The Earl's Son;

OR TWO HEARTS UNITED

CHAPTER XXXI.
"You've been drinking again, you beast!" said Talbot, between his teeth. "You are right; you are not fit to accompany me. Go, get out of my sight! I'll find some means of punishing you!"
Gibbon spat on the ground and looked before him as if he had not heard his dismissal.
"Yes, I'm going to tell them all about it."
"All about what?" demanded Talbot, surprised into the question by the man's audacity.
"The murder," said Gibbon, as coolly as before.
Talbot did not start, was not, indeed, startled.
"What do you know about it?" he said, with a kind of impatient contempt. "What have you got into your head, you besotted fool?"
"I know all about it," said Gibbon, turning his eyes on his master for the first time. "Why, I was there all the time."
Talbot's hands closed on the edge of the coping, and the blue sky seemed to him to turn a blood red.
"You—were—" He could say no more, for his tongue seemed to have thickened and filled his mouth.
Gibbon nodded.
"Yes," he said, with a twist of the lips that was a hideous travesty of a smile. "I followed you that night. I thought you were up to something, Mr. Talbot. I watched you that evening, as I've watched you often and often before. Oh, I know what you keep in the safe in your room in Charlotte Mansions! I've heard you go out when you thought I was asleep, and followed you. I know all the places you go to for your card-playing and roulette. But that's of no consequence now; we've got bigger fish to fry. I knew you were up to something by the way you turned up your collar and slouched your hat over your eyes. I thought you were going to meet some girl, perhaps. I little thought of the game you'd got in hand."
He paused a moment or two and spat again. Talbot uttered no word—his tongue was still absurdly large for his mouth—and Gibbon went on: "I shadowed you to where the man was sitting in the wood, and I heard and saw everything that passed. I was so near to you, lying there in the bracken, that you might have heard me breathing if you hadn't been so—busy. And that's what I'm going to tell his lordship, the earl, and the police, if you'd listened to me the other day when I asked for the money—not half enough, Mr. Talbot, sir, not half enough—if you'd treated me like a man instead of a dog, I'd have held my tongue, and you'd have been safe; for they say the evidence was strong enough to hang that young gentleman—I mean Lord Denby; but you was a fool. You've always treated me as if I was the dirt beneath your feet—worse! But I'm thinking it's my turn now, Mr. Talbot!"

The man's garrulity had given Talbot time to recover from the shock, to collect his scattered senses. He laughed scornfully.
"My good man, you talk like an idiot who has just awakened from a dream—nightmare! And you thought to frighten me! BBah! Who do you think would believe this cock-and-bull story invented by a jail-bird, a convict, who happened to hear his master a grudge?"
Gibbon appeared unmoved.
"That's right enough," he said; "but I've got some evidence. There was the clothes you told me to brush—I've kept them—they're all over mould and moss—"
"I fell into a ditch," said Talbot, quickly, contemptuously. "You might have worn them yourself. Ah, you see!"
Gibbon eyed him with a reflection of the contempt in Talbot's eyes.
"Oh, stow it!" he said, scornfully. "I've got the pocket-book with the certificates!"
Talbot's face grew white and his eyes expanded.
Gibbon nodded.
"Yes. That touches you, Mr. Talbot, doesn't it? I got it out of the man's pocket while you went for the spade. Remember?"
Talbot remembered: was there any detail of that hideous deed that did not haunt him perpetually?
"I've got 'em here, sir," said Gibbon, striking his breast coat-pocket. "They'll help the young gentleman get his rights as well as hang you, Mr. Denby."
Talbot stood as if turned to stone; then suddenly he said:
"My man you have overreached yourself! Do you know—but of course you do not—that if I committed—if I—his tongue bothered him again—"If I was guilty, you, too, are in danger. You concealed the thing; you are, as they call it, an accessory after the fact."
Gibbon moved his lips into a smile.
"Yes; I know," he said, coolly; "but I'm going to make my bargain with his lordship, the earl, and the police. I'm going to turn King's evidence: ever heard of that, Mr. Talbot? Oh, I may be a dog, and a jail-bird, but I'm not so ignorant as you think!"
As he spoke he seated himself on the edge of the low wall and swung his legs, and eyed his master with an air of gloating triumph.
Talbot looked over the man's head with an absent gaze, with eyes that saw nothing but—but what? Was it a scaffold, a tall figure, hideously like himself, with a white cap drawn over the face? He shuddered and passed his hand over his eyes.
"See here, Gibbon," he said, in a low voice. "You have been a faithful servant to me—"
"You bound, you drunken beast, you jail-bird," murmured Gibbon, his eyes lighting up vindictively.
—"A faithful servant, and I do not think you would do me an injury," Gibbon drew his thin lips into a grin.
"The least injury I would do you is to hang you," he said. "And I will."
"I think not!" said Talbot. "You are not such a fool as to tell this story, produce that pocket-book when, by holding your tongue—just holding your tongue, as you have done—and giving me the book, you can earn a couple of thousand pounds."

To his amazement, his terror, Gibbon laughed.
"Too late!" he said, coolly; "you weren't in court to the end—they told me how you bolted—and didn't hear Miss Veronica swear that she saw you that night; you don't know that Mr. Selby—ah, he's a sharp 'un, he is!—has got his suspicions."
While he had been speaking, slowly, tauntingly, as if he were enjoying every word as he sent it home, Talbot's quick brain was working.
And this was the line it was taking, with that swiftness, that marvellous precision which is as miraculous as the coming of spring, the growth of a grain of corn, the flowering of the daisy. The man, this man-fiend who was torturing him, was in the possession of the pocket-book. If he were found—dead, say—with that book in his pocket, who would doubt that he was the murderer? Still more swiftly, acutely, the trained brain worked.
The man was sitting on the wall: if he fell—Talbot could say that the man had confessed the murder, had tried to make terms, that he, Talbot struggled with him.
With a low cry, the guttural cry of a tiger springing on his prey, Talbot flung himself on him. But quick as the attack had been, Gibbon had been warned by the murderous flash of the eyes, and he stiffened himself and flinging out his arms threw them round Talbot. But he, Gibbon, had been taken at a disadvantage and he could only manage, with every bit of his strength exerted, to keep his back straight; he could not get his feet to the ground.
Talbot seized the advantage and pressed with all his force until Gibbon's back was nearly broken by the terrible strain. Then, with the suddenness born of despair, Gibbon holstered his assailant on to a level with himself. They swayed for a moment—a terrible moment—on the top of the wall, then, with an awful cry which seemed to rise from both lips at the same time, they fell over, locked in each other's arms, to the peaceful valley beneath.

But prepare yourself for a shock. Miss Veronica, I think, indeed I am nearly sure, that I have found the murderer—criminal."
Veronica sank into a chair, and Mr. Saintsbury and Burchett, who had entered the room, exclaimed.
Mr. Selby nodded.
"Yes; in my opinion the man who killed James Outway was—Miss Veronica, I have warned you; you will be calm? Is"—his voice dropped—"Mr. Talbot Denby!"
Notwithstanding the warning, Veronica started, and a cry of horror and incredulity escaped her.
"Talbot!" she said. "Oh, no, no! It is impossible!"
"Nothing is so possible as the impossible," he said; "nothing is so certain to occur as the unexpected. That is a truism which is brought home to us lawyers every day in the week. Listen. My suspicions were first roused by the fact that Mr. Denby had been out in the woods that night, and that he had—denied it."
"He wanted to avoid being mixed up with the case," murmured Veronica. "Besides, what motive could Talbot Denby have in—killing the man? What connection was there between them?"
"The first question I can't answer definitely, though I can give a tolerable guess; the other I can. Look at this." He took a silver match-box from his pocket. "If you remember, this was found on the body. At the time one thought anything about it. It is true that it has the Denby crest; but the man might have picked it up or stolen it."
"Yes, yes!" she assented, eagerly.
"Oh, yes!"
"Yes; but on the other hand, it may have been given him by Mr. Talbot Denby. Anyway, Groser, to whom I showed it just now, says that he noticed it in Outway's hand the day of the murder, and that he had not seen it in his possession before then; and he could not have failed to observe it if Outway had possessed it, used it. Now, there is the connection between the two. It is a small, almost invisible link, but it is a link, and I think I can construct the rest of the drama from it."

