After coll-call, Prof. Smith, of the Agricultural School, Truro, was introduced Prof. Smith was here for two purposes,—one to take Principal Modell's lesson in Chemistry; the other, to have a talk on the natural asciences generally.

Mr. Smith said, Chemistry was one of the forms of taxation which will prove popular with everybody except the knights of the road themselves; and, if exacted of all such travellers, it ought to realize a fairly substantial sum for the province, judging by the number which annually comes this way, for at some seasons of the year their name is legion.

ried on, concerning whose usefulness there is difficult to teach as many of the scien ried on, concerning whose usefulness there is some room for doubt. He is generally the prince of good fellows, with a thorough knowledge of the world, and able to read and understand human nature as he would an open book. His business is to sell goods, and he generally does it, whether his customer wishes to buy or not. As a result the merchant frequently finds himself with more goods on hand than he can sell, and more hills to meet than he can pay. And if any a portion of their vacation at this scheeled bills to meet than he can pay. And if any body thinks that the commercial traveller, or his employer, pays all his own expenses and does not charge it up to his customer, in the increased price of his goods, then we fancy he is laboring under a slight mistake about the matter. So, looking at the question in all its aspects, we are inclined to the opinion that the action of the Prince Edward Island legistature in imposing a tax upon our friends of the road is justifiable, and one which our own provincial authorities might limitate without in any way inflicting any hardship upon the business interests of the province.

So sweeping a reduction as that will create havoe with the educational affairs of the island, and we can hardly conceive of a condition of the finances of the province which would justify it, and in view of the fact that the local government propose to increase the revenue of the province quite largely by direct taxation, this sweeping reduction seems altogether unnecessary.

Farming is progressing slowly.

Mr. Henry McNayr has sold his farm and is at present occupying the N. Charlton house in the Valley.

Mrs. G. W. Parks and son Willie have returned from St. John. Mrs. R. G. Banks and Mr. J. Long, from Clementsvale, and Mrs. Arthur C. Potter and son Percy, have returned to their home at Clementsvale, having paid a visit to her old home at West Inglisville.

The Endeavors of Vancouver, B. C., have established a Chinese mission which is doing good work.

That Kansas City Christian Endeavor free soup house last winter fed nearly 16,000 hungry men. It required 4,000 gallons of soup and more than 10,000 loaves of bread. During Indiana's cold spell last winter eleven Endeavorers of Rockville rode twenty four miles in zero weather to organize a so-citety in the country.

Sealing in Newfoundland.

old the young seals are in prime condition, and the pelts yield a pure oil. In the old days the seals were pursued by hunters all along the coast, and a considerable quantity were taken, while the myriads out on the loe, away from the coast, remained untouched. Twenty years ago, or perhaps longer, a few small sailing vessels used to fit out anow, to expel disease and give you strength and provide a specific part of the coast, and a considerable quantity were taken, while the myriads out on the local taken in the coast, remained untouched. Twenty years ago, or perhaps longer, a few small sailing vessels used to fit out anow, to expel disease and give you strength nually at St. John's, Newfoundland, for ice and appetite. hunting. These vessels were frail, and therefore not available for much battling with the ice; though the hunters were able by their means to go further to sea, the number of seals caught was still very small. It was not seal industry rose into the importance which in the ground, Pat?" Pat-"Sure, sir, an' it holds to-day in that colony. At the pre- didn't ye say we were to raise egg-plants? sent time two large fleets of steamers go to Mebbe it was a hin ye wanted me to plant." the ice every spring and return, generally with freights of seals numbering, in some cases as high as 45,000 and 50,000 apiece. One fleet hails from the port of Dundee, in Scotland, the other is fitted out and owned by merchants resident in St. John's.

PREPARING FOR A CRUISE. When the time arrives for the fleet t eave harbor such a scene as that presented the wharves and in the streets of St. cannot be equalled anywhere else on h: neither can it be adequately described. as many as 300 to 600 sealers crowd one of the steamers, the provisions neces to feed so large a family-perhaps for a period-are very extensive, and they rought to the wharves by a ceaseless am of carts and sleighs. Barrels of pork, of beef, of flour and of biscuits, hard tack, chests of tea-for a Newfoundlander could not live without his black tea-cases of tobacco and some rum-usually a good lot of this last-is stowed away in the lockers. is attired in a heavy flannel smock, frock or | curled. Guernsey jacket, Indian skin boots, an Elsinore cap with flaps for ears, sealskin (leather) sleeping places on board the sealing steamers, fer they do not even expect them. They will never undress, nor wash, nor pay the least attention to their toilet, so long as the | wake up in the morning, love. hunt lasts, and it sometimes lasts for weeks at a time. When night comes and sleep as steel-squats in some quiet corner on a barrel or heap of seal pelts or on a sail, or anywhere at all where he can stow himself.

