Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

LETTER

To an Honourable

Brigadier General,

Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces in CANADA.

S I R,

IN my religious Doubts I apply to the Divinity of Doctor Whitfield; in any theatrical Difficulties, I consult the canonical Criticisms of a certain right Reverend; and in my polite Misadventures the Physician of Ludgate-hill is my celer atque fidelis, secret and speedy. To whom therefore shall I appeal in any military Doubts, but to the Man, whom Fortune, that never-erring Judge of Merit, in one short Campaign made a ~~Son~~ Colonel ~~and~~ a General, and a Commander in Chief?

THE Title, under which I have the Honour of addressing this Letter to you, will not, I confess, immediately point you out to the Eye of the Publick. It has been given, by the Compilers of the Court Calendar to Brigadier General T----d; or, not improbable, that sagacious Gentleman sent it to the Press himself, as an Hint to the Minister, that such a Command would be necessary for his Ma----ty's Service, although he might prudently chuse to stay at Home, when he received it.

HOWEVER, if Envy should peevishly object against the Discernment of Fortune in the Choice of her Favourites, let it be boldly answered, that, independent of Fortune and her Favours, you have made the most distinguished Honour of the present War, in a peculiar Manner, your own. The Goddess of Blindness and Caprice had certainly no Share in the Capitulation of Quebec. Ardent in the Pursuit of Glory, and the Applause of your Country, You generously rously violated the Rules of Wars; You risked the Resentment of your superior Officer; you signed the Articles of Capitulation without his knowledge, and anxious for the Preservation of your Conquest, you appointed the Staff of the Garrison, without even asking his Consent. He might, indeed, suspect the Friendship you had long professed for him, but with the Spirit of an old Roman, the Love of our Country, omnes omnium caritates complectitur. He might have ordered you into Arrest for such an Outrage to his Authority. He was not insensible of the Indignity, but you asked his Pardon, and languishing under his Wounds, he accepted your Submission. Thus you carried your Point. You received into your Protection the Capital of an Empire, larger than half the Roman Conquests; and though you had formally entered your Protest against attacking the Place, you alone enjoyed the Honours of its being taken.

YOUR Appetite for Glory being now fully satisfied, you descended from the Heights of Abraham, like Gideon---not the Gideon, who discomfited the Host of Midian with the Sound of his Trumpets,---but like another Illustrious of the Name, descending, at the Sign of his Majesty's Arms, from a delicious Feast of Turtle; and as, the better Part of Valour is Discretion, according to Fallstaffe's Wisdom, you discreetly left your Regiment, whose paltry Emoluments you had dearly purchased by your one Campaign, and prudently quitted a Scene, where Danger would probably be too busy. You sagaciously foresaw, that the French would endeavour to recover their Capital, and you were convinced, that the Place was not defensible. You had not entered, like a desperate Volunteer, into the Service. You had been pressed into it. You had been nominated without your Knowledge or Consent. You were not therefore engaged by any Point of Honour or Gratitude to continue tinue in it, whenever it became dangerous or disagreeable. Your Understanding was not to be dazzled by Mr. Wolfe's foolish Passion for Glory. He had precipitately ventured beyond all Possibility of retreating. He had no other Choice, but that of Death or Victory, especially after you had solemnly entered your Protest against his Plan for attacking the Enemy.

In these happy Circumstances, you very wisely preferred a peaceful Walk from Worcester to Norfolk at the Head of your Militia Regiment to the Snow-Shoes Expeditions of America. Happy for the Canadians, that Nature hath cooled and tempered your Courage by this delicate Sensibility of Cold. Happy, thrice happy for the Scots in their Rebellion! The Highlanders would not have made such an obstinate Resistance at the Battle of Culloden, or rendered the Sword and Target so justly terrible to the British Soldiery, if even your perfect Veneration for the Person of your royal Commander could have have prevailed over your natural Antipathy to a Northern Campaign.

ALTHOUGH I have justly given you the sole Honour of your Capitulations of Quebec independent of Fortune, or her Influence, yet let us not totally disclaim her Favour and Protection. Among Heroes of ancient Days the Favour of the Gods was always esteemed a pious Proof of Merit, and shall we not acknowledge it most fortunate, and consequently meritorious, that you were necessarily appointed to be the Historian of your own Exploits? Alexander passionately lamented, that he had not, like Achilles, another Homer, to give Immortality to his Conquests.