Annual Outing of Ropewalk Employees. The employees of the Colonial Cordage Co. and their lady friends held their annual outing yesterday under ideal weather conditions, and the affair proved to be one of the most enjoyable of its kind held in recent years. At 10 o'clock a special train left the station for the "Octagon" conveying about 150 persons on pleasure bent. Upon arrival at the grounds a series of games was started by the committee in charge of the outing and continued until dinner was served. After dinner games were again indulged in, and by the evening train some thirty guests arrived to take part in the festivities. At 7.30 p.m. all sat down to a sumptuous supper which was presided over by Mr. J. H. Monroe, Managing Director of the Company. After tea Hon. John Anderson and Mr. A. Hiscock on behalf of the guests made congratulatory references to the management to which Mr. Monroe replied in a pleasing manner. Upon resuming his seat he was cheered to the echo. Following the supper an interesting programme of dances was gone through, the music being furnished by the Myron O'Grady orchestra. The outing committee of management were: Messrs. N. Murphy, Chairman, T. Pike, Secretary, with E. Pike, J. Lundrigan, J. Kearney and W. Duff to whom congratulations are due for the success of the day's outing. Mr. James Vey was present and took several photos. Dancing was kept up until an early hour this morning, and return to the city was made by special train at 3 a.m.

Cure Children's Colds By External Treatment. Mothers Will Find Nothing so Speedy and Reliable as Old-Time "Nerviline". It's really a shame to upset a young child's stomach by internal dosing, when external treatment will so promptly break up a cold. When your boy comes in after play with his feet soaking wet, his throat hoarse and sore, his little chest tight and congested, just apply Nerviline. Give him a vigorous rubbing over his throat, and put lots of Nerviline on his chest and rub it right in. To make Nerviline penetrate more quickly cover his chest and throat with a hot fannel bandage. This treatment WON'T fail. Your boys will be feeling better in half an hour, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have ward offed perhaps a cold, or gripe, or illness that might have laid him up. Nerviline is mighty good for preventing colds and for breaking up a bad one, too. For general family use it cures all sorts of external aches and pains—you simply can't beat it. Try it for earache, toothache, neuralgia, sciatica, lame back, rheumatism, or lumbago. Wherever there is congestion, inflammation or pain in the joints or muscles, Nerviline will cure mighty quick. The large 50c. family size bottle is so economical, so useful, it should be in every home. There is also a small 25c. size. Dealers anywhere sell Nerviline.

The Panama Canal And a Two Reel Drama To-Day's Features. The public of St. John's who have read or heard a great deal about the great canal that has joined the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic, but who have never had the opportunity to visit the wonderful feat of workmanship will be enabled to do so to-day by travelling with the moving picture man through the great connecting link. The picture from "Ocean to Ocean" describes in detail the entrance to the artificial river together with the great locks and the passage of a large steamer from one side to the other. The headliner of the features is the two reel production: "For the Man she Loved," by the Eclair Company. "Percy Needed a Rest," is the comedy worth while seeing, an I. M. P. laugh producer. Miss Alice Clark, prima donna, sings the ballad: "Just a Little Love." The feature for Wednesday and Thursday is a comedy: "A Possibility," a two reel retrospect of what man is coming to. Great Display of Patriotism AT THE NICKEL. Patriotism was at fever heat at the Nickel Theatre last evening. Never before in the history of this popular theatre was there such demonstrations of British feelings as last night. The program had been specially arranged for the occasion, and it made a great hit with all who saw it. His Majesty the King was seen reviewing the mighty British Fleet at Spithead, and also at the crowning of the colors in honour of His Birthday. Every time His Majesty appeared the audience applauded and cheered in the most enthusiastic manner. It was a wonderful display of patriotism. When the picture of Emperor Willian was presented, he was hissed. Mr. De Witt Cairns rendered the "Admiral's Broom." It is a patriotic song, just suited to the occasion and all who heard it were charmed. The other pictures were also of a high class. This evening the programme will be repeated. To-morrow the great social drama: "The Whimsical Threads of Destiny."

Fads and Fashions. In Paris fur is being worn on lace hats—and the effect is not odd, but delightful. Small knitted "bag caps" of silk ending in a long tassel are in great favor for sports. Silver and gold embroidered lace and tulle trimmed with fur and velvet are already seen. Although the new skirts are much fuller the materials are clinging and often transparent. Light colored taffeta dresses flounced with lace are appropriate for garden party wear. The cotton crepes and seersuckers used for children's dresses permit a great economy in laundry work. The vogue of garish and eccentric colors is about over, to judge by the future for black and dark colors. English eyelet embroidery is revived for lingerie dresses. Usually they have colored silk slips below.

In Memoriam. It is no mere form of words to say that the home of Patrick and Margaret Hayes is to-day the saddest home in Newfoundland, for on the 2nd inst. the Angel of Death visited their once happy circle and claimed for its victim Edward Joseph, their only and idolized son. He was just in the bloom of manhood, he had just reached the age of 20 years. From the youngest person to the oldest in Salmonier Edward was a favourite for he always had a word of joke and cheer. He was never sick or delicate until October last, he had a little cold and cough but in a few days he was as well as ever except the cough remained with him. When anyone would speak to him of it he would say: "it's great company, that's all." He never absent himself from dances and other amusements during the winter, until March 1st, when he was taken very ill. Very Rev. Wm. O'Flaherty was called as a doctor but in spite of all medical aid it made clear that Edward had become the victim of the White Plague. Every week during his long illness Very Rev. Father O'Flaherty visited him and used to sit by his bedside and pour forth to him words of consolation and cheer. During five long months he suffered with patience without a murmur of complaint; he would only say: "I'm satisfied, God's Holy Will be done." His funeral took place from his home on Wednesday, at 7.30, and it was very largely attended. After Requim Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father O'Flaherty, his remains were peacefully laid to rest in St. Joseph's Cemetery where it will await the day of glorious resurrection. He leaves to mourn a father, mother and two sisters—Mrs. Kelly, of East Boston, and Miss Mary Hayes, Catholic Teacher, North Harbor. To these and other relatives we extend our sincerest sympathy. Call the Legislature.

Newfoundland is in a difficult position at the present time which calls for calm, thoughtful and united action. It arises largely from the fact that Newfoundland must sell abroad what she produces and must buy abroad largely what clothes and feeds her. Her purchasing power arises in the main from the fish she sells to Mediterranean countries and to Brazil. In spite of the shortage in the fishery, there is fish for both centres, but in order to get it there, the shippers have to take their chances of full loss by capture of vessel and cargo, or pay a heavy premium for war risks. We hear that the risks are high here, in spite of the comparatively lower risks quoted on the other side, and the intervention of the British Government to assume part of the risk themselves. It is not clear yet what that intervention means or could mean to us. It is the clear duty of the Government and the trade to investigate and to find out how Newfoundland shipping can take advantage of the scheme which is being arranged by the British Government. There are three German cruisers, comparatively small and of no great gun power, on the Atlantic. One of them is the Karlsruhe, which was yesterday reported coaling at Porto Rico. This steamer is a direct menace to our fish carries making for Brazil, and increases the risk of the venture, and consequently the amount of the premium. The three German cruisers are said to be very fast, being given a speed of 27 knots, by the Montreal Star. Then again there appears to be a lack of knowledge as to war conditions in the Mediterranean. The large, powerful and fast German cruiser Goeben, and the Breslau were at large. The Austrian fleet is also intact. The last news we have is that the German cruisers are making for the Adriatic to join the Austrian fleet, and the Austrians are going south to meet them. Until these ships are sunk or captured or bottled up, the risk of capture for British merchantmen in the Mediterranean will be great, and war premiums will be high in those waters. All this emphasizes the importance of the foregoing remarks of any effort being made to bring Newfoundland shipping under the British Government scheme. Outside of these direct war risks, the indirect effect of the great war on finance is having its effect in Newfoundland trade. The main trouble is not the risk of capture and the attendant war premiums, but the mistrust about being paid for fish which reaches the market. That mistrust is having a disastrous effect on credit, and increases the difficulty of obtaining advances on fish and the discounting of time bills. For these reasons it appears to us highly desirable and indeed necessary, that the Legislature should meet to provide the Government with such legislation as may be needed to enable them the better to cope with a difficult situation, and to insure the trade and commerce of Newfoundland, and to protect the public so far as possible, against unscrupulous speculators, if such there be, who might take advantage of the situation, to deal hardly with the buying public.

