A RICH FINE FLAVOR

Sold in four Qualities

The Imprisoned Heiress

The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XXV.

"We had a child of our own, of the same age, a healthy, active little creature, and when the little heiress grew so ill that we thought she must die, we sent away our servants, who went gladly for fear of contagion. We were thus left alone at Egremont, with two children and Toplift, our own child's nurse. I need not detail how we did it, but it is enough to say that in our fright lest the child should die, we sent our own little one with Toplift to one of the farms belonging to the estate—sent her as the little Lady Alexina. The little heiress recovered from the fever, but for a long time was so drooping that we expected her to die every moment. We congratulated ourselves on our foresight: We recalled our servants and our child, who returned as the heiress, and we fitted up in secret the haunted rooms for the occupancy of the rightful heiress. To account for the supposed absence of our child we stated that she had been taken abroad by a relative. Afterward we gave out that she had died abroad."

He put his hand to his side to press back the slow but steady jets of the life-fluid, and then resumed, gasping:

"So it was thought our Emily was dead. And our child was called the heiress, while the true heiress was shut up in the haunted rooms, with Toplift to wait upon her. It was a cruel wrong, but we did not mean it to be so. We meant to save ourselves, not to injure a hair of her dear head. She grew in health and strength, and then how we longed to undo our work! But it was too late. I can't talk much more, Alexina," and he pointed to the Lady Alexina, "is not the heiress. She is my own and only child. There stands the rightful heiress of Egremont, the true Lady Alexina, and he looked at Almee. "We called her Almee because we loved the little being we had wronged. Forgive me, both of you."

The deposed heiress drew back from her parent, regarding him with aversion, but Almee knelt beside him and kissed his damp brow, and assured him of her forgiveness.

"Kiss, forgive your father," begged the countess, wildly. "He is dying. You have not been so wronged as Almee, and she has pardoned him."

Thus urged, the Lady Alexina pressed a cold kiss upon the earl's face, and he did not notice the manner with which she did it.

When Almee arose from her knees beside her guardian she found herself in Lord Ashcroft's arms.

"Heaven bless you both," whispered the earl. "Almee has passed through the sorrows that befall every Lady of Egremont, and Alexina has now to bear hers. Almee, darling, when I am gone will you not provide for my wife and daughter?"

Almee promised, and he grew easier. "We will not dwell upon the death scene."

The earl lingered until the arrival of the physician, and soon after his soul passed out upon the ocean of eternity.

The Lady Almee was immediately acknowledged as the rightful heiress of Egremont, the countess, penitent, and grief-stricken, desiring to atone for the past. The poor widow could hardly believe her senses when Almee ordered that every courtesy should be shown to her, and set the example by treating her with affectionate deference, such as became a daughter.

Almee proved a far greater comfort in her hour of sorrow than did her own daughter.

It was Almee who soothed her grief, who read the Scriptures to her, who talked kindly of the dead earl, while Alexina lay in her bed, inconsolable for the loss of her beloved wealth, as well as for the awful fate of Lyle Indor.

The days and weeks passed. It was in the early spring when the betrothal of Lord Ashcroft to the Heiress of Egremont was consummated by their marriage.

There was a host of fashionable friends of the Ashcrofts up from London, among them Captain Challoner, who had come up to claim his reward for his years of patient waiting.

The Heir to Beecham Park

CHAPTER II.

"I will do all in my power for her," returned the younger woman; "but do not let me keep you from your dinner—indeed, you must want it."

Mrs. Graham rose and seated herself at the table. She felt weak and faint, but eating was almost an impossibility. Mardie, her food finished, her hands together and whispered a grace, then wriggled down from her chair and went to the fire.

"She must go to bed," said Mrs. Graham, rising again and ringing the bell; "she is growing tired now."

The words were quickly verified, for the little head suddenly began to droop, and the beautiful eyes to grow misty and sleepy; but, as Lady Coningham, who had hurriedly removed her gloves, knelt and began to unbuckle her frock, the little child pushed her away and looked round with a sudden quick feeling of fear and strangeness.

"Where's Mardie's mamma—where is mamma?" she murmured.

"Mamma is asleep," said Mrs.

ONTARIO WOMAN REGAINS HEALTH

Wants Other Women To Know About Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mount Forest, Ont. — "Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt weak and miserable, and had pains all through me. I was living in Alisa Craig at the time, and one day a friend came in and told me her experience of using the Vegetable Compound and advised me to take a bottle which I finally did. I began to get stronger and those pains left me. I am glad I found out about this medicine as I think there is none equal to it for women who have troubles of this kind. I cannot praise the Vegetable Compound too highly for the good it has done me. Whenever I know of a woman suffering I am glad to tell her of it."—Mrs. Wm. RUSSELL, R.R. No. 1, Mount Forest, Ontario.

Women throughout the Dominion are finding health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

No harmful drugs are used in its preparation—just roots and herbs—and it can be taken in safety even by a nursing mother. For sale by all druggists.

Crimean Naval Veteran

Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge, who died at his home near Kingston-on-Thames in mid-August, was born in 1839, the son of Archdeacon Bridge, of Newfoundland. As a boy of fourteen he joined his first ship, the Medea, in 1853, and he gave in his published reminiscences a picturesque account of the discomforts of those days in the Navy. The officers provided practically the whole of their mess equipment. The Government allowed an unpolished table and one blue and red checkered tablecloth of some stout cotton fabric. In ward-rooms and gun-rooms enough chairs to go around the table were supplied by the Government. In the midshipmen's berth the only seats were lockers. The members of the mess could, if they would, purchase cushions for the locker seats, but this "was not common, being thought unduly luxurious."

Clocks were unknown on board Her Majesty's ships in those days, and official time was kept by half-hour sand-glasses. With the exception of the chronometer and the compass for steering, every instrument used in the ship was provided by the officers out of their own pockets. The surgeons had to find all medical instruments. Even the carpenter's crew had to bring their own tools. The Medea carried in her armament some dozens of boarding-pikes and a number of tomahawks and cutlasses.

In 1854 the young midshipman served at the blockade of Archange, in the White Sea; in the Indian Mutiny year he was in the Bay of Bengal; at a later time he accompanied the naval brigade in Burmah. An important part of his career was passed on the Australian station, but his naval duties took him at one time or another to South America, Kamchatka, British Keith, conservator of the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, in a lecture to a diminished use of the jaws.

Mr. Walter Stoneman, who compiles the photographic record for the National Portrait College of the nation's most famous men, told a Daily Mail reporter recently that in general men's faces are becoming narrower and more refined.

"Comparisons between photographs of eminent men of 50 years ago and those of to-day show that modern men are much better looking than their grandfathers," he said. "The staid and heavy of modern life are doing much to alter the shape of faces. If the jaws are not being given so much hard work in eating as they were, increased talking is giving them plenty of exercise."

Mr. Stoneman described the "naval face" as the finest type to be found in this country.

His Mirror Told Him of Exhausted Condition

Mr. R. Paulin, Toutes Aides, Man., writes: "I became so run down and weak that my heart became affected, and I would sometimes have to remain in bed for several days."

Some one advised me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I did, and soon began to gain in weight and feel better. I have taken a great many boxes of these wonderful pills, and am feeling ten years younger. Dr. Chase's Medicines, as well as his Receipt Book, are a great help to us, for we live 40 miles from doctors and railroads."

