The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc. peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. REPORT
OF THE
Managing Committee of the St. George's Society,
FOR 1862.

The recurrence of this season imposes upon the Committee of St. George's Society, the duty of presenting their Annual Report. They consider themselves justified in congratulating the Society on its present prosperous condition, and on the general efficiency of its interior economy. During the past year the Committee have met weekly at 4 o'clock, at the Society's Office, in the Victoria Buildings, which as a rule was kept open from eleven until four daily; so that parties desirous of obtaining assistance in their business, and men in distress, or in search of employment could make their wants known. It is however not impossible, that further improvement may be made in the organization, and the Committee are of opinion, that the appointment of a special Committee to consider the various duties of the officers generally, would result in some benefit—that of the stewards being exceedingly ill-defined—and possibly other offices might be increased in efficiency by their responsibilities being established. They believe also, that it would much assist the working of the society, if monthly statements of the Receipts and Expenditure were furnished by the Treasurer in detail. Were ruled forms prepared, the labour would not be serious; and the information which these statements would convey, would enable any member of the Committee to examine whether the instructions of the Committee had been neglected or exceeded; and further the expenditure could be better controlled, so as not to go beyond the amount in the Treasurer's hands.

During the past year they have disbursed the sum of $955.39, including 218½ loaves, and 23 cords of wood, the relief being extended to 446 cases.

The Treasurer's account shews a balance in hand of $206.82.

We regret that during the year we have lost by death the following members:—Joseph Burt, Jas. Carpenter, W. Copland, J. E. Davis, R. Gradwell, Jeremiah Iredale, Rev. T. S. Kennedy, Wm. Monckhouse, James Pitt, D. F. Stevens, Ed. Thomas, and R. Wood.

The death of the Rev. Mr. Kennedy we do not doubt will be much felt by many members of the Society, from the zeal which on all occasions he manifested for its advancement.

The funds of the Society permanently invested are as follows:—

Stock in the British America Insurance Company.....	$585.00
City Debenture	125.00
Yorkville Debenture	100.00
Total.....	$810.00

The total number of members on the books of the Society is four hundred and eighty-six.

Owing to the reduction of the subscription for life membership to the sum of ten dollars, the number has been considerably increased during the year, and no fewer than eighteen additional life members have been added to the list, viz.:—M. Betley, Prof. Buckland, J. Carpenter, John Charlesworth, S. Crabb, W. H. Cuff, John Eagles, Geo. Gooderham, B. W. Gossage, S. B. Harman, R.

Kelly, H. J. Kirby, J. Moor, J. D. Ridout, Dr. Scadding, Jas. Worthington, John Worthington, and Jas. Gooderham Worts.

Such cases of sickness as it was necessary to refer to the Physicians of the Society here received immediate and careful treatment; and the physicians, Drs. Hodder, Bovell, Hallowell and Berryman, deserve our thanks for their services on all occasions gratuitously given.

The annual ball in aid of the charitable fund was held in the Music Hall, on 20th February. It could not but be gratifying to the members to note the general interest which was taken in it by the whole community, and by the officers of the garrison and other guests who did us the favour to attend. The pecuniary result was an increase to the fund of $76.45. The experience of the Committee suggests to them the propriety of making some remarks on this point. As this annual ball has become an established practice with the Society, so it becomes prudent to consider, how it can best be made successful. Some discussion on the subject has taken place at more than one meeting of the Society, and it may be said, that it has received no little attention. It must be evident that when the object in view is to aid the charitable fund, no elaborated splendor is desirable. But on the other hand by care in decorating the room, by attention to those who are good enough to attend, by system and proper arrangements we may meet all the requirements of fair criticism. Likewise it is desirable to obtain the attendance of as many as possible. Hence to establish the price of the tickets is a matter not without difficulty. In no way to bind their successors, in no way to pledge the society to a future policy, but simply as an opinion which they communicate from a sense of duty, and to some extent as a guide to their successors in office, they would place on record what they consider the price of the tickets should be, viz. :—

Single Tickets.....	$1.50.
Double "	2.00.
Ladies' Extra Ticket.....	1.00.

