Hints to Home Decorators.

The decorating of the home is a fine art, the best results can only be obtained by careful study of surroundings the following hints may be helpful:

If your room faces North use a Warm Coloured Paper such as Brown, Yellow, or Red.

For rooms which get a good deal of sunshine, paper of cooler shades such as Greys and Blues may be used.

Care should be taken to Harmonize Your Wall Papers with the Paints. Fawns and Tans usually blend nicely with natural wood finish or grained doors and wood-work.

Remember Green is Nature's Colour for a Decorative Background, and Green Papers of the softer shades usually contrast well with rugs, curtains, and pictures particularly if the latter have gilt frames.

Small Rooms may be made to look larger by the use of Striped Papers.

On low ceilings only use a narrow bordering, or perhaps better again a drop ceiling of white paper which joins up almost unnoticeably with the white ceiling, and so gives the room the appearance of more height than it really has.

It is important to buy your Papers at TEMPLETON'S who keep a Splendid Selection of the Newest Patterns at Prices which defy Competition.

THE BREAD MY DADDY LIKES.

Daddy is evidently not one of those back number lords of creation who believes that woman's place is in the home—and only there. His taste in a wife is an up-to-date woman who will prove herself a real companion. He knows that if she is a slave to her kitchen she can't enjoy the poise or have the interest in world affairs that a little extra leisure would make possible; and so he is pleased to eat MRS. STEWART'S HOME MADE BREAD—the loaf with the home made flavor.

The smiling, well-nourished kiddie doesn't look as though suffering because mother is progressive enough to buy good bread made by a bread specialist, instead of wearing out her life in the kitchen.

CHAPTER XXX. A VISIT FROM THE PRINCESS. "And where is Mrs. Lambton?" asks Jeanne.

"Oh, mamma is at the hotel. She has a headache, she doesn't care to go about much. She says the language makes her ill, and generally stops in bed. Whoever would have thought of seeing you here! How kind of Mr. Bertram to trouble about the 'ale! And isn't Germany delightful! We are enjoying ourselves so much! But mamma gets so angry with everybody because they can't understand English; and our German we learned of the governess seems quite different to what they speak here!" "And you've got a castle here!" said Jeanne. "How delightful!" "You must come and stay with us," says Jeanne. "You must come at once. Vane will be so glad that we have met you; it is a fortunate chance."

Both the girls color up with pleasure. "Papa, do you hear? Jeanne, the marchioness, has asked us to stay with her!" Mr. Lambton, still excitedly exclaiming to Hal and Bell the outrageous misconduct of the waiter in not understanding English, is properly grateful, and the invitation is accepted. Mr. Lambton is so relieved at meeting with some one who can talk to "these confounded" Germans, that he grows quite cheerful, and the party go back to the hotel—which happens to be the same at which the carriage have been put up—quite happy. Jeanne goes up to visit Mrs. Lambton, and finds that lady in a magnificent apartment—wherever Mr. Lambton goes, he has the best of everything, and pays twice the proper charge for it!—and exceedingly uncomfortable. "My dear," she says, "I shall only be too delighted to come! I can't bear these foreign parts, where you don't understand a word that's spoken! And Lambton does not fly into such violent passions! And how well you are looking—not an hour older! Always said that you were quite a child and you look it still. Oh, I shall be glad to come!"

HAS NO PAIN NOW

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Peasey of London.

London, Ont.—"I suffered with periodic pains, was weak and run down, could not eat and had headaches. The worst symptoms were dragging down pains so bad I sometimes thought I would go crazy and I seemed to be smothering. I was in this condition for two or three years and could not seem to work. I tried all kinds of remedies and had been treated by physicians, but received no benefit. I found one of your booklets and felt inclined to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I received the best results from it, and now I keep house and go out to work and am like a new woman. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to my friends, and if these facts will help some poor woman use them as you please."—Mrs. J. F. PEASEY, 206 Fleet Street, London, Ont.

"You must come at once, to-night," says Jeanne. "Hal and Mr. Bell shall attend to all the arrangements. I am so glad we met you! Why didn't you tell me that you were coming abroad?" "I didn't know it," says poor Mrs. Lambton; "they made up their minds all in a minute, and away we came. And how is Mr. Vane—the marquis, I mean? It seems so strange to call him by so grand a name."