For Home and King

We direct attention to a meeting which will be held in the Armoury of the Church Lads' Brigade, Harvey Road, to-morrow night for the purpose of considering the question of enlisting citizens for the land service abroad in the war in which we are engaged. His Excellency the Governor will occupy the chair. The Empire is in the grip of a struggle for its very existence and it behoves all good citizens to lend their aid to do what in them lies and help in some capacity their King and Country.

War Notes.

The first detachment of men to man the Niobe left Toronto yesterday for Halifax. The detachment consisted principally of first-class stokers.

An I. C. R. man guarding the railway bridge shot and killed a trespasser below Quebec. An accident occurred last night at Mink Lake, near Lake Bouchelle, when an engine on the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway fell through a burned bridge, resulting in the death of three men. Some hint the bridge had been burned by criminals. Officials are very reticent.

United States Customs officials went out in the Revenue Cutter Calumet, at New York, yesterday, and sealed up the wireless apparatus of vessels in the harbor flying foreign flag. This action follows the censorship placed upon wireless stations along the coast to enforce the neutrality of the United States.

A SECOND ARMY.

LONDON, To-day. The rush of recruits joining the British fighting force of the territorial continues. Kitchener says in his appeal to Lord Lieutenants of the counties for 100,000 more regulars. "This is not ordinary appeal from an army for recruits, but the formation of a second army. The Prince of Wales quietly left London to-day for the First Life Guards barracks at Brentwood, in Essex.

EMPLOYERS PATRIOTIC.

LONDON, To-day. The best class of English employers are giving full weekly wages during the absence of employers on foreign service; others are giving half pay with a promise of maintenance for wives and children. "Splendid, this is the way to win". Over two hundred motor cyclists volunteered on Saturday and Sunday.

LIEGE FORTS INTACT.

BRUSSELS, To-day. The commander of the forts at Liege, according to an official announcement, reports all the forts intact. The soldiers manning them are in fine health and spirits and amply supplied with provisions and munitions. There is no cause for alarm, the population of Liege remain calm. The official view is that the situation is quite satisfactory. All approaches to Brussels are well guarded to prevent anything in the nature of surprise from reconnoitering parties. German cavalry and small bodies of Uhlans have been signalled all directions. Generally they had lost their bearings and surrendered immediately on being challenged.

HALIFAX AND ST. LAWRENCE CLOSED.

OTTAWA, To-day. Under directions from Naval department all shipping on the St. Lawrence route with the exception of the course of incoming vessels was stopped yesterday, pending further instructions. The stopping of sailing from Atlantic coast has been followed by a similar temporary cessation of departures from Pacific coast, pending the location and either the sinking or capture of the four German cruisers, three on the Atlantic and one on the Pacific, known to be hovering on about, looking for prizes of war. Addition mines have been placed on St. Lawrence and at the entrances of the harbor of Halifax and Vancouver, the location of these mines is of course known only to the naval department. That is another reason why it is considered unwise for the present at least to allow vessels to leave. Special provisions will be made for piloting incoming vessels so as to avoid danger from submerged mines there.

FRENCH INVADE ALSACE

Big Fight in the Vosges — Liege Forts Still Hold Out — Fight in the Air — Belgian Aeroplanes Wipe Out German Airships.

A NEW SPIRIT IN FRANCE.
Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Aug. 10. England begins the second week of her fight for life with high courage. The first week closed with success beyond almost sanguine hopes. Germany fell ignominiously to secure that swift and crushing opening triumph upon which she counted. The Triple Alliance crumbled into fragments at the first touch, and neither Austria nor Italy are yet at war with either England or France. Italy flatly refuses to abandon her neutrality. Austria is now believed to have sent two army corps to replace the decimated German army corps, but the rapid advance of French troops into Alsace is taken to indicate that the French army is much better prepared than was anticipated. The mere fact that France is able to strike a blow for the lost provinces has a most inspiring influence in France. To-day's Paris telegrams say words fail to describe the depth of French emotion that French troops again possess a corner of Alsace, though this small victory does not blind Frenchmen to the fact that great trials are yet to come. One Paris correspondent notes the uncaney restraint at this latest manifestation in the new spirit of France, so different to the boastful confident spirit of 1870. If Austrian troops are really being brought up to the Rhine, it is fresh proof how gravely the German position is involved by the failure to storm Liege. The British fleet continues to hold the North Sea firmly. Maritime approaches to Germany are closed, and there has been no fighting reported by the Admiralty, except the repulse of the German submarine attack on one of the cruiser squadrons. It is not known exactly where the main British fleet is.

FORTS STILL HOLD OUT.
BRUSSELS, Aug. 10. Liege still holds out. The town itself is invested by the Germans, but the forts are still intact, and their defenders masters of the situation. The Belgians dynamited the outer citadel, an ancient fort, to prevent its utilization by the Germans.

COLMAR CAPTURED.
PARIS, Aug. 10. The capture by the French army of Colmar, is confirmed to-day, with the Belgian success against the Germans. The taking of Colmar means the outflanking of the German invading army. The defeated army of the Kaiser is vowing dire vengeance on the Alsations who have harassed their every step into the country. It is announced that the Germans are damming the Sille River, a tributary of the Moselle which forms part of the boundary of Lorraine, in an attempt to check the French advance on Metz. This is regarded as very significant, indicating that the French army posted on the Lorraine frontier has also assumed the aggressive and is moving against the German army centred at Metz. French airmen are having more successes with their scouting than the Germans. Despatches to-day told the heroism of an unarmed army aviator who, with blood streaming from half a dozen wounds, piloted his monoplane safely to earth within the French lines at Belfort with valuable information regarding the location of the German troops. The monoplane was literally riddled with bullet holes. The aviator may survive. An official War Office statement to-day announces that French corps hold the cities of Femy Mulhausen and Altkirch, and that the whole line in front of those cities is constantly in contact with the German front. Warned by the French victory at Mulhausen and of the strength of the French forces, the Germans are hurrying up strong reinforcements. The War Office said that heavy reinforcements of French troops were in the provinces of the Vosges.

ESSEX'S BIG CAPTURE.
NEW YORK, Aug. 10. A Customs Inspector, who boarded the British tank steamer Narragansett, which arrived to-day from Rotterdam, was informed by her crew that the North German Lloyd Liner Kronprinz Wilhelm had been captured by the British Cruiser Essex and that she was being taken to Bermuda. The sailors said a wireless message from the Essex to the station at Bermuda was intercepted by the Narragansett. When told of the capture, the North German line disbelieved the story and claimed that word had been received from the liner.

BIG BATTLE.
PARIS, Aug. 10. A statement issued by the Military Department late last night says that numerous skirmishes are taking place along the entire front of the French Army. One clash was violent and the losses on both sides were serious. The official communication adds that the German troops received reinforcements and that the French also are being strengthened. The battle began on Saturday evening on the ridges of the Vosges Mountains. Aeroplanes took part in the engagement. The French troops after a desperate encounter, obtained possession of the Mountain Passes of Bonhomme and Sainte Marie aux Mines. The losses sustained by the French in the taking of Sainte Marie are not specifically given in the official report which confines itself to declaring that they were serious. The wounded French and German soldiers were taken to the French fortress of Epinal for treatment. A French aeroplane which ascended during the engagement, was repeatedly fired at, and the officer acting as observer of the movements was wounded. The pilot of the machine, however, brought him safely to land, and he was able to return to the fort, whither the aeroplane was also sent for repairs. German troops inundated the Valley of Sille hoping by that means to stop the French advance, but the quantity of water was insufficient, and the French troops were able to continue their march. The French troops to-day were on the outskirts of the Forest of Hardt in front of Neubreisach, which appears to be occupied in force.

SHOT A WOMAN.
ROME, Aug. 10. A Basle despatch states Germans have shot Madame Havre on the ground she was caught in act of attempting to blow up a bridge near Leopold with the object of embarrassing the troops.

HOME RULE SETTLEMENT.
LONDON, Aug. 10. On moving the adjournment of the Commons for a fortnight, Asquith this evening intimated he was hopeful that in the interval he might be able to make a proposal regarding the Irish Home Rule which would meet with something like a general acquiescence in the solution of the question.