The society gave two pic-nics during the year. The first, an excursion to Queenston Heights, on 18th June, was not a success. Causes totally independent of the Society tended to this result, prominent among which was the inclement state of the weather. The second pic-nic was given in Mimico Grove, on the 6th August, and answered every expectation of its projectors. The weather was remarkably fine, the spot selected washed by the waters of the lake possesses much beauty, and care was taken to choose a day when the moon would be at the full. There are few more pleasant sights to be seen, than the group which were gathered under the trees, enlivened by the music and varied by dance, thrown into light and shadow by the moonlight, and the many lights with which the scene was set forth. On this point we would venture to suggest, that the settled state of the weather in the months of August and September, points out the period when these celebrations should be held. The gain to the Society from the two amounts to $84.57.

As is usual with Englishmen in Canada, the Society attended the Cathedral on the morning of St. George's Day, where a sermon was preached by Doctor Scadding, and a full choral service was chanted under the direction of Mr. Carter, the much respected organist of the Cathedral. We would be unjust if we did not thankfully acknowledge the zeal of Mr. Carter, for the interests of the Society, and his readiness at all times to devote to it his acknowledged resources as a musician. There was likewise an evening service of a similar character, when the service was preached by the late chaplain the Rev. Mr. Kennedy. Although the church was well attended, the members of the Society were but partially present. For some years past the practice of members assembling and dining together has fallen into desuetude. In other parts of Canada, that mode of observing the national day of their fatherland is pertinaciously adhered to; and in our own city the Irish and Scotch Societies follow it with laudable regularity. We can see no reason why this Society should be an exception to this rule. We therefore hope that on the next 23rd of April, the members will come together in the kindly spirit which ought to animate them. For such events do good. Many meet on these occasions, who have little intercourse elsewhere. Hence prejudices are softened, and asperities are toned down. We learn to know and understand each other better. A spirit of kindness is engendered. We listen to differences of opinion with more respect. And this attrition of mind with mind leads us to unlearn many errors, and to think in a more wide, tolerant and catholic spirit. We consider that meetings of this character celebrated with moderation and temperately obtain these results; and we trust that the St. George's Society will hereafter act in that spirit of good will which marks the sister societies, and, as they do, will celebrate their national day by some festive commemoration.

It having been the custom during Her Majesty's happy reign, to observe her birth-day as a holiday in every part of the British Empire, it has been usual for this Society to play a prominent part in the festivities which have annually taken place in the city. As it was the Queen's express command that no demonstration should mark the birth-day of last year, it became the duty of us all to acquiesce in her wishes. Not merely in compliance with the request, but from the powerful feeling of sympathy we all entertain of the loss which the Empire equally with Her Majesty had sustained in the death of the Prince Concert. We do not think that the allusion is strained if we turn to the facts made known since his death, and now a part of the history of the country. The correspondence between himself and the late Duke of Wellington in which from high principle he refused the offer of assuming the command of the British Army, with which evidently his mind was deeply captivated, shews that the nation held no exaggerated language concerning his wisdom and goodness. The act itself is not simply of value for the political sagacity it displays, but it penetrates into every home a bright and dignified example of honesty of purpose and abnegation of self. For years it will work a silent but powerful influence with men of less brilliant stations teaching cheerful unselfishness, and it will further inculcate that high morality and sense of chivalrous honour, without which after all even great powers are unavailing. While such a spirit as this actuates the rulers of England, there is every certainty of her holding her prestige in the world's history and little dread of her future.

The Christmas distribution of meat and bread, so that the English poor could obtain the means of dining in plenty on Christmas Day, took place in the store of Mr. George Harding, King Street West. Mr. Harding having with much kindness given the use of his store gratuitously. The expense is not a charge on the income of the Society, but is met by voluntary contributions. A list of the subscribers are appended, by which it appears that the total amount collected was $630.65. Six years have now elapsed since the first distribution was made, and as it has by prescription, and by its success, attained to the importance of a custom, the Committee express the hope that their successors will see that it is maintained in full vigour. Great care was taken in the organization of 1862, that no delay should occur in serving the many applicants. The distribution commenced at one o'clock, on the afternoon of Christmas Eve, and was completed by half-past six, by which time the following provisions were given away:—

Beef, Mutton, &c., 7,224 lbs. ; Geese, 4 ; Pigs Heads, 3 ; Potatoes, 156 bushels ; Turnips, 156 Bushels ; Cabbages, 84 heads ; Apples, 1 barrel ; Flour, 1 barrel ; Quatern Loaves, 542 ; Tea, 15 lbs. ; Coffee, 6 lbs. ; Sugar, 10 lbs.

