BLAZES AT HOME .- About half past eleven on Sunday, there was an alarm of and other lumber, which is loaded on the fire, the roof of Geo. E. Fenety's residence being in flames. The roof was burned pretty badly. The fire appeared to be the effect of a spark from an adjacen t chimney. Damage small. Colin Campbell's residence, Brunswick street, also stated out the firemen about two o'clock, but it was only the chimney that was on fire. No damage.

ON THE RIVER .- There was great speeding during the first of the week on the river, anything and everything in the shape of Fredericton would be the better of several horseflesh being initiated. NABBOW ESCAPE .- Dudley Bubar, of Marysville, while working in the mill there on Saturday last had a narrow escape. He was grinding saws, using an emery wheel, when it broke, a piece striking him on the breast knocking against the side of the shop. These wheels are as heavy as iron and revolve at a speed which would if directed in a straight line carry them a mile in twenty seconds. He is pretty sore but no bones are broken.

MILL BURNED .- There appears to be something peculiarly wrong with the way the Stanley mills are constructed. The San-son brows have just got their new mill rebuilt after the fire and now Aaron Hay's mill at Williamsburg is burned. The fire took place on Saturday night last. This mill though small was a good one, having a shingle machine and rotary. It was a great benefit to the community and will be rebuilt at once. Insured at $1500 in American companies.

FOR THE BLIND .- The public meeting to be held in city hall on Wednesday evening of next week in the interests of the blind of New Brunswick will doubtless be largely attended. #### GOOD ENOUGH.

Dear boys, I want to give you A motto safe and good : Twill make your life successful If you heed it as you should, Obey it in the letter -Don't say a thing is "good enough" Till it can be no better.

And whether at your lessons, Or at daily work, Don't be a half-way dabbler -Don't slip and slide and shirk. And think it doesn't matter That such talk is "trash" and "stuff" For until your task is perfect It is never "Good enough."

If your work is in the school-room, Make every lesson tell; No matter what you mean to be, Build your foundation well. Every knotty point and problem That you bravely master now Will increase your skill to labor With the pen or with the plow

If you sweep a store or stable, Be sure you go behind Every box and bale and counter : It will pay, you'll always find, To be careful, patient, thorough Though the work be hard and rough And when you've done your very best, 'Twill then be "good enough."

So you'd better take my motto, If you ever mean to work To any station higher Than a stable boy or clerk. It will make you independent, It will make you no man's debtor. They never say "It's good enough" Till it can be no better.

CHAPTER XIX.

"Gentlemen of the jury: I were a blot upon a noble profession, a disgrace to honorable manhood, and a monster in my own estimation, if I could approach the fatal Finis of this melancholy trial, without painful emotions of profound regret, that the solemn responsibility of my official position makes me the reluctant bearer of the last stern message uttered by retributive justice. How infinitely more enduty of the Amicus Curice, my gallant friend and quondam colleague, who in voluntary defence has so ingeniously, eloquently and nobly led a forlorn hope, that he knew was already irretrievably lost? Desperate, indeed, must he deem that cause for which he battles so valiantly, when dire extremity goads him to lift a rebellious and unfilial voice against the provisions of his foster-mother, criminal jurisprudence, in whose service he won the brilliant distinction and crown of laurel that excite the admiration and envy of a large family of his less fortunate foster-brothers. I honor his heroism, applaud his chivalrous zeal, and wish that I stood in his place; but not mine the privilege of mounting the white horse, and waving the red flag of the 'Lactees.' Dedicated to the mournful rites of justice, I have laid an iron hand on the quivering lips of pity, that cried to me like the voice of one of my own little ones; and very sorrowfully, at the command of conscience reason, and my official duty, I obey the mandate to ring down the black curtain on a terrible tragedy, feeling like Dante, when he confronted the doomed -'And to part I come, where no light shines. So clearly and ably has my distinguished associate, Mr. Wolverton presented all the legal points bearing upon the nature and value of the proof, submitted for your examinations, that any attempt to buttress his powerful argument were an unpardonable reflection upon your intelligence, and his skill; and I shall confine my last effort in behalf of justice, to a brief analysis and comparison of the hypothesis of the defence, with the verified result of the prosecution "Beautiful and sparkling as the frail glass of Murano, and equally as thin, as treacherously brittle, is the theory so skilfully manufactured in behalf of the accused; and so adroitly exhibited that the ingenious facets catch every possible gleam, and for a moment almost dazzle the eyes of the beholder.
