LAMENTED DEATH OF REV. C. A. HARDY

Late Pastor of Tide Head Congregation Passes Away at Montreal

The community were greatly shocked yesterday afternoon when it became known that Rev. Chas. A. Hardy, the esteemed pastor of Rexton church, had passed away in Royal Victoria hospital, Montreal, where he had gone for treatment. Rev. Mr. Hardy had been suffering for a long time and about two weeks ago went to Montreal, in the hope of relief, but succumbed there to cancer of the kidneys. He was 43 years old.

The funeral will take place from David Maurice Hall, in the Presbyterian College on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Principal Scrimger will preside. Interment will be made in Mount Royal Cemetery.

Rev. Chas. A. Hardy was pastor of Restigouche congregation for nearly eight years, and this spring was inducted to the pastorate of Rexton.

He was a native of Prince Edward Island and was married to Miss Florence Lee, a daughter of Rev. Mr. Lee late of Apple Hill, Ont., and leaves one child, a boy about two years old.

It is probable that a memorial service will be held at Tide Head, by Rev. W. G. Firth.

Much sympathy is expressed for the young widow and her fatherless boy.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS GIFT

The very best Christmas gift you can make yourself, your wife and all the members of your family is a year's subscription to that great paper The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It costs only one dollar and its visit each week will make your household happier than ever before. No home in Canada should be without that great paper during 1914—Every issue is worth the money.

Drumm, B.D., of St. Andrew's presided over the meeting and preached the sermon. After asking the minister and people the usual questions he offered the induction prayer, and formally inducted Mr. Firth into the pastoral charge of Restigouche.

William Lockhart Had His Foot Crushed While Unloading Rails

William Lockhart, of Tabusintac, Northumberland county, suffered such serious injuries to his right foot at Covered Bridge, Monday afternoon that two of his toes had to be amputated.

A large crew of men are employed on the Intercolonial Railway at that place in raising the track in preparation for the replacing of the wooden railway bridge there with a steel structure, and Lockhart was one of the number engaged in unloading rails yesterday afternoon when one fell.

Lockhart's foot was terribly crushed and a doctor who was summoned, found the injuries such that the amputation of two of his toes was necessary. The operation was performed and the injured man was sent to Chatham, Monday evening on the Canada Eastern express and is now a patient at the Hotel Dieu Hospital there.

DALHOUSIE

Dalhousie, N. B., Dec. 10th.—Every man with proper spirit in him takes great interest in making his home comfortable, attractive, etc. The same feeling should exist in the breast of every citizen towards the parish, village, town or city, in which he has cast his lot. The people of Dalhousie are not possessed of any wealth, and notwithstanding that their town was side tracked when the Intercolonial Railway was built, they had just reason to be proud recently, when one of the missing links of progress was added to the town, in the installation of one of the best electric light systems in the province. It is therefore not surprising that political considerations were set aside for the time being, in doing honor to the first officer of the town, who had given considerable of his time towards securing improved conditions.

In looking to the future we may add that in line with the general development of Dalhousie, the Sydney Lumber Company have about completed their new mill. Mr. Alexander McLennan of the McLennan Foundry & Machine Co., Limited of Campbellton, stated on Monday, that he expected that the mill would be in working order about the middle of the month. It is stated that the intention of the company is to run the mill day and night during the winter, in the manufacturing of shingles and staves. Furthermore, it is said that the company will build a second mill on their Dalhousie site during 1914.

Mr. L. P. Lavoie, who is located near the new power house, at the west end of the town, has added considerable room to his store property during this year, and in view of the rebuilding of the Sydney Lumber Co., plant. Mr. Lavoie is delighted with his undertaking.

The Dalhousie town council have wisely decided to build offices in the town hall for the Police Magistrate and town Marshall. The office of the town policeman is now about completed, will be lighted and will have telephone communication for the convenience of the public.

In the November number, of the Canada Monthly, Mrs. Margaret G. MacWhirter of New Richmond, P. Q., who is a native of Dalhousie, contributed a very interesting story entitled, "The Manor Inn."

A meeting of the Dalhousie Amateur Athletic Association was held in the Court House here on Friday evening. Mr. Fred Burr, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was elected President, and Mr. Clarence Hicks, Secretary. Mr. Wm. F. Comeau in a neat speech thanked the citizens who had contributed generously towards making baseball a success in the Shiretown of Restigouche and he presented Mr. E. Rene Richard, captain of the

In Memoriam

Rev. Chas. A. Hardy, B. D.
By Thomas Porter Drumm.

Another dear, familiar friend has been snatched from our midst by the hand of the angel of the sable wing. It is impossible to realize that we shall never see Mr. Hardy in this world again. Word was flashed from Montreal on Wednesday that he had passed away in that city leaving a widow and one little boy to mourn his loss. His great work on the Restigouche river is known to us all,—we may repeat what is written of the great architect Wren, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, "If you would see his monument, look around you." Charlie Hardy, as his friends loved to name him was a man of keen intellect, great initiative, and warm heart. To know him was to love him. A brilliant student, he graduated with high honors from McGill University and the Presbyterian College, Montreal. He was loved by all his fellow-students and respected by the Professors as a man who would surely make his influence count for good in the world. After post-graduate work in Europe, he returned to his native Canada, and accepted an invitation to labour on the Restigouche river. His parish in those days was a large and scattered one, extending from as many miles above Matapedia as he cared to go, down to Tide Head. Up and down, and across the river this man of God went, carrying the message of the Gospel and bearing comfort to the sick and dying. No difficulties daunted him,—no man on the river could handle a canoe better than he, or cross it when he would not make the attempt. Like his Divine Master he never considered personal comfort or safety, but gave all his splendid ability to the work of his high calling. He might have chosen a large sphere of activity,—his abilities entitled him to it,—but he elected to do his work where he was most needed. No one can estimate how great his influence has been for good on this river. Straight as a die, fearless as a lion, simple and straight-forward as a child, he was one of "God's Gentlemen," and won respect and affection where ever he went. He loved the Restigouche and its people. He understood their ways and entered into their lives. He will never be forgotten—he has joined the "choir invisible whose music is the gladness of the world."

Who shall say that the age of heroes has passed away when lives such as this are in our midst. This man pleased not himself, he sought no reward, he craved no position, but was content to go where his Lord commanded him. He gave his life to Restigouche—I think we may be certain of that. Never robust, his incessant labors must have worn him out. Not very many months ago he was inducted into the charge of Rexton, N. B., and minister and people were looking forward to many years of happy service together. But God had greater work for him than Rexton or any other earthly field could offer. Our friend has been promoted to glory, he has taken his place at the bidding of the King, in the ranks of that great army of those who have washed their robes and made them "white in the blood of the Lamb." Many of us have lost a brother beloved—to the writer he was very near and dear—his congregation has lost a faithful pastor, the Presbytery of Miramichi a diligent presbyter and wise counsellor, the Church of Jesus Christ a devoted and loyal servant. By this time he has heard his Saviors "Well Done" and has entered into the "joy of his Lord." The sympathies of this community go out in fullest measure to the widow and the fatherless little lad. There is no common loss, may they be sustained in the hour of loneliness with the hope of a reunion some day. "The circle will be unbroken by and by."

Dear friend, noble unselfish heart, farewell, thou hast crossed the river safely and now thou seest thy Pilot face to face—we shall see thee in Heaven's eternal morning. "The love that was thy life, while here is now thy heavenly atmosphere God's Heaven enshrouds us round and thou In Him, art nearer to us now." "So then we cry, Farewell and Hail Brave heart, thy work shall never fail And we who here a friend deplore Have gained in Heaven, one angel more."

DO YOUR SHOPPING EARLY

If people would only take time and think the matter over they would certainly come to the conclusion that Christmas shopping should be done early. Buying early gives you more time to make your selections and always gives you a larger stock from which to choose. If you are at all in doubt as to what you can select that would make a suitable remembrance of the festive season, consult the advertising columns of the Graphic and you will be brought in touch with all the helpful hints imaginable. The stores of Campbellton never carried larger or more varied stocks of up-to-date merchandise and Christmas novelties than at present and are in every way prepared to meet the keenest competition. If you don't know what you want read the Graphic ads; then go to the store and see what is offered and you can readily make a decision. The Graphic's advertising columns will be a useful study to the thrifty housekeeper and the many admirers of Santa Claus from now until after Christmas.

You really ought to do your Christmas shopping early. You owe it to tired clerks and drivers of delivery teams and you also owe it to yourself and to those for whom the presents are intended. Two useful prints to bring in mind as regards the holiday shopping, is patronize your own home stores and do it early. Begin to-day.

PRESBYTERY HELD QUARTERLY MEETING

The presbytery of the Miramichi met on Tuesday afternoon in St. Andrew's hall, Chatham, for the transaction of business and Rev. E. E. Mowatt was elected moderator.

Rev. Mr. Herridge of St. Andrew's church, Ottawa, was nominated as moderator of the next general assembly, and Rev. James Ross as moderator of the synod.

It was agreed that bursaries should be given to A. D. Archibald, Victor Walls and C. A. Ritchie, all of whom are attending Dalhousie university. Arrangements were made for the induction of Rev. J. S. Polley of Eureka, N. S., into pastoral charge of Dalhousie on Friday evening, Dec. 19th, at 7.30 o'clock to St. John's church of that town. Rev. F. L. Jobb will preside, induct and preach, Rev. T. P. Drumm to address the minister and Rev. W. McN. Matthews to address the people.

In regard to overtures from the General Assembly it was agreed that representation from presbyteries should be reduced from 1 to 6 to 1 to 10, and approval was given of the ordination of assistant pastors.

Rev. T. P. Drumm reported on behalf of the committee appointed to visit the congregation at New Carlisle, that the congregation was likely to come up to the minimum stipend of $900. It was decided to ask for a grant of $300 from the augmentation committee for Matapedia.

Rev. D. Henderson reported that the mission stations of Milbank and Bartibouque were desirous of being organized into an ordained missionary charge and securing the services of an ordained missionary.

Consideration of the budget was postponed until the next meeting in March.

The Home Mission report was given by Rev. J. M. MacLean and showed that good work was being done in the various missionary fields of the presbytery during the summer, and the financial returns from many fields were by far the best in the history of the presbytery.

(From the Canadian Magazine)

Christmas Eve fell on Saturday. Late as it was in the afternoon, Bill Summers—to quote Mr. Formby—was "standing at the corner of the street." He ought to have been home long ago, but had been ashamed to go there; his pockets were empty, and there was the Christmas dinner to think of.