Of those relieved a very large number were not English. But as the store of provisions entrusted to us was sufficient to meet every call, the geographical question of birth, but rarely raised at any time by Englishmen, was entirely set aside. It was enough that the applicant was in distress and considered worthy of assistance. Our object, so far as lay in our power, was to diffuse some ray of content in that season of peace and good will. We venture to hope that we did not entirely fail in our purpose, for so far as we know not an applicant went away unsatisfied.

The Committee look back with some pride to the part which the Society took in inaugurating the subscription for the Lancashire operatives. When the fact became known of the terrible distress in England, it was felt to be the duty of every portion of the Empire without regard to its latitude and longitude on the earth's surface to contribute towards solacing it. Some movement had already been made to this effect in Eastern Canada, and as no appearance of similar exertion could then be seen in this city, the members of the Society felt that, as Englishmen, with great propriety they could make use of the organization at their disposal and collect subscriptions. A meeting was therefore called and a committee appointed to solicit subscriptions. It was by no means wished that the movement should be limited to our own members. The books of the collectors engaged in obtaining subscriptions especially set forth that the sums were "collected by the Society," and the first Vice-President addressed a letter to the public journals, explaining that we would have preferred, that the citizens generally had undertaken the duty, and that the St. George's Society were quite ready to merge their more limited operations in wider and more extended efforts. The matter thus pointedly brought before the community attracted immediate attention, and the feeling at once became quite general that the collection should be taken up by the City. A public meeting was called, at which the Mayor presided, much enthusiasm was manifested, and the result has been that $18,647.00 have been collected for this purpose in Toronto and the neighbourhood. And we may claim without exaggeration, that to the exertions of this Society this success in no limited degree may be attributed.

The constitution of the Society as it is set forth in the Act of Incorporation declare the intention and objects we should have in view. It is there stated, that the Society exists "for the benevolent purposes of affording pecuniary medical and other relief to such natives of England and Wales and their descendants, as may from sickness or other causes have fallen into distress." It is necessary to bear in mind this comprehensive view of our duties and obligations, that we may understand the wide range of usefulness to which we aspire. It is not only the poor of this city and neighbourhood of our race and blood who are without means or employment, or are unable from infirmity and age to earn their bread, or incapacitated from poverty to seek work elsewhere—it is not simply these whom we pretend to aid; but we likewise profess to assist with our advice and help any newly arrived English immigrant who may appeal to us. With some, the opinion has been entertained that our duties are more immediately with the immigrant. But such a limitation of our interference is not warranted by our constitution; nor is it suggested by any principle of feeling and expediency. Why should we listen unmoved to that suffering, the very progress of which has been made within our experience, when we would solace the same misfortune in one arriving from the mother country? Generally speaking there is always a field for labour for able bodied and industrious men of good habits, in some part of the province even if not in our immediate neighbourhood; and not the least among the good offices which we can extend is the dissemination of correct information on this point, and the bestowal of aid towards reaching the district where labour is in demand. But even in a country like Canada, where a certainty of future comfort and prosperity awaits the agricultural settler; where land yet widely unoccupied is obtained with ease, and a few years' steady toil as a certainty will ensure independence; even here in the cities too often we find much distress. We must bear in mind, that as in older communities we have no legislative provision for the poor. Neither our provincial nor municipal governments have attempted to meet that great problem of modern civilization, which for the last five centuries has been the perplexity of statesmen and philanthropists—the case of the distressed poor. It is very evident that those men whose wealth lies in their strength are divided into two classes: those who can obtain work on which they can exert it, and those who can find no employment. So far as our history has gone, this division of the able bodied labourers has not existed. There always has been eventually a livelihood for such as these, however for the moment they may temporarily undergo privation, either with ourselves or in the United States. Even the female portion can without difficulty find service with the farmers. Indeed on this point, we believe that the demand exceeds the supply. But there must ever grow up in cities a certain number of the population, decrepit, stricken with sickness, or incapable to work by age or infirmity, poor suffering creatures of both sexes with lives tainted by no crime, whose existence has been embittered by constant poverty. Moderately as such a class may exist among us at present, cared for to no limited degree by private benevolence, the probability stares us in the face that as population and wealth increase, so with equal stride will pauperism advance. Pauperism indeed the very result of modern civilization, having grown from the abolishment of villanage, and hitherto in old countries existing as a consequence where free labour exists, has become an inseparable feature in large communities of men. We cannot hope, even with all the resources at our command, ever to be wholly free from what seems to be a law of our being. That there will be constantly periodical appeals for aid, not only on the part of the immigrant but from the unfortunate denizen of the city is a contingency which we must calculate. It is these appeals our Society is specially formed to meet. But whether direct legislation to this end will ever be demanded no one can foretell. Indeed it is a fair question whether at this moment a duty does not lie with the municipality to succour the few cases of extreme want which may present themselves; and that it is not now called upon so to do, may be explained by the fact that the national societies have relieved them from the obligation. In fact the operations of the Committee assume the character of a board of guardians under the Poor Law Act. The weekly meetings were attended on each day by from eight to twelve applicants; and the regularity with which their proceedings were carried on pointed out the hour, when those who needed their good offices should apply. Nor were the Committee indiscriminate in their charity. Cases where the necessity was apparent, were examined at the residence of the applicant; and we endeavoured in all cases to satisfy ourselves, that what little assistance we could tender was really given to relieve actual distress. Fortunately such cases hitherto have been neither of a number nor of such frequent recurrence as to make a consideration of this view of the question paramount. It is not without interest in the examination of this problem to find, that in England, nearly two centuries after want and poverty had become the subject of statutory enactment, and before the first compulsory assessment for the relief of the poor (1562) was established by authority, means similar to those adopted by the national societies of Canada, were inculcated by statute for the relief of the poor of that day, (27 Henry VIII., chapter 35,) in 1535. The Magistrates were ordered that they should "in good and charitable wise take such discreet and convenient order by gathering and procuring of such voluntary alms of the good christian people," "as the poor, impotent, lame, feeble, sick or diseased people not being able to work may be provided holfen and relieved so that in no wise, they or none of them be suffered to go openly in begging." That the act itself was inoperative to meet the mischief is not an argument why we should relax our efforts. The altered circumstances under which we live, the general prosperity growing from our free institutions, the illimitable territory of good soil with its forests standing untouched, within a few hours' distance, have spared us from the presence of a large unemployed class ever on the verge of starvation. We rather offer homes to the homeless. All public men whatever be their political views fully recognise that much of our future strength and prosperity must to no little extent be developed by a judiciously conducted immigration. Therefore however numerous may be the cases of individual want and how frequent soever the call upon us for assistance, a long period of time must elapse and great changes occur, before legislation will be demanded.

