MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER III.

"No, sir," replied Clarence, nervously. "I have not! I have thought of doing so—have tried to do so—but—"

"I am glad that you have not," said Godfrey Knighton in a deep, grave voice.

The young man looked down at the carpet, anxious but too modest to be amazed at the reception that was accorded to him. Why should Mr. Knighton receive his proposal so coldly and regard him with such a stern, forbidding countenance?

The Knightons were the Knightons of Revels, of ancient lineage, and great social standing, it was true, but he was an earl, and on his mother's side was descended from one of the Conqueror's companions. He was young, possessed of a good rent roll, and of good character; why, then, should Mr. Knighton receive him as if he were somebody altogether objectionable?

"I hope I have not offended you, Mr. Knighton," he said at last, timidly.

The squire started as if his thoughts had been wandering right away from the subject and a red flush mounted to his brow.

"No, no; certainly not!" he answered quickly, but still sternly. "You must know that in proposing for Iris's hand you are doing me a great honor, Montacute."

"No, sir, the honor is all on your side!" said Clarence, and he said it very mildly.

Mr. Knighton shook his head.

"It is a great honor, Montacute," he repeated, "and I am sensible of it; but—" he stopped, and, rising from his chair, began to pace the room, the look of trouble, and doubt, and indecision growing more distinct upon his face.

"Your proposal takes me by surprise," he went on. "I had no idea that you entertained such thought of Iris. She—she is so young."

"My mother was married before her age, sir," said Clarence.

The squire frowned.

"Times have altered, Montacute," he said. "Girls are girls still until they are beyond Iris's age. And you have not spoken to her? Have you any reason to hope—" he paused, and regarded the young man with the keen glance that seemed to go through him.

Clarence shook his head rather dejectedly.

"No," he replied, with a sigh. "Miss Knighton is always kind to me—but, then, so she is to every one," and he stopped.

"She is young, young," said Mr. Knighton. "Montacute, I don't know what to say. If it were any one else I would say 'No' at once. But you—you are an old friend, Montacute. It is a strange question I am going to ask you—"

"You can ask me what you like, sir," said Clarence.

Mr. Knighton took a turn or two, then stopped and regarded him closely.

"Montacute, I don't know your sincerity for a moment. I believe you think you love Iris; but I want to ask you this. You have seen her at her best, surrounded by luxury, in a home which has been as a most favourable setting for her. Supposing that you had met her under different circumstances, supposing she had been one of the girls from the factory at Beverley, a poor girl of humble birth—"

He stopped and frowned, and seemed for a moment lost in thought; then went on: "Montacute, are you sure it is Iris herself, and not Irish Knighton, the heiress to the Revels, whom you wish to marry?"

Clarence Montacute crimsoned.

"It is not necessary that I should marry an heiress, sir," he said, with quiet dignity.

The squire shook his head.

"You misunderstand me, Montacute," he said, with a sigh. "And I can scarcely hope to make myself understood. No, I did not mean to infer that you were marrying her because she would be mistress of the Revels when I am gone—far from that, I meant—"

He stopped again, and, sinking into his chair, covered his eyes with his hands. "I don't think I can speak more plainly," he said at last, as if something were weighing heavily upon his spirits; then he looked up and added quickly: "Don't misunderstand me in another way, Montacute. Iris will be the mistress here, and I am, as you know, what the world considers a rich man. It would be a suitable match and yet—" He paused, and then looked at the young man with a steady frown, "and yet I cannot give you my consent."

Clarence's face fell. His hopes had been growing at each moment, and the conclusion fell upon him like a thunderbolt.

"You—you forbid me to speak to Iris—Miss Knighton, sir?" he faltered.

"Forbid is too harsh a word, Montacute," said the squire. "No, no; I don't forbid, but I ask you most earnestly not to do so at present. Let—let us wait. Heaven only knows there is plenty of time. Iris is only a girl as yet; and you—you are young enough to change your mind—"

"I shall not change my mind if I live to be as old as Methuselah," said Clarence, flushing and almost forgetting to "bless" his words with his usual "I shall go on loving her. You—you couldn't prevent that. As to loving her because she is Miss Knighton of the Revels, that doesn't count with me. I would marry her if she were without a penny and was a plain Miss Smith!"

The squire looked at him steadily.

"Montacute," he said, "you are a good fellow. If you knew what it cost me to say 'wait,' you would sympathize with me. But you don't know, you do not understand, and—" He paused as if irresolute, and the frown deepened. "No! I cannot tell you! All I can say is 'Wait for a while.' Indeed," he added quickly, "in any case I should say that. Iris is—rather a peculiar girl! It is as likely as not if you were to speak to her she would say 'No,' and that would be worse for you than my 'Wait,' for Iris is not a girl to change her mind."

Clarence turned his hat round and looked hard at the maker's name in the crown. It was a heavy blow to him, and he felt half stunned.

"And—and while I'm waiting," he said, "perhaps some one may come—"

The squire interrupted him quickly and steadily.

"If it is any consolation to you," he said, "I will tell you that what I have said to you I should say to any one who came to me and asked me for Iris, be he who he may!"

Clarence rose and sighed.

"Well, sir, I suppose I must be contented with that," he said. "I—I think I'll go now."

The squire held out his hand.

"Montacute," he said, "the time may come—will come—when you will know and acknowledge that I have acted rightly. I can say no more—seen to you! I won't ask you to stay; it is better that you should not!"

"I—I suppose I may come here as usual," said poor Clarence, dejectedly.

"Certainly! Why not?" assented Mr. Knighton. "Because I do not accept you on the spot as a suitor of Iris, is no reason why we should lose a friend! Montacute, I will say this, that if I had to choose a husband for my daughter I should choose you before any one else."

The young man's face brightened.

"Thank you, sir," he said. "I'll do exactly as you say. I'll wait—and hope," and he got outside.

The squire did not accompany him, but sank into the chair, and, shading his eyes with his hand, seemed lost in thought; and though he was by no means an old man, he looked, as he sat there, as if he were broken down by premature old age.

He may have sat there for an hour without moving, when the door opened and Iris came in.

He looked up as her light step fell upon his ear, and, used as he was to her presence, her extreme beauty seemed to strike him with greater force than it had ever done before; something else seemed also to strike him. There was a different look upon her face to any he had seen there; a certain vague shyness and confusion utterly novel to her.

"Father," she said, in her musical voice, "is anything the matter?"

"No, no!" he said. "You have been for your ride?"

"Yes," she said, and a faint color stole into her face, and her eyes fell.

She had never concealed anything from him; she would tell him about her adventure, though she felt a strange reluctance to do so.

"Yes, and I met—"

"Lord Montacute; I know," he said. "He has been here."

She stopped; there was an expression in his face she did not understand.

"Yes, he told me he was coming," she said, with a smile, as she recalled his nervous manner and sturred "r." "Did he tell you—did you guess why he was coming, Iris?"

She shook her head carelessly, and, taking off her hat, pushed back a few tendrils of the soft, black hair.