As a matter of fact, his week's wages were resting in the Black Bull's till. The early afternoon had been spent there with his fellow workmen.

Given the right kind of companions, and William might have shaped into one of the best of husbands and fathers. But, lacking backbone, he succumbed to evil communications; his good manners being corrupted by his friends—of the so appalling common, never-quite-drunk, never-quite-sober type.

Just as dropping water wears away stone, so the constant tippling had blunted Bill's better feelings. But they were not quite dead; the life in them bubbled up now and then, that he was away from the fascination of the public-house. Realizing that his pockets were empty and that the cupboard would be bare on the morrow, he was filled with remorse to overflowing point.

Thoughts of his wife and child made him indignant. With the sophistry of the weak-willed, he blamed everyone but himself.

Why should Emma and the kiddie go hungry—when thousands of others less deserving than they—would sit down to-morrow to turkey and plum pudding and no end of luxuries? Why could others have enough money to have a drink or two with their pals—that was his euphemistic way of describing an orgy—while he, if he did so, had to suffer for it afterwards, by witnessing the hunger and want of those he loved? It was not fair—not just. No wonder those chaps stood up at the street corner and spouted Socialism. He felt like being a Socialist himself.

Suddenly an idea—surely born in the lower regions—shaped his mind. He had been employed, during the week, in redecorating a flat, ready for an incoming tenant. Whilst on the job he had got to know the occupants of the adjoining suite of rooms—Number Six.

The introduction came about through the child of Number Six, Bobbie, a manly little fellow, who was glad to be able to air his views on Boy Scouts, for he told Summers his mother and father didn't approve of scouting, and said he was not to talk nonsense when he broached the subject.

Confidently he let the painter into a tremendous secret: he was going to boarding-school next term! When he got there he meant to go into training. He couldn't join the Scouts till he was eleven, but he could be getting up all the rules and regulations so as to be ready—couldn't he?

Bill proved a sympathetic listener. Rough fellow as he was, there was a soft corner in his heart for all children; his own "kiddie" was but two years of age. Busy with his brush on the outer door, he painted mental pictures of his own baby—when she should reach the age of the boy at Number Six.

Then the mother—Mrs. Nestor—spoke to him. Returning from a shopping expedition—laden with Christmas parcels—she had difficulty with her "atchkey; Bill went to her help.

As he pushed open the door for her to enter he caught a glimpse of the luxuriantly-furnished suite of rooms. A wave of envy swept over him. Why wasn't he able to provide such a cosy nest for his Emma?

Memory of it was troubling him when, having screwed his courage to the sticking place, he walked down his own street and reached his own poor home. As he slouched in, his wife to the latter. There must be plenty of "gimcracks" there, he thought, that would be easy to carry off and raise money on.

Light night, so he had no difficulty in seeing what he was doing—stuffing in his pockets the filigree silver ornaments.

It happened to be a bright moon—came to greet him, quietly helping him off with his great-coat and hanging it—trim and tidy little body that she was—on a peg. Then, returning to his side, she held up her face expectantly, and said:

"Bill, dear, how late you are! Christmas Eve, too. It's just on five o'clock. And you always knock off at twelve o'clock on Saturdays."

There was no kiss given; instead Bill flung himself surlily into a chair.

"Where have you been since—"

"Oh, don't ask so many questions. You're enough to jaw a man's head off. I'm tired!"

The wife turned away; she hadn't any belief in the wisdom of letting husbands see tears. And she could not very well repress her own—the symptoms were so eloquent; there would be no Christmas dinner for them. The rent—poor, hard-working soul—she had contrived to pay—fruit of the little card in the window: "Needlework done here."

She had hoped to pay herself that back out of Bill's money. Because there were so many little things she had mapped out to purchase with her own earnings—small enough, God knows!—things that the replica of herself, little Emma, needed. Alas! the sparkle of bright little eyes would grow dim; the promised visit of Santa Claus would not be paid.

"Don't want any dinner."

His observation grunted out as he saw his wife open the oven door. He was in a mood even to quarrel with his food.

"I'll do you good, Bill."

She took off the covering plate, and the smell of savoury food steamed up in front of him. Although she would not have expressed it so in words, she was alive to the policy of feeding the brute.

"Your favorite dish, too," she added, "tripe and onions."

"All right. Leave it there."

The feeling of shame developed again. The best of wives—he owned that in his heart—and to treat her so! Drawing his chair up to the table, he made a pretence of eating; but all appetite had left him.

"Where's the kid?" he asked.

"Asleep—bless her! Do you know, to-day she said 'Thank you' quite plainly, Bill."

And then her tongue rattled on with a mother's eloquence, for he was talking of the heart of her heart, the soul of her soul. A softer expression crept on to the man's face as he listened to the catalogue of marvellous things his child could say and do.

Thrusting aside his half-aten dinner, he drew a pipe and pouch from his pocket. The emptiness of the latter chased away the soft feeling. Shake the pouch as he did, he could not get so much as half a pipeful of tobacco to smoke with grillingly; he put the clay in his mouth and sucked at it noisily, the stale moisture in the pipe bubbling in the stem.

Emma cleared away the dinner things—in a silence. Then, in a half-halting, wholly nervous way, she put on her hat and jacket. Catching up a market basket, she began, in a timorous voice:

"I think I'll do my shopping now, Bill—bless it! Christmas Eve—before the streets get too crowded."

"N-no." The reply came slowly, despairingly. "I see—you've been drinking again, Bill! Oh, how could you, how could you!—and at Christmas time, too." Her tears were plain enough now—for once she had not been able to hide them—had he been able to look in her face. "After all your promises, too!"

"Now, don't start preaching, or I'll stand you one across the—" "Bill! How dare you!"

She started back in her amazement. Then her eyes flashed and her bosom rose and fell in her indignation. Even a worm may be goaded to turning-point.

"This is the first time you've ever threatened me!"

The man moved in his chair uneasily. It would have been a pleasure to have been able to kick himself round

At first, nerves all a-jangle, he assumed it was an apparition, so ghost-like did the moonlight make it appear to his over-wrought mind. Stepping forward, he endeavoured to push past, but his way was barred by two small, suddenly lifted, out-stretched arms. A piping little voice said:

"Wait a minute, please. Don't go yet. I want to speak to you."

What a big sigh of relief escaped Bill! This was no ghost; this was his little friend, Bobbie. Tremblingly he drew a coat sleeve across his forehead, to wipe away the moisture that headed his brow.

"I'm not afraid," the child went on, "I'm not going to hurt you."

A grim smile shaped on Bill's face. The humour of the situation was beginning to appeal to him.

"I heard a noise," the boy continued, "so thought I'd find out what it was about, waking mum. I'm sleeping with her to-night, 'cos daddy is away. He had to go on business, so we're not going into the country till Christmas morning."

The child drew himself up proudly, filled with the importance of his position as protector of the weaker sex. Advancing closer to Bill, he peered into his face.

"Why," he exclaimed suddenly, in a pleased tone, "it's Mr. Painter! And I thought you were a burglar! What have you come here for so late?"

Bill was unable to answer this artless question, the confidence and relief in the boy's voice made him so ashamed. The pockets of his great-coat seemed to weigh down as if the filigree silver there was as much lead; and his heart was heavier.

"I came," the little boy continued, "to ask the burglar not to make a noise—if he must burgle. You see mum had such a bad headache to-night before she went to bed that she had to take tablets to send her to sleep."

"All right, sonnie," Bill responded gruffly, "don't be afraid, I won't wake the lady up."

"Thank you, Mr. Painter. But won't you tell me why you came?"

Unable to accord a satisfactory reply, Bill evaded the question, saying: "You'll catch cold, sonnie, in them thin clothes. You must pop back to bed and—"

"But you haven't told me—"

"Hush!" Bill whispered. "Don't talk, or the lady'll hear us."

That was enough for Bobbie. With a finger to his lips, and a pleasant nod, he ran quickly from the room along the passage, back to his mother's side.

Left alone, Bill at once made for the outer door. He would not trouble about another thing. Quietly he got of the flat and hurried downstairs. His feelings were chaotic. He was still full of determination to feed his baby girl—by fair means or foul. But he was just as full of regret.

Reaching the street he started to cross the road. So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he did not hear a warning shouted to him. Then the accident happened. The chauffeur was unable to pull up his taxi-cab in time. Bill Summers was knocked down and run over.

It was a quiet street and nearly eleven o'clock at night; not many people were about. The man who had been in the cab bent over the unconscious body and said:

"I don't think he's much hurt. The wheels didn't pass over him; he went between, fortunately. This unconsciousness is due to shock."

"Better shove him inside, hadn't I?" the chauffeur volunteered, "and take him to the hospital?"

"M—no. I don't think that necessary. You had only two or three more doors to go. Give me a hand with him, and we'll carry him up to my rooms. A dose of brandy is all the treatment he'll need, I fancy."

Once more Bobbie was roused from his sleep that night. Again he pattered along the passage and entered the drawing-room, to ascertain the cause of the noise there. This time he found his father.

Lifting the boy in his arms, the man asked the reason for his wakefulness. Bobbie replied that, hearing a noise, he thought Mr. Painter had come back again.

The father was puzzled at the boy's explanation. Surely, he thought, the child must be half asleep. Then Bobbie's eyes, roaming round the room, rested on the unconscious man lying on the sofa. Softly he said:

"He has come back, dad!"

At the moment Bill was coming back, or, anyway, was endeavouring to—to his senses. Another swallow of the brandy restored him to something of himself, and he cleared up the mystery. Realizing the trick Fate had played him, he made a clean breast of everything to the man who had acted the part of Good Samaritan.

Recital of the privations of his wife and child touched the boy's father. "Mr. Painter" applied none but the blakest colours to his own doings. A sudden revulsion of feeling made it clear to him what a mean-spirited, drunken brute he had been. That made his listener view things more leniently; he was touched by Bill's misery and self-contempt.

Taking a sovereign from his pocket, he offered it to Bill saying:

"Well, there's the Christmas dinner to think of, and little time to get it in. Here's something to buy it with."

"No, sir. I can't take it."

"But your wife and child are hungry."

That was an irresistible argument. Bill took the proffered coin. With lowered head he moved towards the door. Bobbie called out to him:

"Good-night, Mr. Painter. I hope I shall see you soon again."

"Good-night, sir."

Bill stood at the door, shamefaced. Mr. Nestor walked across the room and, pinning a hand on the man's

Worthy of the world's best music

To most of us the chance to hear human playing of good music comes infrequently. Only in the great cities are the appetites of the music-hungry satisfied. Even then one can hear but a small part of all the worth while concerts.

