All Canadian

Many nationalities are to be found in this Dominion, but the tendency of all is to become good Canadians. The fact that they must speak English in order that each such group may communicate with the other, tends to make them so. —Advertiser, London.

Canadian Annulities

The Canadian government annuities plan, lately explained here by Dr. Sanson, is proving very popular. An Ottawa, despatch states that the premiums received in the first seven months from all parts of Canada amount to $205,000, and that applications are being daily received. —Evening Times, St. John.

Good Crop Prospects

There is good news for the whole country, for the excellent prospects of a large crop return will stimulate business revival and encourage all branches of trade and industrial activity. If the present promise is fulfilled, Canada is going to have another big year all around. —Morning Chronicle, Halifax.

Peace Centennial

The movement to have a centennial celebration of one hundred years of peace between Canada and the United States is taking form. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Earl Grey approve of the scheme, and the latter is very enthusiastic over it. This official recognition will give the affair a decided impulse. —Evening Times St. John.

Healthy Sign

The homestead entries in the West for the first five months of 1909 are almost exactly five times as numerous as they were in the same portion of 1908. Various causes have no doubt been at work to produce this state of affairs, but one certainly is the real merits of the Canadian West are yearly becoming better known. There may be minor fluctuations, but the average increase will continue large. —Toronto Globe.

Moors and Spaniards

The Catalans, ever turbulent and ready for revolution, have seized the opportunity afforded by the Spanish reverses in the campaign against the Moors to rise against the government of the Catholic dons, and Spain is in the throes of a revolution. That Spaniards should rise in rebellion rather than fight their hereditary enemies, the Moors, proves that their is occasionally a new thing under the sun. —St. Thomas Daily Times.

German Plans

Away off here where the political atmosphere is cooler the Canadian German scare is not big enough to elicit more than a hot weather smile. We are not going to fight Germany. No one, in fact, is going to fall upon the Kaiser unless he goes mad and tries to break up the British Empire, which, unless he goes mad, he will not attempt. Great Britain prepares for defence alone. The Empire's defence plans will involve some form of participation by Canada, which demands security within the Empire. The nature of our participation is not yet determined. Once it is determined we shall go on with it. —Daily Telegraph, St. John.

Imperial Work

It is sometimes argued that Canada's building of railways is not to be counted as a work of defence; that we do this for our own benefit, and not for the sake of the Empire. It might be answered that the British fleet is not maintained to defend Canada, and that not a ship less would be required if Canada were out of the Empire. But both contentions fall short of the truth. The truth is that what is done for one is done for all. If it is true that a battle for Canada might be fought on the North Sea, it is equally true that a railway or a settlement in Western Canada may benefit the whole Empire. —Toronto Star.

The program, as presented, comprises a goodly list of sports, plenty of music and entertainment for all visitors. The different committees will cheerfully give all information required on application.

Regina.—Considerable anxiety has been caused by the disappearance of E. C. Corbeak local agent of the Heintzman Piano Company Corbeak together with his two children, started for a drive Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and have not since been seen or heard of. It is expected to return at 6 that night. —The fire brigade was called out on Sunday to extinguish a fire on the river bank at the back of the Coaticook Woolen Mills Co. A fire had been smouldering there for some days, presumably started from a camp some boys had there. It blazed up Sunday and was working low in the mills.

Midland.—On Sunday two Italians, employees of the Canadian Iron Corporation Company, were drowned by falling off a raft a short distance from the dock.

St. Louis, Mo.—It was reported here that Grace and Tomasse Vivian, the kidnapped children, were in Duncannon, Pa. Later it was said that the children found in Duncannon had been identified as belonging in Altoona.

Port Arthur.—Mrs. Williamson, wife of the secretary of the Y. M. C. A., died suddenly at her father's residence at Peterboro.

Caution on the Water

With the vacation season in full swing when hundreds and hundreds of persons who pass most of the months of the year on land, take to water joyously or more or less carelessly, it may be well to write a word of advice.

Don't rock the canoe or the rowboat for fun.

Sit down and sit still. If you have cause to change your seat keep low in the craft when doing so, even at a sacrifice of personal appearance.

Don't undertake to manage a sail boat alone until you have learned how from some skipper who knows his business—and then keep an eye on the sky for signs of high winds and storms.

Captains of gasoline launches should see to it that their tanks and tank connections are absolutely tight. The safe rule is not to allow smoking aboard. Carry an anchor heavy enough to hold in case the engine kicks and refuses to go. You may need it.

Life preservers take up room, but they should not be left ashore for that reason. You can find cork belts, ring buoys or rubber cushions that can be stowed away for use in emergency.

Learn to swim if you are not a swimmer now.