"No! To ask you about the ball, I suppose," she said, with a smile.

Strange River in Africa.

Natural barriers have kept the Orange River in Africa along much of its course a secret that natives or explorers have not been able to solve. The Africans call it "Gariep," or Great River. At Great Falls the river plunges over falls twice as high as Niagara, and from this point to the sea few white men have seen its course. Exploration is so dangerous and difficult because the river has worn deep gorges through rock, and it is impossible at most points to approach its zig-zag course because of precipitous and pitfalls. The unique feature of the river is that its upper course is known, and spring floods deposit on its banks silt as rich as that of the Nile. At these points on the edge of the desert its banks produce an amazingly abundant foliage. But the course of the river down stream enters wilder and wilder country, until all civilization is stopped as it plunges into the inaccessible broken country. There is one break in the wilderness, where the Molopt, a vanished river, once traversed the Kalahari desert and joined the Orange River. Venomous snakes, scorpions, baboons and a few natives, refugees from native uprisings against European colonization, make the trip perilous where the natural barriers are less dangerous.

Hours of Despair.

I sometimes think of suicide, with guns or ropes or axes, for I admit I'm sorely tried by all these modern taxes. The molasses beads upon my brow, for life seems harsh and spiteful, there are so many taxes as now, and all of them are frightful. It is with dark and gloomy frown I pen my rhythmic sallies; assessors dog me over town, and chase me through the alleys. I think about the good old times, and pray for their returning, when man could brag about the dimes that happily he was earning. I used to walk the village square, before the war, before the war, and flash my bundle in the air, to make my neighbors jealous. And that's a comfort no man knows in these harsh times of taxes; no voter will his wad disclose—it wastes instead of waxing. I'm taxed by city, county, state, and by the hungry nation; and every day I send a crate of kecks to the station. And when my busy tyre is stilled, by timber hushed forever, and I lie prone, by taxes killed, and done with all endeavor, the tax collectors will arrive, all through the house they'll trundle, and with the law's assistance, strive to bear away my bundle. Oh, that's the meanest tax of all, as hard-worked men consider, that will approach the bier and pall, and rob a weeping widow. They tax us roundly while we live, and bring us ruination, and all the taxing powers should give a corpse a real vacation.

Nature's Most Precious Gift.

In addition to what coal does for us by producing light and power, it gives from within itself vast numbers of the things which are most useful in our lives.

To see how these are obtained we must pay a visit to the gas works, where coal goes through the various processes which turn it into gas and coke. Two other things—ammonia and tar—are produced when this is done. We all know the uses of the first; but for a long time tar was regarded as a by-product of little value. It would make road surfaces waterproof, and it would preserve wood from rotting; but there its uses seemed to end.

Now we know better. By distilling tar, we obtain, first of all, carbolic acid, the most powerful of all disinfectants. Tar also gives benzole and benzoline, which can be used amongst other things for driving motor cars or for cleaning clothes. After them comes naphthalene, which most of us know best in the form of moth balls.

When sugar was scarce, a substitute was found by the aid of coal-tar, from which we get saccharine, that remarkable substance which is three hundred times sweeter than sugar. Most people, then, have eaten coal in the form of saccharine!

We needed a new high explosive for our big shells during the war, for we could not obtain in sufficient quantities the materials for making lyddite. Coal supplied the want by giving us toluol, from which was made the famous T.N.T.

King Coal Still Rules.

Perhaps, most wonderful of all, we get colours of surpassing beauty from coal. The only shade that occurs to you when you think of coal or tar is sombre black. Yet it is from tar that we obtain aniline, which is the basis of most of the dyes now used in commerce. When aniline dyes were first discovered they were crude, harsh tints which gave little pleasure to the eye. Now, they have been developed to such an extent that they give us colours of a soft-delicate beauty. Oil may possibly supplant coal for heating purposes and for the driving

IF YOUR ROOF IS LEAKY READ THIS ADVERTISEMENT.

LASTY-GUM is an Asphalt Cement which is guaranteed to stop leaks in roofs. It is also used for flashing around chimneys, for making window boxes wind-proof, for relining rain gutters. A 5 pound pail will cost you only $1.50.

Like all good things, LASTY-GUM has been imitated. Some of these imitations or substitutes are sold at the same price as LASTY-GUM; some are higher and some are lower in price.

Some of these substitutes look like LASTY-GUM, smell like LASTY-GUM, feel like LASTY-GUM, but unless they are branded—BARRETT ELASTIGUM—they are merely imitations.

Now the labor of repairing your roof with an imitation of ELASTIGUM costs just as much as if ELASTIGUM was used. So take care that your carpenter uses the genuine guaranteed ELASTIGUM, if you want satisfaction. Don't waste your money.

Of course every intelligent carpenter knows that all Barrett products are the best. A Barrett specification roof is the utmost that money can buy. Ask us for a Barrett Elastigum Booklet. It's free.

If you're putting on a new roof covering, use ELASTIGUM wherever wind or rain might get in. Before you put on that new roof covering, ask us for a sample of VULCANITE ROOFING, which sells for $6.00 per roll, complete with nails and cement.

Progressive Party in Canada Opens Campaign--Opposed to Protection--Sir Robert Borden Retires From Public Life.

CRERAR OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN.

BRANDON, Oct. 5. (Can. Press Staff Correspondent)—Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the National Progressive Party, opened his campaign here to-night. Mr. Crerar attacked the contention of the Prime Minister that protection had brought prosperity to Canada. In 1911, Mr. Crerar declared, census returns showed that Canada had a population of 7,500,000. Immigration since then, by official figures, amounted to 1,800,000. Births over deaths numbered 140,000 so that at the present Canada should have a population of 10,140,000. However, unofficial reports of this year's census showed that the total population of Canada will not be in excess of 8,500,000. "Mr. Meighen wants to know where we stand in regard to this tariff," Mr. Crerar continued, "we stand opposed to the principle of protection as being neither sound economically nor right morally. Our policy on the tariff is the development of the natural resources, of agriculture, of forest, and of mining. These are the real industries. If we put them in a healthy vivid condition our country will prosper."

BORDEN RETIRES.

TORONTO, Oct. 5. "I do not intend to be a candidate at the approaching election," said Sir Robert Borden to-day. "After twenty five years of very active service in public life I am entitled to retire. Further my retirement is necessitated by my condition of health. My successor, Mr. Meighen took up his task under circumstances of extraordinary difficulty. He has discharged that task with distinguished ability and courage. In my judgment no successful attack has been made on his policy or administration of public affairs."

DISASTROUS REAR-END COLLISION.

PARIS, Oct. 5. Many persons are believed to be dead and burning in the wreckage of a rear end collision of two suburban trains in the half-mile tunnel leading to St. Lazare Railroad Station, from which five bodies already have been recovered, at 9 o'clock this evening. Twenty seriously injured persons and 53 slightly injured also had been recovered.

RESCUE HOPELESS.