"Vane is quite well," says Jeanne, with a little sigh. Then she goes down and finds Mr. Lambton fuming about Lord Nugent, in a state of excitement caused by so many lords and ladies. But Hal is restless, also, and wants to get back, for a reason which Jeanne knows. Presently, in the midst of the clutter, Lord Lane's carriage arrives. To say that Clarence is not in a good humor is to describe his state of mind in the mildest phrase. The day is hot, the road dusty, and, thanks to Mr. Bell, he has been packed up in a hawkeye with three other persons, instead of driving with Jeanne. His surprise, not to say consternation, is indescribable; however, he conceals it, and they—well, they greet him in the friendliest manner possible.

Hal and Bell make arrangements for the Lambtons' journey, and, after what seems an endless delay to Hal, the castle party are ready to start on their way home. Once more Clarence hovers about the platform in which Jeanne is already ready to start. "If you are tired, Hal," he says, "I'll take the boys home for you."

"No, thanks," he says; "I'm all right; better go as we came." "Let me drive," says Jeanne, "and Mr. Bell shall sit in the front for a change." And so Bell is rewarded, and Hal is left to meditate beside the groom. Some three hours later, when Jeanne is in her boudoir writing a letter to Aunt Jane, Mrs. Fleming knocks softly, and enters with two cards. "The Princess Verona and Count Mikoff are in the small drawing-room, my lady."

Jeanne jumps up at once, rather excited. The companion she had been prepared for, but the count! "Is Mr. Bertram about the castle?" she says. "Yes, my lady; I saw him go into the billiard-room a little while ago." "Tell him," says Jeanne, "to keep out of the way; you understand?" Mrs. Fleming comes at once. "I understand, my lady," and Jeanne goes down. As she enters, the count and the princess arise, and, with a polite greeting to the princess, Jeanne shakes hands with the count. Any one observing her would think that she had instinctively taken a fancy to that nobleman, and that she had failed to be prepossessed by the princess, so friendly is Jeanne with the count, so calmly courteous to his companion. But in every woman is a latent store of artfulness, and Jeanne is practicing hers now.

"The woman," she thinks, "has gone home, and told the count of our meeting, and he has come here to watch this sweet child instead of his accomplice. He will expect me to treat him coldly; he shall be disappointed." So Jeanne, exerting herself to the utmost, lays herself out to charm the man of wrinkles, addressing a stray remark or two to the princess, who is evidently puzzled to account for the change in Jeanne's manner. As Vane says, the man does not live who can resist Jeanne when she means to charm, and the count is soon entirely engrossed and thrown off his guard. Before he is scarcely aware of it, he has accepted an invitation to dinner for himself and the princess, and is engaged in a discussion on old china, when Jeanne says, suddenly, "I am very sorry my husband is not in the way; will you come into the billiard-room, Count Mikoff? I heard the click of balls as I passed, and I think they are playing pool; let me introduce you."

The count's eyes brighten. If there is anything which a Russian finds irresistible, it is a billiard-table. He rises with his most polished smile, and Jeanne, with a polite excuse to the princess, takes him away. In five minutes she is back again, and with an entirely different manner—oh, Jeanne—Jeanne, how can you be so deceitful!—bends down and kisses the sweet face. "There!" she says, looking with laughing eyes into Verona's startled face, "he is disposed of! Now come and wait on me in my room. There is a cup of tea waiting for us, and no one can disturb us. Let us go at once, or he will come back!" Verona colors and allows herself to be led away. As Jeanne has said, a miniature tea service of costly Japanese ware is on the table in the boudoir, and Jeanne, with gentle strength, forces Verona into the easiest of easy-chairs. "At last!" she says, standing over her, and looking at her with a protecting smile. "I almost despaired of getting rid of him, he was so polite and courteous. Now, don't you think me very bold and forward to drag you here?" "I don't come against my will," says Verona, blushing. "I am very glad to come. Why are you so kind to me, marchioness?" "Because," Jeanne says, and then she breaks off—"don't call me marchioness; my name is Jeanne—unless you would wish me to address you as 'princess'."