The avoidance of unnecessary work upon the water during the vacation season will shorten the roll of the drowned and keep the shadow of mourning away from scores of happy New England homes. —Boston Globe.

Smoking Fewer Cigarettes Now

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—There were thirty million less cigarettes smoked in Canada last year than the year before. The decline is held to be entirely among boys of sixteen years and under and to be entirely due to the restrictive legislation put through parliament by the government during the session of 1908. It is believed that the law actually prevented smoking of from forty to fifty million cigarettes by the boys of the country, as the consumption was increasing, and if it had not been for the law there would have been an increase of from ten to twenty millions instead of a decline of thirty millions. This is a fair assumption, as the consumption was increasing more and more each year, and during the six years prior to 1908 the increase amounted to over 75 millions.

The total consumption of cigarettes last year was about three hundred and seventy millions. There were three hundred and fifty six and three quarters millions of domestic cigarettes consumed or a decrease of twenty-eight millions, and there were twelve and three quarters millions of imported cigarettes smoked, a decrease of about two millions.

American Settlers Flock to Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 13.—Immigration to Canada is again on the increase and the growth in arrivals from the United States is especially heavy. It was sixty thousand last year. During June, 20,866 persons entered Canada, or 5,933 more than during the previous June, an increase of thirty three per cent. During the first three months of the fiscal year ending with June, 74,136 persons entered Canada as immigrants, an increase of 5,163, an increase of 7 per cent.

From Great Britain and the continent the arrivals numbered 41,112, a falling off of 12,517, or 62 per cent. During June alone 11,661 immigrants came in at ocean ports an increase of 969 while during June immigrants from the United States totalled 9,208 an increase of 4,324 or an increase of 89 per cent.

OUR DEFECTIVE FATHERS

Having ascertained the result of the race, the young man was about to drop the paper when something caught his eye. He started to read it.

"Come on," said his friend, rattling the dominoes impatiently on the mottled marble of the cafe table. "It's twenty past two now, and we must have one more game before we get back to the office."

"No hurry, Dick," said the other, "the governor's away, and I heard Benson say he was going to have a tooth out, and mightn't be back till 3."

"Oh, all right," said Dick, lighting a fresh cigarette.

"His friend grinned over the paper. "This is bloomin' funny," he said.

"What is it?" queried Dick.

"Why, a girl joined the Morrisons and eloped to America. Her father borrowed some money and went after her."

"And when he got to New York they wouldn't let him through. Said he'd got heart disease and fired him back."

"Ha, ha!" chuckled Dick. "Bloomin' funny!" And they resumed the dominoes.

"I say, Bert," said Dick at the end of the game, "why don't you leave home and go halves in my dig?"

"I would if I could afford it," said Bert, "for I can't stand my old man."

"Did he rag you about Monday night?" queried Dick.

"No, luckily he had an attack of lumbago, and went to bed early. Mother sat up for me and of course she would not tell him I was squiffy. It was nearly 2 when I got in."

"What's the matter with the old man, then?"

"Oh, he says I ought to give mother more money. I gave her ten bob as it is. How much does he think I can take home out of two quid a week?"

And he was shirty because I lifted a couple of cigars I found on the mantelpiece, and have been using his razor lately. I told him mine was blunt, the old fool."

"He gasses about what he's done for me, and says I take everything as a matter of course, because I asked him to lend me 25 bob for my season ticket. I told mother yesterday I was sick of him."

"What did she say?"

"She said he's always telling her he's sick of me. And what with his going on about me and his going on about brother Bob, she says she's sick of her life."

"All sick," grinned Dick. "We are a merry family, we are, we are, we are. What's Bob been up to?"

"Oh, he's been foolin' after some girl and getting into debt. Took her out in a trap and ran over some old chap and his relations came round and tackled my old man. Said Bob that was driving recklessly, and they want kid compensation. Injured his knee cap or something. So dad's got the needle about that too. Says everything seems to fall on him. Rob told mother strait that with a man like father there's no encouragement to stop at home. He says, same as me and if he could afford it he'd clear out. And, as I say to her, I ain't a kid now. I'm a man, and I like to be treated as a man. Let's have another game."

"They had another game and then sauntered back to the office. "See you at the Pavilion tonight," said Bert as they entered, "and if the old man says anything more to me about money matters, and my follies and all that much, I mean to tell him plain that he's the sort of a father that drives sons away from home and makes them go to the bad."

Meanwhile the fathers of England are being upbraided by bishops and statesmen. This question seems to have excited so many people lately that I thought it would be interesting to get the subject of few fathers on the subject families.

I first addressed myself to an old gentleman—very wealthy—with one son.

"What is your view of children as a source of happiness?" I asked. He frowned. "Take that boy of mine," he said grimly. "I sent him to Oxford and told him he could go to Cambridge, too, if he liked. I gave him means to keep his end up with the sons of dukes and earls. He got into society that I wasn't good enough for, and then he went and married a bar-maid."