PARIS, Oct. 5. It is felt that those who were trapped in the burning wreckage of the railway wreck may never be identified, as they would surely be burned to a cinder in the intense heat yet unreached by firemen, who were directed streams of water from both ends of the tunnel.

PAPER MONEY.

BERLIN, Oct. 5. The feature of the Reichsbank statement for the week ending September 30, issued to-day, is an increase in the paper currency circulated by 4,205,300,000 marks to 96,384,200,000 marks.

BASEBALL-DOPE.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The Yankees tore off the opener of the World's series this afternoon by kalsomining the New York Giants by a score of 3 to nothing. "Mays' submarine ball tied the Giants in knots, through Frank Frisch, the National League's third baseman, helped himself to four hits. Babe Ruth accounted for one of the Yankees' runs with a blazing single, but could not accommodate the thirty-five thousand fans with a home run. McNally's steal home in the fifth inning was the base running feature of the game. The Yankee batteries were Mays and Schang; Giants, Douglas and Snyder.

OLD NEWS BY CABLE.

ST. PIERRE, Oct. 5. The crew of the three-masted Newfoundland schooner M. J. Parks was landed here to-day by the French vessel Evonne, which reported having picked up the men at sea on Sept. 27, after their craft had been abandoned. The schooner was bound for Patras, Greece, with a cargo of fish.

Marvellous Inventions

FOR TRACKING THE LAWLESS.

So many and so wonderful are the methods of detecting crime that it is now almost impossible for a fugitive from justice to escape.

This fact is due largely to the invaluable help provided by science; the greatest inventive brains of the world have concentrated on the problem for many years. The methods employed by the police have now reached a high state of perfection.

Amazingly clever was the method introduced by Bertillon, the great French criminologist, whose scheme of measurements and finger-prints has been instrumental in bringing innumerable criminals to book.

Since then, science has gone many steps farther, for in a recent case it was shown that a single hair is sufficient clue to the tracking down of a wanted man.

Some years ago such a tiny clue would have been of very little use. Then there was little to learn from it other than the colour of the man's hair. Today, the investigator finds it a most important factor, providing numerous details as to the identity of the criminal.

The Microscope Detective.

Examined through a microscope, the hair may show certain peculiarities; the hairs of different people vary considerably. Apart from colour, they may be coarse, medium, or fine; in shape they may be round or oval; in structure they may be made up of large or small rings. Certain races, too, have hair of a very distinctive type.

In any disease of the scalp—such, for example, as that which causes baldness—is present, the microscopist sees it and notes its significance. When his examination comes to an end he is able to state definitely that the crime was committed by a man with a special type of hair.

But the usefulness of the microscope does not end here: when an arrest is made a comparison between the original hair and one taken from the prisoner's head will go far to establish his innocence or guilt.

There is one more thing that in his hurried exit the criminal has left a tiny shred of cloth—a few threads only—upon a splinter of wood or a projecting nail.

The exact composition of the cloth is discovered with the aid of the microscope, as is the "precise amount" of wool, silk, and cotton that it contains. Then the quality and nature of the wool and the processes through which it has gone in manufacture are examined.

The shred then passes to the chemist, who determines the character of the dye used in colouring it. With all this information at their service, the police can frequently trace the manufacturer of the cloth, and through him the tailor who sold the suit.

Finger-Print Photographs.

Even if the latter cannot name his customer, he can often say when he made the suit, which gives an important clue to the whereabouts of the wanted man on a certain date.

The usefulness of chemistry in poisoning cases is well known. It enables us to determine the nature of the poison used, the way in which it was administered, and the amount given.

Some poisons are so persistent that their presence can be detected even if the chemical examination is not made for weeks, or perhaps months, after death has occurred.

Although these discoveries are of great value, on occasion hitherto they have proved practically useless. For instance, various cities sometimes have led to the identity of the criminal being discovered, but then, with this knowledge in their possession, the police have been unable to do anything to punish the offender. Why? Simply because the man—or woman—has made good his escape, the while the mystery has been unraveled.

Here, once again, science has stepped in to baffle the law-breaker, and an invention has been perfected which bids fair to be the wonder of criminology. By its aid particulars can be sent in a mere flash thousands of miles to bring a wanted man to justice.

Betrayer by the Falses.

This invention—which is said to be infallible—in a combination of the finger-print system and photo-telegraphy, and by its aid finger-print photographs may be sent over the telegraph or the cable wire just like an ordinary message.

The success of the invention in tracking criminals has been greatly helped by the vast strides made in the finger-print system. So many improvements have been discovered that one would hardly recognize the original scheme as outlined by Bertillon.

Previously, the method of taking finger-prints was to press the fingers first on to an ink-pad and then on to a sheet of paper. Though better than nothing, it was by no means satisfactory, for the results were often smudged.

The modern detective makes use of X-rays. The subject's fingers are dipped into a metallic solution and then gently wiped with a soft cloth. In this way the metal is removed from the "ridges," but allowed to remain in the "furrows" of the finger-tips. When an X-ray photograph is taken, the latter show up as clear, sharp, distinct lines. As the photograph can be very greatly enlarged, the most minute peculiarities are distinctly seen.

Another development enables photographs to be dispatched over the telephone wire. In a very short time Scotland Yard will be able to ring up Crewe and say: "A man wanted for fraud left Euston for Crewe on the afternoon express. Here is his description, and here are his finger-prints."

The new science of psycho-analysis is also being used in the detection of crime. A suspected man is asked a considerable number of questions, most of which have nothing to do with the crime. The time which he takes to reply to each is carefully measured by means of a stop-watch. If he shows marked hesitation whenever questions of a certain kind are put, the investigator knows that he is on the right track, and follows up his advantage.

Sometimes use is made of an extremely ingenious little machine which measures variations in the pressure of the blood. The stop-watch may show nothing at all, for a hardened criminal on guard is very difficult to catch; he will answer all questions with equal readiness. But his pulse gives him away.

Is He Telling The Truth? Everyone knows what an effect any form of excitement or of nervousness has upon the heart. Under their influence the heart beats—only for a moment perhaps—more rapidly, and the blood-pressure rises.

The sphygmomanometer, as the instrument is called, registers even the faintest variation, enabling the investigator to see just which questions or suggestions produce nervousness. It is claimed that by its aid a skilled operator can always tell whether his subject is lying or telling the truth!

And so by making every use of the services of all branches of science, the forces of law and order maintain an ever-tightening grip upon the enemies of society. A small proportion may escape the consequences of their wrongdoing, but on the whole the number of untraced criminals is a small one, it is continually growing less.

The foolish man who built his house on the sand.

He gave an example in folly which anybody can understand.

It isn't so easy, however, to sense the mistake of trying to build the body on foods which lack essential nourishment.

Here, again, is a foundation of sand, which gives way when the test comes.

Many a food that tastes good lacks honesty of nourishment to equal its taste. Thus it tempts the appetite into mistakes that often are costly.