"Oh, no—no!" says Verona. "I hate the title!" Jeanne laughs. "That is all right. And I may call you 'Verona'." We seem like old friends already," says Jeanne, pouring out a cup of tea. "Perhaps it is because I heard so much about you from my brother—"

"Your brother?" says the princess, bending her head over the teacup; "has he spoken about me?" "Jeanne nods. "Yes, a great deal. Dear old Hal—you have seen a great deal of him?" "Oh, no, not much," says the princess, with a charming blush; "we have met once or twice." "More than once or twice, Verona." "Well—more. He is very kind; he has—has caught some fish for us, and—"

"Called to inquire after your health," says Jeanne, with a smile. "Poor Hal!" "The princess looks up with a sudden surprise. "Why do you pity him?" she asks, with wide-open eyes. "Because," says Jeanne—"will you have any more sugar?—because he is such a dear, good boy; not clever and brilliant, like some people, but so good and so strong and brave; and he is so unhappy just now."

"The dark eyes hide themselves behind their long lashes. "Unhappy!" she murmurs. "Yes," says Jeanne, "very—very unhappy. He has set his heart upon something which he thinks far, very far beyond his reach. Don't smile, Verona."

"I was not smiling," says the princess, raising her dark eyes almost reproachfully. "Of course he is only a boy—how old are you, princess?" "Seventeen," says Verona, softly. "Seventeen!" echoes Jeanne, clinking her teaspoon. "And how old is the count?" "The count? I do not know." "Ah, Jeanne, do not say that. Well, poor Hal has set his heart upon something which he thinks he never can gain, and so he is unhappy. Verona, he is my only brother, and I am unhappy when he is unhappy."

Jeanne laughs, a cold, mirthless laugh. "Do you think so?" she says. "Yes," says Verona. "You are young and beautiful—yes, very beautiful—and he is young and handsome, and I know you love him by the way in which you looked at his portrait. Yes, you must be happy!" and she sighs: Jeanne's lips quiver. "And you," she says, "you will be happy. You are going to marry Count Mikoff!"

She stops, for suddenly the princess arises and throws herself on her knees at Jeanne's feet. "Do not—do not say so!" she says. "I am most unhappy! I—I did not know it until—until a few days ago; but now I know it, and it seems unbearable. Do not talk of my marriage! They are all talking of it, the count and Senora Titella, and—and I cannot bear to think of it!" and she bursts into tears. "Oh, you are married to the man you love," she goes on, clutching Jeanne's arm and hiding her face in her lap, "and you are happy and cannot understand—cannot understand!"

Jeanne, thoroughly frightened, bends down and kisses her. "Hush—hush!" she murmurs, with her eyes full of tears. "Don't cry—don't cry, Verona! There may be some hope, some chance!" "No—no, not for me!" says the princess. Then, with a sudden effort, she arises and dries her eyes, pale and distressed.

"I—I—forgive me!" trying to smile. "But—but I do not know what has come to me. I cannot understand myself. Until lately I did not feel like this. What is it?" "I will tell you," says Jeanne; "you are in love!" "In love!" echoes Verona, and a warm flush suffuses her face and neck. "With—with whom?" "Let us go down," says Jeanne; "I think my brother Hal will be downstairs."

Verona looks at her with a half-frightened look. "Your brother," she says, hesitatingly, and still looking at Jeanne. "He has been very kind." "Has he?" says Jeanne, lightly; "he is a good boy, is Hal; ah, a very good boy; a little rough and blunt." "Do you think so?" says the princess, gravely. "I don't think—"

Jeanne laughs at the innocent heart laid so bare for her to read. "Yes, he is rough and ready, but he is so good and true." "The princess's eyes brighten. "Yes, that I am sure," she says. "Oh, yes, good and true," and then she sighs. "Let us go down," says Jeanne; "we mustn't let the count meet us." (To be continued.)

(From Saturday's Trade Review). CODFISH.—The exports of codfish from St. John's and the outports this week amounted to 11,476 quintals as follows:—From Harbor Breton by A. E. Hickman Co. in the schooner Maria 2,078 quintals to Oporto, from St. John's by Monroe Export Co., per schooner Svein 3,200 quintals to Oporto and by the S.S. Schenck 2,944 quintals to Liverpool shipped by A. S. Rendell, Union Export Co. and N.E.D. Produce Export Co. and 3,404 quintals by the S.S. Rosalind. Besides hard salt cured fish there was a small shipment to Halifax of fresh and smoked fish put up by the Newfoundland Atlantic Fisheries Co., fish, 150 lbs. salmon, 600 lbs. of codfish, and sample boxes of Finnan Haddie.