The national societies supply this void. It is true that our limited income does not enable us to extend any long continued or repeated assistance, and that in all cases the aid we offer is small. But it has this merit, that given in cases of distress and in emergency it is opportune. In critical moments an act of assistance unimportant in itself often proves the salvation of the recipient. Therefore this Society commends itself to all Englishmen in Canada on the ground of its utility. It appeals to Englishmen at home. The money given to the Society is not frittered away. On the contrary it is invested and the interest only annually expended. The payments received for life memberships, the amount being ten dollars currency, (£2 1s.1d. sterling,) are alike set aside, the income being derivable from the annual subscriptions and the interest from such investments.

We have at some length set forth the claims of the Society, being anxious to shew what really is its true character. To many unacquainted with its working it may seem formed to encourage pride of nationality, or to keep alive a narrow and sectional vanity, which has no shadow of dignity and no claim of respect. That so called love of country which centres round mere individual feeling is as useless to the community, as it is little honourable to him who entertains it. Englishmen indeed have no need to put forth noisy claims to distinction, so that their past may be regarded with respect, and their future with confidence. The page of their history has doubtless its dark stains side by side with its bright and heart moving triumphs. Like every thing human, it puts forth strong contrasts; and error and crime can there be seen side by side with greatness and heroism. But such as it is, as a whole, as we so contemplate it, and mark the triumphs of our blood and language, we can stand erect with no blush of shame. We study it however to no good purpose, and profit little by the example of our fathers if we degenerate into mere sentimentality, and recognise only what is pleasing to our vanity or useful to our interests. Such patriotism is well stigmatised as mere geographical selfishness. We rather should shew our pride of birthright in a higher and nobler attitude; by holding as a guide and following as best we can the examples of the illustrious men of our race who have lived before us. Our memory may appeal to night to the form of that gallant Englishman, who, having received a mortal wound at Zutphen, when raising to his fevered lips a cup of water, met the eyes of a dying soldier fixed on his with agonising longing, stayed his hand to give the drink to his poorer comrade with the words, "friend thy necessity is yet greater than mine." So let every Englishman in Canada feel, that it is his duty to aid as best he is able the suffering and distress, with which any of his blood may be afflicted. Every man according to his power can scatter abroad some sunshine how small may be the ray, and so far as his power lies let him do all the good he can.