"Perhaps it was all for the best," murmured the mother.

"All for the best," growled the father. "Why, she looked him like a fish and she drinks like one. And so does he. I can't do anything with him."

I realize that the subject of children was not a popular one in that house. So I interviewed a friend who I thought could be regarded as an authority—a clergyman with seven daughters and four sons. He said his sons had left home and he hoped they were doing well. Having known a few clergymen's sons I did not press the matter further.

"I do not wish to be personal," I explained. "I want your views on families generally."

He said speaking generally, of course, that families involved a natural anxiety. And where there were many daughters he thought there was a tendency to overrule parental authority.

"Yes," I said, sympathetically, "I know." I next visited a schoolmaster and asked him what he thought of the twentieth century child.

"The twentieth century child is the children's millennium," he said. "Loyal respect and obedience are old-fashioned, and children look upon their parents as nothing more than survivors to minister to their wants, and give them a good time."

Later I interviewed a father belonging to the class that have the largest families. "We've had eight and buried five and I wish'd we bury the lot."

"Dear me!" I exclaimed. "How's that? The bishop of London says that the worst man in the world is he who gives a famen kid compensation. Injured his knee cap or something. So dad's got the needle about that too. Says me the advertisement of which ran: Caretaker Wanted. Man and Wife. No encumbrances. And I do defy you or any body else to manage that boy of mine. He's only ten and he's a hand-ful, I give you my word. I sighed. And passing through a narrow street I came upon a small boy with a large barrow. It was stocked with bananas and he was just about to wheel it off. "Goodbye mother," there was a grey haired woman at the door of a small house. "Good bye," dear. Hope you'll sell out. He trundled off. "You're son, ma'am?" I asked. "Yes, sir," she replied. "Thank God. Since his father died, 18 months ago, he's kept me and myself with that barrow. And I'll back him against any man on the road for sellin' bananas." London Ideas.

The New German Chancellor

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the new German Chancellor, has made rapid advances. He is one of the Emperor's intimate friends, having been brought into frequent contact with His Majesty when Provincial Governor of the Province of Brandenburg. With his headquarters at Potsdam he used to take long walks and rides with His Majesty. The Emperor was not slow to recognize his administrative talents, notably in the field of social legislation, and in 1901 His Majesty offered the new chancellor the Prussian Ministry of the Interior, which the Governor refused, as the conditions which he felt he must make, owing to the situation caused by Conservative opposition to the Emperor's canal plants, could not be fulfilled. However, four years later he accepted this appointment on the death of Freiherr von Hammerstein.

He soon attracted attention by the distinctly liberal policy he adopted towards legislation, notably by a speech wherein, while condemning certain aspects of the morality of Berlin, he warmly defended the necessity of providing recreation for workmen after hours of labor. He devoted his attention to improving the lot of the artisan class, whereas most social legislation had hitherto been applied to the working proletariat. In 1907 he succeeded Count Posadowsky at the Imperial home office, where he distinguished himself by drawing up the Imperial Insurance Law and the law controlling the right of assembly, both of which were passed by the Reichstag. The new Chancellor enjoys the confidence of all the bourgeois parties in the Reichstag, the only opposition to the appointment having come from the extreme wing of the Centrists.

Prince Buelow recently said to him "He is a very able man, and has a most profound nature." Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg visited England some years ago when Governor of Brandenburg, with the commission for the study of communal institutions, a subject on which he was well posted. He was of invaluable assistance to Mr. Lloyd George when the British Minister visited Berlin last year in connection with state insurance schemes. He gave lunch to his honor, and placed the whole of the state machinery at his disposal.

The new Chancellor has a good knowledge of English, and although of a retiring nature is generally popular with the diplomatic corps in Berlin.

The new Chancellor is in his 53 year. He is descended from the well-known Frankfurt banking family of Bethmann, which, originally of Dutch extraction, established itself at Frankfurt-on-Main in the seventeenth century. The new Imperial Chancellor's great-grandmother married John James Hollweg, who added his wife's name to his own.

In appearance Har von Bethmann Hollweg is tall and well set up, with rather a scholarly mien. He is a passionate rider and may be seen riding alone at an early hour every morning in the Tiergarten, mounted on a sober looking nag. The new Chancellor is married and has three children, two sons and a daughter, the eldest child, a son, being 19 years of age.

An Easily Built Bathing House

Two enterprising girls summering in a village on a river, have made themselves a bathing-house on the shore by the aid of some awning cloth and four upright posts. After the posts were set--and a country carpenter accomplished that part of the process at small cost--the girls finished the shelter. The cloth was nailed to the posts around the sides of the square, a piece fitted over the top, and with one side left loose as an entrance curtain, a bathing-house that excellently served its purpose was evolved.