COD OIL.—The cod oil market continues dull and there are very few transactions. The price is now down to the lowest point for seven years and is believed by dealers, to have reached the bottom and any change is almost certain to be upward, more particularly in view of the likelihood of the leather manufacturers assuming more activity the coming spring. The export this week was 36,384 gals. COLIVER OIL.—This commodity is back to less than pre-war prices with the poorest demand in years. The Norwegian returns for 1920 show that the exports from that country amounted to 43,736 barrels, which has always been, and no doubt will continue to be, a formidable competitor with Newfoundland Refined Oil. Their fishery seems to have started well this year and the prospects of anything like last year's prices for our product the coming season are poor.

PORK.—The pork markets continue dull in spite of the reported short supplies of hogs. Such a weakness in the market under the circumstances is unprecedented. It can only be attributed to a general lack of demand. Some American experts believe that the bottom has been reached in pork prices, and that an advance is inevitable in the coming three months. This opinion is based on the shortage of supplies. The local quotations are Ham Butt, $47; Fat Back and Short Cut, $40, and Mess, $38.

BEEF.—The same conditions apply to beef that appertain to pork, viz: a dull market, and short supplies. The general business depression the world over lessens the purchasing power of the people, thus compelling lower prices, because so few want to buy or are able to buy. The local market partakes of the same slackness in the beef trade and rarely was business so dull in February. Leading brands like Libby's, naval, family are $39; Fancy Flank (Morris), $36; Boneless, $31; and Family, $35. FLOUR.—There has been no change worth recording in the wheat market the past week. Prices declined gradually and slowly for some days and then recovered suddenly in one day almost all that had been lost. Exports continue to European countries at the same rate. The local market is steady. Leading brands $14, other quantities $13.50 to $13.75. The imports since New Year amounted to 31,515 barrels.

SUGAR.—Raw sugar markets continue firm in the United States. Planters, it is said, are trying to fix the price of Raws in Cuba. This, if successful, will make a firm market. The question is whether the price will stay fixed. Our own experience here would seem to point in a contrary direction. Some dealers think that the low price has been passed. White granulated is still 2 1/2 cents wholesale and 25 retail. The Food Control Board reports stocks on hand February 19th, 7,200 bbls.; the consumption from January 26 to February 19th was 1,410 bbls. POTATOES.—Imported P.E.I. potatoes are now holding the local market and are selling at $5.20 per barrel for No. 1; this is, picked potatoes. Owing to the severe weather there are no home-grown worth while coming into the city. The price of these is $4.20 per barrel for good quality and $3.30 to $4.00 for general run.

HAY.—The market is weak and im-

Bank Note Forgeries.

A Clever Counterfeit.
Probably the nearest approach to a perfect substitute for Bank of England note paper was that produced by a wonderful mechanical genius named John Mathieson. This clever craftsman possessed exceptional gifts as an engraver, and, finding business bad and money scarce, he turned to manufacturing paper money on his own account. After trying his "pretence" hand on different bank-notes, he eventually concentrated the full force of his skill and attention on the venerable and world-famed institution in Threadneedle Street.

Displaying almost incredible industry, Mathieson in a comparatively short time had fabricated a large number of worthless bank notes, and so skillfully did he imitate the paper, the engraving, the watermark, and the general appearance of the Bank of England paper money that his forgeries were first suspected because they were actually better than the originals!

So confident was he that he frequently went to the Bank himself, and was finally detected because of his earnestness in declaring that a certain note was genuine. He was taken into the directors' room and questioned, but would admit nothing. So strenuous were his denials that the directors were about to dismiss him when he attempted to escape through an open window. He was caught, cross-examined, and finally confessed his guilt. Without this confession it was generally thought he could not have been convicted. Mathieson offered to reveal his methods of bank note manufacture if his life was spared, but the offer was declined, and he paid the penalty of his crime upon the scaffold.