Grape-Nuts is a food which helps build bodily endurance for life's stress and storm. The full nourishment of wheat and malted barley, together with the vital mineral salts so necessary to bone structure and red blood corpuscles, with phosphates for the brain, is retained in Grape-Nuts. The long baking process by which Grape-Nuts is made gives the food a natural sweetness and an unusual ease of digestibility and assimilation.

Served with cream or milk, Grape-Nuts is fully nourishing, and whether eaten as a cereal at breakfast or lunch, or made into a pudding for dinner, Grape-Nuts has a particular delight for the appetite. Sold by grocers.

LABRADOR: Past, Present and Future.

(By F. SHORTIS.)

From time immemorial the fisheries on the coast of Labrador have been the chief industry of our country. It is impossible to say who was the pioneer of this great enterprise which has been such a source of wealth to our people, and which continues to be so until the present time. It is evident, judging from the nomenclature of the various harbors along the coast, that the English and Irish "youngsters" of the long ago were amongst the first to visit its coast, and as memories of their indomitable pluck and perseverance, they left their names recorded in history, as witness such names as Grady, Griffin's Harbor, Cortlet's Harbor, Henley Harbor, Carroll's Cove, etc.

It was at Carroll's Cove that the famous full-rigged sailing ship Dreadnought, of the Red Cross Line, was lost in the sixties of the past century, bound from Quebec to Liverpool, with a load of timber. She was the greyhound of the fleet, and sported a large red cross on her lower fore-topsail. She made the quickest passage on record from New York to Liverpool—making the run in sixteen days. She was immortalized in verse which was sung by every old sailor in the past century, the first line being: "Bound away to the westward in the Dreadnought we'll go, etc." Few men, except thorough sailors, are these well able to defend themselves ever shipped on the Dreadnought.

and other foreigners had no chance whatever on such a ship as the Dreadnought. She used to carry as many as 500 emigrants on some of her voyages to New York from Liverpool. But I digress. These must have fished on Labrador at a very early period in the past century, and even previous to that time, because I know for a fact that the fishing schooner Hibernia, Capt. Stapleton, was lost with all hands, while returning from Grady to Harbor Grace in the year 1824. The number of persons in the above instance, who found a watery grave, was over forty men, women and children. Since that melancholy event, many changes have taken place in the prosecution of our great industry. Cod seines and cod traps have been brought into requisition, and the voyage which was steadily pursued with hook and line is now finished in quick time, although with greater outlay to the planter and those engaged in the industry. Previous to the year 1887, it was very difficult for our merchants to ascertain the state of the markets abroad, as communication between Europe and Newfoundland was anything but satisfactory, and, in most instances, the disposing of the cargoes was left to the discretion of the captains of the various mercantile vessels. The great bulk of the fish was brought here from Labrador and shipped to market, either in chartered vessels or those owned by our own merchants. Fifty or sixty years ago the Spanish trade was at its greatest success, and scores of Spanish yessels visited our shores, purchased our fish, for which they paid the highest rate in silver and gold, and conveyed the cargoes to their respective destinations. It was next to impossible to communicate between the merchants in Newfoundland and the planters at Labrador, as we had no regular mail service until the seventies, and the services of any craft returning thence to Newfoundland, were brought into requisition as the only means of accomplishing that end. The square-rigged vessels, after their return from the seal-fishery, were utilized as freighters to convey the various crews to and from Labrador, at a cost of one shilling per quintal on the voyage of fish secured. Up to a comparatively few years ago, the quality of our fishing craft was anything but satisfactory, and the miracle is that we have not had to record many more disasters than we have. The various restrictions which have been placed upon the schooner-holders, limiting the number of human beings to be carried down on each schooner according to her tonnage, as well as the precautions taken in having every craft properly surveyed and pronounced seaworthy, may be justly attributed to the philanthropic action of the late veteran Capt. Philip Cleary, who for many years was a member of our Legislative Council. Session after session the honorable gentlemen kept pressing away at the unseaworthiness of our fishing schooners, styling them, and justly so, "floating coffins," until at last the Government of that day awoke to the true condition of affairs and took action which culminated in the year 1891 in the appointment of a competent surveyor in the person of the late Mr. Wheatley. That gentleman proved himself eminently qualified for his responsible position, and, as a consequence, we hear of very few disasters of late years, for which we are very grateful. The last great disaster that I can remember just now, was the schooner Vulcan, Capt. Jas. Kenneally, of Carbonar, which was lost with all hands, numbering over forty men, women and children, about forty-five years ago, on a passage from Labrador to Conception Bay.

Until a comparatively recent date, no medical attendance was to be obtained along the Labrador coast, and for many years the sick and injured had to be conveyed from their own stations to the fishing stations of those three great benefactors of our fishermen and their families, Capt. John Spully, John Strapp and Michael Fitzgerald, who had never received a dollar for their services, and, most likely, never asked for remuneration. The names of those three philanthropists should live in the history of our country. The clergyman had also his hardships and trials to contend with. In the case of a sick man, the priest had to be conveyed by boat from harbor to harbor, until he arrived at his destination, to bring comfort to the sick or dying person. He had to take passage down in one of the freighters, and was subjected to all the inconveniences and dangers which necessarily followed in the prosecution of our great industry. But now all this is changed. Our people have first class schooners in which to proceed to Labrador in comfort; suitable to battle with the breeze along that rugged coast, and should they prefer to do so, they can proceed to their destination in the regular mail steamer, or come on a steamer specially hired to meet all requirements. Of late years steamers, with a carrying capacity of ten or twelve thousand quintals, have been utilized in rushing the fish across to Spain, Italy or Greece. The fish is caught more quickly with the modern inventions of cod traps, but I am not so sure if the cure is any better, as in the old days, with hook and line, the fishermen had more time to attend to the cure and make than they have now, when hundreds of quintals are to be handled from the traps at the same time. Our old-time planters may not have been possessed of the blessings of higher education, but I guarantee that they knew how to catch and cure fish in a manner that no graduate of Oxford, Cambridge or Harvard would even attain; and, as a proof, they left to their children, vessels, houses and a banking account which would put to blush all the dabblers in Algebra and Mathematics, not to speak of foreign languages. It was no easy matter for the merchant to overreach our old-time planters, as to balance of their accounts. They adopted a system of mental arithmetic in conducting their affairs that would startle such an ancient celebrity as old Archimedes himself. They possessed an inexhaustible fund of dry wit and humor. On one occasion an old friend of mine was invited to dine at the residence of an old planter at Labrador, and a plentiful supply of pork, dumplings, potatoes, etc., was placed before him on a large table, when the host, rubbing his hands in high glee, broke out with: "I guess those folks in St. John's haven't got a twenty-dollar chair to sit on at table. Have 'em, Mr. Fitz." I may state that the twenty-dollar chair referred to was a large box of tobacco, or it may be a chest of tea.

Oil Light Beats Electric or Gas.
BURNS 94 p.c. AIR.
A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 25 leading universities and found to be superior to the ordinary oil lamp. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal-oil).

