DESERT ISLAND FOR THREE DAYS.

For three days marooned on an uninhabited island without food, shelter, or fire in a piercing cold wind was the experience of the crew of the motor boat, commanded by Chesley Currell. The schooner was on her way from Botwood to Exploits and meeting the storm became a total wreck, and had to be abandoned. The crew took to an open boat, and after a terrible struggle succeeded in making land. For three days they signalled the people on the mainland and when about to give up in despair their signals of distress were seen, and rescuers put out through a raging sea and successfully saved the, by then, exhausted mariners.

At the Majestic.

Last evening's show at the Majestic was a good one and was followed throughout with genuine interest. Geraldine Farrar, in "The Stronger Now," captivated the patrons, and she was unanimously voted a splendid actress, one, possibly, without an equal in her own particular sphere. The picture was one depicting the working of a Spanish feud and bloodthirst, which everyone has either read or heard about. Taking the part of a Spanish girl, she marries a man whom she has taken a blood-vow to kill. It is not until after that she learns the identity of her husband and the question then is; will she keep her vow? Happily enough—circumstances—so work that she is not required to live up to it, and a re-union takes place with both parties happy and glad. A Ford Educational Film, illustrating the making of an automobile tire, was also put on and interested everybody. All previous Fords have. To-night the same show will be repeated. The big attraction for next week will be "The Cavell Case," giving the first pictorial story of the martyrdom of England's nurse—Edith Cavell. Do not miss it.

Lost in the Straits.

SEVERAL SCHOONERS VICTIMS OF STORM. Several schooners were lost in the Straits in the recent storm, the crews being landed at Humbermouth by the S.S. Some of the schooners were the J. Moulton, O'Neill master, at Henley Hr., on the sixth; one belonging to C. Jerrett, of Brigus, was lost on the same date; a schooner of A. S. Mann's, Hr. Grace, and one belonging to E. Simmonds, of the same place, were also lost.

Visited the "Ferm."

The judges of the Ferm marine court of enquiry, consisting of Mr. Frank Morris, J.P., Capt. English and Capt. Penn, proceeded to the South side yesterday afternoon, to make an examination of the ship. It was too late after they arrived back to continue the enquiry, and it was ordered to be again heard on Saturday.

HUNTING GUN RUNNERS.

As our enemies are by this time aware, we have a pretty useful Secret Service in this country, and one of their most important jobs just now is to make sure that arms and ammunition—of which gigantic stores exist everywhere—are not being shipped to places where they may be used against us.

The fact is that gun-running, so popular and profitable a form of trade in the old days, has never become extinct, and so long as rifles can be bought for a pound apiece and sold for twenty there will always be adventurous spirits ready to risk their liberty for the sake of their pockets.

By international law any ship carrying contraband of war may be seized, and although there have been endless disputes as to what is or is not contraband, there can be no doubt about it when the cargo consists of guns and ammunition.

In 1862—during the American Civil War—we allowed a mystery ship to slip softly out of Liverpool.

A little steamer who was, of only 800 tons, but her expedition cost the British Government the tidy sum of three millions sterling.

She, of course, was the Alabama, the most famous of privateers in the world.

Since that date we have been more careful, and that is the reason why, just recently, the steamer Hampshire Coast was put under arrest, merely under the suspicion that she was carrying arms to the Sinn Feiners in Ireland.

In the year 1870 there was built on the Clyde a stout steamer of 981 tons called the Ban-Righ, and for thirty years or so she traded comfortably between London and Aberdeen.

Then quite suddenly she changed hands, and from a commonplace trader became a mystery ship and the centre of all sorts of international complications.

The rumour was that she was being fitted for the West Indies fruit trade, but "from information received" our people kept a very sharp eye on her. When on the point of sailing, down swooped the officials and found in her hold four field guns, a search-light, and all sorts of arms and ammunition. That was in 1901, when the Boer War was still going on, and it was taken for granted that her purchasers had meant to run the stuff to Delagoa Bay for the Boers.

Five People Die From Eating Ripe Olives.