A CRITICAL POSITION.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The Belgians' admission that Liege had been occupied to some extent by German troops came in a despatch from the New York Times correspondent at Maastricht, dated Saturday morning. It may be supposed that the German force within the city is a comparatively small one, but probably big enough for the purpose, namely, to cut off the forts from intercommunication and from being reinforced from the city. No doubt the forts are fairly well supplied with provisions and ammunition and have their own water supply, but it is unlikely they will be able to hold out very much longer. It must be confessed that for the Germans to have forced an entry into the town is a very considerable success. It must be presumed that a large portion of the Belgian Army, the Germans say one-fourth, was within the town, and that it had been withdrawn or driven out. A message from Brussels mentions the King of the Belgians having reviewed troops who took part in the defence of Liege. This supports the view of Belgian retirement from the city, though not, of course, from the forts, who are now fighting each for itself. The German siege guns have not yet been brought into play against the forts, and it is doubtful whether they have yet been brought up; these the Germans will find very difficult to move into position.

BOMBARDING LIEGE.
BRUSSELS, Aug. 10. The newspaper Le Sotr gives the following details of the German occupation of Liege: The Germans seeing a space between the forts entered in small groups on Thursday evening. Among those who entered were General Von Emmicht, the Commander of the Tenth Army Corps and his staff. At the citadel which is the barracks, the Governor and Burgomaster of Liege were informed that unless the town and the forts surrendered the Germans would bombard the town and raze it completely. On orders from the Government the Governor then left the town. On Friday night seventeen notables of Liege headed by the Bishop, Burgomaster and sheriff with some deputies proceeded to the citadel and begged General Von Emmicht not to bombard the town. The General replied that the town and forts must surrender, or they would begin the bombardment. The Germans asserted that peasants in the District had committed hostile acts against them. All members of the deputation were detained as hostages, and it is not known whether they have since been liberated.

AIRSHIPS IN ACTION.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The Times correspondent in Brussels reporting the fighting at Liege, says that aerial fleets were used both by Belgians and Germans. The fighting in mid-air was desultory, but deadly. A huge Zeppelin sailed over Liege early in the fighting, but was pursued by a Belgian aeroplane, who risked and lost his life in destroying it. After the destruction of the Zeppelin, the Germans confined their activities to the use of scouting aeroplanes, several of which were fired on from the forts. Attempts to reach the aeroplanes with shells were often unsuccessful, however, owing to the inability to shoot high enough. Two Belgian aeroplanes, who were attacked by German Field Artillery, at a moderate height, were nearly rendered unconscious by a shell which burst just beneath them. They reached the ground safely, however, and as they alighted remarked coolly, that "these Germans shoot badly."

VERY EXCITING.
HALIFAX, Aug. 10. For twelve days the Russian Liner Dwinsk was in peril of being captured by German cruisers. The Dwinsk arrived off the Harbor last night. She brought 700 passengers. Wild excitement prevailed among the passengers when it became known that Russia was at war with Austria-Hungary and Germany. When the Dwinsk sailed from Liban none of the passengers were aware that the situation was so acute, though there was a feeling among them that war might break out in the future. The reason for this was because the military authorities detained the ship and ordered some of the ship's officers and passengers on board attached to the army, to remain at home. Not until they were four days from Halifax was the Commander aware of the peril in which his ship had been. The wireless operator picked up a message, but the captain was unable to say what ship sent it, saying that war had been declared.

NOT AT WAR WITH RUSSIA.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador was still in London to-day, and the British Government seems disposed to leave the initiative to Austria in the question as to whether war is to be declared between the two countries. The delay of the French Government in asking Austria to declare her intentions is understood in London to have been due to the fact that the French fleet in the Mediterranean was engaged conveying Algerian troops to France. France, therefore, was not ready to cope with the situation, in case the reply of Austria proved unsatisfactory, but as the transportation of the troops was completed yesterday, a note of enquiry was then addressed to the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador in Paris.

GERMANS BOTTLED UP.
SHANGHAI, Aug. 10. The British fleet proceeding towards Tsing Tau, passed here to-day. Cannonading was heard by an incoming ship, and it is believed the German warships are bottled up in Tsing Tau Harbor. British merchant steamers will resume their voyages along the Chinese seaboard on Tuesday.

LANDSTURM CALLED OUT.
LONDON, Aug. 10. A despatch from Brussels says that Germany is mobilizing another million men, who include the Landsturm, for the invasion of France. Patriotic enthusiasm is running high. The Minister of War announced that 400,000 volunteers have presented themselves for service with the colors.

ANOTHER DECLARATION.
LONDON, Aug. 10. A Vienna despatch to the Daily Telegraph, reports that Serbia has declared war against Germany. This step, it is explained, was taken in order to get rid of the German Minister at Belgrade.

JAPAN IS ACTIVE.
LONDON, Aug. 10. A despatch from Tokio says that a night conference of the Cabinet and activity in the Navy department has strengthened the popular belief that Japan is about to take an active part in the war. An announcement by the Government is hourly expected.

AUSTRIANS ADVANCING.
PARIS, Aug. 10. The Austrian Ambassador is awaiting the response of his Government to the complaint made by France that the Austrian fleet of thirteen battleships and six torpedo boats were said to be going at full steam toward the Strait of Otranto, which connects the Adriatic with the Ionian Sea, the probable purpose of the fleet being to give succor to the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau which have been reported in that vicinity. Eight Austrian regiments are reported to have crossed Lake Constance en route to Alsace.

THE BALKAN CAULDRON.
PARIS, Aug. 10. A thousand miles of bayonets and big guns are to-day stretched from Holland to Switzerland. Belgium, peaceful and neutral, was the first country to bear the brunt of the German attack. High placed personages are of opinion that Italy's neutrality will not stand the test of events, and that a series of victories on the part of the triple entente would cause the Italian people to rise and compel their government to join hands with France, Russia and England. In this case the first move would be to take possession of Austria in the Adriatic. At the same time from the Balkans comes an unconfirmed report of Turkey's mobilization. Should this prove true, Greece and Roumania would immediately jump into the fray, and the whole of the Balkans would again respond to the frightful clash of arms. Such a move on the part of Turkey would mean base ingratitude to France also, who at the time the last Turkish loan was floated in Paris received from the Ottoman Government formal assurances of its peaceful intentions.

AUSTRIANS INVADE SWITZERLAND.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. forwards a despatch from Basle, Switzerland, saying that Austrian troops have arrived there, coming by way of Constance. They comprise 30,000 men of the 14th corps, under the Grand Duke of Tuscany, which were withdrawn from Tyrol to prevent them from being sent against the Servians. They will reinforce the German troops and camp at Fiesten, where the Germans are massing on the hills and fortifications following French success in Alsace.

BULGARIAN GENERAL JOINS RUSSIA.
SOFIA, Aug. 10. General Demibrief, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Bulgarian Army during the war against Turkey, and now Bulgarian Minister at St. Petersburg, telegraphed his resignation to-day that he might serve in the Russian Army. Communication between Bulgaria and Turkey will be interrupted to-morrow owing to the mobilization of the Turks, according to a semi-official statement issued here to-day.

Polite, Though Married.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A letter friend who has been married about a quarter of a century makes the following valuable contribution on the eternal problem on how to be happy though married:

"My husband and I have had a very happy married life due to several things beside our real congeniality. One is that we try to be as polite to each other as though we were not married. And that means a lot. We may lose our tempers but we try to remember that the spoken word is not easily forgotten."

The other factors in this successful marriage were also worth notice but I am not going to mention them to-day because I want to spend all my forces in hammering that one in, "We try to be as polite to each other as though we were not married."

I wonder how many married people can say that of their daily intercourse.

I wonder how many divorced couples would not be divorced if they had made that effort.

The habit of politeness or courtesy—I like that word better—is almost universally formed in courtship; the two parties put a guard on their tongues. Each tries to say nothing that will wound the other and everything that will please. Then comes marriage with its inevitable intimacies, frictions and disillusions. Now is the time when we need that beautiful habit of courtesy the most. But, by the same token, this is the very time when it fails us. The guard slips, we say some sharp little thing which brings as sharp an answer; some little fault irritates us and we characterize it with unflattering frankness; so it goes, bit by bit, until some day we find that we are no longer making any effort to be courteous to each other.