Criminals Caught in Curious Ways.
The strange channels through which the police sometimes obtain clues in murder tragedies are illustrated by the solution of the mystery surrounding the death of Mr. William Gourlay, the Englishman who was murdered a short time ago near Boultona.

A man named Daguebert was arrested for the crime. Next door to Daguebert lived a Mr. Grassler, who noticed in his neighbour's garden a freshly dug piece of ground. Daguebert visited the spot so often, and was trying so very earnestly to even the surface of the ground, that his neighbour's suspicions were aroused. The police were informed, and so the burial-place of the murdered man was discovered.

Although this is a remarkable instance, there are many other just as peculiar. It must have been the irony of fate that led, a number of years ago, to a little girl unconsciously providing the clue which was the precursor to the arrest and conviction of her father.

Double Life Revealed.
The police had been baffled by a most mysterious murder which had taken place in a London suburb. A day or two following the crime the daughter of a business man residing in the district showed her friends a "pretty necklace" which she had found in the house.

One of her companions was the son of a well-known Scotland Yard detective. In the way of children, he repeated the story to his father, who was struck by the fact that the description tallied with that of a necklace stolen at the same time that the murder had been committed.

A Hostel Needed.

Amongst the many institutions of which we are greatly in need, not the least is a hostel, operated on lines similar to those of the Y.M.C.A., one, where girls who have no homes in the city and are temporarily out of work, may stay. The public may not appreciate the necessity for such a hostel because the matter has never been properly brought to their notice. But there is no doubt that the need is there. Few are aware of the large number of girls who come in here from outports in the hope of obtaining situations as domestic servants, and as a rule, several of them have no relatives here and their small stock of money is soon swallowed up in board and lodging. As a consequence, some of them have often had to apply at the police station for a night's shelter. The same applies even more emphatically to the many girls who formerly worked in factories and are now out of employment as a result of the bad times at present existing. They cannot remain on the streets, penniless, homeless, poorly clothed, and possibly hungry. There is no hostel for them and what is left for them to do? If the morals of the city are to remain unimpeachable something must be done to alleviate the stress of the unfortunate young women who are left in the condition we have described.

A hostel where these girls can obtain cheap board and lodging and also recreation, is the only solution to this difficult problem. A good matron should be put in charge, one who can not only manage the institution, but also give sympathetic and practical assistance to those who are compelled to avail of its shelter. If the girls who gain admittance to it are unable to pay, they should be given work to do which will prevent them from becoming the recipients of charity. What a boon such a hostel would be for girls temporarily out of employment it would be difficult to realize. Not only would it be a help to them, but it would be a great benefit to the community itself. Such hostels are to be found in nearly all the civilized cities of the world, and in most cases they are self-supporting, and in other instances receive government subsidies. There is no reason at all why we should not have an institution of this sort. On the other hand there is every reason why we should. The cost would not be great and the ultimate value to the city would greatly offset the initial expenditure. Let us hope that the day is not far distant when such a hostel as we have attempted to describe, will be one of our public institutions. When it does come there will be none who will be able to cast any reflection upon the benefit which it will be conferring upon the city directly and upon the country at large.

WILL GIVE AN ADDRESS.—Rev. E. Moore will give an address at the Chapel Mission, Adelaide Street, at 8 o'clock to-night.

Bishop Feild College.

NEW TEACHERS ARRIVE.

The Directors of this scholastic institution are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss M. E. Joyner, M.A., and Mr. Harold Hopkins, B.Sc., as additions to the staff since the mid-summer holidays. They arrived by the last trip of the Steamer from Liverpool. Miss Joyner, M.A., of St. Andrew's University, has won first-class honours in classics and has the highest testimonials from the Professor of Latin and from the Professor of Greek of St. Andrew's University Ladies College—the famous Edinburgh School, as well as other schools in England. Miss Joyner will have the special care of girls attending the Senior Associate of Arts classes in Bishop Feild College, as well as general oversight of the Science classes in other grades. Mr. Harold Hopkins, B.Sc., of Manchester University has won first class honours in Geology, including chemistry, mathematics, metallurgy, paleontology and physics. During the war he served with the Royal Field Artillery as a Lieutenant on the Balkan front and won the Military Cross. He is an enthusiastic tennis player and was Captain of Manchester University team. He had the highest testimonials from the Professor of Manchester University. We are glad to welcome in our educational circles both Miss Joyner and Mr. Hopkins, and wish them every success in their labours with the coming generations of Newfoundlanders.

B. I. S. "At Home."

The "At Home" held in the B.I.S. Club Rooms last night by the Ladies' Auxiliary surpassed all previous entertainments held by this body. Mr. F. F. Moore, Chairman of the L. & A. Committee, in welcoming the audience paid a glowing tribute to the work of the Ladies' Auxiliary. President W. J. Higgins, M.H.A., on behalf of the Society, thanked the ladies for their assistance during the year and stated that it was primarily through their efforts that the Hall was so tastefully and thoroughly renovated. That they had done good work was shown by the increased membership of the Society. Mr. Moore then introduced Miss L. Brown, who in her own inimitable way, sang the opening number of the musical programme. Her singing, as it always is, was truly delightful, and the applause which greeted the close of her song showed the pleasure of the audience. Included in the programme were songs by Miss Mary McCarthy, Messrs. E. H. Jardine and T. H. O'Neill, and a recitation, or, as it proved afterwards, recitations by the old favourite, Mr. T. H. O'Neill. Each of these gentlemen were at his best. The large audience was delighted to see and hear once more Miss McCarthy in her first appearance since her arrival home from her studies. She has crowned herself anew with laurels. Her singing of "Peggy O'Neil" in particular brought down the house. It is rarely indeed that one receives such a treat as last night's. Having completed the musical programme the dance was started, to the music of the E.I.S. orchestra, which, as one gentleman said, improves on each appearance. Those present passed an enjoyable hour, when supper was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary. Dancing was then resumed until the wee sma' hours of the morning when the crowd dispersed voting it "the best ever."

Auction of Fish.

FAIR PRICES FOR MISSIONARY GOODS.
A large quantity of fish and skin boots, the property of missions on the Labrador, were sold by auction at the premises of T. E. Bann & Co., this morning. In the case of the former fair prices were obtained. The fish consisted of pickled trout, pickled salmon and last year's Labrador cured codfish. Mr. Canning of A. S. Rendell's was auctioneer. The trout, which was sold in every case by the barrel, was of exceptionally good quality and fetched excellent prices. The best was from Killenak, and there were 22 barrels of it. The price was $9.00 per barrel. The prices for the trout from the other settlements ranged from $8.50 for Okak red down to $5.10 for white trout from Makoyik. A mixed lot of white and red, comprising 142 barrels, fetched $7.00 per barrel. A quantity of pickled salmon was sold at $16.00 per tierce and $9.50 per barrel. Nearly all this fish and 109½ quintals of last year's Labrador cod, which fetched $1.55 per qt., was sold to a well known West End firm. The skin boots, of which there were 1500 pairs, went quite cheaply. The agent of one firm bought 200 pairs at $3.20 per pair and 1200 pairs at $2.50, whilst the remaining 100 pairs were taken up by another buyer also at $2.50.