Ripe olives bought for a formal dinner at the home of Murray W. Sales, Detroit, October 18, have caused the death of five persons. Bacillus botulinus poisoning, an infection usually confined to animals, set in, Dr. Francis Duffield, President of the Board of Health, recently issued an order prohibiting sale of all canned and bottled foods prepared by the so-called "cold" process. And he issued, further, a warning to the public against eating such foods, particularly olives, corn and asparagus, pending report on investigations now being conducted. This case is very interesting from a medical point of view. There have been very few in this country like it. Until rather recently the medical profession has regarded the bacillus botulinus as belonging to a group of germs found in tainted meat. But now we know it may also be present in decomposing vegetables. It can develop only in the absence of air; that is, in sealed cans, jars and the like, although food may actually become infected before it is sealed. This poisoning has not afflicted humans much in this country, but it has taken considerable toll in the congested cities of Europe. The only frequent outbreak resulting from it in the United States has been among domestic animals. "Blindstaggers" among horses, for instance, is caused by bacillus botulinus poisoning.

Cutting Down Expenses.

THE KING WON'T DEAL WITH PROFITEERS.

In order to save heavy travelling expenses, the King arranged that during his stay in Scotland three only of his Privy Counsellors should come north when a Council was to be held.

If our Government would follow in the footsteps of our Sovereign, national economy would become a reality instead of a mere empty formula.

Everyone knows how the King cut down his private expenses during the war, how the Royal Household ate war bread, and adhered most strictly to rations, how every pound that could be saved was given to the war charities.

But King George and Queen Mary began their career of economy long before the war. Their housekeeping at Marlborough House was always a pattern in this direction. All bills had to be presented monthly by the Royal tradesmen, and all were paid within a week of presentation. No discounts were asked for or accepted if offered, but, on the other hand, any attempt at profiteering met with short shrift. The offender was simply removed from the list.

The King—the Prince, as he then was—himself went through all accounts for personal necessities, such as clothes, books, cigars, and all these private bills had to be initiated by him before payment.

When King Edward came to the throne he instituted economies which cut the Civil List down by tens of thousands of pounds. Old servants were pensioned off and useless posts abolished. King George went further still, and his private household is at present an example to all his subjects, in the matter of administration, which is careful without being in the least parsimonious.

It might be mentioned that waste of any kind is abhorrent to the King or Queen. The waste in Queen Victoria's time was frightful. A candle once lighted, a bottle of wine once opened, a game pie once cut—thus became perquisites of the servants. Nothing of that sort occurs today.

St. John's Man Had to Fight to Get His Breath Quickly Ended After He Took Tanlac.

"When I tell you Tanlac is the best medicine in the world I ought to know what I'm talking about. I have tried almost a hundred different medicines and none of them ever did me any good," said John Aspell, 34 Hutchings Street, St. John's, Newfoundland, to the Tanlac representative a few days ago.

"For several years, I don't know just how many, I have had as bad a case of indigestion, I believe, as any man ever had," continued Mr. Aspell. "Nearly everything I ate disagreed with me and I would bloat up so tight with gas that it was a fight for me to get my breath, and from morning till night I had a mean taste in my mouth. My appetite had always been poor but finally I got where I didn't care whether I went to the table or not for I was sure to be in misery from the pains in my stomach if I took even a bite or two. I had a heavy, hot feeling that I was never able to be free from, and I was continually belching up a liquid that was as bitter as gall. Just about all the time I had a pain across the small of my back, and at times it hurt me so bad that I had to rub for hours before I was able to get around."

"After I had read a few statements about Tanlac and what it was doing for so many people I decided to give it a trial. Well, Sir, it brought my appetite right back and now I am eating anything set before me without the least trace of indigestion or gas afterwards. I never have that mean taste in my mouth any more and the heavy feeling in my stomach has disappeared entirely. The pain in my back has gone and I am sleeping better than ever and get up ready for a big day's work. I don't believe it is possible to say too much good about medicine that will bring such a change over a man as Tanlac has brought over me in such a short time."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative—adv.

Big Sugar Hoard.
SOLD AT ILLEGAL PROFIT.

New York, Nov. 8.—Federal Food Administrator Williams announced tonight he had discovered 13,440,000 pounds of raw sugar on ships in the harbor, 1,000 tons of which had been offered for sale by a Wall Street broker at an illegal profit of more than four cents a pound.

The sugar is said to be owned by a Canadian refining company. When the Food Administrator accused the broker of profiteering he contended that the sugar could be sold here at any price, as it did not come under control of the United States Sugar Equalization Board.

Mr. Williams informed the broker that under the Lever law a conviction with two years imprisonment or a fine of $5,000, or both could be brought. He advised him to notify the Canadian company of the serious shortage here, and urge sale of the sugar at a reasonable price. Shortly after Mr. Williams was told by the broker that the company officials had instructed him to ship the sugar back to Canada if he could not get the price they wanted for it.