I once knew a young married couple who made this painful discovery on the eve of their third anniversary. Being unusually analytical young people they faced the situation bravely and as an anniversary gift to each other, better than jewels or flowers, each pledged the other a renewed effort to be just as courteous as in the days of courtship.

To be sure, we do not half mean most of the sharp little things that we say, but the impulsive, thoughtless word will often leave a wound that will fester and ache at intervals, perhaps for years. As my letter friend says, the spoken word is not easily forgotten. You may think an unkind thing, cool down, be ashamed of your thought, and have done no harm. But once put that thought into words and you cannot measure the harm it may do. Give a lie an hour's headstart and it will take the truth a hundred years to catch up with it, is a familiar saying, and the same is often true of a sharp word and its retraction. "Of the unspoken word thou art master, but the spoken word is master of thee."

"The pain of an ungratified desire," says Schopenhauer, "is small compared with that of repentance—for the former has to face the immeasurable open future; the latter the past, which is closed irrevocably."

Suppose we try to remember this when we struggle with the desire to say some sharp and unkind word.

Divorced Life

Marriage a la Mode

The golden vitality of the sunny day stole pleasantly through Marian's blood. She never felt better than when motoring. To-day, as Meadows urged his handsome car northward over roads that stretched smoothly along the borders of the sparkling Hudson, she cared little whether he was taking her. She no longer felt the necessity of keeping on guard in his presence. She trusted and liked him. To her, after her variety of bitter and unhappy experiences with men, since she had left the protection of domesticity, the feeling was profoundly comfortable, finely gratifying. "I shan't be around here much longer," volunteered her companion.

"How's that?" he inquired. "I suppose you'll be dodging back to your old haunts in Europe soon again. I envy you," she could not help but add.

"You needn't," he said with a shrug. "It's an odd sort of thing I've drifted into this time. I'm to be married next month."

"Married!" echoed Marian, almost dumbfounded.

"Sounds funny, doesn't it?" he smiled.

"Coming from you—yes," she said. "Aren't you the man who had the reputation of never having been in love? In spite of your reputation, you're just the kind to fall victim the quickest to a pair of magnetic eyes."

"In this case," returned Meadows, "my thoroughly merited reputation does not conflict with my scheduled plunge into matrimony. My marriage is what might properly be termed a frame-up. Just part of the game I've let myself be compelled to play all my life. The girl's a good sort at that. I shall probably develop quite a fancy, possibly even a fondness for her, in time. Mother and dad have had their hearts set on this marriage for a long time. It wouldn't be right for me to disappoint them, after the handsome way they've taken care of me and shooting responsibilities out of my path. The point is that all concerned seem to figure that there is too much money in both families to allow even a little thing like a marriage to be anything but out-and-dried."

"Why, it seems perfectly wicked," said Marian. "I should think that get-

The festive ceremony takes place the middle of next month in Chicago. We sail from New York on the seventeenth for the Mediterranean, to pitter around and kill time until Autumn. Then we're scheduled to go on an exhibition before society. Bum little performer I'll make, I'm afraid."

Marian burst into laughter, unable to repress her half-shocked amusement.

"What wouldst?" smiled the droll one. "Am I not unfortunately unable to make a living by myself and does it not therefore devolve upon me to accede to the wishes of my kind parents whence cometh my sustenance, shelter, clothes, and motors?"

German Cables to the U.S. Cut.

New York, Aug. 5.—The German Cable Company's cables to Germany have been cut. Announcement was made to-day that the company cannot reach Azores station, which is the first landing of the line. The British cruiser Berwick, one of the fleet of British vessels of the North Atlantic coast, is especially equipped for cable-laying and repairing, and the assumption here is that she may have cut the German line.

Cutting of the cables leaves the United States without any direct means of communication with Germany. Messages can be routed via other nations, but the German Cable Mummies.

By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old Sivash."

Mummies were invented by the Egyptians many thousands of years ago and consist of ex-human beings in a shocking state of preservation. When the early Egyptian of good family expired his remains were considered too valuable to lose. He was accordingly turned over to the priests, who hollowed him out neatly, stuffed him with bitumen and old rags and then wrapped him in several miles of fine cloth saturated with preservatives. When this was done he was placed in a neat mummy case with a decorated lid and the case was put in a stone sarcophagus. If the deceased was very prominent a pyramid was then built over him.

"Mummies" was a long and elaborate process and very comforting to the relatives, because they could be perfectly sure that the late departed would not wake up after being entombed and complain about the hastiness of the proceedings.

After the mummy had been fled away in the tomb of its fathers, it lay without change for dozens of centuries while empires perished, cities disappeared and the restless sand of the desert marched in serried hills across the land.

The rude vandals of a later civilization with picks and shovels uncovered the tomb, hauled out the mummy and its relatives, piled them along a railway track like corkwood and used them to stoke the engines of the construction trains.

This teaches us the folly of trying to preserve a dear departed relative beyond the time when our descendants will be able to stand around and defend his remains with a gun. The Egyptians were well meaning but they overdid the thing. It is no favor to a man to preserve him so well that 4,000 years later when he is hauled out of a sarcophagus, friendless and alone, he will be ground up for fertilizer or sold to an American museum where thousands of spectators will make ribald remarks about his skinny features.

In the Ramessid boys were great kings and in their day could eradicate a whole political party with a wink. But who is now so humble as old Ramesses as he lies in the London museum with his sparse dejected hair, built-in grin and protuberant Adam's apple, while the lunking clothoppers from Yorkshire make fun of him and try to steal his teeth for souvenirs?

Ramesses was hard on his people but they got even with him. They turned him over to posterity for revenge.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and adequately equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKES CO." which only offices in St. John's have found this necessity. This equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Fitch's company represents this world where the "Globe-Wernickes" is Newfoundland.

PROCLAMATION!

By His Excellency Sir WALTER EDWARD DAVIDSON, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Governor, Major and Commander-in-Chief, in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its Dependencies.

WHEREAS by Section 2, Chapter 73 of the Consolidated Statutes (2nd Series), it is enacted that the Governor in Council, may, by Proclamation, in the Royal Gazette, prohibit the exportation of arms, gunpowder, military and naval stores, and munitions of war, explosives and ingredients used in the manufacture of explosives, marine engines, screw propellers, paddle-wheels, cylinders, cranks, shafts, boilers, tubes for boilers, boiler plates, fire bars, every article or any other component part of an engine or boiler or any article whatever which is, can or may become applicable for the manufacture of marine machinery, torpedoes, torpedo boats fitted with apparatus to be used for torpedoes, all apparatus for projecting inflammable materials or firing torpedoes, pumps or other machinery intended to be used for projecting inflammable materials, and machinery intended to be used in the construction of torpedoes or torpedo boats from this Colony;

And whereas I, by and with the advice of my Council, judge it expedient to prohibit the exportation of the articles hereinafter mentioned, in order to prevent their being used as in the said Act stated:

Now, I, by and with the advice aforesaid, do hereby, from and after the date hereof, prohibit the exportation to all foreign ports in Europe and on the Mediterranean and Black Sea, with the exception of those of France, Russia (except the Baltic ports), Spain and Portugal, of the following articles, being articles which I have judged capable of being converted into or made use of in increasing the quantity of arms, ammunition, or military or naval stores, that is to say:—

FRANCE FORTIFIED.

Descriptive Sketch of Armed Batteries Which Germany Will Have to Climb in Order to Win.

By seizing the railway lines of the Duchy of Luxembourg at the very outset of hostilities between herself and France, Germany is doing only what military experts have always predicted she would do should war break out. Press despatches emphasize the fact that in so doing Germany is violating the neutrality of the Duchy; Luxembourg was declared neutral territory in 1867, and its integrity and independence jointly guaranteed by the Great Powers at that time. No one has ever supposed, however, that Germany would be bound by any such guarantee in the event of war.

To understand the significance of Germany's course of action it is necessary to know something about that vexed territory, the Franco-German border, running from the Swiss mountains on the south, to where the river Meuse enters Belgian territory, and even beyond that, where the Belgian fortresses of Namur and Liege guard the river, the real strategic boundary between the two countries, although the political boundary, established by the Treaty of Frankfurt in 1871, runs some miles to the eastward.