"I know of a person," began the doctor; but Lady Coningham broke in eagerly:

"I will take her to Hurstley. There is a poor young woman, the wife of one of my gardeners, almost heart-broken through the death of her baby. Her cottage is not far from the Weald. I pass it every day in my rides, and I could see the child very often. Let her come there to-morrow, before you start. I will see Mrs. Morris to-night as I go home."

"That seems an excellent plan," agreed the elder woman—"at all events, for a time; but we must leave no stone unturned to find her relations."

"Will Sir Hubert like the arrangement, your ladyship?" asked Dr. Scott, as he rose to depart.

2,000 Homeless in Zero Weather and 140 Killed by Earthquake in Persia.—Allied Conference Most Successful Since the Armistice.

AN IMPORTANT SESSION.
PARIS, Jan. 14. Eleven powers participating in the conference of Allied Finance Ministers to-day signed the protocol for the distribution of the Dawes plan annuities. The final plenary session of the conference at the Quai D'Orsay occupied two hours. It was a week since the meetings of the Finance Ministers began and it was the first conference of twenty-nine states since the Armistice came to an end before the date scheduled and the only one in which every delegation returned home apparently satisfied. The most notable achievements of the conference were first, the determination of the distribution of the Dawes annuities between the Allies and their Associates; second, the obtaining of the United States as a partner with the Allies in the collection of payments from Germany under the Dawes scheme, and third, the negotiation of the Ruhr occupational account.

85 PER CENT. FOR UNION.
TORONTO, Jan. 14. A statement issued last night by Church Union headquarters says over 85 per cent of the Presbyterian congregations throughout the Dominion that have so far voted on Church Union have decided to go into the United Church of Canada. Of the 743 congregations voting 617 have decided for Union, of which 396 were unanimous in their decision.

UNITE AGAINST MUSSOLINI.
ROME, Jan. 14. The union of former Premiers Orlando and Salandra in opposition to the present Government, announced to-day. It was stated that the three leaders and their followers would go into the Chamber of Deputies for the purpose of opposing the pending election bill as a demonstration against the Cabinet. The billers of the three former Premiers in the Chamber are said to total 21 Deputies.

MINY KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE.
LONDON, Jan. 14. Four villages have been destroyed and 140 persons killed in an earthquake at Ardahan in Trans-Caucasia.

SUBMARINE UNDAUNTED.
CHATHAM, Mass., Jan. 14. Submarine S19 to-day was still held firmly on the outer bar of Orleans says a despatch to the Daily Mail from Constantinople. The despatch adds that 2,000 persons are homeless with the temperature 23 degrees Fahrenheit below zero. Earth tremors are continuing intermittently.

SENTECE COMMUTED.
MOSCOW, Jan. 14. Ivan Okladski, the 65 year old man who has been on trial on a charge of assisting the Czarist police in the extermination of the notorious organization known as Naarodnaya Volla (people's freedom) which 45 years ago sought the liberation of the Russians from the Czarist Oligarchy, to-day was found guilty and sentenced to death.

In view of the age of the defendant and the fact that the crime was committed so many years ago, the sentence was commuted to ten years' imprisonment.

PORTSMOUTH, N.H., on her way from Portsmouth, N.H., to New London, Conn. The crew remained on board last night and it was believed the stranded vessel was undamaged and would be refloated at flood tide later in the day.

FORTY MINERS INJURED.
MEXICO CITY, Jan. 14. Forty miners were injured yesterday, two perhaps fatally, when the cage in which they were being lowered into the shaft of La Luz mine, near Pachuca, dropped 180 feet owing to the breaking of the windlass cable. Not a man escaped unscathed and several suffered internal injuries. The man in charge of the windlass was arrested.

RUN OVER AND KILLED BY ENGINE.
HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 14. Alfred Nicholson, aged 55, was instantly killed in the round house yards this morning when the engine from which he had stepped and slipped on the ice ran over him cutting his body in two.

NOVA SCOTIA'S NEW GOVERNOR.
OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 14. James Robson Douglas, of Amherst was this morning appointed Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia in succession to His Honor MacCallum Grant who has resigned. The appointment dates from January 21st.

SKI JUMPER DIES.
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 14. Arne Hornstad, of Norway, aged 35, said to have won the world's ski jump title in Switzerland in 1920, and held it until 1922, died here to-day, following an operation for appendicitis. He left Norway three months ago and followed ski jumping meets through Canada to this city.

STEAMER WRECKED.
CORK, Ireland, Jan. 14. In a furious gale which swept the Irish coast last night, a steamer, believed to be the British freighted Cardiff Hall, from Buenos Aires Dec. 7 for Cork, went ashore and was wrecked in Conekilly Bay. One body has been washed up on the beach. The fate of the remainder of the crew is unknown but there is little hope for their safety.

BODIES OF BABIES FOUND IN A SEWER.
RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 14. The bodies of four babies, ranging in age from five months to three years, were found in a sewer here late to-day. The authorities are searching in the belief that others may be located.

REFORMATORY DESTROYED BY FIRE.
HUTCHINSON, Kansas, Jan. 14. Five hundred prisoners were given temporary freedom and rendered homeless to-day by a fire that swept the central buildings of the state reformatory here, causing one hundred thousand dollars damage. One prisoner escaped but was caught.

PIMPLES SPREAD OVER FOREHEAD

Inflamed and Itched Badly. Cuticura Healed.

"My trouble began with a breaking out of pimples at the edge of my forehead. At first the pimples were very small but became larger and were inflamed. They itched badly for a while and were so embarrassing that I had to go out. My hair fell out. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more, and in two or three weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Georgia McMillan, 1843 Semar Blvd., Spokane, Wash., July 10, 1923.

Prince Addresses C. L. B. Gathering

HEIR TO THRONE REFERS TO THE BRIGADE IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Speaking at the Festival Dinner of the C.L.B. in the London Guildhall, the Prince of Wales said that the movement was particularly strong in Newfoundland.

His Royal Highness, proposing the toast "Success to the C.L.B.," said: "Although I am not officially connected with the Church Lads' Brigade I most certainly feel intimate with this great movement. I am Colonel-in-Chief of the Cadet Force. (Cheers). Some of you may know it. Those who do not will find it written on the Menu. I am Colonel-in-Chief of that Force and very proud of it. (Cheers). The Church Lads' Brigade forms the largest individual unit of this Force, and I think that is one of the reasons why I was asked to take the chair this evening. In that capacity I have met a very great number of members of the Church Lads' Brigade.

In proposing this toast the following points strike me particularly. First of all, that the Lord Mayor should have thought fit to give us hospitality this evening is one of them. (Cheers). It helps any movement or association tremendously if it can hold its Annual Dinner at the Guildhall and have the Lord Mayor present. (Cheers). Then, the mere fact that your Annual Dinner is so well attended means that the Church Lads' Brigade has a great vitality, and that it is well worth backing and well worth supporting. I think that is a good augury for the future. (Cheers).