Mr. Williams promptly communicated with Ben. A. Matthews, Assistant United States Attorney, who said he would summon the broker before him tomorrow.

UNHAPPY.

I will from this land depart, with my gun and carpet bag, when its customs break my heart, when they make my spirit sag; when our government's a bore that has made me raw and sore, I will seek some other shore where I'll stand and chew the rag. When I know some other land that has got this country skinned, be it on the Asian strand, or some island of the Ind. I will take the quickest boat, with my corkscrew and my goat, for that paradise remote, and this country may be tinned. But while I am dwelling here, hanging out my minstrel sign, it seems pretty plain and clear that I have no right to whine; if I'm sore on Uncle Sam, and would give his flag a slam, I should move to Rotterdam, for a rotter's soul is mine. If the time should ever come when this country seems a frost, all its bulwarks on the bum, and its laws not worth the cost, I will sail away, away, to old Russia or Cathay, where I'll spend my little day by some tin-horn tyrant's hoed. But while on this shore I roost, I will bless his hallowed loam, its palladiums I'll boost till the spanged cows come home; I will hand out sturdy blows to its critics and its foes, and when I run out of prose I'll embalm it in a pome.

Why Pussy Has Whiskers.

She Couldn't Catch Mice Without Them.

Most people imagine that a cat has whiskers for the purpose of feeling its way in the dark, or for measuring a gap in the fence or gate through which it wishes to pass.

This idea is all wrong. It is now known that pussy's hirsute appendages are really there to enable her to concentrate her gaze on her prey—the bird or mouse, for instance—on which she anticipates making a meal.

When you stare at an object for a short time your eyes grow fatigued, so that you momentarily close them. In doing so, you often lose sight of the object at which you were staring—especially if the object is very small. This often occurs when you are looking at an aeroplane which is flying at a great height. You are forced to blink your eyes, and have some difficulty in finding the machine again.

Now, if pussy blinked her eyes she would run some danger of losing her dinner, so instead her whiskers serve the purpose of momentarily interrupting her vision without disturbing the focus of her eyes.

To prove this, Professor F. F. Swindle cut off the whiskers of a cat who was a splendid mouser, and poor pussy could no longer catch mice "for nuts." Finally, he stuck some false whiskers on the animal, and immediately it regained its former cunning.

St. John's Man Had to Fight to Get His Breath Quickly Ended After He Took Tanlac.

"When I tell you Tanlac is the best medicine in the world I ought to know what I'm talking about. I have tried almost a hundred different medicines and none of them ever did me any good," said John Aspell, 34 Hutchings Street, St. John's, Newfoundland, to the Tanlac representative a few days ago.

"For several years, I don't know just how many, I have had as bad a case of indigestion, I believe, as any man ever had," continued Mr. Aspell. "Nearly everything I ate disagreed with me and I would bloat up so tight with gas that it was a fight for me to get my breath, and from morning till night I had a mean taste in my mouth. My appetite had always been poor but finally I got where I didn't care whether I went to the table or not for I was sure to be in misery from the pains in my stomach if I took even a bite or two. I had a heavy, hot feeling that I was never able to be free from, and I was continually belching up a liquid that was as bitter as gall. Just about all the time I had a pain across the small of my back, and at times it hurt me so bad that I had to rub for hours before I was able to get around."

"After I had read a few statements about Tanlac and what it was doing for so many people I decided to give it a trial. Well, Sir, it brought my appetite right back and now I am eating anything set before me without the least trace of indigestion or gas afterwards. I never have that mean taste in my mouth any more and the heavy feeling in my stomach has disappeared entirely. The pain in my back has gone and I am sleeping better than ever and get up ready for a big day's work. I don't believe it is possible to say too much good about medicine that will bring such a change over a man as Tanlac has brought over me in such a short time."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative—adv.

Big Sugar Hoard.
SOLD AT ILLEGAL PROFIT.

New York, Nov. 8.—Federal Food Administrator Williams announced tonight he had discovered 13,440,000 pounds of raw sugar on ships in the harbor, 1,000 tons of which had been offered for sale by a Wall Street broker at an illegal profit of more than four cents a pound.

The sugar is said to be owned by a Canadian refining company. When the Food Administrator accused the broker of profiteering he contended that the sugar could be sold here at any price, as it did not come under control of the United States Sugar Equalization Board.