Fortunately for those who love the masters of the past, and who have the judgment to recognize in present day composers the masters of the future, there is the Edison Phonograph. It is worthy of Wagner, of Bach, of Puccini. The clear, sweet tone, remarkable in its purity, is simply a translation of human music into your own home. Unless you have heard the newest Edison, you have no conception of their wonderful mellow quality. You never realized that such beauty could be applied to sound.

Ask your Edison dealer to play one of the Blue Amberol Records—then you will know that the whole world of good music—past and present—is open to you.

shoulder, turned him towards the light. Peering keenly into his face, he said:

"I rather pride myself on my powers of observation. I don't think you're naturally bad. It's a case of bad companions, I expect."

Unable to voice an answer, Bill nodded.

"Get away from them."

"But my work, sir—"

"I'll find fresh occupation for you."

Expectation, hope, gratitude filled Bill, as he stammered out:

"Oh—thank you, sir. But—but I stole your—"

"Oh, no, you didn't. Whilst you were lying there unconscious, I went through your pockets to ascertain your address. A glance around will satisfy you that you are not a thief. I have restored to myself the things that were mine. But it's late, you must go now. Come to me on Tuesday morning, I shall be back then. We'll talk matters over. I'll see if I can place you beyond the reach of temptation."

With mustered thanks, spoken stumbingly, Bill left the flat. On his way home, he purchased food for the morrow's dinner; the shops were open later on Christmas Eve.

That was the happiest Christmas Day Bill and Emma had spent since their marriage. He told her everything. She, like the true little woman she was, forgave him, and thanked God, that, at last, there was a likelihood of Bill turning out of the error of his ways.

And on the Tuesday good fortune awaited them. Mr. Nestor was building a row of cottages in the country. He wanted someone trustworthy—Bill accept the part?

"And then," said Bobbie, who insisted on being present at the interview, "we shall see each other every day, Mr. Painter. Dad's going to take mummy and me to a nice new house in the country very soon. It's near where you're going to work. Won't that be fine?"

Bill heartily agreed that it would. And that sentiment was endorsed by Emma, when she heard the welcome news—that they were to live in the country, away from the evil influences which had lately governed her husband; in the country where roses grow in baby cheeks.

WHAT A GREAT MAN SAID TO THE GREAT CANADIAN PEOPLE

Parisian Sage is a discovery of a celebrated scientist, who spent the best years of his life perfecting this great hair tonic.

In giving his recipe to the Canadian people he said: "Parisian Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world." It cures dandruff by killing the germs that infect the roots of the hair; it stops falling hair; it gives vigor and strength to the hair roots.

Thos. Wran sells Parisian Sage in a large fifty-cent bottle—and guarantees it to do as it is claimed for it, or your money is refunded. It stops falling hair, dandruff, itching scalp and hair in two weeks.

FIRE ON PASSENGER STEAMER

All Transferred to Another Vessel
and The Flames Subdued

New York, Dec. 8.—A wireless de-patch from Captain Dodge of the steamer Suwanee, says that in answer to appeals for help from the steamer Rio Grande, he arrived alongside that vessel at 4 a.m. yesterday. The vessel was afire and at that time was 205
miles northwest of the Diamond Shoals.

The 107 passengers on the Rio Grande were taken aboard the Suwanee until the fire on the Rio Grande
had been put out and later were returned to their own vessel. The captain of the Rio Grande was seriously burned about the hands.

Both the captain and the wireless operator aboard the Rio Grande displayed great courage, it was stated,
in remaining at their posts and fighting the flames.

When the fire had been subdued the Rio Grande proceeded under her own steam. All aboard her were well.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation
can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition
of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send testimonials, free.

PROBLEMS FOR THE UP-TO-DATE FARMER

Comparisons in Cows Raises the Great Question—"Does Each Cow Pay?"

Ottawa, Dec. 3rd.—Some records of total production for the last seven months sent into the dairy division,
Ottawa, showing how individual cows
on adjoining farms vary in real earning capacity, will be of both interest to the average farmer and of value to men who are planning for better results next year.

A ten-year-old cow that calved on March 12th, has given since then just 2,812 pounds of milk and only 102 pounds of fat. A neighboring seven-year-old, calved 2nd April, gave 6,420
pounds of milk and 228 pounds of fat,
a little more than twice as much. In another contrasted pair in Glengarry,
an eight-year-old, calved 6th April,
gave only 3,394 pounds of milk and 129 pounds of fat; while a five-year-old, calved 26th March, gave 7,280
pounds of milk and 241 pounds of fat,
or again more than twice as much milk.

Have these two owners of two such poor cows the wrong type of cow; is it the old placid contentment with "average" yields, which are liable to degenerate so quickly into poor yields?
An income from the milk of one cow
of only $28, when another adjoining cow earns $72 as seen above, cannot be considered satisfactory when a man is supposed to be keeping cows with the object of making money. A simple milk record shows definitely which cows in the herd earn the most; don't
"average" good and poor together,
keep the best, but make sure that each cow pays.

Choosing the Cuspidors

Rev. Alex. McGillivray, the well-known Presbyterian minister in Toronto, is credited as being the relator of an amusing story concerning an actual incident in a Canadian kirk.

It seems that in this particular church there were some careless young fellows who got into the bad habit of expectorating on the floor. The nuisance had continued for some time
when the pastor's patience finally came to a breaking point.

He attended a meeting of the church session, and explained the situation to the pillars of the kirk.

"I am afraid if this expectoration continues we will have to have a couple of cuspidors," said he.

Up rose one of the aforesaid pillars,
and gravely asserted that immediate action should be taken on the request of the minister.

"I move," said he, "that we nomi-
ate David McPherson and Sandy Campbell as cuspidors."

very conservative views and have expressed strong disapproval of the tan-

forms of dancing as totally unsuitable

GIRL ELOPES

Calais, Dec. 3.—Search was made in this city on Sunday and Monday for an eloping pair from Albert county, N.
B., who arrived here on the previous
Tuesday, but who had disappeared.
Police officers and newspaper men were engaged in the search, which was finally abandoned after the city had been thoroughly gone over.

On Saturday evening an irate young man arrived from St. John looking for his 17 year old sister who had left her home in Albert county in company with a man about 28 years of age.
They were traced to the border and were known to have reached Calais.

It is thought that they must have gone to Boston from here, and search is now being made in that city. As the girl is under 17 years of age the man will be charged with abduction, if located, and the girl brought back to her Canadian home, where her mother is anxiously awaiting her.

MOFFAT-INGRAM

A very pretty home wedding took place at Harcourt, Kent County on Wednesday, December 3rd, at noon, when Miss Bessie, youngest daughter of Thomas Ingram, was united in marriage to James F. Moffat, the popular station agent, of River Hebert, N. S. On account of the recent death of the bride's mother, the wedding was a quiet one, only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. B. Champion, of Salisbury. The bride was modestly attired in a pretty travelling suit of grey with hat to match and was unattended. The high esteem in which the bride held was evidenced by many rare and useful presents, the gift of the groom being a beautiful set of furs. After luncheon the happy couple left on the Ocean Limited for a short wedding trip, followed by the best wishes of a host of friends. On their return they will reside at River Hebert, N. S. The bride is a sister of Mrs. A. H. Ingram of this town.

NAVAL BILL OF NEW ZEALAND PASSED NO OPPOSITION TO IT

London, Dec. 8.—The New Zealand legislative council has passed the naval bill without opposition or amendment, and all party distinctions have been ignored in the general chorus of approval, says the Times correspondent.

Sir William Hall Hones has congratulated the government on the issue, saying that interviews which he had had with high naval authorities when he was high commissioner, had convinced him of the necessity of some such step as the government now proposed, and he wholly approved of the government's memorandum on the question of naval defence.

BATHURST NOW TO HAVE WEEKLY PAPER

Arrangements are Completed for Issuing a Local Publication.

The town of Bathurst will soon have a local paper which will be published in the interests of the town and the county of Gloucester generally.

The first issue of the new publication will likely make its appearance on December 17th, and each Wednesday thereafter.

Bathurst has long felt the need of a periodical of some sort, as the interest in the town has not been maintained in proportion to its growth and commercial prosperity, and the citizens are almost unanimously in favor of the establishment of a paper, and we extend our congratulations and trust that the people of Bathurst will be loyal to their local organ which is now about to make its bow to the public.

The Graphic understands the paper will be strictly independent in politics, the chief aim of the publishers being to encourage the commercial activities of Bathurst and the best interests of Gloucester County generally.

THE NAVAL VOLUNTEER RESERVE

London, Dec. 8.—Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg, the First Sea Lord, visited headquarters of the London division of the Royal Naval Volunteer reserve on Saturday, witnessed manoeuvres and distributed prizes. Addressing the men, he said the question of employment of naval volunteers in time of war would be difficult, and that recently the admiralty had decided on the mobilization of a detachment of the Naval Volunteer Reserve to be sent on every commissioned ship in the fleet.

HON. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX ON ECONOMIC CRISIS

Trusts and High Tariff Government Responsible for Present Conditions

Montreal, Que., Dec. 6.—The first of the series of lectures organized by the young Liberal's Association was given last evening by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who speaking on what he called the present economic crisis said that such state of things had not been seen in the country during twenty-five years, and that the parties responsible for it were the trusts and the government refused to reduce the tariff rates.
The speaker called President Woodrow Wilson, the "Laurier of the United

THE ESCAPE OF A SCHOOL TEACHER

Sensational Story of White Slavers in Maine is Explained

A sensational story was sent out last week, from Fairfield, Maine, and printed in some St. John papers, describing the misfortunes of a pretty 18 year old school teacher. The young lady, after a week's mysterious absence, had returned home and told her people how she had been given candy
at a moving picture show by a woman,
how she became ill, went out of the building, was persuaded by two young men to enter an automobile, was carried off to Boston and there kept a prisoner in a house for a week after which she was released and found her way home in tears. The supposition, of course, was that white slave fiends
had carried her off. Federal detectives therefore were put on the case, and the kidnapping story was soon knocked into smithereens. The girl's story was a pure invention. She had gone off with a married man, who had been attentive to her, and after a week in Boston they had decided to return home by different routes. The man found Fairfield too hot for him, and has again left town. The girl is with her distracted parents.