The Great Problem.
Then as to its work. We all of us know that the most critical time in a boy's life is after he leaves the elementary school and has to seek employment. He is then on the threshold of manhood, and in many cases he has to do the work of a man; but he is not old enough and has not the experience to know the many pitfalls. This is the great problem, and it is faced and has been for a long time by the Church Lads' Brigade with full courage and success. (Cheers). Over a million lads have passed through its ranks since the foundation of the movement by Colonel Gee in 1891. (Cheers). Towards the solution of this very difficult but perpetual problem a high standard of good citizenship and good Church-making is set by the Church Lads' Brigade and maintained by its officers. There then is another point. Militarism in the aggressive sense of the word has never been encouraged and never will be (Cheers), but by a form of organization—that is drill, discipline and uniform—a manly Christian character is developed by boys of all classes (cheers)—and a spirit of patriotism, self-sacrifice and responsibility fostered.

I think it was Professor Drummond who said with great truth: Put a boy into uniform and you make a man of him. (Cheers).

That this is the spirit that pervades the Church Lads' Brigade was very clearly shown in the Great War. (Cheers). No fewer than a quarter of a million members and ex-members enlisted, gaining many honours and many decorations, and no fewer than 22 Victoria Crosses. (Cheers). That is a record that this movement may well be proud of; and it raised and equipped and trained the 16th (Service) Battalion of the Kings' Royal Rifles with the Reserve Battalion, the 19th. They achieved honours in many battles including High Wood and Neuve Eglise, and others with which many of you here to-night are familiar.

mentary school and has to seek employment. He is then on the threshold of manhood, and in many cases he has to do the work of a man; but he is not old enough and has not the experience to know the many pitfalls. This is the great problem, and it is faced and has been for a long time by the Church Lads' Brigade with full courage and success. (Cheers). Over a million lads have passed through its ranks since the foundation of the movement by Colonel Gee in 1891. (Cheers). Towards the solution of this very difficult but perpetual problem a high standard of good citizenship and good Church-making is set by the Church Lads' Brigade and maintained by its officers. There then is another point. Militarism in the aggressive sense of the word has never been encouraged and never will be (Cheers), but by a form of organization—that is drill, discipline and uniform—a manly Christian character is developed by boys of all classes (cheers)—and a spirit of patriotism, self-sacrifice and responsibility fostered.

Refers to Newfoundland.
In the summer of 1921 I had the honour of inspecting a representative contingent of boys on the occasion of their departure to visit the battle-fields where their elder brothers had fought and died, but all that was a long time ago. A lot of things have happened since then and the war is a thing of the past. But the Church Lads' Brigade is carrying on its splendid work and moulding the character on Christian lines of many thousands of boys between the ages of 13 and 21. A great point I think is this, that you do not force your members or force anything else. You help and you guide so that these principles, which are discipline, goodwill and co-operation take root and grow by themselves. (Cheers).

Those gentlemen who are going to follow me with speeches are far better able than myself to tell of the work and the expansion of the movement, and to plead its cause. They will tell you how, thanks to the successful management, the Brigade has weathered a very difficult period since the war. I understand that the year 1923 was a particularly critical one. They will tell you of the expenses of uniforms, camps and training that are borne and of the large portion that is borne by the boys themselves. They will also tell you how the movement extends overseas to the Dominions. The movement is particularly strong in Newfoundland, and I am looking forward myself to seeing some of the Companies in South Africa. (Cheers). Lord Grenfell has just handed me a cable that he received during the dinner. It reads: "South African comrades, thirtieth anniversary, congratulate overseas comrades thirtieth anniversary; wishing Festival Dinner every success." (Cheers). That makes the movement a very imperial one, and the speakers who follow me will tell you of that. I had the pleasure of having a long talk with your splendid Secretary, Mr. Rogers, the other day, and he told me these things and a good many others as well. (Cheers).

It is my duty, as your Chairman, to appeal to you all; and from the little I have said this evening, you cannot be doubtful in any way of the value of the Church Lads' Brigade to the community as a whole. I want them if possible to get sufficient interest so that they will want to find out a great deal; and if they do that the result will be, I am sure, that they will swell the ranks of the supporters of the Brigade (cheers), to which I now ask you to wish every possible prosperity. (Cheers).

There is only one "Congoleum" and you will know it by the Gold Seal imprimatur out of the blood and general lassitude and weakness ensues. This condition is not only disagreeable but dangerous as well. The imprimatur in the blood are the seeds of disease. If they are not removed Rheumatism, Lumbago, Gravel, Dropsy, Diabetes, or Bright's Disease may result.

Important Warning!

The Gold Seal pasted on every Congoleum Rug is a guarantee of highest quality and an assurance that you are getting value for your money.

Congoleum Rugs are waterproof, dust-proof and sanitary, they lie flat, will not turn up at the edges, and do not require to be tacked to your floors. At house cleaning time you can take them up in a few minutes. With Congoleum Rugs on your floors, you have no troublesome sweeping or beating to do: five minutes with a damp cloth will suffice to make a Congoleum Rug look like new.

In addition to the above good points, Congoleum Rugs may be had in the most beautiful patterns and colourings imaginable and at quarter the cost of a carpet square. Congoleum Rugs are more stylish than floor canvas; people of refinement prefer Congoleum Rugs. Ask for the booklet "Modern Rugs for Modern Homes." Any Dry Goods Store will give you one FREE. Once More From Nova Scotia

Comes a Tribute to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Joshua Smith, well-known ex-Postmaster, tells how Dodd's Kidney Pills relieved him.

Fort Hood Island, N.S., Jan. 14.—(Special).—"I used Dodd's Kidney Pills two years ago. I had poor circulation in my legs and feet. I used to have hot water tanks at night to keep my feet warm. I was able to do without them after using one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

I also had urinary trouble, but now I am quite well. My age is 80 years." This statement is made by Mr. J. Smith of this place.

Dodd's Kidney Pills simply heal sick kidneys. They relieved Mr. Smith because his ailments were symptoms of kidney disease. When the kidneys get out of order they fail to strain the impurities out of the blood and general lassitude and weakness ensues. This condition is not only disagreeable but dangerous as well. The impurities in the blood are the seeds of disease. If they are not removed Rheumatism, Lumbago, Gravel, Dropsy, Diabetes, or Bright's Disease may result.

Light Wines.

From many a thirsty city, from many a village here, there comes the plaintive cry, "Give us light wines and beer!" We would not have uncrated the corpse of Barley-corn; we'd not have reinstated the drunkard's morning horn.

But beer and wine won't hurt you, or fill your dome with bees; you may preserve your virtue and hit up drinks like these. The present law's too drastic, it robs our lives of cheer; oh, make it more elastic, and give us wine and beer." But, statesmen, ere you tinker with laws now on the books, to soothe the anguished drinker who will not sip from brooks, frame up a law to banish all wagons using gas, let every flivver vanish, and from the highways pass. Expunge the humble Lizzie, the chooping four and six; with work like this get busy, for beer and gas won't mix. The streets and roads are crowded with palpitating wains, and we should have unclouted and keen and normal brains. Two snifters from a bottle unbalances the mind, and man will open the throttle, and whoop, and go it blind. Even while we're drinking water, deprived of wine and beer, we mark the road with slaughter, and fill the world with fear. And when we're primed with toddies, however mild they be, the swath of mangled bodies will be asight to see. If statesmen would deliver the thirsty from their woe, they first should kill the flivver that frolics to and fro.