Mr. Williams informed the broker that under the Lever law a conviction with two years imprisonment or a fine of $5,000, or both could be brought. He advised him to notify the Canadian company of the serious shortage here, and urge sale of the sugar at a reasonable price. Shortly after Mr. Williams was told by the broker that the company officials had instructed him to ship the sugar back to Canada if he could not get the price they wanted for it.

Mr. Williams promptly communicated with Ben. A. Matthews, Assistant United States Attorney, who said he would summon the broker before him tomorrow.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Note How Teeth Discolor
 Men's teeth in particular.

Note how children's teeth de-

 Every woman knows that old inadequate. Every dentist

The reason lies in that slimy

 the tooth brush doesn't end it.
 That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance

 It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it.
 They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced

Dental science, after years of embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we offer to all a 10-Day Tube to show every home what it does.

You Must Remove the Film
 Pepsodent embodies an efficient film combatant. It is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin must be activated.
 The usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. So this way long seemed barred. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. Five governments have already granted patents. Convincing tests show that this method
 solves the great film problem.
 And it brings a new era in teeth
 cleaning.

See for yourself what it does.
 Send the coupon for a 10-Day tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Those results show that film can be combated. The teeth can be protected and kept clean.
 Compare the results with the methods you now use, for your sake and your family's sake.
 This film question is a vital one.

A Bird's Eye View.

"THE STORY OF THE AERIAL SURVEY IN THE WILDS OF LABRADOR."

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir:—In reading "the story alluded to above in your paper of the 8th inst., the thought came to me:
 In this age of boasted enlightenment,
 surely "no representation, no taxation" must be dear to all hardy toilers whether on land or sea.

It is amusing, too, to see the Medical Missionary, Dr. Grenfell, there with his "ice-cream and fireworks."
 In the face of the terrible sufferings and privations of last winter, the wonder grows how long more will Newfoundland and Labrador be the sport of adventurers

Yours truly,
 MISMAG.

Nov. 11, 1919.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

The market for Newfoundland Scotch cured herring is displaying some signs of increasing strength, 1919 large winters being quoted variously at $14 @15, with medium selling around $12@14—equal quantities of each size to accompany all orders.
 No arrivals of Scotch cure have been reported during the past week, and the market is maintaining a firm tone. The outlook for the herring fishery in Notre Dame Bay, Bay of Islands, and Bonne Bay the coming season is said to be very gloomy. A large quantity of last year's pack is held unsold in storage in New York, and it is estimated that about 4,000 or 5,000 barrels are being stored in Newfoundland.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette,
 Nov. 1.

Dried Fish.

The longshoremen's strike is, of course, the greatest concern of the dried fish exporters at the present time, and every one is wondering just how much longer it will be before they can start in to clean up the accumulation of orders now on hand.
 Porto Rico is demanding fish, and recent advices from San Juan indicate only scant arrivals from Lunenburg, with no shipments coming in from New York. These light arrivals are reported as going into immediate consumption at Porto and subsidiary markets while San Juan stock is rapidly diminishing. Although similar conditions prevail in the Havana market with respect to arrivals, the demand has not materially improved, and prices remain unchanged. Just what sort of conditions will prevail here when the longshoremen's strike comes to an end (if it ever does) is a matter for considerable speculation, and exporters are loath to venture an opinion as to the probable outcome.
 Prices remain on a level with last week's quotations. — N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Nov. 1.

Enjoyable Birthday Celebration.

A very enjoyable birthday celebration was held at Open Hall, B.B., last week, the party being given by Mrs. Mary Batts, in honor of her son, Charles, who recently came from Sydney, C.B., after the demobilization of the battalion in which he had served three years at the front. Being the first time the young soldier had been home in four years, no effort was spared to make his welcome a worthy one. Elaborate preparations in the way of entertainment of the guests had been made and when at 8 o'clock in the evening, all sat down to supper, there was no lack of toothsome viands to tempt the appetites of the company. After the repast, which all enjoyed immensely, was finished, an impromptu concert was started, those taking part being Mr. James Batt, Mr. Quinton, Pts. Gould, Miss Monica Murphy, Mr. Charles Batts, Misses Annie Gould, Lizzie Murphy and Sallie Joy. Misses Maud Hobbs and Emily Batts looked after the refreshments most capably, and at the conclusion of the festivities, everyone who had participated voted the evening one of the best ever spent.—Com.

Terrier Followed Master to the Front.