JUDGEMENT GIVEN IN NORTH SHORE CASE

Suit is Heard in Supreme Court of Fishing Company Against Iron Corporation

In the Supreme Court, Chancery
Division, Mr. Justice McLeod, Friday morning, gave an important judgement
in the case of the Nepisiquit Real Estate and Fishing Co., Ltd., vs the Canada Iron Corporation. His Honor granted an injunction restraining the defendant company from letting the flow of polluted water from its works enter Nepisiquit Stream. But as the works of the defendant company are important, and it may be that they can make changes or improvements that will overcome the difficulty, His Honor stated he would allow the defendants to do so, ordering that the injunction would not become effective until April 1st, 1914. As to the question of damages, His Honor decided that there was no sufficient evidence before him to decide the matter, and stated if the parties could not agree themselves on the amount, it would be referred to a master in Chancery
for assessment.

This is a very important case, and one in which considerable interest was displayed at the trial. The defendant company's works were situated on the Austin Brook, which empties into the Nepisiquit Stream. The Nepisiquit
Stream is used by wealthy sportsmen
from all parts of America, for salmon fishing, and they contended that their rights were being injured, and damage done to the fish in the river by the pollution of its waters. Consequently they commenced action to restrain the defendant company from continuing this mode of operations, and the trial took place here early in the summer, lasting for several days. At the trial Mr. M. G. Teed, K. C., and Mr.
Geo. G. Gilbert, of Bathurst, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Hon. W. C. H.
Grimmer, K. C., and Mr. S. O. Crockett,
K. C., for the defendants.

EXPECT SHUFFLE IN N. B. CABINET

Change May Involve Elimination of Hon. Mr. Morrissey.

Fredericton, N.B., Dec. 5.—Following the present session of the provincial government it is expected that arrangements will be made which will change matters considerably as far as the Conservative party in New Brunswick is concerned.

O. S. Crockett, now representing York at Ottawa, is to become a judge of the Supreme Court as a result of the proclamation of the new judicature act.

The retirement of Chief Justice, Sir Frederick Barker, at an early date will leave a vacancy to be filled by the appointment to the bench of Hon. W. C.
H. Grimmer, present attorney general.

Hon. George J. Clarke, of St. Stephen, is understood to be slated for the portfolio as attorney general.

Hon. H. F. McLeod is to be nominated for the seat in the dominion house
of commons to be vacated by Mr.
Crockett, and York's representative in the New Brunswick is to be maintained by the admission of James K. Pinder.

Rumor also has it that this general
shuffle shall be followed by a determined effort to eliminate Hon. John Morrissey, minister of public works,
from the provincial government. Mr.
Pinder is said to be the man to succeed him. Strong forces within the Conservative party have been arrayed against Mr. Morrissey for some time past and friction has been constant.
He will not go without a desperate struggle, it is believed.

IMPORTANT SUIT IN MONTREAL COURT

Great Interest Taken in Matter Which Involves Large Sum of Money

Montreal, Dec. 5.—That George Moffat is insane and that he suffers
from the most horrible hallucinations, which recently lead him to make an attempt on his life in the Verdun asylum, was the testimony given by Dr. Burgess, medical superintendent of the later institution in the case of Roland Moffat versus W. S. Montgomery, of Dalhousie, N. B., heard before Judge Lane.

The plaintiff is curator for George Moffat, and alleges that the latter on January 5th, 1912, entered into an agreement with the Montreal General Contracting Company, Limited, by which he lent them $32,000 on a promissory note, which was made payable February 27th, 1912, at 6 per cent., and which was secured by a chattel mortgage on certain property
and effects, and also by three mortgages in tugs and barges. On March, 21st, 1912, the note was still unpaid,
and George Moffat assigned and transferred his claim under the loan to W. S. Montgomery for one dollar and other considerations.

The plaintiff claims that no good or valuable considerations were ever received by George Moffat, and that the latter was "non compos mentis" at the time he made the agreement, and that it was through undue influence that Montgomery received the transfer. Consequently he asks that the contract be declared null and void.
Plaintiff also claims that George Moffat made to the defendant a donation of bonds of the Province of New Brunswick, amounting to $19,000,
and also gave him a release on a promissory note for $7,000 representing a loan made by Moffat to the defendant.

Dr. Porteous, assistant medical superintendent of the Verdun asylum, corroborated the testimony of Dr.
Burgess, and added that he believed the symptoms of insanity displayed by George Moffat were such as to give little hope for his recovery.

LITTLE TOTS SAGACITY SAVES DROWNING SISTER

Gave Alarm When the Other
Had Fallen Into Cistern Rescued in the Nick of Time

Brantford, Dec. 6.—Gwendolyn Dawson, the four-year-old sister of Charles Dawson, who was murdered, almost lost her life by drowning in a cistern at the home of her father, John Dawson, Waterloo street. The presence of mind and thoughtfulness of a three-year-old sister prevented what might have proved a sad fatality.

Gwendolyn and her younger sister were playing in the woodshed, in which was situated a cistern having a flat top. One corner of the top gave way, letting Gwendolyn fall through into several feet of water. The sister immediately hastened to her mother, telling her of the accident. Mrs. Dawson tried heroically to get the little tot out of the cistern, but all efforts
were unsuccessful until a nephew, Gordon Dawson, residing next door,
came in and by means of a pole rescued the child, who was unconscious at the time. It took an hour's work by a doctor to bring the little one back.

COLORED YOUTH FACES CHARGE OF MURDER

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 8.—George Ash, a 17-year-old colored youth, was committed for trial on Saturday on a charge of murder. The victim was John Ruddick, another colored boy, who was shot on Nov. 16. It was claimed at the time that the shooting was accidental, but since then the accusation has been made by the Crown, and Ash is now charged with the crime of murder.

NEW BRUNSWICK IS COMING TO HER OWN

Interesting Report is Made of The Commercial Value of Oil Shale Deposits

Canada's present contribution to oil production is seen by the returns to be a mere bagatelle, says the Montreal Star. With us it is not a question of what we are producing, but what resources we possess. Our record for some years has been one of decline;
but fortunately there is now promise of future development. Our production reached its highest point in 1907, when it aggregated 788,872 barrels of thirty-five gallons each. In 1911 the corresponding figures were only 291,092 barrels, in the same year, 1911, we imported 71,553,251 gallons of crude oil and 45,000,000 gallons of its manufactured products.

The question for the future is, what are our resources; and considerable light is shed on this by an advanced report of their investigation made by Messrs Frederick G. Clapp and L. G.
Huntly of the Mines Branch. The chief contributor to present production is the western Ontario field, which is being gradually exhausted. The only other source is New Brunswick
where the oil shale industry is in its infancy. In 1911 New Brunswick's output of oil was 86,139 gallons, which had grown from only 3,328 as recently as 1909.

These oil-shale deposits, which are situated in Albert and Westmorland counties, are extensive and rich. Five years ago thirty-six tons of this shale
was shipped to Scotland and there tested in an experimental retort at the Pumpherton works. The yield of crude oil per ton ran from 34 to 45 gallons with 71 to 100 pounds of sulphate of ammonia. This showing is very favorable, for the Scotch shale
now seldom runs over 30 gallons of crude oil to the ton.

Put into commercial language, the New Brunswick shales show a yield of $3.00 a ton up without bonus, or $3.50
with bonus, against a cost of $1.86 to
the ton for mining and manufacture.
The ton for mining and manufacture.
In Scotland at present the cost of mining and manufacturing is about $2;
and the net profits are only about 80
cents. As a result of this experiment, a commercial plant is being put in with a capacity of 80,000 gallons of crude oil per day.

These oil shales of New Brunswick
are the only deposits of the kind which have been thoroughly investigated; but rich shale of varying character is known to exist in a number of the other provinces, Pictou and Antigonish counties, Nova Scotia, particularly have extensive deposits of this mineral which have been partially exploited for a number of years. It is found usually in conjunction with the coal fields and has been used chiefly in the production of gas.

Customs Authorities Seize Many Cases of Ammunition at

Much excitement has been created among the rank and file of the Ulster Unionists by the royal proclamation, prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland. During the night large quantities of rifles, bayonets and munitions of war, were moved from Belfast to country towns in automobiles for fear the government authorities might put the Irish crimes act
into force, and seize the war stores already collected. The customs authorities made their first seizure under the terms of the proclamation this morning when they detained 89 cases of ammunition and eight cases of rifles
and bayonets.

Intertype Machine Now Does Work

To meet the growing demands of the business and to assist in the great development of Campbellton, the Graphic has just installed a typesetting machine, an illustration of which accompanies this article.

This is the latest development in typesetting machines and has only been on the market about nine months. The Graphic has secured one of these machines shipped by the International Typesetting Machine Company from its large new factory at the foot of Montague street, Brooklyn, N. Y., where a force of one thousand employees are busy turning out the machines. This company expended the approximate sum of one million dollars before shipping its first machine and has a plant with a capacity of seventy machines a month. The "Intertype" secured by the Graphic is the first machine of the kind appearing in this province, and one of the first in Canada. The Intertype is conceded by experts to be one of the finest typesetting machines but this would not do for newspaper or other typesetting composition. To have each line made the same length is accomplished by the insertion of "space bands" between the words. These "space bands" are long, narrow pieces of steel constructed in the shape of a double wedge. When the line is set the double wedges are forced together and the line is spread out to an even width.

The line of matrices being completed the operator presses a lever and an elevator raises the line up and it is carried across to where another elevator takes hold of it and carries it down in front of a pot of molten metal. The metal is melted by a gasoline burner situated under the pot, which holds about two hundred pounds of type metal. A plunger descends in the pot and pumps some of the metal through a mouth piece against the dies in the matrices, which are held firmly in a vice before the opening of a mold which is the exact size of the desired ever manufactured. It is built much on the line of the Mergenthaler Linotype machine, but has many improvements over the latter. It is a wonderful piece of machinery.

So many of our readers have asked us how this machine accomplished its work that we give the following description of its working, together with an illustration of the machine. We invite our readers to visit our plant and see it in operation.

To the uninitiated we will give a brief description of the workings of the machine, which will set as much type as at least five hand compositors can accomplish. An operator sits in front of the keyboard that resembles the keyboard of a typewriter.

As the operator touches one of the keys a small piece of brass, called a matrix slides out of a magazine on top of the machine. This matrix has indented in the side, a die of a letter or character to be cast. As the matrix leaves the magazine, it is carried along on a small belt to what is called the assembler. One after another, these matrices are assembled until a line of them of the width of a newspaper column (or such other measure as desired) is formed. Like on a typewriter a bell sounds to warn the operator that there is little space left to finish out the line. Now on the type-writer even lines cannot be obtained, lines. The metal quickly congeals and a solid line of type is formed. This is trimmed off with knives to an even thickness, height and length and is pushed out on to a nickel-plated strip of metal, which is technically called a "tick" which holds about a half column of the lines before the operator has to empty it.