Canadian Murderer
Trilled to Rumania, Where He Was Killed in Quarrel.
Toronto, Jan. 3.—Retribution, stern and dogged, has pursued a Canadian murderer to his village home in Rumania and Nick Rutka has paid with his life for his part in the killing of Adam Selton, a compatriot, on August 20, 1922, at Thorold, Ont. The Ontario Provincial Police, who had traced Rutka to Rumania and were engaged in efforts to extradite him, yesterday received a message from Hon. George A. Simard, of Montreal, Consul General for Rumania in Canada, giving official notification of the killing of the murderer in his homeland and conveying the information that Rutka confessed to the Thorold murder. No details are given other than that Rutka met a violent death following a quarrel.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY TO POLICYHOLDERS

"MY wife's people are well able to look after her and the children," you say.

Supposing that through misfortune some of your relatives were thrown on your hands for support—would you like it?

Is it fair then—is it manly—to place your wife and little ones face to face with the possibility of at any time becoming a burden to their friends?

They would prefer modest independence as a result of your forethought, to bounteous charity from relatives. An Imperial Monthly Income Policy will provide for their every need.

A Crowning Achievement

A signal success was achieved by the Allies yesterday when they signed the protocol for the distribution of annuities under the Dawes' plan.

The most important feature of the Conference was the fact that the United States representatives forsook their former role of observers and became active participants in the proceedings.

After the Armistice many meetings were held by the Allies and eventually the Treaty of Versailles was signed, but that agreement was only the beginning of vexatious disputes among themselves.

When France saw that united action was out of the question, and that the chances of securing an indemnity from her enemy were slipping away, she decided to act on her own.

Later, the Dawes plan was agreed to, and the successful conclusion of the conference yesterday, which resulted not only in an agreement on the question of reparations payments, but in the renewal of amicable relations among the Allies.

Our Priceless Gift

As a result of certain information gleaned by a Telegram representative recently in connection with the "Newfoundland naval squadron" which was secured for the Colony by Sir William Coaker and his worthy colleagues in 1920, enquiries were made in the Government Departments with the result that the whole story was obtained of the transaction, and of the by no means insignificant account which is outstanding in connection with this "gift."

about 1400 tons displacement, 2 hulls—giving a speed of 16 knots and both a speed of 16 knots. The ship is only a year or two launched. The Daisy is about 17 years old, has a speed of 11 knots, and will be used as a lighthouse supply ship.

The facts which have come to light are as follows: The Watchful was bought for £15,000 and £2,000 was expended on her. For the Lobelia, a free gift, £4,848 was paid for the supplies which she contained, namely: compasses, telescopes, projectiles, furniture, beds, refrigerators, portable forges, weighing machines, etc.

The Daisy, which was presented to the Newfoundland Government on condition that they undertook the repairs necessary, involved the country in an expenditure of £4,817, which included the purchase of such articles as compasses, barometers, bedding and a lifeboat, amounting to £184.

The Watchful, which is still waiting for some one to decide what use she can be made of, added to our indebtedness to the British Government by an amount of about $10,000. Now the latter present a bill outstanding for $16,018.11.8, and all because the late Administration were utterly devoid of business ability or else were regardless of their responsibility.

U. S. WEALTH INCREASE 72 PER CENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. The wealth of the United States at the end of December 1924 on the best estimates available of all property classified by the Census Bureau was placed to-day at $320,803,862,000. This was an increase of 72.2 per cent. for the decade, since in 1912 the Census found nation's wealth to be $186,299,664,000,000.

RECORD DEEP SEA SALVAGE OPERATION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. Captain Benjamin Leavitt of Philadelphia has broken all record for deep sea salvage in recovering a $600,000 cargo of copper that had lain since 1869 in the wreck of the British frigate Cape Horn off the coast of Chile, said messages received to-day by Westinghouse Lamp Co. from Salvage ship Blakely. It is Capt. Leavitt's ambition to next salvage $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 of treasure that lies in the sunken hull of the Lusitania.

NEFLER TAKES HIS LIFE.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 15. With part of his chest torn away from a gunshot wound over the heart, the lifeless body of James Syme was found in his barn at Litchfield, about seven miles from here yesterday morning by his wife when she went into the barn in search of eggs. The coroner's inquest returned a verdict of suicide. Syme, who was a veteran of the great war, was a native of Newfoundland and is survived by a brother living there and a sister in Sydney.

CHEVROLET

Lure of the Beehive

One of the cleverest birds in the world is the "honey guide" of Africa, which has learned to entice men to open beehives for him. The "honey guide" has a sweet tooth, as well as a liking for the larvae of bees. But he is a small bird and beehives are hard for him to crack. So he seeks out a man, and when he finds one, perches in a tree and begins to chatter. This man that he knows where there is a beehive and that he wants the man to help him. He leads his human partner to the hive, stopping at intervals to wait for his slower partner to catch up. These birds are highly valued in Africa, and to kill them is a crime punishable by law.

Methodist College Clinic

REPORT OF NURSE LODER.

The operetta, "The China Shop" was repeated by the Methodist College girls in the College Hall last night before a fair audience. In the course of the evening Nurse Loder, who has been in charge of the College clinic during the past year, made the following brief report of her work:—

For the past twenty-five years in St. John's the health of the pupils attending public schools has been given medical attention. Before this the work was taken up by private individuals, but its importance became so apparent that the Government eventually took it over. The school nurse goes through the school and examines each pupil three times each year, and special cases are given more frequent attention.

In the United States and Canada this work has also been organized under Government supervision, and the children are regularly examined, and the parents informed of any physical defects which are then attended to by the family physician, or in other cases by the State doctor.

The object of the school medical work is to promote the best possible health and fullest development, both mentally and physically of the child, and to prevent disease by removing the cause. The very apparent cases here is defective teeth. The number of children who are defective in this way should make the desire to start a Dental Clinic a very serious matter.

It is of the utmost importance that parents should understand that most of a child's growth and development, depends upon its mouth and teeth being healthy and clean.

Teeth which have holes in them, however small should be stopped to be healthy. Teeth that are too far apart and all unhealthy roots should be removed, especially when they do not ache, as it is the painless, unwholesome roots that cause the body to be poisoned and the breath to smell.

Defective teeth have led to many preventable illnesses, such as anemia (poorness of blood), indigestion, bad skin, sore throat, enlarged tonsils, lumps in the neck, rheumatic pains, and sometimes even consumption.

I have now completed 12 months' work in the six Methodist schools in this city, and have examined 1784 individual children. I have found defective teeth in more than half these children, a number had enlarged tonsils, while quite a few were underweight. A number had defective vision, and this is a matter that is of the most importance to children whose education depends so largely on the state of their eyes. In relation to the children under weight I have noticed up to the age of eight years they appear to be of normal development, but after that age their development is not normal and they are under the standard weight. This shows that there is some factor affecting the children's vitality and growth, and from my observations I should say that the chief enemy is defective teeth. Not only is the normal physical development retarded, but also the mental powers of the child are affected, and such children cannot make proper progress in their studies while suffering from these physical ills.

When I observe these physical defects I notify the parents so that they may call in their family physician, who will do what may be necessary to cure these ills.

I feel sure that the parents of the children are much more anxious in regard to their physical welfare than they are at the College authorities, and my notification to the parents is simply to give them the opportunity of co-operating in this work, and thus to make certain that the child will have the best possible chance.