It is to be noted at this point that Germany has no fortification on her side of the boundary. German military strategy has staked everything upon the chance of an early and immediate success after the outbreak of war. If they fail in that they have no defensive line upon which to fall back and the failure to achieve immediate success under such a policy means defeat.

France, on the other hand, has adopted no such policy. Following the establishment of the new boundary between the two countries, after her defeat in 1870-1, France set about the task of making the new boundary between herself and her conqueror "impregnable," or as nearly so as the science of fortification could make it.

Modern fortification is not intended to protect a weaker power from a stronger one permanently, it is meant only to delay an invading force until the nation which is acting on the defensive can bring up her troops to compel the invader to employ three men for every man employed by the defender, in a word to give the defensive force time in which to act. Wars within recent years, notably the Russo-Japanese and Balkan wars, have demonstrated the soundness of this theory. Port Arthur and the Tchaikala lines showed the effectiveness of the modern fortress against even the strongest besieging forces.

With this object in mind France set about the creation of her great series of ring fortresses. A glance at map No. 1 will show their location.

Beginning just above the Swiss Alps France built the first of this series of great forts at Belfort. North of Belfort comes a stretch of mountainous country, the Vosges so difficult of access and transit as to form a natural barricade needing little or no artificial strengthening. Just behind the Vosges country lies the second ring fortress, Epinal. Then comes Toul, then Verdun in the Meuse river and just above Verdun the Meuse enters Belgian territory.

Were Germany in the habit of respecting treaties it would be unnecessary for France to consider fortification above this point, but no one has ever supposed that in the event of war, Germany would respect any declaration of neutrality made by Belgium or for Belgium by any other power. Therefore the continued fortification of the Meuse in Belgium territory is of cardinal importance to France. This fortification is ensured by the existence of two great Belgian strongholds, one at Namur and the other at Liege.

Now, this series of obstacles makes it altogether probable that Germany, instead of trying to pierce through the centre of the frontier as she did in 1870 will attempt to turn the flank, or get around the end, of the line of forts. Where will she do this? To attempt to turn the French line to the south would mean the marching of great bodies of troops through exceedingly difficult country. Supposing even that Switzerland consented to the violation of her territory by Germany, the country to the south of the French line is a mass of mountains, intersected by few roads where a small force of defenders would have all the advantage and where the difficulties of debouching into open country after crossing the mountains would be very great in the face of an opposing army.

With these great difficulties in the way of a turning movement to the south it is safe to assume—as assumption borne out furthermore by the seizure of the Luxembourg railway—that Germany will turn her attention to the north end of the French line.

As we have seen, France and Belgium have not been under any illusions as to the likelihood of Germany's respecting Belgium's neutrality, hence Namur, and Liege. The German attack would have to be made along the line of the lower Meuse River. The Germans cannot cross the Meuse lower down than Liege and march through Belgium, neglecting Liege, because if they did so their line of communication to any army, would run between Liege and Antwerp with strong fortresses and with a third fortress, Namur, a 114 1/2 miles further on the line of FRENCH LINE OF RING FORTS. The ring to the north represents the forts around Liege. The black mass to the south of it is the forest of Ardennes. The ring forts more south in order are Verdun, Toul, Epinal, Belfort. To the east of Epinal are the Vosges, and to the south of Belfort the Swiss Mountains.

LIEGE AND ITS FORTS. The arrow to the S. E. represents the line of advance of the German Army attacking Liege, which is in the centre. The rings which circumscribe Liege represent the twelve forts which are at distances from the centre of Liege of 4 to 6 miles and from 2 to 4 miles apart.

advance. Antwerp and Liege lie far apart but the former is indefinitely supplyable by sea and, so long as Germany does not control the sea, and can be made the base for an ever-increasing force. Similarly a German force cannot cross between Namur and Liege for the same reason, the necessity of protecting its line of communication. Nor is it likely that the Germans can attack Namur before Liege since Liege stands nearer the German frontier than does Namur. Between Namur and Verdun there is a long gap, but the frontier here, the Ardennes, as in the case of the Vosges, is mountainous, ill-provisioned, precipitous and thickly-wooded. Military critics do not believe that the Ardennes march could be undertaken till Liege, the most northerly stronghold in the French system, had been reduced. It is not so inaccurate as it sounds to speak of Liege as an integral part of the French fortification scheme. It lies in Belgian territory, but it is, none the less, as much a part of the France's plan for the fortification of her eastern frontier as is any other of the great ring fortresses. It, together with Namur is garrisoned by Belgian troops in times of peace, a source of weakness owing to scarcity of numbers and dissimilarity of training.

Presuming, therefore, that German troops cross the frontier with Liege as their objective point, for reasons which we have seen, what is likely to follow? If one may judge by the war history of the past ten years, a long and bloody siege for Liege is one of the best examples in Europe of the ring fortress. The ideal ring fortress would be a town capable of ample provisioning and lying with an exact circle of heights of an average of some 8000 yards distance, each height some 4000 yards from the next, each crowned with a self-contained closed work and each such work with-in support of at least two others. Skill and the natural conformation of the ground have combined to make almost these ideal conditions around Liege. Map No. 2 gives a plan of the fortifications of the place: The great strength of Liege is seen by a glance at the above map. The main avenue of approach from Germany lies between Forts 1 and 2 and is entirely dominated by them. Forts 9 and 10 and 3 and 4 similarly lie above the Meuse at its entry into Liege and its exit. Fort No. 4 occupies a pinnacle whence even No. 2 could be supported and sweeping the high ground in front of 3 and 5. Nos. 9 and 10 dominate the valleys on their respective sides. On the north the whole half circle of forts lie on crests overlooking gradually falling ground. There is not a yard of ground around the forts which cannot be swept by a supporting fire from one or more adjoining forts and there is "key fort" the carrying of which would mean the domination of the whole situation. To sum up: it seems inevitable that Liege and the lower Meuse will be the objective point of the earlier German attacks, that the idea of "rushing" Liege must be abandoned and that the stronghold must be reduced by a regular siege before a general German advance into Belgium is safe and that to bring about this reduction of the city a large force will have to be employed for some time. For Germany to attempt to invade France through the centre of her line of fortifications would mean a delay sufficient to enable France to concentrate her troops and, what is more, would give Russia the time needed to throw an enormous mass of soldiers across Germany's western frontier.

CHAMPIONSHIP STILL UNDECIDED

The Stars and C. E. I. met last evening to decide the championship holders for this year. A meeting of these teams had always been looked forward to with intense interest as a good game was sure to be the outcome. Last evening's exhibition was no exception, as the fastest and best game for the season was witnessed. The result was a victory for the C. E. I. by one goal to nil. This leaves the championship still undecided and gives the Stars, Collegians and C. E. I. an equal chance to it and another play off between the three teams will be necessary.

The attendance last evening was unusually large and the wildest enthusiasm was manifested throughout. The Stars had odds in their favor as a win or a draw would give them the cup. At the opening the C. E. I. rushed matters, but very soon after the Stars became aggressive and invaded the Institute goal. Voisey was called upon to save several shots and he did so admirably. A few corners were conceded the Stars. Each time the ball was neatly placed but the Institute back division were equal to each occasion and kept the ball clear of the danger zone. For the remainder of the half, play was about evenly divided and no scoring was done.

SECOND HALF.

On resumption of play the Institute boys began hostilities and before ten minutes had elapsed Drover sent a scorcher to Phelan, which he was unable to save, and the first and winning goal was recorded for the C. E. I. Deafening applause followed and did not subside for several minutes. Enthusiasm and excitement ran high among on-lookers and the supporters of both teams. The Stars put forth all that was in them to equalize but their efforts proved futile. Phelan made several brilliant attempts to score but was unsuccessful. Towards the close darkness set in and made it difficult for the players to see the ball. However, nothing of any account occurred and the game ended in favor of the C. E. I. as mentioned.

Sighted German Ship.

The S. S. Fairhaven, Capt. Tong, put into this port at an early hour this morning and reported sighting four days ago a warship that looked to be a German cruiser.

The Fairhaven is an American vessel, bound to Rotterdam from Gulfport, Mississippi, with a cargo of lumber and left the latter port on August 3rd. In the early morning of the 7th Inst. Capt. Tong was on the bridge and noticed a big ship ahead. She had no lights on board and had a very suspicious appearance. The stranger came at close range to the Fairhaven so much so that Capt. Tong could make her out to be a German ship, although having no lights light. The supposed German went across the bow of the Fairhaven at a fast clip and then immediately disappeared, going in a northerly direction towards the Nova Scotia coast.