Interviewed regarding Prince, the Irish terrier that is wagging his tail in the kennels of Royalty, the London Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals says nothing of the dog's famous journey following his master, Pte. Brown, of the North Staffordshire Regiment, in September, 1914, from Hammermith, London, to Arrmentiers, France. The "Bowley Hais," or military police, have at last completed the authentic record of the most complete case illustrating a dog's sixth sense. When Brown marched away Prince was left behind. A week later the dog disappeared. It has now been duly established that the animal trotted seventy-six miles to Folkstone. He was two weeks getting aboard the transport, being kicked off several times before he finally succeeded in establishing himself on board. In Boulogne this remarkable dog climbed up a hill to a rest camp, where he hung around a soup kitchen three weeks before getting started again astride his master's scent. Another sixty-mile jaunt spread before him, with strange dogs barking and snapping at him along the entire route. Prince never faltered, and with eyes protruding and tail gesticulating he affectionately appeared before him amazed master three weeks later at Arrmentiers, where he became mascot of the regiment, serving throughout the war.

The Bill for Scapa Flow

(From the New York Tribune.)

The Supreme Council of the peace conference has decided to make Germany pay for the warships sunk at Scapa Flow. Thus, the piece of military drama staged by the German admiral afterward by his chief, Von Scheer, as a splendid exhibition of loyalty to German naval traditions, will merely increase the burden of reparation loaded on the shoulders of the German people. The destruction of the ships was a characteristic act of bad faith. The German commander assumed that the treaty of peace would be signed at a certain hour. He was secretly instructed to become German property and might be sunk, if they had not been actually taken over by the Allies naval authorities. But the signing of the treaty was delayed for two days and the scuttling occurred while the terms of the armistice were still in force. The Allies, therefore, have an indisputable claim for compensation. What the Germans never could understand during the war was that they were simply laying up penalties for themselves by pursuing a policy of wanton destruction. They rejoiced at the bombardment of Rheims Cathedral. They applauded the military devastation of Northern France, the wrecking of farms, villages and factories and the flooding of coal mines. They never realized that they were destroying property which they would have to restore in case they were beaten. It was the same thing at Scapa Flow. Germany had spent billions of marks on the fleet interned in Scottish waters. A fantastic and inopportune interpretation of the code of German military honor would have German labor must create other means to make good the sums they childishly squandered. German naval policy was never understandable. Her confusions ruined the empire. It is true to form to the end, when at Scapa Flow it satisfied a malicious impulse with the sole result of swelling the already enormous total of the German war indemnity.

Facing the Facts of Public Ownership.

The argument has been advanced that public ownership on a small scale is safe; that where the enterprise can be closely watched by the representatives of the people efficiency can be maintained. This has been regarded as offsetting the failures in the operation of rail and telegraph and other national services in various parts of the world.

Evidence accumulates, however, that many so-called municipal successes have been merely so on paper and that eventually the realities must be faced. Guelph and Port Arthur have been two Canadian cities which have recently learned the truth about their enterprises after years of unsound financing. The Toronto municipal abattoir is another proposition in the same class.

One of the great weaknesses of public ownership is that politicians hate to give the people unpleasant facts—private enterprise must show results or the shareholders will soon know the reason why. American civic authorities, however, seem to have more courage than those in Canada in judging public ownership results by business standards. The following item from the Albany Evening Journal tells what happened in the village of Attica, N.Y., after two years' experience in operating a lighting plant:

The public service commission today made an order approving the plans of the village of Attica to sell its municipal electric lighting plant to the Genesee Light and Power Company for $12,500, the price the village paid for the plant two years ago. The village trial that municipal ownership of the plant was not a success as it failed to earn operating expenses. The Genesee Company will take over the plant and will furnish public and private lighting service in Attica. Village President French informed the commission that the village had tried hard to run the plant, but found that it would be a good proposition for the village to sell it.—Financial Post.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

POETESS OF PASSION.

New York, N.Y. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox, poet and author, died at her home, The Bungalow, Short Beach, Conn., yesterday. At her bedside were her intimate friends, Mrs. Frank C. Randall of New York City, and Mrs. W. H. Ritter, of South Beach.