Weather Wisdom

"Red at night is the shepherd's delight. Red in the morning is the shepherd's warning."

This is the old English rhyme, but the science expresses it in nearly every country in the world. Even the ancient Egyptians and Greeks had sayings similar to the above. Furthermore, it is scientifically true. Red skies are really weather forecasts.

If the atmosphere is clear in the evening or morning the sun's light is seen, because the blue, of which the ordinary white light of the sun is made up, has been absorbed by the great amount of atmosphere through which the slanting rays of the sun have to pass.

In the evening the rosy light of the sunset illuminates the clouds on the eastern side of the sky. This shows that the clouds have come by and are making the rain with them. Thus we see red at night, indicating fine weather. In the morning, the rising sun, being in the east, the light illuminates the western horizon and its clouds, which are on their way to us. We need not be shepherds to know that if the sky is red and lowering in the morning we are in for a good "soaker" before lunch-time comes.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

SHE SAYS MY GUESS IS RIGHT.

"Growing old is one of Nature's processes and Nature's processes are never abrupt or painful. I do not mean, of course, that one never regrets one's youth, but that one does not regret it half so poignantly as one expects to when one is young. At least that is the way it seems to me. But then I have not gone so very far yet. Perhaps some of my Reader Friends who are far beyond me on the great highway will tell me whether my guess is right. I hope so."

For this reason. One of my Reader Friends did what I said I hoped some of them would do.

From One Who Knows.

She is a dear, little old lady. The last three words of that phrase are what she calls herself, so I know I shall not offend her by the adjective "old." She might pass for 60 if one judged by activity and appearance, but she confesses cheerfully to the allotted three score years and ten, and then a little more. And this is the message she sends you and me from her station so much further along on the great highway. "Your guess is just right, Ruth."

It is pleasant to be told that one is right about any thing. So Many Dread Growing Old. And especially when the rightness means so great a lessening of the fears and doubts that beset us. I almost believe there are more people who are afraid of growing old than who are afraid of dying.

And if growing old—like so many of the long, steep hills that confront us on the highway—is going to happen out as we approach the foot of it, how pleasant to know it now.

Mellowing Not Souring. My dear little old lady, sent me, besides this word of encouragement, half a dozen rules as to how to grow old:

Grow old gracefully. Grow old cheerfully. Grow old willingly. Grow old happily. Grow old graciously.

We have all seen a few people who have perfectly fulfilled those rules for ripening into old age just as Nature meant them to. And the respect and love they command, and the peace and serenity that is theirs should surely make us determine that we can and will—do—like-wise.

A One-Wheel Cycle

Spectators at the National Stadium in Rome were surprised not long ago when they saw a huge wheel, driven by a motor-cycle engine, rushing at high speed around the track. Within the wheel they saw the driver, his hands gripping an ordinary motor-car steering wheel, his feet resting on ordinary motor-cycle pedals. His body kept the wheel in perfect balance. At every turn he would lean to one side or the other. When the spinning wheel finally slowed down and came to a stop, he simply rested both of his feet on the ground, then let down a standard to keep the wheel from toppling over!

The driver of this remarkable vehicle was Davide Gialaghi. Having an idea that one wheel would be more efficient than two, he had perfected what more than one inventor before him had attempted unsuccessfully.

Consequently the driver does not turn with the wheel, but maintains his upright position. He balances the machine much as he would a motor-cycle, and regulates the direction to be taken by the vehicle by inclining his body to the right or left, and by a steering wheel.

THE GOLFER'S WALL.

Oh, I can shoot a hole in par. Some of my drives are very good. My mashie shots successful are. I'm not afraid to use the wood; I have been out in thirty-nine. This year, I'd say, three times or four. But still I make this doleful whine: I never get a medal score!

At match play I can hold my own. In fact at times I'm hard to beat. The golfers I have overthrown. All said my work was rather neat; Full many a day I've known the thrill Of drives two hundred yards and more. I think I've learned the game, but still I never get a medal score!

When I review at night my card, Six lovely fours I smile to see; And two of them exceeding hard. As all who play the course agree: And here I note a "birdie" two. And there a five worth gloating o'er. But there's a curse on all I do. I never get a medal score.

Somewhere along the course it seems It is my lot to take an eight. Some times a nine wrecks all my dreams. And leaves me sad and desolate: To-day I had ten-strokes where I "holed out" in three the day before. Oh, how much longer must I cry: I never get a medal score!

Cathedral Saved by Diver

The fascinating story of the saving of Winchester Cathedral is told by Sir Francis Fox in "Sixty Years of Engineering."

The problem, as the great engineer conceived it, was to remove from beneath its foundations "the eight-foot layer of wet peat, on the top of which the building was founded, and insert in its place cement or concrete based solidly on the gravel, flint, and chalk below."

This work was carried out, in the course of five and a half years, by one man, a marine diver named W. A. Walker, working in complete darkness. He picked the peat by sections from under the walls, and embedded in its place concrete and cement which he himself had to bring down from the surface. In any record of the heroic craftsmanship this feat would assuredly claim one of the highest places. MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR ACHES AND PAINS.

MEMBERS OF MR. GRACE MAKE PLANS FOR GREAT IMPROVEMENTS TO THEIR TOWN.

(H. F. SHORTISS.)

Article XIX.

HARBOR GRACE, Sept. 7, 1832.

The gentlemen appointed at the Meeting held at the Court on Monday, 27th August, 1832, as Commissioners for the purpose of laying out the streets for a town after the disastrous fire of 18th met at once, and appointed Thos. Ridley Chairman, with Mr. Pack, Geo. Lilly, Patrick and Richard Anderson as assessors—the last mentioned being the Secretary.

According to Resolutions already passed, the Main Street, now called Harbor Street, was to be 60 feet wide, four cross streets or firebreaks 40 feet wide.

The first firebreak was to be, between the premises of H. W. Danvers and Daniel Candler's, Victoria Street was the name given.

The second firebreak was on the site formerly occupied by William's Hotel, already mentioned, and must have crossed a portion of the good times that had in celebrating their Titular in LeMarchand Road, or more likely known as Gas House Hill, and this locality.

The third firebreak was formed down from St. Paul's Church to Point of Beach, and called Harbor Street or Church Hill.

The fourth firebreak was to be the site of Kerry Lane to at least 40 feet wide. This must have been looked upon by the owners as an extremely valuable piece of land, as for some reason the Commissioners failed to carry out the plans laid down, and Kerry Lane remains to-day about 6 feet wide. It should have been widened when Garland Street was laid out to the Railway Station, as it is a continuation of the waterfront, and is late, and this Lane awaits its fate, and this Lane awaits its fate during the next hundred years, that it has had in the past.

It is only look at the town of Harbor Grace to see how well these plans were carried out their work, the valuable buildings that were on these streets.

Another big fire in 1858, Water Street was widened still more to its present state. Bannerman Street must have been formed at this later date, as old plans show it as a narrow lane leading from the waterfront beyond Josiah Parkina's residence, which must have been one of the principal dwellings in the town at that time, and probably built about 1825.

Previous to the first in 1832, one of the main arteries was a lane, which led up just east of Victoria Street, and joined with Death Hill as the path to Lady Lake and the woods.