School Girl Electrocuted.

KILLED INSTANTLY BY LIVE WIRE.

Margaret Skinner, aged 12 years, daughter of Mr. Walter Skinner, painter, was instantly killed this morning by coming in contact with a wire fence that a live electric wire had fallen across. A sister of the deceased and a young lad named Cole, son of the late James Cole, were also badly burned, but it is thought that they will recover. The tragedy occurred on Klondyke Farm, near Mt. Cashel, and was witnessed by Mrs. King who, looking out of her window, saw Margaret Skinner pass on her way to Miss O'Brien's school. The wind was blowing, and the young girl was thrown against the fence. What afterwards transpired is not definitely known. Mr. King being summoned, went to Mount Cashel, from where doctors were called. A young man named Tiller, was also badly burned by contact with the fence, and the doctors had a busy time resuscitating the injured. While Mr. King was returning from Mount Cashel, he intended getting over the fence at the upper part of his farm and some fifty or seventy yards above where the accident to Miss Skinner occurred, but fortunately a dog preceded him and touching the wires the animal was instantly killed. It is miraculous that the several other children who were following after Margaret Skinner escaped death. All that can be gleaned is that at 5 a.m. the lights went off, when a pole with a transformer on it, near King's gate, broke and shivered all the wire fences. One of the Brothers at Mount Cashel telephoned the news to the Sub-Station, but it was not until some time after the fatality that the men arrived on the scene to effect repairs. To the sorrowing parents of the victim of the tragedy, Mr. and Mrs. W. Skinner, the Telegram extends its sincere sympathy.

Supreme Court.

The King vs. Sophie Porter.
The Grand Jury were present and were addressed by the Chief Justice on a Bill of Indictment against Sophie Porter for Concealment of Birth. The jury retired and at 11:50 returned and reported a True Bill. Summers, D.M.J., moved for the arraignment of the accused at 11 a.m. Tuesday next, Oct. 11th. The Court adjourned until 11 a.m. to-morrow.

Police Court.

A man charged with assaulting Constable Cunningham in the execution of his duty was remanded at the request of the Inspector General, who said that Cunningham was out of town. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.
A drunk was discharged.
A man was charged with being drunk and disorderly in the Salvation Army Barracks. A witness said the accused was drunk and tried to get into the Barracks, but he was kept out and the police were sent for. The man was discharged.
A girl who had previously appeared on a charge of vagrancy was again arrested last night. She had no home and the Commissioner of Public Charities had consented to send her home.
A young boy, in for safe keeping, said he had no home to go to as his father would not let him in. He was given a chance to find a home.

Live Wire Down.

An exposed electric wire which was blown down by the heavy gale which prevailed last night and this morning, was discovered by the police at 8 o'clock. The matter was reported to the Sub-Station and received instant attention. Other live wires were blown down in many parts of the town and were a source of considerable danger to pedestrians.

This Morning's Fire.

A fire which broke out in the house of Mrs. Syme, Waterford Bridge Road, brought the Western and Central Fire Companies out at 7:25 a.m. to-day. The blaze was caused by sparks from the chimney igniting after a few minutes. The only damage done was to the roof, part of which had to be cut away by the firemen's axe before the fire could be put out.

Supreme Court on Circuit.

Supreme Court on circuit, presided over by Mr. Justice Johnson, will be held at Curling, St. George's and Chamel. The opening date is set for Monday, 24th October and the sessions will be held until the end of the month. Only one criminal case so far is up for hearing that of the Penitentiary at St. John's charged with shooting a loaded gun at a man Messervey, of Sandy Point. The hearing takes place at St. George's.

LINE DOWN.—The lines are down all along the railway to-day as a result of last night's storm, but no serious damage has been done; the lines will shortly be in operation again.

Preparing a Welcome.

ST. THOMAS'S CONGREGATION MEETS.

Preliminary arrangements in connection with the reception to Rev. E. C. Earp, the new Rector, were made at a meeting of St. Thomas's congregation held in Canon Wood Hall on Tuesday night. Mr. Earp leaves tomorrow by the Digby for St. John's. Hon. E. Watson, People's Warden, presided, and reported briefly the results of his recent visit to Mr. Earp at Hull. Mr. Earp, who was at the point of leaving Hull to visit his father before proceeding to Newfoundland, gave Mr. Watson a hearty welcome, and they spent some hours together discussing various Parish matters. Mr. Watson also met Canon Buchanan, the Vicar of Trinity, who spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Earp and predicted a most successful rectorship for him at St. Thomas's. On the Sunday previous, when Mr. Earp preached his farewell sermon, over 2000 people were present in the beautiful old Parish Church, testifying to the new rector's ability as a preacher and the affection in which he was held by the people of Hull. One of the local papers in an account of the sermon, referred to him as "an excellent pulpiter orator with a most harmonious voice." Just before the invitation came from St. Thomas's Mr. Earp had been appointed Vicar of St. Barnabas, York, having been selected by the patrons and wardens out of 45 applicants, but after consulting with the Archbishop of York and the Vicar of Holy Trinity, it was felt that St. Thomas's offered a larger field of work and the bishop at once agreed to release him from St. Barnabas. Mr. Watson also saw Mrs. Earp, who was described as a clergyman's ideal wife. Both were coming to St. John's with a keen desire for the new work. At the conclusion of the chairman's report, Hon. M. G. Winter, C.B.E., spoke, expressing the appreciation of the Parishioners and moved a hearty vote of thanks, which was seconded by Mr. H. W. LeMessurier and carried by acclamation. The People's Warden then stated that His Lordship the Bishop had been pleased to approve of the nomination of Rev. Mr. Earp as Rector of St. Thomas's, and that subject to the arrival of the Digby, arrangements would probably be made for the induction of the new Rector on Sunday week, the 13th inst. On motion of Mr. E. W. Joans, seconded by Mr. G. J. Carter, it was decided that the matter of arranging a suitable reception be left in the hands of the Select Vestry. It was understood that the Women's Association and the other Parish organizations would have great pleasure in co-operating. There being no further business the Doxology was sung, Rev. A. Clayton pronounced the Benediction and the meeting adjourned.

Schooner Lost; Crew Safe.

The Assistant Collector has a message this morning from the Sub-Collector at Flower's Cove, stating that the scho. Etta M. Prior had gone ashore at Savage Cove, and become a total loss. The crew, however, are safe. The vessel was owned by Kirby Bros., of Belleoram, and had on board 1100 qts. green fish.

Annual Census of Seals.

The only herd of wild animals in the world of which a yearly census is taken are the fur seals of the Pribilof Islands, in the Bering Sea. One year they numbered between five and six million, but they were slaughtered so ruthlessly for their skins that by 1905 there were less than a hundred thousand on the islands. Now they are protected by international agreement, and the herd is numbered and counted every year just like a flock of sheep.