I know, that our ingenious Moderns have been reproached with plundering the Shrines of Antiquity, and ransacking the Virtues of the Dead to erect a lying Monument of Fame to the Living. I shall not be apprehensive of this Reproach, when I assert assert, that the noblest Praise ever given to Cesar, that of writing with the same Spirit, with which he fought, is equally due to you for the Letter you wrote from Quebec to the Secretary of State. Some malignant Spirits, indeed, were offended at your not having paid one civil Compliment to the Memory of General Wolfe, or used even one kind Expression of Esteem or Affection with Regard to his Person. Surely, some People are never to be satisfied. Permit me, Sir, in your Name to ask them, whether your warmest Encomiums could have added to that universal good Opinion, which the Public had conceived of Mr. Wolfe's Abilities and Courage? Would they, unreasonable as they are, have had a Gentleman of your Birth and Breeding, imitate the foolish Generosity of Sir William Johnson? I have only to regret the Loss of General Prideaux. I endeavoured to pursue his vigorous Measures, the good Effects of which he deserved to enjoy †. Imposed upon, † Sir William Johnson's Letter to Major General Amberst.

perhaps, by this specious Appearance of Generosity, Lord Granby resigned the Honour of the Battle of Warbourg to General Moslyn. Or was it not rather from the natural Weakness of his Heart, that could be satisfied with the secret Consciousness of having performed his Duty, without being too anxious for the Applause of the public? But they must have known very little of the Expedition to Quebec; who expected, that you would bear Testimony to the Conduct of a General, whose Plan of Operations you had the Honour, both in public and private, to oppose; and against whose last desperate Attempt you protested, in Form. True, this Attempt succeeded; but not the most fortunate Success should alter an Opinion, founded like yours, in calm, deliberate Judgement. You were not prejudiced in Favour of this Attack by having any Share in the Execution. You were at a safe and honourable Distance from the Scene of Action, when you were told, that you commanded *. The Enemy was routed before General Wolfe fell, or Monckton was wounded. You had only to temper the Ardour of the Soldiers in the Pursuit, and I dare swear you led them on, as regularly, and as methodically according to the Rules of War, as your Friend and Favourite, Lord George, slow-marched the Cavalry at the Battle of Minden. You have been his Lordship's warmest Advocate, and he has been to you an Example of military Glory.

you

Since I have mentioned the Minden Hero, give me Leave to ask you, for you are in his Confidence, what is become of him? Is he retired (Stipio † and others have done it, from the Hopes of Ambition, and the Views of Glory? Retired to his late Purchase among his faithful Friends the Seats? At least, to him they have been faithful. Is he there meditating a new Plan, since the old one succeeded so unfortunately, of disobeying Command with Impunity, and, if possible, without much Suspicion, at least, without an absolute Conviction of Cowardice?

It would really, Sir, be a worthy Exercise of his Abilities, during his Retirement, to inform the Public, why he did not put himself at the Head of the British Infantry at Minden? Was it, indeed, because the Post of Honour was likely to be the Post of Danger? Let him account, if possible, for Lord Granby's making the Cavalry march almost five Miles in less Time, than his Lordship took to deliberate, whether he should march at all; or than he took to march half a Mile, after he found it was no longer dangerous to begin. The Marquis was not afraid of blowing his Horses. He probably knew not

the Principles, upon which Lord George thought it proper to conduct a Wing of Cavalry. He did not reflect, that whoever attempts to bring Squadrons, after being blown or hurried, to an Attack, will soon find, that the Vigour and Weight, so peculiar to the British Cavalry, will be lost by their own Mismanagement and Indiscretion.

What Pity, that all these Maxims, the Wisdom at once and the Glory of a Review, should be thus totally destroyed by one short Hour's Experience. The French did not find these Squadrons unfit for Action, who had made such Haste into it. They had the Happiness to arrive in Time to share the Glory of the Day, having successfully charged several Times, both the Enemy's Cavalry and Infantry.

would bloud of which he should know When I read Lord Granby's Account of this Engagement; wheald I see the British Infantry fainting under the Heat of the Weather, & over-straining themselves to get on through morassy and difficult Grounds and suddenly dropping down on their March; when I see his Lordship, in his Impatience to enter into Action, putting himself at the Head of the Cavalry, and advancing towards the Enemy as a full Front, though the Distance was near five Miles, I am almost tempted to wish for some other General, a T. or a S. who would certainly repress this Ardour in our Soldiers; this Passion, this Madness of fighting. On the contrary Lord Granby animates them by his own Example, and that unhappy Influence he has gained over their Affections. Danger and Difficulty seem to him Motives of Obedience to the Orders he receives, and undoubtedly he wants Lord George's penetrating trating Spirit, by which, he should know, before he tried them, how many Things are impossible.