The town of Harbor Grace became a place of great importance in the fifties and sixties, when the firms of Ridley, Munn and Donnelly were named to conjure with throughout the whole country, when Harvey Street, Noad Street and others were built.

In some of my old documents I notice a letter written in 1846 by Edward Walmsley of Carbonear to Hon. John Munn of Harbor Grace, in which he requests an interview with him before he proceeds on his legislative duties to the ragged city. That very expression shows the feeling that the citizens of Carbonear and Harbor Grace had towards the city of St. John's at that time. The firm of Walmsley was an important one in Carbonear for several years.

There was another firm, Collins and Legge, that carried on a large business in Carbonear at that time. They had a large establishment starting where Wm Duff & Sons now carry on business, right west to the public wharf. One of the Legges married a Wiltshire, and the portion of the property where Messrs. Duff are now, came to them from the Wiltshire estate. I went to school with the son of the head of the Wiltshire firm, Jim and John, at the famous Grammar School in Harbor Grace. They left the country many years ago, and were several years my senior.

To come back to my documentary evidence, I see the record of the marriage, on Dec. 18th, 1832, of John Fitzgerald was the grandfather of a portion of the Garland property, a few particulars of which will interest many residents of Harbor Grace.

The Garlands are a very historic family, sparing no expense for King and Country when the opportunity occurred. At one time they were owners of all the land, including the Point of Beach, and extending east from Cochrane Street, down beyond Kerry Lane—and from the sea-shore right back to the woods. The old records show that the old Surrogate, Charles Davis Garland, presented to the Church of England that land on which St. Paul's and the Rectory now stand, and about the same time, 1855, he presented to Capt. James Cook, the celebrated navigator, who was surveying the coast of Newfoundland, sufficient land at the Point of Beach, to erect a Land Mark for his sailing directions when entering the harbor. When old Surrogate Charles Garland saw the land to the Church, he stipulated that he and his family were to have a free pew for all time. I had heard this mentioned a hundred times when I was a youngster.

The present lighthouse (on Point of Beach) was built in 1850 on the site selected by Capt. Cook, which was said previous to that date to have been a large heap of stones. The famous shipbuilder, Michael Kearney, had the contract to build the lighthouse, and his foreman was a six-foot-six Scotchman, named Gunn, with a fiery red head and whiskers. I was told this by a man who saw the lighthouse completed. The above about Surrogate Garland is a very interesting tradition, and shows the public spirit of the man, and an example for others to this day. The Church was for the spiritual welfare of the people, but the Point of Beach was a gift for the bodily welfare of the mariners of this country.

In my next I will give some very interesting family traditions about the Hapspisley and Trapnell families that are well worth pursuing. They were both Bristol families, and very highly connected—and both are mentioned in these old documents.

Machine That Guide Ships

A Wonderful Mechanism and How It Works.

Making the compass guide the ship is one of the latest achievements of marine engineering.

The oldest and most skilled helmsman finds it impossible to guide a ship exactly in a straight line, especially in bad weather, and the constant small deviations from its set path make a journey slower and less certain.

So the automatic pilot has come about, and to-day giant liners are being made to steer themselves. The Berengaria is the largest ship to be fitted with the apparatus, and, after making one turn of a little wheel to set the direction in which she is to go, the vessel can be left to herself to make a bee-line across the Atlantic with no man's hand upon the steering wheel.

Keeping the Ship in Its Course.
The secret of the control lies in the master-compass, a gyroscopic compass of great magnetic power, which points due north with dead accuracy, and rights itself instantly on the slightest movement of the ship.

Just as one master electric clock can operate a hundred others in a big building, so the gyro-compass electrically operates a number of repeater compasses placed in different parts of the ship. One only of these repeaters, or receivers, operates the ship's helm.

The compass receiver contains an electric coil, in reality a sort of switch, which on the least movement of the ship from its set course closes the circuit of a relay which starts an electric motor in the lower part of the self-steering outfit. A toothed wheel on the axle of the electric motor is connected by a chain with a toothed wheel on the axle of the steering wheel.

In this way any turn of the compass makes a similar turn of the steering wheel. The turning of the steering wheel instantaneously follows any swerving to one side of the ship, so that the ship itself is at once steered back into its set course.

Automatic steering with the gyro-compass considerably shortens the time of a journey across the Atlantic, and when we remember that a big ship will burn a hundred tons of coal in an hour, the economy of the self-steering apparatus can be understood.

Compass Floating in Mercury.

The gyrostatic apparatus used on the Berengaria is the invention of an English engineer, Sperry, but when the ship was taken over from Germany she was equipped with a German system, which was originally devised by Dr. Anschutz-Kaempfe for a submarine that was to go to the North Pole.

The compass is floated in a bath of mercury, so that its movements are almost entirely free of friction and wonderfully swift. This swiftness of movement is the chief secret of the apparatus, for a deviation in the ship's course is put right so quickly that in the roughest sea the vessel leaves a wake that is almost uncanonically straight.

A great use of these steering compasses is being made in experiments in directing ships by wireless.

A Boon to Bachelors

in which there is a proper place for every article of a man's clothing.

It looks like an ordinary chair, but in its back it can hold a man's coat and shirt without wrinkling them. Trousers are placed on a swinging roller just below the top piece of the back; boots on a side shelf beneath the seat. There is a handy adjustable footrest which is pulled out in front, in which there are compartments for a shoe brush and a clothes brush. Collars, ties, and other small articles find a place in a drawer under the chair seat. The drawer is used for pyjamas in the daytime.

A man may undress and place every article of his clothing in its proper place without rising from the chair. It costs little more than a plain, straight-backed chair, in spite of its ingenious design.

A Push-Pull Audio Amplifier

So many of our readers have requested diagram and building instructions for a push-pull audio amplifier that we are printing the information and wiring diagram to-day.

A push-pull audio amplifier is not particularly difficult to construct. The only apparatus needed comprises two sockets, two tubes, two rheostats (preferably and two special push-pull audio transformers. These are known as the input and output transformers, respectively. Before push-pull amplifiers were very popular these special transformers were not available, and it used to be the practice to hook two ordinary audio transformers with their primaries and secondaries in series. However, the special transformers—that is, those with tapped windings—are now available, and it is not necessary to resort to the practice of hooking two separate instruments together.

The diagram is shown at the head of the column, and should be followed closely. There is nothing difficult about it, and no "kinks" that have to be considered. The hook-up is "regular" in every particular.

Note particularly, the "C" battery. You should be sure to include this as otherwise you will run down your "B" batteries very rapidly—especially if more than 60 volts is used on the tubes. The correct value of "C" battery will depend to some extent on the type of tube used. Directions in the tube carton will tell you how much to use for the different plate voltages. Roughly, however, the "C" battery voltage should be about one-tenth of the "B" battery voltage. That is, if the "B" battery voltage is 80, the "C" battery should be 8 volts. This system will work out fairly satisfactorily.

There is one thing to be considered by the reader and prospective builder, and that is just when and where a push-pull amplifier is needed. It is foolish to waste an extra tube if it is not going to do any good.

For a one-stage amplifier we would never advise the use of a push-pull amplifier. When UV201-A tubes are used we would not advise it in the second stage of amplification, but if WD11 or WD12 tubes are to be utilized, it is a good idea to make the second stage of amplification a push-pull stage. UV 1199's, used not to be push-pull for the second stage, although it would be of some advantage where maximum results are desired.