While the process of trimming and clearing away the line of type is going on the machine is also doing other work. A long arm reaches down and grasps the line of matrices as one would snatch them up with the hands. This arm raises the matrices to the top of the machine where they are carried along a transverse bar by means of revolving bars resembling hand screws. Each letter and character has a different nick in the top of the matrix and the bar they travel along has corresponding nicks opposite the channel in the magazine where they belong. When they reach the given point they let go of the bar and drop into their respective compartments, ready to be brought forth again at the touch of the operator on the keyboard.

After the operator has touched the lever to send the line of matrices to the melting pot he begins on the next line. This follows in such quick succession that there are three lines in operation at one time, one in the assembler, another being cast and the third being distributed back into the magazine.

While typesetting machines of this description are very expensive affairs (costing much more than some brick houses or automobiles) they are a very valuable and important equipment of a first-class printing office. They are indispensable in the production of newspapers of today or in quickly handling book or job work requiring any considerable amount of composition. Not only will we be able to turn out a better newspaper with a new dress of type each issue, and more readily handle book and job work with this equipment, but we can also do composition for other printers who have no typesetting machines or who may be rushed with work at times that they require outside assistance.

NEWBURY, ONT., MAY 29th, 1913
"I am not a strenuous user of medicines or patent medicines, but I have taken nearly everything recommended for Indigestion and Constipation."

I have been so bad with Acute Indigestion that I was nearly in convulsions and had to be held. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" and I have not had another attack since taking them.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy I ever used that did me any good, and I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives" for making me as well as I am today, and everyone agrees that I look in first-class health.

My husband likes "Fruit-a-tives" very much and takes them whenever he has occasion to use a remedy for Constipation."

Christmas Customs

There is hardly a festival in the calendar which has such a hold on the hearts of old and young alike as Christmas Day. The ring of the sleigh bells and the voices upon the streets seem to take on a more cheery tone, and the spirit of the time seems to throw a glamour over places and things which ordinarily are devoid of all beauty.

As it is with places, so it is with people. They, too, not only seem to change, but the transformation does take place in millions of hearts to a greater or less degree. The spirit of Christmas even affects people who for the rest of the year are devoid of sentiment and of feeling for their fellows. The most interesting stories of Christmastide are those which will never appear in print—true stories of men and women whose thoughts have been only of their own selfish aims and pleasures, but have been awakened, if only for a day or two, from their usual self-complacency, moved by some force of which they are only half-conscious to do some act of kindness to make the day happier for someone less fortunate than themselves in a worldly way.—The Christian Herald.

It is interesting to trace the origin of festival customs to those connected with Druidical superstition of classic observances, and it will surprise many to learn that present-day sports very closely resemble the celebrations observed of old in honor of Saturn or Bacchus.

The Roman Saturnalia, which occurred in the winter solstice, were a season of great festivity and rejoicing, honored by many privileges and exemptions. The spirit of gaiety had free charter, and even quarrels were suspended, to be resumed after the holidays.

As a manifestation of the gratitude felt at the renewed prospects of the returning march of the sun, gifts were exchanged and special hymns were sung. These latter were really the Roman representatives of the modern carol.

At the Saturnalia the Roman feasted, sang and danced, as we do at Christmas. A ruler or king was appointed, who enjoyed certain prerogatives. He presided over the sports of the season. Probably he is the ancestor of the lord of misrule, who exercised a similar power in more recent times.

Merriment was a matter of general concern, and the joyous spirit of entire districts is now narrowed to family parties.

It is the touch that makes the whole world kin, and it is a pleasant reminder that, after all, history repeats itself.

The Christmas Spirit

But don't you see that there is a Santa Claus! He isn't a man in a fur coat, and a reindeer sleigh and all that, but he is the Spirit of Christmas, isn't he? They've personified that and made a saint of him and invented legends about him—for the children. But when we're no longer children and don't believe in him, we still have that Christmas spirit—and it's that that gives presents and makes us feel toward one another, and makes Christmas what it is.—Harvey J. O'Higgins.

SIMPLE GIFTS FOR

CHRISTMAS TIME

A paperweight may be made of Christmas ribbon in the form of a bag filled with bird shot or lead and tied with narrow ribbon at the top.

For a small blotter cut half a dozen different colored blotters the size of a postal card, bore a hole through blotters and postal card at each end and tie together with Christmas ribbon. Choose a card with an appropriate greeting.

An attractive way to make a floral calendar is to take twelve sheets of sketching paper, cut into some neat design and paste on each leaf the floral symbols of each month. You can cut the flowers from any seed catalogue. The calendar leaf should be tastefully placed.

A gift quickly made is a decorated tablet, which is useful for recording messages. Buy any kind of a tablet and carefully remove the cover so that the cloth binding will not be spoiled. Make a new cover from bright red mounting board and decorate it with holly leaves cut from white paper colored green. Arrange the leaves in bunches or wreaths.

Coat hangers are always acceptable and are easily made attractive. One covered with holly ribbon, with a bunch of frosted artificial holly leaves attached to the wire is pretty.

A useful shirt waist bag may be made from a yard and three-fourths of white paper cambric. Use narrow tape for drawstring and cotton floss to work the initials of the owner.

A suitable present for a little girl is a tiny kimono. One can be made in an hour from any preferred material.

A Christmas Tragedy

Just a sprig of mistletoe
Hanging in the hall;
Just a maiden standing there,
Pouting lips, coquettish air.
Wife, coming down the stair,
Catches hubby—! ? ? ?
That's all.

The Little Fellers

When you see the snowflakes flying
and the winter's come to stay
Watch out for the little fellers—make the Christmas come their way.

Some of them in lowly places, where the sky is always gray,
Win a smile from little faces—make the Christmas come their way.

Bein' friends to little fellers makes of winter seem like May,
Watch out for 'em on the life road—make the Christmas come their way.

THE BOY PROBLEM

The following is the second of a series
of articles on the Boy Problem.
Another will appear at an early date.

I trust that we are all convinced that the proper training of the boy is one of the most intricate and important undertakings in which we as Canadians have to engage. "The hand
that rocks the cradle moves the world."

The whole future of national character, national life, national integrity,
national honesty, national progress
depends on the boys that now play about the homes and streets of our Dominion. The love of country, expressed in prose and poetry, can never be a constructive force until it is expressed by the self-sacrificing efforts of our men and women to guard and guide our boys.

The country, the city, the town, the home that is utterly neglectful of its boys will sooner or later be in a state of moral and religious decay.

There are various things we must remember in considering the "Boy Problem" of the present day. The first is that the conditions surrounding the boy of to-day are very different from the conditions we recall of twenty-five years ago. That moral and religious stability which then existed in so many homes and gripped
the lives of so many young men is declining. The love for the old fireside
where the father or mother devoutly
read the Divine oracles and engaged in family prayer is not so frequently found and thus not sought after by our boys. From these homes came forth the great leaders of the past;
men whose lives illuminate the pages of history. Some were prophets of the church; others were leaders of the State. The boys of these days loved their homes and found their greatest delight and strongest moral and religious stimulus in the companionship of the home circle. The boys of today are not attracted by the home life as their fathers were so they seek the companionship of the outside world. The growing lad impresses us with an air of independence; he imitates the habits and the language of the full-grown man long before he has completed the years of his boyhood.

Many a truly great man when taking a retrospective glance over his life's history has been known to exclaim,—"I owe my life, my success,
my position to my home training."
Behind either baseness or puerility
of life we generally find a history
which explains it. The child's character and life is like a great self-registering thermometer which marks his training and moral temperature. There are past forces working behind all our lives. A physician once said
"The future of generations is locked up in the blood now flowing in our veins." To-day is largely the revelation of yesterday. Each moment of the past has contributed to make us what we are. This is also true regarding the training of the mind.
Many and varied have been the forces that have made the scholar what he is to-day. Likewise, in considering the history of the athlete we at once see that the long and careful training of the body has given him his present physique. The same is also true in reference to the moral life. There is not an impulse however strong or feeble, a motive however high or low,
a thought however base or noble, a

WHY KEEP ON COUGHING?

Here is a Remedy That Will Stop It

Do you realize the danger in a neglected cough?
Then why don't you get rid of it?
Yes, you can shake it off, even though it has stuck to you for a long time, if you go about it right.

Keep out in the fresh air as much as you can, build up your strength with plenty of wholesome food, and take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice
and Chlorodyne.
This reliable household remedy has broken up thousands of hacking, persistent coughs, which were just as troublesome as yours, and what it has done for so many others it will do for you.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice
and Chlorodyne contains absolutely no harmful drugs, and so can be given safely to children, as well as adults.

Your physician or druggist can confirm this statement, for we are ready to send them on request a complete list of all the ingredients.

companionship slight or intimate, a bock, either wholesome or harmful,
that has not left its stamp and mark upon character. The boy between twelve and twenty years of age is largely the result of all the past forces
that have surrounded his pathway.
"Life is unbroken; our yesterdays
are the prophets of to-morrow: out of what we are will grow the future." "I am" is the child of "I have been" and the parent of "I will be."

If we recognize these facts of experience then we, as true fathers and mothers dare not ask to be exempt from the great task and mighty responsibility that lies before us. Not only have we responsibility laid upon us but we have a fertile field of opportunity. Many of those in care of growing boys may not see their responsibilities. Nevertheless they are there. Bacon said,—"A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds." King Solomon defines wisdom in the Divine record by saying,—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Only those who fear and reverence God have the wisdom to see their opportunities and thus act upon them from God's point of view.

As parents, as citizens, and Christian workers, how shall we undertake
the solution of the "Boy Problem"?

First—The boy must be taken into our confidence and told something about the possibilities of his life.
Having shown him the goal to aspire unto let us endeavor to make clear to him the way to reach the goal. The boy must be taught to be truthful in the most minute things. Listen to what George Washington said. "Speak
the truth and speak it ever, cost it
what it will; He who hides the wrong thing, does the wrong thing still." No liar can be a true man. Our race has a constitutional hatred of lies and liars. The unenlightened child of the darker nations will at once pronounce lies bad.

As we teach truthfulness, let us also teach purity. Our boys should be frankly told by the parents that the body must be kept sacred because it was made to be the Temple of the Holy Ghost. The real example of these virtues in the lives of the parents will have a much greater influence than any other force in the world.
It is vain to try to teach our children or our fellow man what we do not practise ourselves.