It is acknowledged, that the British Troops have gained great Honour to the Nation, under his Lordship's Command, and no Man's Heart exults in national Honour, more than mine. But, Sir, I am no Friend to continental Measures, a bitter Enemy to them in the Extreme, to which they are now carried. I am not so dazzled with the Abilities and Success of Duke Ferdinand, as not to see great Faults, and great good Fortune. Through all the Glories, with which the British Arms are environed, I can see the Lives of our brave Countrymen, I think, much too prodigally lavished away, certainly beyond all Proportion of Numbers, when compared with the rest of the army.

His serene Highness, it is confessed, has not been inferiour to their Merit, and as he

he is conscious, that Praise is the best, indeed, the proper Reward of a Soldier's Virtue, he has given it most liberally. At Minden six British Regiments routed an Army, and we are told, our Infantry performed Wonders. At Corbach the Retreat was attended with a little Confusion. In Truth, the Hessians and Hanoverians had given Way. Our Bastions would have suffered considerably hereby, had it not been for the Bravery of the Hereditary Prince, putting himself at the Head of one of Bland's Squadrons, and of Howard's Regiment of Dragoons, charged the Enemy so furiously, as enabled our Infantry to make a safe Retreat. Upon this Occasion the British Troops received the usual Compliments, which indeed they greatly well deserved. I SHALL trouble you with only one Instance more. In the Affair of Ex-dorf,

London Gazette, July 22

Elliot

Elliot's Regiment, signified themselves greatly by Our Trophies are nine Pair of Colours almost all of which we owe to the Intrepidity of Elliot's Regiment, which, for its first Appearance in the Field, has done Wonders Wonders indeed! But how dearly have they purchased these complimentary Honours!
 Seventy nine private Men, Infantry and Cavalry, are killed in the Action; seventy one of them are Elliot's Dragoons.
 One hundred and twenty one Horses are killed, and hundred and sixteen of them are Elliot's Dragoons. Twelve Officers are killed, and both of Elliot's Dragoons.
 Upon this Occasion the British and Englishman tread this Account the British Soldier bleed, let him die even for Hanover. His Blood may not be wholly useless to his Country, nor his Death unprofitable to that common Cause of Mankind, Liberty. But let him not be sent upon every idle Enterprize, the very Parade of fighting: upon every Party; every Detachment, every unadvised and desperate Attack. Let him not be obliged to fight, merely because he does not know how to run away. But I willingly quit the Subject, and shall make only one Reflection upon it: that it would be far more honourable for the Germans to assist the British Troops in the Day of Battle, than to write these endless Encomiums upon their conquering without them.

 In however there could have remained any Doubt upon the Minds of the Public, with Regard to Lord George's Behaviour of his Trial, here comes the Battle of War- burg. No stronger Testimony, Although she rise from the Dead. Or if there are any, Sir, even among the Scots, who, like you, are determined, for good Reasons, not to be convinced, let them not, in the Name of Modesty, outrage the Public, with an unprofitable Declaration of their Opinions.

THE Court, which his Lordship, and you have paid to the Highlanders, has been truly of some Use to both. Besides, to flatter and be flattered were the pleasing Means of attaining that Protection, from which any less flagrant Misbehaviour, than his Lordship's, would have found great Benefit. But this Battle of Warburg has not only laid flat all the Works they had raised towards his, or your Defence, but shewn your Defenders too in a Light, less advantageous, than you and their Countrymen have so constantly and unreasonably placed them. We are told in a Letter from Quebec, that the Highlanders took to their their Broad Swords (no Doubt a very military Phrase) and drew part into the Town, Part to the Works at their Bridge on Orban River St. Charles. * Yet, Sir, you are conscious, that the Highlanders were not so forward in the Pursuit at Quebec, as the forty-seventh Regiment, which would probably have entered the Town with the flying Enemy, if not restrained by your Sackvillian Prudence. To what Purpose therefore this tremendous taking to their Broad Swords, when a whole Regiment was between them and the Enemy?