Duchess and Auto-graph Collector.

A donation to the fund for presenting new colors for the Scottish Horse has been given by Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, who is one of the most unconventional of all English royalities. Princess Louise dislikes formality of a kind, and dispenses with it on every possible occasion. To artists and litterateurs she renders ready encouragement, and is an artist of no mean ability. Her studio is a small iron building surrounded with trees, and connected with her apartments at Kensington Palace. The story goes that an American on a visit to this country, desirous to see a princess, managed to gain admission to the palace grounds, and strolled into the studio. A lady in a large blue apron with bishop sleeves was working at a piece of sculpture, and around her were easels and paint brushes, chisels, and all the rest of the paraphernalia of the painter and sculptor.

"That's a nice bit of work you've got there, the visitor had the temerity to ask by way of introduction. "I guess if you came to America you would do very well, if you persevered. By the way," he continued "you don't know where I would happen to find the Duchesses? When I came away from home I promised I'd take back her autograph."

"Perhaps," suggested the artist, "mine would do instead?" he replied, producing an autograph album, "but I would like to have the Duchesses' also."

The artist took the book and wrote her name in it. He looked at the signature, and, rising to the occasion, lifted his hat, held out his hand, and said, "Glad to meet you, Duchess. You are a real democrat."

World's Greatest Admiral

Sir William May, commander-in-chief of the British Home fleet, although over sixty, looks forty and works like a lieutenant of five-and-twenty. The command of the strongest fleet in the world is not anybody's task. Sir William May has specialized on many things, and he has specialized well. He is an explorer, a diplomatic, an administrator, scientific engineer, tactician, and a strategist. Was it Bismarck who said that no other occupation or profession helped a man to be a diplomatist but that knowledge of diplomacy helps a man in every other walk of life?

Sir William May is essentially a diplomatist, and the best English diplomacy is a blend of straightforward courtesy--with the accent on the word straightforward. May knows all the Courts and Chancelleries in Europe. He was Naval Attaché for the whole Continent in the early nineties, before England was alive to the necessity of closely watching the navies of other countries.

The work was more than any one man could get through, but Captain May's reports to the Naval Intelligence Department, were they published, would show that our diplomatic admiral has a pen of a ready writer.

The commander-in-chief of England's greatest fleet, to be equipped for his gigantic task, must know not only the ships and people under his command, but also foreign ships and foreign personalities. The personal equation in war is an immense factor. Sir William knows all the chief people in Europe.

ATTACHED TO GERMAN EMPEROR

The admiral was attached to the German Emperor during his visit to England ten years ago, and then came under the ban of Bismarck's savage jest that "there were two things no man could escape--Death and the Red Eagle." Sir William May received the Red Eagle from the German Emperor, and received the coveted distinction of the Legion of Honor from France in 1905.

When I first saw the commander-in-chief twenty-five years ago, he was commander (I think) of the Devastation--one of the earliest and experimental groupings in the direction of Dreadnoughts. The atmosphere below deck of the Devastation type was dangerously foul until the electric light was introduced into the navy. The strongest prejudice then existed against new-fangled dynamos that always broke down, but the commander of the Devastation was one of the first to recognize the importance of electricity as a heat, light and motive force afloat.

The hardening and stiffening of character which is the usual result of a naval career was assisted in the case of the admiral by his Arctic experiences in 1875-76. No man during the impressionable period of his life can pass the best part of two years in the isolation of the Far North without learning something of the higher discipline and of that "righteousness" which the Japanese Imperial rescript declares "is strong and stable as a mountain; death lighter than the feather on a stork's wing."

A DIPLOMAT SAILOR

No man without great qualities could fill for a day the position of commander-in-chief of the premier fleet. It is probable that there are not more than ten or fifteen men who could be found to fill it at all. Though Sir William May's diplomacy has been of the greatest use to his country he also can be stern, stiff, ruthless, relentless and remorseless. On the foundation of the entente cordiale with France, Sir William May had difficult work entrusted to him. The municipality of Brest is Socialist, and some of its members apparently regarded independence and rudeness as convertible terms.

On succeeding in his present command Sir William had great difficulties to encounter. For war efficiency it is essential the training of the men should be continuous and week-end leave the exception. The result of too much Saturday and Monday liberty is that on Fridays men are half-hearted because they are thinking of their best girl and tomorrow and on Tuesdays some of them are still reflecting on joys that are over. The consequence is--that the main training of the fleet was apt to be condensed into Wednesdays and Thursdays. Sir William May has altered the system of leave-taking by a judicious consultation with the men on whose intelligence and good sense he knew he could rely.