Capt. Tong is almost positive that the ship he sighted was a German cruiser and keeping a close lookout for British ocean liners. Where the German was sighted is in the vicinity of the track for all the big liners. Capt. Tong also believes that the German thought the Fairhaven a fine prize by seeing her lights at a distance and that was why he bore down on her and on finding out his mistake went to the position he came from. Shortly after the German had gone out of sight, Capt. Tong brought his ship near Cape Race. He sent a boat on board the S. S. Ausonia acquainting the captain of the latter what he had seen. In the reply that came to the Fairhaven Capt. Tong learned for the first time that a force war was on between Germany and Britain. He then decided to put in here and report to his owners and in the meantime await instructions.

Would this be the same German warship that was reported off St. Pierre about a week ago? Whatever one it is Capt. Tong's report is timely warning for all British shipping crossing the Atlantic.

Little Girl Scalped.

CAUGHT IN A FLYWHEEL OF A MOTOR ENGINE. Kelowna, July 30.—A particularly and distressing accident happened to Eileen, the little eight-year-old daughter of Mr. Fred Armstrong, of the Morrison-Thompson Co., Kelowna, her scalp being almost completely torn off as the result of her hair catching in the flywheel of the engine of a launch in which the unfortunate little girl with her father and some friends was out for a spin on the lake. The child was wearing a wrist watch and was bending over to look at it when the ends of her hair touched the engine.

The revolving wheel caught the ends of the hair and drew her head down to the engine. The quickness of Mr. Armstrong, who happened to be close by, in making a sudden grab for the hair close to the engine and wrenching it loose with a tremendous pull, undoubtedly saved his little girl's life as she must inevitably have been drawn in and crushed to death.

As it was the poor little girl's scalp was torn completely from her head except about half an inch of skin by which it remained adhered to the back of her head. The force of the father's pull as he tore the hair free from the engine can be imagined when it is stated that a grease cup, which was in the way, was wrenched right out of its socket, stripping the thread which held it fast.

The boat was immediately rushed ashore at the Aquatic pavilion and a doctor telephoned for. No time was lost in getting the child to the hospital, where the scalp was stitched back in its place, an operation which required nearly 200 stitches to accomplish.

Cruiser "Birmingham" Destroyed German Submarine—H.M.S. Drake is Crossing the Atlantic, Coming this Way—Biggest Engagement of War Imminent Around Liege.

(RECEIVED THIS AFTERNOON.)

H.M.S. DRAKE COMING. Special to the Evening Telegram.

HALIFAX, To-day. There are now five British ships on this side of the Atlantic, namely, Essex, Herwick, Lancaster, Bristol and Suffolk. The cruiser Drake is now on her way across. The Niobe will be in commission by the end of this week. With all these vessels searching for the enemy, it should not take long to clear the North Atlantic and make passage to England again secure. It is understood the Essex sighted one of the German cruisers about two hundred miles away last week, but the latter being speedier than the British cruiser, rapidly got out of sight.

RELEASE SUFRAGETTES. LONDON, To-day. In the Commons last evening, Home Secretary Reginald McKenna announced by order of the King, all suffragettes now serving terms of imprisonment, and all prisoners convicted of offences in regard to strikes, are to be immediately released.

THE "BIRMINGHAM" WAS THE HERO. BIRMINGHAM, To-day. The Admiralty informed the Mayor of Birmingham, that it was the cruiser "Birmingham," which was put into commission last February, which sank the first German submarine of war, U. 15.

MORE SPECIE CAPTURED. LONDON, To-day. The Hamburg American Line steamer Capotaug, with $500,000 specie on board, has been captured by the British. The liner sailed from Buenos Ayres on July 15th for Southampton.

1,500 MEN VOLUNTEERED. MONTREAL, To-day. In Montreal during the past few days, 1,500 men volunteered for service in the Canadian Government cruiser Niobe, but of these only five have been accepted, every one of whom had his discharge papers from the Royal Navy.

The Fish Situation.

A great many loads of fish that were brought to town this morning from Pough Cove and other outlying settlements were taken home again unsold. We were told by several fishermen that $4.00 was the best price offered by the merchants. Even at that low figure the fishermen could not get cash. If they wanted to sell they had to take up the worth of their cargoes in provisions. This condition is brought about by the refusal of the Banks to advance money.

Reids' Boats.

The Argyle sailed from Placentia for the Westward at 2 a.m. to-day. The Bruce is detained at North Sydney by the Canadian authorities. The Clyde left Twillingate at 6.30 p.m. yesterday, inward. The Dundee left Bonavista at 5.45 p.m. yesterday, outward. The Glencoe left Burin at 9 a.m. to-day, inward. The Home left Pillay's Island at 5.20 p.m. yesterday, outward. The Kyle has not been reported since leaving Twillingate going north. The Meikle left Big Bay at 3.55 p.m. yesterday coming South. The Sakona is due at Twillingate from the north.

FOGOTA SALES.—The s.s. Fogota, Capt. Dutton, sailed for the northward at 10 a.m. to-day, taking a small freight and the following passengers: Miss Irish, Mrs. Coleman, E. J. Donohy, Miss P. Chenevix, G. Hopkins, Master Hopkins, L. Simmons, T. T. Cartwright, P. A. Beaulieu, C. Duffin, Willis Talk, John Brenson, Mrs. J. P. Maher, Miss M. Bungey, Mrs. S. S. A. VISITOR.

COLONEL ISAAC UNSWORTH, S. A.

Colonel Isaac Unsworth, who arrived yesterday by the S. S. Digby, to conduct the Annual Congress of the Salvation Army, is an Officer of International repute, having served in Great Britain, South Africa, Australia, Java, New Guinea and the South Sea Islands. He was born in Consett, Durham, in 1869, and for upwards of 35 years has been working in connection with the Army, having taken up the work (to which he has devoted the best of his days) in 1879. During his early experience as an Army Officer he commanded some of the largest Corps in the British Field, where to-day he is beloved and respected by all classes of people whom he worked among. After some years of service in the mother country he was commissioned by the late General Booth for foreign service, and was appointed to South Africa where he had charge of the Training of Cadets, and also the oversight of a large division. His next appointment was to the island of Ceylon, as Commander in Chief of the Army's forces on the island. It was while in charge of Ceylon that he accompanied the late General on his first great tour through India. After his term had expired in Ceylon he was sent to the Australian Commonwealth, where he laboured for the next fourteen years, during that period he held some of the most important commands in the country including State Commander and Chief Secretary for Social Affairs. In 1906 he was recalled to Great Britain; coming to London he was placed in charge of the Army's Anti-Suicide Bureau. In this position the Colonel enriched his experience by becoming acquainted with the many difficult problems which face the man who is "down and out." By his practical advice and assistance he was the means of turning thousands from contemplated suicide, and found for them positions where they were given another chance. The office which the Colonel holds at the present time, is known in Army circles as Parliamentary Secretary, and in this connection he is also Organizing Secretary for the Society for the Protection of Women and Children. The Colonel has already fallen in love with Newfoundland, and hopes to spend a very profitable time with his comrades officers here. He was to have lectured last Sunday in the T. A. Hall, but owing to the Digby not arriving in time, it had to be postponed until Sunday, August 16th. We are sure we can speak a full house for the Colonel.