"The Good Old Days."
It will doubtless be a surprise to many people to learn that the death penalty was the old-time method of "making the punishment fit the crime"—when bank note forgery was the proved indictment. In the closing years of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth, a regular epidemic of forgery was at work, and between 1797 and 1801 no less than 80 persons were hanged in England for counterfeiting bank notes. In 1820 40 men were hanged at Newgate for this crime alone, and about 200 were awaiting trial.

These astonishing figures reveal how wide and rampant was the crime of bank note forgery in the so-called "good old days."

Ever since its establishment in 1695, the Bank of England has been the victim of innumerable swindles, some organized by outsiders, some by its own trusted officials. But though, even in its early days, it suffered many things at the hands of sharpers, up to 1759 it had never fallen a pray to a forger.

A Notorious Forger.
Despite the terrible penalty for such a crime, Vaughan and Mathieson had many imitators (as the figures also readily give indubitably prove) who followed them either to prison or the scaffold. It is generally conceded that one of the most notorious and skilful of these was undoubtedly "Old Patch," otherwise Charles Price, whose misapplied talents caused the Bank an enormous amount of anxiety and trouble. "Old Patch" took the most remarkable precautions, studying every detail, and going so far as to manufacture his own paper and ink. So successfully did he work that the Bank of England itself had no hesitation in cashing his counterfeit notes, and in a single day paid away £1000 for worthless paper.

By a simple method of checking the forgeries were detected, but for many years this astute old criminal continued to beat the Bank. In spite of the fact that the smartest detectives of the day were on his track, while the Bank offered large rewards, "Old Patch" never fell into the hands of the authorities, as, when he was finally traced, he destroyed the whole of his plant and counterfeits before putting an end to his own life.—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Old Sealers' Day.

To-morrow (Tuesday) March 1st is Old Sealers' Day, and it is peculiarly appropriate that the Telegram begins the publication of a four installment article on "The Sealing Fleet at the Zenith of Its Glory" from the pen of Mr. H. F. Short. Old sealers will be highly interested in the familiar descriptions and sayings of the days when oak, hemp canvas and cordage, battled with the elemental forces of nature in many a successful combat.

A Land of Hidden Coin.

Northern Mexico is a land of buried treasure. Eleven years ago that country was wonderfully prosperous, and silver and gold were seen there in dazzling abundance.

It was no uncommon sight in Monterrey to see owners of big haciendas or men who employed considerable numbers of workmen carelessly driving through the city streets, a wagon load of silver, a cart in which were several big bags bulging with pesos and Mexican half dollars.

But now Mexican silver coins are so scarce that United States nickels, dimes, quarters, and half dollars are in current use as change, even at the post offices and telegraph offices and railway stations operated by the Mexican government.

Millions of pesos of the vanished coin is buried and probably the greater part of that vast treasure is hidden away where it will never be found except by accident, for those who buried it either have been killed or so shifted by the vicissitudes of war that they no longer could find their way to their rich caches.

It is an axiom among bankers that had money always drives out good money, and had money in Mexico quickly drove the good money into hiding. Each succeeding revolutionary enterprise paid its soldiers in paper money and any merchant who refused to accept that money stood a good chance of heavy punishment and a fair chance of being shot.

Naturally, everyone who received the worthless paper money was eager to pass it on, so he hid his silver and gold and rushed out to buy something with the paper, before the government which issued it was overthrown. The Maderista money, Carranzista money, and Villista money succeeded each other rapidly. In the city of Sault, which changed hands seventeen times in the revolution, the customary greeting was: "Good morning! What currency do we use this morning?"

Hidden From Forced Loans.

With a strange army, not altogether unproficient in the art of locating, likely to drop in, casually, at any moment, people who have had silver, gold and jewellery of value took to burrowing holes in the ground just as naturally as prairie dogs.

Another great incentive to that form of outdoor sport was the practice known as forced loans. This action is said to have been taken by the government of some of the states which changed hands seventeen times in the revolution, the customary greeting was: "Good morning! What currency do we use this morning?"

With a strange army, not altogether unproficient in the art of locating, likely to drop in, casually, at any moment, people who have had silver, gold and jewellery of value took to burrowing holes in the ground just as naturally as prairie dogs.

Newfoundland Lady Student.

The Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette of February 6th says among the late arrivals at the Western State Normal School are three lady students from Newfoundland, who will take special courses in preparation for work under the conduct of the Newfoundland Department of Education.

The newest arrivals are Miss Florence Oldford, Miss Elizabeth Corneally and Miss Rose Carmichael. The latter will return to Newfoundland as a Supervisor of Education, the other two as workers in kindergartens. Miss Carmichael holds the degree of M.A. in Edinburgh, and will take working courses under Dr. Ernest Burnham. Miss Carmichael is a daughter of Mr. J. A. Carmichael of the Direct Agencies, Ltd., of St. John's and for some time taught at Bishop Spencer College.

Children's Carnival.

The Children's Carnival held at the Prince's Rink on Saturday afternoon was a most successful event and was a much prettier one than the adult's Carnival held earlier in the week.

Some of the costumes were most artistic and the ice presented a most spectacular appearance during the afternoon.

A great wealth of originality was also shown. One costume in particular attracted a great deal of attention although it was quite a gruesome one. It was supposed to represent the "Burial of White Naps," the wearer, a boy, being dressed as an undertaker and carrying in his arms a white casket. At the conclusion of the 5th band the Judges, Mesdames H. W. Dickinson, H. Bishop, A. Herder, Capt. Salmarshe and Mr. Lionel Munn went on the ice, inspected the various costumes and awarded the prizes as follows:

Girls.—1st prize—Miss Cynthia Marshall, who represented a Chinese Lantern.

2nd prize—Miss Edith Williams who wore a most original costume, representing "Mail for St. Anthony by Aeroplane."

3rd prize—Master R. Hayes as "Sea Hunting by Aeroplane."

4th prize—Master J. Cousins as "The 1921 Blockade."

The Rink was simply thronged with people during the afternoon all of whom expressed their delight at the pretty scene which the gaily dressed children presented.

How to Obtain Our Trade.

In our last issue we printed a message from North Sydney indicating that the Board of Trade of that town had been stirred by the publication of figures showing the amount of trade done by Newfoundland with the United States. And it was intimated that a portion of a future session of that organization be devoted to ways and means of securing a portion of that trade for Canada. Well, to begin with, Canada has only to offer the same advantages and facilities and our people would just as soon buy her goods as those of Uncle Sam. But she must give a square deal if she hopes to secure any large amount of trade from the Newfoundlanders. We have on our desk as we write, a letter from a man residing in North Sydney who writes the retail price in that town of certain Canadian products and these prices are somewhat lower than prices quoted by Wholesale and Commission houses in Canada to the Newfoundland trade. Then there is the matter of transportation. It frequently takes goods much longer to come from Ontario than it does from points in the United States.

Newfoundland in the past has been used as the dumping ground for inferior goods by our neighbouring Dominion and this has been particularly true in the matter of apples, hay and such like goods that would have been exported to other countries. Not only have they been dumped upon the Newfoundland market but the highest prices extracted therefor, and physical conditions taken advantage of for that purpose with the result that nearly twenty million dollars of our trade annually pass the doors of Canada.—Western Star.

Obituary.

NORMAN K. DEAN.

On the 29th January, at Woodstock, at the age of 23 1/2 years, Norman Kenneth, son of Lieut. and Mrs. K. W. Dean. Norman had been sick for about six months suffering from that dread disease consumption. He enlisted in May, 1915, and was one of those brave boys who were ready to pay the supreme sacrifice for King and Country. He was wounded in the famous 1st July drive and was invalided home in 1916. He had not been home for more than a year when he began to feel the effects of the disease; he left for Jensen Camp, and was there quite a while for treatment; when he left Camp he was apparently cured. But evidently he was not completely cured, as early in last year the disease began to show itself. In August he went to St. Anthony to Grenfell Hospital, and was there for about a month and a half but he was too late as the disease had too firm a grip on him. He returned home in October and was confined to his bed and did not get up any more, gradually becoming weaker and weaker until the end came Saturday morning, 28th January, when he passed peacefully away. Norman was a cheerful chap, well liked and will be missed considerably in this community. He was a member of the Masonic Order, which body attended his funeral that took place at the Methodist Church, Rev. H. G. Coppin preaching the funeral sermon to a crowded church, his text being "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, from henceforth they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." To the sorrowing, heart-stricken family we extend our sincere sympathy.—Com.