Sir William May has been behind the scenes all his life, and is trusted by the men who count. He is one of the officers who has not always seen eye to eye with Sir John Fisher, to whom he has "stood up" on more than one occasion--notably when the captain of the Commonwealth, now Rear-Admiral Startin, got into trouble over the grounding of a repair ship at Tetuan.

Admiral May does not advertise--he never speaks publicly. During the gunnery agitation I believe that the Admiral thinks that his flagship, King Edward VII. was not fairly treated by the present writer, and the latter is of the same opinion as regards the ship. That, however, is an old story. A cordial handshake recently exchanged on the deck of the Dreadnought is a more pleasant memory.--A. W.

Adam's First Wife

According to Talmudic tradition Adam's first wife was not Eve but Lilith. The image of this mythical woman had a peculiar fascination for the poet-artist, Rossetti, who weaved around it some of his mystically sensuous conceptions of women. The origin of the Lilith fable may be traced to the three Assyrian demons, Lulu, Lilith, and Ardat Lilith. The name "Lilith" stands for a female demon. Lilith has also been described as a goddess of the night, and is said to have been worshipped by the Jewish exiles in Babylon. Others call her the demon of the storm, and in Isaiah she figures as a screech owl. "Lilith" would seem to be suggested by the Hebrew word "layil" (night). In post-Biblical literature three classes of demons are mentioned, viz., spirits, devils, and "lilita." The spirits have neither body nor form, the devils are in complete human shape, and the lilita are also in human shape, but with wings. Adam is said to have procreated all the spirits while he was under a spell and Eve is said to have supplied demons and male spirits for 130 years. Again Lilith is described as a long haired, seductive woman; also the Queen of Zemaragd; she goes about at night fastening herself upon any one she finds sleeping alone in a room. Another writer makes her out as the "daughter of the dancer" and the leader of nocturnal myriads of demons. At length she became in the minds of the multitude, a night demon in the form of an owl carrying off children. She even appears as the Queen of Sheba. The talk about her being Adam's first wife is said to have been spread through Buxtorf's Lexicon Talmudicum. The Century Cyclopedia of Names says that Lilith is a Hebrew word, meaning "night monster," and describes her as follows:

"A demon that dwells in deserted places, mentioned in Isaiah xxiv, 16: in rabbinical literature depicted as a female roaming in the night, and especially dangerous to children and to women in childbirth. The demon is probably of Babylonian origin; its name occurs frequently in the incantations. The Talmudists say that the name of Adam's first wife was Lilith."

The Catty Girl

The catty girl is always telling you things "for your good"--at least. That she hurts you in the telling does not strike her, and she has a perfect knack of making other girls appear at their worst.

In talking to a man she never lets a chance slip of getting in a disagreeable little dig at other girls.

If she only knew how men dislike her for doing so she might learn wisdom. A wise woman will ever defend her own sex. She will contradict every bit of scandal she consistently can. If she can't contradict it she will keep silent on the subject, and do her best to keep it from spreading.

Above all things, a woman should strive to live so that men may say of her "Thou art the dwelling-place of Love and Peace."

Nightingale.--A most fortunate dream denoting a wealthy marriage. Your husband will be exceedingly kind, warm-hearted and affectionate, but more likely to show his love in actions than in words.

Thomas A. Edison's Moulded Houses

It will be remembered that two years ago Mr. Edison announced himself to be engaged upon the problem of moulding concrete houses in one piece. Since that time the Wizard has been experimenting and at last declares the problem solved, the project worked out in detail. Many different plans have been drawn, patterns have been made, and a number of miniature models cast. The moulds for a full sized house are now in process of manufacture, and in a few weeks it is expected the first dwelling house will be cast. Mr. Edison claims that with the new moulds it will be possible to construct a first class house at a cost of only twelve hundred dollars, and only fourteen days will be required to complete the work. Such a house as planned will be two storeys high, with attic and cellar, and have a ground floor of twenty-five by thirty feet. On the first floor will be a living room, 14 by 23 feet. The second floor will contain two bedrooms fourteen by fifteen each, a large hall and a bathroom. The attic will contain two bedrooms, ten by fifteen. The cellar extending under the whole house will include boiler, washhouse and coal bunker. The entire structure, walls, roof, floors, stairway, partitions, door frames and window frames. Will be cast in one piece. Even the laundry tubs, the bath room fixtures, the interior decorations and the ornamental panels will be included in the solid shell. It is even claimed that the surface left by the moulds will be smooth enough to require no further finish except tinting or paper. In the building of a house, four days will be taken up in erecting the moulds, six hours for the hardening of the concrete, and the structure will be ready for occupants within a fortnight. The greatest difficulty in connection with the whole scheme was the making of a genuine concrete sufficiently fluid to flow into and fill up all the intricacies of the moulds and yet preserve a consistent density throughout. But inventive genius has apparently triumphed over all this and the experimental trials have been in every way successful. The concrete is mixed in large rotary mixers and poured into tanks placed on top of the moulds. A number of delivery pipes will lead to various points in the roof, where the mixture will flow down and fill all parts of the mould from the basement to the roof; and the deed is done. The moulds are of course very expensive the cost of the total outfit, six sets, being fully $200,000, which makes it necessary for a firm with considerable capital to control the business. But if it proves the success anticipated, there will be little trouble in capitalizing the scheme, and even the workingman can then have a house of his own. The first test of moulding a first class house will be awaited with interest.