The fur seal spends about two-thirds of each year far out at sea, making a circuit of 6,000 miles in the open ocean without touching land. It only comes to the Pribilof Islands in the summer months to breed and rear its young. As soon as the young are born the mother seal goes to sea in search of food.

When the sealers were forbidden to land on the islands they took to pelagic sealing—killing the animals in the open sea—and the seal's departure from the Pribilofs was their great opportunity. But it meant the loss of both mother and baby, and the wholesale killing of the females in this way brought the herd near to extermination.

Money Well Spent.

After many conferences, the taking of seals was prohibited within a radius of fifty miles of the island, and the entire ocean closed to sealing from May to September. Then, when the war broke out, British, Russian, and Japanese sealers came to the islands, and the sealers, agreed to give up sealing within the waters of the Pacific traversed by the Pribilof seals.

America, as owners of the islands, agreed to compensate the sealers for the loss they sustained, and to give this country and Japan a definite interest in her sealing industry when it was revived.

All told, America expended $1,500,000, on her efforts to protect the seal, but it has been money well spent. Last year's census revealed the existence of 550,000 seals, and this year's count is expected to show at least 600,000. As the price of this particular seal fetches $20 in the open market, the herd may be said to represent a value of $12,000,000. About 25,000 young male seals are now being taken annually, which means a yearly revenue to the Government of $750,000, of which 15 per cent. goes to Great Britain and another 15 per cent. to Japan.

Pugnacious Parents.

Counting the seals is by no means an easy task. They occupy various rookeries, and in the height of the breeding season the big bulls and the females are counted from the cliffs, and the young pups before they are ready to go to sea. Parental watchfulness is not then so strict, both parents spending a great deal of time in the water. Accordingly, they are kept out to sea while armed with long poles drive the pups to the smoother beaches, where they are herded into groups like cattle. They are then allowed to disperse, and as they make off in lines they are counted.

What if luck has broken badly? Boy of mine, Don't tell others of it sadly, Boy of mine, Though it's bitter fruit you've eaten, That your many ways can sweeten, Say "I tried, but it was heptan," Boy of mine.

Don't come back with lame excuses, Boy of mine; Learn the lesson sport produces, Boy of mine, Never mind the breaks which cost it or the carelessness which tossed it, 'Tis enough to say, "I lost it," Boy of mine.

Take the failure without whining, Boy of mine; Do no fretting or repining, Boy of mine; Here's the one way, don't mistake it; To your glory you've made it, If you'll play the ball and take it, Boy of mine.

One of the best known guides in Nova Scotia gives this testimonial of MINARD'S LINIMENT:

"I have used Minard's Liniment in my home, hunting and lumber camps for years, and consider it the best white liniment on the market. I find that it gives quick relief to minor ailments, such as sprains, bruises and all kinds of wounds. Also it is a great remedy for coughs, colds, etc., which are liable to catch when log driving and cruising during the winter and spring months. I would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT and cannot recommend it too highly."

In the Field Called Runnymede.

Mr. Walter G. Bell gives an interesting account in the Telegraph of the facts regarding the sealing of Magna Charta and of the four sealed copies of that great document which survive to-day.

"For seven full centuries we have kept the great meadow very much as it was in the historic week of June, 1215. It is wide, but more notable than its width is its depth, for the field's expanse is but one acre short of a hundred. Runnymede stands where Boreas and Boreas begin to confront one another across a considerable length of river, and often is given to one of these comites. Actually, it is in Surrey.

Why They Chose Runnymede.

"Every boating man upon the Thames knows the meadow, and the Magna Charta Island lying in the river a short distance off the banks. No doubt in King John's time the whole tract of country lay quite open, and there was not the distinction and definition given to-day by Longmead upon one side of Runnymede, and Yarmead upon the other. But that apart, it is the same green meadow unchanged, and away a few miles the towers of Windsor Castle rise upon the chalk hill.

"Why Runnymede was chosen for the negotiation and signature of the Great Charter is patent. The Barons did not trust King John at Windsor, having no reason to do so. John had no trust in the Barons, no doubt also with reason. Runnymede was within easy reach of Windsor Castle, and afforded sufficient open ground for the Barons' camp to be formed upon it, with outposts advanced to prevent surprise or treachery. King John rode daily from the Castle, with followers small in numbers compared with the great assemblage of Barons, and on the first day, June 15, 1215, he accepted and affixed the great seal to the Articles of the Charter itself. Until June 23 the conference continued, and it is evident that the Charter was not sealed till the 19th, though the date borne is that of the first meeting.

Not an Island.

"The Charter itself tells that it was granted in prato quod vocatur Runningmede inter Windesorum et Stanes—that is to say, in the field called Runnymede, which it is now open to anyone to purchase. None can say how the tradition arose that the King actually signed and sealed the document on Magna Charta Island in the Thames. Certainly the tradition is very old; but the words of the document seem to defeat it, though there is the unlikely possibility that the name may at that time have extended to the island as well as the Thames-side meadow. Significance is given to this islet in the river, and the association with the great Charter, by the fact that the young King Henry III, with the Earl Marshal and Panduff the Legato, in 1217, thereon met Louis of France with the Barons who had joined his standard. Why else should they have chosen this place?

Four Copies of the Charter.

"Four original sealed copies of Magna Charta survive. Two are in the British Museum whither they came with the library of that omnivorous collector of manuscripts, Sir Robert Cotton. One is in good condition; the second, which had been found in Dover Castle in King Charles I.'s reign, was much damaged in the fire at the Cottonian Library nearly two centuries ago. Salisbury Cathedral has the third. But the best of all examples is that which constitutes the greatest treasure of the library of Lincoln Cathedral. It is in perfect state, both in parchment and the great Seal of John. Two folds bear endorsement with the word 'Lincolnia'. From this fact it may be presumed to be the actual Charter transmitted by the hands of Hugh, then Bishop of Lincoln, who was present at Runnymede, and is one of the bishops named in the introductory clause. The British Museum also possesses the original parchment of the Articles of the Barons."

Imaginary Visit to a Weird Workshop.

Did you ever stop to consider what a wonderful specimen of fine machine work you are carrying around on your person every day.

Each instant deep watch there is a re-tempering of mechanical precision and workmanship which is hardly approached in any other instrument commonly used by the public.

Imagine yourself as a pigmy making a visit to the inside works of the modern watch.

Long before you reach the towering metal structure housing the huge machinery, your ears are greeted by a tremendous series of sounds, which can only be likened to the beating of a gigantic bass drum. A thousand other sounds issue from the giant factory, which is turning out standard time with an accuracy of a few seconds more or less per week.

As you enter the door of the great works the sound is almost deafening and your hat is blown off by a terrific air current resembling a whirlwind, which strikes you in the face as you step inside.

Nineteen Miles a Day.

You reclaim your hat and on looking upward behold a spinning fly wheel, which is oscillating at very high speed. As your gaze becomes focused on this great wheel, which carries on its periphery a number of large weights, apparently put there for the purpose of establishing perfect balance, you note that the wheel does not rotate continuously in one direction, but seems to swing first in one direction and then in the other.