MARY M. ROBERTS.

The death of Mrs. Mary M. Roberts, which occurred at Pilley's Island, Notre Dame Bay, early Saturday morning, February 6th, evoked widespread grief among her many friends in this town and elsewhere. The deceased was well and favorably known, far and wide, possessing those motherly qualities which endeared her to all whose privilege it was to know her. At the ripe old age of 79, and having had her share of life's turmoil, her faith in God and her quiet, cheerful optimism and good sense made her a personality, which stood out like a beacon, and inspired the traveller on life's dusty highway to deeds of self-denial and to God. To her immediate friends, and their name is legion, she was known as

"Aunt Mary" and when some neighbor fell sick, and there was no doctor available, or some bereaved heart thirsted for sympathy—"Aunt Mary" was never appealed to in vain. She is enshrined in the hearts of some one in nearly every village in Notre Dame Bay. Her kingdom was her home; her riches, her devotion to her husband, children and friends; and whether in a cottage or a palace her presence made a home. Who mourns over the inevitable? Her sleep must be peaceful. "My peace I give unto you"—her life exemplified the peace which "the world cannot give nor take away." Eternity alone will disclose the value to the world, of the quiet, unassuming woman who lived and minister and die, more heroically than the soldier on the battlefield, amidst the uninspiring cares and duties of life—God's heroes—our Mothers. To her sorrowing children, Thomas Roberts of Pilley's Island, with whom she made her home, and E. W. Roberts of St. John's, and Lloyd Robert of North Sydney, N.S., and Roland Roberts of Newport, U.S.A., the sympathy of the community will go out. As a cloud of the sunset, slow melting in heaven, As a star that is lost, when the daylight is given; As a glad dream of slumber, which wakens in bliss She hath passed to the world of the holy from this." E. R. Pilley's Island, N.D.B., Feb. 7th, 1921.

To Protect the Dead From Libel.

Legislation for the protection of the good name of those no longer living is to be enacted by the British Parliament. This action is said to have been brought about by certain passages in an autobiography of Mrs. Asquith dealing with persons dead and gone in a manner calculated to pain and offend their relatives and friends.

Something of the kind was suggested at the time of the appearance of the sensational reminiscences of that dreadful old Lady Cardigan a few years before the great war, which were full of attacks and slurs upon the memory of those no longer in the world to undertake the defence of their reputations.

But the matter was allowed to drop, partly because other sensations were perceived and partly, too, because the book was so scurrilous and its aged authoress, the late Lady Cardigan, so delicate that most booksellers refused to handle it for fear of being sued for libel by the people still living whom she had maligning. It was barred from all the libraries and bookstands, and it is difficult nowadays to find a copy thereof.

But Mrs. Asquith's autobiography is of a different character. She is still a notable figure in society. Her book, though open to many objections, is not one which under present conditions of law in England any publisher or book-seller need be afraid to handle. It has been accepted by all the libraries and is having an enormous sale.

There is nothing in it that can be construed as libellous of the living, though it deals with some of them in an unflattering fashion. But it does affect the reputation and the esteem of some of the dead.

It is this as well as the knowledge that Mrs. Asquith's example is now about to be followed by the publication of similar candid autobiographies and reminiscences by women and men less gifted than Mrs. Asquith and who may endeavor to seek equally sensational effects by more or less unfounded attacks on the dead to atone for their lack of the information and of the experience which she undoubtedly possesses in a rare degree that has rendered the prompt enactment of prohibitory legislation a matter of urgency.

Three Months' Marine Losses. SEA TAKES HEAVY TOLL OF LOCAL VESSELS. As a result of the recent heavy storms experienced on the Atlantic within the past quarter, fourteen of our foreign going schooners have been lost and fifteen members of their crews were drowned. With the remainder of the crews were with one or two exceptions, taken off their water logged vessels in mid-ocean, after undergoing the hardships that are so prevalent in the lives of those who follow the sea. Besides these vessels which have been lost, several were also forced to make for harbours in a damaged condition, losses in this way amounting to several thousands of dollars. Caught in Ice off Portugal Cove. A message received Saturday by the Deputy Minister of Customs from the Sub-Collector at Trepassay stated that the schooner A. G. Elmor, 50 days out from Gibraltar, to this port was caught in the ice about 150 yards from the land at Portugal Cove Point, near Portugal Cove, Trepassay Bay. The ship's owners Messrs. Teasler & Co., wired for further information regarding the vessel, but owing to the lines between here, Cape Race, and Portugal Cove being out of order, it was impossible to get through. Cape

Shipping Notes.