The Bachelor Tax

"Whenever the question of a tax on bachelors comes up, as it did again the other day," writes an unmarried Englishman in Truth, "one sees fresh evidence of the malignancy with which the married man regards his unmarried brother. The married man would have you believe that, while he is a paragon of unselfishness, the bachelor is selfishness incarnate. Men as a general rule marry for the same reason that bachelors remain single, namely, to please themselves. Very soon after the deed, however, the best of them begin to talk about splendid unselfishness, and girl at their unmarried friends. Not content with having home comforts, dinner ordered for them, and the delightful companionship of the one person whose society, presumably, they ardently desired, they grudge the bachelor his loneliness or the society of club bores. It is incomprehensible. Take such a case as very often happens. Two men are in love with a very charming girl. One lucky dog wins her, and they live happily ever after. Why should the wretched fellow who has failed to win her be savagely taxed for his misfortune? Compensation is what he needs, not taxation. It is the bachelor who is really unselfish."

A Business Parable.

Once a farmer had 1800 bushels of wheat which he sold not to a single merchant but to 1800 different dealers a bushel each. A few of them paid him in cash but far the greater number said it was not convenient then—they would pay later.

A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "My 1800 bushels of grain should have kept me in affluence until another crop is raised, but I have parted with the grain and have instead a vast number of account small and scattered that I cannot get round and collect fast enough to pay expenses." So he posted up a small notice and asked all those who owed him to pay him quickly. But few came. The rest said "Mine is only a small matter and I will pay one of these days," forgetting that though each account was small when all were put together they meant a very large sum to the man. Things went on thus.—The man got to feeling so badly that he fell out of bed and awoke, and running to his granary found his 1800 bushels of wheat still safe there.—He had only been dreaming.

MORAL

The next day the man went to the publisher of this paper and said "Here is the pay for your paper and when next next years subscription is due you can depend on me to pay it promptly.—I stood in the position of an editor last night and know how it feels to have one's honestly earned money scattered all over the country in small accounts.—We read the business parable and hope all who take GREETINGS will do the same.

THE FIRST DAY.

The best day to enter school is on the first day of the school year; the best time to leave is on the last day of the last term of the school year. First year pupils, that is, pupils who are entering school for the first time after reaching six years of age, should not enter after the first month of any term is past. The interruption and hindrance to the rest of the pupils of this grade is more than any considerate parent ought to subject his child to. If your child does not become of school age (six years old) till after the first month of the term is past, or if you do not get ready to send him the first month, keep him out till the beginning of the next term.

COME HALF WAY.

There is enough of every thing in the world to give everybody all that he wants. If you do not get your share, whether it be marbles, money or friends it is because you do not go after it! Staying in your corner and looking out longingly is not sufficient, no matter how worthy you may be. Setting up a lightning rod is a small job, but waiting for something to hit it will surely turn your hair gray, while the golden hours freighted with good things for you rush on and away through the door of eternity from which you never recall them! This is your call to come half way!—Halifax Herald.

A SPLENDID TRIUMPH.

Never in the history of the invincible Anglo-Saxon race has it achieved a more splendid triumph than in the organization of the South African Republic, where Boer and Briton, so lately face to face in arms, are fused a common citizenship under a government that establishes equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

The leader of this new nation is Louis Botha, whose ancestors fought at Rochelle and underwent banishment rather than lose religious liberties or surrender civil liberty to Richelieu. Gen. Botha was a brave soldier in the late war, and fought for the lost cause of the Boers, but he is now premier of a nation—under the Union Jack, indeed, but a greater nation than Orange Free State and the Transvaal had hope of becoming in a century.

When England fought in American colonies it was for an idea contrary to all the traditions of the Anglo-Saxon race and in defiance of all the principles of the British constitution. The victory of Washington was as much a blessing to England as it was to America, for it taught King, Lords and Commons how to govern provinces. But for the triumph of Yorktown, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa would not be loyal Republics they are today.