For the third stage of amplification, it is usually a good idea to use push-pull. An exception to this is where very low-ratio transformers (2:1 for instance) are used in all three stages. Under these circumstances, the last stage need not be push-pull where UV201-A tubes are used, but should be push-pull for UV1199's, WD11's and WD12's.

Obituary

JEREMIAH HALLERAN.

It is with genuine regret that we record the passing of Mr. Jeremiah Halleran, a well known Boston Newfoundlander, whose death occurred at his home, 26 Laurel Street, Roxbury, on Saturday last at the age of 79 years, after but a few days' illness.

Mr. Halleran was born in Halifax, N.S. in 1845, but as a young man went to Newfoundland and settled in St. John's, where he engaged in building and contracting. He later entered into partnership with Mr. Gen. Herder under the firm name of Herder & Halleran, and they carried on an extensive business in the city.

Jeremiah Halleran took an active interest in public life in St. John's, and was returned as a candidate for St. John's East. He also ran for councillor for ward No. 1 in 1888 in the first municipal election by ballot, but was defeated.

For many years he was prominently identified with the Mechanics' Society, and held the office of president from 1891 to 1894.

In the early nineties Mr. Halleran came to Boston with his family and settled in Roxbury where he resided up to the time of his death. The active interest which he showed in Newfoundland affairs at home was continued in the land of his adoption, for he became closely identified with the promotion and progress of the Newfoundlanders' Mutual Benefit Association of Boston, of which he was a past president. Up to the day of his death Jeremiah Halleran's interest in the welfare of Nfld. and Newfoundlanders in Boston held a foremost place, as his regular and faithful attendance at and active participation in the meetings of the Association showed. At the election of officers for the ensuing year held last month, he was re-appointed one of the Trustees, and his familiar face and kindly voice will be greatly missed.

During his residence in Boston, Mr. Halleran was for the past 27 years connected with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the Rogers Building as a designer.

He leaves surviving his wife, nee Ellen Winifred Dyer, daughter of the late Richard Dyer of St. John's, one son, Jeremiah of Wollaston, Mass., and four daughters, Elizabeth, Rose N. and Fanny, of Roxbury, Mass., and Mrs. Davis Ryan, of New York.

The funeral which was largely attended took place on Monday, the pallbearers consisting of a representation from the Newfoundlanders' Mutual Benefit Association.

Mr. Halleran was greatly interested in the progress of the "Weekly," and was a frequent contributor to our pages.

The "Weekly" joins the many friends and relatives in extending to the family of the deceased deep sympathy in their bereavement.—Nfld. Weekly, Boston, Jan. 10.

Samoans Desire Rule by British

Former German Subjects Express Love for New Zealand.

Wellington, N.Z., Jan. 5.—(Canadian Press via Reuter's).—"Our true desire is that the British flag may continue to fly over us in Samoa, and now that we are on the eve of our departure from the beautiful land of New Zealand, we have a greater desire than ever that the flag of that great nation may remain over Samoa as long as the sun shines on earth."

This is the message sent in the form of a telegram to Sir Francis Bell, leader of the Council of New Zealand, by a delegation from the Samoan Native Parliament which has been visiting New Zealand. The telegram was sent on the eve of the visitors' departure for home. It mentioned that the sentiment contained in the message had been expressed in their speeches in different parts of New Zealand and also in the Samoan Parliament.

"We return to Samoa with our hearts filled with precious things which include a great love for New Zealand and for its wise guardianship of Samoa," the message continues, "and with happy memories of our reunion with our Maori brothers. Long life to you and may God Save the King."

The Samoan Islands formerly belonged to Germany. Western Samoa, consisting of eight islands, is now under the mandatory control of New Zealand and the remaining islands belong to the United States.

R. L. Stevenson, the famous writer, lived in Samoa for a number of years and his grave is near Apia, Samoa.

Women as Diamond Diggers

SIX MONTHS IN THE WILDS OF BRITISH GUIANA.

I see no reason (writes Miss Gwen Richardson in the Daily Express) why diamond mining should not be added to the ever-increasing list of spartan callings in which women can share with men their difficulties, dangers and triumphs.

Diamond mining can hardly be called a profession. Rather it is a wild speculation, with almost insurmountable difficulties and perils, but these only lend glamour to the adventure.

I would advise no women who are afflicted with the modern curse of "nerves" to consider such an exploit. The utter loneliness of the forests and the weird unaccountable sounds that echo through the nights are enough to test the strongest nerves. Then there are the creeping horrors—snakes, scorpions, spiders and ants—creatures that every woman loathes.

Home-Making in the Jungle.

The most suitable costume for a woman is slacks tucked into heavy field boots. I myself wore a kilt over my slacks. A felt hat is sufficient protection in the forest against the equatorial sun; the green roof of leaves is so complete that I usually went bareheaded.

My equipment included a tent, camp-bed, revolver and cartridges, medicine chest, a bush knife to cut my way through the undergrowth, a tub in which my Indian maid prepared a hot bath for me at the end of a strenuous day, and also, of course, a number of boxes containing tinned meat and other provisions. It is astonishing how appetizing coarse foods taste in the jungle.

The task of making a camp in the forests of the diamond fields is one that a woman scores. Home-making is ever her sphere, and here is her opportunity of creating an attractive dwelling out of raw material. It is necessary to make a fairly large clearing in the forest, otherwise there is possible danger of old and decayed trees collapsing on one's house.

It is a good plan to make the camp as comfortable and attractive as possible, as there is a great tonic effect in returning to a little speck of civilization after a day in the dim wilderness of the jungle. I brought a gramophone with me, and I advise anyone contemplating an exploit of this description to do the same; it is wonderfully cheering in the long lonely evenings.

Staking a Claim.

Having reached the diamond fields and settled down, without dreading fever or snakebite, or losing courage and ignominiously scuttling home (a very possible contingency), the next step is to prospect and dig among the creeks. If the gravel seems solid when tapped with a long, sharp-pointed stick, a small hole is dug, and a couple of shovelfuls washed in a gold-washing pan or a sieve.

Diamonds are heavier than any other stones of the gravel, and by the law of specific gravity will make their way to the centre and bottom of the pan or sieve.

One does not, of course, hope to find diamonds in the first wash; it is the diamond indications that are looked for—among others, carbon and black faceted stones, locally known as "tins." If the indications are good a pit about six feet square is made. The surface earth, called "overburden," is stripped off, leaving the gravel free to work.

As soon as the indications prove hopeful the claim (twenty-seven acres) is cut out, and prospect boards put up on a tree at each corner. Board that the days are devoted to superintending the workings.

I found this monotonous, so I learned to stave, and found washing out the diamonds so thrilling, especially when the gravel was yielding good stones, that I often did it for eight hours a day.

Changing for Dinner.

On returning to camp in the evening it is an excellent plan to change. A pretty frock makes all the difference between cheerfulness and gloom. I even used face powder and manicured my nails; then I felt ready to sit down to dinner in style—queen of all I surveyed.

I am writing as if other women were going to follow my example, and risk, as I did, the perils of virgin lands in search of riches and romance. After reading of shakes and allig-

Little Jack Rabbit

By DAVID CORY.