THE NAVAL SITUATION.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, Aug. 10. Along the English Channel and the shores of the North Sea, all ears are strained for the sound of heavy guns. The first problem in the war is command of the sea. Germany must control the sea if she is to hold England and France apart, and the European waters must be swept of German naval craft before any steps can be taken for sending an expeditionary force from the land. The operations of the German navy, so far, have been confined to the waters of Finland and the Mediterranean, but three squadrons of the Kaiser's battleships are in the waters either of the Baltic or the North Sea. If they should seek to escape northward there is little doubt but that they would have to give battle, and also if they sought to escape southward. A portion of this fleet, perhaps all, a few days ago passed through the Kiel Canal from the Baltic into the North Sea. They are supposed to have rendezvoused behind the great modern fortress of Heligoland, that rocky mountain at the mouth of the Elbe which, as an act of amity, was transferred by Great Britain to Germany during Lord Salisbury's administration. Heligoland is now a mighty naval station, provided with disappearing sheds for aeroplanes and balloons, and a rendezvous for torpedo boats, destroyers and submarines. A glance at the map will show the enormous strategic advantage to the Kaiser of the Kiel Canal. This Canal extends through the Province of Schleswig-Holstein from the River Elbe at Brunsbuttel to Kiel Bay in the Baltic. The Kaiser being in the North Sea and confronted by overwhelming forces, could run away through the Kiel Canal with his precious fleet of thirteen battleships, three cruisers, eight old-fashioned dreadnoughts and four armed cruisers. The only way in which his escape could be prevented would be for his enemy to steal up the Kiel Canal by getting between these ships and the main land, or by mine-laying. Should the enemy get possession of the Canal at any time, the German navy would be put to flight, but once through the Canal it would be safe, unless the enemy sought it by the long and roundabout way of Skagerrack, the Categat and various passages to the east of Denmark. There has never been a belief that the Kaiser would oppose his fleet to the British Navy, but rather that he would trust to night attacks by small craft; and the strategic situation afforded by Kiel Canal makes the naval problem in the North Sea of most absorbing interest.

Newfoundland's Share in Imperial Defence.

A preliminary meeting for the discussion of the action to be taken by Newfoundland in defence of the Empire during the present war, was held yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber of the House of Assembly. The meeting was presided over by the Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, and those present were: The Colonial Secretary, Mr. Bennett; Lieutenant-Commander MacDermott, of H. M. S. Calypso, Inspector General Sullivan, Capt. Wakefield, M.D., of the Legion of Frontiersmen, Lieut-Colonel Rendell, of the C. L. B., Major Carty, of the M.G.B., Lieut-Colonel Patterson, of the Highlanders, Captain Goodridge and Capt. J. W. Morris, of the Rifle Club. The Prime Minister pointed out that the object of the meeting, which was merely preliminary, was to arrange for a public meeting to be held in the C. L. B. Armoury on to-morrow night, at which His Excellency the Governor will preside. He showed that in the present struggle between the nations of Europe the existence of the British Empire was involved. The disorganization of trade and the other evil effects that must eventually follow such a serious state of affairs, can be minimized by ready contribution on the part of the Colonies. The Premier felt that trade and commerce would be affected very little as a decisive naval victory for England would confine the war to the continent, and thus the British Navy would be able to patrol the trade routes of the Empire. Though Newfoundland is contributing to the defence of the Empire by our Naval Reserve, further aid is necessary, and with this object in view a mass meeting of citizens will be called for to-morrow night. The question of forming a Citizens' Defence Association, or Volunteer Corps could then be properly dealt with. All present expressed themselves in favor of the suggestions offered by the Prime Minister and were unanimous in the opinion that the time has come when Britain's Oldest Colony should take her share of the burden of Imperial defence.

Three German Cruisers Hovering Off New York.

(Montreal Star, Aug. 4.)

The German cruisers whose activity Sydney fears and whose movements are being watched by the Admiralty are the three which the great German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm is supposed to have gone to meet when it left New York suddenly and without warning early last night.

The cruisers are the following:

	Length	Comp'd	Ton's	Armament	Speed	Com't
Karlsruhe	364 feet	1908	4820	12, 4.1 in.	27 knots	361 men
3rd class cruiser.
Strasbourg	446 feet	1912	4500	12, 4.1 in.	27 knots	373 men
3rd class cruiser.
Dresden	364 feet	1912	3544	12, 4.1 in.	27 knots	361 men
3rd class cruiser.

It will be seen that all three are of the fastest type of modern light and unarmored cruisers; all are capable of making 27 knots, two are only two years old, and the third has only been in commission six years.

The armament of each of them is twelve four-inch guns, with the addition of the necessary number of small quick-firers.

The Karlsruhe was last reported at Havana, the Strasbourg at St. Thomas, and the Dresden at Port Mexico. For the last week Washington, which is the only uncensored source of information as to the movements of warships, has had no trace of their whereabouts.

The Kronprinz Wilhelm, in common with all the other North German Lloyd ships in United States ports, was ordered to remain in port until the possibility of capture was less than it is believed to be at present.

Two days ago, to the amazement of the port authorities, she hurriedly began to take on board large quantities of coal and provisions. Her dock was carefully guarded, even German and Austrian reservists being warned away and told that the Kronprinz "was to carry no passengers."

Last night she slipped from her dock and sailed for some unknown point. It is believed that she has a rendezvous with the three fast cruisers who have sailed to meet her, take on coal and provisions, and then proceed on their business, whatever that may be.

British Cruisers Watch For German Raiders.

(Montreal Star, Aug. 5.)

The adventures of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which saved its $10,000,000 in gold and its own skin by putting into Bar Harbor on the Maine Coast, gives a clue to the whereabouts of the warships of the warring powers which are off the Atlantic Coast.

Captain Pollack, of the Cecilie, says he just escaped capture by the British cruiser Essex and the French cruiser Friant while dodging his way up the coast in a dense fog.

The Star published yesterday the details of the three third-class German cruisers Karlsruhe, Strasbourg and Dresden, which were known to have left the West Indies and were supposed to have been in the North Atlantic. It will be remembered each had a speed of 27 knots and carried 12 four-inch guns.

Since Germany has no coaling station in the North Atlantic, the activity of these cruisers will be limited unless they can secure coal from such sources as the Kronprinz Wilhelm, which left New York Monday on a mysterious mission.

The British Squadron.

In North Atlantic waters great Britain has four first-class armored cruisers and one third-class cruiser. The big warships are part of the cruiser squadron which was stationed in the West Indies a year ago. According to Washington advices, the Lancaster was last heard of from off Tampico, in company with the Essex, while the Berwick, the Suffolk and the Bristol had left for an unknown destination.

Their tonnage and armament is as follows:

	Ton's	Com.	Armament	Speed	Com't
Essex	9800	1903	14, 6-in.	22.8 knots	537 men
Armoured Cruiser			8, 12-pounders
Berwick	9800	1903	14, 6-in.	23.6 knots	537 men
Armoured Cruiser			8, 12-pounders
Lancaster	9800	1904	14, 6-in.	24 knots	537 men
Armoured Cruiser			8, 12-pounders
Suffolk	9800	1904	14, 6-in.	24.7 knots	537 men
Armoured Cruiser			8, 12-pounders
Bristol	4800	1910	2, 6-in.	22.6 knots	376 men
Protected 2nd Class Cruiser			10, 4-in.

France's Three Ships.

France has three warships in the North Atlantic, the armored cruiser Conde, and the third class cruisers Descartes and Friant. The Conde is supposed to be on her way to France; the Friant has been reported off the New England coast, and the whereabouts of the Descartes is unknown. The most important details about them are as follows:—

	Ton's	Com.	Armament	Speed	Com't
Conde	9856	1904	2, 7.6-in.	21.4 knots	615 men
Armoured Cruiser			8, 6.4-in.
Descartes	3970	1896	4, 6.4-in.	21 knots	358 men
3rd Class Cruiser			10, 3.9-in.
Friant	3882	1895	6, 6.4-in.	18 knots	358 men
3rd Class Cruiser			4, 3.9-in.

On the Pacific Coast.

There are two German warships known to be on the Pacific Coast. Both are third-class cruisers; the Nurnberg is at San Francisco and the Leipzig is approaching the coast after a voyage from China, and is badly in need of more fuel. The details concerning them are as follows:—

	Ton's	Com.	Armament	Speed	Com't
Leipzig	3200	1906	10, 4-in.	23 knots	303 men
3rd Class Cruiser			8, 2-in.
Nurnberg	3396	1908	10, 4-in.	23.5 knots	322 men
3rd Class Cruiser			8, 2-in.

What British cruisers have been detached from the Pacific Squadron to look after the wandering Germans is not known, but intimations have been received from London that there is no cause for uneasiness. The Japanese battleships Idzumo is at Mazatlan. Details of her construction follow:—

	Ton's	Com.	Armament	Speed	Com't
Idzumo	7750	1901	4, 8-in.	22 knots	672 men
Battleship			14, 6-in.

Some of the latest tunics are open in front to show the long skirt beneath. Always they reach well below the knees.

Broad-tail cloths are used for the skirts—indeed, it is said that fur cloths generally will be very important this season.