As for the Boer war, it had to be won or the British Empire had to dissolve. It was not a rebellion, but both Boer and Britain were fighting for national existence, and as in all such struggles, the stronger triumphed in the end; but the Boer is freer than ever before and a full partner in that Anglo-Saxon liberty that England has planted in the four quarters of the earth. In a little while the races will prove socially, and it will be easy for all the free citizens of the republic to trace their ancestry back to both Boer and Briton. What a pity it is that Yank and rebel did not fraternize as rapidly after their unpleasantness!—Washington Post.

PRINCIPLE INVOLVED

The battle that is now on between the Dominion Coal Company and a portion of its men is by no means an ordinary struggle for better terms. The principle involved is really nationalism vs. internationalism in labor organizations.

BY THE WAY

Watch us grow.
Any change must be for the better.

The man who limits himself to hoping for the best has an everlasting job.

The more we hear of the great output of coal, the worse the situation grows.

Thaw loses and appeals again. The technicalities of law make a chain well nigh eternal as hope itself.

Any further increase of taxes, should be accompanied by a marked decrease in the town's running expenses.

The man who can open a bottle without a cork screw is hailed as a hero, but his triumph is nothing compared with the man who can open a window in a car, on some of our trains.

Do something to attract new industries to the town. Don't act like an old lady living comfortably on a competence, with the household gods of her ancestors around her.

A recent divorce decree in a Georgia court reads, in part, as follows: It is ordered, adjudged, and decreed that a total divorce be granted plaintiff, Mrs. Lola Wallace, and that her disabilities be and the same are hereby removed, and she is allowed to marry again, but she is cautioned to be particular as to the second marriage and make no mistake.

I have been in the juvenile court nearly ten years, and in that time I have had to deal with thousands and thousands of boys who have disgraced themselves and their parents, and who have brought sorrow and misery into their lives; and I do not know of any one habit that is more responsible for the troubles of these boys than the vile cigarette habit.—Judge Lindsay.

There is hardly a church in the country that has not got women in it—yes, and men, too,—who every chance they get steal from the government, smuggle goods across the line without paying duty on it. All these people hold up their hands in horror if a man beats a horse in a horse race or drinks a glass of beer on a hot day, but lose no opportunity themselves to steal something when no one is looking or smuggle something every time the customs officer is looking the other way, or beat a neighbor in a business deal if they can do so by hook or by crook.—Grimby Independent.

An Excursion

In Shut Eye Town the lights are low
And sweet the songs, for baby's ear,
The list'ning angels come and go,
For motherhood is brooding near,
In mother's arms she cuddles down
And with a fist in every eye
She sees the streets of Shut Eye Town
Before her wearied vision lie.

The baby's crept to mother's breast
And nestled there her yellow head,
While sleepy winds blow from the west
And good nights are all softly said
Her eyelids weighed with coming sleep,
Her tangled hair all tumbled down
With love the mother's voice is deep,
The baby goes to Shut Eye Town.

The shadows softly fall around
And dimples from sly corners peep.
In shoulder, cheek and chin they're found.

When Flatter-Budget falls asleep,
When drowsy drums begin to beat
Then gently baby cuddles down,
With peaceful hands and quiet feet—
For she has gone to Shut Eye Town.

Praying under difficulties.—An old man in Georgia named Jack Baldwin, having lost his hat in an old dry well one day hitched a rope to a stump and let himself down. A picked wag named Neal came along just then, and, detaching a bell from Baldwin's old blind horse approached the well, and began to ring-a-ling.

Jack thought the old horse was coming and said: "Hang the old blind horse! He's coming this way sure, he ain't got no more sense than to fall on me. Whoa, Ball!"

The sound came closer.
"Great Jerusalem! The old blind fool will be right on top of me in a minute! Whoa, Ball! Whoa, haw Ball!"

Neal kicked a little dirt on Jack's head and Jack began to pray:
"O, Lord, have mercy on—whoa—Ball!—poor sinner—I'm gone now! Whoa, Ball! Just then in fell more dirt.
"O, Lord, if you ever intend to do anything for me—back, Ball! Whoa. You know I was baptized in Smith's milldam—whoo Ball! Ho, up! Murder! What! Neal could hold no longer and shouted a laugh which might have been heard two miles, which was about as far as Jack chased him when he got out.

Thirty thousand dollars is the revenue derived from the blueberry barrens, in Washington County, Me., each season. Most of the product is turned over to the canning factories.

A sale of boots and shoes is now going on at H. McGrattan & Sons that should attract the attention of all shoe buyers. The whole stock is going at greatly reduced prices. Watch their advertisement next week.

Fish continue plentiful at the factories, and the most of them are in operation day and night. Large shipments are being made west and south, and many are thus early being stored in cellars about the city.—Sentinel.