There are other helps one might mention that have a place in curbing
and moulding the lives of our boys.
Ever since I came to this town I have felt that a Y. M. C. A. properly manned by a godly Secretary, would be a moral and spiritual force in the community. Here good reading matter could be provided together with pure and wholesome sport thus keeping our boys off the streets and bringing them
in contact with Christian influences.
We may be quite certain that the books our boys read will determine to a marked degree both their conduct and their opinions.

While these principles and influences
referred to are moral helps and aids
on the path of growing boys and young men, we are compelled to confess they do not wholly solve the problem.
There is something in us all that cries
out for real contact with the Divine.
St. Augustine said, many centuries ago, "Thou, O God, hast made us for Thyself and our souls are restless until they rest in thee." The problem can only be solved as the life of the boy is brought directly into personal contact with the life and cross of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Share Your Fortune

Amid all the happiness of joys of the merry Christmas season think of those less fortunate—of those on whom the sun of plenty has failed to shine
during the past twelve months. Think of the heart-aches that will be theirs on Christmas morning;
think of the tear stained eyes of the little children
weeping because Santa Claus could not call at their homes. Half of your pleasure at Christmas will be derived from making others happy, from sharing your good fortune and sowing seeds of kindness wherever you happen to be on Christmas day. Give something, be it ever so trifling, to the little child to whom Christmas otherwise would mean nothing.
You can keep tears of sorrow from those eyes and brighten the day a hundredfold for yourself. Try it.

THE AFTERMATH

We've done our little charity, we've been a little kind,
We've called ourselves by noble names and boasted noble mind,
We've preached of the deserving poor and listened to their plea,
And we are smug and satisfied and proud as proud can be.
"Th's Christmas we at least," we say, "were kind to some poor soul,"
When the Christmas spirit gripped us—and we sacrificed a dole!

But hearken, ye, my brothers all, and hearken with a will:
The poor are always with us, and they're broken hearted still,
They're living in their loneliness, they're living in their pain,
And they're calling, calling, calling, and they ask your help again.
We gave them cheer at Christmas, then we made our little bow,
But the winter chill is with them still, and who will help them now?

AFTERWARD

'Twas the day after Christmas, and all through the flat
The air was as blue as the birds on me's hat,
For now that the bills for the presents had come
Pa "cussed" till he made all the bric-a-brac hum.

Christmas Legends.

All around the season of the Coming of Love as a little Child there have sprung legends and beliefs, like blossoms in a gracious clime, which testify with subtlety to the depth of the appeal of the birth of Christ. Here divinely spiritual symbolism and there sweet human tenderness and pathos appear, and, blended, they evidence the world's belief that this was both Son of Man and Son of God.

An Irish legend tells, that, on Christmas eve, the Christ-Child wanders out in the darkness and cold, and the peasants still put lighted candles in their windows to guide the sacred little feet, that they may not stumble on their way to their homes. And in Hungary the people go yet further in their tenderness for the Child, they spread feasts and leave their doors open that He may enter at His will, while throughout Christendom there is a belief that no evil can touch any child who is born on Christmas eve.

The legend which tells how the very hay which lined the manger in which the Holy Babe was laid put forth living red blossoms at midwinter at the touch of the Babe's body could only have arisen from belief in the renewal of life through the Lord of Life.

The Holy Thorn

It is not so many centuries ago since there was that holy at Glastonbury which blossomed every Christmas, and so ran the legend, had done ever since St. Joseph of Arimathea, having come as apostle to Britain, and landing at Glastonbury, had stuck his staff of dry hawthorn into the soil, commanding it to put forth leaves and blossoms. This the staff straightway did, and thereby was the king conveyed to the Christian faith, the faith which preached life from death.

The holy thorn of Glastonbury flourished during the centuries until the civil wars. During those it was uprooted; but several persons had had trees growing from cuttings from the original tree, and those continued to bloom at the Christmas season just as their parent, which had grown from St. Joseph's staff, had bloomed. And about the middle of the 15th century it was recorded in the Gentleman's Magazine how the famous holy thorn would not deign to recognize the new style calendar, which had then come into force but would persist in blossoming as of old on Christmas day.

In those days the anniversary of the advent of the Babe had certainly meant more to the common people than merely a time for feasting and a velvety, for giving and receiving; it had been also a season for holy observances, for they refused to go to church on New Christmas day, the holy thorn not being then in blossom. So serious became the trouble that the clergy found it prudent to announce that Old Christmas day should also be kept sacred as before. Only an other story of men's weak, superstitious minds? True, perhaps; but they are better who evidence some spiritual weakness than those who wallow in the wholly material, and when we cease to be careful of the cup and the platter, we become not over careful of their contents.

The First Christmas Rose

Another of those spiritual parables is the legend of the Christmas rose, and it tells how good things, fit for giving, spring up ready to the hand which earnestly desires to give to the Child. It is said that a certain maiden of Bethlehem was so poor that she had nothing to give to the Babe to whom kings brought wealth from afar, and, as she stood, longing and mourning, an angel appeared to her, saying: "Look at thy feet, beneath the snow," and lo! on obeying the maiden found that a new flower had miraculously sprung up and blossomed at her needs. Ever since then, runs this story, this exquisite flower, with its snowy petals just touched by suggestion of pinkish bloom, is to be found at this season; and, indeed, its half-opened cups are like chalices of love, and its fully-spread petals are like a happy innocence, fit symbols for the gifts for the Babe of spotless innocence, whose heart was the vessel of love.

Christmas Eve Legends

There are several exceedingly touching legends concerning bells, which are heard ringing from buried cities and villages at this season. One belongs to a village near Raleigh in Nottinghamshire, and the story runs that once, where there is now but a valley, there was a village which, with every trace of life and habitation, had been swallowed by an earthquake; but ever since, at Christmas, the bells of the buried church are heard to ring as of old.

A similar legend is told of Preston, in Lancashire, and yet another and more moving one comes from the Netherlands. It is said that the city of Beem was notorious for its black and shameless sins, as well as renowned for its beauty and magnificence. To the Sodom of the middle ages came our Savior on an anniversary of his birth, and went as a beggar from door to door, but no one in all that Christmas keeping city gave the Master of the abundance. Sin he saw rampant on every side, but not a trace of Christmas bounty and good will, and he called to the sea, which, as of old, obeyed his voice, and Beem, the city of sin, was buried deep, clean out of sight, beneath the waves. But ever at Christmas up from beneath the covering waves comes the sweet calling of church bells buried in Beem. It is a legend which appears to tell in parable that nothing which ever belonged to the Christ, and was dedicated to his service, is ever wholly lost from him and alienated from service; that ever and again something of their inherent beauty and compelling sweetness rises from the depths through all seeming ruin.

The Manger

Tradition declares that within the stone manger there was another one of wood, and that the stone cradle in the Chapel of the Nativity is, indeed, the outer manger. Splendid is that humble stone trough now with white marble, softy rich with costly draperies, and radiant with a silver star, which is surrounded by 16 lamps, ever alight. But yet more glorious is the wooden manger at Rome, held to be the veritable manger in which the Christ-Child lay. It was removed to Rome in the seventh century, during the Mohammedan invasion of the Holy Land, and there it is preserved in a strong brazen chest, from which it is brought forth on Christmas days, when it is placed on the Grand Altar. It is mounted upon a stand of silver which is inlaid with gold and gems and the shrine in which it rests is of purest rock crystal. In the days in which this is accomplished, men, whatsoever may have been their shortcomings in other directions, gave magnificently to the Church Visible.

Christmas Bells

Tradition says that the hour of the Babe's birth was the hour of midnight, and legend adds that from then until dawn, cocks crow. In Ireland it is held that whose looks into a mirror on this eve will see the devil or Judas Iscariot looking over his shoulder, surely thought sufficient to drive the hardest soul to a thought of the innocent Babe.

Another legend tells that on Christmas eve, Judas Iscariot is released from that hell—"his own place"—and is allowed to return to earth that he may cool himself in icy waters.

Wild and improbable although such and such legends appear on their faces, they bear study and repay it for we then see that they are full of subtle spiritual expression as it were; that they are parables of certain spiritual facts, and it will be ill for us should the Christmas day ever dawn on which the flowers of tender faith and wonder shall appear to us no more than dry curious specimens from the dead roots of superstition.

What Christmas Means

Christmas means hope and its realization. The child grows eagerly expectant as the time approaches for the visit of Santa Claus. While this faith remains unquestioned, the imagination opens new and wider worlds, and ideals become so much a part of the mind that the prosaic and commonplace can never crush them. Until the youth reaches manhood and independence, Christmas is the happiest day of the year. Its gifts and hearty good cheer impress family affection, parental thoughtfulness and brotherly love. The dullest and most irresponsible of fathers and mothers are uplifted to a vision of higher life by the interchange of souvenirs and the merry meeting with children and grandchildren at the table and fireside. Few can escape and all enjoy the meaning of the festival, the lessons it conveys and the inspiration it gives, and we enter upon a brighter future and a fuller appreciation of the beneficence of the practice of faith, hope and charity. The loved ones who have crossed to the other side, the loved near and far who are still with us, the old homestead with its precious memories, the old church whose sacred associations tie together childhood, maturity and age, love, marriage and death; the schoolhouse where the beginnings of were so painful, and the ever-increasing pleasures of the pursuit of learning through the high school, academy and college are recalled and recited, and there is exquisite delight in these oft-told tales, and new experiences enliven this blessed anniversary.—Leslie's Weekly.

PNEUMATICA STOPS YOUR PAIN

It breaks up your cold in one hour. It's marvellous. Applied externally. All druggists.

First Christmas Observance
Christmas gets its name from the mass celebrated in the early days of the Christian church in honor of the birth of Christ, its first solemnization having been ordered by Pope Telesphorus. This was in or before 138, for in that year Pope Telesphorus died. At first Christmas was what is known as a movable feast, just as Easter is now, and owing to misunderstandings was celebrated as late as April or May. In the fourth century an ecclesiastical investigation was ordered, and upon the authority of the tables of the censurs in the Roman archives December 25 was agreed upon as the date of the Savior's nativity. Tradition fixed the hour of birth at about midnight, and this led to the celebration of a midnight mass in all the churches, a second at dawn and a third in the later morning.