Upon questioning your guide, he explains that this is known as the balance wheel, which is oscillating at the rate of five vibrations per second, 300 vibrations per minute, or 18,000 vibrations per hour.

Expressed in feet per second we learn that the rim of the average balance wheel, in such a time-machine as this, travels at the rate of 13.75 inches per second; in one hour one of the balance weights on the periphery of this wheel will have travelled over three-fourths of a mile.

In one day a point on the balance wheel will have travelled 18.75, or nearly 19 miles, in one week it will have covered a distance of over 131 miles; and in one year a point of this remarkable wheel will have travelled a total distance of 6,831 miles.

A Ten Years' Journey.

Upon closer inspection we notice a giant steel spring, which the guide tells us is called the hair-spring. The loud buzzing noise is almost unbearable, as it contracts and expands each time the balance wheel revolves in one direction or the other. We are told that the hairspring must be made of the very finest quality of steel obtainable, and that an average size hairspring measures three one-thousandths of an inch in thickness and ten one-thousandths of an inch in width. In smaller time machines the steel hairspring may be one-half this size, or even less, in its physical dimensions.

Think for a moment of the great balance wheel travelling at the rate of nearly 7,000 miles per year.

Our brains are apt to reel when we stop to think of how this marvellous machine, with all its complicated wheels, springs, and bearings keeps on performing its work faithfully and far more accurately than any human being could possibly do—sometimes for five and ten years without a drop of oil, except that which was placed in the bearings when the mechanism was assembled!

Yes, in ten years your buzzing little balance wheel will have travelled close on 70,000 miles—a greater distance than some of our best built modern motor cars will cover before becoming ready for the scrap pile, and remember they have simply been flooded with oil and grease from the day they left the factory.

Cut-work embroidery on one material is apt to "over" another in a combination of colors.

A dress of black Canton crepe has its black silk thread applied with white wool yarn.

A frock of blue serge and fuchsia red crepe de chine is embroidered in black and white beads.

Sandal slippers of brown and black satin are worn with light champagne-colored stockings.

The chaitrook may be straight, with a low waistline and a hem about eight inches from the ground.

Sea green and peacock blue chiffon embroidered with silver thread make a charming evening gown.

A Remnant of Old India.

There is very little of India to which the adjective "unknown" can still be applied, but here and there portions exist which few Europeans have ever visited.

Such is the district of Kutch. In any map of India, Kutch is always represented as an island with the sea colored a deep blue and nothing to show that all its shores are not peacefully lapped by the water. These maps will tell you the island faces the sea on the south, but on the north, there is what is called the Great Runn of Kutch, and on the east the Little Runn. As a matter of fact, the Runns are but brackish marshes, practically dry in the summer, and only covered with water when the monsoon blows in from the southwest.

Kutch is only about 7,600 square miles in extent, with a total population of about half a million. It is because of its inaccessibility that so few Europeans ever visit it. There are two ways of reaching it, either by sea from Karachi on the north or from Bombay on the south, the port of call being Mandavi. To reach it by land, it is necessary to make a long journey from Bombay by way of Ahmedabad; after several changes, the traveller reaches a shore due south of Tuna in Kutch, whence a ferry runs daily backward and forward. Tuna is the head of the little railway which was built about twenty years ago to Bhul, the capital—pronounced Bhoj.

The journey from Tuna to the capital gives one a fair idea of the country. As the train winds its way into the interior, it passes through desert or arable land round the eastern end of the oranges of the southern hills until at last, after forty miles, one sees in the midst of a wide plain surrounded by hills the capital of this little state. The town is picturesquely situated, partly because it is well wooded, and has a large sheet of water on one side which is full in the rainy season, but more or less dried up when there are no rains.

Although there are never more than half a dozen Europeans in residence in Kutch, life to them is not unpleasant. There is excellent riding, plenty of lawn tennis, motoring over the 200 miles of road which have already been built, and driving in vehicles almost anywhere.

If relative isolation is no drawback then the Europeans have little to complain of, although they live amid a civilization which western influences in these days have barely touched. The Maharaja is both enterprising and enlightened, and his two grown-up sons are well versed in western ways, and have always taken part in the small social life which exists.

Incidents of Monday Night's Celebration.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—There were many amusing incidents Monday night, connected with the celebration of the return of the track team, Phelan, Butler, Skirring, and their Manager, E. J. Goodland.

Jackie there acted as if a horse had been turned on them and backed away. I again turned right and another fair young daughter of Terra Nova in the person of Miss Gertrude Oliphant came to my assistance and brought down rounds of applause from the delighted audience as she presented handsome Tom Butler with the cup he had so pluckily won.

I must also tell how Jim Vinnicombe, who by the way last year, in taking Jack Bell to Halifax, was the real originator of the whole affair, once more brought himself in the lime light.

In honouring our heroic men we honour ourselves. In the words of Drinkwater: 'When the high heart we magnify, And the sure vision celebrates, And worship greatest passing by, Ourselves are great.'

October 5, 1921. P.S.—I nearly forgot to mention how Eaddy Grace, the indefatigable Secretary of the N.A.A.A. and the National Sports Committee, worked one of our men at the Majestic Theatre, so kindly without charge placed at our disposal by Messrs. O'Neill and Condy, the proprietors, I had concluded my remarks welcoming the athletes when he, sitting at the table with Mr. Harry Phelan, the Vice-Chairman, said 'Ask the C.L.B. Band to play. They go wild, simply wild, over me.' Without thinking, I did so, but when I had made the announcement and heard the loud laughter of the audience, I realized something was up, and then it suddenly dawned on me that Paddy's Irish wit had put one over on me.

Timber With Steel Strength. However, strange it may seem, wood is stronger than steel, the hardest metal, when compared by weight. But wood is only strong one way—with the grain. A strip of pine wood cut with the grain can bear a much heavier load than a piece of steel wire of the same length and weight.

MUTT AND JEFF—AND JEFF ALMOST GOT AWAY WITH IT.

Cartoon strip featuring characters Mutt and Jeff. Mutt says: 'BUSINESS IS GOOD BUT I'VE GOT ONE BAD ACCOUNT: I'VE SENT JEFF A STATEMENT AND IF HE DOESN'T SETTLE HE WON'T GET ANY MORE MEAT AT THIS SHOP!' Jeff replies: 'NICE MORNING, MISTER MUTT! I WANT TO PAY YOU FOR THE MEAT I GOT LAST MONTH, AND I WANT A HAM TODAY!' Mutt says: 'FINE! YOUR BILL IS $4.99 JEFF!' Jeff replies: 'QUITE SO, QUITE SO! GOOD MORNING, MISTER MUTT!' Mutt says: 'JUST A MOMENT, JEFF. I THOUGHT YOU WANTED TO PAY LAST MONTH'S BILL.' Jeff replies: 'I DO, BUT I CAN'T!' Mutt says: 'PHOO!' and throws a can of lard at Jeff.