If we read Brigadier General Beckwith's Orders to his Brigade, after the Affair of Essexdorff, they will account; and not dishonourably, for the general Behaviour of the Highlanders †. They and some of the Hanoverian Infantry were ordered to sustain the British Grenadiers, neither call in Question the Inclination of the Germans, nor of the Scots; but they were not able, however willing, to keep Pace with them. Hence that great Destruction

It is with great Pleasure, that Brigadier General Bickel with can communicate to the Brigade how highly satisfied the Hereditary Prince is with their Behaviour in general on the 16th. The Approbation of such a Soldier is surely the most flattering of all Things to a military Man.

The manlike Manner, in which the Grenadiers sustained the Fatigue of the March (not leaving a Man behind) is highly meritorious. This Encomium on the Grenadiers is by no Means meant, as a Reproach to the Highlanders. Troops raised in haste, three Parts in four, Officers and Soldiers, entirely raw, can not be supposed to equal the Flower of the British Army. Every candid Man must confess, they do all that can be expected. That young Corps has now the fairest Field before them. The Service they are now employed upon, in a Campaign of this Kind, is more instructive to the Officers, than ten dull, tedious, uninteresting Years, passed in the Line.

of those gallant Soldiers, of whom so many lost their Lives in that successful deperate Attack. For the same Reason, the Highlanders were not so forward, as the forty-seventh Regiment at Quebec. They are a less, a weaker Sort of Men, than the Low-landers. But their Inability is not their Fault. They do their best. I only blame them, that being less than English Soldiers, they will pretend to be more.

As you appear, Sir, to have made the Hero of Minden your Model of all military Virtue. I would encourage you to equi-late his great Example, by marking a Sort of natural Resemblance of Character between you. A Resemblance far stronger, than any in your own Collection of Portraits, though his Royal Highness himself, your great Chef d'œuvre, be there. If, for Instance, his Lordship prudently refused to advance with the Cavalry at Minden, you certainly with equal Prudence quelled the Spirit

Spirit of the Troops at Quebec. When Mr. de Bougainville appeared, you were too prudent to quit such advantageous Ground, at risk the Fate of so decisive a Day, by seeking a fresh Enemy. If his Lordship is, in general, more famed for Artifice, and that much useful Part of human Wisdom, called Cunning, yet surely your tricking General Mason of the Capitulation was a Masterpiece of Dexterity. If my Lord excels in that well-bred Species of Wit, known by the Name of satyrizing, are not you equally excellent in that good-natured Species of Painting, called Caricatura, the Amusement of your idle Hours? Does not Britain pour forth the Eloquence of her true and Scotch in Honour of Lord George, and is she less grateful in her Affection for General Travot? Did Lord George imagine, that the Reputation of Being well with the great Minister would bear him, without ever endangering his Person, to the highest Pinacle of military Glory

Glory, and are not you, Sir, this Moment abusing your Interest with that Minister by leaving, and being so many Months absent from your Command at Quebec? If you think, you have deserved, or gained any Honour there, do you imagine your walking at the Head of your Militia will maintain it? Are you not paid for the Command of a Regiment in America; and is not some Officer now doing, at the Risk of his Life, that Duty, for which you are paid? Is not yours the single Instance of this Kind of Desertion in the Service?

THESE are the great Outlines of your Characters; and if we should examine every the minutest Feature, we shall find, not a striking Resemblance only, but of such a peculiar Kind, as cannot be mistaken for any one else. If I may be forgiven for deviating into Poetry,

Naught but yourselves can be your Parallels.

Here-

Hereafter, I mean in our future History, one Character of Praise will be sufficient for both. It will be impossible to separate, and disunite your Merits, or the Honours with which they are to be rewarded. In publick Life, the same military Virtues; the same Appetite for fighting, and the same Abhorrence of retreating. The same perplexed Passion for Intrigue, Business, Politicks, ministerial Confidence, and parliamentary Debates. In private Life, the same Spirit of Calumny and Caricatura; the same Insolence of Manners, and Arrogance of Behaviour; the same vetus & infusa familia superbia.
 In these last Instances however, you must forgive me, Sir, if I think his Lordship, whether from Genius, or some luckier Accident, may justly claim a small Degree of Superiority. He was not born indeed, but he was educated from his earliest Infancy, in the House of Royalty.

ty. * Prima ab infantia eductus in domo regnatrice. Here, it is confessed, there was some Danger of his perverting those precious Instincts, with which Nature had so liberally endowed him. He might unhappily have learned to become humane, affable and condescending; to compassionate the Follies; to forgive the Errors of his Fellow-Creatures, and to pay a sacred Reverence to human Nature. Such are the constant Effects; by a thousand Examples, indeed of all the Princes upon Earth, of a royal Education.