Christmas Recipes

What is Christmas without a plum pudding and a mince pie? These dishes will be found on the table at every family reunion, at every big function in our cities and towns, at the little cottage on the hill where mother and father and their two little children are dining alone and, in fact, everywhere. The following recipes have been tried and are excellent:—
Plum Pudding.—One pound of butter, one pound of suet, freed from strings and chopped fine; one pound of sugar, two pounds and one half of flour, two pounds of raisins, seeded, chopped and dredged with flour; two pounds of currants, picked over carefully after they are washed; one pound of citron, (shred fine), twelve eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, one pint of milk, one cupful of ginger ale, one-quarter ounce of cloves, one-quarter ounce of mace, two grated nutmegs.

Cream the butter and sugar; beat in the yolks when you have whipped them smooth and light; next put in the milk, then the flour, alternately with the beaten whites; then the ginger ale and spice; lastly the fruit well dredged with flour. Mix all thoroughly. Wrap out your pudding cloth in hot water, flour well inside, pour in the mixture and boil five hours.

Mince Pie.—Two pounds of lean fresh beef, boiled, and when cold chopped fine; one pound of beef suet, cleared of strings and minced to powder; five pounds of apples, pared and chopped; two pounds of raisins seeded and chopped; one pound of sultana raisins, washed and picked over; two pounds of currants, washed and carefully picked over; three-quarters of a pound of citron, cut up fine; two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of powdered nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of mace, one tablespoonful of cloves, one tablespoonful of all-spice, one tablespoonful of fine salt, two and one-half pounds of brown sugar, and lime-juice to taste.

Keep in stone jars tied over with double covers. Add a little more liquor (if it should dry out) when you make a batch of pies. Let the mixture stand at least twenty-four hours after it is made before it is used.

Lay strips of pastry notched with a jagging iron in crossbar pattern upon the pie instead of a top crust.

Oyster Pie.—Make a rich puff paste; roll out twice as thick as for a fruit pie for the top crust, about the ordinary thickness for the lower. Line a pudding dish with the thinner and fill with crusts of dry bread or light crackers. Some use a folded towel to fill the interior of the pie, but the above experiment is preferable. Butter the edges of the dish, that you may be able to lift the upper crust without breaking. Cover the mock pie with the thick crust, ornamented heavily at the edge that it may lie the more quietly and bake. Cook the oysters for a stew, only beating into them at the last, two eggs and thickening with a spoonful of fine cracker crumbs. They should stew but five minutes, and time them so that the paste will be baked just in season to receive them. Lift the top crust, pour in the smoking hot oysters and send up hot.

The Chimney Climber.

Quoth Santa Claus, "I'm getting fat. And, though I'm not a churl, I think the person for this job Would be the hipless girl."

Appropriate Christmas Presents

"Have you decided on your presents for the boys yet, my dear?" asked Mr. Hendricks after the lads had left the breakfast table for school.

"Not quite all. But I have decided, William, that they shall all be given something useful. There is no use in wasting money on useless toys for them to break. And, by the way, we need a new rug for the parlor and a dozen timblers, William."

"Ah, well, why not get the rug for George and give the timblers to John?"

CHAPTER XI.

The Chinese Merchant.

It was while Professor Griffin was talking of Chinese characteristics that the thought of little Mow Chee first occurred to me. The professor said something about the average Chinaman's disinclination to speak of death, directly, and how he invariably employed some euphemism. The phrase "pass from sight of men into torment" the professor pointed out as an illustration. And then I remembered little Mow Chee, who was in my class at Yale, and how, once, in speaking of the demise of a fellow classman, he had used the odd expression, "he has saluted old age," which I afterwards learned was quite a common form in China.

It was now a year or more since I had seen Mow Chee, but I recalled that at our last meeting I had made a note of his address; and so on reaching my desk the next morning I looked it up. Curiously enough a private detective agency which I had arranged to consult chanced to have its office in the same building on lower Broadway as the Pacific Transport company, by which Mow Chee was employed; and thus the plan which had been shaping mentally the previous afternoon, as I hurried away from Professor Griffin's, was readily set in motion before noon of the day following.

In the evening I had discussed it with Evelyn; and though the detective feature did not at first meet with her approval, she eventually conceded that it was a necessary part of the project. It was agreed, however, that the real purpose for which that aid was invoked should not be divulged. Philbrick Murphy was to be shadowed, and daily reports were to be made to me. That he had been under suspicion of brutally murdering his Chinese servant was sufficient reason for the proceeding, and to the detective agency I gave no hint of any further consideration.

As for my Celestial classmate, I was not by any means sure that I should find him at the Pacific Transport offices. I knew that for some time China had been calling upon her sons of western education to return to their mother country for service, and I feared that little Mow Chee might already be customs taktal of Shanghai, or some other imperial province. But my misgivings were very promptly allayed; for no sooner had I stepped within the outer office than he saw me, and came hastily forward, with a smile of greeting on his square, fat, tened, yellow face.

His desk was just back of the long counter which ran the length of the room, and a glance at its piled contents showed me that he was very busy. Moreover, there was no opportunity here for the privacy which I desired; so after an exchange of greetings, and a few conventional inquiries, I hurried Mow to lunch with me at the Savarin, at whatever hour would best suit his convenience.

Somewhat to my dismay, he fixed upon one o'clock. As it still wanted ten minutes of noon I now had over an hour of idleness, which as may be imagined, promised to hang rather heavy, the more so, as I was impatient to make some real progress in my quest.

Wall street being at hand, I concluded to call on a friend whose name I had handed me in the morning, and make a convenience of his office. On the way, I bought an afternoon paper, and as my broker happened to be at the Stock Exchange, I had ample opportunity to read it from first column to last. It proved about as thrillingly interesting as the early afternoon reprints of what one has already read at breakfast usually are, and I was about to drop it to the floor, when my eye caught a group of headlines on the last page, which, up to that moment, had escaped me, but which now suddenly riveted my attention: CELESTIAL CLAIMS MYSTERIOUS BOX ON FALL RIVER PIER.

Anything concerning Celestials, I suppose, would have attracted me, just then, but the burden of this was so peculiarly pertinent, that it seemed as if it must have intimate connection with the tangle I had undertaken to unravel.

With the paper gripped tightly in both hands, and my head bent intently forward, I read through the frivolously-written article which followed; and from a superabundance of cheap wit and East side slang managed to extract the somewhat meager facts. A truck, driven by a Chinaman, it seemed, had that morning taken from the pier of the Fall River Line a square box, measuring about five feet each way, and perforated with a number of sugar holes. The brilliant space-writer had given his imagination free rein as to the contents, speculating as to the possibilities, from edible Chinese dogs to smuggled opium, but he had omitted to furnish the name and address of either the consignee or consignee. "The truck, drawn by the slatted white horse, no cab stands on lower Broadway, and to walk to Broad street, where the cabman lies all day in wait for the prosperous stock broker and his affluent customer, required more time than in my impatience I was willing to grant. Therefore I boarded a Broadway car and was drawn haltingly northward, until, on reaching Canal street, I alighted in sheer desperation and turned eastward.

Here a letter carrier, of whom I inquired, spoke straight to my goal—a couple of blocks as I was going, a turn to the right, a few blocks more, and the bulk windows of the Yip Sing Company would come into view.

I found the establishment easily enough. But had it not been for the name printed in big Roman lettering I should never have imagined it a Chinese business house. There was no display of goods in the big windows, which were screened half way up by light blue shades, giving the front an appearance similar to that of the average American wholesale house.

Having passed inside, however, there was no such illusion. All about me were the characteristic products of the Orient, from brilliant silks, embroideries, and exquisite gold and silver and bronze work, to cheap cotton and linen fabrics, lacquer furniture, and straw slippers. And the atmosphere was further enhanced by the half-dozen or more Chinamen who were lounging in the middle and distance, each with shaven crown and coiled queue and each in the more or less brilliantly colored native dress.

One of these, a comparatively dark, fat-tired young man with full, round visage, came forward as I entered.

"Is Mr. Yip in?" I asked.

He was inclined, I saw, to hesitation and so I produced Mow's card.

"Oh, yes," he said, after studying it for a moment. "Oh, yes, Mista' Yip. He in." With which he left me, taking the card with him disappeared behind some draperies at the back of the big crowded store.

Between the others, who regarded me for a moment only with idle interest, there was, while I stood there, a rapid exchange of observations in their native tongue, mingled with a sort of high pitched cackling which assumed to be laughter.

I had turned my back toward them, but presently a shuffling of feet along the floor informed me of the approach of what I imagined was a returning customer. On whirling about, however, it was to face an elderly man in purple silk garments and a black skull cap—a man of thin, almost dæmonious yellow visage, whose upper lip and chin were adorned with sparse growth of silvery-black hair, and upon the bridge of whose nose rested a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles.

"You would see me, sir?" he asked, and I noted that there was scarcely the slightest intonation of the foreigner in either pronunciation or accent.

"If you are Mr. Yip," I smiled, "you can, I fancy, from what Mr. Mow tells me, give me the information I am in search of."

He did not smile in return, but his thin face assumed an expression of benignity that was as much of an invitation to lay my problem before him as were his words.

"Anyway I can serve a friend of Mr. Mow," he said, "will be a pleasure."

But, as he spoke, the benign expression passed. Once again that thin, sun-frown'd face, with its hollow cheeks, and small deep-set eyes, had become unapproachable.

At least two of his partners or salesmen were within ear-shot, and I turned a significant glance towards them, as I said:

"The subject is a confidential one, Mr. Yip. If I could speak to you—"

"In private," he finished. "Certainly, sir. Will you kindly step this way?"

He led me to the rear of his store, holding aside a curtain of heavy embroidery, through which I passed into a smaller room, furnished in carved teak wood and ornamented with magnificent specimens of Chinese porcelain and pottery. A little Chinese girl, not over eight years old, and wearing a blouse and wide breeches of a pale cerulean silk, stood beside a table. Before her were several small sheets of rice paper on which she was making designs in water colors.

Ignoring the child, he indicated a chair near the only window, screened like the windows in front, with a blue shade. And when I had sat down, he drew up a chair for himself opposite me.

His manner, in spite of the benignity of a moment before, was not encouraging, and for a little I was embarrassed as to just where to begin. At length, however, I said:

"I fear, Mr. Yip, that some of your countrymen have recently made a terrible mistake."

"A mistake?" he echoed, gravely.

"A mistake that I trust it is not too late to rectify. Briefly, they have kidnapped a gentleman of fortune and influence, one of my dearest friends, in a manner most mysterious, after first subjecting him to the annoyance of a series of anonymous letters and a succession of singular, nerve-torturing acts of trespass."

Mr. Yip glanced at Mow Chee's card, which he still held.

"Mr. Clyde," he said, with no more emotion than he might have exhibited had I told him I wished him to sell for me a Chinese bronze on commission.