Mrs. Wilcox had been seriously ill for several weeks following a general nervous breakdown, which resulted from overwork in Europe where she went as a representative of the Red Cross in 1918. Her body was taken to Springfield, Mass., where it will be cremated to-day. Her ashes will be placed beside those of her husband, Robert M. Wilcox, to whom she was married in 1884. He died three years ago. She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Williamsen, and Mrs. Bond of Ord., Neb., and a brother, Marcus Wheeler, of Windsor, Wis.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox was born at Johnstone Centre, Wis., in 1885, and was educated at the University of Wisconsin. The very first writing she did was when she was eight years old. This childish effort was a novel of sixteen pages. The heroine's name was Minnie Tighthead. Mrs. Wilcox always treasured this novel. She was about the age of fifteen when she wrote the first poem for which she received pay; she sold it to Leslie's for $6. Thereafter, Mrs. Wilcox contributed regularly to magazines and, later, began her work for the New York Evening Journal and Chicago American. Her "Poems of Passion" has remained perhaps the best known of her books.

Mrs. Wilcox wrote thirty-one books, "The World and I," an autobiography, was published last year. She completed a work a few months ago which, prophetically, she called her swan song. It is a translation from the French of "Life and Destiny," a psychic treatise by Leon Denis.

A Lighthouse Without a Keeper.

Of recent years we have had automatic lights, and even automatic lighthouse with a powerful fog signal is the recently completed Platte Fougere Lighthouse, marking the entrance to Russell Channel, leading to St. Peter's Port, Guernsey, a spot which figures in Victor Hugo's romance, "The Toilers of the Sea."

This tower, built of ferro-concrete on a wave-washed rock, is of irregular octagonal shape 80 feet high. The room below the gallery contains many ingenious electrical devices the invention of the late engineer-in-chief, by E. O. Cottford, controlled from the shore by a submarine cable nearly a mile and half long. This cable is of immense strength, being eleven inches in circumference and weighing forty-five tons to the nautical mile. By its aid the fog-horn and siren are regularly blown—they have been heard thirty miles away on the French coast—while the current it carries also controls the light in the lantern. For illuminating expenses of coastline where the erection of an ordinary tower would be prohibitive on account of its cost, this type of lighthouse has certainly much to commend it. The Platte Fougere installation involved an expenditure of only £10,000.

It is proposed to use this type of automatic lighthouse for illuminating the Hudson Bay and Hudson Straits in connection with the opening of these waters, and the carriage of wheat by the new railway to Port Churchill on Hudson Bay. The various South America Straits have also considered the proposal of establishing similar lights on the more exposed and barren coasts of South America.—Ex.

Olfactory System in Fish

A fish hasn't a true nose, but it can smell. Experiments have proved this says a scientist writer. What is more, these experiments have proved that odor travels through water just as it does through air. Anglers have laid so much stress on the need of exciting a fish's interest by the look of food that the effect of scent has been overlooked. A shark will bite at a hook containing a piece of fat pork that does not look like any kind of fish that swims the sea. Why, then, should the trout be expected to be interested only in an artificial "grey hackle." It may be heresy in angling to suggest that a "fly" should smell like a fly. These scientific experiments show how large a part smell plays in the food pursuit of fish. Bait, such as small crabs, was found and eaten by the fishes three times as rapidly when the shells were broken. Bait, placed inside a gauze bag, was smelt within three minutes of being lowered in the water, and almost at the same time all the fishes began nibbling at the bag. When cotton was stuffed into its so-called "nostrils," the dogfish would seldom observe the food that came near them. If they saw other dogfish eating, those whose nostrils were stuffed up would join them and take a share in the feast, but when kept by themselves they starved in the midst of plenty. Several score of species were experimented with, and in practically all cases it was determined that fishes are possessed of a sense of smell, though their olfactory system is as yet but little understood.—Exchange.

TESTIMONIAL!

The White Clothing Mfg. Co., Ltd. Oct. 15th, 1919.
 GENTLEMEN,—We received your bill and the 50 Suits O.K.
 and let me congratulate you and the working people on the workmanship of the clothes.
 I inspected the Suits and they were done to the "point." You can show this letter to your workmen as they deserve it. I just came from the States and I consider the style and fit wonderful, and we can assure you that as long as we receive work as good as these you can be assured of our trade.
 Hoping you will do all of our work like this, and thanking you very much,
 I am, respectfully yours,

We received the above testimonial from one of our most particular outport merchants. We value his opinion and pass it on to our many customers.
 Testimonials like the above have helped us to overcome the many difficulties essential to the starting of a new industry.

 Of all the poison taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by diseased gums (Pyorrhoea) are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kid-brought on by diseased gums and