BUT he totally escaped these pernicious Errors, as unwounded, except another slight Scratch, in his Reputation, as at the Battle of Minden. By a peculiar and wonderful Strength of Virtue in his Constitution, he escaped even the poisonous Breathings of

of Flattery; that Incense of Courts, so profusely offered up to the young Heirs of Greatness, and without which no human Creature, not even a Lord, could dare to be insolent. How well he maintained the, not too humble, Consciousness of his own Worth; with what a modest Confidence he always exerted his Abilities, let his Behaviour at his Trial be an everlasting Testimony. It should have been a full Indication of his Conduct at Minden. There, at least, his Complexion was unvaried, his Eye firm and unshaken; his whole Deportment rather in the Extreme of Courage, than liable even to the Suspicion of Cowardice. There he certainly wanted not that Presence of Mind, which is the first great Excellence in a General. Nor did that Weakness of Nerves, for which a Man is no more accountable, than for any other Error of his Constitution, affect him on an Occasion, that would have made many a gallant Spirit tremble:

He boldly insulted his Judge; overawed the Resolutions of the Court; gave his own Affeuerations in Evidence of his Innocence (the only uncontradicted Evidence he gave) and triumphed in the Success of those Affeuerations. A noble Example, and worthy of your Imitation.

BUT you, Sir, should disdain the servile Spirit of Imitation. It is beneath a Genius like yours. You should determine to be yourself an Original, for others to imitate. You should be apprehensive of the usual Fate of Imitators, who generally copy rather Errors, than Excellencies, as indeed it is easier to bend the Head, like Alexander or Boscawen, than to imitate their Courage and Intrepidity.

YET, Sir, to make even half the Progress your Ambition aims at in the Army, be assured, there must be Courage; there must be Eagerness to serve; there must be be real Service to form a military Character.

 Your Friend, Lord G—e, had all other Requisites to insure his Success. The Conclusion, I own, is disagreeable, but it is unavoidable. Either go to Quebec, or resign your Commission. Why did I say, un- avoidable, when I believe you will do neither?
 I mean, it is the only answer you can give to this Letter, which will vex, not shame you, though it sets your military Character in its true Light, and draws your Picture in every Respect, a proper Pendant to that of Lord G—e. Ask his Lordship, why did not the Cavalry engage at Minden. He cannot answer, but he does not blush. Ask you, why you are not at your Post, or why you receive the Pay of two Regiments for nothing, I know, you cannot answer, and I believe too you will not blush,

I am, SIR, &c.

P O S T C R I P T.

S I R,

IF you read the following Advertisement, you will find upon what Authority I have asserted, that you were convinced, Quebec was not defensible *. The intimate Union between you, and the Gentleman, who published it, rendered it impossible for me to conceive there can ever be any Difference of Sentiments between you.

 “ Lights. GEO. TOWNSEND:”

South Audley Square,
June 20, 1760.

You

You will please to recollect, Sir, at what Time this Iprinted Advertisment was published. When the Nation was greatly alarmed for the Safety of Quebec; when they knew it was besieged; when they would have received, with Pleasure, any the least Hopes, even this Gentleman's Opinion, of its being secure. No; he resents the common Hear-say Story of a News-paper. He will not have it insinuated, that he thought it could hold out a Siege. He finds himself under a Necessity --- some Folks have such pressing Necessities! --- until he can proceed in another Manner with the Printer, &c. who did not tremble, under these Menaces, for the Liberty of the Press? Some there were, who rejoiced in the Hopes of seeing it restrained. But ah!

The luckless Printer, unresisting, falls Beneath the Wind and Whiff of his fell Cane, Brandish'd aloft with huge two-handed Sway,

And

And arm athletick; that tremendous arm, From which the French, astounded and amaz'd,
 In vile Capitulation hid their Fears.

But whither am I wandering? Is it then impossible to write of Heroes, and not write Heroicks? My Printer and I shall, however, expect the honourable Gentleman's Compliments and Thanks for having snatched his Advertisement from the daily Mortality of a News-paper, and here desecrated it to all Eternity. We therefore recommend it to Posterity, not only as a Specimen of fine Writing, of clear and accurate Expression; but as an indisputable Proof of the Writer's Abilities, Modesty, good Sense, Temper, and a thousand other et cæteras.