A saw mill is to be erected and put in operation this fall at Saw River near the bridge, on the line of railway. Mr. L. B. Knight of Masquebush, will have supervision over the work, in the interests of the Inglewood Pulp Co.

There is talk of soliciting funds to provide water for the residents of the lower end of the town. It has also been suggested that a petition be circulated, and presented to the council, in which case the vote taken might be reconsidered, and the matter opened up again with perhaps favorable results.

The Campbell picnic on the 12th inst. was the most successful held in years. The day was ideal, the crowd large and the affair ably managed by a competent staff of officials. An interesting program of sports was carried out. In the base ball game the home team won from the Camp Utopia nine by a large margin. A grand ball in the evening brought the festivities to a close.

Some of the motor boat people complain of the logs in the river obstructing the passage to the lake. It is quite a problem to always have the river clear, but the Company claim they are making every effort to meet the wishes of those going back and forth, and if the passage has been blocked at times it was because of insurmountable difficulties.

An excursion from Dennyville came up river Wednesday on the Stmr. Viking. The excursionists spent a few hours here taking in the places of interest, leaving for home in the evening. The Dennyville band, a young organization, played a number of selections to the delight of a large crowd that had assembled on the wharf.

The Presbyterian Sunday school picnic was held at Young's bridge Wednesday and proved a very enjoyable affair. There was a large attendance of the young folks who were well looked after by those in charge. The dinner was an important feature, and the youngsters demonstrated their ability to take care of the abundance of good things put before them. Tom O'Brien, Eddie Bassen, Eric Anderson and Joe Bullock were the prize winners in the foot races.

H. McGrattan & Sons will furnish the granite trimmings for the Bank of New Brunswick, now building at Fredericton. The job is moulded and ten cut. They will also furnish the columns for the new Canadian Bank of Commerce at Halifax. This firm have erected a handsome red granite monument on Michael Doyle's lot in the old Catholic burial ground. The design is boulder style, with polished scroll and roll, and the workmanship is of a high grade. The best dealers in the country are handling the work of this company, and their efforts are meeting with substantial success, as they are keeping pace with the demands of the trade.

Another beautiful stone has been placed in the lot of the late Samuel Chapman. At the Rouchville cemetery the firm has placed in position a handsome stone in the lot where the remains of the late James McLeod and his wife, Olive rest.—Kings Co. Record.

Better Stoking.
It is satisfactory to learn that the railway companies are bringing pressure to bear on their firemen to make them improve their methods of stoking. It has long been manifest enough to the ordinary observer that the companies are wasting fuel by sending it as unconsumed carbon out through their smokestacks to destroy the appearance of everything near the engines. Good stoking will pay for itself, and this is just as true of stationary engines as it is of locomotives—Toronto Globe.

Stop That Cold
To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure relief for Prevention. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but take early as the most effective remedy, or best of these early colds. That's surely better. Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no Astringent, nothing alarming. Safe for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Preventics may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, slight or day. Heroin probably has Preventics' greatest efficiency. There is no Success for the Man
Who vacillates.
Who is faint-hearted.
Who shirks responsibility.
Who never dares to take risks.
Who thinks fate is against him.
Who is discouraged by reverses.
Who does not believe in himself.
Who expects nothing but failure.
Who is always belittling himself.
Who is always anticipating trouble.
Who waits for something to turn up.
Who complains that he never had a chance.
Who is constantly grumbling about his work.
Who never puts his heart to anything he does.
Who blames circumstances or other people for his failure.
Who can do a poor day's work without a protest from his conscience.
Who assumes the attitude of a victim whom everybody is bent on "doing."
Who expects to eliminate from his work everything that is disagreeable or distasteful.
Who is forever wishing that he were doing something else instead of the thing he is doing.
Who clings tenaciously to old ideas and old ways of doing things and is a slave of precedent.
Who shuts himself within his own little life so completely that he cannot take interest in anything outside of it.
Who thinks the times are always out of joint, and that he was not born at the right moment, or in the right place.—Success Magazine.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or falling Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain... A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Activity of Customs.
It is a good thing, from an ethical point of view to make successful smuggling impossible. Americans of good repute, there is no reason to believe, have frequently been smugglers on a small scale. To cheat the Federal Government out of duties has seemed to them no crime. Yet it is as bad as stealing, and indeed, is precisely stealing. The Custom House effectively managed, so as to secure just punishment of smuggling of all kinds, deserves the respect of all law-abiding citizens.—New York Times.

When She Wears the Ring.
Never is a girl's life more hedged around by ceremonial than at the time when she announces her engagement. The most insistent of all the people regarding her conduct is that she shall wait for the action of her fiancé's family before making any overtures of friendship in their direction.
The overtures must all come from the man's mother. As a rule, she gives some form of entertainment in honor of her son's future bride.