Up the Shady Forest Trail
Hops a little bunny,
Knapsack bouncing up and down
Full of Pumpkin Money.

Yes, sir, Pumpkin Pennies had just found their way into Rabbitland. They looked like Uncle Sam's penny pieces when first out of the mint. Dear Uncle Lucky, the old gentleman bunny uncle of Little Jack Rabbit, made them down at his bank in Rabbitville. With a small round tin box he worked all day long cutting these new bright pennies out of pumpkin shells. You see all the carrots had been stored away for winter use, but there were so many pumpkin shells lying around after the Thanksgiving Pies had been made that the wise old gentleman bunny had decided to turn them into Pumpkin Pennies. Wasn't he a wonderful bank President? Well I guess yes. He was the big financier of Cabbage Street, Rabbitville. Yes, sir, street.

And now that I have explained all this to you, Little Reader, I'll turn to our bunny boy, who is hopping, clip-clip, clip, lippety lip, up the snow-covered path through the Shady Forest. It was not easy hopping. No indeed. Mr. North Wind had piled the snow into big high drifts, but around these hills skip-toed the little rabbit, until by and by, after a while, and a long windy mile, he came to the Big Brown Bear's Cozy Cave House. Dear me, (he the little bunny, of course) could hardly find the door for the snow had drifted all around almost hiding the front doorknob.

Giving a tippy tap with his little red-striped candy cane, he pushed open the door before even the kind old bear could answer "Come in, come in."

"Here I am," panted the little rabbit, holding out his right paw which the Big Brown Bear shook, very gently of course, so as not to juggle the bunny boy too much. "Cousin Cotton-tail has come over to spend the night."

"Eyes of the Forest" Thrilling Picture

TOM MIX PLAYS ROLE OF AVIATOR IN RANGER SERVICE.

Between leaping from his famous horse, Tony, to a flying airplane and being nearly blasted into eternity by riding over a mined roadway, Tom Mix, the intrepid Fox star, has an exciting evening, cinematically speaking, at the Majestic Theatre last night. It was in his latest picture "Eyes of the Forest," which presents him in an entirely new role—an aviator in the Forest Ranger Service of California.

Mix has assembled about as fine a cast as he has been associated with in his new vehicle. Pauline Stark, who will be well remembered for her work in "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," plays opposite the star and gives a capital dramatic performance. The heavy is Sid Jordan, who has had more than a dozen encounters with Mix than any other man. Others who acquit themselves notably and whose names in the cinema art carry the same weight as "sterling" on silver are Ed. Wallace, Tom Lingham, J.P. Lockney and Buster Gardner.

"Eyes of the Forest," written by Shannon Pfeiffer, is the story of Bruce Thornton, an army aviator who has been assigned to forest ranger duty.

His first trip over the woodland brings him in contact with Ruth Miller, whom he recognizes as a girl who is sought on the charge of killing her step-father. Bruce "falls" for the girl and, convinced that the murder charge is a mistake, decides to ferret the evidence out before delivering her to the authorities. Horgan, the girl's unwanted husband, boss of a lumber thieving gang, comes into the case. The method by which Bruce proves the innocence of the girl and brings the lumber thieves to justice, furnishes a thrilling, pulsating story in which Mix has many opportunities to perform his individual stunts.

Everyone is waiting for the musical and singing act: Jacobson and Evans which commence their engagement next week.

Mother won't be alone, so I can stay here until to-morrow morning if you ask me.

"Well, you're invited," laughed the Big Brown Bear. "I have a surprise for you. A new book with my picture on the cover. It's called 'Little Jack Rabbit's Big Blue Book.' I bought it the other day at the Three-in-One Cent Store in Rabbitville. Here it is," and the kind old bear handed a box with a picture cover on it to the happy little rabbit.

"Isn't it a dandy," he shouted, "and my picture's on the cover too. You have on your red flannel shirt and white apron."

"So I have," answered the Big Brown Bear, looking over the bunny boy's shoulder. "But I have on another to-day. Bought half a dozen at the Three-in-One Cent Store to last me all winter. We're going to have a cold spell. Busy Beaver has built his house deeper in the water this autumn. He was afraid the ice would freeze up his front door unless it was way down deep."

Uncle Lucky made them at his bank.

But the little rabbit hardly heard what his nice old bear friend was saying—he was so interested in the Big Blue Book by your Uncle Dave Cory. And in the next story

Juggling With Figures

STUNS WITH WHICH TO AMAZE YOURSELF.

Many readers have sent in explanations of the mathematical peculiarity of the number 142857 upon which comment was made in recent issues. There are many other, numerical "curiosities," writes Mr. C. Britton, of Shoeburyness, "which ingenious people may investigate."

Write down any number of three figures and underneath write the number reversed. Then subtract in the ordinary way. Now reverse this answer and add. You will get 1089, no matter what number of three figures you started with. There two examples will show what happens:—

364	477
196	297
894	795
1089	1089

Puzzle It Out!

Even more puzzling than the above is the following arithmetical puzzle: Take the number of your house, double it, add 5, multiply the result by 50, add the number of the days in the year (365), add your own age, and subtract from the total the number of M.P.'s (615).

Put a stroke in front of the second figure, counting from the right, and on the left of the stroke there will be the number of your house and on the right will be your own age. Say you live at number 21 and your age is 35. Double 21 equals 42. When you add five, you get 47. Multiply by 50, and you get 2,350. Add 365, and you get 2,715; add your age, 35, and the total is 2,750. Subtract 615, and the answer is 2135.

The explanation is simple enough. When the house number has been doubled and five added and the total multiplied by 50 the result equals 100 times the house number—250.

Adding 365 and taking away 615 means a net deduction of 250, leaving 100 times the house number. The adding of the age makes it certain that this will appear in the last two places, where there would otherwise be two ciphers.

New Black Prophet in South America

John Zama, a middle-aged native, has appeared at Lydenburg with hundreds of disciples, and announced that on January 1 he is going to speak the tongues of all nations and ascend the throne and rule Heaven and earth.

The announcement was greeted with a chorus of "Alleluias" and "Amen's" from his followers when Zama made it before the district surgeon.

He broke away from the Ethiopian Church a year ago, and after fasting among the mountains and praying to a heap of stones, he baptized himself, standing up to his neck in deep water for days and nights. He said he was visited by an angel, who inspired him to write a new Bible, which he has done, discarding the Old and New Testaments.

His following includes many women, who dress in flowing black robes.

The district surgeon advised the authorities to send Zama to a mental specialist.

Rays Betray Society Lady

Timely warnings from agents in London and Paris have enabled American Customs authorities to detect attempts by prominent society men to smuggle costly gems into the United States. So ingenious are the methods employed by carriers of jewels that discovery would be possible in the absence of outside information. In one case X-rays were used to reveal a quantity of diamonds worth £20,000 in the hollow of a feather adorning the fair subject's hat. Mrs. Irving Bloomingdale, a wealthy department store owner, had to hand over a magnificent set of pearls, valued at £12,000, on payment of a fine of £25,000.

Toms officials admitted that the who sold Mrs. Bloomingdale the pearls in Paris called the name of the chaser, and when the lady failed to declare them her luggage was searched. Foreign agents sent information to the American Customs, it is understood, a substantial percentage of the fines collected.