STARTING FOR THE SEAL FIELDS. When all has been made snug and taut on board and the captain of the sailing steamer has his immense crew aboard, affectionate farewells are said, a shrill siren wakes the echoes of the hills that frown over the magnificent harbor of St. John's, ropes and haw sers are let go and away goes the fleet to battle with the ice floes and to secure, as they generally do, a valuable cargo. But, alas, many of the sailing steamers have never returned! The voyage, though brief, is full of dangers, and at least a dozen vessels have been crushed to pieces in the ice and gone to the bottom during the past two decades. One hour after leaving harbor the steamers moment until they return there is almost a caseless conflict with the ice. A characteristic feature of the sealing steamer is what is literally a barrel which is placed at the foremast head, made fast and used as a look-out station. This barrel is never without an occupant by night as well day. The man in this lookout has for the time being the whole responsibility of the ship and crew resting on him. He is looking out not only for "patches" of seals ("patch" is a herd), but he has also to look out for the easiest passage for the vessel through the ice. He has a lonely billet, and, when a storm is raging, a by no means agreeable one. The lookout man, or the "barrel man," as he is called, is changed every few hours, as the crew is so large. The watch on the barrel has somees to be kept up for days without sighting the seals; sometimes only for a few hours.

THE GAME SIGHTED. When the game is sighted "Swoils ahead! swoils ahead!" is yelled by the barrel man, and everybody on the ship is thrown into the wildest confusion and excitement. The rattlings are instantly crowded and hundreds of eager eyes look out across the dreary waste of ice to see the "swoils," as the seals are locally described. Meanwhile the ship steams slowly ahead, but if a lead or opening in the ice is found, full sail is crowded on. "Full speed" is the command for the engineer and in a juffy the ship finds herself in the midst of the seals, a countless herd. Then what a slaughter ensues! Arming imself with his harpoon, rifle, scalping knife, hauling rope, and snowshoes, out leap every man on the ice, and an indescribable scene of carnage is enacted. The young seals pay no attention to the onrush of the murderous hunter, but the old seals leave the ice and dive into the little pools that are always in the midst of the shelving ice. These are sometimes shot in the water and secured. The young seals are always clubbed. The only sign they make when the hunter approaches them is usually an upturned glance with their beautifully liquid eyes and, maybe, a piteous bleat. A sharp blow on the a trice they are pelted, and their carcasses, quivering and ghastly, are left, with thousands of others on the blood-dyed ice.

Having pelted the seals, the hunter piles as many as he secures together and, tying them to his hauling rope, he drags them over the ice to the ship. If the weather is fine his work is much easier than if it were stormy, and certainly less risky and danger-ous. In the clear days he can venture a long distance from the ship, so long as he keeps her in view, and so follow the herd of seals to its outermost limit. Otherwise the ship must go with him. SEALING A DIRTY BUSINESS.

By the time that one good haul of seals is made, the clean looking hunter who came aboard his ship in port is besmeared by blood and grease beyond recognition, and a repulsive thing he has become. In this condition, pretty generally, he will remain to the end of the voyage. On their return to harbor it is known by the odor, for you can smell him many blocks away. This is not hard to believe; close quarters to him is a terribly hard experience.

How a vessel is fitted out for a cruise.

The season of sealing has already begun in Newfoundland, and a busy season it is. Everybody in the colony, with its 200,000 population, is intent on the sealing season and interested in its results. In the space of a week or two the ice which lies along the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador will be alive with young seals, whose bleating, as heard from a distance, is exactly the same as that which comes from the throats of a thousand lambs. For a short period previous to the birth of their young the old seals make their way south from the Arctic regions to the ice which most favors them in the whelping season.

"Whelping ice," as the old salts call it, is low, flat and smooth rather than hummocky, and, as such, it affords a place of safety for the young seals in the first few days of their life. When about ten days or a fortnight old the young seals are in prime condition, and the pelts yield a pure oil. In the old

Dear Friends,—
I should like you all to come and see my new store and while you are here it will be a pleasure to show you what a nice line of Prints, Cashmeres, Cloakings, Lace Curtains, Shades, Boots and Shoes I have.

The gentlemen will no doubt be pleased with the Ready Made Clothing, Shirts, Hats and Ties; while the ladies will surely want to look at the Millinery, Capes, Jackets and Underclothing, and those nice Ginghams for Aprons. If any of you are contemplating matrimony you will be pleased with the Dinner and Testets, Carpets, Bedroom Suites, Mattresses, Chairs and Tables.

Perhaps you will want to buy something, if so bring your Eggs, Butter, Beans, Dried Apples or Cash, as I am still selling on "No Credit," and do not want to hurt your feelings by refusing goods. MR. JOHN TEMPLEMAN, says: HAMPTON, Nov. 30th, 1893. Having been a great sufferer from Asthma, I was induced to try Lingard's Cough Bal-sam, and with great success. I would not like to be without it. Having received so much benefit, I can confidently recommend Lingard's Cough Balsam to all who may have this dreadful complaint. Yours truly, John B. Templeman.

Don't fall to keep it before the people that ours is the only perfectly self-regulating fence of fered. Don't loose sight of the great saving in posts, as with some other fences the posts alone costs as much as our fence complete.

I believe we have the best fence for the money on earth. I base my belief on the fact that one string of fence sells lots more. Page fence has proved itself by far the best for farmers' use, and we know from the orders already received that our business will boom with that of the farmers.