Race however reported by wireless that a light S.W. wind was blowing and the ice had moved off. The following message, which is ample proof of the ship's danger, was received from the S.S. Manola last night by the Minister of Shipping:—"At 5.30 p.m. pat tow line aboard schooner A. G. Elmor, 60 days from Gibraltar, off Cape Mutton, towing to Trepassay. (Sgd.) CAPTAIN." The Manola was on her way to St. John, N.B., at the time.

Last Straws.

The Soup Kitchen has arrived. TORY TIMES are hard times.

Dr. Campbell wants the people of Harbor Main to help him hold on to his seven jobs and $8,500 a year, with pickings.

"Billy Gale" are good enough to have votes for Dr. Campbell but are not good enough to be treated as respectable citizens when they go to Campbell's country seeking employment.

How long would a Harbor Main man be in Prince Edward Island before he would be allowed to hold down seven jobs and dictate to the people of Souris and Charlottetown?

Every householder of Harbor Main is paying at least $80.00 a year more for sugar than he should pay. This would buy four barrels of flour.

If Campbell and his associates started out deliberately to starve the people of this country they could not have succeeded better.

The money "stolen" from the people by the Government on sugar would put perfect roads in every settlement in Harbor Main. It would be put at interest, give 350 worn-out fishermen a pension and go on forever.

Harbor Main has a lock and chain in its hand to-day. If it turns the key the wrong way on March 12th, it will keep the whole country in slavery and misery with no hope, for three more years.

They said that you were bribed to elect Woodford and Jones, and held you up to the ridicule of the whole country. Now they are going to try to prove conclusively that you were bribed. Will the hypocrites succeed? Not in Harbor Main.

Your money keeps up the Hospital, and you always get free treatment there. Campbell says that this must be done no longer and will now make you pay through the nose.

If there was one solitary good thing that the Government could tell the people of Harbor Main that they had done since coming into power, we would say give 'em a chance; but there isn't one good thing on the record.

The proper "manifesto" to put forward in Harbor Main by this gang, should be, if the truth were told, "Vote for us, boys, we have nearly ruined the country, and we want to finish the job."

I know if it was old times, and the fathers of the voters of Harbor Main could get out of their graves, Doctor Campbell, with the rotten record of this Government behind him, would be "blubbered" out of the district.

Harbor Main men! Do your duty this time, and there will be no "three more years of it." 'Tis too rotten now to stand six months. It can't go, and if you say that, it can't, and vote accordingly.

Crisp Comments.

Snowed under is right! That's what's going to happen to the Squires-Coaker outfit in Harbor Main next month.

The whirlwind campaign of Jones and Lewis in Harbor Main will give the Opposition candidates such a big majority that the other fellows will be more than "Furey-ons."

We understand that Mr. Hawco has been promised a new departmental job and in the event of his election, he will be made "Minister of Public Sharks."

Kelly's Island, Little Bell Isle and all that section of the country in beyond Cat Hill, is reported to be sold for the Government.

A strange looking creature was seen roaming over the Cat Hills a few days ago. It had an extra large hump and somewhat resembled a "Camel."

Everywhere the Government candidates go in Harbor Main District they are finding it cold, which is an indication of the freeze-out that is coming on polling day.

It is estimated that the Government has lost over twenty thousand dollars "in the snow" from Topsail to Conception Harbor. Finder will not be rewarded.

The Public hears a lot about Price Reductions to-day. But it is of no interest to the working-man to hear the price of the Rolls Royce Car is dropping. But the laborer, the milkman, the lumberman, takes heart when he hears that he can now get a Twenty Dollar Mackinaw or Overcoat for only Ten Dollars. The prices of Men's Mackinaw's and Overcoats are cut in two for Ten Days only, at ELLIS'S.—Feb.23,24,25