"Mr. Clyde, I do not see, exactly, why you come to me."

"I came at Mr. Mow's suggestion," I explained. "He tells me you know the Chinese of New York as no one else does."

"The police, I should say," he returned, "know the class you seek better than I. Why not go to the police?"

it was not easy to explain to him, why I had not gone to the police, for I did not care to reveal all that was feared, and how we dreaded that which police pursuit might precipitate.

"Because," I began, after a moment's hesitation, "I believe the whole thing is a mistake. I believe that those involved in the plot must sooner or later find out it is a mistake. If the aid of the police is enlisted, the fact that a mistake has been made, will not be any extenuation. My object is to find the plotters, prove to them that they are in error, promise them immunity, and recover my friend."

"What you have told me," said Yip Sing, speaking slowly, "is not enough. If you will tell me everything, I will let you know what I think. You must give the names and the places and the dates."

I did give him the names and the places and the dates. Mow Chee had told me I could rely upon him, implicitly, and I told him all, without reservation. I gave him even the letter, the only one of the three that remained to us—the last letter in which the final threat was made.

As I look back on it, now, I cannot understand why I did this. It was the only piece of proof, the only clue left. And yet, when he asked to keep it for a little, I consented without so much as a demur. I argued, I suppose, that he was a reputable merchant, with an established business, and that, therefore, treachery on his part was not to be considered.

"And your friend," he said, as he folded the paper, "was never in China?"

"Never," I affirmed.

"How do you know?"

"He has told me so."

It was neither a smile nor a sneer which floated for just a moment across those sphinx-like features. It was a look of pitying tolerance, a patronizing gleam, merely, from the small, deep-set, almond eyes. One of England's greatest actresses, in speaking of the Chinese, has said: "They look as if they are always thinking, I have lived before you; I shall live after you." That was how Yip Sing looked then. But he merely said:

"Very well, I will learn what I can." "Soon," I begged. "Very soon?"

He stood up, an imposing figure in his purple silk.

"Come to me tomorrow evening. Not here, but at the Chinese restaurant on Doyers street. Come at nine o'clock."

From my pocket I drew out the copy of the afternoon paper, and pointed to the article about the Celestial and the mysterious box.

"Do you suppose that could have any bearing on the matter?" I asked.

He adjusted his spectacles and read the half-column, slowly, from first to last. Then he smiled.

"I have that box in my cellar," he said. "It contains woolen underwear sent to me from Lowell, Massachusetts."

But I scarcely heard him, for my attention was on the swiftly moving brush of the little Chinese maid, as, deftly handled, it now blocked out with bold black strokes a silhouette upon the piece of rice paper before her—a familiar silhouette of a short, clumsy curved boat with broad lug-sail.

CHAPTER XII.

"We Were in Peking Together."

At my evening conference with Evelyn Grayson, reviewing the day's events, I dwelt with some insistence upon the singularity of that episode at Yip Sing's.

"It was impressively significant," I maintained, "even if it was only a coincidence. Incidentally it convinced me that nothing escaped Mr. Yip's observation. I had no intention of referring to my discovery. I chose rather to have him think I had not noticed the figure the child was painting. But my choice was not to be gratified. He knew that I had seen and noticed it; and so, to relieve the situation, he frankly directed my attention to the symbol, explaining that what I had regarded as mysterious was most commonplace. 'It is one of the first things that Chinese babies learn to draw,' he went on, 'it is like the pookoo and hanger of the American primary schools. First they draw horses, then ships, then men; and the houses, the ships and the men are all alike, just as are your A's, your B's, and your C's. And when signed to a letter, I queried, 'what does your ship stand for?' He shrugged his lean shoulders in a manner almost Gallic. 'Who shall say?' he returned."

"And do you believe the pookoo and hanger explanation?" Evelyn asked, pointedly. It was her way to probe at once to the heart of a matter.

"I can't say that I am altogether convinced," I answered, non-committally. "In spite of Mow's enthusiastic encomium, I was not very favorably impressed by Yip Sing. His wall of reserve is too high and too thick. It is neither scalable nor penetrable. And yet he stands well, I believe, in the community."

We sat in the music room, where a fire of drift wood wove a woof of green and violet strands through the red warp of the blaze, for the weather had turned chill. Evelyn wore a clinging gown of black panne velvet, with purple orchids at her waist. It had a wonderfully mature effect for one so young as she, but it was not unbecoming. Indeed it effectively accentuated

A Clever Retort

During the last general elections, Rev. J. J. McCaskill followed the example of the editor of the "Globe" and vigorously upheld the Reciprocity Pact in the Province of New Brunswick. At a meeting in Queen's County he was discussing the effect of the agreement on the price of various commodities.

"What about hay?" shouted an opponent. "I'm discussing human food now," retorted the speaker, "but I'll come to your specialty in a moment."

JUDICATURE ACT

HAS BEEN PROCLAIMED

Sir F. E. Barker and Mr. Justice Landry to Head Respective Divisions

Fredericton, N. B., Dec. 6.—The new Judicature Act, which will bring about a re-organization of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, will become effective on Wednesday next, December 10th.

Yesterday afternoon His Honor Lieut. Governor Wood placed his signature on the proclamation which had been passed by the executive council and which will be published in the Royal Gazette next week, bringing the new act into force.

The new Judicature Act was passed at the last session of the Legislature and amends an act with a similar purpose in view which was passed in 1909. One of the provisions of the new act when passed was that it would come into effect upon the issuing of a proclamation to that effect.

The re-organization of the Supreme Court into two divisions, as provided by the act, will make necessary the appointment of a new judge and rumor has for some time slated Mr. O. S. Crockett, M. P., for York, for this position. Within a short time it is expected that announcements will be made as to the divisions to which the judges will be assigned.

Sir Frederick E. Barker, the present Chief Justice, will, of course, be the Chief Justice of New Brunswick and head of the Court of Appeals, and Mr. Justice Landry is looked upon as the natural selection, as a matter of seniority, for Chief Justice of the King's Bench Division.

TWENTY YEAR SENTENCE FOR ASSAULT

Negroes and White Man are Given Severe Punishment by Maine Judge

Houlton, Me., Dec. 7.—Harvey Sty-miest of Alberta, Canada, the white man who, together with two negroes was convicted in the Supreme Court here last week of assault on the person of Mrs. Alice Lurette at Van Buren last July, was sentenced to 20 years in the Maine State prison at Thomaston by Justice Bird, Saturday, just before court finally adjourned.

Robert Ellis and Albert Bolder, the two negroes convicted with him, were each given sentences of 18 years, the court announcing that they were the maximum under the law. Bolder protested his innocence to the last, while Ellis confessed, attributing the crime to liquor.

There have been seven indictments in Aroostook in the last six months and feeling against the prisoners runs high.

Marshall Hewes was given five, and George E. Thompson four years in the state prison for assault. Michael Phillips received a year at Thomaston for breaking and entering and larceny.

The other Aroostook county prisoners were sentenced as follows: Frank Campbell, larceny, one year in jail; Douglass McConaghy, larceny, one year in jail; Ralph Ingraham, common sellers, $100 and costs and 30 days in jail with 30 days additional in default of payment; Frank Mozer, breaking and entering and larceny, state school for boys during remainder of his minority; Charles Crock, breaking and entering and larceny, one year in jail.

MANY PERISH IN TEXAN FLOODS

Most of the Victims at Sunnyside Were Negroes

Houston, Texas, Dec. 8.—Fifty persons, mostly negroes are reported to have been drowned at Sunnyside, a small town on the lower Brazos River, according to a long distance telephone message received here early to-night.

SIXTEEN DIE IN MINE

Rydnik, Prussia, Dec. 8.—Sixteen miners were killed on Saturday night by smoke from a fire which started suddenly in the mine. The fire has been extinguished.

NARROW ESCAPE

FROM DROWNING

Student at Fredericton Goes Through ice and is Rescued With Difficulty

With ice forming in the St. John River, the season of drowning accidents has arrived. None have yet been reported, but on Sunday, Andrew W. Driscoll, a student at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, had a narrow escape.

The accident occurred in front of Atherton's boat house, at the foot of Regent street. Ice formed in the river from shore to shore on Friday last and a drop in the temperature, Saturday night, made the ice along the shores strong enough to bear a person's weight. At the foot of Westmorland street a considerable number of people walked on the ice and found that it was strong enough to bear them some distance out. In company with another U.N.B. student, Mr. Driscoll walked out upon the ice. While returning to shore he stepped on a weak spot and went through. The water was deep and he was in a dangerous position. A by-stander took off his overcoat and going as near as he dared, threw it toward Driscoll, who grasped it and was pulled out of the water.

TWELVE MONTHS HARD LABOR FOR POLICEMAN

Yielded to Temptation on Finding Store Door Open at Night and Took Watch

Ernest Grainger, aged 25, a police constable of St. Helens, Eng., was charged with burglariously entering the confectionery shop of Thomas Middlehurst and stealing a gold watch. Lindon Riley, for the prosecution, said that on the night of November 9 Mr. Middlehurst himself locked his shop door before going to bed. A little after one o'clock on the following morning he heard a knocking below, and on going downstairs found Grainger, in his uniform, with his lantern shining. Grainger told him he had found that the premises were not secured and then went away. Next morning Mr. Middlehurst missed a gold watch. Subsequently Grainger was charged by a superior officer and after denying that he had any knowledge of the watch took an inspector to his house and produced the watch from a waistcoat pocket, saying: "I found the premises insecure and had to rouse the occupants of it. I saw the watch lying on the sideboard and yielded to a sudden temptation."

In cross-examination, Mr. Middlehurst admitted that the door of the shop looked by merely closing it, and that he might have told the prisoner before the magistrate that he "thought" he had fastened the door but the lock was "a faulty one and liable to slip." It was true he had been aroused once or twice before in the night by the police because the door was open.

The accused, giving evidence, on oath, said that he had been on the police force three and a half years. Before that he was a Coldstream Guards, and earlier still a clerk in the Army and Navy Stores. It was not true that he forced open or unlocked the door of the shop. It was his duty to enter unsecured premises at night time and call the attention of the occupants to the fact. He yielded to a sudden temptation on seeing the watch.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

In sentencing the prisoner to twelve months' hard labor, the judge said that the offence was one of the most serious and dangerous against society that could be mentioned. There was not a doubt that the whole scheme of the prisoner had been to put the blame for his theft upon somebody else—perhaps some poor creature of bad character who had been convicted over and over again. Although this was the prisoner's first conviction, he was not satisfied that he was doing his duty in abstaining from sending him to penal servitude.
